Inmates seize hostages in Oklahoma prison riot

STRINGTOWN, Okla. (AP) — Inmates at an overcrowded state prison held three guards hostage Saturday following a fiery uprising that left one dormitory gutted and two others damaged, officials said. One guard and one inmate were injured.

Eight guards were grabbed by 10 prisoners when the disturbance began, but five hostages were released unharmed Saturday and the others were reported in good condition, said officials at the medium-security Mack Correctional Cente

The inmates, believed to be armed with crude knives. threatened to kill their hostages if authorities attempted a rescue, said Jerry Massie, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections.

One inmate is keeping it going," said prison spokeswoman Anita Trammell. "I think the inmates are tired. We have one leader. I think if it wasn't for the leader, things would have been closed up.

The uprising began late Friday after some inmates accused others of theft and threatened retaliation, authorities said. A group of the inmates was being prepared for transfer to a maximum-security prison when they seized hostages.

"They released the (fifth) hostage in return for getting to talk to two specific negotiators," said

Massie. He would not identify the negotiators.

Officials said the inmates had 'a short list'' of specific demands, but refused to disclose what they were

'We're fine. They're feeding us. They're taking care of us, one hostage was quoted as saying when inmates permitted him to make a telephone call.

The 33-year-old red-brick prison was surrounded by Oklahoma Highway Patrol tactical teams in camouflage clothing, rifle-toting corrections department officers and firetrucks that were used to battle blazes in three buildings.

Officers carrying teargas launchers donned bullet-proof vests in a parking lot and huddled around blueprints of the prison. But officials wouldn't say if that activity signaled any impending action. 'That's what you call contingency planning," said patrol spokesman Lt. Stewart Meyer. The inmates started a fire that destroyed the east dormitory at the prison, then moved to another dormitory with their hostages, Massie said

Smoke was still rising from the roof of the torched dormitory Saturday; fires in two other dormitories were doused.

Trammell said one guard was treated after apparently being hit on the hand with a rock, and one prisoner suffered a minor stab wound to the shoulder

Fight drugs, citizens tell county

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

About three dozen citizens urged Gray County commissioners Friday to say kNOw to drugs by joining a Panhandle-wide antinarcotics task force.

They left with the promise of a June 1 meeting with Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan, who has balked at joining the effort, claiming he has legal and financial concerns about it.

Jordan's reluctance to join the 25-county Panhandle Regional Narcotics Trafficking Task Force, based in Amarillo, has left Gray County the only Panhandle county not participating in the undercover effort.

"All these other counties, they've made several busts," the group's spokesman, Jimmy Free, told commissioners Friday. "I live right next to the high school, and I've seen the drugs there.

Free said the group had collected 400 names on petitions asking the county to consider joining the task force. He noted that March was designated "Say kNOw to Drugs" month in Pampa, but now, Gray County isn't taking advantage of a free opportunity to help eradicate narco-

The task force is funded by federal grant money. Sheriff Jordan has said one of his reasons for not joining the task force is that he doesn't want to contribute to the federal debt.

Pampa retiree W.A. Morgan said he fears Gray County may be getting a reputation as "the trash hole of Texas" because of lax enforcement of laws. He noted the reported soft-pedaling of drunken driving cases and added:

"Then we come along and turn down the opportunity to have undercover (narcotics) agents provide cooperation between the counties.

Keith Feerer, youth minister at Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ, also said he supports joining the task force

County delays golf course

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Construction of a public golf course north of Pampa was putt off a little longer Friday by Gray County commissioners

Commissioners tabled plans to amend their contract with the city of Pampa, temporarily stalling the drive to begin construction of the course at a site along Texas Highway 70 by the end of the month

The Texas Legislative Council delivered a double bogey to golf course supporters earlier this month with an opinion saying the course couldn't be built as proposed. Under the existing contract, the county was to have donated $300,000 plus equipment and manpower to the project, then turn the course over to the city, thereby answering critics who said the county shouldn't be involved in running the course.

But the Legislative Council said that agree ment could spell sudden death for both the golf course contract and commissioners' terms in office because state law prohibits counties from making contributions to cities unless the contribution benefits the county. In this case, TLC attorney Mark Brown said, "the benefit to the county is unclear" and

Brown recommended that the county seek an attorney general's opinion to protect themselves against possible legal action or removal from office. Instead, County Attorney Bob McPherson and Pampa City Attorney Don Lane were asked to amend the contract to address Brown's concerns about the county's involvement in the course.

Friday, commissioners reviewed a rough draft of the amended contract, which essentially says the county and city will operate the course jointly with the city to manage it.

"I don't think we're to the point of taking action," County Judge Carl Kennedy said. Kennedy said he expects the city to act on the amended contract when they meet May 24. County commissioners would then vote on it at their June 1 meeting.

In a related matter, commissioners named two women to a nine-member golf course advisory board. Bobbie Nisbet and Shirley Stafford, both of Pampa, will join seven men appointed by the city and the Pampa Public Golf Association.

Loyd Waters and Floyd Crow were named by the county as alternates to the golfing

Appraisal district's audit reveals management problems

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Gray County Apraisal District's board of directors discovered at their regular meeting Thursday that the district had been operating five months without a bank depository contract.

'It was an oversight on my part due to the confusion and mess when I took over," explained Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley. "I had it in my mind that it would be two years before we would need to do this

The current bank depository contract with Citizen's Bank & Trust Company for Jan. 1 through Dec. 31, 1987 was approved by the board at the Feb. 13, 1986 board meeting. Bagley said as soon as he was made aware that the contract had lapsed — less than two weeks ago - he sent out requests for bids to the banking establishments he felt would be able to handle the district's needs - National Bank of Commerce, First National Bank of Pampa, Citizen's Bank & Trust, and Security Federal Savings and Loan.

Only two of the one-page bid forms were returned by the board's meeting Thursday; one of these, Citizens, came just prior to call to order,

After comparing the two bids, board members agreed that Citizen's bid appeared to offer a slightly better service package for the appraisal district, including 1 percent above the current interest rate on T-bills.

Bagley recommended that the board accept the bid from Citizen's Bank and Trust Company. Board members unanimously agreed to keep Citizens as a depository, with the exception of board secretary Jim Olsen, a vice president of Citizens, who abstained from voting on the matter. Bagley said the appraisal staff has set up a card file to use as reminders when certain items come up that need to be done, so that such things as letting the bank depository contract lapse won't happen again.

Bob Monthey of Lewis Meers CPAs presented the appraisal district's 1987 audit and management letter at the Thursday meeting.

The district's total assets showed a decrease of approximately $40,000, Monthey told board members. However, the district's actual fund balance "relatively stayed the same," he said, with an increase of approximately $1,500. "Which is what it should do," he added. He said the district is building up reserves for replacement of assets.

Several problems with the district's system of internal accounting control surfaced when Monthey explained the auditor's management letter. The study, according to the letter, disclosed several conditions that "we believe result in more than a relatively low risk that errors or irregularities ... may occur and not be detected within a timely period. Bagley said that "for the most part the problems in the report existed prior to when I was brought

Gray County Appraisal District Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard was terminated by the board on Aug. 7. Few reasons for the move were given at the time except that Board President Ken Fields said "it was time for new blood."

Items mentioned in the management letter included segregation of duties, budgeting, late payments, inventory and appropriate bond amount. "You should amend the budget as you go," Monthey told board members. Budgeting problems were reflected throughout the audit. While many items were over-budgeted, others were under-budgeted and some essential items, like utilities, were not budgeted at all.

'Overall, there was a favorable variance be tween actual and budgeted amounts," he added. Appraisals and collections are separated in the district's budget. While the appraisal division showed $28,000 less was spent than was budgeted. the collections division showed a $10,000 deficit by the end of the year.

"It is impossible to budget 18 months in advance without some changes," Monthey said.

Bagley said that originally the State Property Tax Code set up all appraisal districts on a calendar year basis. A sub-section was later added allowing some districts to stagger their fiscal

"I don't know that we need to change that, but if we do, we will," he said. "We will check into that a little further

Bagley added that probably the best route would be to start with a realistic budget and then amend it as needed.

Board members, particularly John Curry, were concerned about having to update the budget every month or so. However, Bagley suggested, and other members agreed, that the process would probably only need to be done once a year.

"In reviewing cash and receivables, it was noted that not all the entities served by the district are making their quarterly budgeted payments on time," the letter reads. Bagley told board members that this problem

had already been corrected, and the appraisal

staff mails out a letter quarterly reminding the taxing entities to pay on time and what the interest

Bagley said the computer password system is changed whenever someone leaves the office, and he is working with the programmer on limiting use of the general ledger package with a password.

Board minutes are being properly maintained, the letter states, "however, the minutes are sometimes vague or unclear as to the intended meaning." Bagley said unclear minutes were part of the reason he did not realize the bank depository contract had lapsed, but the problem has since been corrected.

Other problems mentioned in the management See AUDIT, Page 2

Clarification

In an article in Friday's paper, an Ochiltree County sheriff's deputy reported that John Winegeart, 22, of Lefors was apparently not wearing a seatbelt at the time his vehicle was involved in a collision near Perryton. Winegeart's father, Earl Winegeart of Lefors, said that his son was wearing a seatbelt at the time of the accident and he was not thrown from the vehicle, but the front seat was pushed into the back seat. The injured man has been released from St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, Winegeart said.

Sheriff Jordan has said he hasn't joined the task force because he is concerned about the county's liability if a task force agent made a mistake in Gray County. He also said he fears the county will have to pay to remain part of the task force if grant money dries up.

Friday, citizens criticized those excuses, saying liability can exist anywhere.

"Maybe I shouldn't say this, but if you get involved in that golf course, and somebody gets beaned in the head while they're walking by, you're going to get sued anyway," Ray Velasquez told commissioners, a reference to county and city plans to build a public golf course north of Pampa

Ann Lusk, another member of the group, said even if funds dry up after a year, at least Grav County will have received a year of help from the task force. Spokesman Free asked commissioners what citizens could do if the sheriff continues to refuse to consider the task force after the June 1 meeting. "Vote him out of office. I guess," Commissioner Simmons replied, drawing scattered applause.

Jordan has been in office since 1951 and is unopposed this year for another four-year term.

After Friday's meeting, several reporters were shown a copy of a newspaper article stating that one other county, Briscoe County, also had declined to join the task force. But Briscoe County Sheriff Dick Roehr told The Pampa News on Friday afternoon that, although Briscoe County commissioners initially tabled the idea for further study, they eventually approved joining the task force.

"We're in," Roehr said.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Thousands of tank-led Syrian troops rolled down from Lebanon's central mountains Saturday and prepared to enter the slums of south Beirut, where Western hostages are believed held by pro-Iranian extremists.

By nightfall more than 4,000 soldiers and 250 tanks and armored personnel carriers were deployed at the edge of the 16square-mile slum area, buttressing 7,500 Syrian troops already in west Beirut, military sources

"The buildup is expected to be completed sometime Sunday, perhaps at daybreak or a little later, after which the forces will move in," one source said on condition of anonymity. The guns fell silent in the embattled slums when the Syrians arrived, police said.

The move followed the conquest of the slums by fundamentalist fighters of the Iranian-allied Hezbollah, or Party of God, in nine days of savage fighting with the pro-Syrian Amal Shiite Moslem militia. Police said 211 people were killed.

Police estimate Hezbollah has 3,000 combatants fighting Amal, which has thrown about 6,500 militiamen into the battle. The vanguard of the incoming Syrian forces Saturday rumbled across south Beirut's Ouzai coastal highway at 5 p.m. in 48 T-55 Soviet-made tanks with gunners HOUSTON (AP) - A school bus driver was apparently chasing some youths who threw rocks at the bus when the bus collided with a truck, killing one man and injuring at least nine children, witnesses said.

Many of the about 30 children aboard the bus said driver Patsy Windom, 34, was chasing two youths who fled in a car after throwing rocks at the bus Friday The bus ignored a yield sign just before colliding with the truck, witnesses said.

Arthur Moreno, 24, driver of the truck, was crushed when the bus rolled over and came to rest atop the truck. The truck was knocked about 30 feet by the impact, tearing a fire hydrant out of the ground before it was crushed beneath the bus.

Rescuers were stunned when 9month-old David Lawrence Moreno, Moreno's son and only passenger, was pulled from the mangled truck with no more than minor injuries, saved by his child-safety seat.

Windom, a bus driver for 12 years, and eight children aboard the bus were taken to Hermann and Ben Taub hospitals, all with relatively minor injuries, Emergency Medical Services Director Paul Pepe said.

David Moreno was kept overnight at Hermann for observation but did not appear to be injured, a hospital spokesman said.

Houston Police Department accident investigator W.T. Johnson said officers have talked to a woman who was driving the car in which the two youths drove away after the rock-throwing in-

The woman said the youths had been throwing rocks at each other and one hit the bus.

"The driver stopped and opened the door and yelled at the young men," he said.

Johnson said late Friday he has the names of the youths, but had not talked to them. He said officers had not interviewed the bus

Pete Tobias, father-in-law of the dead man, said a police investigator and two witnesses told him the bus ran through a yield sign before it hit the truck.

HISD security director Les Burton said that during his 18 years as a security officer there has been at least one rockthrowing incident involving school buses each year, but none has ended so tragically

Burton said drivers are instructed to either get help or witnesses from nearby businesses and are asked to obtain the license plate number of any vehicle involved in a rock throwing

"But in no way are they advised to get involved in a chase," he said.

Muriel Johnson, mother of Morris Peterson, 12, a passenger on the bus, criticized the bus driver for chasing the youths.

"I'm real upset and I'm very angry," she said.

Roderick Durham, 15, told the Houston Chronicle there was chaos aboard the bus when it came to rest on the lawn of a North Texas State changes its name — now its 'UNT'!

North Texas State University has wanted to be called something don't call it by its initials, UNT. North Texas chancellor Alfred E. Hurley said the new name more accurately represents the achievements of the 23,000enrollment school in this Dallas suburb.

"Our research work has increased. We have doubled the amount of research funds from $5 million to $10 million in the last two years," he said.

State Rep. Jim Horn Denton, who sponsored legislation last year to change the school's name said, "University of North Texas sounds more prestigious, more high caliber. This just isn't the neighborhood school anymore."

Still there are those that long for the days when the school was known mostly for its music and

'Monkey Business' yacht seized

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) -The luxury yacht Monkey Business, which ferried former presidential candidate Gary Hart to the Bahamas with model Donna Rice, was seized Saturday when U.S. Coast Guard officers found marijuana on it, officials said.

"They found one gram of marijuana, that's one-twenty-eighth of an ounce. According to 'Zero Tolerance,' if we find enough to test positive it's enough to seize the vesssel," said Petty Officer Dan Vogeley.

"The one gram of marijuana tested positive," he said.

The 82-foot yacht was boarded during a routine search about 22 miles northwest of the Bahamian island of Bimini, he said. The four people on board, whose names were not released, have not been arrested, Vogeley said.

The cutter Cape Shoalwater escorted the Monkey Business to the Coast Guard's base here. Vogeley said officials weren't sure who the yacht is currently registered to.

When Hart, his friend William Broadhurst, Rice and her friend Lynn Armandt took their trip in March 1987 to Bimini, about 55 miles east of Miami, the chartered yacht was owned by millionaire developer Donald Soffer and kept at Turnberry Isle Marina in North Miami Beach.

My dad visited from New Jersey a few weeks ago and brought some interesting, yet confusing, news.

My former hometown newspaper was recently purchased by a new publisher, and I was anxious to see what improvements (at least I hoped they were improvements; the thing couldn't get much worse) he made. The paper definitely has a better look to it, with a much greater emphasis on local news, but one story in particular jumped off the front page at

The headline read: Self-service gas ban costly to N.J. motorists.

By way of explanation, New Jersey is one of only two states - Oregon is the other - that bans selfservice gas stations. You can't pump your own gas there.

The story goes on to detail a new federal report that says the ban costs New Jersey customers an average 17 cents per gallon.

I casually asked Dad how much he was paying for gas. His reply — "79 or 80 cents for unleaded" almost caused me to faint.

That's 20 cents less than we're paying out here in the oil patch, folks, and we don't even get the oil checked or the windows cleaned. Granted, 79 cents is probably below the New Jersey state average, but I have a sneaking suspicion that the low price is due to something wholesome and American called 'competition." something our own Greedy Gasmen apparently have no concept of.

Pampa High School's Little Harvester released a survey Friday showing the average senior promgoer spent $288 on the event. The newspaper found that, collectively, spending on this year's prom could hit $100,000.

That's a pile of money. When I think of how many Springsteen tapes I could buy for that amount, it makes me shudder.

The high price of prom-going is due mainly. I think, to a secret plot cooked up by the flower, tuxedo-renting and dress-making people. (No wonder Mayor McDaniel hasn't gotten into the gasoline business!)

Even on this year's eighth-grade prom — which two of mine went to — I spent upwards of $400. That's $200 per kiddo, well above what I spent on my own senior prom just 10 short years ago. Oh, well. What would parenthood be without spending money? Remember. Friday. The wearing of the green

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our tax money still supports UN farce

Your tax dollars are still at work supporting that farce on the East River, the United Nations. The United Nations and its assorted agencies spend about $4.5 billion a year, 25 percent of it coughed up by U.S. taxpayers. Even the World Health Organization, which once eradicated small pox, has bungled the fight against AIDS in Africa.

During the Ethiopian famine of 1984-85, the United Nations voted $73.5 million for a conference center in Addis Ababa, the country's capital. Responding to such outrages, in 1985 Congress passed the Kassebaum-Solomon amendment, which withheld the United States' $206 million assessment. The United Nations has since made a few cosmetic reforms. And in 1986 the Reagan administration convinced Congress to restore most of the withheld money

Let's remember that the United States' single vote in the UN General Assembly equals the one vote of the Khmer Rouge, who represent Cambodia, but who murdered one-third of the country's people a decade ago before being overthrown by North Vietnam; the Ukraine and Byelorussia, which are not independent nations (as they once were), but slave "republics" of the Soviet Union; and such tiny places as Seychelles, an impoverished Marxist satrapy in the Indian Ocean, population 66,000.

Each of these "governments," and dozens of dictatorships, totalitarian oligarchies and people's republications of the second lics, hold the same power as do the United States, Japan and West Germany, who pay the bills. It's like giving Tom Hayden control over the California state budget.

Nor has the United Nations reformed itself since 1986. Thomas E.L. Dewey, in a just-released policy paper for the Heritage Foundation, notes three areas where the UN General Assembly continues to support repression:

"In economics and development, the United Nations continues to ignore the increasing global trend towards less regulated markets and the recognition of the abject failure of the socialist model of development." Instead, "the radical 'New International Economic Order," first adopted in 1974... still shapes UN debate. ... As such, the United Nations remains reflexively hostile toward free markets and private industry.

"In information policy, the United Nations continued to support the 'New World Information and Communications Order' ... to impose state control over media and journalists."

"'Finally, in the area of international law, the United Nations retreated." A committee working to define terrorism was headed by a Libyan. Predictably, the committee excluded "wars of national libera-tion" from the definition. "The resolution was supported by the USSR, Syria and Iran.

The U.S. Congress should cancel all U.S. tax subsidies of the United Nations. Refund the money to the American people. U.S. citizens and businesses, investing that money abroad, will do more to advance progress and peace in the world than the United Nations has in all its sordid 43-year history.

Back to balanced budget plan

April 15th has come and gone again; now we can calmly reconnoiter the debris. In 1986, I predicted that (contrary to what congressmen were telling us) the Tax Reform Act would not simplify taxes, and this year you'd pay more taxes than last year.

Now that you've completed and mailed your tax returns, or filed for an extension, you tell me who was right - Congress or this columnist? This year the average American worked until May 5 to pay his entire tax load (federal, state and local) rather than until May 4 as it was in

As we build up a head of steam for Campaign '88, let's immunize ourselves against more political lies. Some presidential candidates are going to tell us that the reason we have a deficit is Reagan's "raid on the Treasury" and his "tax give-aways to the rich."

As any high school graduate knows (at least those deprived of modern education), we have three branches of government: the executive, legislative and judicial. The legislative branch (Congress) makes spending and taxing decisions, not the executive branch (White House).

But even if Reagan made the spending and taxing decisions as the political demagogues would have us believe, let's look at the numbers. The U.S. Treasury reports, "Between 1985 and 1986, taxes paid by taxpayers with AGI (adjusted gross income) of $100,000 or more (about .2 percent of all taxpayers) increased by $38.1 billion, up from $77.3 billion to $115.4 bilion."

Walter

How does that constitute a "tax give-away" to the rich!

Another part of the Treasury report shows that in 1981, people with AGI below $50,000 paid $189.9 billion in taxes, or 66.8 percent of federal income taxes. In 1986, those same people paid $172.4 billion, or 45.7 percent of federal taxes collected. On the other hand, in 1981, those with AGI above $100,000 paid $43.2 billion in taxes, or 15.2 percent of federal taxes. But in 1986 those same people paid $115.4 billion, or 30.4 percent of federal taxes. Remember: $100,000 a year income is hardly being rich, especially considering the price of yachts these days.

If you have to buy the line that the White House is responsible for spending and tax decisions, you can easily reach the conclusion that lower- and middle-class people bore a greater tax burden during the Carter, rather than the Reagan, presidency, not to mention living with a sick economy, high interest rates and rapid

The 1986 Tax Reform Act gives the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) added power to do things offensive to the principles of privacy, decency, economic growth and rule of law. In response, a lot of Americans vent their anger at individual IRS employees. It's not the IRS who's ultimately responsible for taking your earnings and giving them to bee and cranberry producers, people who refuse to work, foreign dictators, and buying $400 toilet seats for the Defense Depart-

For the most part IRS employees are decent Americans following Congress' orders. They are not guilty - unless we adopt the position taken during the post-World War II Nuremberg Trials, wherein the Nazi war criminal's plea, "I was acting under orders," was deemed an invalid defense

What we need is an amendment to our Constitution mandating a balanced budget and a spending limitation. Such an amendment was introduced and defeated in 1982 and 1986; but it's before Congress again. This time there's a kicker: Several state legislatures are considering a proposal to call a constitutional convention in order to adopt a balanced budget-spending limitation amendment to the Constitution. Three more states' approval is all that is necessary for the adoption of this proposal.

Call a convention may be a risky proposition, but allowing Congress to continue its profligate ways is certain disaster.

The jacket restricts movement and the tie probably is some detriment to circulation. This dress code, then, could lead to such maladies as heartburn, indigestion and even ulcers.

I saw a sign in a hotel bar in Jacksonville. Fla., recently that completely baffled me. It said, "Casual, stylish attire only."

Why, they'll respond, isn't it obvious? The president failed to unseat the Sandinistas, defund Legal Services and other fonts of liberal activism, stop race-based hiring in the federal bureaucracy ... and on the list will lengthen into the night.

But bet the next paycheck on this: You'll hear scarcely a peep about Reagan's failure to manage the Pentagon. In some political quarters, it's still verboten to complain about defense spending — except perhaps to insist there hasn't been enough of it in the past few budget-pinched years.

This sort of thinking has exacted an appalling cost. In the case of the B-1 bomber, for example, the price is $28 billion for 100 planes that may have little strategic value and at the very least are badly flawed. One of them was brought down by a single pelican last fall in southern Colorado. The remaining planes must now be pelicanthe latest in a long list of multibillion-dollar additions and

The full history of the B-1, spanning

Vincent Carroll

30 years and seven presidents, has been told by Pulitzer Prize-winner Nick Kotz, in a new book called "Wild Blue Yonder." Kotz isn't out to trash the B-1 or, for that matter, the military. He never even comes down decisively in the debate over whether a long-range nuclear bomber makes sense in an era of missiles (Dwight Eisenhower didn't think so).

Instead, he uses the B-1 to recount the politics of military procurement, revealing how decisions that have nothing to do with defense drive the what, where and how of weapons production.

The story is one of squalid, tireless (and technically illegal) lobbying by Air Force upper brass, sometimes flatly against the position of the commander-in-chief and secretary of defense; of military services pursuing contradictory agendas; politicians demanding factories and bases in their districts in return for votes, or exploiting events having nothing to do with the case for a strategic bomber

- the launch of Sputnik in 1957, the invasion of Afghanistan in 1979 - to whip up support for their pet project. The Air Force didn't even build test models of the B-1 before a full production run was ordered in 1981. Instead, in order to stave off the chance of another political reversal, design changes were incorporated as the planes were built. Even if you think the B-1 will be just the ticket once the glitches have been overcome, it's hard to imagine a more costly, muddled method of planning and producing it.

Kotz believes the B-1 suggests the extent to which countless other defense decisions have been distorted by concerns over employment, careers and simple pork-barrel greed. Unfortunately, he is considerably less sure of the antidote

Reform has to be across the board, he says, and cites as a hopeful example the Goldwater-Nunn bill of 1986. which expanded the authority of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He also praises a proposal before Congress to create a commission to draw up a list of military bases for closure, which the Secretary of Defense would have to accept or reject in its entirety. But those measures are just the first steps of what is needed.

Defenders of the Pentagon like to recite the fact that defense spending as percentage of the gross national product is less today than it was in 1960, but the comparison is meaningless. An economy's rate of growth has little or nothing to do with military need. The issue is not how much we spend but whether we spend it well. In the case at least of the B-1, the verdict

The April 28 issue of The Pampa News included an article about a local family whose house and all belongings had been destroyed by fire. Help was (and still is) needed. A woman and her two young daughters are having to start over from "ground zero" and her neighbors are coordinating help.

My family and I went through our things and put together a box of clothes, books, toys, etc. Then I went to a store and bought groceries, eating utensils, toilet paper, soap, etc., etc., to try to help. That cost a little over $40.

My point is not to "toot my own horn," so I will ask to remain anonymous at this time although I would normally sign a letter to the editor. The point I want to make is the importance of person-to-person help for people temporarily in need.

Please allow me to illustrate a typical (in my opinion) example:

(1) Federal government forcibly extracts $1000 from me to "help the needy."

(2) Government uses $700 for bureaucratic overhead. (3) Government graft bleeds off $100.

(4) $200 is sent to state government.

(5) State government uses $100 for bureaucra-

(6) Government graft bleeds off $10. (7) $90 is sent to local government.

(8) Local government uses $45 for bureaucratic overhead.

(9) Government graft bleeds off $5. (10) $40 is left to "help the needy." Have I made my point?

We must help those in our community who are temporarily in need on a person-to-person basis, local basis, and then insist that government at all levels GET OUT OF OUR BACK POCKETS. Government cannot do for us what we kave undone without its resulting in a cost many, many times what it should be, and we all pay those bloated costs whether we like it or not. (Remember this past April 15?)

Every time you hear a politician promise you 'government help'' for your local problems, remember the preceeding exercise and do two things:

(1) VOTE AGAINST HIM/HER AND TELL THEM WHY.

(2) Use the money you will save to do some

REAL good.

Sad to say, this will probably leave you a lot of politicians to vote AGAINST and few, if any, to vote FOR. Doesn't sound very much like the society our forefathers envisioned and fought for, does it?

The family temporarily in need is the Gage family, and the neighbors coordinating the help may be reached at 665-1201 or 665-6658 (as previously reported by The Pampa News). Name withheld

Teachers share some of blame

The people of Pampa and teachers say they are concerned about the children of Pampa dropping out of school. A big part of that problem is the teachers' fault.

My daughter asked one of her teachers if she could go to the restroom; she was refused However, she went anyway. This was in the early part of March, and I was called by the school the last part of April about this and was told she had to be punished for this action. I then gave them permission; however, nothing was done at that time.

I was called again about the same thing on April 28. I think if a child needs punishment that it should be done then, not a month or two

I have had several people tell me of this problem and their children with the teachers of Pampa schools, so I realize that it is not just my daughter.

The United States has agreed to let the Soviets work with us in the development of curricula and teaching materials for elementary and secondary school children. Why this agreement? It is to restructure the education of American children. Christian Update for November 1987 reports that "this took place in Moscow on Oct. 24-25, 1985, when the Carnegie Corporation, with the prior approval of the U.S. Department of State and National Security advisors, entered into negotiations to work with the Soviets in the development of curricula and teaching materials for elementary and secondary school children

The agreement calls for the Soviets and the Americans to jointly develop and test computer software for use in the U.S. elementary grades through the use of computers.

The Carnegie Corporation, a longtime advocate of disarmament and world interdependence, is using its tax-exempt status to cover the costs of its separate but related educational exchange agreement with the Soviet Union

(This is one of the reasons Eustace Mullins makes this statement in his book The World Order: "The World Order controls the citizens" of the United States through the tax-exempt foundations ... The foundations create educational policy through their staff members in key positions at every level of the educational system ... What we have then are criminal syndicates masquerading as philanthrophic enterprises while they inflict socialist world slavery on nations and peoples for the benefit of World Order.'')

Let this be a warning. If parents are in the unfortunate straits of having their children in public (government) schools, they must watch like a hawk what is being taught their children. Study their books, ask pointed questions, speak out, attend PTA meetings, contact curriculum directors and counselors, tell the superintendent and school board.

Looks for former B-17, B-29 crews

To the editor:

I have been sending letters to many papers all over the country.

I am trying to accomplish two things — one, to increase our membership and, two, to get publicity for our association. Our president is a retired general, and there are other officers down the line. We include enlisted men - some who served on B-17 and B-29 crews, and widows of deceased members. We are looking for members of the 301st Bomb Group, World War II, the men who served at Smokey Hill, Barksdale, and the 301st Electronic Counter Measures Wing and the 301st Refueling Wing at Lockbourne. There are men out there who do not know that this association exists. We include men who served in the 32nd, 352nd, 353rd and 419th Bomb Squadrons of the 8th, 12th and 15th Air Forces in England, North Africa and Italy, and support groups.

The association was formed Oct. 17, 1984 as a non-profit organization to plan, organize and sponsor reunions for members; to leave memorials to honor those who made the supreme sacrifice while serving and those who unselfishly served with the organization; and to publish periodicals.

I do this in honor of all the guys who flew the crates of thunder, all the crews, and all the members of the 301st Bomb Group and Wings — from Spokane to Lockbourne. The 301st was activated in February 1942 and deactivated at Lockbourne in 1952. It has been reactivated at Malmstrom Air Force Base in Montana. The Wing will be equipped with KC-135R aircraft in late 1988

There will be a reunion in San Antonio July 21-24, 1988.

To join the association or receive information, write: 301st Veterans Association, P.O. Box 47843, San Antonio, TX 78265-8843, ATTN Billy S. McCarty, Secretary.

Police should play on their own time

To the editor:

I have been a resident in Pampa for over 24 years; needless to say, I am very familiar with this town and a majority of the people in it.

I get out quite often and notice just about everything, including things on the DRAG. What I have seen on countless occasions and what this letter is concerning is the job of a police patrol officer.

I have always thought a patrol officer was to do simply routine patrol work, not chase high school girls. One police officer almost always works the DRAG beat for this apparent reason I and numerous other people see him sitting, trying to hide in dark parking lots, talking to usually the same cars (or should I say girls?). This goes on sometime for 20-30 minutes at a

I'm sure if these were legitimate stops, they wouldn't be in a dark parking lot. Law states you are to pull over immediately to the right when approached from behind by a police or emergency vehicle (not the nearest dark park ing lot). I have talked to some of the girls after they finished, and they said he just pulled them over to talk to them. He also pulls car loads of girls over just to see who it is or "check them out"! I have seen the same thing happen when he works the high school traffic.

What are we paying this "kid" for? To go out and find a girlfriend, or to "protect and to

EDITOR'S NOTE: It may or may not be 'well known'' about the alleged involvement of lawyers and others in the drug traffic - without the evidence or facts to bring them to trial for a conviction, it all remains just rumors, as do rumors about any "high officials" or socalled respected citizens making money off drugs in Pampa. And "those old rumors" about reasons why no one runs against Sheriff Jordan are just that - rumors; there's also a very strong possibility no one runs against him because he probably just can't be defeated in an

Bail sought for Cisneros assassination suspect

his client's bond lowered in an appeal to the 4th Court of Appeals in San Antonio. Authorities charged Abell with solicitation to commit capital murder. He was arrested Tuesday after allegedly agreeing to pay an undercover officer $5,000 to kill Cisneros, authorities said. Prosecutors requested that bond be set at $305,000, while Hilbig asked for a $50,000 bond, saving Abell was elderly and had no previous criminal record. The mayor has joked about the alleged assassination plot, saying it would not interfere with his city business.

Abell, a former Libertarian congressional candidate, said he was the head of a group called the American Patriots. He opposes paying taxes and already owes more than $5,000 in taxes and penalties for three pieces of property in Natalia, officials said.

"Mr. Abell is one of those many tax protesters which the IRS keeps track of and keeps open an ongoing investigation," Assistant District Attorney Dan Maeso

Teachers have crucial role in fighting AIDS

ATLANTA (AP) — Teachers have a crucial role to play in fighting AIDS and can not only shape the lives of young people but "actually save those lives," says the president of the National Education Association.

"Children trust their teachers and they will go to their teachers for information. We must have factual information and know how to respond to young people," said Mary Hatwood Futrell, attending a three-day AIDS education conference sponsored by the NEA and the Centers for Disease Control.

Educators at the conference are discussing patterns of AIDS infection among young people, problems teachers face in AIDS education, legal issues and other topics.

"Some will say ... 'Here you go again, getting involved in social issues,' but educators and students will not be immune" from AIDS, Futrell said in an interview.

Dr. Gary Noble, CDC deputy director for AIDS, said the conference is aimed at helping teachers educate their students about the deadly disease.

"No one should die of ignorance," Noble 'said. "No child should reach the age of sexual maturity or experimentation with IV (intravenous) drugs without knowing about (AIDS virus) transmission. Teachers have a most unique opportunity to bring the facts out."

The conference was addressed Friday by John W. Washburn Jr., an AIDS patient who is retired superintendent of the Brighton School District near Rochester,

"We can put a stop to this plague. You have important roles in this task," Washburn said.

Washburn, 48, was diagnosed last spring with AIDS and publicly disclosed his illness in January. He then embarked on a series of appearances and speeches to educate high school and college students and teachers about the disease.

Washburn said he does not think he is being unfairly exploited as a gay man willing to talk openly about his illness. "Exploit me," he said. "My "Exploit me," he said. "My time is limited. I want to be exploited by whoever can use me to put windows on what is now happening with AIDS and what is likely to happen.

"My years in public school work have groomed me ... I'm not embarrassed by the questions."

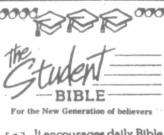

Other scheduled participants in the conference, which concludes Sunday, include officials and researchers of the Atlantabased CDC. Discussion will include ways to incorporate AIDS education into the existing school curriculum, to help young people avoid the virus which causes the disease.

The NEA and the CDC's parent agency, the Public Health Service, are members of the Health Information Network, created in 1987 to serve as a resource in the AIDS education effort. Last fall, the network distributed 1.9 million copies of a handbook for teachers, "Facts About AIDS."

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome has struck 973 American children under age 13; of those, 566 have died, according to the CDC.

Preservationists vow to save historic hotel from destruction

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The battle to keep a landmark art deco hotel from being turned into a parking lot heated up as preservationists and the city struggled to save it and the owner began pulling plumbing from the building.

"People are distressed and distraught that we would be losing a building," Nancy Liebman, legislative liaison for the Miami Design Preservation League, said as a work crew carted plumbing and scrap metal from the beachfront Senator Hotel.

"While it's still here, it's worth a continuous battle," she said.

The three-story, green-and-white hotel was built in 1939, and is on the National Register of Historic Places, Liebman said. It is one of 800 art deco buildings in the mile-square area that comprises the only official art deco district in the world, she

The closed hotel's owner, the Royale Group, must raze the Senator for parking spaces as a condition for obtaining bank loans to renovate other art deco buildings it owns, Royale attorney Harold

"It's not we're anti-preservation, but we have to be practical, too," Rosen said. A date for demolishing the building has not been set.

Mayor Alex Daoud said he hopes last-ditch negotiations scheduled this week with the Royale Group's owners will keep the wrecking ball away. "We're doing everything within our power to

"It's hard to see where this urgent crush for

tant masterpiece.''
The art deco district's buildings are painted pastel colors and sport geometric designs, its sidewalks are painted pink and it's often featured on NBC's Miami Vice television show.

The city is pushing for the renovation of the district's buildings in its effort to bring back the glory days of tourism. The 70-room Senator is a crucial part of the district, said Barbara Capitman, president of the Art Deco Society of Miami Beach and the National Art Deco Societies of America.

"The Senator ... has probably the most famous etched glass in the district," Capitman said. "It is a particularly seductive building."

Liebman and Capitman accuse the Royale Group of ignoring pleas from them and city officials to save the hotel, which was closed after the group bought it in 1984.

Rosen countered that in the nine months it took his clients to obtain a demolition permit, no one offered a viable alternative. He said none is expected now

"Our people are more active in preserving than any others on the beach," Rosen said. Preservationists "have blinders on, they're not in the real world"

Daoud said he remained optimistic, but understood the Royale Group's problems.

"They first started to restore it nurchased new

"They first started to restore it, purchased new doors and fixtures, but what happened was they had to provide this parking," Daoud said.

"It's almost a Catch-22: you've got a developer renovating the area, doing a great job, and he's the same individual who's knocking down one of our architectural treasures to make room for parking."

Jackson tones down criticism of Dukakis; Bush still campaigns

By The Associated Press

Praise for Jesse Jackson and a talk on party unity from New York Gov. Mario Cuomo helped calm troubled waters between Jackson and Democratic presidential front-runner Michael Dukakis, but Cuomo continued to withhold his endorsement of either man.

Vice President George Bush, meanwhile, campaigned at a defense plant in Fullerton, Calif., where he called Dukakis' views on defense ''naive at best'' and warned they ''would be dangerous.''

Dukakis spent much of Friday fending off attacks from Jackson and Bush, suggesting his Democratic rival's call for a big spending increase for education "doesn't make any sense" in the face of federal budget deficits.

Cuomo emerged Friday from a 1½-hour private meeting in San Francisco with Jackson, saying the Democrats needed him.

"The Democratic Party needs Rev. Jackson for his personal input, for his personal capacity, for his ability to deal with the issues intelligently — not just to articulate them, which he does with eloquence and effectiveness, but understanding the issues, especially questions of foreign policy," Cuomo said at a fund-raiser for a local congressional candidate.

But Cuomo, who eliminated himself as a possible presidential contender last month during his state's sometimes rancorous primary, also praised Dukakis as "a man of great intelligence, great sensitivity and great practicality."

The balancing act helped Cuomo keep an earlier promise not to endorse any candidate until after the June 7 California primary, where 336 delegates to the national convention are at stake.

"We fundamentally are on the same side of history," said Jackson later, muting his criticism of Dukakis following his meeting with Cuomo.

Bush, the certain Republican nominee, told the crowd of defense plant workers: "The Dukakis doctrine is the doctrine of wishful thinking. And is bad thinking."

"The Soviets ... reget only strength. To think that they would agree to cuts in their strategic and conventional arsenals in the face of unilateral American abandonment of major weapons programs is the height of folly."

Bush also went on the offensive on the environmental issue.

"I want to make the environment a Republican issue," he told a cheering crowd of about 800 Republicans at a rally in Portland, Oregon.

"I would like to be remembered the same way as Teddy Roosevelt — next to the national security, it's the condition of the Earth that you will leave to generations to come," he said.

Bush visited a tree nursery near Medford, Ore., Saturday; was to take a raft trip Sunday and visit a tree research lab in Washington on Monday.

Dukakis dismissed Jackson's accusation that he is too vague, pointing to his record as Massachusetts governor.

"It will come as a surprise to the White House and Mr. Bush if my views on the world and my style of political leadership has any similarity to his. One of the things I have is a record. People don't have to guess about it," he said.

Speaking to about 200 students at Jefferson High School in Daly City in a suburb of San Francisco, Dukakis warned against illegal drugs and called for increased public emphasis on education.

His wife, Kitty, told students of her own 26-year dependency on diet pills.

Sewage spill closes swimming pool

AUSTIN (AP) — A sewage spill involving 30,000 gallons of sludge at a creek prompted city officials to close Barton Springs, a popular swimming hole, which will remain off-limits to swimmers until water quality improves.

City-county health officials ordered the spring-fed pool closed Friday as crews worked to clean up the spill at Barton Creek, near the Lost Creek subdivision.

Officials said the pool might be reopened Sunday, depending on the results of water-quality tests. They urged swimmers to stay out of the swimming holes in the creek downstream of Lost Creek because of the threat of contamination.

"There is no evidence the sludge has made its way downstream and we think it is doubtful it will, but we felt we needed to close the pool as a precautionary measure," Bruce Truitt, spokesman for the Austin-Travis County Health Department, said.

Workers were pumping the sludge out of the creek into a holding pond, said William Colbert, spokesman for the Texas Water Commission.

The spill happened Thursday at a sewage treatment plant operated by the Lost Creek Municipal Utility District. The plant is about eight or nine miles upstream of Barton Springs pool.

Colbert said a worker was pumping sludge from a tank, called a sludge digester, into a truck for disposal when a pipe at the digester tank burst, spilling the sludge into the creek.

Sludge is the solid material removed during the sewage treatment process. It is not raw sewage.

Colbert said water commission engineers have been at the site to monitor the cleanup.

A large number of Iranian salvage tugboats were reported battling fierce flames aboard the Liberian-flag, 564,739-ton Seawise Giant, the world's biggest ship, from which oil was leaking.

The executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they received the information from ships in the vicinity.

Thirty-six members of the Seawise Giant's 50-member crew were evacuated while the crew of the four other vessels had abandoned ship, the sources said. It appeared the other 14 from the Seawise Giant were missing.

The 457,841-ton Burmah En-deavour, a British-flag vessel that also ranks among the world's five largest vessels, was the least damaged. But radio communication indicated two crew members were missing, sources said. Both the Seawise Giant and the Burmah Endeavour are used

But the Spanish-flag 235,000-ton Barcelona, which was taking on cargo from the Seawise Giant, was sinking as a result of the attack, they said.

The other two stricken vessels were the 231,712-ton Iranian tanker Khark and the 152,004-ton Cypriot ship Argosy, both shuttle tankers used by Iran to carry oil down the Persian Gulf to Larak. The sources said these were still aflame, but damage was not se-

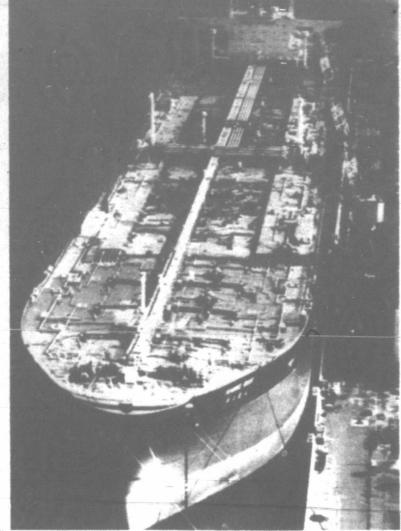

The Iraqi News Agency said "large numbers" of jets took part in the rare long-range raid and all returned safely to base.

An air raid siren sounded at Larak around 1:05 p.m. (4:05 a.m. CDT) as Iraqi warplanes made one of their rare long-range raids on Larak, at the northern end of the Strait of Hormuz, the gulf's gateway

The Seawise Giant also was hit in Iraqi raids last year, once in October and again in December. The huge vessel is chartered by Iran's government-owned oil company as a floating storage depot for oil at the Larak terminal.

It was not known whether the Burmah Endeavour was serving as a similiar role or picking up an oil cargo.

Most of Iran's oil customers pick up shipments from Larak. The Iranians use a special fleet of chartered tankers to shuttle crude to Larak from the Kharg Island terminal in the northeast-

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A bomb exploded inside a truck late Friday near reviewing stands being prepared for farewell ceremonies for retreating Soviet soldiers. A Soviet source said 11 people were killed and 12 wounded.

The blast occurred at 5:45 a.m. (8:15 p.m. CDT Friday) in a housing area on the banks of the Kabul River. Saturday, witnesses said they saw four bodies being removed from a house that was destroyed

Vladimir Sevruk, deputy chief of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee's propaganda department, provided the casualty figures to foreign reporters covering the pullout, which is to begin today

It was not immediately known whether any Soviets were among the victims.

In Moscow, the official Tass news agency reported that the blast killed 11 people and wounded 13 and blamed "Afghan antigovernment formations." It gave no other details.

The blast demolished embankment walls on both sides of the river that threads through this ancient Afghan capital city, whose streets are now filled with Soviet troops, tanks and armored personnel carriers.

Witnesses said flames were visible when they arrived shortly after the blast. The bomb had been planted in a large truck that was badly mangled.

down on papal visit with opposition group

SANTA CRUZ, Bolivia (AP) - The Vatican says Pope John Paul II's tour of Paraguay will proceed as planned after the country's authoritarian government backed off on its bid to block a papal meeting with opposition leaders.

The Vatican had said earlier that it was "astonished" that the government of President Alfredo Stroessner would try to alter the schedule for the pope's trip to Paraguay, the last stop on his fournation, 12-day South American tour

In Lima, Peru, meanwhile, Saturday's stop on the papal tour, a column of 60 marching leftist rebels firebombed a hotel where the papal press center is headquartered.

In Santa Cruz, a center for this nation's notorious cocaine trade, the pope on Friday issued his harshest condemnation of drug trafficking since he began the trip May 7 in Uruguay.

At the city's municipal airport — which U.S. drug agents say is used intensively by cocaine runners - John Paul told about 220,000 people at a Mass that the drug trade "leads to the most terrible form of slavery and sows your soil with corruption and death

There is an urgent need not only to protect youth from drug consumption but to combat trafficking itself, which is a totally infamous activity,"

He challenged his audience to tackle a long list of ills that plague Bolivia, South America's poorest

Also Friday, the Vatican said in a communique released in Bolivia that "The holy father's pastoral visit to Paraguay will proceed just as planned." Earlier last week, Stroessner's government canceled John Paul's scheduled Tuesday meeting with the Builders of Society in Asuncion, Paraguay's capital

About 350 intellectuals, businessmen and politicians belong to the group, which is sponsored by the church and includes representatives of unauthorized opposition parties. Paraguay had said the ban was for "security reasons."

According to Friday's Vatican statement, the lifting of the ban was arranged at a meeting between Paraguayan government representatives and the Vatican ambassador and local bishops.

Cancellation of the meeting would have marked the first time a government altered John Paul's official itinerary on the 37 overseas trips he has made since becoming pope nearly 10 years ago.

Stroessner, a general and the Western Hemisphere's longest-reigning leader, has run Paraguay

In Lima, marching rebels, many wearing hoods and chanting revolutionary slogans, tossed a fire bomb, threw rocks and smashed three large front windows as they paraded in front of the Hotel Crillon

The violence came amid a wave of guerrilla activity Friday and followed a week-long series of rebel attacks.

Pro-Cuba guerrillas on Thursday briefly disrupted a mass at the the Santo Toribio Seminary, where the pope was to speak this weekend, and urged those attending to join their leftist insurgency, church officials have said.

The same day, Maoist rebels bombed a police bus on a busy downtown street and wounded 14 policemen in one of the bloodiest attacks ever in the capital.

The hotel bomb, described as a Molotov cocktail by employees, broke a window and set an inside curtain ablaze, witnesses said. There were no injuries and the blaze was rapidly doused, police tered on the main floor of the plush hotel.

Also Friday, leftist guerrillas bombed a bank and strafed a military installation with machinegun fire from a passing car, police said. There were no injuries in either attack.

Workers dig for survivors Mexico building collapse

AGUASCALIENTES, Mexico AP) — Rescuers cleared crumbled concrete Saturday on the fading hope that someone might still be alive under the rubble of an unfinished four-story building 11/2 days after it collapsed, killing at least 13 people.

Officials said that at least 53 people were injured when the structure came crashing down as workers were about to pour the last concrete at a furniture factory that occupied the ground floor and part of the basement. Some of the injured were buried for hours "I had finished working and was about to leave when ... all of a sudden everyone started yelling hysterically that there was an earthquake," said Juan Flores, who was buried for five hours. "I dashed under a table and all of a sudden everything went dark, and there was this terrific noise and there was dust everywhere," he told the Excelsior news agency He said a slab of concrete that fell on the table protected him from the rest of the debris.

Flores said he was quiet at first, but "the fear and the anguish of being buried ... impelled me to yell very loud, and the rescue squads dug me out."

The Aguascalientes state government said 13 people died, including a 16-year-old boy riding past the building on a bicycle when it collapsed Thursday. But a Red Cross official said at least 14 people were known dead.

All day Friday, officials gave conflicting estimates of the number of people believed trapped under the rubble.

Eduardo Zapata, chief Red Cross attendant on duty in this city 320 miles northwest of the capital, said crews were painstakingly working their way down through the massive rubble.

Rescuers swung sledgehammers at chunks of rubble and passed concrete blocks down a line as they cleared the debris piece by piece through Saturday.

'Below, we think there is no longer anyone alive because there wouldn't be enough air," Zapata said.

He said a large amount of dirt had fallen in with the building, which had three basement levels, a main floor and three upper stories

"We have the building plans and we are making tunnels where we think there may be people and when we determine there are not, we will begin to use machines,' he said.

Gilberto Sanchez, the radio officer at police headquarters in this city of half a million residents, said about 60 soldiers from the army garrison joined firefighters, police and volunteers in the rescue effort.

Bulldozers and cranes were brought from as far away as Salamanca, 78 miles to the southwest.

Celia de la Torre, a state government spokeswoman, said late Friday the number of dead stood at 13. Zapata said 14 were known dead. He said 12 bodies had been recovered and two others remained in the rubble.

Two people were missing, he said. Mrs. de la Torre said authorities believed two or three may still be trapped.

Father-and-son barber shop like a trip to the past

By JANA COLLIER The Brazosport Facts

WEST COLUMBIA, Texas (AP) — Walking into Roy Wayne Sloma's barber shop is like a visit to the past

The black-and-white checkerboard tile floor is a little chipped, and the wooden benches are worn from years of wear, but the place is comfortable and homey.

The men sit in old-time barber chairs as 54-year-old Sloma snips and shaves, much the way his father did when he started the business more than 70 years ago. Sloma's father, Jack, came to East Columbia as a barber in

In 1919 he moved to West Columbia where he operated the barber shop in several different buildings before settling at its present location in the early

Sloma says the shop today looks about the same as it did when he was a boy coming down to listen to the men talk and shine shoes

It still bears his father's name, and the reputation for good hair-established long ago remain.

An antique wrought-iron, shoeshine stand pushed into the corner is the very stand that Sloma once used for shining the men's shoes

In 1959 Sloma started working with his father.

Sloma had been employed by the Dow Chemical Co. when the big recession of 1958 hit, causing layoffs at the company. Working with his father was wonderful, Sloma says. The two were more than father and son they were friends. "It's not often when you can have a dad and a friend," Sloma

His father operated the barber shop until January 1984. He died in March 1984, just 12 days away from his 87th birthday.

Talk in the barber shop today is not very different than it was 45 years ago, Sloma says.

Many of the men have been cuts and good company that was decades and they haven't been coming for just a haircut.

They come to talk about things they read in the newspaper and to discuss the economy and how their business is doing.

And, of course, fish stories abound, although no one wants to tell one for publication.

But according to one customer, no one tells a fish story better than Sloma himself. "You can't believe anything you hear in here," Sloma says laughing.

One man a customer and a friend says that in 50-plus years he has only had his hair cut twice at a barber shop other than the Slomas'

Another man, Bill Pierce, said he had his first haircut more than 60 years ago by Jack Sloma, and he's been getting his hair cut at the shop ever since.

Business has been good for Sloma, especially the last several years as shorter hairstyles have come back in vogue for men.

Rumors: Ghost town has

NORTH BALTIMORE, Ohio (AP) - At dusk, the narrow roads and footpaths leading to the settlement of Galatea are disturbed only by barking dogs and shadows of tree limbs dancing in the steady wind.

It's a far cry from the traffic of a century ago, when the small settlement just north of this Wood County village was a thriving oil town.

From the late 1880s until the early 1900s, hundreds of people worked at an oil refinery. The town had a glass factory, a railroad station and a Main Street complete with a general store and other

Now, Galatea is a ghost town. No more than 10 houses dot Galatea Road, which runs through the center of the village. No one stops here anymore except for the few residents.

But there is a mysterious side to Galatea. Some people say the settlement is haunted, claiming that spirits rise from the ground at night, and cause ghostly mischief and vandalism. Others say religious cults meet in the woods surrounding the settlement

Iris Holloway has lived in Galatea since she was born 68 years ago. She said she had heard rumors about cults and ghosts. She has seen the words "Enter If You Dare" and "Haunted House" spray painted on an abandoned church.

But Ms. Holloway says she is not superstitious. 'There's nothing to the rumors. That little church is where I grew up and got my best knowledge of church. In fact, my grandfather was one of the ones who helped to build it and was one of the ministers there.

'It was quite a town, a long time ago of course.

Everything has been changed since I was a child. There's nothing here anymore. It isn't Galatea anymore. It's really sad," she said.

Wood County sheriff's deputy Gary Hager said he did not believe rumors of cults, Satan worshipers or that the area was haunted.

"I think a bunch of kids get their head together and rumors get started. I don't take much stock in what they say. I think a bunch of kids (are) seeing things that aren't there," he said.

The sheriff's department frequently handles reports of vandalism, suspicious people and vehicles in Galatea, he said.

Clair Blackall, whose father worked in Galatea at the turn of the century, said the oil business got started there in the late 1800s.

According to an 1886 story in the "Buckeye Monitor," the Buckeye Pipeline Co.'s newspaper, the first oil refinery in Bloom Township was at the junction of the B&O and T&OC railroads.

"This great refinery was the Standard Oil Co.'s Manhattan plant," Blackall said.

Oil production was pretty much over by the early 1900s. When the oil boom died in northwest Ohio, the town slowly faded, as people moved away and businesses closed

"A great amount of people moved West, although this was a viable oil well until 1930," he Blackall owns some of the land where the refinery was located. It employed about 600 workers.

'Like all boomtowns, there was a saloon or two. Traveling ball teams used to come and and play games because it was an oil boom town with lots of money," he said.

HOUSTON (AP) - The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. took its first step to restore Texas' troubled thrifts by announcing the acquisition of four insolvent thrifts by Coastal Banc Savings Association under the Southwest Plan.'

Coastal merged Friday with the Alliance Savings and Loan Association, Houston; Colorado County Federal Savings and Loan Association, Columbus; Security Savings and Loan Association, Dickinson; and Cameron County Savings Association, San

The acquisition increases Houston-based Coastal's assets from $68 million to about $600 million, said Manual J. Mehos, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Coastal.

It also adds 15 offices to its current five locations, stretching from Houston south to San Benito in the Rio Grande Valley, just a few miles north of the Mexican border Mehos said the merger was very complex but he expected a smooth transition.

The FSLIC will spend $138.3 million to merge the four thrifts into Coastal, the first consolidation under the federal government's thrift plan.

Cost to liquidate the four institutions would have been $156 million to $160 million.

All deposits will be protected, even those that exceed the federally insured limit of $100,000, officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said in making the merger announcement in Washington.

Coastal will continue to operate all branches for three to five months, when the arrangement calls for it to eliminate half of the 20 branches, ultimately leaving Coastal with its headquarters and 10 outlets.

Mehos said the branches to be closed have not yet been identified.

"Obviously, some of those positions will be redundant," said Mehos. The merger brings together about 120 employees.

This is the beginning and we will begin to see a number of future transactions that will provide stability to Texas thrifts," said FHLBB member Lawrence J. White, who called it a good deal for the FSLIC, the FHLBB branch that insures deposits, and for depositors.

Coastal will bring in new outside capital of $3.5 million from private investors in the months following the transaction. Mehos would not name the investors.

The consolidation is the first in the three months since the FHLBB announced its Southwest Plan to restructure the crippled Texas thrift industry and cut the number of S&Ls in the state by one-third.

Gov. Bill Clements praised Friday's ac-

"The savings and loan industry is an important part of the Texas economy. The announcement today by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is a positive step in the direction of restoring health to the industry," Clements said.

"Continued negotiations and completed mergers under the Southwest Plan need to proceed in an expeditious manner.

Board member Roger Martin said Friday's merger, classified as small, allows FSLIC to gain "a piece of the upside action rather than just bear the downside costs.

'This was the best transaction from all perspectives," he said. "This is not a bailout. Simply, the FSLIC is honoring their obligafirst year of the merger. Of the state's 140 ailing thrifts, 109 are insolvent. On Wednesday, the FHLB in Dallas reported the Texas thrift industry finished March with a negative net worth of $10 billion - a $3.4 billion decline from the 1987 close.

And on Friday, the Wall Street Journal re-ported that Sunbelt Savings Association of Texas apparently posted a $1.2 billion net loss last quarter, leaving regulators to face what could be the costliest bailout in savings and George Barclay, of the FHLB in Dallas; said newspaper's figures on Sunbelt "were based on speculation because numbers for institutions in the state of Texas are not public information. I do not talk about, I am precluded from talking about, non-public information on insured institutions.

He said if Sunbelt were rescued, it would not hamper the thrift plan.

'The calculations that have been used to develop the Southwest Plan include our knowledge of the condition of the institutions in the Southwest. I believe that FSLIC has enough resources to substantially handle the insolvent institutions in this district within the next three years," Barclay said.

The newspaper reported the Sunbelt loss. for the fiscal fourth quarter ended March 31, would be among the largest ever for a thrift in such a period and leaves Sunbelt with negative regulatory capital - a lenient measure of net worth - of almost $1.7 billion.

Cost of closing Sunbelt could rival last November's record $1.3 billion bailout for Vernon Savings & Loan Association, another

In the intense heat of the Austin sun, the Pampa girls caught fire. And when the ashes settled Friday night, they were left holding the team championship trophy from the Texas UIL state track

Tanya Lidy, this year's fiveevent athlete extraordinare, will be bringing home five more medals from the state capital, three golds and two silvers, bringing her high school state medal trophy count to 14, including seven golds.

Lidy earned Friday's two silver medals in the triple jump and the long jump, finishing behind Brenham's Starlie Graves in both events. Lidy triple jumped 39-1 %, and passed on her last two jumps due to the extreme afternoon Pampa coach Mike Lopez commented, "She (Lidy) still has to jump again in a couple of hours and anchor two relays and it's hot and humid.

In the long jump, Lidy leaped 19-91/4 to earn a silver medal. The gold medalist in that event, Starlie Graves of Brenham, set a new 4A state record with a 40-6 jump.

In the 400-meter relay, the Pampa girls team, comprised of Lisa Johnson, Yolanda Brown, Tonya Osby and Tanya Lidy won the gold medal. They clocked in at 47.8, exactly one second off the 4A state record.

In the 100-meter dash, Yolanda Brown placed fifth with a time of 12.2. Her time was only .04 seconds behind the winner.

Pampa also took the gold in the 800-meter relay with a time of Brown, Cassandra Hunnicutt, Tonya Osby and Christa West.

By this point in the meet, Pampa's team victory was virtually assured. But Lidy's first-place finish in the 200 meters clinched the championship. She finished in 24.0 flat, .01 off her 23.9 for a state record from 1987. In this event, Brenham's Graves had to settle for the silver.

Brenham scored 60 points to place second. For the third consecutive year, Pampa and Brenham battled for the team championship. Pampa won the state meet in 1986, Brenham won last year and this year the two teams flip-flopped once more.

In an expression of imminent seconds. Willie Jacobs of Pampa pride, coach Gary Cornelsen commented: "All the kids performed really well. It was a great team effort. Tanya (Lidy) is a sensational athlete, but we couldn't have done it without everyone. We were asking freshmen to keep her in the race on the relays.

Lady Harvesters take Austin by storm once again

By SONNY BOHANAN Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Tanya Lidy didn't have much to say between her five track events Friday at Memorial Stadium. She exuded that quiet confidence that comes from knowing. And when you perform like the Pampa girls did Friday at the state track meet, language only becomes redundant. Winning the state track team title needs no introduction here in Auhey put Pampa on the map two years ago, earning a reputation for taking the city by storm.

Following gold medal finishes in the 400-meter relay and 800meter relay, the situation became increasingly clear to those who cared to notice. Sly grins begin to creep over the faces of the Pampa girls, and the excitement began to rise.

With the 4A events barely halffinished, an expectant hum began to course through the stadium. Among those tallying points the name Pampa began cropping up.

Lidy had yet to run the 200, but as she holds the 4A record in that event, all fears in that quarter were quelled. Pampa already had this meet wrapped up.

And when Lidy indeed won the The Pampa girls track team 200, there wasn't a team in Memorial Stadium with a hope of petition, it was all over.

Shklar, a junior, hopes to re-White Deer's Vigil wins gold at state

By SONNY BOHANAN Sports Writer

AUSTIN — On a hot, muggy Saturday morning in Memorial Stadium, Monica Vigil of White Deer decided to take matters into her own hands. In the process, she collected a gold medal in the girls' 2A 800-meter run at the state track meet this weekend.

Vigil beat the current state 800meter recordholder, Ginger Hoots of Brazos, by taking the lead early in the race and never letting go of it.

'I was planning to follow Ginger, but she didn't come out like I expected, so I'd thought I'd try to lead for awhile," Vigil said.

Vigil ran her best time ever, clocking in at 2:15.07. Kim McEntire of Canadian finished just behind Vigil, capturing the silver with a time of 2:15,08 and creating a near-photo finish at the tape. Hoots had to settle for the bronze this year as Panhandle determination captured the gold and silver in the 2A

Vigil said she was surprised to win in her first state outing, citing McEntire as her role model.

"She keeps the same pace all the way through the race, and that's why I admire her," Vigil

In other Panhandle area state meet action, Bubba Smith and Richard Smith of Wheeler finished 2-3 in boys A discus. Bubba won the silver with a throw of 175-11, throwing ten feet further than he did last year, and Richard threw 160-9 for the

This was Richard's last event in his high school athletic career, and although he had hoped to improve on his personal best throw, he was glad to get a medal.

There were several college recruiters in Austin to watch Richard and he's hoping to play college football.

Donna Wessner of White Deer placed eighth in the girls 2A shot put with a throw of 33-434. She threw her career best of 36-91/2 at regionals two weeks ago

Groom's 1600-meter relay, team, consisting of Brent Thompson, Rocky Crump, Brice Ruthardt and Bruce Thornton, placed seventh in the state meet, clocking in at 3:27.5.

They had trouble with the handoff to the third leg and were uncomfortable with the heat, but they ran their best time of the season, nonetheless.

Kentucky's Chapman to join NBA ranks

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Can Kentucky's Rex Chapman succeed in the National Basketball Association?

Chapman decided to give it a shot Friday, announcing that he was passing up his final two years of collegiate eligibility to make himself available for the NBA.

"I had mixed emotions," Chapman said. "This was much harder than picking a college. It's kind of a gut feeling that this is the best time for me.

"I think it will be a tough adjustment," Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton said at a news conference. "I hope he's drafted by a team that's well established like the Lakers or Celtics so that he won't be rushed" in his develop-

"I think they should stay in school," Marty Blake, NBA director of scouting, said of players leaving school for the pros. "Physially and emotionally, they are not ready. I don't think people realize how good the NBA is.'

The NBA's deadline for underclassmen declaring for the June 28 draft is midnight tonight. Chapman mailed a letter to league commissioner David Stern on Friday, meaning there is no chance he can change his mind, NBA officials said.

Chapman, 20, refused to speculate on where he might be taken in the draft.

Only last month Chapman, a 6foot-4, 185-pound guard, indicated that he would remain at

"It's strictly a business decision," Chapman said from his Owensboro home Friday. "There is only one reason to enter the NBA draft early ... because I feel I have the talent and the ability to utilize that talent, and the maturity that is needed.

In early April, Chapman said that he would stay at UK at least one more season. But since that time, the basketball program has come under an NCAA probe for alleged recruiting irregularities.

Chapman, however, said, "This decision is in no way based on, or influenced by, the current basketball investigation.'

Sutton said he regretted seeing Chapman leave, but wished him

Jazz takes 2-1 lead over Lakers Malone spearheads Utah assault with 29 points By BOB BLACK assault early in the second half. The 7-foot-4 center clogged up opening-round playoff series.

Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY - Los Angeles coach Pat Riley knows what the problem is against the Utah Jazz. The question is, "Can the Lakers do something about it before it's too late?"

We were slow tonight," Riley said after the Jazz defeated the Lakers 96-89 Friday night to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven playoff series. "Our whole attitude has to be up-energy. We have to take it to them.'

For much of the game Friday, the Jazz took it to the defending NBA champions, who are trying to become the first team to repeat since the Boston Celtics did it in

"If it hadn't been for Byron Scott's perimeter shooting, we would have been blown out.' Riley said. "Our attitude has to change collectively and individually.

Also Friday, Boston defeated Atlanta 108-97 for a 2-0 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

In today's games, Denver was at Dallas and Detroit at Chicago in series that are tied 1-1. All four series resume Sunday.

The Jazz, who won at the Forum 101-97 Tuesday, made it two straight against the Lakers and five straight at home largely with a stingy defense led by Mark the middle once again, scoring 10 points, blocking six shots and grabbing 14 rebounds.

He held Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers' 41-year-old center and the NBA's all-time playoff leader in scoring, to just six points on 3-of-14 shooting from the field.

John Stockton, who finished with 22 points and 12 assists, stole the ball from Johnson and drove for a layup that gave the Jazz a 78-65 lead with 2:30 left in the third quarter.

Johnson, held to 16 points, said Eaton's inside play is hurting the Lakers. "We just have to quit worrying about Eaton and go on out and play," he said.

Baseball cards not just for youngsters

●Bob Fick just doesn't fit my image of a baseball card collector. He's not a cool 12-year old kid, who calculates a Carl Yastrzemski for Willie Mays swap like a banker studying a large loan request. He's not a wildeyed, middle-age adult with tons of Major League caps decorating his closet and he doesn't wear 'Red Sox Are Dirty' and 'Break Up the Orioles' t-shirts.

No, Bob is just a normal friendly fellow who served his country in both World War Two and the Korean Conflict and is now retired from Cabot. Unless he's pressed, Bob would rather talk about bowling than baseball, about striking out in the tenth to win the game for The Pampa News bowling team, than about Mike Stanley striking out in the tenth in another Rangers' loss.

Realistically, there's actually no way you can picture a baseball card addict in your mind. Card collectors are made up of all kinds of people, from major generals to mechanics, from youngsters to retirees, like Bob. Your next-door neighbor might Bob is a collector of the Major League variety with 3,390 cards in his possession at last count, all of them worth money in the dealer's market.

"I had one guy that offered me a dollar apiece for all my cards, but I figured I'd better hold onto them. They might be worth seven or eight dollars apiece in a few years," Bob said.

Thumbing through his four albums of colorful cards is like taking a trip into baseball past. played for the Cincinnati Reds. There's a smiling Stan Musial, one of Bob's favorite ballplayers. Bob has three different cards of the great Babe Ruth, one as the Yankees' slugger, another as a Brooklyn Dodgers' coach and one at an autograph session. Remember pitcher Pedro Ramos of the old Washington Senators? Bob's got him tucked away Bob said the cards from Post Cereal are considered the best in terms of value and he doesn't collect any cards past 1968 now.

'Right now the ones past '68 aren't worth that much and I figure 3,390 cards is enough," Bob says. "I'm about to run out of Bob uses two books, "Guide To Baseball Card Collecting," and 'Baseball Card Price Guide,'' to determine current market value.

"You determine the value of cards about like you do coins. A card that's listed in mint condition would bring more that one in fair to good condition," Bob explained. "One in poor condition means when a card has the corners turned down or it might be torn or marked up. How did Bob get his start in this fascinating hobby? Bob bought his first cards the same way he picked up one his bowling balls...at a garage sale. Where else?

These people had two paper sacks full of baseball cards and they were selling them for practically nothing, so I said, 'why not?," he recalled.

A nonchalant purchase during an afternoon outing turned into a lifetime hobby for Bob, who didn't realize he was carrying home bags of gold dust that day.

"I didn't have any idea how much the cards were worth until I was listening to a radio program on baseball cards," Bob said. "I realized then that we had something, maybe not a fortune, but someday a pretty good-size

Maybe Bob doesn't have a fortune in his hands right now, but he would if he could find a Honus Wagner or Eddie Plank.

Both the old Wagner and Plank cards are very valuable because only a few were made. Wagner, Pittsburg's hall of fame shortstop, launched a protest when his card first appeared in a tobacco pouch. Wagner, an anti-smoker went to court and forced the company to take the card off the market. A few got into circulation, which makes the card a rare gem estimated at $25,000. Because of a broken printing plate, the company decided to discontinue Plank's card and it's believed only 50 to 75 exist today. Plank's card is now worth $6,500, more old Philadelphia A's.

Bob, however, dosen't plan to ever sell any of his cards. He wants to pass them on to the next generation.

"The way I feel about these cards is the way I feel about an old gun that belonged to my granddad," Bob says. "They're more sentimental than valuable and maybe someday they'll help pay for a college education for somone in the family."

Pampa's Tacy Stoddard, along with five area players, closed out their high school basketball careers in the Golden Spread All-Star Games last week in Canyon. Playing with and against stiff competition, Stoddard scored 11 points in two games while Wheeler's DeAnn Collins had 16 points, and Kelton's Leslie Johnson, 10. In the boys' division, Canadian's Robert Cervantes scored 20 points and White Deer's Todd Haynes had one goal in two games played.

Arena Football may never catch the fancy of the sports purist, but the fans seem to have as much fun as the ones who throw away their hard-earned dollars on pro wrestling. And AFL fans have a chance to come away with a free football because there are no nets to keep an incompleted pass or wayward punt from going into the stands. Arena football does remind me a little of Oklahoma's eight-man game, except punting is allowed in eight-man and it's not in the AFL.

Flashback: May, 1973. The Pampa Harvesters closed out the baseball season with a 10-4 win over Amarillo High. Ricky Bigham had three hits and three RBI and Gary Davis hit a home run for the Harvesters.

Here are some surprising sports facts...Ty Cobb, considered by many to be the greatest baseball player of all-time, never played on a team that won the World Series...O.J. Amazingly, a boxer once knocked HIMSELF out in a pro fight!...It happened in a bout some years ago between Jack Doyle and Eddie Phillip-...In the second round, Doyle threw a hard right which missed...His momentum carried him over the ropes...He hit his head on the edge of the ring and fell un-conscious to the floor below...The referee counted 10, and the fight was over...Doyle had knocked himself out!

Colonial - One big party stop Movie scenes to be shot during tournament

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH - The Colonial National Invitational has a storied history and the reputation of being one of the best party stops on the PGA Tour. There will be additional glitz and glamour this year because scenes from Dan Jenkins' book on golf-tour life, "Dead Solid Perfect," will be shot before, during and after the tournament.

Jenkins will be on hand to watch HBO's filming of his hilarious book, which begins at an old Fort Worth golf course called

'Goat Hill. Jenkins is a native of Fort Worth and chose the Colonial for the filming because he used to cover the tournament during his days with the Fort Worth Press and the Dallas Times Herald. Colonial is moving to a larger press room this year, and one of the reasons is the movie.

Jerre Todd, Colonial NIT public relations director, is an old buddy of Jenkins'

"I got a small part in the movie," Todd said. "During the press room interview of one of the golfers, I have the line: 'Kenny, how many times did you hit your driver?' I've practiced it so many times I'll probably say 'Benny,

Colonial is, like its name suggests, an "invitational."

Like a coveted invitation to The Masters, few golfers ever turn one down. Only the Masters and Colonial have resisted the temptation to turn to tournament sponsors who insist on having their names on the letterhead.

Colonial doesn't always get everyone it wants. This year, it won't have Masters' champion Sandy Lyle: he decided to go back to Europe after the Byron Nelson Classic to cash in on his victory at Augusta in April.

Crenshaw leads Nelson Classic

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Ben Crenshaw's magic putter tamed the slick, hard greens at the Byron Nelson Golf Classic but the talk of the gallery was Arnold Palmer's rib injury.

Crenshaw shot a 5-under-par 65 on Friday to earn a two-shot lead after 36-holes of the $750,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic over Mark Wiebe and Jeff Sluman.

Crenshaw, the 1983 Nelson champion and winner of the Doral Open this year, had nine oneputt greens to post a 9-under 131. "I had the caution flag out because the greens were so firm and fast," Crenshaw said. "You could let some strokes slip away out there today. I was proud of the way I played. I just didn't waste any shots.

Crenshaw's only bogey came when he hit a 6-iron into the bunker on the 217-yard Par 3 No. 17. He took two out of the bunker but made a short putt for bogey.

"I hit the wrong club," Crenshaw said. "I didn't listen to my

He added "I was very, very happy with the bogey there."

Palmer, 58, was downcast. It was the first time he had to leave a course while he was playing since the 1969 PGA in Dayton,

"It's only the third time in 33 years I've left a golf course," Palmer said. "I had a back injury at New Orleans in 1966 and again at the 1969 PGA in Dayton, Ohio.'

Palmer, who shot 70 in the opening round, said "I had a catch in my ribcage when the day began. I just kept nagging me and

BLOOMINGTON - Bob Knight began his weekend holding most of the state of Indiana and much of the basketball world in suspense, wondering whether the fiery Indiana University coach was leaving for University of New Mexico.

The Albuequerque Tribune

quoted an unidentified New Mexico source as saying the school has given Knight until Tuesday to accept its offer. It also reported Dave Bliss of Southern Methodist University said he believed Knight would accept the New Mexico job.

"From what I've been told, he's going to take the job," said Bliss, who spent six seasons as Knight's assistant at Army and Bliss, who remains a close friend of Knight, said they talked the job. The unidentified source quoted by the newspaper said Bliss already has agreed to accept the Lobo job if Knight turns it down.

Knight, in New Orleans on Friday to conduct a coaching clinic, would not comment on the situa-

"By this time next week, whatever I'm going to do will be decided," he said.

In a newspaper interview published Friday, Knight denied he would leave Indiana because of a widely reported rift that's developed between him and firstyear IU President Thomas

Knight has said one reason he was considering the New Mexico job was because of changes at IU. but he has not specifically mentioned Ehrlich.

'Any decision that I would make to leave Indiana or to get out of coaching would not be made because of people now at Indiana," Knight told the Bloomington Herald-Telephone. "It would be because I feel that's just the best thing for me to do."

Ehrlich, who publicly reprimanded Knight twice in the past six months, has become the target of criticism himself. The school president is being blamed by Knight supporters for prompting the controversial coach to consider leaving.

In Muncie Friday for a meeting of the Indiana Commission on Higher Education, Ehrlich expressed disappointment at the backlash against him.

By TIM GRIFFIN San Antonio Express-News

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Eddie "The King" Feigner brings a regal nature to softball, a beer-andshot kind of sport where royalty isn't exactly revered.

Feigner doesn't wear a robe or carry a scepter. His throne is a bumpy, pebble-strewn mound, many times on a dimly lit field where Little Leaguers played earlier in the day.

But what he does with a softball is as majestic as anything any sovereign would do. At an age when many his age are contemplating retirement options and Social Security checks, the 64year-old Feigner just keeps on firing, day after day, pitch after pitch. The paunchy frame and tight crew cut might make him look like a combination of Whitey Herzog and Fred Flintstone, but Feigner can still hurl a softball at speeds of up to 85 mph, making players a third of his age look

"I'm playing a lot of players who I have played against their fathers and grandfathers," Feigner said during a recent stop in San Antonio. "But it's still a lot of fun and I enjoy it.'

For the 43rd straight season, 'The King and his Court' will trek across the nation, serving as one of the last barnstorming outfits. Their gimmick is ridiculously simple but appealing.

Feigner's team of four players a pitcher, catcher, shortstop and first baseman — will play a full squad of opponents and usually end up the victor.

Feigner's team has ventured more than 4 million miles in search of softball games, taking trips to all 50 states, 10 Canadian provinces, Saudi Arabia, New Zealand, Nepal, Tibet and Cuba.

One of his more memorable pitching opportunities came when he whiffed future Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, making the then-university professor look like he had more of a future as a revolutionary than in his beloved baseball.

"I remember he came out of the mountains to play in that game," Feigner remembered with a laugh. "He seemed like a good guy to all of us back then."

Feigner plans a trip to South Korea in early September for a series of exhibition matches prior to the Olympics. During a recent stop at Lackland AFB, something rare happened to the King's team. They lost.

But he shook off one of his infrequent defeats with the nature of someone who has pitched 3,000 innings each year for the past 30

"Just remember that I could lose 4,700 straight games and still won't have a losing record," he said dryly, punctuating his claim by thumping a softball into his

Feigner has a point. He has won nearly 7,000 decisions during his lengthy career. Feigner has struck out 118,000 batters and thrown nearly 1,000 no-hitters. His right arm has thrown millions of pitches.

Prior to beginning his barnstorming career, Feigner served in the Marine Corps, then worked as a truck driver and as a disc jockev at a small radio station in his hometown of Walla Walla,

His career in softball got started after a game in which Feigner's team gave a sound thrashing to a neighboring village. When an argument ensued, Feigner told his rival he could beat him with three teammates enough to hit with the bases loaded — and proceeded to back his boast with a no-hitter.

News of Feigner's feat spread across southern Washington and gained the attention of a neighboring team in Pendleton, Ore., who asked if he could repeat his action in their town.

When the realization of riches hit Feigner, he quickly understood that a career in softball could be financially appealing, if somewhat hectic

'That beat working for a living," he recalled with a chuckle. His team uses the same jokes as 30 years ago, but people are still laughing at them. Feigner was once clocked with a fastball up to 100 mph, with the ability to mow down a team of All-Stars including Frank and Brooks Robinson, Willie Mays, Willie McCovey and Frank Howard.

His pitches have slowed appreciably through the years, but his assortment of tricks, ranging from behind-the-back pickoff throws to pitching blindfolded, still proves enough to confuse most adversaries

BUTTERBEAN

llen "Butterbean" Thompson holds the distinction of being the first black man to make his home in Pampa. Which was an accomplishment considering racism and segration were accepted forms of behavior during the early part of this century.

He arrived in Pampa on the first Sunday of April 1926, along with J.J. Johnson and another man known only as "Red." They had come to Pampa from Panhandle looking for work. Henry Thut Jr., who had recently opened Thut-Saunders Motor Co., hired the men to wash cars. They had nowhere to stay, so Thut let the men sleep in his garage.

A black man in an all-white community was something of a novelty, Thompson remembered.

"Women would bring their little children to see me," he said. "They'd crawl up on my lap and put their hands up and touch my face." Thompson demonstrated by taking his gnarled hand and rubbing it all over his face. "They had on three-cornered pants (diapers)," he explained. "I guess some of them are grown now."

"But I'm not black," he said. "Look at me," he said, extending his arm and tapping the back of his hand. "I'm red. No, I'm half black." Thompson's mother was part Indian, he explained.

"I was born July 9, 1890," he said proudly. "How old does that make me?" He waits, eyes twinkling while his visitor counts the years. "I'll be 100 in two years," he coaxed. "I could run a race with them kids out there. And I'd win!"

Though Thompson's life has been long, it has been a hard one. His father, a former slave, died of consumption when Thompson was 11 years old. "A lot of people died of consumption in those days," he said.

Many of Thompson's values were rooted in what he learned from his father while a child. "I know how to keep what I get. I didn't gamble and that whiskey ... well, I was used to that," he

"My daddy would buy a half gallon of whiskey when we were plantin' that corn in February Next February he'd buy another half gallon."

a glass of water, add a bit of whiskey and pass the tonic around among Thompson, his four brothers and two sisters.

"Down there in South Texas them mosses on trees would be just like rain in the mornin'. We'd be runnin' through those fields and that's why he'd give it to us," he explained.

"When one of us would do somethin' he didn't like he'd say 'Teeth.' That was my brother. 'Teeth, give that boy a whoopin' when I get out of here.' Then Teeth would whoop me good and laugh at me for bein' ugly."

"Everybody had a name like that," Thompson explained. "Teeth's real name was Morris.

Thompson tried to explain how he got the nickname "Butterbean," but never quite made it clear to his visitor. "They called me 'Butterbean' cuz I used to waltz a lot. I couldn't dance worth a lick, but I could waltz. And I could talk a lot of Spanish," he said. "The Mexicans couldn't talk about me cuz I knew what they were sayin'."

Every Friday when he was a child, Thompson remembered going to Brenham, county seat of Washington County, to watch a hanging. During one of these trips, Thompson said his mother pulled him up to a tall Indian.

"This is my poppa," she told him. "Your poppa is at the house, but this is my poppa."

"I ran behind her skirts. Women's skirts drug out far behind them back then, as far as from me to you. And I wouldn't come out," he recalled. "I'm scared of Indians. I'm scared of 'em yet."

Thompson's father lived in Goliad until the slaves were freed during the Civil War. "Daddy always said he was born in the '40s and I'd say 'Which '40s?' and the fight was on," he said, laughing softly at the memory. "Daddy didn't know if he was born in '41 or '49. And he didn't like anybody to remind him of that."

Digging through some old papers, stacked in every corner of the tiny room where Thompson lives, he pulled out a worn copy of The Practical Speller, copyright 1895.

"I saved up 40 cents pickin' up pecans to buy that when I was seven years old," he said. "I couldn't use it until I was eight years old. We didn't go to school until we were eight years old."

Thompson's childhood changed drastically after the death of his father. "Mother married a preacher and the family went...," he recalled, flinging his hands wide to show how far his family was scattered.

"That preacher beat me up," he remembered. "If you look close you can see the scar," he said reaching up to his left temple where a thin straight scar stretched about 2½ inches from his brow to his grizzled hairline.

"He throwed a hatchet at me. Not a hammer, a hatchet. And he hit me, too. Ol' Judge Melton came and arrested him. That judge told him, 'Next time you hit that boy, I'll hit you, but with a hundred bullets."

After that Thompson went to live with a white family named Frost. He remembers "Uncle Aaron" fondly, but seemed to think that Mrs. Frost, whose name he can't remember, died a couple of weeks ago.

He worked for the Frosts, feeding mules and helping with the crops. "I drawed $20 a year," he said. "I was rich then." When World War I began, "Uncle Aaron" wouldn't let Thompson

SCHOLARSHIP WINNER

Chris Dark, son of Russell and Diane Dark, has been awarded a $500 scholarship to attend the college of his choice by the Southwest Exposition and Livestock Show in Fort Worth.

Chris is a member of the P.L.C. 4-H Club. He was a participant in the calf scramble at Fort Worth on Jan. 31, 1986. At this time, Chris caught a calf which entitled him to receive funds to buy a heifer. Chris used these funds very wisely and purchased an Angus heifer, which he in turn showed the next year at Fort Worth.

Chris purchased his heifer from Gray Druesedew in Haskell. Chris put his heifer on feed in April and is still feeding her today. He showed the heifer on several different occassions last year. He did an excellent job in the showing and represented this county well

The whole idea behind the scramble heifer project is to help young people learn about the beef industry. This was a very educational experience for Chris because he had to maintain monthly records and send them to his sponsor. He also chose to have his heifer bred by artificial insemination. This practice enabled Chris to choose whatever bull he wished to breed his heifer to. Chris' heifer was bred July 24, 1987, and she had her calf last Thursday, May 5.

In talking with Chris about his future plans, he assured me that he will be showing another heifer next year. All of Chris' hard work and record keeping paid off for

Once a month Chris turned in records to Fort Worth, Gray County Extension Office and his sponsor. Following the Fort Worth Stock Show, all of the records were judged, and Chris' records were among the top 10, which entitled him to this $500 scholarship. Chris' success is just another example of the many opportunities that 4-H has to offer young people

4-H ELECTRIC CAMP

Plans have been made for the 4-H Leadership Electric Camp to be conducted June 20-24 at Camp Scott Able near Cloudcroft, N.M.

If you are 12 years old or older by June 20, 1988, then you are elegible to attend. If you are interested in going to this camp, you'll need to come by and fill out an application nomination form and return it to me by May 27. This is an excellent chance for younger 4-H'ers to participate.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me at 669-7429. Gray County can send four boys, four girls and two adults, at present.

Choose proper clothing for summer exercising

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

By DONNA BRAUCHI County Extension Agent

Springtime encourages many individuals to get their exercise program in action, and for some, that means vigorous walking or running outdoors. Clothing plays an important part in runner's general comfort, speed and development of proper running

The key factor in choosing running clothes is the individual's needs. All runners should keep in mind several points when choosing the basic attire for running, which is a pair of shorts and a T-shirt or a sleeveless top called a

Both shorts and top should fit closely but not tightly, allow ventilation, provide for dissipation of body moisture, be light in weight, allow easy movement, be comfortable against the skin and be highly visible if the wearer plans to jog along a road. Look for soft, easily stretchable elastic at the waistline on shorts. If the waistline adjusts with a drawstring, be sure it has some elastic as well for breathing and movement once the drawstring is tied. Be certain that the waist-to-crotch length is sufficient so that the crotch line is not

The fit of a singlet is of great importance because the arm motion used in running can push an ill-fitting garment out of position or cause chafing of the arms, chest and underarm area. For men, the singlet straps should be narrow and set in toward the middle of the shoulders, and the armholes should be very wide and deep to allow complete movement of the arm and shoulder without uncomfortable rubbing on the armhole edge of the singlet. T-shirts that have a raglan sleeve rather than a set-in sleeve may be more comfortable for this reason.

For women, the singlet straps need to be wider to cover the straps of a support bra that should be worn when running. The armhole should be cut relatively high at the underarm to

Keeping cool and comfortable is a must in the spring and summer months. Cotton is often considered the most comfortable fiber to wear, but its ability to absorb moisure may, with profuse perspiration, result in a heavy, soggy, out-of-shape garment that sticks to the wearer at the end of a run Synthetic fibers tend to "wick" moisture, that is to transport it, without absorbing it, to the outer surface of a fabric, where it can be evaporated, leaving the wearer and the garment dry. Recently, polypropylene has received considerable attention for its special ability to transport moisture away from the skin surface.

Entire garments may be made of polypropylene, but it is most frequently used for linings of shorts and breathable warm-up jackets. Lying next to the skin, it acts much like the stay-dry lining of a baby's disposable diaper, keeing the skin surface dry and readily passing moisture toward an outer garment layer.

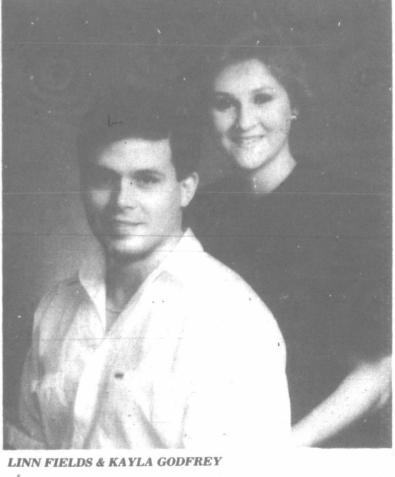

If synthetic fibers are used for running garments in warm weather, they should be woven as meshes. A low-cut neckline and wide armholes and hemlines increase the flow of air through clothing and thus provide cooling. Crop tops leave the midriff bare, and shirts worn outside the shorts may add a channel for air to cool the torso. In warm weather, the fewer layers worn, the better.

Next week, we will look at factors of visibility in running garments or other activewear.

After leaving the Frosts, Thompson worked for a railroad company until he settled in

He married, and fathered two children, a little girl who died of diptheria while still young and a son, Melvin A. Thompson, who died on July 4, 1953 in a car wreck while stationed in California.

He proudly shows the aging certificate hanging on the wall from the United States Army stating that his son died honorably while in the service of his country. "That left me serviceconnected," he explained, indicating that he receives a certain amount of money each month from the government for having a son who died while serving in the Army. Thompson and his wife divorced many years ago, he said.

For years Thompson ran a general store at his home on Maple Street. Shelves ran the length of the small front room, he said Today, faded letters on the front door proclaim, "Tobacco, Cigarettes, Bread and Milk, Sold Here." An old thermometer. advertising Winston's "How Good It Is," is nailed to the front doorjamb.

An old glass counter is filled with memorabilia now. Thompson painstakingly makes his way through the 60 years of clutter and proudly dusts off photographs hanging behind the counter. "I was a Boy Scout once," he said, showing a photograph of himself as a man standing on a Thompson ran his store until "I got so young, Uncle Sam didn't want me to work anymore. I get more (money) now than I ever did running the store," he said.

Looking back on his long life, Thompson appeared to be satisfied, though he gets a little sad at times when he thinks too much about his friends who have died and how much things have changed

'I can cry,'' he said, his eyes filling just a bit. "Lots of people seen me cry. I knew a man once, Mr. Sumpter, he always said, 'a man without tears ain't no man

'I could have been dead thousands of time," he said. "But I've lived so long cuz I tend to my business. I'm not smart, never was, but I get along with everybody

'I'm well. I feel just as good as I did 65 years ago. I don't hurt nowhere," he added

"You goin' to put this in the paper?" Thompson asked, indicating his visitor's notepad. Well, don't forget to tell them I'm a coon hunter. My friends and me, we meet down there by the corner and go hunt coons. How do you eatch coons? his visitor asked. "I don't catch coons," he said with exasperation. "The dogs catch 'em. I just

There's nothing like experience!!!

The other night I performed a Csection on my Westie, "Rosie". All seemed well for a few days. The 3 puppies nursed, never seemed to be unhappy, always quiet, and content. I thought. Then my wife said that she didn't think they were getting enough milk. I thought she was imagining this, but to keep the peace, I picked them up and checked them. Sure enough, they were thin, weak, and had lost weight. Rosie's milk had not come down and they had been nursing on empty nipples. Naturally, it was after 10:00 p.m. Luckily, I had canned formula and nursers at the clinic, After a long night of hourly feedings, the pups were doing much better the next day. I learned some valuable les-

1. Make sure you have a "back-up" system, i.e. have plenty of formula and bottles on hand when you expect pups or kittens.

2. We had been keeping the pups and mother in the living room, but her food and water in the kitchen. Now, it is in the SAME box and she does eat and drink much more than before. After this change and a little help from her resident vet, her milk came down and now the 3 pups are nice and fat.

3. When keeping new-born pups, don't assume they are OK simply because the pups are quiet. Crying pups indicate a need for food and/or warmth. Quiet pups can be DYING pups. Be sure to pick them up and feel how "solid" they feel. If they are not gaining weight, or are, in fact, losing weight, start supplement feeding immediately. It's a good idea to have a can of formula and a pet nurser on hand. (Not everyone can find one after 10:00 p.m.) These are available from the pet shops and/or your veterinarian.

has received one of the 1988 National Community Service Awards from the American Association of Retired Persons Laramore, who is a member of Pampa Chapter AARP #1198 Area 7, Texas, was selected by the chapter's board of directors for her outstanding volunteer contributions to the community.

In the "55 Alive/Mature Driving" defensive safe driving course, she served over 375 persons last year. These courses are held in conjunction with local and state police authorities who issued citations to older citizens, who can get their fines reduced by taking the course. Each participant is also eligible for a 10 percent reduction on their car insurance premiums upon completion of the safe driving program.

Laramore also participated in the Pampa chapter's Tax Aide program. She headed a staff of volunteers who were trained by AARP in cooperation with the U.S. Internal Revenue Service to provide assistance in tax form preparation to older citizens.

The AARP National Community Service Award was established to coincide with Volunteer Week, April 17-23, and to recognize the contributions of thousands of volunteers in nearly 3,700 AARP chapters nationwide. The AARP motto is "To serve, not to be served."

With more than 30 million members, AARP is the nation's largest organization of Americans age 50 and older in the world. Headquartered in Washington, D.C., AARP is a non-profit, non-partisan organization offering a wide range of membership benefits, legislative representation at federal and state levels, and educational and community service programs which are carried out through a national network of volunteers.

Pampa hospital observes Hospital Week

Did you know yesterday marked the last day of National Hospital Week AND National Bathroom Reading Week?

Lynn Allison gave instructions to employees of Coronado Hospital on how to update a wardrobe use of accessories, skin care and makeup, along with a complete makeover for two participants. All the while a completely baffled group gasped in delight and surprise at the transformation with makeup and correct colors. The lucky two were Joyce Morris and Frances Guthrie.

Jack O'Sullivan, physical therapist, held three sessions Tuesday on beginning an exercise program. Wednesday, Betty Scarbrough led sessions on weight control. A penny says the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday groups "walked with their docs" on Saturday. Look for some smashing looking, physically trim hospital employees. Hmmm...Why don't we do that, Bouquets of nice thoughts to Dr. Nick Kadingo! Nick started on a volunteer basis to give full professional services to residents of both nursing homes, May 11 at Pampa Nursing and May 18 at Coronado Nursing. It is a much needed, much appreciated service.

Some of the Sunday School classes of Hobart Baptist Church are "adopting" residents at CNC. Adopting simply means sending a birthday card, perhaps a visit, or just making special people feel special.

If you think you saw little "green people" way out on Duncan Street, you really saw little silver people! Belated birthday wishes, little Rossie!!

A pharmacy director will be named soon. A warm Pampa "Welcome!" to Another warm Pampa "Welcome!" to Katie Wamser, quality assurance director of Coronado Hospital. Katie, a 12-year resident of Portales, N.M. and a native of Tulsa, Okla., eagerly awaits the arrival of her husband George and three children, Jeannie, 17, a high school senior; Jimmy, 12, a seventh grader; and Jodie, 10, a fifth grader, when school is out. Katie claims hobbies of sewing, bowling, reading and community involvement. She is a lifetime member of Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority.

George, too, enjoys community involvement plus outdoor sports. Jeannie, a percussionist in an award-winning band, participated in DECA. Jimmy plays trombone in his school band and enjoys swimming, while Jodie is a Girl Scout, interested in biking and swimming. All three children played Old English Handbells in the Methodist Church. An active family, huh?

People are still talking about Act I's recent presentation of You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown. Mike Kneisl as Charlie Brown proved (1) to have a beautiful singing voice, and (2) to be as totally uninhibited in front of a live audience as he is in front of a radio mike.

Leah Maple as Snoopy was convincing and energetic. Cindy Judson, wife of the Presbyterian minister, was a super duper Lucy. Tara Webb proved that the show must go on, in spite of an acute illness that would have put most of us at home.

Danny Cowan, Linus, danced and sang with his security blanket. Billy Roberts, Schroeder, held up his end of the bargain and made his acting debut, too. Heidi Rapstine, piano accompanist, played tons and tons of notes, the whole score, if you please, and played well, too! Special congratulations to Kayla Pursley, director!

Many area residents enjoyed hearing native Pampan Mary Jane Johnson sing with the Amarillo Symphony a couple of weeks ago. An outstanding operatic soprano and equally distinguished concert artist, Mary Jane is the daugher of Maxine and the late Rex Rose. She was particularly striking in a peacock blue gown and glittering cape of peacock blue, black and gold. The cape was from a TOSCA production, which she was performing in RECEIVING LINE The receiving line: your first oppor-tunity to face the world together as man and wife. To make it go smoothly, here are some things to keep in mind.

If space permits at your wedding site, you may want to hold your receiving line in the lobby or foyer to greet your guests as they leave the ceremony. If this causes traffic jams or crowds, however, you may instead prefer to hold the receiving line at the entrance to your reception.

The traditional arrangement of a re-ceiving line is: bride's mother, bride's father, bride, bridegroom, his mother, his father. Sometimes the maid of honor and best man, or all attendants, are included at the end of the line.

The alternative modern arrangement of a receiving line, which can make family introductions easier, is to alternate family members: bride's mother, bridegroom's father b bridegroom, bridegroom's mother, bride's father.

Checking the charts

By BEAR MILLS

KOMX Morning Personality

Philosophers tell us that perception equals reality in the mind of those doing the perceiving

That being the case, Canadian country music star K.D. Lang is battling "problem perception" in her attempt to win a following in the United States.

Lang has been tearing up the Canadian charts, the story goes, and is now ready to follow Anne Murray and Gordon Lightfoot as legitimate import items. However, she has an appearance that more resembles a truck driver than a country belle.

Sporting no makeup, wearing boys clothes and a haircut straight out of Gentleman's Quarterly, Lang sports no appeal in the looks category at all. So why not just write her off as another noncontender in the race for the top of the charts?

Imagine a voice at least as good (maybe even better) than Patsy Cline, and a country soul that permeates every note of every

That's the problem! K.D. Lang is really good. The latest country music reviews in Billboard call her album Shadowland an artistic triumph. Legends like Loretta Lynn, Kitty Wells and Brenda Lee join in on the album, paying tribute to Lang's potential as heir to the country queen throne.

In spite of such lofty praise, though, there is still the matter of appearance. Can anyone deny that the good looks of Barbara Mandrell, Reba McIntire and Kathy Mattea are major contributors to their success? Of course

And while other female country stars may not be as good looking as those named, none have ever dared (or even wanted to dare) to resemble Johnny Cash more than they might his daughter

Shadowland is a bluesy trip into the past with remakes of hits by

Perry Como, Patsy Cline, Dinah Shore, Sarah Vaughn and Bob Wills. From a musical point of view, the album is a terrific success. Personal favorites are "I'm Down to My Last Cigarette" and "I Wish I Didn't Love You So." The songs carry an emotional attachment that no female country singer has been able to pull off since the immortal Cline did it back in the 1950s. Those looking for a solid musical punch in the gut from a "super voice" will make Shadowland a must for the collection.

The real issue, then, is Star Factor. Why anyone would dress in such an overtly offensive manner to basic country practicality is a mystery. Even those in radio who will admit she has a super voice refuse to budge an inch on airplay. "Why should we?" is the common response. Lang is offensive in appearance and style.

The old saying goes: "When in

Lang is in a land where female country stars wear slinky outfits and push-up bras. Yet she doesn't even have pierced ears. Most of the men in country music even have pierced ears these days!

So we are back to the issue of perception again. Shall we perceive that Lang is a square peg trying to fit into a round hole? Or is she another Lyle Lovett trying to expand the boundary of country music? If she is, I feel safe in saying country fans are not ready to be stretched that far.

Punk appearances are fine for Rosanne Cash and the Judds as long as they are at least feminine. K.D. Lang sports a look that is Butch, pure and simple.

If your mind-set is so liberated that looks don't really matter (hah!), then Shadowland is just what the optometrist ordered.

For the rest of us, let's hope Lang leaves the GQ look for something a little more toward the Good Housekeeping end of things. The voice is fine right where it is.

Pals West and Bruce join for 'Theme'

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

Guitarist Leslie West, drummer Joe Franco from Good Rats and later Twisted Sister, and bassist Jack Bruce, who'd been in ream and the Cream-like trio West, Bruce and Laing, played together one night last December when a club in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., had a cancellation.

Franco says, "It was a thrill. We taped it digitally for ourselves, listened back and said, 'We've got to put this on record.'

West had called old friend Jack Bruce in England to see if he'd perform on an album that he and Franco were making. Bruce had flown to New York for three days, sang lead on one song and played bass on three.

After the night playing together live, Bruce became enthusiasic enough to go ahead and play bass on everything.

The album, released in April by Passport Records, is Theme. West sings lead on all but two songs. Bruce sings lead on 'Spoonful," which was a Cream hit in 1967, and on "Theme from an Imaginary Western," which was a hit for Mountain in 1970.

Franco says, "Leslie and I have been playing together over the last year. A guy from Passport Records happened to hear us in Atlantic City and said we should make a record.'

West says, "I hadn't tried to get a record deal. I was sick of being on a major label. I'd rather be a big fish in a small pond.

Franco is 36 and a bachelor. West is 42 and has been married for eight years. When West was 9, an uncle in show business took him to the Jackie Gleason Show. The guest was Elvis Presley. 'When I heard Elvis play guitar, that started me," he says.

West began his career in the 1960s with the Vagrants, a Long Island bar band. Last year, Arista Records released The Great Lost Vagrants Album, a collection of singles, on which West's brother, Larry, now in the restaurant business, plays bass. West recalls, "Felix Pappalar-di had produced Cream. I idolized Cream. Up until then, we'd had the Beatles and Stones who played and sang songs. Then Jimi

7 DAYS A WEEK

They started with a theme, improvised and came back to it.

"The record company hooked us up with Felix. He produced two singles for the Vagrants. Later on he threw the Vagrants out of the studio. We didn't have enough material to do an album and he only had two weeks. Felix had to produce the Goodbye Cream album. He said, 'If you get something together, call me.' I called him four weeks later.'

West called him for his first solo album, Leslie West - Mountain. Pappalardi produced it in 1969 and then organized, and joined, a group named Mountain. West played guitar and sang, Pappalardi played bass, Steve Knight played keyboards and Corky Laing played drums.

Lillian Roxon's Rock Encyclopedia calls Mountain "one of the nicest, silliest and loudest surprises of the late '60s. Based upon Leslie West's soaring, searing lead licks and agonizing vocals, Mountain became the darling of the raunch-rock crowd and re tained its supergroup status until fading from view in 1974."

"Mountain was together twice with Felix and once after he passed away," West says. "Felix told me from the beginning he wanted me to become a star. I go and put evergreens on his grave

The first time Mountain stopped was after four albums for Windfall, distributed by Bell. Pappalardi was tired of performing. Bruce came in, for the trio West, Bruce and Laing. They made albums for Windfall, distributed by Columbia, from 1972 through 1974.

Mountain re-formed and made three albums for Windfall-Columbia.

"Mountain's biggest hit was Mississippi Queen,' "West says. "I doubt if I'll ever have another one as big. A New York radio station had a contest for the top 100 songs of all time. It came in 75."

West made solo albums for RCA in 1975 and 1976. "It was a lot of work," West says. "I don't know how I made all those albums in that short amount of

Then, he says, "I went to the city and to rehabilitate myself from drugs. He stopped making records for a time. "I didn't have anything musically to say," he explains. "I wanted to get my health and head back in order. I had a guitar school. It enabled me to play without the wear and tear of touring. It made me realize I missed touring and recording.

His last album before Theme was with Laing in Mountain, Go for Your Life, in 1985 for Scotti

Referring to the new album, West said, "I couldn't sing 'Theme from an Imaginary Western' because Felix sang it before. Jack wrote it. People thought Mountain did. Jack's singing it came out different, and good. When we played it back in the studio, both Jack and I started

HER MOTHER'S DAUGH-TER. By Marilyn French. Summit Books. 686 Pages. $21.95

Her Mother's Daughter by Marilyn French, author of the best-selling The Women's Room, follows mother-daughter relationships through four generations. Motherhood is not without costs, and the novel shows how mothers pass that cost on to the next generation.

The story begins early in this century with Frances Brez, a poor Polish immigrant living in Brooklyn. She is the first in a chain of mothers to make sacrifices for a better future for their children.

After her husband's death, Frances is forced to give up custody of three of her four children. She chooses her daughter, Bella, to stay with her. However, her despair over the loss of her other children is so great that Bella can never understand why her mother picked her to keep.

Bella wants to be a better mother to her own children. But she repeats many of Frances patterns, and her relationship with her own daughter, Anastasia, proves distant Anastasia, in turn, marries and becomes a mother. But the marriage is a disaster. Her husband is so unhappy that he dares to suggest that their children are not his own. "My children! So you say! Who the hell ordered them from the stork, I'd like to know. It certainly wasn't me. You've ruined my life, you've forced me into marriage.

When the marriage ends, Anastasia changes her name and becomes a professional photographer. Her assignments sometimes require long absences from home. Consequently, her relationship with her children suf-

And so it goes. Anastasia's daughter does little better as she grows, marries and becomes a

One can't help asking: What do mothers have to show for all their efforts? Who benefits from the sacrifices that mothers make? The novel offers no answers, just the blunt reality that somehow mothers — and daughters manage to survive. Carol Deegan

Nation's winter wheat harvest forecast up

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 1988 winter wheat harvest could be around 1.62 billion bushels if the Agriculture Department's initial forecast is borne out, up 4 percent from last year's produc-

Based on surveys May 1, the average yield of this year's harvest is expected to be 40.7 bushels per acre, compared with 39.8 bushels per acre in 1987 when winter wheat output was 1.56 billion

Farmers are expected to have about 39.8 million acres for harvest this year, up 1 percent from 39.3 million in 1987.

"As of May 1, over 60 percent of the winter wheat in the major producing states rated in good or better condition," said the department's report Tuesday. "Another 28 percent is rated in fair condition.

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following summer. It makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production. The outlook for wheat prices at the farm also has brightened, reflecting brisk export demand and a reduction in once-awesome U.S. wheat stockpiles.

In a related supply-and-demand report, the USDA projected total wheat production this year, based on historical trends, at 2.17 billion bushels, up slighly from 2.1 billion bushels in 1987. That would include winter wheat and other kinds planted this spring for harvest later in the year.

The report also projected the U.S. wheat stockpile is expected to decline further to around 796 million bushels by the end of the coming marketing year on May 31, 1989, compared with more than 1.23 billion bushels of old-crop wheat expected to be carried over this

Carl Schwensen, executive vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said the expected reduction in U.S. wheat inventories will mean tighter supplies in the year ahead.

Does that mean the United States is running low on wheat after the recent years of huge supluses?

"That's relatively correct," Schwensen said. "And if we're going to stay in the world market, we're going to have to have adequate supplies for our customers. That's why we feel the acreage reserve level can be relaxed and farmers can have the opportunity to market more bushels in the 1989 season.'

Schwensen referred to a farm law provision that limits USDA to no more than a 20 percent land-idling requirement when the wheat stockpile is projected to drop below a billion bushels. At a projected 796 million bushels on May 31, 1989, that would be well below the mark.

For the last two years the USDA has required wheat farmers to idle 27.5 percent of their base acreage in order to qualify for supports and other federal benefits. Schwensen said the association wants to see the 1989 requirement reduced to between 10 percent and 20

Wheat market prices were projected for 1988-89 at an average range of $2.80 to $3.20 per bushel, compared with $2.55

ates a system of export subsidies which enables high-priced wheat from the 12-nation trading bloc to be sold on world markets at competitive prices, he said. Since 1978, the EEC has joined the traditional big four - Argentina, Australia, Canada and the United States — as a wheat exporter.

It was the use of export subsidies, to reduce high internal prices, that enabled the EEC to change from a net importer of wheat to a net exporter. The United States had used some kinds of export subsidies in the past, but it was the advent of the Export Enhancement Program, or EEP, in 1985 that caught the attention of world traders.

Under the program, U.S. exporters are given bonuses, or sub-84 sidies, of government-owned commodities

WHEAT FIELD DAYS - MAY

On Tuesday, May 24, we will have a Gray County Wheat Field Day on the Earl Smith farm, about two miles east of Pampa on the south side of Highway 60-152.

We will start at 7:30 a.m. with a coffee and doughnuts. We will look at irrigated and dryland wheat variety demonstrations that have 11 varieties each planted in them. Also, we will see strips across the variety plots that were sprayed with Tilt® fun-

This will be a good opportunity for farmers to see varieties and some diseases. We will have a good discussion on our current wheat problems. Farmers are encouraged to work this date and plan on starting the day out with this program.

BUSHLAND FIELD DAY

Activities for the regularly scheduled Wheat Field Day at the USDA Conservation and Production Research Laboratory at Bushland will start at 1 p.m. on May 26, according to Dr. B.A. Stewart, director of the laboratory.

Both dryland and irrigated small grain nurseries will be featured. Dr. Kenneth Porter, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station wheat breeder, says several new varieties and hybrids are being evaluated. Yields from Small Grain Trials for several years, including 1987, will be available.

In addition to small grain breeding, research with livestock grazing, limited tillage, wheat streat mosaic, fertility, as well as control of Russian aphid and greenbug will be discussed.

Drs. Stewart and Porter invite everyone interested in agricultural research to the Field Day. "Our research is most valuable to the area when people see and adopt new varieties or practices," Stewart said.

The field day is sponsored by Texas Agricultural Experiment

Price declines greatly reduce recoverable oil, gas reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation may leave the 1980s with roughly half as much economically recoverable oil and natural gas as it thought was available shortly after the decade began, due to dry holes and lower energy prices.

If preliminary estimates released last week by the Interior Department's Minerals Management Service and Geological Survey hold up, they will mean a decline of nearly 37 percent from estimates of economically recoverable, undiscovered oil and natural gas currently in use and a 46 percent decline from 1981 figures.

Estimated oil remaining to be found onshore and offshore dropped to 42.3 billion barrels from the previously estimated 66.8 billion barrels, and onshore and offshore natural gas fell to 328 trillion cubic feet from 518 trillion cubic feet.

The Interior Department insists it is premature to make the comparisons, but the industry is expected to make them nevertheless.

The principal onshore estimates were released at scientific meetings in March by the Geological Survey; the offshore estimates by the Minerals Management Service were released last week along with backup materials on both sets of numbers for comment by industry and scientific

Some gas industry groups criticized the department in March for releasing estimates they considered too low. Much of the difference was simple bookkeeping — the department used a higher cutoff for the minimum size field it would study and excluded large quantities of hard-to-produce gas in "tight sands" reservoirs that industry studies normally include

Current onshore estimates were made in 1981 and offshore estimates in 1985 using 1984 data.

A large part of the differences from the 1981 and 1984 figures results from the current, lower price of crude oil. The study uses $18 a barrel, about the current price. Prices were nearly twice as high in 1981 and around $29 in 1984. The lower prices make exploration crews skip the high-cost gas or oil reservoirs, and more are skipped as prices fall further.

The department is seeking review of the figures by independent experts because of changes in its methods of estimating onshore oil and gas.

The Energy Department used such expert judgments in making estimates of economically recoverable natural gas reserves, discovered as well as undiscovered, that it hoped would persuade more people to use gas.

Since that winter, which saw some factories close because of gas shortages, most gas has been freed from price controls that many analysts blame for the shortages.

The department's study, using figures from Interior, industry and its own consultants, estimated that if price were no object, current techniques could get 1,029 trillion cubic feet out of the ground outside Alaska. Alaska was excluded because it is too expensive to get most of its gas to market.

At $3 per thousand cubic feet at the wellhead, 583 trillion cubic feet would be produced, but a $5 price would draw only another 174 trillion cubic feet, the study said.

The current average price is $1.83 per thousand cubic feet. The department's Energy Information Administration has predicted a price of $2.85 in 1995 and $4.02 in 2000

George H. Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association, said the Energy Department study "should allay any concerns about supply availability and price to future users."

But Ed Rothschild, assistant director of the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, a consumer advocacy group, criticized the study as "deceptive" because "It doesn't look at gas at $2, which is a much more realistic price, and when you do, there isn't as much gas there.

Gainesville celebrates restoration of town's historic railroad depot

By DAINAH BULLARD Gainesville Daily Register

GAINESVILLE (AP) - Two years ago, it was just a shabby, lifeless old building endangered by natural deterioration — structure whose only function was housing city holiday decorations.

But last June, the historic Santa Fe Depot blossomed as the star attraction of the first annual Depot Days celebration, a weeklong block party featuring food, fun, arts and crafts, and raising money to restore the building.

Now the Gainesville Community Preservation Foundation is geared up for this year's second annual Depot Days, beginning a half century in the sun before it began its decline.

For a number of decades, the mellow walls were home to the Harvey House Restaurant, one of a chain famous for bringing fine dining and palatable cuisine to the western railways. The Harvey House Restaurant was characterized by its huge, horseshoeshaped table and starched young women of unblemished reputation who - under the eagle eye of a zealous chaperone - lived in the six bedrooms on the second floor of the depot.

The days of the Harvey House came and went, taking with them much of the glamour of the old depot. But the sprawling structure became a hub of activity again during World War II, when the establishment of Camp Howze north of Gainesville brought literally tens of thousands of servicemen and their families to the frantic little community

The one-of-a-kind depot, with its mixture of architectural styles, fell out of favor in the 1970s with the passing of the passenger trains. Early in this decade, at the urgings of former mayors Glenn Loch and Margaret Hays, Santa Fe gave the building to the

"The idea of Depot Days is twofold," says Bob Archer, a member of the preservation foundation. "Number one - it's a celebration of the restoration of the depot. And secondly, it's a fund-raising event.

"The restoration isn't completed by any means. This is just the first phase of several," he said.

Though the depot itself is the heart of the week-long celebration of community pride, a number of activities will take place in the surrounding neighborhood.

Highlights of the week include a tour of a half-dozen Victorian homes in south Gainesville and a museum-conducted tour of the historic downtown business dis-

The Santa Fe Railroad exhibition car, filled with railroad memorabilia, will make an appearance, and historic exhibits at the depot will include an antique fire truck display and a refurbished original depot baggage

Also on Sunday, for Depot Days, the Frankie Schmitz Museum, a private collection of were a problem until 1986, when circus artifacts and Coca-Cola memorabilia, will be open to the public.

> "This will appeal to a lot of people," Archer said. "He's got one of the largest collections in the United States. That's a real asset to this community that a lot of people don't know about, and those who do know about it are excited because they're going to get to see it."

BRIDGE CITY (AP) - One thing Canada and Mexico have in common is that they border the United States. The other is that they're immortalized on caps hanging from the ceiling inside Fred Bailey's fish camp,

That goes for Alaska, Hawaii, Germany and the Cayman Islands, too. And of course, Fred's ceiling sports a gimme cap from virtually every oil field equipment or offshore drilling company in the area

'I've got 66 left to go,'' Fred tells customers as they walk in the door, the cowbell on the worn screen door clanging behind them. For people who are unfamiliar with fish camp tradition, he means hats left to go until he has his 1,000th-hat celebration.

Over the years, friends have learned that just about all it takes to make Fred happy is to bring him a hat. (He doesn't complain about shrimp, fish, steak, money or birthday cake, either.) Many of his customers don't get by his end of Ferry Road too often, so when they do they've got a whole car trunk full of hats they've saved up for an ultimate place on

Fred's ceiling. Now the fish camp has been in the family since 1926, when Fred's parents opened a dance hall at the ferry landing on the Orange County side of the Neches River. Its walls still bear the rules from years past: "No Cussing. Be Sensible. Respect

Ladies. But some things change with time: Fred closed the dance hall in when a man killed his cousin in a fight over a woman, and Fred even has a lone video game in the two-story building that went up before the advent of television and now serves as a watering hole for thirsty crabbers or the regulars who drop by to talk sports or politics.

But the video game gets far less attention than Fred's hats, which cause regular customers and newcomers alike to slow their step and throw their heads back to look at the sea of colors on the ceiling when they first walk in.

"And it gives you something to do when you're knocking back a beer," longtime customer Norman Davidson offers in favor of the hat collection. Fred can't remember when he started the hat collection, although he will say he started it this decade.

A man was in from Alabama and verbally defended Crimson Tide coach Bear Bryant's honor against some of Fred's customers who didn't think too highly of him. Fred sided with the Alabama man, which won him a Crimson Tide hat the next time the man stopped by.

That hat, now covered with dusty spider webs, is in the exact same spot where Fred nailed it years ago, but it's got plenty of company these days.

There are the hats from va rious locations and companies, the authentic Mexican sombrero. and there's Fred's favorite, what he calls his "Reagan cap." It has two bills going in different directions and says, "I'm the leader which way did they go?"

Fred always said he was going to retire from his hat-collecting hobby when he reached 1,000, but now he's not so sure, even though he's running out of bare space on his ceiling and walls.

"If somebody brings one by, I imagine I'll find a place for it.' Bailey says, proudly surveying his ceiling, which resembles a patchwork quilt from the different caps. "Why, you can always make room for another cap. And there's no tellin' when you might

NIH stops funding research on total heart replacement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal scientists are abandoning efforts to develop a completely artificial human heart after spending more than a quarterbillion dollars, because every use of such devices has resulted in the eventual death of the patient.

From now on, government research support will concentrate instead on developing a smaller pump that can assist, rather than replace, a failing heart.

'There are still a lot of problems" that cannot soon be solved with a total heart replacement device, Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, said.

Every attempt at total heart replacement has resulted in a patient dying of either infection or stroke caused by blood clots that develop within the mechanical heart, said Lenfant.

The National Institutes of Health have given a total of $2.7 million in research grants on the total-heart replacement this year, but Lenfant said that will be the last. Since 1964, the agency has spent $239.31 million on various elements of artificial heart development technology.

Now, Lenfant said, the agency will support only four grants for the development of a self-contained, long-term "single ventricular" device. This would be inserted into the left ventricle of the heart, the chamber that endures most of the work stress in the four-chambered human

The single ventricle device already has been used in more than 170 cases as a "bridge to transplant," but it has not been implanted for long-term use, he

John W. Wood Jr., president of Thermedics Inc. of Woburn, Mass., said his company now has such a long-term device being tested in experiments with animals.

He said the device, which is an electrically driven, diaphragmlike pump called the Heartmate, is inserted into the left ventricle of the heart and powered by a bat-

Powering the heart device has been solved with an electrical conduction system.

The Heartmate is equipped with an electrical coil, Wood said. A similar coil is placed on the outside of the body and electricity is conducted through the skin to recharge the battery. In this way, the patient will have no wires or tubes leading to the artificial pump, lowering the risk of infec-

Wood said the device has been tested successfully on calves and an application is pending for clinical trials.
