Heroes emerge in fiery crash that killed 27

CARROLLTON, Ky. (AP) — Two 16-year-olds helped pull their friends from a bus that burst into a fireball after it collided head-on with a pickup truck on an interstate highway, killing 27 in one of the nation's deadliest bus crashes.

"They were just laying down in the back door, stacked up on top of each other, and no one could get out 'cause they all fell down on top of each other," said Larry Flowers, who escaped from the bus and helped evacuate it with Jamie Hardesty. "I grabbed their arms and pulled."

A pickup truck going the wrong way on southbound Interstate 71 late Saturday plowed into the right front side of the bus, which was filled mostly with teen-agers from the Assembly of God Church in Radcliff returning home from an amusement park outing near Cincinnati, police said.

Nine of the 40 hurt sustained critical injuries and four serious ones, including the driver of the pickup truck, who was alone. Those killed were charred beyond recognition.

Survivors said that as flames erupted in the bus' front, screaming passengers rushed toward the rear emergency door.

"Everyone started screaming and hollering," said Hardesty, a high school sophomore. "Everyone was trying to get off as fast as they could."

A passing truck driver, Patrick Presley of Dallas, and an unidentified trucker, rushed to the bus and yanked the rear door open.

Hardesty was among the first to escape. "I thought maybe if I broke out the windows I could help some of them get out or at least let some of the smoke out," he said. "I busted windows hoping they could get out, but I don't guess they could."

"When I jumped off the bus, I saw him (Hardesty) carrying somebody and laid them down, and ran back up and was trying to get some more people," said 17-year-old Juan Holt.

"He ripped off my shirt, and he used it for bandages. ... He put ice on people. He was like a doctor."

Jason Booher, 13, credited Hardesty with "saving a lot." Hardesty pushed burning victims from the bus and Booher said he then rolled them in grass.

Holt said Hardesty and Allen Tension, 15-year-old son of the church's pastor, directed paramedics to those seriously injured.

The bus had been refueled with gasoline just before the accident, said Carroll County Coroner James Dunn. The fuel tank on the 1977 Ford school bus was on the right side, and ruptured upon impact, police said.

State Medical Examiner Dr. George Nichols met with about 60 family members in Carrollton and told them he did not want them to view the remains.

"The picture ... of their children in that room is not what they have in their memories or wallets," he said.

Nichols said 19 females and eight males were killed. Preliminary examinations of 22 bodies indicated smoke inhalation as the cause of death, he said. He expected to finish the examinations today.

The victims apparently died trying to flee, and the body of the driver was found near the steering wheel with a fire extinguisher between his legs, Nichols said.

A woman's body was found facing the front door, while the other bodies were headed toward the back of the bus.

What is believed to be the worst bus accident in U.S. history occurred Sept. 17, 1963, when a bus collided with a train near Salinas, Calif., killing 32 farm workers.

Robertson ready to drop out of race; Jackson, Dukakis brace for Oregon

By The Associated Press

Former television evangelist Pat Robertson, whose faithful following struck fear for a time into Republican Party regulars, today was abandoning what he described as a divinely inspired presidential bid. George Bush, the GOP nominee-to-be, was campaigning in Washington state, the scene of Robertson's only Super Tuesday triumph.

The two Democratic presidential contenders, Jesse Jackson and Michael Dukakis, were gearing up for another primary battle. Oregon votes Tuesday, with 45 delegates at stake.

An upbeat Dukakis, addressing Democrats in New Jersey on Sunday, declared: "I smell victory in the air." But Jackson, turning a tale of pride and perseverance into a campaign parable, urged college students in Virginia, "Keep hope alive."

Following what has become a pattern in recent contests, Jackson was engaging in primary-evening campaigning today, while Dukakis was home in Massachusetts devoting the day to gubernatorial business.

Up until today, Robertson was the sole Republican remaining in the race against Bush. Pete du Pont, Alexander Haig, Jack Kemp and Bob Dole all fell by the wayside as Bush rolled up an insurmountable lead.

The vice president clinched the delegates needed to nominate last month, in the Pennsylvania primary, and got President Reagan's formal endorsement last week.

Robertson, who has 46 delegates to Bush's 1,344, finally faced facts last week. He told reporters then he was backing Bush and would make his own exit official today. He was expected to turn his delegates over to Bush at the Republican National Convention this summer.

Robertson had not been considered a serious contender since Super Tuesday, March 8, when his bid to make a strong Southern showing fizzled abysmally.

The former television evangelist had come out swinging in the first real campaign contest. In Iowa's much-watched caucus on Feb. 8, he stunned the Bush forces with a second-place finish — behind Dole, but ahead of the vice president.

Robertson soldiered on even after it became obvious that the nomination was out of his reach. He encouraged his backers to seek state party office and promised to use his clout to shape the Republican platform.

"There is an enterprise the Lord set me on a year or so ago — running for president," he told a Denver congregation last month.

Schools get snow day waiver

The Texas Education Agency has granted Pampa schools a one-day weather makeup waiver, meaning students won't have to make up a snow day missed March 3, Superintendent Harry Griffith plans to inform trustees Tuesday.

The school board is scheduled to meet at 7 p.m. in Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert St. The meeting is an hour later than usual because school trustees are meeting with city and chamber of commerce officials at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Pampa Community Building to discuss a long-range economic development strategy for the community.

School trustees had asked TEA for a waiver of the number of required school days because of the large amount of snowfall received in Pampa last winter. A waiver also was received last year.

In a letter to Dr. Griffith, Deputy Education Commissioner Thomas Anderson notes that Pampa made up two of three days missed this year, including one on a Saturday in January.

In other business Tuesday, trustees plan to:

- discuss classroom space for 1988-89;
- meet with a representative of the Latch Key program;
- discuss new Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills (TEAMS) test results;
- review planned summer maintenance projects;
- discuss student assistance with drug and alcohol abuse as it relates to school board policy;
- sign agreements with the Region XVI Educational Service Center in Amarillo; and
- discuss joining the Coalition for School Finance Reform at a cost of $800.

Local officials will discuss strategic planning Tuesday

Pampa city commissioners will be meeting with Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce, Pampa Independent School District and Gray County-Pampa Industrial Foundation representatives from 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday to discuss implementation of a strategic planning program in the community.

The meeting will be held in the chamber offices at the Pampa Community Building.

Strategic planning is designed to obtain more citizen involvement in establishing goals and setting priorities for the community in economic and social development.

Ben Turner of Consort Inc. of Austin, a consultant firm, will meet with the groups to discuss strategic planning concepts for the greater Pampa area.

During the meeting, the representatives of the various entities will consider authorizing participation in the strategic planning program, engaging an outside facilitator (Consort Inc.) to help develop the program and train committee chairmen, and taking any action toward establishing a steering committee, task forces and other related efforts.

Under strategic planning concepts, the participating entities will establish committees to study various areas of the community, such as economic development, utilities, streets, water supplies, finances, land use, parks, waste disposal, transportation, community facilities and various other areas of community life.

Coker arraigned in child beating

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Showing little emotion, the man accused of beating to death then burying his infant son in a San Antonio park last year was arraigned this morning in the brutal February beating of his 2-month-old daughter in Pampa.

Eric Lee Coker, 21, stared at his feet as Assistant District Attorney Harold Comer read the indictment charging him with injury to a child. Coker's trial was tentatively scheduled for June 27 by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany.

McIlhany entered a plea of innocent for Coker.

Coker, of 838 S. Cuyler St., also has been charged with murder in Bexar County after leading police last month to the remains of his 5-month-old son, Eric Jr., in a San Antonio park. The case is scheduled to come before a Bexar County grand jury May 23.

He remains in the Gray County Jail in lieu of $40,000 bond after he was arrested in Clarendon on a Pampa injury to a child charge stemming from the February beating of his 2-month-old daughter, Terry Ann Wilson.

During that arrest, Coker confessed to Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan that he had buried Eric Jr. in San Antonio's Kallison Park a year earlier. He later led San Antonio homicide detectives to the body and confessed to brutally beating the boy hours before his death, then rode around San Antonio in a public bus and attended a movie with the baby's corpse wrapped in a blanket.

After the San Antonio incident, Coker and his common-law wife, Teresa Campos, moved to Pampa and adopted the names Mike and Tina Wilson.

Campos also has been charged with murder in San Antonio and injury to a child in Pampa, both times because authorities allege she failed to seek medical help

Agreement is reached to end 3-day prison standoff

STRINGTOWN, Okla. (AP) — Inmates agreed today to release their last two hostage guards and peacefully end a three-day prison uprising that did $2.5 million in damage, after officials promised that the surrender would be televised.

Officials also agreed to a demand from the approximately 20 inmates that three state legislators the convicts met with Sunday would witness today's surrender, said Department of Corrections spokesman Jerry Massie.

The agreement was reached after a guard held with the others since the uprising began was released late Sunday, officials said.

One inmate and one guard sustained minor injuries during the takeover of the overcrowded, medium-security Mack Alford Correctional Center.

After the surrender, the inmates were taken to another state penitentiary, Massie said.

Under the agreement, they were to let the hostages go after a bus arrives to take them away, then come out of the dormitory where they have been held up since late Friday, said prison spokeswoman Anita Trammell. Both hostages and inmates would be given medical examinations, she said.

The bus to take the inmates to another prison arrived outside the center at 8:20 a.m. but did not immediately enter the prison grounds.

In exchange for food and the earlier meeting with the three state lawmakers, the inmates late Sunday released prison Capt. Lewis McGee.

"He's tired; he's in good health. He's glad it's over with," Ms. Trammell said. "The other hostages also were thought to be unharmed."

Authorities gave the convicts soft drinks, ice cream and cigarettes at their request, said corrections spokeswoman Joy Hadwiger. Temperatures in the area Sunday were in the low 90s.

The inmates also demanded restoration of electricity and meetings with reporters and an American Civil Liberties Union attorney who has helped prisoners, Ms. Trammell said. Officials did not say if those demands would be met.

One of the three lawmakers, Rep. Walt Roberts, said late Sunday the convicts feared an overnight raid, but he did not believe that would happen.

"The DOC is not going to do this but they don't know that," Roberts said. "All they see is razor wire, rifles, and the towers."

In addition to corrections officers, an 18-member Highway Patrol tactical unit and as many as 40 other patrol officers have kept watch on the prison.

On Sunday afternoon, two inmates took one hostage outside for less than 10 minutes and talked to officers through a fence.

The guard appeared to be all right, as did the other hostages seen earlier in the day, Ms. Trammell said.

The guard, Sgt. Harold Yoder, was used a shield by inmates who worked to close a hole in the fence cut by prison officials to help other inmates surrender, she said.

She said the hostage takers told the 30 to 35 other inmates locked in the occupied south dorm that their lives would be in danger if they tried to leave. Ms. Trammell said, however, that those inmates said they didn't feel like hostages.

The insurgents hung sheets with messages written on them from the roof of the two-story south dormitory.

The first sheet said "White Power." A second said, "DOC Will Not Respond to Demands. They Have Lied to You the Public and Press." A third requested help from news reporters.

"I feel like the inmates did that for attention," Ms. Trammell said of the first sheet. "Also, I feel like we have some racists up there."

Of the three guards held Sunday, one was white, one black and one an American Indian.

There have been unconfirmed reports that a racial incident set off the violence at the 33-year-old prison.

According to authorities, the uprising began when officers tried to move five inmates to a maximum-security prison. The five reportedly had threatened other inmates who allegedly stole from them.

Report: New evidence links 1985 Contra arms to Bush's office

NEW YORK (AP) — A spokesman for George Bush dismissed a report in Newsweek that the vice president's national security adviser was the Washington contact for a Contra arms-supply operation bankrolled with drug money.

The magazine reported Sunday that arms dealer Richard J. Brenneke had said in a sworn deposition to a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee that Donald Gregg was the Washington contact for the enterprise, called Arms Supermarket.

Bush presidential campaign spokesman Pete Teeley said Sunday he believed the allegation had been raised before, and that Gregg had said he had not spoken with Brenneke. "Gregg has denied that," Teeley said.

Bush's office told the magazine that Brenneke's story was "just rumors and the same old regurgitated stories we thought we'd put to rest long ago." Newsweek quoted unidentified Senate staffers as saying they had confirmed part of Brenneke's story from an agent with Israel's Mossad secret service and from former Panamanian consul Jose Blandon but are still assessing Brenneke's credibility.

Arms Supermarket supplied the Nicaraguan rebels during the congressional aid cutbacks of 1984-86, before the Iran-Contra operation set up by National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver North, the magazine said.

It involved CIA arms merchants, Mossad agents, the intelligence arm of the Honduran military and members of a Colombian drug cartel, according to Newsweek.

Brenneke, an Oregon businessman with connections in the Soviet bloc, has done work for both Mossad and the CIA, the magazine said.

Robertson

"Out of what seems to be a defeat we are laying a foundation for a great victory for this nation. It may not be in 1988... but I am not going to quit... That is His plan for me and for this nation," he said.

Bush spent most of Sunday rafting on Oregon's Rogue River. He did a little fishing too, but said he didn't catch anything.

The vice president was starting off the day today in Washington state, where Robertson won a straw poll on Super Tuesday. Bush attended a Seattle fund-raiser on Sunday night.

Jackson and Dukakis crossed paths on the campaign trail Sunday, when both made appearances at New Jersey's state Democratic convention. The two held a brief meeting, which Dukakis described as "warm, pleasant, respectful."

Dukakis predicted a Democratic win in the fall, and although he didn't directly say so, his talk of beating Bush made it clear he does not view Jackson as much of an obstacle to the nomination. By the latest Associated Press delegate count, Dukakis has 1,610 to Jackson's 956.

"I smell victory in the air," Dukakis said. "No question about it."

Jackson, however, wasn't giving up. He spoke at a college commencement Sunday that had special meaning for him — his 61-year-old mother-in-law, Gertrude Brown, was among those receiving diplomas from Hampton University in Virginia.

"She is of strong character, and she never surrendered," Jackson said, describing how Mrs. Brown, a one-time high-school dropout and unwed teen-age mother, spent a dozen years pursuing the degree while working full time, after raising five children.

"Never surrender," he told the students.

Later, at a rally in Newark, N.J., Jackson appealed for support in New Jersey's June 7 primary.

"No valley is too deep when our minds are made up," he said. "We've come too far to turn around now."

underwent a psychiatric examination Friday. The examination had been requested by the attorney, Coker said, answering McIlhany's questions in a barely audible voice.

After the arraignment, prosecutor Comer said it's too early to say whether the Pampa and San Antonio cases will be combined but added that it remains a possibility if Coker and Campos are indicted in Bexar County.

"If they're both indicted down there, I would definitely want to talk to them about it," Comer said. "Murder is the more serious offense."

Bowers was not present in the courtroom, but Coker told the judge that he had already met with Bowers in his jail cell and is scheduled to last all day July 2 and 3. The Saturday activities of July 2 will include outdoor booths, games and food, with outdoor entertainment being provided all day.

Strategic

A steering committee composed of representatives from each of the participating entities will gather all the information and reports from the other committees and task forces to plan, in a comprehensive and systematic manner, goals and priorities for the community.

The program will allow the community entities to learn their strong points, their weak points, their needs and their resources to use in future planning efforts.

The program will result in more citizen involvement in community decision-making efforts through their membership on the committees or through the input they provide to the various committees.

The work on the program is expected to last four to six months, at which time a final document will be prepared to direct the implementation of the goals and priorities.

Meese fires Justice Department spokesman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III has fired the Justice Department's chief spokesman, Terry Eastland, saying he has done an inadequate job of defending the attorney general in a year-old criminal investigation, Eastland said today.

"Today's my last today; I don't have a job," Eastland told a reporter.

In a letter to Meese, Eastland noted that he had been relieved of his duties Friday. He wrote to Meese, "You have expressed to me your desire to have as director of public affairs someone willing to aggressively defend you against, in effect, any and all criticism."

Eastland said that he had defended Meese "to the best of my ability," while "exercising good judgment and acting in a manner consistent with the obligations of this office."

"You have concluded that my efforts have not sufficed," Eastland's letter said. Eastland's letter said that Meese had offered him 30 days in which to conclude his work and look for a job, but "I have decided that the most appropriate course of action is to end my responsibilities today."

Eastland, a political conservative who has written most of Meese's speeches, has been increasingly concerned in recent months by the effect on Justice Department operations of the ongoing probe of Meese by independent counsel James McKay, said department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The sources said Eastland had planned to wait until after the independent counsel issued a report detailing Meese's activities before deciding whether he would leave the department.

McKay is expected to raise a number of ethical questions about Meese's activities that will be referred to the Office of Professional Responsibility, a Justice Department unit that examines possible wrongdoing by department officials.

On March 29, Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns and criminal division chief William Weld resigned in protest over Meese's continued tenure at the Justice Department. Burns and Weld, like Eastland, were concerned that Meese's legal problems were damaging department operations, morale and its public image.

Eastland said in his letter that the public affairs office "has an obligation to serve not only the attorney general but also the Department of Justice and the American people."

"While we may disagree about the appropriate role of the director of this office, especially in present circumstances, I of course recognize your prerogative to have whomever you wish serving as director," said Eastland.

McKay launched a criminal investigation of Meese on May 11, 1987. He has been investigating Meese's ties to the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. and to a $1 billion Iraqi oil pipeline. The independent counsel also has been investigating $14,000 in regional Bell telephone stock owned by the attorney general at a time when Meese was meeting at the Justice Department with Bell executives. Finally, McKay has been examining the $40,000-a-year job of Meese's wife, Ursula, paid for out of a charitable contribution from a Washington real estate family leasing space to the Justice Department.

Meese's longtime friend E. Robert Wallach, now under indictment for alleged racketeering in the Wedtech scandal, was involved in each of the matters under investigation by McKay's office.

'Racehorse' Haynes returns to Amarillo for trial

AMARILLO (AP) — Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, celebrated defense attorney for former Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis, is back in Amarillo reading himself for a murder-for-hire trial.

Haynes pulled off a stunning acquittal for Davis in Amarillo 11 years ago when the Fort Worth businessman stood accused of killing his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

Now the flamboyant attorney has returned to the Panhandle to defend Jane Ada Callaway, who is accused of masterminding the murder of her boss' wife.

Opening arguments were scheduled to begin today in a large-capacity Potter County courtroom repainted for the trial with money donated by Amarillo defense lawyers. Jury selection in the capital murder case has consumed more than a month.

The trial was moved to Amarillo on a change of venue from Houston — the same circumstances that brought Haynes to Amarillo from Fort Worth to defend Davis in 1977.

State District Judge Michael McSpadden of Houston has issued a gag order prohibiting attorneys and witnesses from discussing the trial.

Ms. Callaway, a Houston secretary, is charged with hiring a gunman to kill Judy Saragusa on Sept. 2, 1987.

Mrs. Saragusa's husband, Michael, was Ms. Callaway's boss and the co-owner of a wholesale liquor distributor company.

During pretrial hearings, Saragusa admitted he had an affair with Ms. Callaway, but said it had ended two months before his 39-year-old wife's slaying in the bedroom of the couple's mansion.

An attractive, twice-divorced 36-year-old, Ms. Callaway is free on $50,000 bail and had to be ordered by a judge to stop telephoning her former boss.

After police identified a car seen leaving the murder scene as belonging to Ms. Callaway, she signed a police statement saying she had lent her car to Michael Richardson, accused of being the middleman in the murder plot, on the night of the shooting.

Richardson's stepbrother, Leon Hawkins Jr., surrendered to police two days after the shooting and told reporters, "They made me do it" after being charged with capital murder.

Richardson has agreed to testify for the state in exchange for a 10-year prison sentence, said his attorney, John Ackerman, last week.

"It's not an open and shut case, but it's a very good case," prosecutor Chuck Rosenthal told the Houston Post in September about the evidence against Ms. Callaway.

Saragusa, expected to be another of the state's key witnesses, is likely to be subjected to Haynes' famous cross-examination.

Haynes' ruthless questioning of Priscilla Davis, Davis' estranged wife, essentially put her on trial for her lifestyle and dependence on the narcotic painkiller Percodan.

Davis was acquitted, despite the testimony of three eyewitnesses identifying him as the black-wigged gunman who went on a shooting spree at the Davis' $6 million mansion. The shooting spree also left Ms. Davis' boyfriend, Stan Farr, dead and Ms. Davis and another mansion visitor injured.

Compromise plan OK'd by officers

DALLAS (AP) — Police voted to delay a decision on continuing their push for a public showdown on a controversial review board after most officers approved a compromise plan for restructuring the panel, a spokeswoman said.

Dallas Police Association President Monica Smith would not reveal the results of weekend balloting Sunday, but said most officers were in favor of the plan.

"My feeling is that they felt that this was a well-thought-out plan, and they were praising (City Manager) Richard Knight for his efforts," she said. Smith.

The plan was developed by Knight, along with an attorney for Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot and other city leaders. About 800 of the association's 2,200 members voted on the plan during a series of six meetings with Perot, who explained the plan to officers.

Ms. Smith said that only after the Dallas City Council considers the compromise May 25 would the association decide if it will turn in the 20,000 signatures it has collected to force an Aug. 13 referendum on the board.

"The membership has said wait and see what the City Council does with the plan," she said.

Mayor Annette Strauss and a majority of City Council members have already said they approve of Knight's plan.

The police association wants the 7-year-old review board abolished or stripped of its power to subpoena officers and conduct independent investigations.

Officials involved in drawing up the compromise plan declined to discuss specific proposals, but officials have said the proposal alters the board's subpoena power and forces Dallas lawyer Pete Lesser off the board.

Minority leaders have criticized the concessions.

"Any tampering with this already weak review board borders on the ludicrous," said City Councilman Al Lipscomb.

Pettis Norman, a Dallas businessman and black community leader present during negotiations of the compromise plan, said Perot was premature in presenting the plan to police association members before community leaders and the City Council had a chance to review it.

Taylor getting ducks in a row for derby

TAYLOR (AP) — To a lexicon already crowded with such phrases as lucky duck, sitting duck, lame duck and even dead duck, a group of Taylor residents wants to add another — speeding duck.

They're hoping for lots of speeding ducks May 21 at DuckFest, a day of community activities topped off with a three-hour duck derby.

"Duck racing obviously will be the highlight of the day," says Debra Gore of the Taylor Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring DuckFest.

DuckFest also will include a race for humans, a 5-kilometer run called the "Duck Waddle," a duck egg relay and other activities natural in a town where the high school sports teams are the Fighting Ducks.

But the duck racing has captured imaginations.

"There has been a lot of enthusiasm around," says Charles Schulz, Taylor Daily Press president and publisher and one of those Ms. Gore credits with helping get the duck derby off the ground. "We're going to have some fun," he said.

The racing ducks themselves won't get off the ground. Instead, they will zip down wire-enclosed, 16-foot-long runways into a fenced catching area. When released, ducks instinctively run from their handlers toward the open end of the chute.

While the birds run, handlers are encouraged to encourage them by crawling along a ramp above the runway and making any kind of noise they figure will motivate their racers.

But if the verbal encouragement rolls off their birds' backs, handlers are stuck. The rules say that once started, a duck can't be touched, and nothing can be done to harm the bird before, during or after the race.

"They run. They don't swim and they don't fly," Ms. Gore said. "I have been told that mallards are fast. The fastest age for a duck seems to be about 6 months old."

The Taylor competition is being patterned after the Great American Duck Race held each year in Deming, N.M., where hundreds of racing ducks and up to 20,000 spectators have gathered.

Taylor residents watch their ducks in training.

During Taylor's races, ducks will run in three-fowl heats to decide which birds advance to the next round.

"It's just like your basic track meet," Ms. Gore explained. "They will find the top ones from each heat. When it's over, we'll have the fastest duck."

And word is, racing ducks can really waddle. Good times for the 16-foot dash are under 1.5 seconds, organizers say.

Ms. Gore said Taylor residents are displaying some good humor as well as competitive spirit.

"We're having a good time getting people ready. We've urged different civic groups to compete, we're trying to get television sportscasters to come and race," she said. "We have ducks all over — live ducks, duck signs, ducks on bumper stickers. Somebody was even talking about making up one of those little yellow car-window signs: 'Duck in trunk.'"

Practice sessions have been held, and enterprising breeders are getting their ducks in a row for would-be racers who lack an entry.

"A group will be renting ducks for those who don't have one," Ms. Gore said.

Rules require that each racing duck be named. Ms. Gore said that has generated a long list of suggestions, including the intimidating moniker "Winner or Dinner."

The pending competition has even spawned some hard-billed tactics.

"One lady is keeping her duck under her house," Ms. Gore said. "She's afraid somebody will steal it."

Famous Texans plot course for cemetery

AUSTIN (AP) — Today's leading Texans are lining up to get into the state's most exclusive cemetery that has become the final resting place for such diverse residents as Steven F. Austin and impeached Gov. James E. Ferguson.

About 120 modern-day Texans have reservations for space in the 17.6-acre State Cemetery in Austin. Among them are House Speaker Gib Lewis, former State Supreme Court Judge Don Yarbrough, Comptroller Bob Bullock and former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes.

Detailed maps of the State Cemetery — kind of a subterranean "Who's Who" — show the location of an estimated 2,880 present occupants and plots selected by future occupants.

"I didn't care much about the pecking order," said Rep. Barry Connelly, R-

Houston. "I just didn't want anyone behind me — you know politicians."

Former state Rep. Milton Fox of Houston was precise in his instructions to the grounds keeper.

"I made one stipulation — that I didn't want to be downhill from Gib Lewis. I'd looked up at him at the speaker's podium long enough," said Fox, a Republican and well-known Lewis adversary.

Fox will be buried one furlong and six live oaks south of the Lewis plot.

To be admitted to one of the 4,000 spaces in the State Cemetery, one must either have been favored with a governor's proclamation or served as a state official, in the Legislature or in appointive office.

The state provides free burial plots for each designee and spouse. All other funeral and burial expenses must be paid privately.

A divorced official must specify which spouse gets the adjacent plot, said Clifford Beaver, superintendent of the Capitol grounds. "It's up to them to notify us if it will be the first, second or third spouse," he said.

Beaver said individual preferences vary when it comes to interment.

"Some want to be under a shade tree. Some want to be on the side of a hill or some want to be next to the road," Beaver said. "Others may choose a spot because of who they'll be next to, like someone they played cards with or served on the bench with."

It's anybody's guess who might spend their eternal rest next to Yarbrough, who's serving a six-year federal prison term for offering bribes to a banker in a phony drug-money laundering scheme.

Moyers, Baker, Sessions, Wright advise graduates

By The Associated Press

The messages were almost enough to inspire a retreat into graduate school.

This year's college graduates were warned they face a mounting budget deficit, Third World revolutions and a constant struggle to maintain a competitive education system and America's middle class standards.

Journalist Bill Moyers, Treasury Secretary James Baker, FBI Director William Sessions and House Speaker Jim Wright were among several speakers who encouraged thousands of Texas college and university students in weekend graduation ceremonies around the state.

"I do not envy this year's class," Moyers told 1,400 students at the newly renamed University of North Texas. "This generation (of college graduates) will be hard-pressed to do as well ... to achieve and maintain a middle-class standard."

Baker told 4,835 University of Houston graduates that the United States needs to curb its budget deficit, reform Social Security, and raise educational standards.

"I've long agreed with those who say that by tolerating a deficit we Americans have been voting to give ourselves goods and services that we don't have to pay for," he said. Baker advocates a balanced budget amendment with limits on taxation.

Sessions told 500 graduates at the University of Texas in El Paso they should maintain control in their lives.

"You do have control, always, over your attitude," he said. "Is it good, or is it bad? Is it optimistic, or is it pessimistic? Is the glass half full, or is the glass half empty? Is the race lost before the starting gun, or is there always a possibility that you will win?"

Wright, one of three speakers at commencement ceremonies at Texas A&M University over the weekend, told more than 3,100 graduates that they should have high standards for the future.

"Mediocrity is not our destiny," Wright said. "We don't have to be satisfied with that. Together we can see a better future, affirm a better future — and together we can make it happen."

In other speeches at the school, both Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Alfred Gray and U.S. Air Force Secretary Edward C. "Pete" Aldridge Jr. said war is likely for the graduating generation and the forces must be prepared with better education as well as weapons.

Gray, a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told 87 new military officers at A&M that "in this decade or certainly in the next," U.S. fighting forces would be engaged in "revolutionary warfare" in Third World countries. Meanwhile, Aldridge said without education, the battles will not be won.

Officials: Homeless cheated in program

FORT WORTH (AP) — Local and state authorities are concerned that a foundation offering drug and alcohol rehabilitation and jobs for homeless men may be abusing its workforce.

The Second Chance Foundation, a self-described non-profit drug and alcohol rehabilitation house with 96 beds, promises food, shelter, therapy and a full-paying job in 90 days, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Sunday.

But former residents and social service and government workers in Tarrant County say the 3½-year-old foundation is not delivering on its promises.

"Our concern is that people not employed are being brought in or bused in to our community and are being taken advantage of, and in effect are supplying free labor for someone else's profit," said Stephen Chaney of the Tarrant County District Attorney's Office.

"We get a whole lot of people who have gone through their program and they don't seem a whole lot better off," said the Rev. Andrew Short, director of Fort Worth's Presbyterian Night Shelter.

"That's why generally they're coming to us. They need a place to stay, they're out of work and broke," he said. "I have a lot of questions about the place."

Charles Palmieri, executive director of Second Chance, said that officials who criticize his program have never visited the foundation. But the Star-Telegram said he refused to be interviewed for their report.

According to former residents, the men at Second Chance are put to work through contracts for lawn work at apartment complexes, labor at construction sites, housekeeping at hotels and other unskilled jobs for private firms. They also work at the foundation's car wash.

The private firms pay Second Chance from the minimum wage of $3.35 per hour to $6 per hour for the men's labor. The foundation, meanwhile, pays nothing to boarders during their first month. For the next two months, they are supposed to get $5 per week along with the promise of food, shelter, a chance of clothes and substance abuse counseling.

"I saw what it was — a racket," said Leon Morrow, 35, who left after three days. "They get paid by the contractors for your work."

"It's a slave camp," added 31-year-old Willie Gibson, who says he was brought from Los Angeles in a Second Chance van.

Former residents said there are no professional counselors on staff and that therapy consists mostly of reading literature from other agencies. Many leave before ever seeing their first $5 payment and join the ranks of the homeless in Fort Worth.

"They are increasing the burden this community has for providing for the homeless," said Robert Scott, director of the Union Gospel Mission. "At least they could send them back home."

The foundation also is being investigated by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse for failure to obtain a license for its substance abuse program, the newspaper said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

UDAG spends but only hurts people

One of the more bizarre things your tax money is spent on is the Urban Development Action Grant program, administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Designed to help finance inner-city construction projects, UDAG has predictably become just another pork-barrel program. It takes not only the dollars of middle-class taxpayers, but of the poor taxpayers it was supposed to help. The only people it benefits are UDAG bureaucrats and developers who lack the character to refuse government mammon.

Take an example from St. Petersburg, Fla., where a $3.5 million UDAG grant has helped renovate a 333-room Hilton hotel. Developers say the Hilton has given jobs to 200 people. But those people would have found work elsewhere in Florida's booming economy. And what of the loss of jobs in, say, high-unemployment West Virginia and Michigan, whose people were taxed to pay the $3.5 million?

An even worse example comes from Des Moines, Iowa, which is seeking a $4 million grant for developing the 840,000-square-foot Northridge Mall. Des Moines city officials say the mall will bring 1,200 new jobs. But Iowa State economics professor Kenneth Stone says the mall will create only four new jobs. That's one million tax dollars for each new job.

Stone also found that the mall would force the closure of 57 businesses in Des Moines and 400 businesses in the counties surrounding the city. Des Moines would lose 315 retail jobs and nearby counties would lose 892 retail jobs.

The developer originally planned to build a modest mall of 250,000 square feet, with room for expansion to 600,000. That was in keeping with the area's modest population. Moreover, Des Moines is already saturated with malls, and population and retail sales growth remain stagnant. It's clear that only the promise of federal money has sparked the plans for unneeded expansion. Without the UDAG tax dollars, the mall would have been constructed on a reasonable scale befitting the area. The federal money has given developers delusions of opulence.

All this is known to the feds, but they have ignored it. Stanley E. Brown, mayor of Marshalltown, a northern suburb of Des Moines, has written HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce: "Tax monies should be used to benefit all. This request, if granted, will create a loss of businesses, jobs and revenue to the tier counties north of the proposed development."

Pierce should heed that counsel and reject the Northridge UDAG application. UDAG itself should be eliminated. President Reagan has tried to kill it, but it seems to have multiple lives. Most government programs just waste money. UDAG also hurts people. We need to fire a silver bullet into it.

Reagan's luck will change!!

WASHINGTON — To say sooth, the president and Nancy are in a pickle. The White House will not exactly affirm, neither can it truly deny, that the first lady has been communing with an astrologer. The wisecracks are having the most fun they've had since Jimmy Carter fought off the killer rabbit.

The story broke on a Monday. Don Regan, the ousted White House chief of staff, has written a memoir. A few paragraphs deal with Nancy's consultations. It appears that after the attempted assassination in 1981, the distraught first lady feared for a second attempt.

What dates, she wondered, might be lucky or unlucky? Could the president's schedule be shaped accordingly? She sought an answer in his horoscope. When the snickers began to spread around town on Tuesday, press aides went into a flap, consulted among themselves, talked high strategy and damage control. By Wednesday morning The Washington Post's Herblock had prepared a gleeful cartoon.

What is to be said of all this? For starters, astrology is the sheerest hokum. This pseudo-science has been around since the days of the Chaldeans and Babylonians. It is as phony as numerology, phrenology, palmistry, alchemy, the reading of tea leaves and the practice of divination by the entrails of a goat. No serious person will buy the notion that our lives are influenced individually by the movement of distant planets. This is the sawdust blarney of a carnival midway.

Yet the remarkable thing is that astrology continues to thrive in an age of universal debunking. Soothsaying is widely syndicated. In its most familiar form, tucked away with Dagwood Bumstead on the comic pages, astrology attracts the attention of millions of newspaper readers. "Love plays role, protect self in emotional clinches ... What has been elusive now becomes available ... Be aware that recent lessons can now be put to good use."

I have a granddaughter, age 5, who learned not long ago that her prestige was rising; romance figured prominently.

Now and then, of course, predictions uncannily but coincidentally come true. "Beware the idea of March," said the soothsayer to Caesar. In April the prophetic fellow raised his fees and made a fortune. Forecasts that fail to pan out are filed away pianissimo. One is reminded of the late columnist Drew Pearson, whose fearless predictions were 100 percent right, 50 percent of the time.

Soothsayers turn up in several of Shakespeare's plays. In a comic scene in Antony and Cleopatra, a seer tells Charmian, one of the queen's attendants, "You shall yet be fairer than you are; you shall be more beloved than beloved; you shall outlive the lady whom you serve." Charmian laughs. In Cymbeline, an optimistic sage has a vision of "Jove's bird, the Roman eagle," and this portends, "unless my sins abuse my divination, success to the Roman host."

Whatever these arcane arts may have meant to playwrights, ancient priests and monarchs of the Middle Ages, they rank today with black cats and fortune cookies. Superstitions, let us face it, are as common as dandruff. So Nancy consults an astrologer? Has Herblock never knocked on wood for luck? Do winning coaches change their socks?

Speaker of the House Jim Wright reacted positively to the week's revelations. He was glad to learn, he said, "that the president consults with somebody." Has Wright ever rubbed a rabbit's foot? Does the speaker step over the cracks in a sidewalk?

The only consolation that might be offered to Marlin Fitzwater, chief press aide to the president, is the advice the philosopher gave the king. Asked to provide a single sentence that would be equally valuable in good times or bad, the philosopher came up with four words: "This too shall pass."

Trouble is, as Marlin knows, some things take a long time in passing. Ridicule is the most disastrous of all afflictions in political life. One can endure mere calamities — Grover Cleveland's bastard child, Nixon's missing tapes, Reagan's arms to the ayatollah. It's the little things that cling in public memory like burrs in a collie's coat. We may not remember much about Gary Hart, but we will remember the boat in which he bounced off to Bimini with the blonde in his lap: It was the good ship Monkey Business.

Hang tough, Marlin! Other presidents have weathered storms of mockery. Remember when Jimmy Carter changed the part in his hair? Remember when Lyndon Johnson picked up that dog by its ears? Reagan's luck will change. Just make sure he never tosses his hat on a bed.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, May 16, the 137th day of 1988. There are 229 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On May 16, 1929, the first Academy Awards were given out during a banquet at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel. The movie Wings won "best production"; Emil Jannings and Janet Gaynor were named best actor and best actress, not for any one picture.

On this date:
In 1763, the English lexicographer, author and wit Samuel Johnson first met his future biographer, James Boswell.

In 1770, Marie Antoinette, then 14 years old, married the future King Louis XVI of France, who was 15.

In 1866, Congress authorized minting of the 5-cent piece.

In 1868, the U.S. Senate failed by one vote to convict President Andrew Johnson as it took its first ballot on one of 11 articles of impeachment against him.

In 1905, actor Henry Fonda was born in Grand Island, Neb.

In 1920, Joan of Arc was canonized in Rome.

In 1946, the musical Annie Get Your Gun, featuring songs by Irving Berlin and starring Ethel Merman, opened on Broadway.

Isn't this also 'insider info'?

Robert Orben was invited to dine with some senators in their private dining room in the Capitol.

Republicans and Democrats were warm, jovial, convivial — apparently enjoying the visitor and one another.

Orben remarked to his host that the political leaders seemed to get along so well and his host explained.

He said, "We work together, we dine together, we play golf together. We see one another socially. And when one of us stumbles and is hurt — we eat him!"

Larry Speakes' new book about his White House years reflects a similar cynicism.

And there is something wrong when a former White House official can be prosecuted for using insider information for personal profit, yet a White House press secretary can profit handsomely from a self-serving book full of insider information.

It is at least indiscreet when the Queen's chambermaid sells a titillating biography ...

Paul Harvey

For him to write a book in which he describes the Reagans in unflattering prose — in which he claims to have edited the President's official statements — I find repugnant.

I am aware that former White House Chief of Staff Mike Deaver also wrote a book — in which he describes the First Lady as a "back stabber" and the President as "somewhat out of touch," and I think Mike is an ingrate.

White House aides in years past were supposed to have a passion for anonymity. Now they seem to have a passion for celebrity as they sell their gossipy, opinionated, frivolous memoirs for 30 pieces of silver.

I don't know why it seems worse when a professional newsman turns on the President who hired him, trusted him and endowed him with unearned prestige ... but it does.

Profiting from insider contacts in the White House was a crime for Lyn Nofziger. He may go to prison. Hasn't Larry Speakes done the same thing?

Question: Who's really caused deficit?

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The embittered Don Regan now tells us that poor Nancy Reagan, frightened almost out of her wits by the March 1981 assassination attempt on her husband, took to consulting a San Francisco astrologer as to the dates on which it would be safest — or most dangerous — for him to travel. And it appears that, where possible, her husband good naturedly indulged her wishes in such matters.

Just as these revelations were enlivening Washington's spring Silly Season, the Labor Department reported that the nation's civilian unemployment rate fell in April to 5.4 percent — the lowest level in 14 years.

Question for thoughtful readers: Which of these stories do you think is likely to have the bigger impact on George Bush's election prospects in November?

The plight of the Democrats would be comical if it weren't so desperate. Their whole act consists of portraying America as in economic ruins, from which it can be rescued only by their patented combination of cheap money, punitive taxes and government checks for all.

Yet here is this wretch Reagan, who actually dared to cut everybody's taxes, presiding over the 65th month of the longest economic boom in post-war history, with inflation well under control and unemployment still falling month by month! As Hugh Johnson used to say, it's enough to bring tears to the eyes of a brass Buddha.

You know just how bad things must be for the Democrats when they start complaining about the size of the federal deficit. That's like W.C. Fields leading a temperance parade. Theirs after all is the party that invented deficit spending.

Nevertheless, one makes do with what is available; so nowadays people who never used to show the slightest interest in such statistics are bewailing the vast deficit that "Reagan has run up."

Federal deficits are the result of an imbalance between revenues and expenditures. As to revenues, not only must Congress approve all revenue-raising measures, but under the Constitution these must all originate in the House of Representatives — which has been under Democratic control from Day 1 of the "Reagan revolution." Similarly, all expenditures must be authorized by Congress; the president cannot spend one federal nickel on his own. Who, then, is "responsible for the deficit"?

To be sure, Mr. Reagan called for a big reduction in taxes and got it. But would revenues have been larger if taxes had remained high or gone higher? Experience suggests the exact opposite.

Defense expenditures rose significantly in Mr. Reagan's first five years, also as he requested, with the beneficial results we now see as the Russians return to the bargaining table. But did the Democrats oppose such increases? On the contrary, while differing on the size of the increases, their official position was always to favor higher defense expenditures.

It is on domestic expenditures alone that the Democrats have steadfastly opposed the president, and here their pressure has always been for more spending — and, as a result, for the huge deficit we see.

In this campaign year, the Democratic Party is stopping just short of calling for higher taxes as the way to narrow that deficit. Michael Dukakis speaks of raising taxes "as a last resort," which is a politician's cautious Newspeak for a tax hike. But he had better be careful. According to Gallup poll conducted for the Los Angeles Times, not only all four of the voting groups Gallup identifies as "Republican-oriented," but also five of the six "Democrat-oriented" groups would be "less likely to vote for a candidate who supports a tax increase to reduce the federal deficit."

But maybe Dukakis consults astrologers, not pollsters.

Surgeon general says smoking is addictive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The surgeon general declared today that nicotine is addictive like heroin and cocaine, a finding that came as no surprise to researchers but which will provide new ammunition for anti-smoking forces.

The significance of the report by C. Everett Koop is not that it unveils new scientific evidence, but that he organized existing research into a systematic presentation lumping nicotine in with heroin and cocaine as physiologically addictive substances.

"Careful examination of the data makes it clear that cigarettes and other forms of tobacco are addictive," Koop wrote in a preface. "An extensive body of research has shown that nicotine is the drug in tobacco that causes addiction."

"Moreover, the processes that determine tobacco addiction are similar to those that determine addiction to drugs such as heroin and cocaine."

The report cites 171 separate studies, most of them conducted during the past decade, as references.

In a letter to Congress accompanying the report, Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen said, "A warning label on the addicting nature of tobacco use should be rotated with other health warnings now required on cigarette and smokeless tobacco packages and advertisements."

Bowen said cigarette smoking is "the chief avoidable cause of premature death in this country," causing more than 300,000 such deaths each year.

"The disease impact of smoking justifies placing the problem of tobacco use at the top of the public health agenda," Bowen wrote. "The conclusions of this report provide another compelling reason for strengthening our efforts to reduce tobacco use in our society."

In his opening remarks, Koop also called for an addiction warning on cigarette labels and advertising and said, "Treatment of tobacco addiction should be more widely available and should be considered at least as favorably by third-party payers as treatment of alcoholism and illicit drug addiction."

Koop handled some other controversial ideas as questions:

"With the evidence that tobacco is addicting, is it appropriate for tobacco products to be sold through vending machines, which are easily accessible to children?"

"Is it appropriate for free samples of tobacco products to be sent through the mail or distributed on public property, where verification of age is difficult if not impossible? Should the sale of tobacco be treated less seriously than the sale of alcoholic beverages, for which a specific license is required (and revoked for repeated sales to minors)?"

"In the face of overwhelming evidence that tobacco is addicting, policymakers should address these questions without delay," Koop said.

Reaction was swift and predictable. The American Academy of Family Physicians was ready with a prepared statement saying the Koop finding "confirms what many smokers and former smokers know very well — stopping smoking is a hard thing to do."

Although details of the report were not made public until today, one of the many federal health officials that helped prepare it disclosed the essential finding — that nicotine is addictive — in a television interview earlier this month.

A Tobacco Institute spokesman reacted to that disclosure by Ronald M. Davis, director of the federal Office of Smoking and Health, by saying it showed "anti-tobacco zeal has overtaken common sense and good judgment."

Walker Merryman, the tobacco industry official, added: "To imply that the 55 million American tobacco smokers are drug abusers is to divert attention from the nation's war on illicit drugs. It is a trivialization of the country's urgent concerns with hard drugs and verges on irresponsibility."

Poll says Americans favor the arms treaty; don't trust Soviets

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans overwhelmingly favor the U.S.-Soviet medium-range nuclear missile treaty but share fears in Congress that Moscow cannot be trusted to comply, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

The poll also found that Americans view Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev nearly as favorably as they do President Reagan, and Gorbachev outpolls Reagan among college-educated Americans.

Seventy-three percent of those polled in the national survey supported the accord to eliminate medium-range missiles, and as many said they would back a treaty to cut each nation's long-range arsenal in half.

But 61 percent said the Soviets can't be trusted to live up to their arms control agreements. That reflected sentiment in the Senate, which last week demanded clarification of the anti-cheating rules in the pact.

The poll was conducted among a random sample of 1,204 adults interviewed by telephone from April 29-May 8, ending less than a month before Reagan and Gorbachev meet in Moscow.

As strongly pro-treaty as they were, a near-majority of Americans were not willing to drop Reagan's proposed missile defense system known as "Star Wars" in exchange for a Soviet agreement to a big cut in nuclear arms. Forty-nine percent opposed such a trade while just one-third supported it.

The public was split on the issue along political and ideological lines: Republicans and conservatives strongly opposed dropping Star Wars for a big missile cut, while Democrats and liberals favored such an agreement.

Without an agreement, 56 percent said work on

Star Wars should proceed as it is now or be increased, while 30 percent said it should be reduced or dropped. There again was a political division: 73 percent of Republicans wanted work on Star Wars kept up, compared with 41 percent of Democrats.

Similarly, there was an ideological division in support for the medium-range treaty and for a treaty, if one can be reached, to halve the long-range arsenals. The pacts fared worst among conservatives — 20 percent were opposed — and best with liberals, whose opposition was in single digits. About 67 percent of conservatives and 83 percent of liberals were in favor.

The survey found broad support for Reagan's handling of U.S.-Soviet relations, with 71 percent approving, and a high positive view of Reagan generally, with 59 percent rating him favorably.

Nearly as many — 54 percent — expressed a positive view of Gorbachev, the poll found. Among college graduates, 71 percent rated Gorbachev favorably while 62 percent viewed Reagan favorably; among those who have done postgraduate work, 76 percent saw Gorbachev favorably, compared with 50 percent favorable for Reagan.

Reagan had the approval of the poll's respondents for his May 29-June 2 summit with Gorbachev in Moscow. Seventy-eight percent said the president and the Soviet leader should meet at regular intervals even without any major items on the agenda.

The survey gave a mixed report on U.S.-Soviet competition. Forty-one percent said the United States had more political influence in the world and just 14 percent said the Soviets had more political influence. Thirty-eight percent said the countries were about equally influential.

Baker, Moyers won't write 'kiss and tell' books

By The Associated Press

A former White House chief of staff says he may write a book someday, but it won't be a "kiss-and-tell" memoir like that of his successor Donald Regan.

U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker, who traded jobs in the Reagan administration with Regan in January 1985, said Saturday that "kiss-and-tell" books aren't very interesting.

"They tend to diminish the people who write them more than those they are written about," Baker said.

Former Johnson administration press secretary Bill Moyers said he would feel like a "thief of conversation" if he had written about the hours he listened to former President Lyndon B.

Johnson.

"I never have felt comfortable about writing a book about all I know about Lyndon Johnson," said Moyers, now an award-winning journalist.

"You have a moral obligation to resign and state publicly that you cannot support policy and say why. But to write a book while he is still in office is unbecoming."

Baker was in Texas this weekend to speak at the University of Houston's graduation ceremony while Moyers spoke at the University of North Texas' commencement in Denton.

Regan offers a sometimes bitter account of his days at the White House in "For the Record: From Wall Street to Washington." The book portrays Presi-

Former trooper says he's not worried about electric chair

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — Joe Duncan, whose dark-blue state trooper uniform has been traded in for the prison whites of death row, says if all legal appeals fail, he will be executed for the murder of his trooper girlfriend.

"If we develop the evidence we expect to in the next few weeks, I'll get a new trial," Duncan said last week during his first interview from death row at Holman Prison.

But if the appeals fail, the only choices are life without parole, or death. Duncan, 33, speaking amid clanging metal doors and inmates' yells, said he would prefer execution.

"If I had no chance of getting out of this institution ... I'd beg them to put me in the electric chair," he said.

Duncan was sentenced April 12 in the shooting death of Trooper Elizabeth Cobb, 31, whose body was found Oct. 12 in her parked patrol car behind a church where Duncan said they used to meet. She was shot three times in the head.

Duncan initially denied even knowing where the church was located. But he changed his story, saying he found Miss Cobb's still-warm body, and failed to tell anyone for fear of being implicated.

Jurors recommended life without parole for Duncan after prosecutors presented a case based mostly on circumstantial evidence stemming from Duncan's taped statements to investigators.

Circuit Judge J.C. Norton, however, overturned the recommendation and sentenced him to death.

On May 12, Duncan's attorneys formally asked Norton for a new trial. Among their reasons was an allegation that an unidentified juror may have known Duncan and Miss Cobb.

Officials believe Duncan is the state's first law officer to be sentenced to death.

"There is no way (to explain) what it's like to go from an Alabama state trooper — and I'm talking about probably the most prestigious law enforcement job in this state — to death row in six months," said Duncan.

Prosecutors said Duncan killed Miss Cobb to collect $350,000 from a life insurance policy that went into effect 10 days before her death. They said the policy was taken out June 30.

Parties warming up for November election in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — At an advertising agency for Shimon Peres' Labor Party, image-makers showed off a new brochure picturing a checkered Arab headdress — a symbol of Palestinian nationalism — with a black slash across it.

On the same day, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the rival Likud bloc worked a crowd of Jewish settlers in the West Bank, telling them the Israeli-occupied land was "thirsty for Jewish settlements."

The campaign for Israel's November general elections is getting into gear, and the main battleground for the left-center Labor Party and the rightist Likud is the Arab-Israeli conflict, brought to a boiling point by the Palestinian uprising.

Both Shamir and Peres have told voters the outcome of the balloting will be crucial for the survival of the Jewish state.

Peres, foreign minister in a strange-bedfellows coalition with Shamir, has warned that Likud's refusal to withdraw from any part of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip will cost Israel its Jewish majority and democratic values.

Shamir has charged that Labor's willingness to exchange some land for peace will deliver Israel into the hands of its Arab enemies.

"It's the first time since the 1973 (Middie East) war that the peace process is a major issue in an election campaign," said political scientist Peter Medding of Hebrew University.

Pollsters say Labor is in a more difficult spot, noting that many voters have adopted more hard-line views because they feel threatened by the violent Arab uprising in which more than 180 Palestinians and two Israelis have died since Dec. 8.

A survey of 1,200 Jewish voters at the end of March showed Labor has lost 3 percent to 4 percent to Likud since December, with Labor now at 35 percent of the vote and Likud at 30 percent, said pollster Hanoach Smith.

The rest of the vote is divided among more than a dozen smaller parties that are potential coalition partners for either Labor or Likud.

If elections were held tomorrow, Smith said, the two camps each would get roughly the same number of seats — a repeat of the stalemate in the 1984 elections that forced Labor and Likud into shared rule.

Their coalition, always fragile, has all but disintegrated since the uprising. But neither Labor nor Likud has formally ruled out joining another mixed government in case of a stalemate.

Labor's campaign, run under the slogan "Move with Strength and Brains," is aimed at winning right-of-center voters without alienating the left.

As a first step, strategists have softened the Peres peace plan by assuring voters they will have a final say before concessions are made to the Palestinians.

"We will emphasize the idea that there will be a plebiscite before any major move, such as returning territory," said Ruth Ofir of the Keshet Barel advertising agency hired by Labor.

Labor's peace program also contains a list of "no's," such as "no" to a Palestinian state, "no" to talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization, "no" to a return to the 1967 borders.

The new brochure with its crossed-out Arab headdress is meant to illustrate the point.

Teen accused of murder spends 18th birthday in Mexican detention center

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Rawn Yates spent his 18th birthday in a Juarez juvenile detention center where he was being held in connection with the May 7 shooting death of one Mexican policeman and the wounding of another.

But prosecution and defense attorneys both have predicted release, perhaps as early as today, for Yates, of El Paso, who claims he's a victim of mistaken identity.

Sunday, Yates' mother, Bobbie Mikkelsen, and his stepfather, Bob Murr, took him a cake made by friends and held a celebration, which they invited other detainees to join.

"We cut it (the cake) into little pieces and tried to make sure that all the kids ... got a piece," Murr said.

Mexican authorities took Yates and Kelly Martin, 18, of Dell City, Texas, into custody May 7 on suspicion of involvement in the shooting death of Juarez policeman Pedro German Vera and the wounding of Jose Zuniga Acevedo.

Saturday, a Mexican judge handed down formal charges against Martin, who is in jail at the CeReSo Prison.

JOINT PROBLEM, MUSCLE PAIN

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of balance.

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one side of the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms.

The doctor of Chiropractic will test the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved. Perhaps some laboratory procedures will also be needed.

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or eliminated.

Soviet troops begin Afghanistan pullout

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Gunfire rang out in the distant hills as 1,200 Soviet soldiers pulled out of a besieged garrison town near the Pakistani border, leaving behind a war the Soviet Union has waged for eight years.

The convoy that withdrew from Jalalabad on Sunday marked the beginning of the Soviet pullout. After traveling 88 miles to Kabul, the troops in the 300-vehicle convoy planned to depart for the Soviet Union today.

The leader of a Moslem guerrilla faction vowed on Sunday to seize Jalalabad as soon as the estimated 6,000 Soviet troops that were stationed there withdraw.

"We'll continue our jihad (holy war). We are fighting against an idea," said Mahmood, a commander in the radical Hezb-I-Islami guerrilla faction.

Soviet troops are expected to complete their retreat from the city in two weeks and be replaced by up to 12,000 Afghan army troops.

Mahmood said he had 10,000 men under his command but could not predict when Jalalabad, a strategic city 45 miles from the Pakistan border, would be in guerrilla hands. "There will be a lot of pressure," Mahmood said in Peshawar, Pakistan, headquarters for the U.S.-backed guerrilla factions.

Edmund McWilliams, deputy chief-of-mission at the U.S. Embassy in Kabul, said on Sunday the insurgents have moved closer and stepped up their rocket attacks on the city, the capital of Nangarhar province.

"It does not appear, though, at this point that the attacks ... will be affecting the pullout," he said.

In the past month, insurgents reportedly have overrun dozens of security posts in eastern Afghanistan as Soviet forces handed them over to Afghan army troops.

The Red Army convoy arrived in Kabul on Sunday at the end of its daylong journey through mountains teeming with guerrillas.

Mickey Mouse items popular

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Collectors collect for various reasons. Some use the items they collect as furnishings for their home. Others like to surround themselves with art. Many want to own things that bring back memories of childhood and pleasant times — such as Mickey Mouse memorabilia.

Now that Mickey Mouse is over 50 years old, memorabilia displaying his picture is in demand by young and old. The 60-year-olds remember the original movie cartoons; the 35-year-olds remember the Mickey Mouse Club on TV; the 10-year-olds know Disneyland and the TV shows. Mickey is one of the best-known personalities in the world and is recognized in almost every country.

One rare Mickey Mouse collectible is an electric alarm clock made by Ingersoll-Waterbury in 1933. The clock's hands are Mickey's arms, which move to tell the time.

The 4 1/4-inch square clock was made with a green metal case. A paper band on the sides pictured Mickey, Minnie, Clarabelle Cow and others from the cartoons. Serious collectors also search for the box that the clock originally came in, picturing Mickey and friends.

Today any Mickey Mouse clock or watch that is out of production has value.

Q. My insurance company insists that I get a new appraisal for the antiques we insure on our fine arts policy. We purchased four Royal Copenhagen figurines and some Hummel figurines in 1954. How can we determine their value today?

A. The easiest way to price your figurines is with the help of your library. Several books list Hummel prices exclusively; others list general antiques, including Royal Copenhagen.

Photocopy the page that includes the price information about your figurines and send it to your insurance company to prove the value. You can also get an appraisal from a qualified appraiser, but that would be

Do you have this important collectible? Mickey Mouse's hands show the time on this 1933 electric clock.

Antiques

more expensive, of course.

Most antiques dealers or auction houses can write a suitable insurance appraisal. Be sure the pieces are completely described, noting the size, coloring, markings and any damage for each piece. The appraiser should also include his personal credentials and should explain how the prices were determined.

Q. We have a "Junghans" eight-day striking shelf clock. It is domed and seems to be made of rosewood. The chimes are two-tone and go "bim bam" every 15 minutes. There is a single "bam" for each hour. How old is it?

A. Erhard Junghans founded the world's largest clock factory in Germany, and the Junghans family has been making clocks in the Black Forest region since the 17th century.

They made many types of clocks, including the famous Black Forest cuckoo clocks, using assembly line methods and standard parts.

The clocks sold well in America, and the striking clocks were especially popular during the last quarter of the 19th century.

Q. My blue bottle is marked on the side with the words "John Wyeth & Bro., Pat May 16th, 1899." What was it used for?

A. John Wyeth & Bro. worked in Philadelphia, Pa., from the 1890s. Bottles have been found that held many types of medicines, from Granular Effervescent Sodium Phosphate Laxative to pills. Many are cobalt blue, and many had a glass cap that was used as a measure for one dose.

I collect granite ware and like the speckled enameled metal pieces used in the kitchen. I have coffeepots, collanders, mugs, pails, pots, even roasting pans. How many colors were made? Were they ever signed?

A. Granite ware came in blue, red, green, gray, yellow and white. It was rarely signed, though we have seen one piece marked L & G.

Reproductions of the colorful graniteware pieces have been made in recent years.

TIP: When storing dolls (old or new), be sure to remove any sticky tape that might have been used to hold bows or other items in place. The glue from the tape will eventually discolor the fabric.

If dolls are to be stored a long time, put tissue between clothing and doll to keep bright colors from "bleeding" onto the doll. Remove metal that might rust. Save the box and all tags.

You were right to say that most people have a serious look — or even a frown — on their faces when they're deep in thought. That's me, but I don't think I should go around grinning like a Cheshire cat for no reason at all.

Thanks for understanding that it hurts to be constantly reminded to smile. Maybe if you print this, people will think twice before they say it.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the person who is constantly told to smile should read what Dale Carnegie had to say in his book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People":

THE VALUE OF A SMILE
It costs nothing, but creates much;

It enriches those who receive, without impoverishing those who give;

It happens in a flash, and the memory of it sometimes lasts forever;

None are so rich they can get along without it, and none so poor but are richer for its benefits.

It creates happiness in the home, fosters good will in a business, and is the countersign of friends.

It is rest to the weary, daylight to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and nature's best antidote for trouble.

Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed or stolen, for it is of no earthly good to anybody until it is given away.

Nobody needs to smile so much as those who have none left to give. Smile, smile, smile.

Mavs' blowout win evens series with Nuggets

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Impatient Dallas Mavericks fans had been clamoring for a blowout victory and finally they got one with Mark Aguirre's signature on it. Aguirre exploded out of a scoring slump with 34 points Sunday night, leading the Mavericks to a 124-103 victory over Denver in their NBA playoff series. The victory evened the best-of-seven Western Conference semi-final series at two games each and helped ease the pain of Saturday's 107-105 loss to Denver in the final three seconds. It also soothed Aguirre, who spent the final minutes of Saturday's loss on the bench when Coach John MacLeod decided to go with a big lineup. "I wanted to come out and play as hard as I could in this game," Aguirre said. "I know Coach

MacLeod's goal is to win basketball games. "We had a nice talk today. It was basically that he was behind me. It makes you feel good to know someone is behind you 100 percent."

The Mavericks have struggled to put teams away in the playoffs, including Saturday's game when they never trailed until the final three seconds. But they jumped on the injured Nuggets Sunday from the start and took the lead for good at 24-22 with 2:06 to go in the opening period. The lead increased to 63-48 at the half and MacLeod finally emptied his bench for the first time in the playoffs during the final minutes. "We weren't emotionally ready, that's all," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "I could tell early we had a chance only if we were fired up."

Huge crowd turns out to greet Lady Harvesters Pampa celebrates state track win

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

With no more worlds left to conquer — at least for this year, Pampa's Lady Harvesters flew home to planet Pampa Sunday. And the reception was like, well, down to earth. A happy throng of parents, students and fans had a hero's welcome for Pampa's 1988 Class 4A state track champions during a reception Sunday night at the high school athletic fieldhouse. There was no flowing champagne, no tickertape parade, just a lot of people with hometown spirit and community pride showing how much they cared. "The girls just did an outstanding job. There was some quality performances," said Pampa coach Gary Cornelsen, who found himself cornered by a group of congratulatory boosters. With 80 possible points available, the Lady Harvesters collected 68 of them to win the state title Friday at Austin's Memorial Stadium. Brenham, who outlasted Pampa last year for the state championship, came in second with 60 points. When Pampa won the '86 crown, it was Brenham which finished second again. "I was really surprised that it came down to Pampa and Brenham again. The other teams just did not perform well," Cornelsen said. "Maybe we had them a little psyched out because we had been here before and won it. I don't know."

Plenty of bouquets, both real and verbal, were passed out to the Lady Harvesters. "They did it again," said an unidentified man. "I just figured they would." And win they did. Pampa senior Tanya Lidy closed out a brilliant prep career by winning five medals and freshman Christa West turned in a clutch performance in the 800-meter relay to push the Lady Harvesters to the top of the field. "After we won our two relays, everyone in the stands knew who we had running the 200. We knew we had won it again," Cornelsen said. Lidy won her third consecutive state 200-meter dash with a time of 24.0 flat to bring her total state medal count to 14. "Lidy is just a quality athlete," added Cornelsen. West, running her first varsity 800 relay, pulled the Lady Harvesters from far back into the pack into a virtual deadlock when she handed the baton to Lidy, who anchored both winning relay teams. "West ran one heckuva leg. When she took the baton we were in fifth place and when she handed the baton to Lidy, we knew it was over," Cornelsen said. The 800-meter relay team won with a time of 1:41.1. The other relay team members were Lisa Johnson and Yolanda Brown. West was filling in for the injured Cassandra Hunnicutt, who had fan the third leg in the 800 all season. West, who also played on the high school varsity basketball team, won a runoff with three teammates during workouts to earn a spot on the 800 relay team.

"I'll going to wait until 1992," she said. With five tracksters (Brown, Johnson, Hunnicutt, Osby and West) returning from the state championship crew — plus regional qualifiers Joyce Williams (shot put) and Michelle Whiton (800), and several freshman moving up from the eighth-grade district championships — there could be a repeat of Sunday's homecoming reception in 1989.

FCA meets tonight

Dorman Smith, author of the book "Casey Wayne," will be a guest at a Pampa High School Fellowship of Christian Athletes meeting at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the PHS auditorium. Special music will be provided by the Harvesters Four.

Optimist baseball roundup

David Potter struck out 12 and drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single as Glo-Valve edged Dunlap Industrial 3-2 in Major League Bambino action Saturday. With Glo-Valve behind 2-0, Rodney Scott, David Loyd and Chad Dunnam walked in the Glo-Valve fifth to set up Potter's hit. Dunnam sped home on a passed ball moments later to end the scoring. Dale Noble with a double and Jim Bob McGahen with a single aided Glo-Valve's cause. Greg McDaniel with an RBI single and Justin Long, Andy Elsheimer, Matt Garvin and Gerald Reyes with singles led Dunlap.

Bases on balls proved to be the undoing for Dunlap, who outthrew Glo-Valve 5-3. Potter walked only one Dunlap batter while Glo-Valve received six free tickets to first base from losing pitcher Duane Nickleberry and Garvin. Elsheimer also pitched for Dunlap. Both teams are now 2-2 in first half play. In the Bambino Senior League, Duncan ripped Celanese 15-4 Saturday. Duncan's hitting attack was led by Dennis Graham, who had two home runs and two doubles. Rene Armendariz also homered for Duncan while Jason Soukup had a single and double, Shawn Hayes, two singles, Jason Jones and Brandon Soukup, one double each. Winning pitcher was Dennis Graham, who allowed six hits while striking out five and walking six. Losing pitcher was Hank Gindorf.

Royals halt Rangers

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Royals had dropped eight of their previous nine and the Rangers were on the verge of a record-setting win streak when Kansas City's bats came to life. Willie Wilson's game-opening homer set the pace for his 4-for-4 performance and Danny Tartabull's third-inning grand slam polished off the 5-4 Sunday afternoon victory over Texas.

Garber escaped from a bases-loaded jam with no outs in the seventh and held the Texas Rangers in the final two innings for his fifth save. "How about Harry Houdini?" said Wathan. "He's an amazing man. I don't know how we could have gotten out of that situation any better."

That snapped the Rangers' club record-tying eight-game winning streak, and ended the longest active streak in the major leagues. In their previous nine games the Royals hit .207 and scored 21 runs while the pitching staff compiled a 3.44 ERA with two complete games.

Texas had closed to 5-4 when Bud Black, in relief of Mark Gubicza (4-4), balked in a run. Garber got Larry Parrish to ground into a third-to-home fielder's choice, then Geno Petralli rapped into a pitcher-home-first double-play.

Garber has five of the Royals' six saves after pitching a season-high three innings, lowering his ERA to 1.32. "He's used to coming into those situations," Wathan said. "He's done it so many times in his career."

The Royals got to Rangers starter Charlie Hough, 4-5, for five runs in 3 1-3 innings. "You don't expect to do that to Charlie after what he's done to us in the past," Wilson said. "I was looking for a fastball in that situation and that's what he threw."

After Hough struggled early, relievers Tony Fossas and Jose Cecena combined to allow no runs and three hits over the final 5 2-3 innings. Fossas, a 29-year-old rookie, was making his big league debut.

Garber got Larry Parrish to ground into a third-to-home fielder's choice, then Geno Petralli rapped into a pitcher-home-first double-play.

Royals manager John Wathan said Wilson's homer set the tone for Sunday's win, but the Royals' 40-year-old relief pitcher, Gene Garber, turned out to be the key player.

Garber got Larry Parrish to ground into a third-to-home fielder's choice, then Geno Petralli rapped into a pitcher-home-first double-play.

Miami plans softball tourney

The second annual men's slow-pitch softball tournament, sponsored by the Miami Volunteer E.M.S., will be held June 3-5 in Miami. The tournament will be held in conjunction with Miami's cow calling contest the same weekend. Entry fee is $100 and the first 12 paid teams will be accepted. Entry deadline is June 1. Individual trophies will be presented to the top two teams and sponsor's trophies will be presented to the first, second and third place trophies. The tournament will played under U.S.S.A rules and tournament officials will not be responsible for accidents. A concession stand will be open during the tournament. Checks should be made out to Miami Volunteer E.M.S. and more information on the tournament can be obtained by calling Kim Barton at 806-868-3391 or Penny Guerrero at 806-868-5361 or 868-3631.

Gibson, Guerrero power Dodgers past Phillies

Pirates' Felix Fermin gets caught in a rundown.

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

It had been more than a month between home runs for Pedro Guerrero. Kirk Gibson only had to wait another at-bat for his big hit.

Gibson knocked in three runs with a bases-loaded double and Guerrero followed with a two-run homer to power the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Sunday.

"I was wondering when that next home run would come," said Guerrero, who hit his first home run since April 13. "I'm just happy I finally hit it today. There's no way we can go out there every game and hit the way we did today, but it sure helps when we do."

Gibson, signed as a free agent by the Dodgers prior to this season, missed an earlier chance to knock in runs. "Baseball is really a funny game," Gibson said. "I'm up there in the same situation — actually a better situation. It was bases loaded and only one out — and I strike out. I was really determined not to let something like that happen the next time."

His bases-clearing hit in the fourth inning gave the Dodgers a 6-0 lead. Guerrero then boosted it to 8-0 on an 0-2 pitch off Philadelphia reliever Danny Clay. Tim Belcher, 3-1, pitched the first complete game of his career, and came within one out of a shutout. He allowed six hits, walking four and striking out eight.

In other National League games Sunday, it was Cincinnati 7, Pittsburgh 6 in 12 innings; St. Louis 7, Atlanta 6; Chicago 2, Houston 1; San Diego 2, Montreal 1; and San Francisco 5, New York 1.

With the Dodgers leading 1-0, Los Angeles sent 14 batters to the plate in the fourth inning. Mike Marshall led off with a walk, and singles by John Shelby and Mike Scioscia loaded the bases. Alfredo Griffin then broke a personal 0-for-23 hitless streak with a single, scoring Marshall and Shelby and chasing starter David Palmer, 0-3.

Clay relieved and retired the next two batters before walking Mike Davis to again load the bases. Gibson followed with his double and Guerrero hit Clay's next pitch into the left-field stands.

"I'll take nine runs every game and not have to make any decisions out there," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said.

Cubs 2, Astros 1
Rick Sutcliffe's five-hitter led Chicago. Sutcliffe, 3-3, pitched his fourth complete game of the season, tying him for the league lead. He struck out five and walked four. Danny Darwin, 2-3, took the loss.

Chicago scored both of its runs in the fourth on Rafael Palmiero's league-leading 15th double and the Cubs' first hit of the game, Jerry Mumphy's double and Vance Law's single.

Giants 5, Mets 1
Kevin Mitchell knocked in three runs with a two-run homer and an infield single as San Francisco completed a sweep of the three-game series. Mike LaCoss, 2-3, went seven innings for his first victory since April 8.

The Mets, losing three straight games for the first time this season, fell behind in the first inning when Will Clark hit a two-out double and Mitchell followed with his sixth home run of the season. The Giants added another run in the seventh on a single by pinch-hitter

Cardinals 7, Braves 6
A two-out single by pinch-hitter Willie McGee in the bottom of the ninth boosted St. Louis. McGee's hit came off reliever Bruce Sutter, 1-1, capping a two-run rally.

The Braves had gone ahead 6-5 in the top of the ninth when Gerald Perry hit reliever Todd Worrell's first pitch for a two-run homer. Worrell, 2-2, who also gave up a double before ending the inning, got the victory.

Reds 7, Pirates 6, 12 innings
A sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Bo Diaz in the 12th inning scored Eric Davis with the winning run as error-prone Cincinnati nipped Pittsburgh. Davis started the 12th with a double, the Reds' first hit since Chris Sabo's two-run single in the sixth. Barry Jones, 1-1, the Pirates' sixth pitcher, got Ron Roenicke to pop up, but Lloyd McClendon followed with an infield single, moving Davis to third.

Mears burns up track to earn pole position for Indy 500

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Rick Mears began practice for the Indianapolis 500 a week ago fairly certain no one would touch his track speed records. Mears didn't give himself enough credit.

Even after the first few days of practice, Mears said he expected a speed of 214-215 mph would be enough to win the pole for the May 29 Indianapolis 500. After all, there had been a reduction in engine horsepower.

As usual, though, changes in rules for safety's sake proved only a minor inconvenience in the chase for speed.

Even with the decrease in carburetor boost pressure, speeds went up — in Mears' case, dramatically. The 36-year-old, two-time Indy winner blistered the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with four qualifying laps averaging 219.198 mph on Saturday to earn the pole for the fourth time, a feat equaled only by A.J. Foyt and the late Rex Mays.

Three of Mears' four qualifying laps exceeded his 1986 one-lap record of 217.581, and his four-lap average was over 2 mph faster than his 1986 qualifying record of 216.828.

"We didn't go out there with any numbers in our mind. We just wanted to get the best four laps we could do, then see what the numbers were," said Mears, who battled Mario Andretti during a week of practice before leading an unprecedented Penske Racing sweep of the front-row starting positions. Danny Sullivan, the 1985 race winner, won the middle spot on the first row with an average of 216.214 while defending 500 champion Al Unser posted a speed of 215.270.

Nineteen cars qualified on Saturday, but Sunday saw only two more added to the field as most drivers were willing to gamble that high midday temperatures and a gusty wind would moderate late in the day.

Finally, with less than a half-hour to go in Sunday's session, Scotland's Jim Crawford and 1986 winner Bobby Rahal joined the tentative lineup. The only other driver who tried to qualify on Sunday was rookie John Andretti, Mario's nephew, who called off his attempt after three laps around 205 mph.

Mario Andretti, who had practiced at more than 220 mph before the start of qualifications, had his right front tire thrown out of balance when he drove over a patch of oil-dry, a substance used to soak up spills on the track. His handling compromised, Andretti had to settle for the fourth position, on the inside of the second row, with a four-lap average of 214.692.

Al Unser Jr., son of the four-time winner, qualified fifth at 214.186, and Arie Luyendyk, a flying Dutchman, was next at 213.611.

Through Sunday's round of qualifications, the second of the four days of time trials, the average speed for the 21 who earned tentative starting spots was 210.995. The fastest 33 cars after the final qualification sessions next Saturday and Sunday will start the race.

"Disappointed, frustrated... the car hasn't been running very good," Rahal said of qualifying at 208.526 mph in his backup Lola, his second attempt in that race car.

"You get pretty mad, not at anybody in particular, but after a while you just say, 'It's not the first time it's happened and won't be the last,'" he said. "People said you should have taken yesterday's (first) run. If we had, it would have been slower than today's run."

A second try on Saturday, in the team's second car, was much faster, but ended with a broken fuel pump cable at the end of the third lap. That meant he had to try to get in the field on Sunday.

"The wind was awful, the track was much hotter than it's ever been. It was very slippery. That's why we didn't go out (earlier in the day)," Rahal said. "We thought, obviously, it would get better when it cooled off. But it was the hairiest conditions I've ever qualified in. I almost hit the wall every time in the fourth turn."

Crampton wins on Senior tour

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Bruce Crampton, who is all business on the golf course, made short work of his sudden-death playoff to win the United Hospitals Senior Classic.

Crampton played a fade from the extreme right side of the tee on the 15th hole at the Chester Valley Country Club Sunday, drilling his 5-iron tee shot to three feet from the cup.

Billy Casper, who lost a one-stroke advantage with a bogey 5 on the 18th hole, also teed off for the sudden-death playoff with a 5-iron, but his shot carried 25 feet beyond the pin.

Casper two-putted, while Crampton sank his three-foot putt for a birdie and the first prize of $33,750 from a purse of $225,000. It made him a millionaire on the Seniors circuit with a total of $1,001,441.

"It shows you there is more than one way to skin a kangaroo," said Crampton, a native Australian.

Casper shot a 2-under-par 68 in the third and final round and Crampton a 69. At the end of 54 holes at the Chester Valley Country Club, they were tied at 5-under 205.

"I had a fantastic day," Casper said, admitting that his next-to-last putt on 18 wasn't too fantastic.

"I didn't see it," he said. "I had my eyes closed."

Crampton shot a second-round 65 to put himself into position for Sunday's victory.

Casper lost a chance to win the tournament when he missed a two-foot putt on the 18th green for his first bogey in 41 holes of the tournament. He had bogeyed only twice, both on the first day of play.

The missed putt enabled Crampton to tie Casper for the lead.

It was Crampton's 14th Senior Tour title and his second of the year. He won the 1988 Legends of Golf with Orville Moody on May

1. It was his first individual victory since last Sept. 6, at Lexington, Ky.

The third round of the tournament began with Crampton holding a one-stroke lead over Casper and Lou Graham, a rookie this year on the tour from Nashville, Tenn., and a former U.S. Open champion.

Casper was the winner of two U.S. Opens and the British Open. Crampton held the lead over Graham and Casper on the first nine holes Sunday. He birdied the third hole to go 5 under, but bogeyed the fourth.

Wood has hole-in-one

Ronnie Wood fired a hole-in-one Friday at the Pampa Country Club. Wood's second career ace was with a 6-iron on the par-3, 145-yard No. 5 hole. Wood wound up with an even-par 35 on the front nine.

Witnesses were Merle Terrell, Bill Allison and Roy Don Stephens.

IRVING (AP) — Don't mess with Bruce Lietzke in playoffs.

Clarence Rose did on Sunday in the Bryon Nelson Golf Classic and he discovered what Gene Littler, Ray Floyd, Tom Watson and Andy Bean already knew. Lietzke is poison when the heat is on.

Winning his fifth playoff in seven attempts on the PGA Tour, Lietzke made a 20-foot birdie putt on the first playoff green to beat non-winner Rose and earn the $135,000 first place prize.

Rose made $81,000 after shooting a final round 69 while Lietzke bogeyed the last hole for a par 70. They were nine-under 271 over the Tournament Players Course at Las Colinas.

"It was nice to be in contention again," Lietzke said. "And to be able to work through all the problems and win again. It was a match play tournament with Rose and I just tried to relax."

Lietzke was surprised the winning putt fell, thinking he had hit it too hard.

"I wish I could say I had a magic feeling when I hit that putt but I really didn't," Lietzke said. "I had been on the left lips and right lips all day but that one went straight into the hole. I thought it would be too hard and maybe just catch a part of the hole but it didn't."

He said it was great to win after four years, the last being the Honda Classic.

"I felt good once I got into the playoff," he said. "I've got a pretty good record there. I've beaten some big names."

"It was the first time in four years I had a chance to win and I did it."

Rose said he wasn't nervous although he walked to the 16th tee and Lietzke took the luxury car ride the tournament provided.

"Just give Lietzke credit, he made a great putt," Rose said. "Well, second place again for me. Bruce just let me in the playoff then he took it away. He's a competitor."

Rose said "I learned how to win a playoff now. You get into the playoff and birdie the first hole. That's how you do."

Lietzke, who has moved his family to Plano, Texas, from Grove, Okla., said he may only play golf for two more years.

"My predictions don't hold a lot of water but I really want a change from the tour life and spend more time with my family," Lietzke said. "I've been saying 'only two more years' for six years."

"I could leave in two years but I have a concern about how I would earn an income. I was a security guard once and that wasn't a lot of fun."

Lietzke, who has now won 11 tour events, admitted "I've never ever wanted to be the best player in the world. I could leave the tour tomorrow but I couldn't quit playing golf."

He last won the 1984 Honda Classic and among his 11 tour victories is the 1981 Nelson Classic.

Lietzke has won $2,542,686 but has never won a major.

"My longtime goal is to win a tournament by a large margin," he said. "I could have cruised and signed autographs and kissed babies along the way today but I didn't have a large enough margin to do it. Maybe someday."

Bruins headed for Stanley Cup finals

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins and New Jersey Devils both have bright futures. It's just that New Jersey will have to wait a while before the darkness lifts.

The Bruins — not the improbable Devils — are going to the Stanley Cup finals. Now it's the Bruins — no longer the Devils — who have a chance to surprise an opponent they're not expected to beat.

Boston, which last won the Stanley Cup in 1972 and hasn't been in the finals since 1978, begins the best-of-seven series Wednesday night at Edmonton, the defending NHL champion and winner of three of the last four Cups.

"Edmonton has four or five of the best players in the world," Bruins defenseman Ray Bourque said. "But it is a team game and we can beat them."

TOT Kennel Club results

Top O' Texas Kennel Club members claimed several honors during recent AKC sanctioned matches.

At a match sponsored by Panhandle Kennel Club in Amarillo, the following TOT members took awards:

Lady Tennaha, English bulldog, owned by Ronnie and Deborah Stapleton of Pampa, took second place in the Puppy Class.

Golden Wheat's Indigo Velvet, Pomeranian, owned by Mona Wheat of Pampa, took first in Class, Winners Bitch and Best of Opposite Sex.

Santa's Night Princess, Miniature Schnauzer, owned by San and Weldon Talley of White Deer, took Best of Opposite Sex.

Ch. Traumahaus Santa-Astro, Miniature Schauzer, also owned by San and Weldon Talley, took Best of Breed, Group Four.

Hercules of La Wee, West Highland White Terrier, owned by James A. and Laura Weese, White Deer, took Best of Breed, giving him a Champion title.

At the Heart of Plains Kennel Club sanctioned match, awards were given to:

Lady Tennaha, English Bulldog, owned by Ronnie and Deborah Stapleton, took second in Puppy Class.

Golden Wheat's Indigo Velvet, Pomeranian, owned by Mona Wheat of Pampa, took first in Class, Winners Bitch and Best of Opposite Sex.

Santa's Somewhere My Love, Miniature Schnauzer, owned by San and Weldon Talley of White Deer, took Winners Bitch and Best of Opposite Sex.

Ch. Glengloamin's Best of Times II, West Highland Terrier, owned by James and Laura Weese, took Best of Breed.

At the Mid-Del Tinker Kennel Club, members who took awards were:

Hercules of LaWee, West Highland Terrier, owned by James and Laura Weese of White Deer, took Winners Dog.

Santa's Martin-Astro, Miniature Schnauzer, owned by San and Weldon Talley of White Deer, took winners dog and Best of Winners.

San and Weldon Talley also reported the following wins: Santa's Martin-Astro, Miniature Schnauzer, took Best of Winners and Best of Breed at the Clovis-Portales Kennel Club Match and Santa's Somewhere My Love, Miniature Schnauzer, took Winners Bitch and Best of Opposite Sex at the same show. Santa's Somewhere My Love took Winners Bitch, Best of Opposite Sex at the Lawton-Fort Sill Kennel Club.

At the Amarillo Obedience Training Club Trial in Amarillo, Cor's Valley Girl O' Blue Max, Irish Water Spaniel, owned by Vickie Nite of Pampa, took first in Novice Obedience.

Small-business survey points to employment expansion

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—The economic outlook continues to improve, although with a growing bias toward higher wages and prices, according to the latest quarterly survey of small businesses.

Based on written responses to a detailed questionnaire, the business people expressed faith in higher sales over the next three months and supported that view with plans to expand employment.

The survey, for the 500,000-member National Federation of Independent Business, also found a record-low level of planning to borrow, suggesting smaller businesses are finding profits and cash flow sufficient for their needs.

The low level of borrowing tends to insulate smaller businesses from the impact of the recent tightening of monetary policy, and separates them sharply from the heavy borrowing by government, consumers and financial markets.

In releasing the results, Professor William Dunkelberg, dean of Temple University's business school and originator of the survey, commented that "monetary policy does not appear to have been particularly restrictive during the last four years, nor is credit availability a problem now."

Other commentators have observed that the reliance on internal financing rather than borrowing, reflects not only a distaste for the level of interest rates but a lingering fear of the tight credit conditions of the 1970s.

The small-business survey is closely watched for indications of things to come, since the companies involved employ about one-half the private non-farm work force and produce about 50 percent of gross national product.

Dunkelberg reported that the small-business optimism index, compiled since 1974, rose to 102.2 from 101.8 in January on a seasonally adjusted basis, continuing a pattern of slightly above or below 100 since 1985.

The index, which assumes conditions that existed in 1978 equal 100, reached a seasonally adjusted high of 108.7 in January 1984 and a low of 81.1 in April 1980.

The index is compiled from data distilled from the survey and includes expected business conditions, the climate for expansion, earnings, job openings and hiring plans and plans for capital outlays.

While the April report was generally bullish, and even stronger than that of January, Dunkelberg observed that companies have become decidedly less optimistic about future expansion each April since 1983.

"Apparently, many believe that the law of gravity applies to economic statistics as well as apples," he said, noting that "views about the possibility of further growth are about as weak now as in 1980."

However, he added, that while the numbers might be similar, the reasons for them are not.

In 1980, he said, 48 percent of respondents expected a deterioration of the economy, "while in 1988, particularly in many regions of the country, businesses just figure it can't get any better."

Among details of the report:

■ Twenty-five percent of all companies plan to increase total employment in the next three months, while 5 percent plan reductions.

"These are the second strongest hiring plans recorded since 1978 on a seasonally adjusted basis. The strongest were recorded last January."

Hiring plans were especially strong in manufacturing, with 33 percent planning to increase employment and only 4 percent planning reductions.

■ Although plans to raise prices fell from January levels, over a longer period "there has been a clear upward shift" in such plans. Dunkelberg based this conclusion on a comparison with figures for April in the prior two years.

Nevertheless, Dunkelberg observes that this year "could deliver a bit more inflation than currently expected."

Brotherly love

Reece Sloan, left, 31, of Wichita, Kan., and Cindy McClellan, 38, of Winfield, Kan., pose in a recent photograph. They had been dating each other since January and discovered they are brother and sister. Both were adopted as infants and McClellan's three-year search to find her lost relatives led to the identity of her brother, McClellan said. They met through a dating service in Wichita.
