Reagan prepares to veto another trade bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is vetoing a major trade bill, but White House aides say his veto message today will show he's willing to work with Congress on a less-contentious version.

Reagan's veto of the 1,000-page bill seemed likely to be sustained in the Senate, if narrowly. The House, where the trade bill has wider support than in the Senate, was expected to take up the veto immediately after receiving it today. The veto-destined measure includes a requirement that employers at large companies give workers 60-day advance notice of plant closings and layoffs, the provision that generated the most recent opposition. White House aides, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Reagan's objections to the plantclosing feature and provisions restricting the export of Alaskan oil will be highlighted in the veto

At the same time, the veto message will express a desire to work with Congress on a pure trade bill, the aides said.

'We want a bill. Once the message goes up and the veto is sustained, we will work with the Congress to come up with a new bill," one White House official said.

Congressional leaders, however, have thus far expressed little enthusiasm for working on a stripped-down trade bill

A 63-36 Senate vote approving the compromise legislation last month was short of the two-thirds margin needed to override a veto, suggesting the veto is likely to be sustained In 1986 Congress upheld Reagan's veto of another major trade bill, one that would have slapped stiff quotas on textile imports. A vote to override was expected to succeed this time in the House. However, a presidential veto can only be overidden if both chambers vote to do it by the needed two-thirds margins.

Reagan announced his intention to veto the measure during his radio address on May 14, saying: "It is unfortunate, but I have no choice but to send this back to Congress.

He said the measure "threatens to destroy

On Monday, Reagan told a group of manufacturing and export leaders in a "World Trade Week" ceremony in the Rose Garden that "I have no doubts that the Yankee trading spirit is alive and

He said recent trade statistics showing a $4 billion improvement in the U.S. merchandise trade deficit between February and March reflected "a genuine boom in exports.

Administration officials have cited recent improvements in the trade deficit, particularly on the export side of the ledger, as a reason for not enacting restrictive trade measures.

The trade bill is a compromise between separate strongly worded House measure that called for mandatory retaliation against foreign countries and a milder Senate version.

In addition to the provisions on plant closings and Alaska oil, the administration opposes provisions to increase some farm subsidies, expand a program for aiding dislocated workers and requiring an unfair-trading investigation of Japan for failing to open its public works projects to U.S. construction companies.

The White House also opposes sections that call for some mandatory retaliation against trading partners and which limit the president's flexibility to act in granting trade relief to U.S. industries.

However, the administration likes some features of the bill, including provisions renewing its authority to participate in global trade negotia-

600 residents evacuated following laboratory fire

HOUSTON (AP) - Firefighters lonitrile and benzene, Sybert battling a laboratory fire in south Houston had to contend with flames igniting toxic chemicals and cylinders of compressed gas that kept about 600 people away from their homes.

"It was a very big problem because we don't know what we're dealing with," said South Houston Fire Chief Jim Sybert. "We don't know what's contamin-

Authorities monitored the charred laboratory for signs of lingering toxic or fire risk to the surrounding area

During the afternoon, eight people were taken to Pasadena Bayshore Medical Center, where all but one were treated and released, said hospital spokeswoman Dorothy Westin. One victim was admitted for observation, she said.

Later Monday, eight firefighters sought treatment at Houston's Hermann Hospital, although all were expected to be treated and released, said administrative manager Theresa

Chemicals in the laboratory, mostly stored in quart bottles for testing, included gasoline, crude oil, caustic soda, naphtha, acryHe said the laboratory also held

"I heard a big boom and fire tarted shooting up, then the phone lines caught fire and started sparking," she said.

The evacuation order lasted into the evening as nearly 50 firefighters from South Houston. Houston and Pasadena, stymied by little nformation about what che, cals were inside the burning metal building, stood by and let the fire burn itself out.

"I've been a firefighter for 18 years and it's tough to stand here and watch it burn," Sybert shrugged.

Foam was sprayed on the fire after it had died down. Sybert said winds of up to 20 miles per hour helped dissipate the smoke

Fire Marshal Benjie Cowey said Caleb Brett may face sanctions because it had failed to comply with city officials' earlier requests for a list of chemicals on the premises.

Claiming "the more we understand ... the more we disagree,' Hoechst Celanese has contested a citation accusing the chemical company of ignoring hazards that led to fatal explosions at its Pampa plant last November.

The decision came Monday after Hoechst Celanese Chemical Group officials met with representatives of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in Lubbock.

OSHA issued a citation May 10, saying the company "willfully" violated OSHA standards by failing to protect employees "from the recognized hazards of fire and explosion." The citations recommended a $10,000 fine, the maximum for a single willful

Three workers died and 37 people were injured when the plant exploded and caught fire Nov. 14. The twin explosions shattered windows and shook buildings in Pampa, 6 miles to the east.

Families of two of the deceased and several of the injured are contemplating a lawsuit against Hoechst Celanese. The third family accepted the company's settlement offer, according to attorney Wayne Barfield of Amarillo

Celanese currently is in the process of rebuilding the plant and has resumed manufacture of several product lines. U.S. Department of Labor spokeswoman Sherrie Moran of Dallas said a willful violation means "an employer either knew that a condition constituted a violation or was aware that a hazardous condition existed and made no reasonable effort to cor-

Moran said OSHA found after five months of investigation that the explosions and fire were caused by oxygen mixing with reactive chemicals in a liquid phase oxidation unit at the plant. The OSHA citation also recommends ways to prevent similar mishaps in the future.

Pampa Plant Manager Ron Guard said today that Hoechst Celanese contested the citation in three areas, most notably the allegation that the violation was "willful." Guard said the company has invested millions of dollars and man-hours to eliminate the possibility of explosion.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate continues to defeat by lopsided margins attempts to amend the superpower medium-range nuclear missile treaty, but a small band of opponents shows no signs of allowing the pact to be approved before President Reagan's meeting next week with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gor-

Secretary of State George P. Shultz went to Capitol Hill on Monday to deliver the message that the Moscow summit, which starts in just five days, will be diminished if Reagan is deprived of the vote of confidence that positive Senate action on the treaty would give him.

"There is a time to inquire and there is also a time to vote," Shultz told reporters after a meeting with 17 Republican senators. "It would be a good thing to

The chief opponent of the treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear weapons, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was invited to the Shultz session but did not show up. And when Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., asked Helms how many amendments he would offer to the treaty, Helms declined to say.

Dole said he would explore on Tuesday the possibility of filing a cloture motion to limit debate on the treaty and cut off the series of amendment attempts. "I hope we can still get it done, get it over to the president," he said.

Three amendments offered by treaty opponents were defeated on Monday, bringing to nine the number of attempts to change the document's language that have been beaten back by the Senate since it was brought up for consideration a week ago.

First, the lawmakers voted 81-13 to kill a Helms amendment that would have required the president to certify as accurate a Soviet report on the number of triple-warhead SS-20 missiles to be destroyed before the treaty could take effect.

The Senate then voted 68-26 against an amendment by Sen Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., that would have required a change in the treaty's text to eliminate what he said was a loophole that would have permitted construction of some Soviet missiles.

And it rejected, 81-5, an amendment by Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., that would have put the INF treaty on hold until the United States and the Soviet Union agreed on a more far-reaching pact providing 50 percent cuts in each side's arsenals of interce tinental atomic weapons.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, said the issues raised by treaty opponents "have been raised and See SENATE, Page 2 classified file on youngster kept

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) -The FBI kept a top-secret file on a youngster who wrote 169 countries requesting information for a homemade encyclopedia and received at least 50 pieces of mail that had been tampered with, a federal lawsuit says.

Todd Patterson, now 17, said he wants to see his complete FBI file, and wants it expunged.

His lawsuit, filed Monday. also seeks a stop to mail tampering and surveillance. and unspecified damages for violation of his privacy.

"I feel that with a black spot on my record, it works against me getting a job," he says. "They invaded my privacy, but I can understand why if there's a potential threat.

FBI spokesman James Knights in Newark said he cannot comment on the suit, 'same as in any investigation. We're not going to confirm or deny

Most of the tampered mail came from the Soviet Union, according to the suit.

In 1984, a year after he began the encyclopedia project as a sixth-grader, an FBI agent visited his North Haledon home and later questioned him on the telephone, the suit said.

The suit also charges that Patterson's First Amendment rights were violated on the grounds that he was being penalized for pursuing his education and expressing himself.

him it had no explanation for the damaged mail, which included torn booklets, empty envelopes, retaped letters and even an opened package containing a letter from Sweden addressed to some one in Wayne whom the youth didn't know

The suit says that when Patterson's father, Edgar, first made a Freedom of Information request in October, he was refused. After an appeal, the FBI released six pages, much of them blacked out and half duplicated.

The rest was classified, according to a Justice Department official.

"He doesn't want them to have a file in the FBI in their subservice files," said ACLU attorney Frank Askin, who is representing Patterson.

"It's not to deface the FBI," Patterson said of the suit. Patterson said he hopes to join the U.S. foreign service some day and his main concern is the effect of the file on that goal.

Patterson also said he is considering enrolling at the State University of New York at Plattsburgh, where he would need a security clearance for their government program internship with the Canadian government. Patterson said he holds no grudge against the FBI

'It's good they looked into it," he said of the investigation into his foreign correspondence, "but at a certain point it's got to stop.

Patterson reviews material he gathered for his homemade encyclopedia.

Court holds journalists for contempt

HOUSTON (AP) - A photographer and reporter with the Houston Chronicle were detained on contempt of court charges after the photographer took pictures of a witness through a glass courtroom door

Photographer Richard Carson and reporter Pete Slover were released on their own recognizance a few hours after being detained Monday and were told to appear at a hearing Friday to show why they should not be held in con-

Harris County Probate Court Judge Pat Gregory said taking photographs through his courtroom door "is an offense to this court" and that a ban on such photographs "has always been my rule.

Gregory said Carson's actions could have distracted jurors.

The use of cameras generally is not allowed inside courtrooms. but television and newspaper photographers regularly have taken photographs through courtroom windows in state and county courts here.

On occasion, judges have had windows covered to thwart that practice. Doors to Gregory's court are equipped with shades, which were not drawn Monday. Carson was not using a flash with his camera.

Chronicle attorney William W. Ogden said Carson was following what he thought was accepted practice at the courthouse and that no court order had been violated since none existed.

Without a prior order, restraint of the photographer would be a violation of First Amendment guarantees, Ogden said.

Carson refused to surrender his film to the judge after being told by a bailiff to stop taking pictures. When Carson chose to be taken into custody rather than hand over the film, he gave it to Slover while both were standing in front of the judge

Slover was then taken into cus-

The judge told the Chronicle's attorney that Slover had attempted to take the film from the courtroom "by sleight of hand." Slover said there was no attempt to conceal the action.

Upon releasing the journalists, Gregory told them, "If the film is published in the newspaper, it will be in further contempt of this court, and I'll deal with that more

The photographs are of Joseph Rumbaut, a witness. A picture of him taken through the glass appeared in the Chronicle today.

'We strongly object to Judge Gregory's attempt to interfere with the Chronicle's efforts to cover the news," said Jack Loftis, the Chronicle's vice president and editor

"By detaining our photographer and reporter and attempting to impound film, he has challenged the Chronicle's rights as guaranteed by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitu-

In the trial, Rumbaut is seeking to have his wife, Ana Marie Rumbaut, 39, declared dead. Rumbaut said he and his wife were on their sailboat when she was swept overboard.

But the woman's sons from a previous marriage are fighting those efforts. Their attorneys claim Rumbaut is a novice sailor who either staged the disappearance of his wife or negligently caused her death Aug. 9 by embarking on a sailing trip to Cozumel, Mexico.

Seattle man shot in scuffle with officer

EL PASO (AP) — A transient was in critical condition early today after he was shot several times after he grabbed an El Paso police officer's gun, authorities said.

Elliott Luce, 30, of Seattle, was in surgery at Providence Memorial Hospital early today. A nursing supervisor said the man was in surgery and a neurosurgeon had been called in.

Officer Pedro Gaytan was not wounded, although his revolver discharged in the holster when the man first grabbed it, Lt. J.R. Grijalva, a police spokesman, Gaytan was relieved of duty, with pay, pending an investigation by a shooting review team, Grijalva said.

The officer was on his way alone to a call at one of the international bridges when he was flagged down late Monday, the spokesman said.

The officer was told that a man had been breaking car windows outside Bimbo's Place, a bar.

The officer stopped him, and had him against the car to search him, when he lunged backward and took the gun from the holster," Grijalva said. "One round went off in the holster as he grabbed for it. They continued to struggle; both were on the ground. The officer managed to level the weapon and fire several shots into the man's midsection."

Reagan: Don't expect quick transformation for Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan praised the Kremlin for making progress across a spectrum of human rights issues but said the West should not expect there will be "a quick, radical transformation of the Soviet system.'

Reagan, setting the stage for summit talks in Moscow with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. said he hoped to conclude a treaty to cut strategic nuclear arsenals before his term expires in eight months but acknowledged that might not be

"It is the requirements of a good treaty and not some arbitrary deadline that will determine the timetable," Reagan said.

Reagan made his remarks in an address beamed across Europe today on the United States Information Agency's "Worldnet" satellite service. The speech was taped Monday in the Oval Office.

The president will leave Washington on Wednesday, bound for Helsinki, Finland, and a four-night stopover before traveling on to the Soviet Union. He will arrive in Moscow on Sunday and immediately launch his fourth summit with Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Gorbachev. Reagan said talks with the Soviet Union must be guided by realism about what can be achieved. 'We do not expect a quick, radical transformation of the Soviet system," the president said, "We do not expect to turn a corner one day to find that all our problems have gone away because our adversary has been transformed.

We must continue to fulfill our own responsibility to stand firm and vigilant, to provide the incentive for a new Soviet policy in contrast to the old,' Reagan said. 'For there still remain profound political and moral differences between the Soviet system and our own," he added.

Reagan and Gorbachev will have five official

Aside from his talks with Gorbachev, Reagan also will meet with monks, dissidents, writers, artists, filmmakers and students, lending encouragement to reforms underway in the Soviet meetings, wrapping up their talks June 1. Later that same day, the two leaders and their wives will attend a special ballet peformance at the Bolshoi leased from labor camps. 'Emigration, still too low, has improved," he

'Many cases of divided families and separated spouses have been satisfactorily resolved. And censorship of films, books and other creative works has eased," Reagan said.

'Yet despite this progress, the human rights situation in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe is far from good," the president said. "Repressive policies persist.

'Peaceful demonstrations by national minorities, refuseniks and others are still being broken up by police," he added. "Freedom of religion is still being denied, and members of unregistered religious groups are still being persecuted.

He also said unofficial publications are banned, dozens of political and religious dissenters remain imprisioned and "many prisoners of conscience are still being held in psychiatric hospitals. Freedom of movement is still restricted.

Reagan said the United States "will continue to press the Soviet Union to improve its practices in these vital areas - in short to grant full recognition of fundamental human rights."

Dukakis defends spending priorities Jackson said his plan would cut

By The Associated Press

Democratic presidential frontrunner Michael Dukakis defended his spending priorities and took a mild poke at rival Jesse Jackson's five-year budget blueprint, saying there's "no way" specific spending can be figured so far in advance.

And Idaho was holding its primary today, but it was a fairly low-key affair.

There were 18 Republican delegates up for grabs in Idaho, but Vice President George Bush's mathematical lock on the GOP nomination has taken the suspense out of the contest. There were no Democratic delegates at stake; most are to be chosen at a state convention next month.

Officials in Idaho said a low turnout was likely. Dukakis was tending to gubernatorial tasks in Massachusetts today, and traveling to Virginia for an evening appearance. Bush was in Washington, preparing to see President Reagan off later this week for next week's superpower summit in Moscow

Since March 1985, the dollar has dropped an average 23 percent against foreign currencies, which benefits U.S. manufacturers of electronic and transportation equipment, non-electrical machinery, leather goods and scientific instruments, said the study.

Since Texas figures prominently in those industries, that's good news for the state, and the Dallas-Fort Worth area in particular, Harvey Rosenblum, senior vice president and director of research at the Federal Reserve Bank,

"As we look upon the lower dollar, what we see is that it will benefit manufacturing (employment) and durable goods the most." Rosenblum said.

'It probably will prove to be the most significant factor in the economic upturn in this part of the country. Dallas-Fort Worth, with its diversified economy, will perform 18 percent above the national average," Rosenblum

The 2-year study released by the Federal Reserve Bank coincides with a similar study recently prepared for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, by economists at Southern Methodist Uni-

'Their conclusions are very much in line with ours," said Bernard Weinstein, director of the Center for Enterprising at SMU's Cox Business School.

Weinstein said SMU researchers tried to quantify job gains that could be attributed to the lower dollar and concluded that at least half of the 79,000 non-agricultural jobs that accrued in Texas since January 1987 were a result of the lower dollar and increasing American competitiveness

One of every seven manufacturing jobs in Texas is tied to exports, Wein-

SMU's study found that while tremors from the oil and real estate collapse are still being felt, and likely will be for some time, Texas' bedrock industries have been in a recovery mode over the past year.

"The ongoing recovery in Texas gives strong testimony to the benefits of an open international economy," the SMU study said. "A more realistic exchange rate for the dollar has helped to revive the state's basic industries and recover some of the jobs lost during the first two-thirds of the decade," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

From 1980 through the first quarter of 1985 — a period of relatively high interest rates — the dollar increased an average 37 percent against foreign currencies, a Federal Reserve Bank spokesman said. That made U.S. exports more expensive and imports cheaper and worked to Texas' detriment.

The Federal Reserve Bank study said the benefits of the lower dollar will not be distributed evenly across individual industries and states, the Federal Reserve Bank said.

Producers of lumber and wood products, pulp and paper, textiles and processed foods are among the manufacturers expected to respond less significantly to recent declines in the dollar.

Nationally, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Michigan and California should be strong performers because of the lower dollar, and the Northern Plain states should benefit the Industry dignitaries and visitors surround the V-22 Ospry tilt-rotor aircraft after it was rolled out of a hanger.

Officials laud first production tilt-rotor aircraft at Arlington

ARLINGTON (AP) — Legislators and military officials hailed as a milestone the unveiling of aviation's first non-experimental craft that hovers like a helicopter and flies like an airplane.

The camouflage-hued V-22 Osprey received a standing ovation Monday when it was towed onto the tarmac at the flight research center of Bell Helicopter Textron Inc.

The Osprey — a tilt-rotor craft — was unveiled before a crowd of 1,600.

"It's kind of awesome," Marine Corps Commandant Alfred M. Gray Jr. told the throng gathered for the presentation. "Yet, in a way, as steward of your Marines for a ew years, it's kind of nice to continuing to do our part on the very frontier of research and development and ultimately helping to keep the freedom of this grand land and the freedom of others throughout the world who desperately seek it.'

Fort Worth-based Bell and Philadelphia-based Boeing Helicopter Co. of Philadelphia are jointly developing the Osprey for the Navy, Marines and Air Force. The three services plan to buy 682 of the twin-engine aircraft at an estimated cost of $16.6 million each.

The first scheduled flight of the Osprey is Aug.

15. "It works, it's ahead of schedule and will be a sound investment for taxpayers' money," said Navy Secretary William L. Ball III, comparing the tilt-rotor's production to the jet engine's development as aviation milestones.

"You are proving every day that a great country can still out-think, out-design and out-produce all medical evacuation and special-forces missions. Other uses, including anti-submarine warfare, are being studied.

'On our abortive rescue attempt made in Iran a few years ago, think what could have happened if they'd had an Osprey," said House Speaker Jim Wright, referring to the 1980 rescue attempt of 44 American hostages that failed when sand caused several U.S. helicopters to malfunction in the Iranian desert.

The Osprey, about the size of a medium transport aircraft, has a stocky fuselage and twin engines mounted at its thick, stubby wings. Its engines point upward during takeoff and landing, with 38-foot diameter rotor blades that parallel the ground.

The engines rotate, or "tilt," forward once the Osprey is airborne. Rotors lock into place and act like oversized propellers, pulling the craft through the air like a conventional aircraft.

The tilt-rotor can fly with the speed and range of a turboprop plane — more than 360 mph — but doesn't require an airport or runway. It also can hover like a helicopter.

"I'm convinced that in the next 20 years there will be thousands of these in use," said Bell President L.M. "Jack" Horner.

Bell has talked with American Airlines and several commuter companies about civilian uses for the craft, a spokesman said.

"The New York Port Authority is a strong supporter of this concept," said Horner. "We could build a lot of V-22s for the cost of one airport." The craft's debut caps more than 30 years of work on tilt-rotor aircraft. Bell's first experimental tilt-rotor, the XV-3, was built in 1955. and an advanced experimental model, the XV-15. has been flying since 1977. The Osprey is the first tilt-rotor aircraft to go into production.

Experts say school programs needed to address teen suicide

AUSTIN (AP) — Teachers should be trained in suicide prevention because they are often the first adults to notice a teen-ager is troubled, the president of the Texas State Teachers Association says.

"The members of the education profession are in a unique position to make a significant contribution," TSTA head Charles Beard told the House

Select Committee on Teenage Suicide Monday. "School personnel very likely may be the first people to notice a change in behavior, the signs of stress that can lead to suicide attempts in young people," he said.

Suicide is a leading cause of death among people aged 15-24, second only to accidents, Beard noted.

The statistics are horrible," he said. "If you have 10 children in your neighborhood, the odds are at least one of them is going to attempt suicide before they're 19 years old."

The education reforms approved in 1984 - including a ban on extracurricular activities for failing students — are among the causes of stress for students, Beard added.

While not recommending lower standards, he noted that "we have consistently raised academic standards, and that's a stress problem. We have to look at the tendency of teen-agers to look at selfdestructive behavior when they're overwhelmed by stress or depression or rage.

Jim Crouch, executive director of the Texas PTA, also said one of his group's legislative recommendations is for suicide prevention training for

The state's teen suicide rate appears to be increasing, said Betty Phillips, supervisor of psychological services for the Austin school district and chairwoman of the district's suicide intervention

Among the reasons for the state increase appear to be economic hardship that leads to family problems and a lack of counseling and hospital resources, she said.

There were five teen suicides in the Austin area this school year, said Ms. Phillips. She said students may see suicide as a more acceptable avenue than it was in the past.

"Our society used to have a taboo against suicide that was very strong. It has been gradually eroded by movies, TV," she said. "It's almost the thing to do these days with adolescents, to talk about suicide. They really do see it as a way to solve their

"That's what we try to deal with, with them suicide is not a good way to solve problems. It's foolish. It's fatal.

The Plano school district got attention when seven teen-agers killed themselves in the 1983-84 school year, noted Sandra Aikins, district counseling coordinator.

"That is a terrible way to become aware of the problem, but it did create a great awareness in our community," said Ms. Aikins. "Schools and communities must work very closely together.

Jury selection begins in murder trial

Council official submits resignation

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — All but five of 70 prospective jurors said they had heard about the case of a woman accused of killing her husband, a prominent Brownsville car dealer.

At the start of jury selection Monday, six potential jurors said they had formed opinions and four said they could not be impartial.

State District Judge Gilberto Hinojosa in February rejected a motion by defense attorney Abel Toscano to move the trial to another city because of excessive publicity.

Susie Mowbray, 40, was indicted Dec. 4 on a charge of killing her husband of eight years. She pleaded innocent at a Dec. 16 hearing. She said her husband killed himself.

Jay William Mowbray Jr., 43, suffered bullet wounds to the right side of the head and left hand early on the morning of Sept. 16, 1987, according to an autopsy report. His body was found in bed, and a

.357-caliber handgun was found at the scene. Investigators and prosecutors have revealed few of the facts in the case

Assistant County Attorney Ed Cyganiewicz told potential jurors that prosecution witnesses will include law enforcement personnel, the doctor who performed the autopsy on Mowbray, an employee and patrons of a local health club, employees of clothing stores at South Padre Island and the Mowbrays' maid.

Many of the potential jurors said they knew individuals involved in the case. One woman said she was the fourth grade teacher of County Attorney Benjamin Euresti, the chief prosecutor.

Mrs. Mowbray, the former Susie Wright, grew up in Shreveport, La., where she was a popular cheerleader and 1966 homecoming queen at Woodlawn High School.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Larry D. Hollis Managing Editor

There's still a ray of freedom in law

In a decision that has been hailed by some as setback to consumers, the Supreme Court this month reaffirmed an often-discounted principle: If you don't like a man's business partners, you shouldn't have to do business with him. Upholding a lower court's ruling, the justices said that a manufacturer's agreement with one retailer to stop supplying a price cutting retailer would not processarily violate. price-cutting retailer would not necessarily violate the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Howard Metzenbaum, chairman of the Senate's antitrust law subcommittee, immediately thundered that the ruling was a potentially "devastating" blow to the ability of consumers to buy at a discount. But it seems more likely that the narrow and technical decision will have little effect on most consumers.

The ruling does not affect competition between brands. It simply upholds the 1973 decision of a

Texas manufacturer to stop doing business with one retailer because it was undercutting the price of another. In the narrow sense of the court's reasoning, as long as a manufacturer's agreement does not mention a price level it does not violate antitrust law. And the court certainly leaves open the chance for a different manufacturer to use the price-cutting retailer to compete with the original firm

There are valid reasons why a manufacturer would not want its product sold at a discount. In this age of designer products, a "discount" image could undercut a well-crafted marketing plan. Too, a manufacturer might want to reward a retailer who offers better repair service and product display at the expense of a discount store that offers little in support or service.

Then, too, there's always the free-market principle that a businessman ought to be able to do business with whom he wants based solely on criteria of his own choosing. The justices weren't ready to go the extra mile and do so in the Sherman Act.

Justice Antonin Scalia, writing the majority opinion, suggested that the main goal of antitrust law in this area is to foster competition between dealers in different brands, not between dealers in the same brands. Thus the price of a Sony television may not vary by much from store to store, but consumers may still find bargains among its competitors —

RCA, Mitsubishi, Emerson, Magnavox.

That's hardly a "devastating" blow to consumers, even by Metzenbaum's overblown standards. Just a small ray of freedom shining through an ofttimes repressive Sherman Act.

Berry's World

HEY, LISTEN - I DON'T REALLY CARE THAT MUCH ABOUT THE STANLEY CUP! YOU CAN HAVE IT. OKAY?

Billy, we know you too well!

The leaves are sprouting, the birds are singing and Billy Martin is making excuses for a nocturnal scuffle in a tavern. It must be spring.

I have nothing but sympathy for New York Yankee fans, who deserve much and get little. It's bad enough that they have to tolerate an impossible city, suffer a loathsome owner and endure a drought of championships that is, by Yankee standards, unendurable. But since Opening Day, they have also been visited with the human pestilence known as Billy Martin, whose affable charm makes Sean Penn look like Willard Scott.

In the age of exploding scoreboards and frozen World Series, detesting Billy Martin is one of the few pleasures left to the baseball fans. Yankee fans are deprived of this modest compensation by the fact that he is usually wearing the same pinstripes that once adorned Babe Ruth and Joe DiMaggio.

I know their sorrow well. This is my first season as an ex-Yankee fan. For three decades I was faithful, a period that included one excruciating 12-year stretch without a pennant. One thing every town shares is a disdain for the Yankees. In four different places where I have lived — Austin, Boston, Washington and Chicago - I have braved hostile local sentiment.

And I do mean braved: I once wore a Yankee cap in the Fenway Park bleachers. Try it sometime, if you want to get your life insurance cancelled.

But at some point loyalty demands too much. It was one thing putting up with the likes of Steve Whitaker, Roger Repoz and Joe Verbanic. Their greatest sin was ineptitude. It's another trying to stomach George Steinbrenner, who on his better days would tax the mercy of Mother Teresa, and who on his worse days hires Billy Martin. Steinbrenner, whose managers are as disposable as plastic dinnerware, can't live with Billy and can't live without him. Martin's record with the Yankees is nearly as long as his rap sheet: hired in 1975, quit in 1978, rehired five days later to return in 1980, only to be brought back in 1979 and then fired again before the year was out, hired in 1983, fired after the season ended, hired and fired in 1985, hired in 1987 for the 1988 season - and so far still employed, though the season is

Stephen Chapman

Martin is 60 but still avoiding maturity. He has three durable habits which tend to combine to produce misforune — drinking, fighting and lying. The latest manifestation, which came in a topless bar in Arlington, Texas, at an unrespectable hour of the morning, left Martin needing 40 stitches in the side of his head and claiming he had been attacked by two men in a restroom.

Martin was not perturbed to hear that no one else interviewed by the police recalled the incident that way. By impartial accounts, he threw the only punch, and then was roughly ejected from the establishment. "I don't care what the police report said," he declared, disparaging the integrity of law enforcement agents. "How many policemen are in jail for lying?"

Billy should know that ordinary lying won't get you a prison term, else he'd be directing his team from solitary confinement. If Joe Isuzu ever goes on strike, Martin is the only person who could take over without boosting credibility. Luckily for him, and possibly because the Yankees are in first place, his boss defends Billy's version. Having George Steinbrenner vouch for your honesty is like having Tammy Faye Bakker praise your grooming.

Not for the first time, Martin solemnly promises to be more careful. In the future, he will take his wife on road trips, which may not keep him out of fights but should keep him out of topless bars

Fortunately, I no longer have to worry where he is spending his evenings, having sworn off the Yankees as long as either Martin or Steinbrenner is associated with them. The sense of liberation is exhilarating: For the first time in years, I don't have to suppress the normal disgust that rises in the human stomach at the mention of either name.

So I've become the baseball equivalent of a refugee, having abandoned one allegiance without the solace of another. Given my geographic location and family influences - my wife and 2-year-old son are committed Cubs fans — I'm probably doomed to become a melancholy partisan of baseball's oldest continuous lost cause. After the Yankees, though, the Cubs don't sound too bad. They're an embarrassment, but only on the field.

Why don't I get some help?

It was big news that Johnny Carson returned to The Tonight Show.

Know why? Because he had to do the show without benefit of his eight writers, who are on Eight writers? Johnny Carson has eight writers for the short monologue he does at the beginning of each of his shows.

It only took a few more than that to write the

But Carson said he couldn't stand being off the show any longer and would come back even if it did, indeed, mean he had to write his own stuff. I think Johnny Carson is funny, and I've been a fan of his for years, but what's all the fuss about a guy who makes $20 million a year having to write his own material for a change. Why don't I have eight writers to help me with

Why don't I have just one writer?

"Gildenham," I could say, 'I'm off to the golf course. Finish my Friday column and leave it on my desk before you go home.

Think of all the material newspaper columnists have to come up with all by themselves day after day, week after week, and month after

I don't know a one of them who makes in a year what Carson pays in alimony each month. And let's say Carson's eight writers have a bad day. Nobody could think of anything funny for him to say.

No problem. Carson has made a career out of telling jokes that aren't very funny. It's his delivery that makes you laugh.

But some poor newspaper columnist sits over a typewriter (or computer screen) half a day at The Daily Planet trying to think of a thousand words that make at least some sense and-or evoke a chuckle.

The column runs the next day and the managing editor doesn't like it, and just like that, the columnist is back on the copy desk

What I'd like to see Johnny Carson do — or anybody else used to having a stable of writers is write a newspaper column for a while. Not every day. Let's just say three or four times a week. Here's the way that works:

You're sitting there. Alone. There's nobody to turn to. There are no eight writers to help

You glance through the paper looking for an idea. There's Jimmy Swaggart, but you wrote about him two weeks ago. Reagan? You've worn him out, too.

Deadline is getting closer. You sweat. You put another handful of Maalox tablets in your mouth. You wonder why you didn't go to law school like your parents wanted you to. I'm a rookie in the column business — 11 years. But many others are still going strong after much longer than that, and they're still responsible for all their material, even what they steal.

A colleague once said, "Writing a newspaper column is like being married to a nymphomaniac. The first two weeks, its fun.

Give me eight writers and I'd be on a permanent honeymoon.

What's next for him? Astral projection?

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Well, you could have knocked me over with a yellow clipping of "Your Daily Horoscope. Ronald and Nancy Reagan are about the last people on earth I'd have suspected of caring where the earth was in relation to other planets, much less consulting its position to see if it was a good time to sign a nuclearmissile treaty.

It's not that I'm saying an interest in astrology is anything to sneer at; it's just such a liberal idea. Astrology is commonly associated with the leftish fringe; harmonic convergents, for heaven's sake.

And I use the word "heaven" in the more traditional sense, not in the more recent portrait of astral projection and near-death experiences, where one hurtles down a tunnel towards deceased loved ones. But the whole idea is hardly the province of the conservatives, much less the conservative fundamentalists, the champion of whom is Ronald Reagan. Talk about astrology at the National Association of Religious Broadcasters, and they'll exorcise you off the podium. The ramifications of an evangelically supported politi-cal leader living by Linda Goodman's Sun Signs is mind-boggling.

If a right-wing conservative leader of the free world can espouse as ethereal an idea as astrology, what's next? Reagan astral-projecting him-self to a sleeping Mikhail Gorbachev and whispering in his ear of arms treaties? Consider the possibilities of the Moscow Summit held on a mountaintop when the planets are right. The negotiators hold hands, consult a few Mayan gods, hum a little, and come up with a plan for world peace. I can think of worse ways to negotiate. Like The People's Court, for example.

Extend this idea, if you will, to the boardroom. Or the staff meeting. Instead of months of subterfuge and scorekeeping, culminating in shouting matches and threats of demotion, we could consult the stars, see whose birth signs match up, maybe all go out in the yard and stand next to an evergreen tree for psychic energy, and wait for inspiration to come. If the idea did catch on with the right-wing crowd, maybe prayer in school would take a back seat to a daily reading of the newspaper horoscope over the school intercom. Tests could be postponed to a better day. Ditto athletic contests and cheerleader tryouts. "A Nation At Risk" would be seen as just a mass national achievement test taken on the wrong

Could this finally mean the political merging of liberal and conservative factions? Rather than seeing each other as archenemies dedicated to the overthrow of America, we'd forge a whole new view of compatibility. We'd ally ourselves according to positions on the great planetary scheme. "Well, if you're a Pisces, then, hey, OK. How can we not get along?'

And here I thought we were over the "What's your sign?" times. I thought most of us, especially people like the Reagans, had pitched that line out with heavy gold chains and polyester shirts open to mid-navel.

Or perhaps the Reagans were otherwise occupied during the era some of us were experimenting with astrology and other beliefs now lumped into the history we call the '60s. Maybe they discovered it just as we forgot about it.

How ironic. While the Reagan kids were trying things like ballet and yoga, the Reagans were throwing campaign fund-raisers and thinking the kids were weird. Now the kids are buckling down to careers, and the folks are consulting the stars.

Delvalle opposes U.S. negotiating tactics with Noriega

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is now facing protests from exiled Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle for its handling of negotiations to get Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to resign.

At the same time, the administration is displaying weariness with the prolonged negotiating process and said it hopes an agreement can be reached before President Reagan leaves Wednesday for the Moscow summit.

In a statement issued Monday from hiding, Delvalle and his allies said the negotiations with Noriega, as reported in the media, "would mortgage the future of Panama for a long time to

The statement was issued through the pro-Delvalle Panamanian Embassy in Washington by Delvalle and Panama's "democratic forces."

The administation's chief Panama negotiator, Michael G. Kozak, was ordered back to Panama late Sunday by the White House to continue negotiations with Noriega even though Vice President George Bush has counseled against any dealings with drug dealers, whether foreign or domestic.

Delvalle was forced out of office after he tried to fire Noriega as head of the Panamanian Defense Forces. Delvalle continues to receive U.S. backing as the legitimate president of Panama, but the statement indicated he believes the administration has made too many concessions in its negotiations with Noriega.

It said Noriega would be able to to continue to exercise authority even after resigning as defense chief unless the Defense Forces are revamped.

The embassy statement also demanded the "immediate exit" of Noriega from Panama, suggesting unhappiness with the August departure date now

The U.S. officials have said that, as foreseen in the negotiations, Noriega would leave Panama in August and return after the May 1989 presidential elections. They said Noriega would have a hand in the selection of an interim government which would serve until after the elected government takes office.

The embassy statement called for Delvalle's reinstatment as president and for the formation of a government of national reconciliation.

Noriega, the de facto Panamanian ruler who is under drug-smuggling indictments in the United States, has successfully resisted prolonged U.S. pressure to force him out.

There is a sharp division within the administration over what kind of deal Noriega should be offered, and particularly whether the government should go ahead with an offer to drop the drug charges

Reagan said nothing had been settled and that there was not a timetable for concluding a deal. But Under Secretary of State Michael Armacost said it would be desirable to reach a settlement before Reagan's departure for Finland on Wednesday. He is due in Moscow on

Gun ban in Maryland likely to trigger a ferocious battle

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) - Maryland has become the first state to ban the sale of inexpensive handguns, including "Saturday Night Specials," but voters probably will have the final say on whether the law actually goes into effect.

With 200 police officers from five states present, Gov. William Donald Schaefer on Monday signed the law forbidding manufacture and sale of the weapons

"This is the first time a legislature has stood up and said, 'These guns are wrong,'" said Schaefer. Well before the ceremony, opponents were gathering signatures to hold a referendum on the law in November's general election. "I'm confident that we are going to have the numbers that we need for the ballot," said Fred Griisser, spokesman for the Maryland Committee Against the Gun Ban. The committee must have the signatures of 33,044 registered voters by June 30 to put the issue on the ballot. Griisser was less confident about the outcome of a referendum, saying gun groups face "an uphill battle" in explaining the law's "true nature" to

He said the statute bans all handguns, not just Saturday Night Specials, and complained it does not require that any guns be approved for sale by a review board established by the law.

Gun control supporters said Maryland's law and the expected referendum are crucial to efforts to ban Saturday Night Specials in other states.

"It's important that we win. It's critical, and I'm sure we will win," said Sarah Brady, who attended the signing ceremony with her husband, White House press secretary James Brady.

"I'd like to see other states like dominoes fall into line," said Brady, who was wounded by a Saturday Night Special in John Hinckley's 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

Brady has been in a wheelchair ever since. Mrs. Brady accused the law's opponents of spreading false information that the bill would ban all handguns, and said it is aimed only at Saturday Night Specials.

The Bradys joined state leaders and 200 uniformed police officers from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and West Virginia on the steps of the State House for the signing.

Schaefer called the measure a step toward stopping "the senseless killing on our streets."

Saturday Night Specials have been used to kill 250,000 people and wound 11/2 million in the last 20 years, said Mrs. Brady, who called the law "a great step for public safety."

The law makes it illegal after Jan. 1, 1990, to sell or manufacture a gun in Maryland unless it is on a list prepared by the newly created nine-member review board. The law does not mention Saturday Night Specials, but directs the board to exclude easily concealed, inaccurate, unsafe and poorly made handguns.

The law also allows the board to ban plastic guns that can be slipped through metal detectors. Manufacturers can be fined up to $10,000 and dealers and gun owners up to $2,500 per violation.

Each time a gun is made or sold constitutes a separate violation. Mrs. Brady, who has been campaigning for tougher gun laws since her husband was shot, said Maryland's approach solves the difficult problem of trying to define Saturday Night Specials by leaving the decision to a review board. The board will consist of three civilians, the superintendent of state police and one representative each of a state prosecutors association, the Maryland Association of Chiefs of Police, Marylanders Against Handgun Abuse, the National Rifle Association and a Maryland gun manufacturer.

Fires force evacuations in Los Angeles and Houston; blast in Virginia injures 16

By The Associated Press

Industrial fires in Los Angeles and the Houston area forced the evacuation of thousands of people, including 200 who sought shelter at Dodgers Stadium. An explosion at a Virginia computer parts plant injured 16.

Los Angeles authorities evacuated up to 11,000 people Monday because they feared a lethal gas might form from cyanide and other chemicals stored at a plating company destroyed by fire. officials said. There were no injuries, and no chemical cloud was reported.

A laboratory fire in South Houston ignited toxic chemicals and cylinders of compressed gas, injuring 26 people, forcing the evacuation of 600 and causing nearly $1 million in damage, officials said. Most of the injuries were

The fire destroyed Builders Hardware Finishers Inc. in a heavily industrial section northeast of downtown early Monday. A 14-square-block area was evacuated later in the morning after hazardous materials crews determined the chemicals were unstable, said Fire Department spokesman Jim Williamson.

By evening, at least 11,000 people had been moved, said police Sgt. Mario Mojarro. However, Fire Department spokesman Greg Acevedo put the number closer to 3,800

The Red Cross set up an evacuation center with overnight accommodations under the centerfield bleachers at nearby Dodger Stadium. About 200 people showed up.

"I'm not going to be able to sleep, because I haven't seen my husband, and my husband doesn't know where I am," said Maria Cruz, who was at the stadium with her small son.

The fire caused an estimated $340,000 in damage to the building, Williamson said. The cause was under investigation.

In South Houston, fire officials monitored the charred Caleb

Brett USA Inc. chemical-testing facility today for signs of any lingering risk to the area from Monday afternoon's fire.

"It was a very big problem because we don't know what we're dealing with," said Fire Chief Jim Sybert. "We don't know what's contaminated.

It already is widely used in Britain and other countries and has been tried by about 50,000 U.S. women in clinical trials sponsored by the National Institutes of Health.

The cap, approved Monday, is a flexible, cup-like rubber device about 11/2 inches in diameter that is to be fitted by a physician to cover the base of the woman's cervix

After the initial fitting, the cap can be inserted and removed by the user and can remain in place for 48 hours, as opposed to a maximum of 12 hours for the diaphragm.

Both devices are to be used with a spermicidal cream or jelly, but the cap does not require additional spermicide before each instance of intercourse.

The NIH clinical study found the cap to be about 85 percent effective in preventing pregnancy, comparable to the diaphragm.

o sign of arms treaty on Supreme Soviet agenda

MOSCOW (AP) - The 1,500 deputies of the Supreme Soviet parliament opened their spring session today with an agenda that focuses on domestic issues and does not include a vote on ratifying the superpower missile

Such a vote is not required by Soviet law, but could have been used to ratify the treaty before the Moscow superpower summit between Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan, which begins Sunday.

Gorbachev and the rest of the Kremlin leadership filed into an ornate cream-colored hall of the Grand Kremlin Palace shortly before 10 a.m. for the beginning of today's legislative session. The Supreme Soviet, a rubber-stamp body that gives force of law to decisions already taken by the Communist Party leadership, then adopted an agenda that focuses solely on domestic con-

On Monday, the foreign affairs commissions of both houses of the bicameral Soviet parliament endorsed the superpower intermediate-range nuclear missile treaty and called on the Presidium, the nation's highest executive body, to ratify it.

The pact banning medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles was signed by Gorbachev and Reagan at the Washington summit on Dec. 8 and does not become legally binding until it is ratified.

The Soviets have repeatedly indicated that they are in no hurry to ratify the treaty before the U.S. Senate does.

Viktor P. Karpov, head of the Foreign Ministry's arms control and disarmament desk, told Western reporters on Monday that his country should not act until approval by the Senate is certain. "We should be sure that we are not alone," Karpov said. At least 67 of the 100 U.S. senators must ratify the treaty before it becomes binding on the United States, and a small band of opponents have shown no

Babies of Texas prisoners in limbo

A record number of babies are being born in Texas prisons and no state agency has the authority or funds to deal with these "children in limbo," officials say.

Gatesville warden Susan Cranford said recently a record 65 babies were born to women serving time in Texas prisons last Legally, these newborn victims of crime are nobody's baby.

The infant can wind up as a ward of the state unless a relative or friend volunteers to rear the child. If the babies become wards of the state, mothers who want to regain custody after they get out of prison must first prove in court that they are fit parents.

State officials say they don't know who should decide where the baby is kept while the mother is in prison and no state agency has legal authority or funding to handle the job.

Officials cited the case of a woman who recently gave birth to a child and will have problems when she get out of prison if she has to go to court to reclaim her baby

Among other considerations. the judge will take into account her 1980 conviction for injury to a child. The woman told The Dallas Morning News she plans to tell the judge she wasn't responsible for the death of her infant daughter when she was 17.

Department of Human Services officials say they lack both the legal authority and the funding to accept responsibility for prison-born infants.

In the past, they have done cursory investigations and made placements "as a courtesy" to the Texas Department of Correc-

But child welfare officials say they have been overwhelmed by a steady increase in the number of women in prison and the spiraling increase in the number of prison births and may want out of the prison baby business.

The number of women in Texas prisons rose from 760 in 1975 to 1.240 in 1980 and almost 1.800 last

In 1983, 29 babies were born to Texas inmates. That number jumped into the 50s a year later and into the 60s in 1985. Last year, according to Cranford, a record 65 children were born to inmates.

'The numbers are growing quite a bit," said Jim Marquart, assistant commissioner of protective services for the Department of Human Services. "The Legislature gave us a clear message of the kind of cases we should be involved in, and that's abuse and neglect."

Prison officials say they are even less qualified for the role of child care supervisor.

'We're as poorly suited as anybody to deal with those kinds of problems," said Kirk Brown, an attorney for the Texas Department of Corrections. "We don't have any legal relationship with the child one way or the other."

Amarillo-Lake Marvin bike tour to benefit MS

The Panhandle Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society has announced the dates for their First Annual Wild West 150 Bike Tour, July 30-31

"What's so wonderful about this bike tour," said Cindy Dawson, bike tour coordinator, "is that it is a chance to see parts of the Panhandle, such as the old wagon train and military trails, that have made the West what it is today. Also, each participant will receive a T-shirt from Bud Light, a water bottle from Hill's Sport Shop in Amarillo, and a cycling cap from Mason's Pro Frame Shop, along with a few other terrific prizes.'

The tour is open to individuals and teams. Teams are comprised of four cyclists. There is a $15 registration fee and a minimum of $150 in pledges ($1 per mile) required from each participant.

Funds raised help scientists nationally to research the cause and cure of multiple sclerosis and help provide patient services in the Panhandle area. The Amarillo MS Society chapter provides equipment loan assistance, support groups, peer counseling, an information and resource center and support for research into the cause and cure of MS.

MS strikes the central nervous system of young adults between the ages of 15 and 50, causing difficulty in walking, talking and seeing. Over 250,000 Americans have this debilitating disease, with 200 new cases each week.

Over 85 tours are conducted by chapters of the Multiple Sclerosis Society throughout the year across the United States.

The Amarillo tour will begin at 7 a.m. Saturday, July 30 at the Fifth Season Inn East, on Interstate 40 at Nelson Street in Amarillo. Registration begins at 6 a.m., and a continental breakfast will be offered courtesy of the chuck wagon at the Fifth Season

After the first day of cycling, bikers will enjoy facilities provided by the City of Canadian and will be taken to the Arrington-Parsimmon Creek Ranch for an authentic Western hoedown.

On Sunday, July 31, a full breakfast will be provided by Canadian Rotary Club before beginning the second day of biking. Cyclists will stop for a special lunch and will then continue to Lake Marvin, the end of the journey, where those completing the course will celebrate with a special powwow. Transportation back to Amarillo from Lake Marvin will be provided for cyclists and their bikes.

An awards party will be held for participants. Special prizes in addition to those described above will be given to those raising $2, $3, $5, $7 or $10 per mile, and for those raising $2,000 or $3,000. A grand prize of a trip for two to anywhere in the continental United States serviced by Delta Airlines will also be awarded, courtesy of Creative Travel.

For more information on the Amarillo to Lake Marvin tour. write the Panhandle Chapter at 1416 W. 8th St., Amarillo, 79101, or call the chapter office at 372-4429. Brochures on the bike tour are also available at Dunlap's in Coronado Center.

Lakers stun Mavericks

Worthy, Scott lead LA attack

By BERNIE WILSON AP Sports Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. - The Los Angeles Lakers have been virtually invincible in opening games of playoff series. But all of a sudden, they find second games a little scarier.

"Our objective is not to get full of our ourselves because we won Game 1 like we did against Utah," Lakers coach Pat Riley said Monday night after Los Angeles beat the Dallas Mavericks 113-98 in Game 1 of the NBA Western Conference final.

"Dallas will be better in Game 2," Riley said. "I want my players to get some rest and then to be disciplined and only think about Dallas. It's easy to get distracted.

"We can't assume it will be easy at home. We really have to take care of business on our own floor.' Game 2 is Wednesday night at the Forum. The series then shifts to Dallas for Games 3 and 4 Friday and Sunday. The winner will meet the Boston-Detroit winner. Those teams open the Eastern Conference final series Wednesday night in Monday night's victory marked the 10th consecutive time the Lakers have won the first game of a playoff series. Riley implored his players not to follow the bad example they set in the conference semifinals, opener but then lost the second game.

"We won't take them too lightly," said Lakers guard Magic Johnson, who had 19 points and 12 assists against the Mavericks. "Only five minutes after the game, Riley already had reminded us of Game 2 in the Utah series.'

James Worthy scored 28 points, Byron Scott 23, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 17 and A.C. Green 14 for the Lakers, who are trying to become the first team to repeat as NBA champion since the 1969 Boston Celtics.

For the Mavericks, making their first appearance in the conference final, Roy Tarpley had 18 points and 20 rebounds, and Mark Aguirre and Rolando Blackman had 18 points apiece. Derek Harper added 17 points.

The Mavericks know what adjustments need to be made. The Lakers, who led 52-49 at halftime, got their fast break going in the third quarter.

Worthy, Scott and Green had three baskets each - and two of Scott's were 3-pointers — as they built a 76-63 lead. Los Angeles led 80-69 at the end of the quarter.

'We wanted to come out and make a statement to start the second half but instead we came out lax and allowed them to dictate the action," Blackman said.

We hit our first shot (a hook by James Donaldson) to start the second half and thought we were in good shape," Tarpley said. "But then they took advantage of all our mistakes."

Abdul-Jabbar, who made five hook shots in the first half, includwhen they humbled Utah in the ing four skyhooks from the same spot on the baseline, hit the Lakers' first basket of the third

"We stayed on top of them until they couldn't get back in the game," Abdul-Jabbar said. "I don't think we surprised them with anything. They had time to prepare for us."

Dallas had three days off after beating Denver on Thursday night to clinch that semifinal series 4-2. The Lakers, though, were stretched to seven games by Utah and didn't wrap up the series until Saturday afternoon.

"It says something about the Lakers that they just finished a tough series against Utah and they were able to come back and play as well as they did in this game," Dallas coach John Mac-Leod said.

hope the Utah scenario repeats itself for the Lakers."

But, MacLeod added, "I just

It could have repeated itself in the second quarter.

The Lakers took a 41-32 lead on Michael Cooper's 3-point shot with 9:45 to play before halftime, but Dallas went on a 15-1 run capped by Blackman's long jumper at 4:22 to take a 47-42 lead.

The Lakers had missed nine straight field goals before Abdul-Jabbar hit a sky hook at 3:53 to start an 8-0 run that gave the Lakers a 50-47 lead.

Broncos closer to deal for Dorsett

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett says he could be traded to the Denver Broncos as soon as this week, when the Broncos make a new proposal on his hefty con-

A new Denver contract proposal — which would retire Dorsett's $6 million annuity — is expected , in the next few days, Dorsett said Monday.

'I think we may know something, one way or another, very soon," Dorsett told The Dallas Morning News. "I'm hopeful that we're close to working something

The latest plan put forward by Dorsett's agent, Witt Stewart, reguires Denver to purchase an insurance policy that, when cashed in, would fund Dorsett's remaining annuity payments, the newspaper said.

We're trying to work out the deal as far as the financial situation is concerned," said Denver head coach Dan Reeves.

Stewart could not be reached for comment Tuesday and declined to speak Monday, saying he was reluctant to jeopardize negotiations. Cowboys' president Tex Schramm, who must also don't have their own.

approve a trade deal, was scheduled to be in Miami Tuesday for an NFL owners' meeting.

Dorsett has requested a trade because he is unhappy with his secondary role to running back Hershel Walker in the Cowboys' offense

Dorsett's annuity, which pays him $300,000 per year for 20 years beginning five years after he retires, has been a hurdle in past trade talks.

In the first three years of Dorsett's present five-year contract, the Cowboys have paid $600,000, or $200,000 annually, to fund the annuity.

The Cowboys have insisted as part of any trade deal that the Broncos fund the remaining $400,000 in payments over the next two years. Previously, Denver has refused that stipulation.

The insurance policy would cut the Broncos' cost of funding the annuity, but Dorsett's return would stay about the same, the Morning News reported.

In addition to the annuity payments, Dorsett, 34, receives $500,000 base salary each of the next two years under his Cowboys' contract.

BOSTON — The Boston Bruins are down to their last chance and their backup goaltender in the Stanley Cup finals. "I think we need an emotional lift," Boston coach Terry O'Reilly said, explaining why he was starting No. 2 goaltender Andy Moog in tonight's game against the Edmonton Oilers.

The Bruins are down 3-0 and one game away from an embarrassing sweep by the high-riding Oilers and O'Reilly figured that Moog could regenerate his failing Moog, a former Oiler who left Edmonton under acrimonious circumstances, played well against his former teammates in Game 1 of the series which the Bruins lost 2-1.

"Since Andy used to play for the Oilers, I figured he would have plenty of motivation," said O'Reilly, looking for some kind of a spark to get the Bruins going. "He played well in the first game and that showed that he was on his game." After Moog lost Game 1 of the series, No. 1 goaltender Reggie Lemelin had no better luck in Games 2 and 3. He lost a 4-2 decision in Edmonton and then 6-3 in Boston Garden on Sunday. Lemelin, who led the Bruins into the playoffs and then starred in earlier series, wasn't at his best on Sunday night. But the Oilers certainly were.

'The bottom line is that we're playing a great team that's playing great hockey," O'Reilly said of the Oilers, who have a 15-2 record in the playoffs.

O'Reilly not only felt the Oilers have been better, but betterrested, as well.

'They have had shorter series because they have been playing well," O'Reilly said. "We made the mistake of going seven games against New Jersey. I thought we should have beaten them ear-

The seven-game series against the Devils gave Boston the Wales Conference championship. But it proved to be a detriment to the Bruins in the Oiler series, as far as O'Reilly was concerned. "The Oilers have had a lot of rest in between their series and we haven't had that much," said O'Reilly, whose team has so far played 21 games compared to the Oilers' 17.

O'Reilly was also troubled by injuries, particularly one to Michael Thelven. The Boston deof the game Sunday night, the Bruins played with only four defensemen and the Oilers took advantage of it by running their opponents into the ice. The Oilers, meanwhile, have had everything going their way so far in the series. That's largely because of their fine defense, which has been unheralded until recent times. "I'm impressed with how well defensively they've played,' Boston's Ken Linseman said. 'They've done a real good job.' Known primarily as a scoring machine, the Oilers have been able to adapt their team to all kinds of circumstances in the playoffs. In the finals, they've basically played Boston's game with a tight, defensive discipline.

"We've won three Stanley Cups with our defense," center Mark Messier said. "It's like the Super Bowl ... the team with the best defense wins. And we've been winning our Stanley Cups the Maybe if the Baltimore Orioles faced Dave Stewart more often they might have baseball's best record instead of its worst.

Mike Boddicker ended his team-record 13-game losing streak Monday night and the Orioles beat Stewart and the Oakland Athletics 7-3.

The Orioles, 9-34 overall, won their third straight game and defeated Oakland's ace for the second time in 11 days.

Boddicker, 1-8, got his first victory since last Sept. 4. Stewart fell to 8-3. "There were games I should have lost, but there were some games I should have won, too -
