Reagan leaves for meeting with Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan left today for his fourth meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, extolling advancements in superpower relations but pledging "to go still farther" in the interests of freedom and peace.

'We have many differences — deep differences, moral differences," Reagan told a White House departure ceremony minutes before he left for the Moscow summit, which begins Sunday and ends four days later.

But we are still fellow human beings. We can still work together to keep the peace. And in working with the Soviet Union, the United States can still remain true to its mission (of) expanding liberty throughout the world," Reagan said.

Several hundred people were escorted onto the South Lawn of the White House to witness Reagan's departure remarks. Under a steady rain, Reagan spoke as an aide held a black umbrella over him. First lady Nancy Reagan stood next to the president, sheltered from the rain by an umbrella held by a second aide.

But the umbrella failed to keep the president dry. His wife was overheard remarking to Reagan,

"Honey, you're just soaked."
He answered, "I know it." She then asked, "Why didn't you put on a raincoat?" His answer was not

Before leaving for a stopover in Helsinki, Finland, the president asked for the prayers of Americans "as I embark on this great task."

"Since my first meeting with Mr. Gorbachev, ... we have come a long way," Reagan said. "My task in the next week will be to go still farther, farther in the interests of peace. Farther toward a universal respect for fundamental human rights. Farther toward world freedom. Farther toward a safer world for all people," Reagan said.

Reagan was leaving without a ratified U.S.-Soviet treaty banning medium-range nuclear missiles, the highlight of his last summit in December with Gorbachev.

The pact is still awaiting Senate approval and White House chief of staff Howard Baker is staying behind in the hope the Senate may act and the treaty can be rushed to Reagan before he meets

Several of Reagan's own conservative colleagues have stalled action on the pact, arguing it is one-sided and does not address concerns about potential Soviet cheating.

But Senate leaders moved Tuesday to halt debate. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., told Reagan on Tuesday that "in all likelihood, the Senate will be able to act on the treaty by Friday.

The president, summing up his four-part agenda for the May 29-June 2 talks with the Soviet general secretary, noted in his departure remarks that he and Gorbachev have "plenty of work" to do.

The next stroke is the County Commission's after Pampa city commissioners approved a supplemental agreement on the contract for the municipal golf course development.

In their regular Tuesday night meeting, city commissioners took a swing at the attempt to satisfy possible legal objections raised in a letter from Mark Brown of the Texas Legislative Council.

Brown, in his letter to Rep. Foster Whaley, expressed concerns about the county's continuing role in what is ostensibly to be a joint project between the two governing entities. He also raised questions about the possible benefits for the county in the golf course development.

City Attorney Don Lane said the supplemental agreement to the original contract is a result of talks with Gray County Attorney Robert McPherson in efforts to answer Brown's expressed con-

Trade bill backers expect uphill fight in Senate on veto

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate backers of a major trade bill are expecting an uphill battle to find enough votes to override President Reagan's veto, in striking contrast to the quick and overwhelming House vote to reverse the president's action.

"We have to have another three votes at this point and I don't know where they are going to come from," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, a chief sponsor of the 1,000page trade measure.

The Senate is expected to take up the legislation after it returns from the Memorial Day recess.

Reagan's veto of the legislation on Tuesday came as no surprise. He has been critical in numerous speeches of a provision that would require companies to give employees 60 days notice of plant closings and large-scale layoffs. He has said that businesses need flexibility to survive hard times. In his veto message to Congress, Reagan repeated that argument. "I support voluntarily giving workers and communities as much advance warning as possible when a layoff or closing becomes necessary. ... It is the humane thing to do.

'But I object to the idea that the federal government would arbitrarily mandate, for all conditions and under all circumstances, exactly when and in what form that notification should take place.

The president urged lawmakers to submit a revised version trade bill that he could sign in good conscience.

Within hours of Reagan's veto, the House voted, 308-113, to override it. That was far more than needed to be successful.

Sixty Republicans broke with Reagan to vote for the override, while only one Democrat, Robert J. Mrazek of New York, supported the president.

The plant-closings measure is among scores of provisions contained in the bill. The main ones would overhaul the U.S. system of import restrictions. Others range from repealing the windfall profits tax to adding billions of dollars in agricultural subsidies.

Democratic leaders have argued that patching together a stripped down trade bill might be tough before Congress leaves town for the campaign trail.

Uncertain of override prospects in the Senate, many Democrats focused on making the debate a campaign issue.

Pampa city commissioners Tuesday gave the green light for proceeding with plans for "Pampa: 2000," a joint strategic planning effort with the schools, Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce and Pampa Industrial Foundation.

The strategic planning program is an effort to involve the community in setting goals and priorities for the governing bodies and other organizations in the city.

City Manager Bob Hart said Glen Hackler, assistant to the city manager, had done most of the work on the training manual being developed for the

Hart said no action was needed on the manual but he just needed to know if the staff should proceed with the plans. The commission gave its consensus to pursue the plans, though the commissioners will be looking at it further in work sessions. Hart said he had also sent a copy to the Pampa Independent School District and expected the trustees to be looking at it. The purpose of "Pampa: 2000" is to identify and develop a set of strategies to guide the actions of

The process, according to the manual, aims at developing a community consensus through various task forces soliciting citizen input in at least nine areas: economic development; transportation; housing and neighborhoods; education; recreation, open space and cultural affairs; health, safety and human services; urban design, land use and environment; utilities; and government struc-

With representatives of the four participating bodies forming a steering committee, subcommittees will be formed to investigate each of these areas, address pertinent issues and recommend goals and priorities.

In other items Tuesday night, Cleo Meaker used the citizen's request period to request that the commission consider rescinding its previous decision regarding the proposed widening project for Hobart Street.

Meaker claimed he has a petition with 1,100 signatures asking that the commission consider the request for rescinsion of the decision to proceed into the design stage for the Texas Highway Department project to widen the street and to place the item on the next regular meeting agenda. Mayor David McDaniel said the request will be considered at next Tuesday's work session for inclusion on the agenda.

But, he said, he thought the original motion, approved by the commission last month, stated that the matter will be considered throughout the design stage, with a public hearing held before a final decision is made.

Meaker, who has been an outspoken opponent of the project, said he and others signing the petition 'would like the whole order to be rescinded." He said he would like to see the highway department "totally reconstruct Hobart" but only after working with state and federal authorities to gain

Meaker, who owns Meaker's Appliances on North Hobart, and other Hobart merchants have expressed concerns about the proposed elimination of angle parking from in front of stores, saying there is not a major safety concern on Hobart from the angle parking.

Other merchants also have expressed concerns about a proposed continuous left-turn lane, saying it would be more of a safety hazard than the present angle parking. Hart said the highway department will be meeting with merchants during the design phase and has already indicated its willingness to have a public hearing on the matter.

McDaniel said the commission will take the request under consideration.

In other business, commissioners: presented certificates of appreciation for service on advisory boards to Bruce Riehart and Randy Stewart, Parks and Recreation; Dudley Steele, M.K. Brown Auditorium; and Jim Ward and Kenneth Smith, Board of Adjustment; decided to maintain the present time and dates for work sessions:

adopted a resolution expressing appreciation to the Friends of the Library for their service and contributions to Lovett Memorial Library;

adopted a resolution approving the option of installment payments for delinquent tax collections; adopted policy guidelines for disposal of property in delinquent tax foreclosures in which the city serves as a trustee;

deferred awards of bids for grass seed and PVC pipe until the county acts on the supplemental agreement for the golf course development:

reappointed the following advisory board members: Jay Johnson, Planning and Zoning Commission; Lynn Bezner, Sara Carmichael and Larry Cross, Traffic Commission; and Ray Thompson, Bob Williams and David Miller, Board of Adjustments; and appointed Bill Hallerberg as alternate board member for the Board of Adjustments; and approved the April list of disbursements.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz held out the hope Tuesday that the strategic arms treaty can be completed before Reagan leaves office in January. On human rights, Reagan lauded Soviet advancements such as the loosening of emigration restraints and the release of political prisoners. Reagan said he intended to "see that the positive trends ... continue and the reforms are made permanent."

On regional issues, Reagan noted that the two countries have signed the Geneva accords outlining the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan and that the first withdrawals have begun. But he said he would be looking for Soviet actions to help advance negotiations on problems in Angola

Deficit decline steepest in 5 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit shrank by 12.7 percent from January through March, the biggest improvement in five years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department reported that the difference between what the United States imports and what it exports totaled $35.9 billion for the first three months of 1988, down from a deficit of $41.2 billion in the last three months of 1987.

The 12.7 percent decline represented a dramatic turnaround in a deficit that has steadily worsened over the last five years. It was the biggest quarterly improvement since an 18.9 percent decline in the fourth quarter of

The new figures confirmed an improvement that had already shown up in the department's monthly merchandise trade reports. The earlier figures showed a 16.4 percent drop in the deficit to $36 billion in the first quarter, compared to $43.1 billion in the fourth quarter. Today's figures are smaller because they subtracted factors such as the cost of shipping and insurance and military sales from the monthly numbers. The balance-of-payments deficit is also adjusted for seasonal variations; the monthly figures are not.

The improvement in the first quarter reflected the fact that exports climbed faster than imports, although both hit all-time highs Exports jumped 9.8 percent to

Department of Human Services caseworkers could have prevented the deaths of at least three children, witnesses told the committee Tuesday, and several added they feared for the lives of other children because of DHS inac-

But child welfare officials defended their agency, and told the Senate Health and Human Services Committee that they are hampered by high turnover and heavy caseloads.

County Attorney Joe Lucas, who has asked Attorney General Jim Mattox to investigate El Paso's DHS office, cited several cases that demonstrated what he called the agency's callousness and ineptitude.

In one case Lucas cited, a 16-year-old girl testified before District Judge Enrique Pena last January that DHS caseworkers knew she was a prostitute and that her mother was giving her heroin, but the agency did not intervene.

In a tongue-lashing to the DHS, Pena at the time said he had opened the usually closed courtroom proceedings to reporters "so that they can report to the people that pay your salaries what a lousy job you are doing in this com-

Lucas also mentioned the case of a 10-year-old boy who, with the knowledge of DHS caseworkers, slept in ditches to escape his father's beatings at home. In another incident, a 15month-old boy died of massive head injuries just two months after he had been hospitalized for an earlier skull frac-

Lucas and two other people talked of one of the most notorious cases, in which two young boys were killed on Christmas 1986 when their father set fire to the family's house with the boys inside. The father then killed himself.

The boys, 18-month-old Aaron Perry and his 4-year-old brother, Ian, had been in and out of foster homes, sometimes at the request of their father,

"It is my opinion that the kids died at the hands of the people responsible for their welfare," said Sandra Barraza, a day-care center operator who took care of the boys for a few weeks.

One of the foster parents who briefly took care of the boys, Melinda Dowdle, testified that DHS officials lied when they said Dale Perry never threatened

"There's nothing I can do to bring back those boys," she told the panel tearfully. "But I hope that by coming here today, I can prevent it from happening again.'

DHS officials said they didn't want such incidents to recur either, but blamed heavy caseloads. Child protective services caseworker Raymond Sweisford said the backlog of cases forces employees to "put out brushfires" instead of paying equal attention to each case.

"It becomes Band-Aid work ... reactive instead of proactive," he said, adding that citizens often misunderstand the agency's role, which is to protect children and also to keep families intact whenever possible.

"We cannot go out and prevent things we don't know will occur," he said.

There are a lot of good and positive things we accomplish that people aren't aware of. Our agency does deserve better and I think we've gotten a bad rap. One woman, Gloria Mirabal, said the DHS had retaliated against her for persistently pursuing the alleged abuse of her grandchildren at the hands of her daughter and the daughter's boyfriend. Ms. Mirabal, who runs a DHSlicensed foster home for adults, said DHS workers trumped up charges that she was abusing the people at her home, and threatened to remove them.

DHS employees say that can't comment on such allegations because of confidentiality laws. Former DHS employee JoAnn Widens said such laws are frustrating because "in many cases we could refute what's reported in the press or said by judges.'

AMARILLO (AP) - An advisory board has challenged the Amarillo Globe-News' advertising policy, citing the rejection of an ad critical of a reporter's alleged involvement with a controversial underground newspaper at West Texas State Uni-

The rejected ad, which WTSU's Ex-Students Association offered to several Panhandle-area newspapers, included a story and editorial from the school's student newspaper, The Prairie, linking Globe-News reporter Jason Akst with the

The story, published May 4, said that Akst approached a local resident for the use of her postmail addressed to the underground newspaper. An e Prairie editorial staff felt that conflict of interest, and we had informed von Netzer about it and he did nothing. Only after we printed the story did he take Jason off the beat," she said.

Meanwhile, the paper's advisory board wrote a letter in Sunday's Globe-News that said the decision not to run the ad was inconsistent with earlier publication of controversial advertising.

The advisory board was created to help defuse a campaign mounted against the newspaper by Panhandle Citizens for a Better Amarillo Newspaper. With the support of oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr., PCBAN had called for subscription and advertising cancellations.

On Sunday, the group cited the decision in February to run a strongly worded ad bought by a group called SAFE — Students, Alumni and Faculty for Education at West Texas State University.

That ad harshly criticized Roach's administration, and SAFE, along with the anonymous publishers of the underground newspaper, was later named in a libel lawsuit filed, and later dropped,

"In studying the facts involved in both cases, the forum perceives that there is not only inconsistency involved in these instances, but there is also bias by the newspaper," the letter said.

But von Netzer said that while the alumni association's ad was presented as factual, the SAFE ad stated an opinion.

Alumni association President Daryl Curtis said, We felt there were some obvious problems in how the Globe-News had covered West Texas State University. All we were trying to do is just make people aware that no matter side of the issue, they needed to be aware that there was some biased reporting on the part of the Globe-News.'

Von Netzer said the ad wasn't rejected because it disparaged the Globe-News, noting that the Globe-News accepted ads from PCBAN and printed numerous letters critical of the paper.

Trade bill veto another blow to oil patch, congressmen say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The troubled oil industry took another blow with President Reagan's veto of the massive trade bill, which calls for repeal of the windfall profits tax, say members of the Texas congressional delegation.

'The windfall profit tax obviously isn't going to be repealed unless we can get further trade legislation. That's going to be extremely difficult," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a Texas Democrat. "We may find some other piece of legislation to try to attach it to, but at this point, I don't have one.

Although the House voted 308-113 to override Reagan's veto, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., acknowledged that the Senate would not override the president when it considers the veto early next month. Both chambers must muster a two-thirds margin to override the presi-

"There's no question that at a point in time when they (the oil industry) are looking for any sliver of news, any glimmer of hope that it's going to get better, the president knocks them back to the ground," said U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur

"And the ironic thing is that the president cites repeal of the windfall profits tax as one of the good things in the bill as he vetoed it," said Chapman, whose East Texas district is a longtime oil produc-

A spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute said the group was disappointed by the veto but vowed it would "continue to work for the elimination of this counterproductive levy, which discourages exploration for reliable domestic sources

"The provision repealing the tax may well be the most important item affecting the U.S. imports in the trade legislation," the spokesman said.

"If this tax had never existed, this country's daily production of oil would be some 900,000 barrels a day higher than it is now. This would mean fewer petroleum imports and a reduction of about $6 billion a year in payments for foreign oil at current

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said oil imports account for the biggest part of the nation's trade deficit, and pledged to work for a new trade bill that would be acceptable to Reagan, while still containing repeal of the windfall profits tax.

'It can happen this year and I believe it will happen," Gramm said. 'I'm committed to working to seek it happen," said Gramm, who will vote against the override. Bentsen has said the tax has bled $74 billion from the industry, and costs the industry about $100 million a year to comply with its reporting requirements. The tax kicks would kick in at about $19.50 a barrel if oil prices were that high now - but producers must complete the paperwork regardless of whether the tax is being paid.

Texans in the House voted largely along party lines in overriding the veto — with all Democrats voting for the override along with two Republicans Reps. Larry Combest and Mac Sweeney.

Republican Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo did not vote, while voting against the override were Republican Reps. Bill Archer, Dick Armey, Steve Bartlett, Joe Barton, Tom Delay, Jack Fields, and House Speaker Jim Wright, who by tradition seldom votes, cast his vote with the rest of the Texas Democrats for the override. The other Democrats casting votes from Texas with the majority were Reps. Mike Andrews, Jack Brooks, John Bryant, Albert Bustamante, Chapman, Ron Coleman, Kika de la Garza, Martin Frost, Henry B. Gonzalez, Ralph Hall, Marvin Leath, Mickey Leland, Solomon Ortiz, Charles Stenholm and Charles

Condom companies battle for rights to 'rubber ducky' name and founder of Rubber Ducky Inc. says he was cheated when a Massachusetts company got trademark rights to market condoms under that name.

Steve Finley said Tuesday his company, of suburban Irving, came up with the idea before the Marshfield, Mass., company.

Finley filed a complaint Monday in federal court in his bid to win exclusive rights to the name more commonly associated with bathtub toys and public television's "Sesame Street."

Rubber Ducky Inc. uses the name to promote condoms, Tshirts and other items, an idea Finley said he came up with last July, beginning a national campaign on Texas beaches during spring break. But Dianne Giles said she and her sister came up with the Rubber Ducky idea in 1986 and began selling condoms with that name in March 1987. Her company obtained a U.S. trademark registration April 19.

DALLAS (AP) — The president Ms. Giles contends Finley was the one who stole the idea and says she may countersue.

"We had the idea first, we got the trademark rights first and we feel like we've really been violated here," she told the Dallas Morning News. Finley's complaint, however, argues that Ms. Giles has lost exclusive rights by not using the name to sell a product. He says his research has not validated her claim that she is already selling "Rubber Ducky" condoms.

"The whole argument right now is only on the condom. I own the shirts, stickers ... They are not arguing about that," Finley Finley said he also has filed a complaint with federal authorities to overturn Ms. Giles' trademark registration.

His duck is a worldly, cartoonish character, while Ms. Giles said hers is more subdued and inspired in part by feminist feelings that traditionally packaged condoms are "too macho.

AIDS clinic director resigns after judge orders expanded treatment DALLAS (AP) - The director of the AIDS clinic at Parkland Memorial Hospital resigned only four days after a state district judge ordered the hospital to expand its medical for AIDS patients. Dr. Daniel Barbaro's resignation was announced Tuesday by officials of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center. He resigned Monday, officials said.

Dr. Stephen D. Nightingale, an associate professor in internal medicine at Southwestern and a former director of the AIDS clinic at Cook County Hospital in Chicago, was named as his successor.

Barbaro could not be reached for comment, the Dallas Morning News reported today, but said several of his colleagues said he resigned because he was fearful of being blamed for the AIDS clinic's staffing shortages and patient backlogs.

The problems prompted a discrimination lawsuit by the Dallas Gay Alliance.

Alliance leaders, who have praised Barbaro's work, said they believe he will become "the scapegoat" for Parkland's legal problems.

"Parkland is looking for a way out of this, and Dr. Barbaro would be a convenient scapegoat," said alliance president William Waybourn. "That would be tragically unfortunate, because he was the one who has gone to bat for all those patients." Barbaro, 35, had served as director of the clinic since June 1986. He had acknowledged that the clinic needed more physicians, and threatened to quit in late 1986 before UT Southwestern assigned a second doctor to handle the increasing patient

Barbaro also had pressed for a number of changes that subsequently were sought in the civil

How things change in a 20-year period

What a difference 20 years makes!

Twenty years ago the radicals who would become the Chicago Seven were laying the groundwork for the riots at the Chicago Democratic Convention.

Many of those who were subsequently indicted for their part in that and other protest events flaunted their indictments, even wore them as a selfproclaimed badge of honor.

Meantime, other young Americans were serving in the armed forces in Vietnam. Many served with courage and distinction.

This month, one of the former Chicago Seven, California Assemblyman Tom Hayden, faced a demonstration at his own home in Santa Monica, organized by a Vietnamese immigrant group called the International Human Rights Watch. He confronted the 25 demonstrators armed with a baseball bat, much as the Chicago police wielded their night-

All right, so the papers say he was on his way to coach a Little League game. How much more establishmentarian can you get? Mayor Daley would have chuckled knowingly.

Meanwhile, on the other side of the continent, one of those who is still proud of having been a U.S. serviceman in Vietnam was proclaiming that he had been indicted in an honorable cause, and he publicly wore the accusations against him as a "badge of honor." Former Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North spoke to graduates of the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Liberty University with his usual unapologetic feistiness.

North is slightly better known for his role in diverting funds from the sale of arms to Iran to support the Nicaraguan contras than for his service in Vietnam. But he sees the two as connected within the overall fight against Communism.

Hayden's political career represents something of a continuum as well. It just seems his time of believing that sometimes you have to go "above the written law" came when he was younger. Now he concentrates on writing laws. Unfortunately, few of the laws he writes express what seems to be a gut in stinct even for him — to protect private property from encroachment by vandals. As a state legislator, he has become part of institutionalized van-

Lie detectors are a bad truth

WASHINGTON — Nothing but good intentions can support the pending bill on lie detectors, and good intentions are not enough. The truth is, this is a bad bill. It probably will pass, but it ought to be vetoed and a veto ought to be Sponsors of the legislation make a persuasive case. More than 2 million polygraph examinations will be given this year, 98 percent of them to persons in private employment. A witness for the Americal Medical Association testified that the results of such examinations are "only somewhat better than chance." Another witness estimated that polygraph machines wrongfully hang a lable of "liar" on at least 400,000 honest persons every year.

A Senate report described the problems. A standard polygraph records changes in blood pressure, respiration patterns and sweat. By analyzing a chart of these changes, the operator reaches conclusions of the honesty or dishonesty of the person being examined.

The physiological data may be quite accurate, "but there is no evidence that these recorded changes are unique to deception." Such factors as "anger, fear, anxiety, surprise, shame, embarrassment and resentment can cause identical changes.

The House passed its version of a lie detector bill by a vote of 254-158 last November. The measure would effectively ban such tests in almost all private employment. Under strict controls, polygraphs could be used by law enforcement agencies in connection with criminal investigations, but only to supplement evidence obtained in other ways. The House bill permits use of the machines by security firms employed to protect currency, precious commodities, toxic waste shipments and public utilities

On March 3 the Senate approved a similar bill. Since then, conferees have worked out the differences. The result is a very tough act - and in my view, a very bad act.

The bill is based upon contradictory premises. The principal argument in its support is that polygraph tests are unreliable. But the Senate bill would exempt defense contractors. They could require that employees take lie detector tests before being hired. It is a curious kind of reasoning that finds polygraph tests too unreliable for use by a department store, but finds them sufficiently reliable where screening really matters

A second objection goes to the hypocrisy of the measure. It would exempt all governmental employees, including congressional staffs. The defensive argument is that these workers are constitutionally protected from invasion of their privacy; thus no statutory ban is needed. But sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander. If Congress wants to prohibit private employers from using polygraphs, the same prohibition ought fairly to apply on Capitol Hill.

one version or another, the bill would require federal licensing of polygraph operators. The provision violates every sound principle of federalism. Occupational licensing historically, traditionally, has been a function and prerogative of the states. Doctors, dentists, nurses, teachers, lawyers, plumbers, electricians, even barbers and cosmetologists are subject to state licensing requirements. Federal licensing is a totally bad idea.

It is precisely because of federalism that this well-intentioned bill should be rejected. The field of polygraph examination provides a perfect example of the virtues of our 200-year-old system of government. This is a legislative field in which the states should have power to experiment - to find out what works and what doesn't

And the states have in fact been active in this area. Twenty-two states and the District of Columbia already have laws that forbid the use of polygraphs, and 19 other states have laws that firmly regulated their use. The pending bill would have Congress saying to state legislatures everywhere, "Behold how much wiser we are than you are." Humbug! The notion of superior wisdom in Washington is a notion, believe me, that takes a vast deal of swallowing.

Nothing disastrous will happen if the bill dies a slow death by sustained veto. The states will continue to monitor the situation. They are quite capable of protecting honest workers from the adverse consequence of "false positives." A great American tradition is to yell that "there ought to be a law." Maybe so. But that doesn't mean that there must always be a federal law.

There's only so much to do

It is instinctive in animals and in all rational humans to respond instantly when a baby cries. This built-in alert system is necessary for survival of the species. Increasingly, however, the system is being overloaded by an amplified cacophany of cries - some from great distances - outnumbering our responses - diminishing our sensitivity to all sounds of distress.

Television brings home to us a tiny Turkish girl, born without eye sockets, with only skin covering where eyes should be. You are told it will take much money to pay for an unprecedented operation that might implant one eye, give her some sight.

Another child stares at us from the TV screen or the evening newspaper — 4 years young born with a liver disease that will soon kill her. Her only hope is a liver transplant that will cost $100,000. Her family has no health insurance. A fund-raising drive is launched in her behalf.

Demonstrators, including the mayor of Berkeley, Calif., are shown chaining themselves to a federal building demanding more money for victims of AIDS.

A West German man has been injured in a bus accident in Colorado. He has had seven brain operations. Continued long-term care will cost Marcus Lang thousands of dollars, which he doesn't have. The governor of Colorado is on the NBC Nightly News asking for financial help.

Here is the problem which these media stories exacerbate. Our compassion is limitless; our resources are not

On any given day there are 8,000 to 10,000 people awaiting donor organs. Over one two-year period in just one major transplant program, more than 100 patients die while on waiting lists.

While these personal media appeals are a natural evolution of our times, the six-figure cost of most life-saving technologies for all who need them is beyond the limits of our most generous response

And while the media seeks to be "fair" in its allotment of time for political views, there is no equal access available for tens of thousands who are equally deserving.

And less dramatic ailments get no attention at all. Pressure bedsores generate staggering disability and cost, yet you see no nursing home victims on TV.

If an individual can enlist the aid of a Hollywood celebrity - or even the President of the United States -- he or she gets a transplanted organ at the expense of many who may have waited much longer.

Houston physician Eugene Boisaubin says that such "media appeals are based on emotion rather than reflection, on sentiment rather than reason.'

He suggests that the money spent on immediate dramatic, lifesaving events — would relieve more suffering and save more lives if directed, instead, to establish organizational appeals that funnel donated funds into research, remedies and prevention.

But things do change in South Africa!!

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Under the rules of engagement laid down by our liberal media for reporting news from South Africa, no good news is permitted. For that, you see, would run counter to the official liberal version of the situation in that beautiful country: i.e., that it is ground under the heel of a white racist regime that is determined to deny political rights to its black majority

The truth, however, is far otherwise; and as the South African government makes cautious progress toward a multi-racial policy (in the teeth of bitter opposition from its right-wing foes, incidentally), the strain of squaring liberal mythology with the developing facts becomes ever greater.

Thus, when State President P.W. Botha recently affirmed his belief that recognized black leaders should be included in the electoral college that chooses the state president, our liberal media faced a serious prob-lem. How could that bare fact be reported, yet be instantly minimized to maintain the impression that nothing substantial had happened, or would ever happen as long as the present government remains in power?

Botha had begun with a brief review of the rights South African blacks already have - rights, incidentally, that not one American in a thousand today knows they have: "As regards the various black communities outside the self-governing territories, we believe that provisions should be made for their political participation inside the republic. For this purpose, provision has already been made for autonomous local governments for these communities.... Through these authorities, they also participate meaningfully in regional services councils. At the provincial level, they are represented on the provincial executive committees, in the same way as the other population communities.

"A logical step that should follow, is to consider further forms of selfgovernment and autonomy for these communities. Black communities outside the self-governing territories increasingly demand structures that would afford them participation in governing processes. The government also deems it important that progress be made with the constitutional development of these communities."

A few paragraphs further on, discussing how the state president should be elected, Botha answered a questioner by saying, "I agree that black leaders should also be part of the electoral college. The state president becomes their state president, and it is not right that WE tell THEM that he is the state president." He also called for reforms that would enable blacks to serve in the national cabinet.

One would think that such statements would be welcomed by any healthy minded observer as important steps on what is clearly going to be a long road toward constitutional reform. But the American media fell. all over themselves to be seen as pooh-poohing them. The entire account in USA Today (America's most given-away newspaper) consisted of two sentences: "In a speech to parliament Thursday, Botha proposed that blacks be allowed to help choose the president. Apartheid critics say the proposal is not very meaningful.

The New York Times account was more extensive, but carefully noted that Botha's proposals "fell far short of demands by anti-apartheid leaders." (What do you suppose the Times would say if Gorbachev proposed to let certain non-communists participate in choosing the Soviet head of government? That the proposal "fell far short of demands by anit-communist leaders"?)

Liberals the world over are absolutely determined, not only that nothing the South African government can do (short of abdicating) shall ever be deemed enough, but that no steps it takes toward reform shall ever be treated as seriously encouraging or hopeful. They have, if the truth be known, a large investment in the prospects for catastrophe in South Africa and they mean to protect that investment. They have prophesied disaster, they are working hard for it, and they are in no mood to hear good

Elderly woman kept drugged,

ATLANTA (AP) - For almost four months, an elderly widow was kept "doped up" and barred from contact with the outside world by a couple authorities say bilked her out of more than $100,000 in savings.

One day, however, Lucille Knight managed to slip a note to relatives 500 miles away in Hammond, La., and a sheriff's deputy eventually rescued her from the Ringgold, Ga., house that was her prison.

Mrs. Knight went back to the Hammond trailer where she was kidnapped and waited for word that her tormenters had been caught. Now, almost two years later, a Georgia couple has been charged with federal fraud, kidnapping and conspiracy.

Terry Lee Barrett, 29, and Alice Virginia Barrett, 31, were indicted May 10 by a federal grand jury in Atlanta, U.S.

They were arrested Saturday in New Orleans, and are being held on $100,000

"They destroyed everything I had," the 83-year-old Mrs. Knight said Tuesday in a telephone interview from her Hammond home. "They kept me doped up most all the time I was there. I couldn't stand up; I couldn't walk; I couldn't do anything.

The widow's ordeal began Feb. 3, 1986, when a couple she barely knew came to her trailer park home in Hammond. She says she woke up three days later in Ringgold.

Mrs. Knight said she had met Mrs. Barrett only once, on a visit the previous Christmas to Ringgold, where Mrs. Barrett had cared for Mrs. Knight's brother, Everett Joiner, for several years.

Larry Black, then captain of detectives for the Catoosa County Sheriff's Department, said Tuesday that Mrs. Knight's neighbors remembered seeing her carried from her mobile home, but friends or relatives who would call to check on her were told she was sick, or at the doctor's.

Louisiana authorities apparently were reluctant to pursue the case, believing it was a domestic dispute rather than a kidnapping, Black said.

Mrs. Knight said that one day she finally managed to get her brother to mail a letter to her niece, Barbara Wittie, in Louisiana.

'He took it out to the end of the driveway, waited for the mailman, bought a stamp from him and got him to mail it.' Mrs. Knight said.

The letter brought her niece to Black, who said he went to the house on June 5, found Mrs. Knight and "told her that her relatives were here and asked her if she was OK.

Eventually, he said, he took her to his patrol car because she was obviously in ill health and frightened. He later notified the FBI.

Black said he returned to the house a week later and the Barretts had left. He believes they traveled to St. Louis, Virginia and back to Louisiana.

The indictment claims the Barretts stole $101,875.72 in all, depositing the money in a Chattanooga, Tenn., bank in the name of Barrett Bakery and Barrett's Cajun Bakery and Deli.

It alleges they forged Mrs. Knight's signature on Social Security and retirement checks from California, and gained access to her savings accounts, using the money for their own purposes. The Barretts administered Valium, Quaaludes, Percodan and laxatives to keep Mrs. Knight under control, according to the indictment.

"I didn't know they had taken everything I had" until Black rescued her, Mrs. Knight said. She has been living in Hammond ever since, and said she has suffered no lingering effects from the

At the time of the rescue, Black said. he asked Joiner if he wanted to leave, but he refused. Joiner has since died and is not mentioned in the indictment.

Mrs. Knight's niece said that Joiner had given Mrs. Barrett his power of attorney and may also have been under the influence of the couple, the Const tion reported today. If convicted, the Barretts could be sentenced to life in prison and fined $2 million. Barr said they will be arraigned in Rome, Ga., in a few days.

Senate counting on final vote Friday to meet summit deadline

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate headed toward a likely Friday vote on the superpower medium-range nuclear missile treaty, as an overwhelming majority prepared to use its muscle to limit delaying tactics of a few dissident law-

"The die is cast," said Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind. "There is no doubt the treaty will be approved for ratification.

The Senate's Democratic and Republican leaders filed petitions on Tuesday to limit debate on the treaty and force it to a vote in time to present the ratified document to President Reagan for his summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, which begins Sunday.

Reagan was leaving Washington today for the summit, with a stopover in Helsinki, Finland.

At the same time, meetings were scheduled for today in an effort to work out a deal to let treaty opponents offer and debate their amendments, but still provide for a vote on final approval Friday in time for the summit.

"I get the feeling that maybe the time has come now to get this done," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., after meeting with the leader of treaty opponents, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Reagan, meanwhile, was looking ahead to the next arms-control treaty, one he hopes will call for massive reductions in U.S. and Soviet arsenals of intercontinental nuclear missiles. He said he hoped such a pact could be reached before his term expires in January.

"It is the requirements of a good treaty, and not some arbitrary deadline, that will determine the timetable," Reagan said in an remarks broadcast on the government's "Worldnet" satellite service.

The treaty, which requires elimination within three years of all U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles with a range of 300 miles to 3,400 miles, requires 67 votes for Senate approval. Estimates of Senate support for the measure range from 87 to 95 votes, so its ultimate outcome is not in question.

The Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty, as it is known, would result in the elimination of 867 U.S. missiles in Europe, and elimination of 1,752 Soviet missiles.

But Helms and a few other conservatives have sought to delay the measure, raising questions about the validity of intelligence data on the numbers of some Soviet missiles and the crafting of the treaty language. They have offered a series of amendments since the treaty was brought up last week, all of which have been defeated by overwhelming margins.

"Both sides fouled up on this treaty," Helms said during Tuesday's debate. "My conscience will not allow me not to pursue the obvious defects."

But Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and Dole filed motions Tuesday to limit the debate, and a vote on that matter was scheduled for sometime Thursday. It was considered virtually certain to win the 60 votes needed to cut off debate, and that would set up a vote on final approval of the treaty

Doctors: Signs that chemotherapy may help in controlling lung cancer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Doctors reported finding the first tentative evidence that chemotherapy may be able to help control lung cancer, the nation's leading cancer killer.

Four studies presented at a medical conference produce at least a hint that platinum-based drugs, combined with radiation and sometimes surgery, may help prolong patients' survival.

None of the research suggests anything close to a cure for lung cancer, but doctors are encouraged by any improvement in a disease in which survival is measured in months, rather than

'There is no effective therapy for the vast majority of patients," said Dr. Robert Capizzi of Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C.

He said this makes the latest research, presented Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology, potentially important.

"There is the possibility that drugs may, for some subset of patients, have important effects," he said. "We don't have a prescription to be offered to the masses. We have important new leads for controlled clinical

About 150,000 new cases of lung cancer are diagnosed each year. The four studies were conducted on people with non-small cell lung cancer, which accounts for about three-quarters of all cases.

The most encouraging results were presented by Dr. Robert O. Dillman of the Scripps Clinic of San Diego.

Like the other studies, his was conducted on people whose cancer was too extensive to be removed surgically but had not spread beyond the chest. Typically, such people are treated with radiation, which slows but does not stop the disease.

He treated 240 patients with radiation and chemotherapy or with radiation alone.

He estimated that half of the patients receiving the combination would still be alive after one year, compared with one-third of those who got only radiation.

"Our study is the first to show that chemotherapy may help at all in non-small cell lung cancer," Dillman said.

While the treatment may represent an advance, he said, "this is not going to be enough. More clinical trials will be needed to improve survival in this dis-

Dr. Roscoe Morton the North Central Cancer Treatment Group in Rochester, Minn., conducted a similar study using different chemotherapy drugs. However, in this attempt, the drugs did not help people live longer.

"We were not able to influence the outcomes by chemotherapy in addition to radiation," he said. The other studies used chemotherapy plus radiation to shrink tumors so they could be removed surgically. In one, directed by Dr. Gary M.

errorist threat comes from North Korea, elsewhere

WASHINGTON (AP) - North Korean terrorism poses an "extraordinary potential threat" to the 1988 Summer Olympics, but security forces are prepared to prevent outbreaks of violence that might mar the games, a highranking State Department official said.

Even if the Olympics weren't being held in Seoul, South Korea, there would still be worries about Sikh terrorism. Armenian terrorists, the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Irish Republican Army, the Japanese Red Army and the Italian Red Brigades, Undersecretary of State Edward J. Derwinski said in an interview Tuesday.

Derwinski, who has been representing the United States in international Olympic discussions, also said Fidel Castro's decision to keep Cuba out of the games reflects the Cuban leader's 'screwed up" sense of priorities.

In the past few months - since accusations of North Korean complicity in the Nov. 29, 1987, bombing of a South Korean jetliner with 115 people aboard - security officials have expressed concern about North Korean efforts to disrupt the Olympics.

Asked about the threats of such North Korean terrorism, Derwinski said, "we're taking them with total seriousness, logically so."

There has been tight security at the Olympics since 1972 when PLO gunmen killed members of the Israeli team at the Munich games, but this time there is added worry because of "the extraordinary potential threat posed by the North Koreans," Derwinski said.

North Korea's realization that South Korean organizers are planning the games "in a very excellent fashion" has "increased the frustration and bitterness of the North Koreans," Derwinski added.

As for other possible terrorist threats, he said, "you have this increase in Sikh terrorism, the lashing out at almost any Indian; the Armenian terrorists periodically try attacks on Turks; the IRA and their activities; the PLO — going back to Munich — all of these are inherently out there: the Japanese Red Army, the Italian Red Brigades."

He said South Korea has been working on security since 1984 and should be able to handle the job when the games are held Sept. 17-Oct. 2.

"I see no probolem that I would attribute to indifference or complacency, he said. "The problem would be just how efficient the overall operation is, pitted against whatever actions a couple of terrorist groups might take."

Despite the concern about North Korean disruption efforts, Olympic organizers are keeping the door open to that country's participation in the games, even though the official deadline for signing up passed in January.

Cuba, Vietnam, Nicaragua, Seychelles and Ethiopia have also failed to sign up for the games al' ough Derwinski said some Cuban parucipation cannot be ruled out.

Castro has forged close ties with North Korean leader Kim Il Sung.

Derwinski said, "If Castro were being practical rather than having a dogmatic, we're told, special relationship with Kim II Sung, he'd have in mind the excellence of the Cuban boxing team, their volleyball team, their men's handball team, some of their track and field people, plus baseball.

Kerosene burns at tank farm, prompting massive evacuations

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) - At least 20,000 people fled in panic when a 40-foot-tall kerosene tank caught fire at an oil tank farm in this northern city, threatening adjacent tanks. It was 10 hours before residents could return home.

No serious injuries were reported in Tuesday's blaze at the storage facility operated by the government oil monopoly Pemex in a residential area. Authorities said some firefighters suffered minor burns in the eight hours it took for them to bring the inferno under control.

About 900,000 gallons of kerosene were in the steel tank when it ignited in an explosion at about 10:10 a.m. (12:10 p.m.

The government news agency Notimex said area residents had been protesting the tank farm's presence and the tanks were to have been relocated months ago, but new facilities have not been completed.

conflagration threatened 14 other tanks on the farm that were filled with millions of gallons of gasoline. Fire and smoke spiraled more than 150 feet above the plant.

Fearing the worst, authorities evacuated people living around the plant. One estimate said as many as 200,000 people fled their homes. "There were all kinds of accidents in the road. The whole city was running (away from the site)," said Luis Alonso Hernandez, 26, who works at the plant. "You could see the flames and black smoke from miles away.' Chihuahua, 230 miles south of El Paso, Texas, has 550,000 residents and is the capital of Chihuahua, the largest of Mexico's 31 states. The cause of the fire was under investigation, but company officials said maintenance work was going on at the time of the explosion.

"What we do know is that two men were soldering to repair a line at the base of the tank and that the top part extez Coronado, a plant spokesman.

"There was an explosion but it was very muffled, and then the fire started," said plant foreman Arturo Rubio. Pemex workers and firefighters used water and foam to douse the blaze and cool off a nearby gasoline tank scorched by the flames.

'The danger lasted about five hours," Rubio said. "It was a question of cooling off the other tank.'

Notimex said four tanks were "very close" to the burn-

It quoted the local fire chief as saying soldiers, police and volunteers evacuated more than 100,000 people from a twomile radius around the plant.

Notimex later gave its own estimate of 200,000 people evacuated and said hundreds of soldiers and rescue workers helped in the effort.

Union entered the Afghan war in December 1979.

Gen. Alexei D. Lizichev, head of the army and navy political departments, also told a news conference in Moscow that 311 Soviets "disappeared" during the war. They are believed to have been captured by rebels or to have deserted.

The figures, through May 1, were higher than Western sources had estimated. A U.S. State Department report in late 1987 estimated there had been 33,000 to 38,000 casualties, about a third of which were deaths.

Lizichev's casualty figures were in line with a Soviet journalist's statement May 19 that news reports estimating fatalities between 12,000 and 15,000 were "more or less correct."

That comment from Novosti press agency observer Eduard Rosenthal was believed to be the first official estimate of the losses in Afghanistan. Lizichev said 9.500 of the Soviet officers and troops in Afghanistan have left their bases since the pullout began May 15. He refused to give a figure for the Soviet force in Afghanistan before the pullout began, but Western estimates say they numbered about 115,000.

Lizichev held fast to the Kremlin position that Soviet intervention in Afghanistan's civil war was justified. "Soviet troops had been invited to Afghanistan by the government," Vorontsov said. "That is a fact. This cannot be reassessed.'

Asked whether the re'reat signaled an end to the Brezhnev Doctrine, the Kremlin policy developed under late leader Leonid I. Brezhnev of military intervention to protect socialist revolutions, Vorontsov said past practices do not apply to the new Kremlin.

Vorontsov said the Soviet armed forces are committed to protecting allies but did not make clear whether that protection extended to ideological

Lizichev said Soviet policy has not changed, that it was only recently that there were conditions that allowed the Kremlin to leave Afghan government troops to fight on their own against the Moslem

Soviet officials and the state-run media have cast the pullout as a successful conclusion to an intervention that has inflicted heavy damage on international relations as well as on the Soviet

Marcos hospitalized in guarded condition

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos was hospitalized in intensive care because of chest pains, officials said.

Marcos, 70, was listed in guarded condition Tuesday night at St. Francis Medical Center, and was undergoing tests, said Eugene N. Tiwanak, the hospital's assistant administrator.

He began suffering chest pains during the day. After an hour-long interview with Allen Neuharth, chairman of the Gannett newspaper group, Marcos continued to feel the pains. The family consulted with Marcos' personal physician and it was decided he should be taken to the hosital for a checkup, said Arturo Aruiza, Marcos' chief spokesman.

Marcos was taken to the hospital by car at about 8 p.m. Tuesday, said Aruiza.

There were unconfirmed reports Monday that Marcos' health was deteriorating, but his spokesman, Gemmo Trinidad, said at the time Marcos was healthy, although still grieving the death of his mother. "He's admitted that he's feeling ill — that he is not well," Aruiza said at the hospital. Also at the hospital was Marcos' wife, Imelda, who was wearing her customary black dress and Mrs. Marcos left the hospital through a side door and appeared to be escorted by four people. She told them, "Thank you so much for coming." Asked if Marcos was going to be all right, she replied, "Yes, I think so. I hope so."

Marcos was hospitalized briefly at St. Francis last October during which a parathyroid gland was removed to ease chronic pain in his legs, doctors

Jury selection continues in woman's murder trial

BROWNSVILLE (AP) - A prosecutor told prospective jurors they must not be swayed by the youth and attractiveness of a woman accused of killing her husband, a prominent South Texas auto dealer.

"It is easy to feel sorry for her; she's a pretty, young woman,' prosecutor Ed Cyganiewicz said Tuesday as an exhaustive jury selection process went into its second day in the murder trial of Susie Mowbray.

Mrs. Mowbray's defense attorney, Abel Toscano, also asked prospective jurors to treat his client "like any other defendant," not taking into consideration that she is rich, beautiful or whether she deserves any wealth she may have.

Mrs. Mowbray's 43-year-old husband was found mortally wounded in their second-story Los Fresnos bedroom last Sept. 16 with bullet wounds in the head and hand. Toscano said evidence will show that the shooting was a selfinflicted wound.

Mrs. Mowbray, the former cheerleader and homecoming queen from Woodlawn High School in Shreveport, La., recently told the Shreveport Times she met Bill Mowbray when she had car trouble during a visit to see her parents in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

So far state District Judge Gilberto Hinojosa has imposed a gag order on the opposing sides to keep them from discussing the case outside his courtroom.

Democrats make campaign issue of veto

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Hours after George Bush campaign aides tried to explain to House Republicans when things would start going right for the vice president, President Reagan vetoed a trade bill the Democrats were itching to make an issue in the fall presidential campaign.

Michael Dukakis, the Democratic presidential nominee-to-be, fired off this response Tuesday when the president's veto message reached Congress:

"Any administration that is willing to give General (Manuel) Noriega 120 days notice and a plea bargain ought to be willing to give the American worker 60 days notice before they are thrown out on the street.'

The Massachusetts governor was referring to the provision that would require companies to give workers and communities notice before closing plants.

Reagan said he thought giving such notice was "the humane thing to do" but he objected to making it mandatory

An AP News Analysis

"I don't really see it as a campaign issue," said Rep. Guy Molinari. "I could be wrong." The chairman of the Bush campaign in

New York, Molinari was one of 60 Republicans who deserted the president and voted to override the veto. The House voted 308-113 to override the veto, but Senate Democratic léaders have predicted the president will prevail in that chamber.

The Democrats certainly are betting it will be an issue in the fall campaign. "I happen to think it's a better issue for the Democrats than for the Republicans," said House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas. House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., asked, "Why hand it to us on a silver platter?"

Like the president, Bush appeared to be walking a narrow line on the trade bill. During a recent campaign appearance, he even had kind words for the Massachusetts plant closing law that Dukakis often cites.

The trade bill veto came on the same day that Bush campaign aides were getting encouragement from House Republicans for his recent moves away from Reagan, specifically on the Noriega negotiations.

Disagreeing with the idea of dropping drug charges against the military leader and de facto ruler of Panama is not a politically high-risk move.

Bush supporters in the House were sympathetic about the vice president's plight.

"I think Bush has to say, as he has for seven years, as long as we're asking what he would do as vice president, he will support the president of the United States," said Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia. "He can talk about how he would take the offensive in '89 in other ways, but I think it would be very, very foolish to allow himself to be drawn into day by day picky fights."

But others weren't so concerned about 'picky fights."

"What I'd like to see would be Bush coming out on more of the issues and articulating the positions that he has," said Molinari. "I think he's beginning to do that now."

Blueberries make an elegant brulee

By NANCY BYAL Better Homes and Gardens Food Editor

Blueberries are a native American fruit; today's juicy giants are direct descendents of the tiny tart-sweet berries the Indians used in making pemmican, their fruit-and-meat traveling food. Size is an indication of quality, so bigger is better when you're buying blueberries.

BLUEBERRY BRULEE One 8-ounce container soft-style cream cheese with pineapple One 8-ounce carton plain yogurt

3 cups fresh blueberries 1/3rd cup packed brown sugar

In a small mixing bowl stir together the cream cheese and yogurt. Place blueberries in shallow 8-inch round broiler-proof dish. Spoon cream cheese mixture over blueberries. Sprinkle brown sugar over cheese mixture. Broil 4 to 5 inches from heat for 2 to 3 minutes or until sugar starts to melt. Serve immediately. Makes 8 servings.

Willingham marks 40th anniversary of teaching

Current and former students and friends of Jeanne Willingham, director of Beaux Arts Dance Studio, will honor her at a reunion Sunday marking her 40th year as a dance instructor.

The reception will be from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, May 29 at Briarwood Church, 1800 W. Harvester. It follows Willingham's 40th recital of her dance students, which will be at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Carmelita Hogan, a 1959 graduate, is now an actress and model in Dallas.

May 28 at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

All present and former students, spouses, parents, children, friends and associates are welcome to attend the reception. Coordinator is J. Glennette Dawkins Goode, and reunion committee members are Anita Day Dalton, Deborah Lawley Ferrell, Cindy Neal Kemp, Patti Lowrance, Rita Parsley Stephens and Debbie Blakemore Ferrell.

Willingham began her dance career as a preschooler in San Francisco. She studied dance in Fort Worth, New York, California, Paris and Zurich. She founded Beaux Arts Dance Studio 40 years ago, and is founder and artistic director of Pampa Civic

"I guess my mother got me interested in dancing. She wasn't a dancer, but she studied dance in college and she always loved it. When I was a little girl, my mother and I would march around the room in time to music," Willingham said.

Later mentors included Mr. and Mrs. Al DeRea of Los Angeles. "They have done so much for me. They are more than teachers. They have become friends," Willingham said.

Many of her students have followed in her footsteps in more ways than one. Those who are currently teaching dance include Anita Day Dalton, Canadian; Linda Moore Germany, White Deer; Barbara Banks Tucek, Canyon; Debbie Bray, Austin; D'Anne Prince Thompson, Dallas; and Roxanne Bartush,

Former students who are also former teachers include Viola Parsley Bray, Sue Jane Sanders Green, Patti Lowrance, Susie Fillman Ferguson, Angela Day Knapp, Debbie Chafin Natali, Martha Price Hutto and Ann Hof

Students who are currently dancing include Deanne Parsley, a 1988 graduate, who will appear in "TEXAS" this summer, and Kim Bowers, a returning cast member of "TEXAS." Others who were coached by Willingham and made their way to the "TEXAS" stage at Palo Duro Canyon include Rita Parsley Stephens, Anita Day Dalton, Angela Day Knapp, Viola Parsley Bray, Kim Chittenden Woodliff and Roxanne Bartush.

Several students continued their dance education in college, majoring in the art form to earn a degree. These include Maynette Loftus Scott, Patti Lowrance, Donna Glass Heckenborn, Angela Day Knapp, Anite Guidry Pitts, Sandra Molesworth Wilcott, Viola Parsley Bray, Judith Robison Ritter and Roxanne Bar-

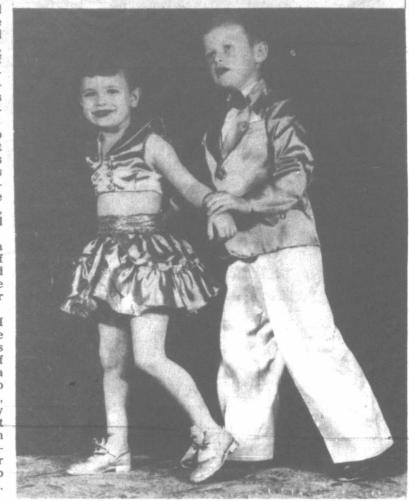

Some students have even returned to Willingham's classes as adults after learning from her as children and teens. These adults currently include Anita Day Dal-6 ton, Glennette Dawkins Goode, Deborah Lawley Ferrell, Cindy Neal Kemp, Patti Lowrance, Karen Hughes, Rita Parsley Stephens, Debbie Blackwell Ferrell and Margaret Wilks Haynes. Several returning adults have also brought their children to study with Willingham as well.

Debbie Bray, who studied dance with Willingham for nine years, is owner of Rhythm and Motion Dance Studio in Austin, and director/choreographer of "Austin on Tap," a nationally-known dance company. Her opinion of her former dance teacher is that Willingham is "just a beauti-

Deborah Lawley Ferrell, who has returned as an adult student for 17 years total lessons, says 'Jeanne's love of dance flows over to her love of children. Besides teaching us dance, she taught us self-esteem, discipline, good grammar, manners and high morals."

'She always had a smile and a hug for everyone. I can't think of a nicer person than Jeanne," said Gail Wilkins Treet, 1977 graduate who studied with Willingham for eight years.

"As a student growing up, I don't think any of us ever realize just how very special Jeanne is as a person and a teacher. Many of us have gone on to dance as a career, many have returned to dance as a form of exercise, many have danced 'only in my dreams,' as one student put it, but we all gained from our time with Jeanne," said Glennette Dawkins Goode, a 1965 graduate after 12 years of study who returned to Willingham's studio as an adult.

DEAR ABBY: My 20-year-old daughter is a beautiful young lady with a great personality, a terrific figure and everything going for her so it would seem. Her problem: She does not get asked out. Many men admire her, but nobody asks her out. She's joined groups at her college and church hoping to meet eligible men, but still no dates.

Some of her friends have told her that men are intimidated by beautiful women, and they hesitate to ask her out because they are afraid of being turned down. Believe me, she would jump at the chance to go to a movie or dinner.

getting very discouraged because she hasn't had a date in six months. Any suggestions?

INDIANA MOTHER DEAR MOTHER: Yes. Tell your daughter there is nothing wrong with inviting a man out. Most would be flattered, and if she's as terrific as you say she is, he will ask for a return engagement. Also, a woman should never give the impression that she's desperate - even if she is. A self-confident attitude will do more for a woman than a pretty face.

DEAR ABBY: You once said there is no such thing as a dumb question. Well, I hope you won't think this is one - especially when you find out it's coming from a 52-year-old married woman. Here goes: I just purchased a pair of identical lamps to put on a pair of identical tables on either side of my sofa. These

DEAR ABBY: I share an apartment with a girl who has two cats. I am not particularly crazy about Abby, don't men ask women out cats, but I can live with them. The problem is the litter boxes. She has to do the asking these days? She's one in the bathroom and one in the kitchen, and you can smell them before you see them.

I am now buying a two-bedroom house. I would like this girl to share the house with me, but I don't want the odor of cats permeating the place. I know if I tell her that the litter boxes should be cleaned more often she'll clean them once, then forget about it until I remind her again. We've been through this several times.

My question: Would it be acceptable if she were to move into my house with me to ask her to keep the litter box in her bedroom?

DEAR NO: Acceptable, yes.

Workable, unlikely. You have already learned that your roommate is able to tolerate the odor of cats permeating the place. If you can't, either be prepared to change the litter box yourself or learn to live with the odor, because it would only be a matter of time before your lamps have cellophane wrappers on entire house would smell. INGLEWOOD, Calif. - Coach Pat Riley tried the "big purge," and it worked to perfection for the Los Angeles Lakers against Dallas in the opening game of the NBA Western Conference finals.

His strategy entering Game 2 against the Mavericks was altogether different

After the Lakers beat Utah 109-98 Saturday in the seventh and deciding game of a surprisingly rugged second-round playoff series, Riley scheduled a practice session Sunday, a day before the first game against Dallas.

But early in the day, he changed his mind, giving the team Sunday off. There was no practice, no meeting, no speeches, no nothing.

'I wanted to purge the Utah thing, let them clean their minds," Riley said. "We had a good walk-through in the morning (Monday) and another one (before the game).

The Lakers certainly didn't seem to have Utah on their minds Monday night as they overpowered the Mavericks 113-98 to conference finals. Worthy led the way with 28 points.

Game 2 will be played tonight, beginning at 11 p.m. EDT. The series then shifts to Dallas for Games 3 and 4 Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

To prepare for tonight's game, the Lakers went through a twohour practice Tuesday.

"Dallas will be better in Game 2." Riley said. "I want my players to get some rest and then to be disciplined and only think about Dallas. It's easy to get distracted. We can't assume it will be easy at home. We really have to take care of business on our own floor.

While Riley wanted the Lakers to forget about Utah before Monday night's game, he stressed afterward that he wants them to remember what happened against the Jazz in Game 2 of that series when they take the floor

"Only five minutes after the game (Monday night), Riley already had reminded us of Game 2 in the Utah series," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said. "We won't take them (the Mavertake a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven icks) too lightly. We'll be ready." After rolling past Utah 110-91 in the opener of their series against the Jazz, the Lakers dropped a 101-97 decision at the Forum in Game 2. Los Angeles then lost the third game before winning three of the final four.

Roy Tarpley, who had 18 points and 20 rebounds for the Mavericks on Monday night, expressed confidence concerning Game 2 and the rest of the series.

'We also lost the first game to Denver," Tarpley said, referring to the second-round series won by the Mavericks 4-2. "We'll have to come out and be aggressive and just put two good halves together. We saw how Utah pounded and ran, and we feel we can do the Another note of optimism was expressed by guard Rolando Blackman, who said, "I still feel very good about this team. They are up one game, but it's not over by any means. We have to look at the films and make the proper adjustments for Wednesday.

Monday night's victory marked the 10th consecutive time the Lakers have won the first game of a playoff series .

Celtics, Pistons face new challenge

By HOWARD ULMAN AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics and Detroit Pistons, both winners of their first two NBA playoff series, face a new challenge tonight each other.

Lessons learned against previous opponents go only so far. Different teams bring different skills, styles and obstacles.

In the Eastern Conference semifinals, Boston faced Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins and Detroit faced Chicago's Michael Jordan. In the best-of-seven conference finals starting tonight, Boston will focus on Adrian Dantley and Isiah Thomas, while Detroit has a much broader task.

'Now we've got to defend five guys, not one or two, and they're all bigger than we are." Pistons' coach Chuck Daly said.

Boston still has an offensive-minded forward to worry about but can't play Dantley, the Pistons' leading scorer in four of their six games against the Celtics this season, the way it did Wilkins.

"The one thing Adrian can't do that Dominique does so well is jump and it's so much harder to guard against a guy that can just jump over you every time," Boston's Larry Bird said.

"Against Adrian, what we have to do is just try to double him up, get the ball out of his hands as much as possible and not let him go to the (foul) line.

'He's primarily a driver, while Dominique is both a driver and an outside shooter," Boston forward Kevin McHale said.

With guards Thomas, Joe Dumars and Vinnie Johnson, "Detroit is very capable of hitting the outside shot. That's where their strengths are," Bird said.

"In the playoffs, you have to make them beat you from outside," Boston guard Jim Paxson said.

Detroit also figures to use that strategy rather than allow Boston to get the ball near the basket to Bird, McHale and Robert Parish. The back condition that has hampered forward Ricky Mahorn could hurt the Pistons' inside defense.

'We need his defensive presence without fouls in the low post," Daly said. Mahorn said he would play

"I don't spend time worrying about Ricky Mahorn or Ricky Mahorn's back," McHale said. "I just worry about playing basket-

Both teams did learn something from the Atlanta series that they can use. Boston won it in seven games to advance to a rematch of last year's conference final.

"We're going to have to do a better job defensively than we did in the Atlanta series because Detroit has more weapons," Paxson

A back injury kept Paxson, Boston's primary backup guard, out of the last two games of the Atlanta series.

WHY NOT? In what sport other than baseball is the manager allowed on the playing surface to argue with the officials? Not in hockey, not in basketball, not in football, not in tennis, not even in pro wrestling. Oh, there probably is one if we think hard enough. But only in baseball is the manager allowed to rush onto the field to argue the decision of an umpire, other than a ballstrike call.

If baseball followed the lead of the other sports, allowing the manager on the field only in the unusual circumstance of attending an injured player or helping stop a fight involving any of his team members, Pete Rose would still be around. Why is baseball different? Why not keep them off the field, in the dugout, and like Mr. Connie Mack, wearing suits and ties. After all, they're supposed to be brain trusts, CEO's, not team brawlers. Furthermore, most every one of them would look much better in a business outfit rather than a LaSorda paunch hanging out of a uniform.

Staying off the field reminds me of a story about the Harvesters' stellar basketball coach Clifton McNeely. He was playing in one of those crackerbox gyms that used to populate the Panhandle, like the old downtown Pampa JH facility and the Amarillo HS Armory. There was no room on the sideline for the team bench, so the reserves and coaches were placed in the front row of the stands, three steps up, behind a wooden wall. The players had to come down off the end of the stands, down the steps and onto the court in order to get to the official scorer

In the heat of the game, McNeely strayed down there to. "Get off the floor," whistled one official. "You can't come down here and coach!

"If I can't coach them now (while the game is going on) when can I coach them!" roared back McNeely. Fortunately facilities have improved.

promised service. So why shouldn't Pampa ISD taxpayers expect a refund of 1-180th of their taxes? The budget is established on the basis of meeting the needs of 180 teaching days, including the costs of full extra-curricular activities, including full baseball and boys track schedules. Since neither of those sports played a complete schedule, and the school administration has sought and obtained state permission to not provide the full 180-day teaching service for which it contracted with the taxpayers when sending the school tax bill, aren't the taxpayers due a refund or credit? Just asking, as I can't see the difference with buying any other service or product. And where does that money go? Veteran sportswriter Putt Powell recently listed his choices for an all-time football team coached by Odus Mitchell when he was head coach at PHS from 1927 thru 1940.

Center - Ray Noblitt, 1936 Guards - J.P. Matthews, 1937; Carl Smith, 1934.

Tackles - Moose Hartman, 1936; Troy Stalls, 1929. Ends - Wayne Kelly, 1932;

Backs - Albert Lard, Don Saulsbury, Pest Martindale, Ray Chastain, the entire 1930 back-and homework. Monroe Owens, 1934.

Most old timers and class-tions, although there is a difference of opinion about the center position. Sheriff Rufe Jordan likes Ralph Poe, 1930, for that spot. Bill Tidwell thinks Clovis Green, 1933, should be center and Bill Dunaway replace Martindale in the backfield.

Speaking before the Pampa Kiwanis Club recently, Pampa ISD superintendent Dr. Harry Griffith said he is "all for reducing the no pass-no play penalty to three weeks (rather than the six weeks enforced the past two school years. "But the real ques-tion here," he asked "is why aren't they passing?" A good question, and I hope he finds the answer, part of which might be that some coaches refuse to recognize these are young people ages 13-18, who also have a lot of other interests, plus classrooms

"The community needs to raise it's expectations of our Pampa schools," Griffith said. I hope that means that the school board and administration are willing to be open-minded and listen to courtesy funeral escort).

mates agree with those selec- thoughts (including criticisms) about the current operation. But somehow, I read that as "give us more money if you want better schools." I hope I misread that, and what was really meant was make us use the tax dollars you now give us in a more prudent. wise and efficient manner; To combat the critical drug-use problem at the high school, Griffith said he would like to have a police officer on foot at the school for two hours daily during the noon hour, at a cost of $8 per hour. Pardon me, but aren't the taxpayers already paying for police? And if the city law agency refuses to pull an officer off a critical motorized beat (they're already at the high school daily driving round and round) as they refuse to do for a funeral escort (unless they get paid by the mourners), may I suggest the police chief, assistant chief, one of the lieutenants or sergeants leave their less critical jobs for a couple hours to meet the school system's request for assistance in the fight against drugs (and the common

Investigation continues into SMU play-for-pay scandal

DALLAS (AP) — Information from an investigation into Southern Methodist's play-for-pay football scandal has been turned over the to the Dallas County district attorney's office by the Texas attorney general's office.

An official with the attorney general's office said Tuesday that some former Southern Methodist athletic officials have refused to discuss their role in the school's football scandal.

The Southwest Conference school's football program for the 1987 season was suspended after the National Collegiate Athletic Association imposed the socalled "death penalty" clause. The NCAA determined that football players were paid while the school was on probation for earlier violations.

The school also decided not to field a football team in 1988.

'Some of the conduct we have been investigating, in our opinion, is criminal," said assistant attorney general John Vasquez. "We have asked the district attorney's office to review the information and assess whether a grand jury is needed. But that is a determination they will have to

He said that although he gave the report to the district attorney's office Monday, the state investigation will continue.

"We have not necessarily concluded our involvement in the matter," Vasquez said. "The problem we have had is that we don't have subpoena power as the district attorney's office does. We've been pretty much hamstrung by some officials who have refused to provide us information."

Ted Steinke, chief of the district attorney's specialized crime division, said a "lengthy" report on the investigation is being reviewed by his office. He said he could not comment on its specifics or speculate on any actions that may result.

Leon Bennett, vice president for legal affairs at SMU, said he hasn't seen the information that was turned over to the DA's office but added, "We will continue to cooperate with any investiga-

Vasquez said last December he was investigating the possible "misapplication or theft" of at least $10,000 in athletic department funds by a former SMU athletic department employee, whom he would not identify.

Other former employees, whom he also would not identify, might have been involved in the disappearance of funds, but that no students or members of the university's board of trustees. past or present, are implicated, he said

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said when he began the investigation last July that he wanted to focus on whether the university acted properly in spending more than $860,000 to terminate the contracts of former athletic director Bob Hitch, former football coach Bobby Collins and former assistant athletic director Henry Lee Parker.

The disappearance of the funds was not related to the severance payments, but the loss of the $10,000 was discovered during that investigation, Vasquez said.

McCullough plans golf clinic

Frank McCullough's annual golf clinic is scheduled for May 29 through June 2 at Clarendon College-Pampa Center.

The morning session (8 to 10 a.m.) will be primarily for junior golfers (10-14 years old) and the evening session (6 to 8 p.m.) will be confined to adults.

Cost of the clinic is $40 and golf clubs will be provided if students don't have their own.

McCullough is the golf coach for the Pampa High boys and girls teams and he can be contacted at 665-7367 to enroll for the clinic. Interested persons can also enroll by calling Clarendon College-Pampa Center or they can wait and sign up the first day of the clinic.

The basic fundamentals of golf the grip, stance and swing will be taught, in addition to a video lesson once a week.

A second session is scheduled for June 5-9 and a third session may be held later.

The Bruins accepted the decision without apparent protest.

losing the home ice in Game 4, Boston General Manager Harry Sinden said. "The bylaw really told us ton Celtics for the first two games of their NBA Eastern Conference final against the Detroit Pistons Wednesday and Thursday nights, Ziegler said the

The power failure began at about 9:33 p.m. and emergency lights went on in the arena. Four minutes later, hallways surrounding it had lighting res-

Ziegler said the outage occurred when an overload of a 4,000-volt switch on a transformer unit outside the building on a piece of railroad equipment tripped a switch. The Garden is located in the same building as the North Station commuter train tracks.

Meeting scheduled for summer cage program

A Pampa summer basketball league for players at the high school level and older is being formed. An organizational meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. May 31 at McNeely Fieldhouse and both interested players and coaches are urged to attend. Area players are also invited to join the league.

Enrollment cost is $20 and each player will get to keep a jersey furnished by the league. For more details, call Sam White at 669-7331 or

Blackout postpones Stanley Cup game

Robert Hale at 669-2322.

BOSTON (AP) - It was nearly midnight when John Ziegler left the re-illuminated Boston Garden, wearing a twisted smile and shaking his head in disbelief

Who'da thunk it?" the president of the National Hockey League said of the latest bizarre turn in the Bruins' strange playoff season. With 3:23 to play in the second period of the fourth game of the Stanley Cup finals Tuesday night, the red light behind Boston's net went on to signify Craig Simpson's goal that gave the defending champion Edmonton Oilers a 3-3 tie. But the lights in the 60-year-old arena went out before the puck could be dropped for the faceoff.

Less than 24 minutes before a possible end to the NHL season, a blackout attributed by Ziegler to a transformer malfunction caused the game to be postponed.

Power was restored after about 35 minutes, but Ziegler said there was no assurance it would not fail again. By that time, the arena had been cleared of nearly all the sellout crowd of 14,451 spectators and players had changed into street clothes.

Under NHL bylaws, any unfinished game is to be replayed in its entirety, if necessary, at the end of the series, Ziegler said.

That means that Boston, trailing the best-of-seven series, 3-0, must win Game 4, instead of the originally scheduled Game 5, in Edmonton on Thursday night to stay alive. The Oilers are 10-0 at home in the

Under the revised schedule, Saturday's game in Boston would be Game 5 instead of Game 6 and next Tuesday's game in Edmonton has been rescheduled to Monday as Game 6 instead of Game 7. One or both of those games may not be played if the Oilers already have won four games. A seventh game, if necessary, has been scheduled for Boston on June 2.

"For us to survive, we have to win in their building anyway," Boston Coach Terry O'Reilly said.

"We don't want to feel sorry for ourselves" for what we had to do.'

Although the Garden will be occupied by the Bosbylaw was the determining factor in the decision.

Prisoners pardoned after working in governor's home

roll Hood.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Convicted murderer Frank Gholar owes his freedom and a well-paying job to Mississippi's resumption of an old Southern tradition, using prison inmates as servants in the antebellum Governor's Mansion.

Only prisoners convicted of violent crimes qualify to serve the state's first family and inmates facing life sentences are preferred, says Joseph Nix, director of executive security at the mansion. "They tend to make the best workers," Nix says, explaining that the "lifers" have the most to gain if they don't betray the governor's trust. For four years, Gholar whipped up everything

For four years, Gholar whipped up everything from gourmet French sauces to down-home cornbread in the kitchen of the white-pillored Governor's Mansion, built in 1842. When Gov. Bill Allain left office last January, he kept the tradition of commuting the sentences of his faithful servants, and Gholar is now on the payroll of a Hazlehurst oil company owner he met while at the mansion.

Gholar, a 42-year-old former oil field worker, recalls serving time at the isolated state penitentiary at Parchman in the Mississippi Delta. "You go to Parchman and you think that that's it. But it isn't if you try to improve yourself."

He's now working as a general repairman at Hood Petroleum Co. Inc. offices in Hazlehurst. Gholar was sentenced to life in prison for the 1981 fatal shooting of the woman he lived with in the small southern Mississippi town of Prentiss. He Gholar was among the four mansion servants whose sentences were commuted in January: Two for murder and two for manslaughter. Nix, who has been at the mansion since 1965, says some previous governors had as many as eight inmates. Newly inaugurated Gov. Ray Mabus currently has

Gholar had no previous criminal record. But no matter how good his behavior at Parchman, Gholar probably would have stayed behind bars much longer than the minimum 10 years before he became eligible for parole if he hadn't been selected for the mansion post, says his new employer, Car-

Gov. Bill Waller was the only Mississippi governor in recent years to decline to use prison trus-

A 1977 book co-authored by Waller's wife, Carroll, and University of Mississippi history professor David Sansing, "A History of the Mississippi Governor's Mansion," explains how the tradition of commuting the sentences of the mansion trusties began.

In 1912, Mississippi voters elected Earl Leroy Brewer governor and Theodore Bilbo, who later became governor and kingpin of state politics for many years, lieutenant governor. The administration was rife with political intrigue and Bilbo was indicted.

Big tree at Goose Island gets a trim

GOOSE ISLAND STATE PARK, Texas (AP) — With saws in hand, tree surgeons from Corpus Christi climbed around the boughs of the Texas-sized ancient live oak known as "Big Tree," looking for dead wood.

The tree, certified in 1969 by the Texas Forest Service as the largest live oak in Texas, is also believed to be one of the biggest in the country.

It is pruned of dead wood every five to seven years, said David Riskind of Austin, a resource manager with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"There is nothing wrong with the tree. It is healthy and vigorous. We trim it periodically just to keep it healthy," Riskind said. Before its most recent trimming last week, Big Tree was last pruned about four years ago, a park spokesman said.

Big Tree is 44 feet tall. Its trunk is 35 feet in circumference, and its crown spread is 89 feet. Its age is estimated at between 450 and 1,000 years — "probably closer to 1,000," Riskind said. The Texas Almanac says the tree has been

years old.

The tree generally is pruned whenever weather conditions such as drought or storms have affected it, Riskind said.

estimated to be as much as 2,000

The amount of dead wood is an important factor, he said, because supporting the weight of dead wood can sap the tree's vigor and also invite damage from insects such as wood ants and carpenter ants.

The state called for bids for the pruning job and was surprised by the bid from Woodstock Tree Surgeons of Corpus Christi.

"Woodstock's bid was zero, and that's the kind of bid that is hard to turn down," Riskind said.

A spokesman for the company could not be reached for comment. Goose Island State Park draws thousands of visitors annually — nearly a half-million last year — who come to the park to view the tree and to camp and fish.

Until several years ago, visi-

Until several years ago, visitors were allowed to drive beneath the giant boughs, but the practice was halted when officials discovered that the traffic compacted the soil, placing the tree under too much stress.
