City mourns dead as study continues in building collapse

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — At least 2,000 people gathered at the swept-clean site of a collapsed department store to mourn the 14 dead and hear the disaster and rescue described as "our finest hour as well as our greatest tragedy."

"The disaster is now over. The rubble is cleared away. The victims are taken care of and now we are expected to return to life as usual," Rabbi Arthur Rutberg said Sunday, a day after the last of the bodies was recovered.

The three-story Amigo Store collapsed Thursday during a torrential rain that prompted numerous passersby to duck inside for cover.

Fourteen people were killed and six were pulled alive from the rubble. At least 47 people were injured. Dozens crawled to safety.

The disaster drew hundreds of volunteers from throughout the Rio Grande Valley, many of whom worked with little rest for three days straight, searching for the living and the dead.

"The greatest lesson of this disaster is that Brownsville, Texas, is a great community that can work together as one unified and cooperative entity," Rutberg told victims' relatives, friends and others.

"Our lives and our community can never be the same again not only for those who suffered great losses, but (for) all of us. This has been our finest hour as well as our greatest tragedy."

The service was intended as an emotional release for the community, said the Rev. Tom Pincelli, another speaker.

"I don't think we can just walk away. We want to give a psychological conclusion to what transpired," he said.

Those at the ceremony included 8-year-old Denise Carrera, who was pulled from the rubble virtually unscathed while her mother and 4-year-old brother perished, and Bernard Levin, the store owner, who did not speak or make himself available to reporters.

Denise's aunt, Guillermina Silva de Carrera, thanked the crowd tearfully. "I wish I knew everyone's names so that we knew who to thank by name. Thank you... we felt the spiritual and moral support."

A Brownsville woman at the service said she had watched the rescuers after the accident. "Inside I feel sad," said Martha Mancilla Meyers. "Nothing like this has ever happened in Brownsville before."

Officials have said the weight of an estimated 2 inches of rainfall from a 45-minute downpour may have caused the flat roof to give way.

Investigators began examining debris placed in the border city's dump. Representatives from every agency that participated in the rescue were to gather this week to review the accident and rescue efforts.

A team from the Southern Building Codes Congress International, based in Birmingham, Ala., arrived to assist in the investigation.

City commission to take up awarding golf course bids

Pampa city commissioners will return to the green Tuesday evening when they again take up the awarding of bids relative to the municipal golf course.

Meeting in regular session at 6 p.m., commissioners will consider awarding bids for grass seed and for 12-inch PVC pipe and assorted fittings to be used in the initial groundwork preparations for the golf course.

Earlier Tuesday afternoon, city commissioners and city staff will join in the groundbreaking ceremonies for the course, to be located north of the city. The ceremony is scheduled for 2 p.m. Gray County commissioners and Pampa Public Golf Association members also will be participating in the groundbreaking.

The grass seed and pipe bids have been deferred for a number of weeks awaiting approval of an amended contract agreement with Gray County and acceptance of the 194-acre site. The land acceptance was delayed to allow for title documents to be received and studied. City commissioners accepted the land in a special called meeting last week.

Engineer Ray Hardy of El Paso has begun initial staking of the site. City Manager Bob Hart said construction of the course should begin this week.

In other business Tuesday night, commissioners will consider:

- adoption on second and final reading of ordinances amending personnel policies and procedures and referencing the material to the city's Code of Ordinances;

- establishing time and date for a public hearing regarding a structure to be condemned to permit demolition; and
- temporary altering of the Lovett Memorial Library hours.

The commission also has scheduled an executive session to discuss personnel matters, including the semi-annual evaluation of the city manager.

Protestors jeer election results as Salinas claims he has lead

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government today said Carlos Salinas de Gortari had a wide lead over his opponents but that election results still were not final five days after voters cast ballots for a new president.

Partial results finally were released after opposition activists blocked highways and shut down international bridges to protest the delay.

Charges of election fraud and the Federal Election Commission's delay in releasing results clouded what had been expected to be an easy victory for Salinas and his party, the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party.

The election commission today said Salinas has won 52.89 percent of the ballots counted so far. It said Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the leftist National Democratic Front trailed with 29.10 percent, and National Action Party candidate Manuel Clouthier was third with 16.68 percent.

Earlier, Cardenas had claimed victory and Clouthier said he was leading.

Both men accused the governing party — which has not lost a presidential election since it was founded in 1929 — of rampant election fraud.

Mexico has 38 million registered voters. The government said it has counted about 13.24 million votes, but did not say how many ballots were cast.

Cardenas supporters protest election results.

The partial returns also gave 176 seats in the 500-seat Chamber of Deputies to the governing party, 13 to the right-of-center National Action Party and two to parties affiliated with the National Democratic Front.

The Chamber of Deputies is the lower house of Mexico's congress.

The election commission only released percentage results for the Mexican Senate, giving the governing party 60.95 percent of the total Senate vote. The National Action Party had 15.59 percent and Cardenas' party had 7.31 percent, the commission said.

Opposition delegates demanded the commission provide district-by-district figures for the Senate. Interior Minister Manuel Bartlett, who chairs the commission, delayed action on the request.

The partial results were released early today at the end of an election commission session in which opposition delegates repeatedly accused the government of fraud and criticized the slow pace of the vote count.

Bartlett on Sunday defended the election process, calling it "a question of patience. Politics is the science of patience."

He said the breakdown of a new computer system, then bad weather, prevented the commission from delivering on its pledge to release preliminary results on election night. It then promised it would release results on Sunday.

The Salinas camp has privately acknowledged probable losses to Cardenas in at least two states and Mexico City — first-ever defeats for the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has never lost a presidential, senate or gubernatorial race.

The surprisingly poor showing has produced a rift in the party between Salinas supporters who want to modernize the party and an old guard seeking to use the delay to embarrass the Salinas camp or ensure traditional margins of victory.

Bartlett was a top competitor to Salinas for the governing party's presidential nomination.

Local industries moving ahead with Title III implementation

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles concerning the implementation of federal Title III activities in relation to the community's right to know about the manufacturing, use and handling of chemicals by industries and businesses.

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

July 1 was an important date for the community, but for most it passed unnoticed.

On that date, under federal regulations, industries and businesses were required to begin annual reports of releases of toxic chemicals to the environment, permitted or otherwise.

The chemical releases must be reported to the Environmental Protection Agency and the state in accordance with the toxic chemical release reporting requirements of the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986.

The act has a rather long name to remember, so most call it by its acronym: SARA.

The name is probably unfamiliar to most in the community, but it's become well known through endless repetition and reference to those involved in local community emergency planning programs through the Community Awareness and Emergency Response (CAER) activities.

Jane McBunch, manager of human resources at the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Co.'s Pampa Facility, said that the July 1 reporting deadline is important to the community. In addition to the reports to the federal EPA and the state, industries and businesses also will be reporting to local emergency planning and response groups.

"We will now be making information available to local agencies which previously was reported only to regulatory agencies," McBunch said.

That will help the community to become more aware of the various chemicals being used in local industries and businesses and also aware of the steps being taken to protect the community from any hazards that might be connected with the use of the chemicals, she said.

SARA was the U.S. Congress' response to the tragedy that had occurred in Bhopal, India, in December 1984, when chemicals released from an American chemical company's facility killed and injured many workers and surrounding residents.

That incident created a desire for industries and businesses to make the communities aware of the chemicals and other potentially hazardous materials being used in their vicinities. And it also led to a cooperative venture between the private and public sectors to prepare emergency response plans to handle dangerous situations that might arise.

In Gray County, Hoechst Celanese led the initial efforts to form the cooperative community venture, in cooperation with local city and county emergency response agencies, other industries and businesses, the hospital, ambulance and paramedic services, health and human service agencies, law enforcement agencies and numerous others that have since become involved in CAER.

In accordance with SARA's emergency planning requirements, industries which manufacture, process or store hazardous chemicals must work closely with neighboring communities to develop an emergency plan for responding to chemical accidents, McBunch explained.

"We had already done this through our CAER efforts," she said, noting that the local CAER actually has gone beyond the federal requirements to expand the cooperative venture to include all community emergency and disaster situations.

With CAER getting an early start in Pampa and Gray County, local emergency response teams were able to coordinate activities during 1987's three major disasters: the March blizzard, the July tornado and, most significantly, the Nov. 14 explosions at the Hoechst Celanese plant west of Pampa.

"CAER is the voluntary approach to deal with the public concern," McBunch said. "We've already done a fairly good job of informing the community. We're probably ahead of the game" over most other communities having such programs.

Now, local industries, businesses and emergency response agencies are continuing with the implementation of ongoing programs as they strive to better improve the emergency planning and to better inform the public, she said.

Within SARA is Title III, also called the Emergency Planning and Community Right-to-Know Act. Title III has four major sections: emergency planning, emergency notification, community right-to-know reporting, and toxic chemical release reporting.

The emergency planning requirements have been met through the formation of CAER and the designation of the CAER Steering Committee as the Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) for Pampa and Gray County. The LEPC is responsible for developing local emergency plans and for providing information to the public about hazardous materials.

McBunch noted, though, that emergency planning is an ongoing process. It doesn't stop with just the creation of CAER/LEPC.

The emergency notification requirement has already been implemented locally, at least in part, through the cooperation attained through CAER and the voluntary release of information from Hoechst Celanese and other local industries to CAER, the Pampa Fire Department, other agencies and the media.

With those procedures already in operation, the next step is the refinement and implementation of the community right-to-know requirements and the reporting of toxic chemical release information, McBunch explained.

NEXT: Community right to know.

Reagan OKs compensation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan indicated today he has approved U.S. compensation for the families of the 290 people who died aboard the Iranian airliner shot down by a U.S. warship.

"Well, I have said from the start that we are a compassionate people," Reagan said when asked when he would make a decision on the matter.

"Later today, there'll be a statement with regard to that," he said while posing for pictures with Jose Napoleon Duarte, the president of El Salvador, who is recuperating after cancer surgery.

"I want to make it plain that there will be no compensation to the government of Iran or anything like that," Reagan said.

Reagan has said that he regretted the shooting down of the Iran Air Airbus on July 3 by the USS Vincennes, a Navy cruiser whose captain had thought the ship was under attack by an F-14 Iranian fighter jet.

The Pentagon says the Vincennes' sophisticated Aegis radar and tracking system had picked up a radio identification from the Airbus broadcast on a frequency used only by military aircraft, leading Capt. Will C. Rogers III to conclude that his ship faced attack from an F-14.

But the president also told reporters last week that he didn't want to move too quickly on the question of compensation, saying at one point that "I will await the result of the investigation" by a naval investigative team sent to the Persian Gulf.

But, when asked during the Oval Office picture-taking session today whether he had decided that compensation should be granted, the president said, "We are a compassionate people and I think we all have compassion for the families of those unfortunate people."

When he said that a statement would be coming, a reporter responded, "I assume it's going to be in the affirmative."

Reagan nodded his agreement. Asked about public opinion polls showing that a majority of Americans surveyed had said they opposed paying such compensation, the president said, "I think that they have tied that to our feelings about the government and what it did with regard to our people in the embassy there (in Tehran) when the ayatollah (Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini) came in."

In saying there would be no payments to Khomeini's government, Reagan said:

"We don't feel that any such thing is called for. As I've said, we all can have compassion for the innocent people who are the victims."

Asked whether sending such compensation might send a bad signal, he said, "I don't ever find compassion a bad precedent."

Administration officials had hinted over the weekend that a decision to award compensation was near.

Lefors schools cut budget $40,000

LEFORS — A diminishing tax base was given as the cause of a $40,000 cut in the 1988-89 Lefors Independent School District budget approved by board members at their July 7 meeting.

Board members accepted a $1.12 million budget for the coming school year, $40,000 less than the 1987-88 budget of $1.16 million.

Earl Ross, school superintendent, said the budget cut could be attributed to a loss in the tax base.

The budget cut will affect the maintenance and athletic programs, he said, adding that no cuts were made in the academic programs.

Six teachers employed by the school district were placed by board members on Step 2 of the career ladder, which provides a $1,976 bonus for each teacher.

In other business, the board agreed to give Lefors senior citizens passes to the school's athletic events. Free senior citizens passes would be issued through the superintendent's office, Ross said.

Old playground equipment was donated to the city by the school district with the board's approval, at the request of City Councilman Ron Turpin.

Turpin thanked board members for the donation, saying the equipment would be placed in the city park.

Resignations were accepted for sixth-grade teacher Cordelia Back and recently-hired coach Curtis Smith, who has decided to remain in Patton Springs.

In other action, monthly bills were approved for payment.

Pipeline ruptures at Celanese plant

Loud noise caused by a rupture of a process line at nearby Hoescht Celanese Chemical Co.'s Pampa Facility on Sunday afternoon frightened some Kingsmill residents who feared another major explosion like the one that killed three people at the plant eight months ago.

Plant officials reported receiving a number of calls from local residents after a process line ruptured in a multi-functional monomers unit, one that had been brought back on line since the November 1987 explosion.

The rupture, which occurred about 3:30 p.m. Sunday, caused a release of pressure that could be heard in Kingsmill, plant officials said.

The situation was under control within a matter of minutes, said Jane McBunch, human resources manager at the plant. There were no injuries and no fire, she said.

"It's really not a big deal," she said, adding that there was no danger to anyone though the noise was loud enough to be heard in nearby Kingsmill.

McBunch said the line received minor damages. Plant officials are investigating the cause of the rupture, she said.

Seven months ago, on Nov. 14, 1987, the chemical plant rocked Kingsmill and Pampa with three major explosions, killing three plant workers, injuring 37 others and causing an estimated $150 million in damages.

New Miss Texas wins on fourth try

FORT WORTH (AP) — Three previous shots at the title and 19 years of dance lessons helped Cathy Castro edge out 62 other women — including her younger sister — to win as Miss Texas 1988.

"Clarissa and I both had fun, but my mother was going crazy," said Miss Castro, a 22-year-old McAllen resident who competed as Miss Duncanville.

Clarissa Castro, 18, was Miss Brownsville Jaycees in the 27th annual Miss Texas Pageant Saturday night.

The new Miss Texas, a brown-eyed brunette, won the state title on her fourth attempt in the pageant. Last year, she finished as second runner-up and won the Best Dancer Award when she competed as Miss Haltom-Richland Area.

"I think experience helps you, but every year it's a new contest, and anything can happen," Miss Castro told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "I came in here tonight feeling very confident, though."

The Texas Christian University graduate had won one of the swimsuit competitions earlier in the week and impressed the judges enough with her ballet performance of "Les Toreadors" to edge out Miss Hurst-Euleus-Bedford, Leah Kay Lyle, for the title.

"This is the thrill of a lifetime. I'm ecstatic," Miss Castro said. Besides ballet, she has studied Flamenco, character, folklorico, jazz, modern and tap dancing. She also plays the piano, organ and clarinet.

Miss Castro, who received her degree in business administration, won a $10,000 scholarship as part of her prize in the contest. She said she plans to use the scholarship money to get a master's degree to eventually become a certified public accountant.

"But right now, I have only one goal: To become the new Miss America," Miss Castro said. She will be competing for that title in Atlantic City, N.J., this fall.

Miss Lyle, an earlier talent competition winner, impressed judges with her piano renditions of Moscow Nights and Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Miss Dallas, Shelly St. John, was second runner-up, with Miss Lake O' The Pines, Lisa Alaniz, capturing third runner-up and Miss Haltom-Richland Area, Debbie Riecks, rounding out the top five.

Other finalists were Miss Arlington, Tracey Way; Miss Fort Worth, Amy Jones; Miss Montague County, Susan McMurray; Miss Southeast Texas, Monica Perry; and Miss White Settlement, Suzanne Nelson.

The pageant is the official state competition for contestants in the Miss America Pageant. Education scholarship funds are awarded to contestants for achievement in the pageant.

Fifty percent of the judging is based on talent with the remaining portion divided among swimsuit, evening gown and interviews.

The women competed in evening gown, talent, swimsuit and interview contests in three groups over three days.

Miss Castro is a 1984 graduate of McAllen Memorial High School. She majored in business administration in college with a minor in computer science.

Apartment owners differ on how to handle drug haven

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas landlords who own known drug havens are unsure how they should screen potential tenants or what to do when they find drug dealers in their complexes, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

A former and current assistant police chief and a police corporal in the Dallas Police Department and a Dallas school board member are among the property owners grappling with the problem; the newspaper reported in a copyright story.

The apartment units or complexes, sometimes referred to as "crack houses," may be used for illegal purposes, but there is no evidence that the property owners engaged in criminal activity, the newspaper reported.

Police repeatedly have raided apartment complexes owned by Tom Y. Wesson, Bill Long, Robert G. Burkhead, Scott Belsley and Dallas school board member Thomas G. Jones.

Assistant Dallas Police Chief Leslie R. Sweet and former Assistant Chief Charles R. Busby had the first mortgage on one Wesson and Long complex when it was raided.

Another apartment complex owned by Dallas police Cpl. Thomas M. Payne also has been raided.

Busby went before a Dallas County grand jury this month after coming under criticism for charging "administrative fees" to Dallas businesses wanting to hire off-duty police officers. He was cleared of a charge of operating an unlicensed security guard agency, but he retired shortly afterwards.

Sweet, assistant chief for administration, was on vacation last week and unavailable for comment. But Busby says he and Sweet were unaware of the intensity of drug activity where they have owned property.

"I mean, I knew there's a huge drug problem in Dallas. I didn't know anything about the specifics of where high incidences were," he said.

Jones and Belsley are among those who have criticized Dallas police for failing to help them keep their property free of drug dealers.

Wesson, Long and Burkhead say that forcing the drug dealers out would put them out of business because many of their apartments are vacant.

"I can go over there and put the druggers and the rest of them out of my buildings, board the buildings up, give them back to the bank and then hunt me a job," Long said.

The Times Herald's investigation found:

- Properties co-owned by Wesson and Long or owned solely by Wesson, have been raided the most of any Dallas landlord — more than 40 times in the past 18 months. The raids resulted in more than 40 arrests and the seizure of drugs.

- Court records support Jones' claims that he was already seeking to evict the tenants arrested in the 15 raids on his properties. Records also show that Jones has sought to evict tenants he suspected of dealing drugs.

- Two apartments in a single complex owned by Burkhead were raided eight times from April 1987 to May 1988. Properties owned by Belsley have been raided at least 23 times in the past 18 months.

Joe Johnson, of J&J Management, is a landlord who has had success in removing drug dealers from his property. Johnson says the solution requires a phone call and a little patience.

"You don't have to do anything," Johnson said. "You just have to call it in. If it's a drug-related problem, it takes a little time. The city has to make a buy to have probable cause to get a warrant. I've got no problems with the city. I'm very pleased with the city."

But Wesson, Long and Burkhead say running drug dealers off their property is not economically feasible.

"I do what it takes to survive. When they walk in here with the deposit and a month's rent, and you're looking at a $1,900 mortgage payment on the building, what do you do? Do you say no?" Wesson said.

Phillips storage tank fire under control

BORGER (AP) — Firefighter crews continued to watch for flare ups Sunday at the site of a gasoline tank storage blaze at a Phillips Petroleum Co. refinery after the fire burned out late Saturday night.

The blaze erupted about 7:30 p.m. Thursday. It was put out around 9:30 p.m. that same night but reignited just before 1 p.m. Friday.

The fire continued to burn throughout Friday and Saturday before finally being brought under control late Saturday night.

Firefighters from Houston-based Boots and Coots arrived at the site Friday when the fire flared for a second time. The fire had diminished significantly around midnight Friday, but still was burning in spots when it reignited Saturday, officials said.

Phillips spokesman E. A. Borths of Borger said there was no danger of an explosion at the site.

Boots and Coots crews left town late Saturday as the fire continued smoking as it was allowed to burn out.

"At some point, the fire is going to burn out. There will be no fuel left to burn," company spokesman Dan Harrison said late Friday as crews watched the scene. Harrison said crews continued applying water to the tank and surrounding equipment and were still transferring fuel from the tank into another.

The gasoline ignited after heavy rain from a thunderstorm sank the tank's floating roof, which is designed to rise and fall with the volume of gasoline, officials said.

"The tank's floating roof began sinking after heavy rains," Harrison said. "The water from the rain caused the roof to sink into the gasoline. We began applying foam to seal the roof and, during the application of foam, the fire broke out."

"The source of that ignition has not been determined," Harrison said.

Harrison said the tank remained intact.

Company officials said no one was injured in the fire, refinery operations were unaffected and the fire was contained in the 80,000-barrel tank.

Black smoke poured from the tank fire and was visible for miles in the sparsely settled area. No evacuations were necessary, officials said.

The tank contained 50,000 to 55,000 barrels of gasoline when the fire first broke out Thursday evening. Workers drained fuel from the tank at a rate of about 2,500 barrels an hour.

Firefighters from Phillips refineries at Borger and Sweeney sprayed water and foam on the tank and water on nearby tanks and equipment to keep them cool.

Steve Milburn, a company spokesman, said the closest tank is 150 yards away.

Two access roads to the refinery were closed after the flames broke out. The refinery is 55 miles northeast of Amarillo.

LULAC glows from presidential courting

DALLAS (AP) — The 59th annual LULAC convention, complete with slick presentations and the attentions of three presidential candidates, illustrates how the group has evolved, officials say.

The League of United Latin American Citizens convention ended Sunday with the election of Jose Garcia De Lara of San Antonio as national president.

"Fifteen years ago, we focused on the civil rights movement, police brutality, illegal searches. Those things were obvious," said Oscar Moran of San Antonio, who has served as LULAC national president for the past three years.

"But we began to evolve and emerge with electoral resources and a brain trust," Moran told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. He said now the group conducts many of its battles in the boardrooms.

LULAC's long-term agenda has turned to three general areas of concern — education, political empowerment and jobs. During the week, LULAC and executives at Ford Motor Co. announced agreement to discuss what LULAC sees as a low percentage of Hispanic workers in the Ford labor force.

Also, LULAC delegates heard Vice President George Bush promise to name a Hispanic to his Cabinet if elected. Democratic candidates Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson followed with their own promises of increased Hispanic political participation.

LULAC leaders said the increased attention from corporate and political circles demonstrated the growing power of the Hispanic community. The number of registered Hispanic voters has grown from 488,000 in 1976, to 1.1 million today.

"We have a right to the attention," said Armando Navarro, director of the Los Angeles-based group, Impacto '88. "The sleeping giant is no longer sleeping. What we're saying is, don't take us for granted."

Moran's resignation from the presidency triggered an intense four-man race for the leadership of the nation's largest and oldest Hispanic civic organization.

De Lara, LULAC's state director, won the presidency in a runoff with Rafael Acosta of Houston, national LULAC vice president for the Southwest region.

Some LULAC leaders criticized Moran's leadership and said the organization, which claims 100,000 members, is losing its aggressive edge.

"National LULAC has been very low-key in the past few years, and not really addressing important issues to Hispanics as a whole," said Victor Gonzalez, director of LULAC Council No. 1 in Corpus Christi.

Past LULAC president Ruben Bonilla said as the sophistication of LULAC's membership grows, there is a danger of losing touch with a "genuinely needy" constituency.

De Lara takes oath of office.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Beef and oranges helping free trade

With the mood for protectionism still rampant, we should cherish every blow for free trade, however limited it may be. Japanese and U.S. trade negotiators solved a long-standing dispute concerning some American food exports to Japan. Tokyo agreed to eliminate all quotas on beef imports and fresh oranges in three years, and on orange juice in four years. And Japan agreed to lower tariffs on several other agricultural products. Japan currently limits American beef imports to 214,000 metric tons a year. The trade liberalization should mean $1 billion more American sales to Japan.

The tariffs will still exist, and many other Japanese tariffs and quotas remain (not to mention American tariffs and quotas), but the move should help in reducing trade tensions. In particular, congressional protectionists should be somewhat mollified. Even as they have helped build walls around America (among other ways with auto and microchip quotas), our politicians have maintained that the Japanese should reduce their trade barriers. But the more barriers Japan reduces, the less water this excuse of American protectionists will hold.

Let's not forget, though, that the very idea of trade retaliation is itself bankrupt. Japanese trade barriers actually hurt Japan far more than they hurt American companies. Restrictions on rice imports, for example, force Japanese families to pay ten times the world price for this staple. And American import restrictions likewise hurt our consumers by driving up prices; they hurt our companies by (a) increasing raw materials and other operating costs and (b) depriving them of competition that would make them leaner and meaner in the world marketplace.

The new beef and orange agreement, predictably, is already facing trouble. Japanese farmers, instead of finding a cheaper way to produce their product, or switching to some other crop, are complaining that they cannot hope to compete with the cheap Yankee imports. Doesn't this sound like the same complaints that come from Lee Iacocca and other American protectionists about cheap Japanese products?

Some government officials in Tokyo and Washington are now talking about a U.S.-Japanese free-trade accord similar to the one recently signed by the United States and Canada. That's still many years off, and the protectionist tide in both countries will have to ebb quite a bit before it even has a chance of becoming a reality. Let's hope that this week's agreement, though of a minor nature, points the ship of trade away from the rocks of protectionism and toward the safe harbor of free trade.

NOW, I'M GOING TO POP THE BIG QUESTION.

WHAT'S GOING TO HAPPEN WITH THE EVER-INCREASING AMOUNT OF NUCLEAR WASTE?

A good term, not a great one

The quietest term of the U.S. Supreme Court in many years wound up recently with a few firecracker pops and one good bang. Some terms of court are marked by fratricidal goring and gouging among the justices. This time we saw a peaceable kingdom.

How peaceful was it? In the 1986-87 term, the court handed down 44 opinions without dissent. In the term just ended, 63 of the 148 decisions provoked no opposition. Last year eight members of the court (not counting Powell) cast 281 dissenting votes. This time they cast only 212. As always, the justices exchanged a few sizzling insults, but for the most part they were on their very best behavior.

An explanation lies in the maturing personality of William Rehnquist. In this term he made an interesting discovery: He discovered that he truly is chief justice of the United States. As such he put his formidable powers of charm and persuasion to effective use.

He dissented in only 24 cases, down from 35 in the preceding term. He gently muzzled the court's most redoubtable liberals. He undertook to speak for the court in half a dozen close cases of criminal jurisprudence — cases in which he would have dissented a few years ago. Rehnquist still leads the court's "conservative" bloc, but he split 24 times with Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and 18 times with Justice Antonin Scalia.

Until the final two weeks, this term had been mostly one big yawn. January brought a notable decision affecting high school newspapers: high school principals, the court ruled, may act in the role of publishers. In February, Rehnquist resoundingly upheld old doctrines of a free press; the Rev. Jerry Falwell could not recover damages for the "emotional distress" he suffered from a vicious parody in Hustler magazine. In April, the court upheld federal regulation of state bonds. In May came the great trash bag case, in which police were given authority to root through a citizen's discarded belongings.

Finally, in late June, a few fireworks began to erupt. The court voted 9-0 to uphold a New York City ordinance that treats large private social clubs as places of public accommodation. Another important decision will protect homeowners against harassment from ideological picketing. The court held that labor unions may not play fast and loose with the "agency fees" extorted from non-union workers.

On the last day of the term came the closest thing to a big bang: The court voted 7-1 (Kennedy not participating) to uphold the law providing for the appointment of independent counsels in cases involving high-ranking members of the executive branch. Rehnquist spoke for the majority. The case is styled as Morrison v. Olson.

Here in the capital, where we breathe politics as others breathe smog, the decision set off a wild buzzing of both jubilation and dismay. Liberals happily saw it as a "stunning blow" and "stinging defeat" for the Reagan administration. Conservatives cried that the ruling gravely undermines the old doctrine of separation of powers.

In my own view, the Morrison case was wrongly decided, but I suspect its importance has been overblown. Under the act providing for independent counsels, such prosecutors are named by a panel of judges at the request of the attorney general.

Once appointed, the counsels are in fact "independent." For all practical purposes, they become superior to the attorney general; they can be "terminated" only by the appointing judicial panel. They exercise executive powers — powers vested by the Constitution in the president — but the president has no authority over them. Justice Scalia's passionate dissenting opinion provided a convincing, if lonesome, rebuttal to Rehnquist's opinion for the majority.

My own thought is that it is very late in the day to protest the "undermining" of the principle of separation of powers. The undermining began more than a century ago with the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Since then a dozen agencies have emerged, all of them with quasi-legislative and judicial powers. The three branches today are about as separate as homogenized milk.

The howls and snickers were set off because of Rehnquist's authorship. After all, he owes his eminence to Reagan's confidence in his judgment. A Virginia professor said Rehnquist had given new meaning to the word "ingratitude." But the history of the high court is replete with examples of justices who would not stay tied. All in all, as they say of vintage years, this was a good term — but not a great one.

A message is more effective

Actor Pat Boone went on the air in 1970 promoting an acne cream. When the effectiveness of the cream was questioned, he got the blame.

Actor Lloyd Bridges encouraged viewers to invest with J.B. Obie & Associates before it declared bankruptcy and he ended up as a defendant in a lawsuit.

Art Linkletter was on the air promoting a low-cost insurance plan for the elderly. Now state insurance regulators have ordered him and it off the air, calling the ads "false and misleading."

Actress Cher says you should exercise at Chicago Health Club, implying you can have a body like hers — when much of hers was fashioned by a surgeon's scalpel.

The whole idea of celebrities seeking to transfer their own popularity to some product or service is a questionable practice.

Video Storyboard, in its 10th annual survey of the most effective TV commercials, discovered that this year's most effective are employing no "live people" at all. They are commercials with animated dancing raisins and the English bulldog Spuds MacKenzie, and computer created Max Headroom.

Paul Harvey

Footnoting this year's survey, Storyboard President David Vadehra notes that people "are having a harder time these days remembering any commercials that they consider special."

"More and more," he says, "people believe that all brands are basically the same."

Yet, advertisers continue to solicit endorsements from "the stars," especially for cosmetics.

Michael J. Fox's acrobatic commercial for a soda pop won three awards in international competition for TV commercials though only 1.2 percent of the viewing audience can identify which soft drink he is promoting.

There is a further risk in this alliance between actors and advertisers. The flamboyant lifestyle of actor Bruce Willis caused embarrassment to his sponsor, the Seagram Company.

Cybill Shepherd caused embarrassment to her Beef Council sponsor when she was quoted off-camera as saying she does not eat beef.

There is a formula for effective advertising that only a few have discovered so far. You know that John Houseman spoke for Smith-Barney. You know that Bill Cosby sells Jell-O. You know that Cliff Robertson promotes the merits of AT&T.

Each appears convinced and convincing. Cliff Robertson is "believable" in his low-key explanation of "reliable telephone service."

Each of these most effective of all recent ads owes its product identification not to the messenger so much as to the message.

Tawana epic only attracts the Barnums

By CHUCK STONE

The name, Tawana Brawley, may not strike an immediate mnemonic chord in your mind, but she is currently the vortex of a storm that has swirled into the biggest media hustle since the phony Adolf Hitler diaries. The media is hustling Brawley. Her advisers are hustling the media. And both are hustling the public.

Brawley is the black teenager from Wappingers Falls, N.Y., who claims that six white men (including a police officer) raped her last November and abducted her for four days.

Any rape is a brutal, dehumanizing experience. But three factors escalated Brawley's case into a gruesome cause celebre — her accusation that it was a racial gang rape, her accusation that a policeman participated, and the subsequent role of three prominent New York City black activists as Brawley's advisers. On their advice, she has refused to cooperate with investigating authorities. Increasingly, the case resembles a rotten apple in the criminal justice system's barrel of already rotten apples. And that's the problem.

White New York City-area policemen have victimized and killed so many blacks under frighteningly suspicious circumstances in the last three years that blacks are quick to believe any reckless accusations.

Media manipulator Rev. Al Sharpton (a fastidiously manicured civil rights hustler), two prominent black civil rights lawyers, and a series of incredible accusations have legitimized Brawley's charges. Circulation-embattled New York City newspapers are having daily reportorial orgies.

From the gitgo, I've felt that the Brawley case was a hoax. I'm not suggesting she wasn't raped. But neither the FBI nor any other police investigators have been able to corroborate her accusations. Conflicts in her story involving her actions during the time she was missing have surfaced, as well as information about stormy relationships within her family. Then the king of electronic P.T.

Barnums, Phil Donahue, took over center stage.

Recently, Wall Street Journal critic Robert Goldberg capsulized TV's nastiness with a throwback to the caveman, Morton Downey Jr. of "The Morton Downey Jr. Show," as "Phil Donahue for hoodlums." That is a terrible insult to all self-respecting American hoodlums. Downey, whose thoughtless venom spews from his mouth without being interrupted by his brain, is the newest kid on the electronic block.

He has followed capacious Oprah Winfrey whose shows combine a vast experience ("I know, it happened to me, honey") and intense desire to wrap her smooth brown arms around you and smother you with motherly kisses.

Meanwhile, Donahue, who started it all, comes on like Jack Armstrong, all-American boy (with white hair), dripping sincerity like syrup oozing out of a Vermont maple tree. After Winfrey wasted Donahue in the ratings, however, he was forced to be less cerebral and more gonadal. But all three hosts are variations on the same theme. Their purpose is to get as salacious, inquisitorial, compassionate and entertaining as possible, without making idiots out of themselves.

Not too long ago, Donahue did the Brawley case and succumbed. He lost control of his show. The predominantly black audience and one of Brawley's legal advisers took over the show and turned it into a media circus. No new information was revealed. No understanding was increased. When the show ended, the audience was still racially polarized.

It was show business, not journalism. What's even more troublesome is that when urbane journalist Ted Koppel interviewed the Brawley case participants, he came off as poorly as Donahue, although he did manage to maintain control of his show.

In this videocracy, Donahue, Winfrey and Downey are electronic P.T. Barnums.

I haven't figured out Koppel's role yet.

American metal ware, glass companies merged in 1894

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

We hear a lot today about corporate mergers, but there's nothing new about the idea. In the 19th century, the Pairpoint Manufacturing Company was formed to make britannia metal wares. The factory was built next door to the famous Mount Washington Glass Company in New Bedford, Mass.

The two companies were not only neighbors but also had many stockholders in common, so it seemed natural that the companies should merge, which they did in 1894.

The resulting new company made glass lampshades and metal lamp bases, glass cookie jars with metal trim and glass epergnes in metal holders.

In the 1870s, the company claims, it was the first American firm to make decorated opal glass shades. They also made electric lamps which by the 1890s were being sold in the best stores for over $100, a very high price for a lamp in the 19th century. Pairpoint lamps competed with the leaded glass lamps of Tiffany and others.

Pairpoint made three types of blown, not molded, shades. Shades were called blow-outs, ribbed shades and scenic shades. The bases were made of metal with bronze, brass, copper or silver finish and wooden bases.

Some of the shades were signed with the company name. Collectors search for all Pairpoint shades, especially the blow-out variety.

Collectors often search for a special type of pottery made long before the history of the ware became well known. Two new books have been published that are filled with color pictures, history, and the marks used by the potters.

Clarice Cliff, The Bizarre Affair by Leonard Griffin, Louis Meisel and Susan Meisel (Abrams, $19.95) tells about the English wares of the 1920s to 1988 designed by Clarice Cliff. Moorcroft Pottery by Paul Atterbury (Richard Dennis, 144 Kensington Church St., London W8, $76) pictures the English pottery by William Moorcroft made from 1898 to 1986.

Q. We finally found a secret compartment in our 1780 Chippendale desk. Inside we found a note reading, "I found it first, October, 1922." What sort of things were usually kept in secret compartments?

A. There were few places to store valuables in the 18th century, and the secret compartment was often a substitute for a safe-deposit box. Land or house deeds, important contracts and money were stored in hidden places.

The design of a desk's interior pigeonholes is a clue to secret spaces. Thin, columnlike decorations often hid small document compartments. Drawers that seem too short mask a secret storage space behind.

Some secret compartments are difficult to open. Look for levers, loose handles, small latches or even holes meant for a sharp pointed "key." Secret compartments have not been forgotten. We recently saw a bedroom dresser with a shortened drawer, behind which was a secret hiding place for jewelry or money.

Q. I just found an old tin box that looks like a windmill. The blades turn. The design on the box includes a doorway and a lady inside holding a box. I understand that it is valuable.

A. You may have a famous English biscuit or cookie box made for Huntley and Palmer. Hundreds of shaped and decorated biscuit tins were made as commercial packages in England from 1868 to 1939. A few of lesser quality have been made since then.

The windmill box was made by Huntley, Boorne and Stevens in 1924. It is very popular with tin collectors.

Q. Where would my 80-year-old cut glass decanter be signed? There are designs all over the sides. Even the base is cut like a star.

A. About one out of 10 pieces of cut glass are signed. Makers often bought the glass from a glassworks, then cut it in their shops.

Acid-etched marks were sometimes placed on an available flat surface like the inside of a large bowl. The cut sections were not marked.

TIP: Have an extra key made to fit doors and drawers in old furniture. Stick it to the bottom of the piece with a wad of gum or tape.

John Sturgill
John Sturgill, son of George and Donna Sturgill of 1149 Huff Road, has been awarded a $500 scholarship from the Army Scholarship Organization.

Sturgill is a 1988 graduate of Pampa High School, where he was a member of the Pride of Pampa band, junior and senior drum major, all-area band, all-state alternate and stage band.

He plans to attend Texas Tech University, where he will study commercial art/design communications and become a member of the Army ROTC, earning an officer's commission in the Army after his senior year at Tech.

Brenda Graham
Brenda Graham, daughter of Elaine Graham of Pampa, is the recipient of a $500 scholarship from Magic Plains Chapter of American Business Women's Association.

The 1988 Pampa High School graduate plans to attend West Texas State University and major in special education. She is working toward a career in sign language interpretation and service to the hearing impaired.

Joel Ray Quisenberry
Joel Ray Quisenberry, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Quisenberry of Pampa, competed in the third annual Fourth of July Talent Search held July 2-3 in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Joel performed a vocal to "Texas When I Die" and a song and dance to "Nobody Does It Better." Both numbers placed in the top 10 out of the 20 acts in the 3-6 age group.

"Nobody Does It Better" was awarded Most Entertaining Act of the 88 acts from the 3-12 age divisions.

Joel's vocal coach is Danny

TEXAS A&M UNIVERSITY
COLLEGE STATION — Two students from Pampa were named to the Dean's Honor Roll for the 1988 spring semester at Texas A&M University, and three Pampa students received their degrees at the university's spring commencement exercises.

Dean's Honor Roll students from Pampa are Cami L. Dunham and Julie L. Hamilton, both junior psychology majors.

In order to be named to the Dean's Honor Roll, a student must be registered for 15 or more semester hours and earn at least a 3.75 grade point ratio, out of a possible 4.0, during the most recent grading period.

A total of 3,103 degrees were awarded, including 2,566 bachelor's, 425 master's and 112 doctorates, during the university's

Phones can harbor bacteria

NEW YORK (AP) — Most people see a hospital as a place to get better but last year 2 million Americans left hospitals with viruses they didn't have when they walked in, reports Health Magazine.

It says disease control researchers in Atlanta found that hard to control hospital bacteria are responsible for all sorts of infections, including staph, strep and urinary tract complications. The problem has become so great that fatalities are estimated as high as 20,000 people a year.

Some hospitals are fighting the germs by providing patients with disposable telephones the patients may take home after their stay. Researchers estimate up to 100 types of bacteria can accumulate on hospital room phones.

Abby's namesake dairy cow produces cream of the crop

DEAR ABBY: Sorry to be so late in writing, but I kept putting it off until now. In March of 1986, one of our cows gave birth to twin heifers. Naturally we were quite excited and wanted to give them special names. No matter whom we asked, "Abby and Ann" were the names everyone suggested. Our herd is 30 percent registered and we've been milking since 1957.

Well, "Abby" calved last May, and we would like you to name her heifer. We must register her name in August, so please get the name to us as soon as possible.

Thank you for your cooperation. I hope you consider this an honor. It really is.

JENNIFER JAMES, VERDON, NEB.

DEAR JENNIFER: I've had show dogs, racehorses, monkeys and babies named after me, but this is my first registered cow. I am honored. And since I am privileged to name "Abby's" heifer, my choice is "Jeanne" — after my firstborn, who has given her blessing and approval. (P.S. When "Ann" calves, if it's a heifer, let her name the udder one.)

DEAR ABBY: My stepfather (I'll call him Ralph) and my mother got a divorce last year. Since then,

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Ralph and his new girlfriend had a baby boy. They named him Michael. My question: Is Michael related to me? If yes, what is he to me? Is Ralph still my stepfather? (I still consider him my stepfather, as he is very dear to me.)

I have a half-brother, "Tommy," from the marriage of Ralph and my mother. Ralph's new baby, Michael, would, I believe, be Tommy's half-brother, right?

I also have a 3-year-old son named Victor. If I am related to Michael, what would the relationship between Victor and Michael be? Also, my mother just remarried again. Is her new husband also my stepfather, and my son's step-grandpa?

We would all like to have answers to these questions. Ralph and I feel that we are still step-relations even though he and my mother are no longer married to each other. Victor also calls Ralph "Grandpa." Is that OK? Thank you for straightening all this out.

ALL MIXED UP IN MONTGOMERY, ALA.

DEAR ALL MIXED UP: Ralph may be very dear to you, but he is no longer your stepfather — your mother's new husband is.

Michael is not related to you, but you are right — Michael and Tommy are half-brothers. Michael and Victor are not related to each other. And Victor may call Ralph anything he wishes, as long as it's all right with Ralph.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: If you've been hitching rides regularly with a co-worker, neighbor or friend, when was the last time you offered to fill up the gas tank? Or is your friendship riding on "empty" indefinitely?

Abby's favorite family recipes are included in her new cookbook! For your copy, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Several important changes in your life-style are likely in the year ahead. Some will be of your own volition, others will be your response to circumstances. You will work out well.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Strive to be supportive of your loved one today, not possessive. You'll be walking a thin line and you'll have to be careful you don't overstep it. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Disappointment is in the offing today if you expect things to fall in your lap without expending proper effort. Work yields rewards.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're very straight forward in conversations you have with friends, but today you might try to camouflage your statements.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're presently in a good achievement cycle, yet there is a chance you could be overly influenced by self-doubts. Overgard them and have faith in your talents and abilities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your current plans are feasible and should produce the types of results you desire. Don't place more credence in the ideas of others than they deserve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your chances of receiving something you're entitled to look very good at this time. Demand your rights instead of depending on the whims of another.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not disregard the ideas or suggestions of your mate today, because his or her judgment regarding a critical, mutual issue may be better than yours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Where your career is concerned today steer clear of a person who has reason to be jealous of your recent achievements. This individual is looking to upstage you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you truly intend to accomplish what you set out to do today, being timid will have no role in your actions. You must be bold and determined, without being reckless.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Restrict confidential family matters to the confines of your home today. Loose talk when played back could be considerably distorted in the transmission.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Back up your promises and commitments with sincerity today. You'll hurt others more by reneging on a pledge than you would if you didn't make it in the first place.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Possibilities for personal gain look encouraging today, provided you don't get careless. When negotiating business matters stay focused on the issue.

Matson inducted into National High School Hall of Fame

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Randy Matson, a high school track and field star at Pampa, was among 14 people inducted Friday night into the National High School Sports Hall of Fame.

Matson went from Pampa to Texas A&M, where he continued his track greatness, winning a silver medal in the shot put at the 1964 Olympics and a gold medal at the 1968 Olympics. His toss of 71 feet, 5 1/2 inches in 1971 set a world record.

Among the others inducted was Ralph Tasker, still the basketball coach at Hobbs, N.M. High School after nearly four decades. His record of 887-208 at Hobbs includes a 24-6 season last spring that ended in his 11th state championship.

The high school hall of fame was started in 1982 by the National Federation of State High School Associations, based in Kansas City. Induction ceremonies concluded the federation's 69th annual meeting.

Those included in the hall of fame include athletes, coaches, officials and administrators in high school sports.

Others inducted included former pro football stars Len Dawson, Jim Taylor and Elroy "Crazylegs" Hirsch.

Dawson, former quarterback of the Kansas City Chiefs, played football and basketball at Alliance High School in Ohio. He played in the National Football League for 19 seasons and led the Chiefs to a Super Bowl victory in 1970.

Taylor played football and basketball at Baton Rouge High School in Louisiana. In nine years with Green Bay, he helped the Packers win three NFL championships and the first Super Bowl in 1966.

Hirsch, a football and basketball standout at Wisconsin's Wausau High School, played three years with the Chicago Rockets of the All-American Football Conference and nine years with the NFL's Los Angeles Rams. He recently retired after 19 years as athletic director at Wisconsin.

Other inductees for 1988:

— Wright Bazemore, who forged a 290-43-6 record as football coach at Valdosta, Ga., High School. Bazemore retired in 1971 after 28 years at Valdosta with a winning percentage of .855.

— Augie Bossu, a 40-year veteran of coaching high school football and regarded as one of Cleveland's all-time greats. Bossu, who is preparing for his 34th season at Benedictine High, has compiled a 246-77-15 record and won three state titles.

— Dan Gaylord, who officiated football in Alabama for 26 years and has spent decades helping train officials. He was a charter member of the Birmingham Football Officials Association and serves as the BFOA's secretary and booking agent at age 86.

— Cliff Hagan, a basketball standout at Owensboro, Ky., High School. Hagan helped Kentucky win an NCAA championship in 1951 and finish the regular season undefeated in 1954. He played 10 years for the St. Louis Hawks of the National Basketball Association and is now athletic director at Kentucky.

— Brutus Hamilton, who set state records as a track star with Harrisonville, Mo., High School in 1918. Considered one of the nation's most versatile track athletes, he won a silver medal in the decathlon at the 1920 Olympics and later coached for 33 years at the University of California. Hamilton died in 1970.

— Bob Jamieson, one of the nation's top multi-sport coaches. From 1933 to 1975 at Greensboro, N.C. High School (renamed Grimsley High in 1962), he led teams to 11 state titles while coaching football, basketball, golf and girls' swimming.

— Mel Otero, hailed as one of the best basketball and football officials in New Mexico. A native of Albuquerque, Otero retired in 1983 after a 36-year career.

— Robert Siddens, the winningest wrestling coach in Iowa history. In a 26-year career at West High School in Waterloo, Iowa, he compiled a 327-26-3 record and won 11 state championships.

— John Youngblood, who retired in 1986 after 35 years as a coach and administrator. He served 27 years at Washington Lee, Va. High and was supervisor of athletics for Arlington, Va., public schools.

U.S. gymnasts compete for rights to journey to Seoul

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Dan Hayden has conquered the U.S. Gymnastics Championships and now he's ready for bigger things—in fact, the world.

"I feel like I'm a complete gymnast now and I'm ready to take on the world," Hayden said Sunday after winning two events and tying for a third individual title.

By "the world," Hayden referred to the Olympic Games in Seoul, Korea and he feels as confident about his chances as anyone.

"There are about 10 guys at Seoul that can win the gold," Hayden said. "It will depend on who does the best at the time."

Hayden won the parallel bars and the still rings and tied for the horizontal bars title in individual championships Sunday at The Summit.

Hayden, who won the men's all-around title Saturday, will join the women's champion, Phoebe Mills, in leading the U.S. team into the Olympic Trials Aug. 4-7 at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Mills repeated the same floor routine in Sunday's individual program that helped her win the all-around title on Saturday.

The routine, accompanied by the Western song Red River Valley, is the same routine she plans to take all the way to the Olympics.

"I'm just going to concentrate on being 100 per cent from here on out," Mills said. "I just put it in my mind to go out and stick all of my routines."

Hayden shared the gold medal in parallel bars with Kevin Davis of the University of Nebraska.

Davis, who finished second to Hayden in the men's all-around competition, and Hayden each had 9.8 scores in parallel bars.

While Mills won the gold in the floor exercise, the highest score in the finals went to teammate Chelle Stack, who had a 9.938 score in the individual competition.

Phoebe Mills, top, turns in a third-place performance on the balance beam, while Bob Gauthier finished second on the still rings during Sunday's U.S. Gymnastics Championships.

Pampa 13 all-stars roll on Pampa's 13-year-old All-Stars racked up another District Tournament victory Sunday when they defeated the Top of Texas All-Stars 8-4 at Optimist Park.

The game was played Sunday due to a Saturday night rain-out, but that didn't dampen the spirits of Pampa sluggers, who collected nine hits to move into tonight's winner's bracket.

Tarin Peet pitched six innings to capture the mound win. He was relieved in the seventh inning by Jeff Tidwell, who was credited with the save. The two combined for seven strike outs and five bases on balls, yielding only four runs on four hits.

Pampa jumped to a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning. Top of Texas knotted the score at two during their first at-bat. Pampa went up 6-2 with a run in the second and three runs in the fourth.

Top of Texas brought two runners home in the fifth to tighten the score, 6-4. Pampa scored a run in the sixth and the seventh to complete the scoring and wrap up the victory.

Jason Brantley was Pampa's leading hitter with two singles. Brandon Brashears, Tarin Peet, Kurt West, Brad Smilie, Chris Poole, Jeff Tidwell and Dave Davis each hit one single in Pampa's second victory this weekend.

Pampa faces Dumas, who defeated Dalhart 21-5, in tonight's winner's bracket at 8:30. Dalhart and Canyon meet in the loser's bracket tonight at 6:00. Both games will be played at Optimist Park.

Sieckmann captures PGA win

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Life as Tom Sieckmann knew it is over, and he can think of several people who will be pleased to hear that.

"It's going to change some things for me, certainly. I'll probably pay off my creditors," Sieckmann said with a grin Sunday after collecting the biggest paycheck of his professional golfing career, $117,000 for winning the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic on the second hole of a playoff with Mark Wiebe.

The victory was Sieckmann's first in four years on the PGA Tour and helped ease the pain of a season in which he had missed the cut in 13 of 16 events.

Sieckmann, 33, of Omaha, Neb., pushed his earnings total to $159,690 for the season and $305,734 for his career.

"It's not the money so much, even though it is in a way," said Sieckmann, who lost his card and had to return to qualifying school after the 1987 season. "I'll spend the money one day, and I've got this the rest of my life. I won a tournament on the tour."

Sieckmann's final-round, 2-under-par 69 included six birdies and four bogeys on the 6,776-yard Kingsmill Golf Club layout. He forced the playoff with a birdie on the 177-yard 17th hole that left him tied with Wiebe at 270 after 72 holes. Wiebe closed with a 68.

On the first playoff hole, No. 16, the two made par-saving putts on the 427-yard dogleg right. Sieckmann two-putted from about 55 feet and Wiebe, who missed the green on his approach and left his third shot on the fringe, sank a 12-footer.

At the par-3 17th, neither player's tee shot found the narrow green, but both golfers came close to holing their second shots. Wiebe, in the short rough about 30 feet past the hole, chipped onto the green and the ball hit the cup before coming to rest about six feet away. Sieckmann, pin-high and about 20 away in the fringe, elected to putt his ball, which rolled just wide of the cup and stopped about two feet past it.

Harvester Booster Club meets tonight at 7 p.m. at Harvester fieldhouse to go over advertising plans and discuss the fall football season.

All-Stars prepare for traditional mid-summer match-up

On Tuesday, major league baseball's best, or at least most popular, players will gather to showcase their talents at Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati.

The annual All-Star game, which pits the American League's best against the National League's best, was the brain-child of Chicago Tribune sports editor Arch Ward. In 1933, Ward conceived of the "Dream Game" as part of Chicago's Century of Progress exposition at the World's Fair.

Most club owners didn't like the idea of bringing the regular season to a three-day halt for the sake of a single exhibition game, but the league presidents and then-Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis decided to give Ward's idea a go.

So, the first All-Star game was played on July 6, 1933, at Comiskey Park in Chicago before a packed house. Babe Ruth clinched a 4-2 American League victory with a third-inning homer.

Although the American League may have dominated the early years of the mid-summer match-up, the National League currently holds a 37-20 margin of victory. And despite the supposedly "meaningless" nature of the contest, that statistic may lead some to believe that the Nationals are simply a better group of ball players.

A glance at the World Series results over the years may help to balance the picture. In 84 championship series, American teams have won 49 times, compared to 35 for the Nationals.

The method of selecting All-Star players has been a source of controversy since the game's inception. In 1933, both league managers, John McGraw of the NL and Connie Mack of the AL, were issued a Chicago Tribune reader poll indicating which players local fans would enjoy seeing in the exhibition.

In Stride

By Sonny Bohanan

McGraw and Mack, however, chose to disregard the newspaper poll. In 1934, managers Joe Cronin and Bill Terry ignored that year's reader poll as well. Fan voting was discontinued after 1934, but it didn't end the problems plaguing player selection. In fact, managerial favoritism became the norm, making everyone, except the chosen players and their fans, unhappy.

Finally in 1947, fans were again invited to participate in electing the players, and all went relatively smoothly until a ballot-stuffing incident prior to the 1957 All-Star game compelled Commissioner Ford Frick to return the selection process to the ball clubs. But Frick did prohibit players, managers and coaches from selecting their own teammates in an effort to avoid the favoritism of the past.

This system continued successfully and unchallenged until the following decade when Commissioner Bowie Kuhn decided to return the voting to ticket-buyers. In 1970, he instigated placing computerized ballots at all the major league ball parks, giving the fans who attend games every chance to get in their two-cents worth.

This is the method used today, but it is still not without problems. A player's name must appear on the ballot in order for him to be an All-Star. Only two write-in candidates have made the team to date—Rico Carty in 1970, and Steve Garvey in 1974. Obviously, every fan is not going to be satisfied, but the computerized ballot system has enjoyed the longest life.

And regardless of the inherent problems, the All-Star game is still an enjoyable and usually exciting event. Things can, and often do, get a little wacky, like the time Charlie Hough, the Texas Rangers' "Mr. Knuckleball," struck out three batters but still failed to retire the side in the 1986 All-Star game.

Impossible, you say? Not impossible, but definitely improbable.

In the eighth inning, Hough struck out Chili Davis of the Giants. Expos' slugger Hubie Brooks then fanned, but the third strike got away from catcher Rich Gedman of the Boston Red Sox, allowing Brooks to reach first base. Then Hough retired Tim Lincecum of the Expos on strikes, Hough's third strike out of the inning—with only two outs recorded. The Americans went on to win, 3-2, one of their rare modern-day victories.

I'm sure Tuesday's game will have at least a few surprises for us. You'll find me planted in front of the tube.

Astros squeak past Mets, 6-5

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston Astros' sweep of the New York Mets sent the Mets out of town disagreeing over the Astros' potential.

A pinch-hit single by Rafael Ramirez in the ninth inning rallied the Astros to a 6-5 victory Sunday and completed a three-game sweep.

It disputed a comment by Mets center fielder Lenny Dykstra that the Astros are easily discouraged and gave rise to Wally Backman's contention that the Astros will be back to contend for the National League Western Division title.

Astros Manager Hal Lanier didn't forget Dykstra's statement in New York last week.

"After that statement by one of the Mets' players that this team is easy to get down on itself makes it particularly nice for us," Lanier said. The Astros went into the Mets' series with a five-game losing streak and eight losses in their last nine games. The sweep put the Astros one game over .500 at the All-Star break.

Backman remains a staunch Astros believer.

"I know they can turn it around any day," Backman said. "They have the best pitching in the West, no doubt about it. They match up against us better than anyone else."

Houston's Bill Doran kept the ninth inning rally going with a two-out single that knocked in Craig Reynolds with the tying run.

"I was just trying to put the ball in play," he said. "I got a high fastball and I got a hit."

Beating the Mets going into the All-Star break could be a big boost, Doran said.

"They're just not any team, but the way we've been playing we needed to beat anyone," Doran said. "Our backs were against the wall and we couldn't fall back any farther."

Roger McDowell, 4-2, got the loss in relief after Mets starter, All-Star David Cone, went seven innings, surrendered seven hits and four runs.

Houston's Juan Agosto, 6-0, benefitted from the Astros' 3-run resurgence in the eighth and ninth innings started by Terry Puhl's first home run of the season.

"Cone pitched a good ball game," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "He got behind to Puhl and that was it. It doesn't happen often, but it hurts when it does."

"We're capable of playing a lot better than this."

Houston's centerfielder Gerald Young provided the early offense for the Astros with a 4-for-5 performance.

Young, breaking out of a slump, helped offset 2-run homers by Mets' Kevin McReynolds and Howard Johnson.

"It was a good win and swinging the bat well made it that much more satisfying," Young said. "My defense, I don't have to worry about, but I do have to concentrate on my hitting."

"After the last 1½ weeks, coming home and sweeping the Mets is a great feeling — especially coming back in the last inning of the last game," Bell said.

Irvin signs with Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — The signing of first-round draft choice Michael Irvin gave a lift to the opening of Dallas Cowboys training camp.

Almost 100 rookies arrived Sunday to check into dormitories and prepare for today's first day of workouts, and among them was the University of Miami wide receiver whose agent, Mel Levine, worked out a contract agreement Saturday night in Dallas during three hours of negotiations with Cowboys vice president Joe Bailey.

Irvin signed his contract, worth roughly $1.85 million, on Sunday after arriving in camp.

Unlike wide receiver Mike Sherrard, the team's 1986 No. 1 choice who held out for 32 days in a contract dispute, Irvin's development won't be suppressed.

"There's no question when you are a No. 1 draft choice, you have the skills to do it," Cowboys pass offense coordinator Paul Hackett said. "We all saw what Sherrard, who missed a lot of camp, did at the end of his rookie year. That can happen to Michael Irvin in the middle of his rookie year." Hackett said the Cowboys initially will line up Irvin at flanker, his position at Miami.

"He'll be comfortable there," Hackett said.

Bailey said talks went smoother from the start with Irvin, as opposed to talks two years ago with Sherrard and last year with defensive lineman Danny Noonan, who held out for 42 days before signing.

"In my mind, I guess you would say we had the right chemistry. The single most important factor is Michael Irvin," Bailey said.

"He came in here and impressed the coaches as well as the community. He became an integral part of the community. He just loves to play football, and his goal was to come to camp and be there from Day One. He came in with a positive attitude and that set the tone for my conversations with Mel Levine."

"This all created an atmosphere in which there was relatively little disagreement at all," Bailey said.

Terms of Irvin's pact were not disclosed, but sources estimated the 4-year deal is worth $1.85 million, including a $750,000 signing bonus.

"This is great. This is terrific. This is tremendous," Irvin said. "I'm just totally elated. I think this shows how committed the Dallas Cowboys are to making this a winning team. I know I'm committed to them."

Cowboys president Tex Schramm said reaching an agreement with Irvin hours before the opening of preseason camp "will boost everybody and everything."

Schramm said Irvin, who caught 143 passes for 2,433 yards and 26 touchdowns in three seasons at the University of Miami, has "a great chance" to win a starting position.

"This is just what I needed. All along I wanted to get to camp on time because I need time to prepare," he said. Hackett agreed.

"It's never been a Cowboy thing to jump too quickly with a guy, but I think Michael's skills are obvious. And if he gets a chance to show them to Coach (Tom) Landry, to the team, to all of us, then very quickly he will become an integral part of our offense," Hackett said.

Irvin's contract reportedly includes a playing time incentive that could increase the contract's total value to $2 million. Irvin would have to play half of Dallas' offensive plays during the next four seasons to receive the bonus.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Dr. Mark Ford

Dr. Louis Haydon

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain of awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

Presser waves as he is rolled in on a red chariot at 1986 Teamsters meeting in Las Vegas.

Former Teamsters boss Presser remembered as corrupt and great

CLEVELAND (AP) — Teamsters President Jackie Presser, who died after leading the nation's largest union for five years, is being remembered both as a great leader and a man who maintained the Teamsters' reputation for corruption.

"Jackie will be remembered for guiding the Teamsters through difficult and successful contract negotiations during some of the hardest years for organized labor — the period of Ronald Reagan's all-out attack on the trade union movement," said Tom Turner, president of the Metropolitan Detroit AFL-CIO.

Presser, 61, died late Saturday in a suburban Cleveland hospital of cardiac arrest after being treated for brain cancer.

A federal lawsuit filed in New York last month claims the International Brotherhood of Teamsters is dominated by the Mafia. Presser was a defendant in the lawsuit.

The Teamsters leader also was awaiting trial in U.S. District Court in Cleveland on felony embezzlement and racketeering charges for allegedly participating in a payroll-padding scheme at Teamsters Local 507 in Cleveland. "It was pretty much more of the same, and the union went downhill," Ken Paff, national organizer for the dissident Teamsters for a Democratic Union, said Sunday of Presser's tenure.

"Presser said many times in public that he made millions of dollars off the union. He saw it as a business, and he inherited it from his father. We believe the union is a grass-roots union, that almost everything good we have in this country comes from unions," said Paff, a member of the small but vocal opposition within the larger 1.6-million member union.

Because of his health problems, Presser, who was paid about $800,000 a year, temporarily relinquished his duties in May to Teamsters secretary-treasurer Weldon Mathis.

A statement released Sunday by Mathis and the union's executive board said Presser's death "will be deeply felt."

"He will long be remembered for his progressive ideas and deep commitment to the labor movement," the statement said. "He was a great communicator and spokesman for the needs and concerns of working people."

Presser was an FBI informant, and his attorney, John Climaco, said Presser participated in the payroll-padding scheme with the agency's approval.

In a 1986 report, the White House Commission on Organized Crime concluded that Presser would not have become Teamsters president without the help of the head of the New York-based Genovese crime family, Anthony "Fat Tony" Salerno.

In May, Salerno was acquitted on charges of rigging the elections of Presser and Roy Williams, Presser's predecessor.

Presser, who denied ties with the mob, was known for a sometimes flamboyant personality. He weighed 350 pounds and once entered a union convention in Las Vegas while seated in a red chariot guided by men dressed as Roman soldiers.

Presser used his influence to win a Teamsters endorsement for Ronald Reagan in 1980 and was rewarded by being named labor co-chairman for Reagan's inaugural.

Presser's last major public appearance was in October 1987, when he spoke to the AFL-CIO biennial convention. At that meeting, the Teamsters were welcomed back into the union coalition after 30 years of exile on allegations that the union was influenced by corrupt forces.

Presser, the son of Teamsters organizer William "Big Bill" Presser, ascended to the Teamsters presidency in 1983 after Williams' conviction.

Presser's funeral is scheduled for Tuesday in Cleveland Heights.

Presser is survived by his fifth wife, Cynthia; his son, Gary; his daughter, Bari Lynn; and his mother, Faye.

Gorbachev talks reform to Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev arrived in Poland today for a six-day visit that likely will focus on efforts to breathe life into the economies of both countries.

Polish opposition activists, meanwhile, are seeking assurances of Soviet non-interference in Polish affairs.

Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's leader, greeted the Soviet Communist Party chief as Gorbachev's plane arrived from Moscow on the military side of Warsaw's Okęcie Airport on a mild, sunny morning.

Gorbachev's wife, Raisa, accompanied her husband, as she customarily does on foreign trips.

The Soviet leader's visit is to be capped at week's end by a summit meeting of the leaders of the Warsaw Pact allies.

It will be the first summit of the Soviet-led alliance since the U.S.-Soviet summit in Moscow and since Gorbachev's program of political and economic reform was soundly endorsed by an extraordinary Soviet Communist Party conference last month in Moscow.

Poland's leaders say the visit, coming so soon after the conference, will give new impetus to their "socialist renewal" of the economy and political system.

On the eve of the visit, however, seven members of the outlawed Polish Socialist Party were detained when they met in an apartment in the southwestern city of Wroclaw and police searched the Warsaw home of the leader of the illegal anti-communist Confederation of Independent Poland, opposition activists said.

The banned Solidarity independent labor federation praised Gorbachev's program of reform in the Soviet Union, saying it could be significant "if it serves for changes in the system in Poland and creation of a new model of Polish-Soviet relations."

Solidarity also urged Gorbachev to renounce the "Brezhnev doctrine," named after the late Soviet leader who intervened in the affairs of other East bloc countries, ostensibly to protect their communist systems.

Brezhnev was in power when the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski quashed Solidarity with a December 1981 military crackdown, outlawing the federation a year later.

Gorbachev, in earlier visits to Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, has emphasized his view that every East bloc country should be free to choose its own political course.

Solidarity also called for "clear and unambiguous words" from Gorbachev on the World War II massacre of 4,000 Polish army officers in the Katyn forest near Smolensk, which has been blamed on Soviet soldiers.

During his visit, Gorbachev is to address the Sejm, or parliament, and hold meetings with groups of young people, workers and intellectuals and artists.

He will also travel south to the former capital of Krakow and visit a mountain village where Vladimir I. Lenin spent time in 1913-14.

He also is to travel to a shipyard in Szczecin, a northwestern port city that once belonged to Germany. Polish officials have said Gorbachev's presence there will serve to emphasize the inviolability of Poland's western borders.

Interest in the Warsaw Pact meeting has intensified amid signs the Soviets may pull out some or all of their military forces from Hungary, where 65,000 troops have been stationed since the Soviets invaded in 1956 to end a rebellion.

B-1 bombers falling short of mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's B-1 bombers may not be able to fulfill their mission of penetrating Soviet air defenses in the 1990s, according to congressional and administration officials citing new test results.

Recent tests have shown problems with the B-1's Electronic Countermeasures, or ECM, system used to foil enemy radar, House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said in a memorandum sent to panel members and disclosed on Sunday.

Plans to build the B-1 were shelved during the Carter administration but revived under President Reagan as he persuaded Congress that a penetrating bomber was needed to bridge the gap between the aging fleet of B-52s and the B-2 or Stealth Bomber expected to become operational in the 1990s.

Reagan won approval for a version called the B-1B by pledging to keep the first 100 planes under a $28 billion ceiling. The planes became operational in 1986, although they are still undergoing tests and adjustments.

Aspin said in his two-page memorandum that "ECM has been the chief question mark in the B-1B's future as a penetrating bomber. It looks like we have our answer. The Air Force is now admitting that, because of a design flaw, it will never work as advertised."

The memo, excerpts of which were obtained by The Associated Press, quoted a letter from Air Force officials to the committee late last month saying that "there are limitations within the current system architecture."

Aspin said in his memo that "the Air Force acknowledged that those limitations will prevent the B-1B ECM from ever achieving full operational capability."

Despite the problems, Air Force officials said the plane should be able to penetrate Soviet air space until the introduction of the Stealth bomber, which is designed to appear as small as possible on enemy radar screens.

Air Force officials confirmed the information in Aspin's memo, but a spokesman, Capt. Jay de Frank, said "the current round of flight tests verified that the most important ECM techniques work, giving us a high degree of confidence that we can penetrate enemy defense and accomplish our mission."

The Air Force is trying to achieve what it calls Mod-1 capabilities on the bomber's ECM system, meeting specifications that were supposed to be achieved in 1986, according to Air Force and congressional officials.

The current hardware aboard the plane is not capable of meeting higher Mod-2 capabilities, those thought necessary for the plane to cope with expected improvements in Soviet air defenses by the 1990s, congressional sources said.

"The current system has a limitation which precludes achieving Mod-2 capabilities without modifying the hardware," de Frank said. "We are evaluating options to address these limitations."

The exact nature of the limitations is classified.

Texas guardsman killed in training exercise

KILLEEN (AP) — A Texas National Guardsman drowned and three others were injured when an armored personnel carrier sank Sunday morning in a creek during training exercises.

David A. Wynn Jr., 33, a National Guardsman attached to the 4th Battalion 112th Armor 49th Armored Division in Dallas, died in the accident when the M-106 personnel carrier attempted crossing Cowhouse Creek in the north part of Fort Hood, according to spokeswoman.

Three others were injured in the incident. Sgt. Kenneth Groves is in the intensive care unit with pneumonia at the Darnall Army Community Hospital. Spec. 4

Ramone Walker is being held there for observation.

Another soldier at the scene of the accident sustained minor injuries while trying to help the others from the vehicle.

Last summer, 11 part-time soldiers died in two unrelated training accidents at Fort Hood.
