Sheriff's officers continuing investigation into man's death

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

A two-story wood frame house, scene of the murder of a 28-year-old truck driver earlier this week, has been blocked off with tape and small sign saying "crime scene" attached to the front door.

It sits deserted near the Bowers City Road, 2 1/2 miles south of Pampa, with only an animal skull on the fence for company and the wind to rock the chair on the front porch.

Meanwhile, Gray County Sheriff's officers search for information which could lead them to the killer of Roy Leon Williams, who was found shot to death and stuffed in a hole in the floor of the old house.

"We're seeking information more than anything else," said Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan. "We're still processing a lot of things. We've got that old house all blocked off with tapes."

Sheriff Jordan said he had received some information and photographs from Kansas law enforcement authorities of the person he suspects of killing Williams. However, the sheriff said he has not yet located the person and no murder warrants have been issued.

"I would say he was a very dangerous individual, indeed," he commented.

Gray County Sheriff's deputies are also seeking a light tan, 1977 Oldsmobile owned by Williams that has been missing since the discovery of the body. Jordan said the car's license plates are 394-RS.

A warrant alleging unauthorized use of a motor vehicle has been issued for Stanley Roy Pendergrass, 36.

Williams was found by a fellow Bourland & Leverich employee at about 9:30 a.m. Tuesday after Williams did not show up for work for two days. Larry Quisenberry had tried to find Williams Monday when he did not appear for work, but the body was not found until Tuesday.

Williams had been a trucker for the company for three years.

His body was found in a 30-inch by 25-inch hole about two feet deep in the floor of the house Williams was renting from a Pampa couple. Pampa firefighters were called to enlarge the opening in order to remove the body.

An autopsy was ordered by Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts. Dr. Ralph Erdman, Amarillo pathologist, completed the autopsy by 6 p.m. Tuesday, and reported that Williams had died after being shot twice, once in the chest and once in the forehead.

Jordan said Williams had been shot in the chest with a shotgun and in the head with a small-caliber rifle, probably a 22-caliber. Time of death has been set between 12:30 a.m. and 2 a.m. Sunday, he said.

The hole where the body was found was used to store from eight to 10 weapons, the sheriff said. It had a lid on it and was covered with a piece of carpet. Only three people knew where the cache of weapons was located — Williams, Quisenberry and the suspect, he said.

Four or five weapons were found in the hole when the body was found, he said, none of which appeared to be the murder weapons.

The person suspected of the murder, whom the sheriff has yet to name, had been living with Williams but had been asked to leave Saturday night.

"The deceased took (the suspect) home and unloaded him, in a highly inebriated state, told him to pack his clothes and leave," Sheriff Jordan said earlier.

Acquaintances of Williams and his roommate said the two liked to drink together on the weekends and shoot guns. The yard around the house on Bowers City Road is littered with beer cans, and bullet holes can reportedly be found in the walls of the house.

Iraqi invasion spreads across border of Iran

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iran said Iraqi troops backed by tanks, warplanes and chemical weapons pushed nearly 40 miles across the border Saturday, and it called on all able-bodied fighters to rush to the front.

Iraq said its aim was to capture a large number of prisoners before cease-fire talks in New York. It said it had no intention of keeping Iranian territory.

The reports of fighting came as U.N. teams prepared to visit the warring nations to work out implementation of a cease-fire in the 8-year-old war. The military observers were expected to arrive in Tehran on Sunday.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Iraqi troops crossed into southern Iran and headed toward the oil city of Ahvaz. It said Iranian forces blocked another Iraqi advance 15 miles to the west.

The heaviest battles were around the towns of Hamid, Jofair and Khushk west of Ahvaz, as well as Shalamchah a little farther north and the northern suburbs of the Iranian port city of Khorramshahr, the agency reported.

Iranian television broke into its regular newscast to announce that "our Moslem combatants forced the Iraqi forces to retreat" from those towns.

IRNA said Iraqi troops had been pushed back in the Shalamchah region, with the bodies of "hundreds of Iraqi soldiers scattered on the battlefield."

It said the tank-led "Iraqi invasion" was backed by heavy artillery fire, chemical weapons, jet fighters and helicopter gunships and was aimed at occupying Khorramshahr and Ahvaz.

No casualty figures were given.

IRNA said the town of Gilan-e Gharb, 20 miles inside Iran and about 110 miles northeast of Baghdad, fell to Iraqi troops who used chemical weapons.

"The aggressors also captured Sar-e Pol Zahab garrison using the same dastardly tactic," the agency said.

The towns are in a disputed border area claimed by Iraq under the terms of a 1975 agreement with Iran.

"All we want is to liberate our occupied areas," Iraqi Information Minister Latif Jassem was quoted as saying here. "We have no aggressive intentions against Iran."

Jassem, quoted by the Iraqi News Agency, said Iraq also aimed to take as many Iranian prisoners as possible "to facilitate the achievement of a lasting and comprehensive peace."

There were no Iraqi comments on the Iranian claims that it used chemical weapons in the fighting.

Iraq has in the past admitted using the outlawed weapons but said Iran used them first. Iran denied that.

President Saddam Hussein has said the capture of a large number of Iranians would help in negotiations on a cease-fire based on U.N. Security Council Resolution 598.

Iraq announced last week that it was accepting the resolution, adopted one year ago.

On Friday, both countries accepted an invitation by Javier Perez de Cuellar, the U.N. secretary-general, to send their foreign ministers to New York this week for meetings on the resolution, which provides for a cease-fire, withdrawal to recognized borders, a prisoner exchange and peace talks.

The resolution also calls for an investigation of which side started the war.

Ray resigns fire chief post

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

City officials accepted the resignation of Fire Chief J.D. Ray Friday and are now looking for someone to fill the positions of both fire chief and assistant fire chief.

Ray had turned in his badge Tuesday, said Steve Vaughn, director of emergency and environmental services, but city officials did not officially accept his resignation until Friday.

Ray's resignation and the resignation of former assistant fire chief Ray Fisher to captain were "due to philosophical differences on the way the department has to be run," Vaughn said.

Veteran firefighter B.T. Brown has been named interim fire chief, Vaughn said, while city officials seek a replacement for Ray.

"We're looking in-house right now," he said. No one had been named to the position by press time Saturday.

Administration of the fire department must be "a complete and total team effort," said

J.D. Ray

Vaughn, who as director of emergency and environmental services, is supervisor over the fire department. "Philosophies and managerial styles must be compatible."

"It's part of a reorganizational effort looking for a compatible leadership team," said Mayor David McDaniel, when he learned of the personnel changes. Earlier McDaniel said he had been aware that some changes might be made, but did not know until Wednesday afternoon that the reassignments had taken place.

Ray attributed his resignation to "philosophical differences" also. He did not have any definite plans, he said, "but I'm looking at a few things."

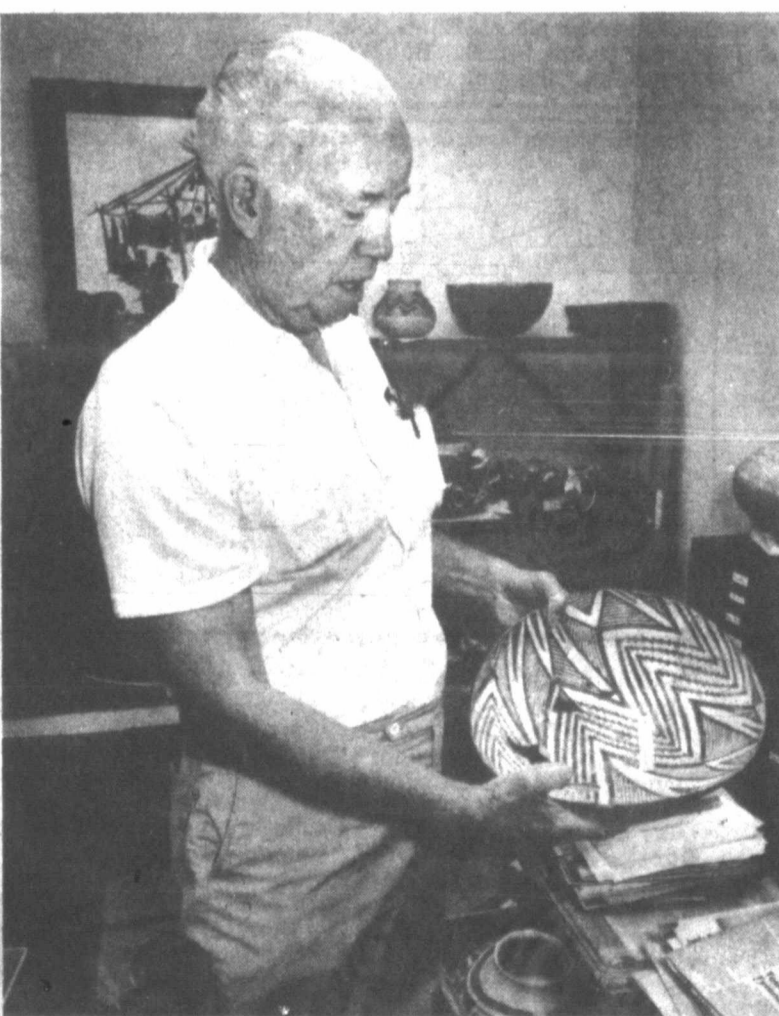

Vaughn said he has the greatest respect for Ray and his abilities.

"I have always said he is the finest fire tactician in the state," he said. "Since J.D. took over we have had only one structure burn to the ground — the Rustic Inn. A house on Sunset was destroyed, but it was already fully involved before the fire department got there."

In fact, Pampa's fire insurance rates have changed from a 15 percent penalty in 1987 to a 10 percent penalty in 1988 — a savings to local commercial fire insurance carriers of $12,000 a year — as a direct result of the Pampa Fire Department's fire fighting record.

"The fire department did a better job of putting them out and keeping losses lower," Ray said.

White Deer resident takes his curiosity into search of past

This is the first of a two-part article on amateur archaeologist Dare Locke of White Deer.

By MARILYN POWERS
Lifestyles Editor

One of the many things which sets modern man apart from the rest of the animal kingdom is his curiosity about the past. Even a young child will ask his parents, "Where did I come from?"

Answers to that question become more complex for adults as they wonder about man's distant past. Dare Locke of White Deer is one area resident who has spent 30 years getting in touch with human history by searching for artifacts of our early ancestors.

His quest has taken him throughout much of Texas and into New Mexico and Arizona, and his finds include Indian relics as well as traces of a much earlier time.

A large portion of his collection has gone to various museums, and more museum donations may be made. He has found everything from Indian arrowheads and spear points to tools, pottery, Indian artwork, clothing and beads.

From more distant times, his discoveries have included Paleolithic flint spear and arrow points from as far back as 15,000 years ago, along with traces of ancient animal life. His wife Betty found an intact tooth from a giant elephant or mammoth that is at least 13,000 years old, and he has found fossilized shells and coral in the Panhandle dating from the time when the entire area was covered by water.

"I was in the cattle business for 30 years, and that gave me access to lots of good areas to hunt," Locke said. "Years ago, people would let you hunt on their ranches. Anytime, they're kind of cool about it. I don't dig in any ruins around here much anymore. I've been digging in New Mexico and Arizona for pottery for the past five or six years.

"After you hunt here about 10 or 15 years, the same things are in all the ruins, and you want to find something different."

His hobby got its start when he and his three sons found Indian relics on ranch land. He has also done a lot of artifact hunting with Tom Powers, another White Deer resident.

Locke has spent quite a bit of his hobby time collecting Indian paintings. Some of the artworks in his collection were done by Carl Swezey, who still lived in a tepee at the time the paintings were done.

"Back in 1860-80 when they were putting Indians on reservations, the Indians started doing paintings. Before that, they had been painting on stones — pictographs. They painted on window shades, hides, wood, cardboard boxes — anything they could get their hands on," Locke said.

Indian artwork is characterized by its bright colors. One Indian painting Locke found is of two deer, done in a deep blue, against a forest background. Early paintings had no background drawn in.

"Three of us — Dick Klein of Amarillo, a guy from Oklahoma City and me — had an Indian art show at Amarillo Art Center three years ago. The center liked it so well that they kept it for 1 1/2 years and sent it around the country," Locke said.

Indian pottery is another example of artistic work. Locke has found several pieces of pottery done between 800 and 1,000 years ago by the Mimbres Indians, a small tribe in New Mexico.

"They made the 'Cadillac' pottery in the United States. Hardly anyone has heard about them. They were a small group," Locke said.

Most of the Mimbres pottery, as well as that done by other tribes, features geometric patterns and human and animal figures. Some have mythological figures, such as a creature with the head of a deer, the body of a man and the tail of a reptile. The Mimbres even did pornographic pottery art, which is very rare, Locke said.

Some of the pottery pieces have a hole in the center, called a kill hole. This pottery was buried with its owner, and the hole was meant to allow the departing spirit of the Indian to escape the burial site, which for many tribes was directly beneath the floor of their dwelling. Earlier pottery did not have kill holes, Locke said.

Other relics found at burials in New Mexico and Arizona are burial points for arrows and spears, copper bells and burial beads. Trade beads were also made, along with pendants shaped like men, faces and animals such as dogs and geese, fashioned from shells, bone, obsidian and other materials.

The Indians made many types of stone points for different purposes. Bird points were very small; arrowheads and spear points were larger. They also made knives, hide scrapers, drills and greavers, which are three-pointed tools used for incising and scratching.

The favored stone used in this area for tool and point making was flint; in some other parts of the country, obsidian, a black shiny rock, was used.

Points are a tool the Indians inherited from earlier residents of the Panhandle and the United States. Paleolithic points date from 1,000 to 15,000 years ago and are much rarer than Indian arrowheads.

Locke has found Clovis points, 10,000 to 14,000 years old, and Folsom points, which are 9,000 to 10,000 years old. He also has examples of Plainview points, 4,000 to 6,000 years old; Eden points, 6,000 to 7,000 years old; and Glendo points, a mere 1,000 to 3,000 years old. The oldest Paleo points are Sandia points, which date back 15,000 years.

NEXT: More on Paleo points.

Locke examines a Mimbres pottery bowl dating from 1050 A.D., featuring a geometric design. Most pottery found today is in pieces and must be glued together.

New radio station to try again

Radio station KSNZ — soon-to-be KPDN — owners have set Monday as the station's air date, after unexpected technical difficulties delayed its initial opening date one week.
 Originally scheduled to return to the air July 18, the station was crippled when four tubes were blown out during testing shortly before the 6 a.m. broadcast time.
 A week-long engineering study has been completed, said Char Hoyler, one of the four owners of the station. "After many hours of work, new equipment has been installed and old equipment has been refurbished," she said.

 Unless any further problems arise, the station should go on the air at 6 a.m. Monday with morning disc jockey Earl Davis.
 KSNZ has re-applied with the Federal Communications Commission for the station's original call letters, KPDN, which stood for the station's one-time owner, the Pampa Daily News. KPDN now stands for "Pampa Doing Nicely," Hoyler said.

Partners Harry Glenn Hoyler III, Char Hoyler, Dannie Miller and Terry Miller have recently bought KSNZ, Channel 1340, which has sat silent for more than a year, and are bringing it back to life.
 The station's format features easy listening music spanning five decades, played from 6 a.m. to midnight. Owners boast that it is one of a handful of AM stations in the nation which has a piece of equipment that produces FM-like sound.

Corruption hampering search for billions in Marcos' wealth

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The resignation of a top official, charges of corruption and internal squabbling are hampering efforts to recover billions of dollars that Ferdinand Marcos allegedly stole during his 20 years in office.
 There are even calls for scuttling the Presidential Commission on Good Government, or PCGG, which President Corazon Aquino created two years ago to recover up to $10 billion in assets that Marcos and his associates are accused of taking.
 The commission is fighting for control of bank accounts, stock and real estate scattered throughout the United States, Europe and Asia, including about $350 million in New York real estate.
 But so far, the commission says it has gained control of only $300 million in various assets in the Philippines. All but $60 million worth are subject to lengthy litigation.

One commission member, Jose Laureta, told reporters that at the current pace, it might take 100 years to retrieve the money "if we're lucky."
 "If we're unlucky, 300 years," he added.
 "Only Marcos and (his wife Imelda) are laughing ...," wrote columnist Vicente Albano Pacis in the Philippine Daily Inquirer. "The present difficulties of the PCGG must have been the first good news the Marcoses have received since they arrived in Hawaii."
 The Marcoses have lived in exile there since his ouster from the presidency in February 1986.
 The crisis in the five-member commission reached a climax Tuesday when Mrs. Aquino announced the resignation of its chairman, Ramon Diaz.
 Diaz, a former insurance executive with an untarnished reputation for personal honesty, quit in disgust after Solicitor-General Francisco Chavez accused the commission of incompetence and a "trail of corruption."

 Chavez made his accusation in the wake of a graft charge against commission member Quintin Doromal, who allegedly used his influence to win a government contract for a firm owned by his family.
 Doromal, who denied the charge, is to be arraigned before an anti-graft court early next month.
 Diaz said in a letter to his staff that he resented being "toyed around." He also claimed that relatives of unnamed "powers that be" interfered with the commission to free assets seized by the commission.
 Diaz's replacement, Adolfo Azcuna, already has come under fire because he was a partner in a law firm once retained by Benjamin Romualdez, younger brother of Marcos' wife, Imelda, and former ambassador to the United States during his brother-in-law's administration.
 Romualdez's assets were among those seized by the commission.
 Following Diaz's resignation, Mrs. Aquino ordered an audit of all assets taken over by the commission. They range from businesses, stock, real estate, bank deposits, planes, automobiles and jewelry. Some of the last three have allegedly disappeared.
 Members of the House of Representatives have called for a separate probe. Speaker Ramon Mitra said the House is to debate several bills calling for scuttling the commission or curbing its powers.
 The commission has long been accused of corruption in the handling of companies or shares of stock seized on suspicion they were illegally acquired by the Marcoses or their associates.

Clements gets another day in hospital

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, eager to leave the hospital where he is recovering from a mild stroke, remained hospitalized Saturday on doctors' orders after they detected a slight irregularity in Clements' heart rhythm.
 Clements, 71, had been put on digitalis to control his heartbeat, and physicians added Quinidine after a Friday night examination revealed that the heart rate still was not normal, press secretary Reggie Bashur said.
 The governor had hoped to get out of the hospital on Saturday, Bashur said. "When I saw him there was a big smile on his face.

He is very eager — eager in capital letters — to move on out of this hospital," Bashur said.
 Clements admitted himself into Seton Medical Center on Tuesday evening after consulting a physician about a vision problem.
 Dr. David Morris, a heart specialist, and Dr. Jerry Tindel, a neurologist, said tests earlier this week indicated that Clements was suffering from a slight irregularity in his heartbeat, which could have caused a tiny blood clot to form in his heart before passing through his bloodstream and into his brain, causing the stroke Monday night.

Bashur said Clements "is being observed on a continual basis, and in another 24 hours the doctors will make a determination in terms of whether he can leave."
 He said doctors had indicated "it is not unusual for it to take a little time to get into sync, to get just precisely the type and dosage of medication to maintain a regular heart rhythm."
 Morris described Clements as "very stable overall," Bashur said, adding, "He's in great shape, great spirits."
 Clements had planned to start a vacation in Taos, N.M., on Friday, Bashur said.

Ricci is employed as a plant clerk for Southwestern Public Service Co. at the Harrington Station outside Amarillo.

She will speak on "The Operation of a Coal-Fired Power Plant."

Her presentation will include slides of the mine from which Southwestern Public Service obtains the coal used for production of electricity, the production process and the environmental aspects involved in a coal-fired plant.

Members and guests are encouraged to attend.

For reservations and information, call Teresa Snow during office hours at 669-2535 or after 5 p.m. at 669-6079.

Bush predicts his victory in south regions

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — George Bush declared Saturday that he would win both the South and the Southwest, despite concentrated efforts in the region by the new Democratic team and despite a current shortage of campaign funds that he called troublesome.

Standing on the bank of the drought-depressed Mississippi River, the Republican vice president proclaimed, "If we are successful in getting the truth out there, they (Democrats) will be unsuccessful in drawing the traditional Southern Democrats and Southwest Democrats back into the fold."

"I have to help get the truth out there," he added. Both regions went solidly for the Reagan-Bush ticket in both 1980 and 1984.

The "truth" of the prospective GOP presidential nominee said, are his "major philosophical differences with Michael Dukakis," who he called a "traditional liberal."

However, Bush said he does not see similar differences with Democratic vice presidential nominee Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. He said he agrees with Bentsen on most issues.

Bush is on a two-day campaign swing through the South and Southwest to try to seek to regain momentum lost to the Democrats during their convention. Democrats are expected to make a major effort to win back the region, beginning with heavy campaigning by Dukakis and Bentsen.

The Democratic candidates were traveling together in California Saturday, continuing their three-day, cross-country campaign kickoff swing with a rally in California's San Joaquin Valley before flying to Minot, N.D., for an appearance at the state fair.

The vice president was to address a law enforcement convention in Tampa, Fla., later Saturday and to campaign in Albuquerque, N.M., on Sunday.

However, the Bush campaign has all but used up the entire $27 million it is permitted in pre-convention spending. Bush has only been able to travel in recent days by coupling campaign events with GOP fund-raising events — such as a luncheon he attended here and another dinner scheduled for Tampa.

The funds are being raised for the national party for the fall election, with some of the money channeled back to pay for Bush's current travel.

However, this limits his ability to take long trips, and most of his recent campaign appearances have been confined to day trips, with returns to Washington most evenings.

Once Republicans hold their convention in August, his campaign will be infused with more than $43 million in public funds.

He told a news conference that he would soon begin screening potential GOP vice presidential candidates, possibly as soon as next week, with financial disclosure forms to be sent to those he will put on "a long list."

Bush also said his campaign would conduct private polls to determine the vote-drawing appeal of various candidates.

Farmer's market

Nell Burrow and her husband Ben of Clarendon ready their produce for sale at the Top of Texas Farmer's Market, which opened Saturday morning at the M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium parking lot. Local and area farmers will sell their goods on Saturday and Wednesday mornings until all the produce is sold. Sale Manager Foy Barrett said the market will stay open until the season ends, probably sometime in September.

Writers strike leaves TV in ruins

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The three major TV networks are re-making old series in a scramble to fill the fall schedule as the five-month-old writers' strike threatens their already slipping share of the audience.

Their competitors aren't ignoring the situation.

"We think there is going to be a gaping hole on the dial," said Seth Abraham, Home Box Office's senior vice president for programming operations. "We will pick up disenchanted viewers in droves."

Said Gerry Hogan, president of the Turner Entertainment Networks: "We're in good shape for the fall. We do very well when the networks are out of original programming."

ABC's decision to refilm 13 old episodes of Mission: Impossible in Australia symbolizes the peculiar efforts by the three networks to plug holes left by the 9,000-member Writers Guild of America strike.

"They're going to have a lot of trouble if they use Australian actors and have cars driving on the wrong side of the road," said

William Woodfield, one of the original Mission writers and producers. "And it isn't going to be cheap. Those shows cost $500,000 to shoot in Los Angeles 20 years ago. To shoot them today in Australia is going to cost a whole lot more."

The strike began March 7 over the issue of payments for reruns of one-hour domestic shows and a bigger share in the increased foreign market.

ABC admits privately that its fall schedule is a significant compromise from previous years.

"It's not the original programming we would have wanted," said one ABC programming executive, speaking on the condition of anonymity. "But something has gotta be put on the air."

ABC is not alone in making improbable programming decisions in the wake of the walkout that has left TV actors with time to do other things, like Tom Bosley's return to the stage and Bob Newhart's revival of his nightclub act.

NBC has plans to bring back, with a new cast, The Hardy Boys, a detective show that lasted less than three seasons after it debuted on ABC 11 years ago.

CBS, which finished third in the ratings last season for the first time, will bring back Candid Camera, which hasn't been on network television in 20 years. The program was so unpopular in the syndication market that it was recently withdrawn from sale.

NBC also will broadcast at least one news special from TV personality Geraldo Rivera, and the network may convert the cartoon Fat Albert into a live-action prime time series.

NBC also is fortunate to have television rights to the Summer Olympics and the World Series.

CBS Entertainment, frequently at odds with CBS News, is encouraging the news division to produce a variety of specials.

Robber kills old man, takes money saved up for funeral

DALLAS (AP) — A 103-year-old man was killed and robbed of more than $1,000 he had been saving to pay his burial expenses, a longtime friend said.

Adam Owens suffered multiple stab and blunt-force injuries to the head, trunk and extremities, said Keith Colvin, a field agent with the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Owens' death was ruled a homicide.

Andy Clewis, who said Owens raised him as his son, said he found Owens, still alive, shortly after 8 p.m. Thursday. Someone had stabbed the man repeatedly and left him bleeding in the ransacked living room of the south Dallas apartment where the man had lived for 14 years, Clewis said.

Clewis said Owens' life savings of more than $1,000 was missing. "He was saving that money for his funeral," said Clewis, 34, who said he works odd jobs cutting lawns. "Now we don't have enough money to bury him."

Dallas police Lt. T.J. Barnes declined to comment on how Owens died or whether authorities had a suspect.

Owens was a familiar sight in his neighborhood, residents said. He walked to and from a neighborhood store, carting groceries home in a little red wagon.

Owens lived alone in recent years, said Ada Thomas, Clewis' mother, who said she had been Owens' companion for more than 40 years. Owens had surgery last year for cataracts, but otherwise was in good health, she said.

"He walked crippled, but he was strong as an ox," Thomas said.

A neighbor, Daisy Hamilton, 98, said Owens moved slowly, carrying the memories of 103 years of living that he often shared with friends sitting on his porch.

"I would scold him a lot because he wouldn't do like I told him and take better care of himself," said Hamilton, who said she often walked to the grocery store with Owens.

"He always pulled that little red wagon. I fell in love with him as a friend," she said.

According to The Dallas Morning News, neighbors said Owens admitted a woman, whom they did not recognize, to his apartment early on Thursday evening.

A "tall, thin, dark-skinned woman" came to the apartment on foot, said "good evening," and went inside with Owens, said one neighbor. Others said they heard no noises and suspected nothing out of the ordinary until Clewis arrived some time later, went inside and found the mortally injured Owens.

Owens was described as a former coal miner in Alabama who came to Dallas in the 1940s. He was a construction worker and a gardener in Dallas until deteriorating health forced him to stop working in his 80s, Thomas said.

Tanker explodes at chemical plant

HOUSTON (AP) — The explosion of a railroad tank car sent a fireball into the sky and briefly knocked out electrical power, but no injuries were reported, officials said.

The explosion at the Rohm and Haas Deer Park chemical plant Friday also sparked a small grass fire, which was quickly extinguished, said Larry Jones, assistant plant manager.

Plant officials discovered early Thursday that the tank car was becoming volatile and moved it to an isolated field, preventing injuries, Jones said.

The storage tank contained 180,000 pounds of liquid monomer, a chemical component used to make plastics, Jones said.

The tank ruptured about 12:30 a.m. Friday after it became overheated and highly pressurized, he said.

The exact cause of the explosion was not immediately known, Jones said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Court overturning Constitution again

The Supreme Court has cast out yet another part of the Constitution, ruling that Congress and the courts have broad powers to appoint special prosecutors.

Article II, Section 1 of the Constitution, states plainly: "The executive power shall be vested in a president of the United States of America." Section 2 specifically says the president, "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States ..."

The case at issue concerned the Independent Counsel Act of 1978, by which independent prosecutors investigate suspected crimes by high-ranking officials. Defense lawyers for several former Reagan administration officials being investigated or prosecuted had insisted that the prosecutors were valid only when appointed by Reagan or his attorney general.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist, in his majority opinion, said that even though the attorney general had no power to remove a special prosecutor, the law did not constitute "congressional usurpation of executive branch functions" because the Constitution gives Congress the power to "vest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper ... in the courts of law." Rehnquist added that the act gave Congress no special control over special prosecutors, while giving "the executive branch sufficient control over the independent counsel to insure that the president is able to perform his constitutionally assigned duties."

But the spirited dissent of Justice Antonin Scalia tears Rehnquist's pseudo-arguments to shreds. Scalia points to the sections of Article II of the Constitution cited above. He then notes that "this does not mean some of the executive power, but all the executive power." Scalia says that the court majority "appears to concede" that the conduct of a criminal prosecution is an exercise of purely executive power, and that the act deprives the president of exclusive control over the exercise of that power.

What of the clause, cited by Rehnquist, concerning the Congress' appointment of "inferior officers"? Scalia says that the special prosecutor of the case in question, Alexia Morrison, "is not an 'inferior' officer and her appointment other than by the president with the advice and consent of the Senate is unconstitutional."

The 7-1 court ruling will now allow Congress, aided by the courts, to seize more power, upsetting the careful balance between the three branches of government set up by the founding fathers. What to do, then, about corrupt presidents appointing corrupt officials while refusing to appoint prosecutors to clean up the problem? The Constitution has a clear remedy for that: Congress can impeach and remove a corrupt president, or one it thinks has failed to prosecute corrupt officials vigorously.

And there's the other untruths

Gorbachev having done his job of convincing us "there can be peace in our time," let's look at some other untruths.

Government condemns a property for public use, like a road, and offers to pay us its "fair market value." Is the fair market value just compensation?

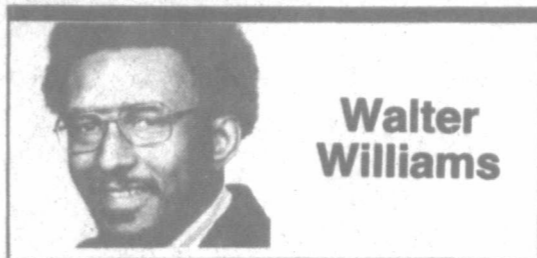

The average lawyer, trained in legalese gobbledegook, will ask such questions as: What did the property cost you? Or what is the selling price of comparable properties? Then, he'll announce, "The fair market price for your house is $80,000."

The overlooked question is: If the house was worth the market price to you, why would you still own it? I don't sell my house at the market price because it's worth more to me now than the money.

It's the same with everything. The Blue Book says your car's market value is $6,000. Why don't you sell it? Obviously, you keep it because the use of the car is worth more than the market price.

So how might we tell what something is worth to a person? One way is to offer higher and higher prices and see what price the individual voluntarily accepts. I can just see some lawyer or politician saying, "Williams, if we had to depend on voluntary sale of property, we'd have a heck of time assembling land for public use."

That's right, and it's a problem recognized by tyrants who use force when people won't voluntarily do what the tyrant thinks is right.

What about the conservationists' and environmentalists' tales about this or that species being in danger of extinction? To add to our worries, they tell us we're running out of fossil fuel. You can get all shook up about Chicken Little stories, but I'm going to spend my worry time worrying about Gorbachev's designs.

It's been estimated that over 90 percent of everything that has lived on earth is now extinct, yet ecologically we appear to be none the worse for wear. Anyway, who'd want dinosaurs running amok? We have enough trouble with the descendants of the cavemen.

Predictions that we're running out of fossil fuel, like oil and gas, are suspicious too. In the 1920s some oil experts said we had only 10 years of proven oil reserves left.

But a funny thing always happens: As the price of oil rises, somebody always proves that there is more oil. Similar predictions were made about coal. But at today's usage, there's enough coal for 400 years. I'm not saying fossil fuel is limitless, but we have a heck of a lot more than the experts say we have.

Remember the October 1987 stock market crash, in some circles called the 25 percent readjustment? What I remember most are the congressional hearings on programmed trading, and political pronouncements on how to make the market more orderly.

Congressmen have more nerve than a brass monkey. Here we have men who can't balance a budget, who load future generations with debt, create unprecedented deficits, and don't even know how billions of our tax dollars are being spent, telling Wall Streeters how to keep financial order. If that's not blind egoism or arrogance, I don't know what is.

Congress doesn't have a monopoly on hypocrisy and arrogance. The Reagan administration ran on the platform of reducing federalism. Now they want to fight the drug war by using federal power to do things like canceling driving licenses of drug offenders.

Would someone in the White House tell me how regulating state motor vehicle driving laws, like state speed limits, is a constitutionally permissible federal function?

It ain't true.

He took over Jimmy's soul?

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — It's been 11 years since Elvis is supposed to have died here at his Graceland home, but there are a lot of people who think the whole thing was a clever hoax performed to allow The King to live out his life without all the public attention that surrounded him.

There is even a new book out (Is Elvis Still Alive?) that documents many after-death Elvis sightings.

While here on other business, I decided to sniff around the city myself to see if the Elvis-is-still-alive thing really has any meat to it or is just another illusion created by swamp gas.

I asked a Memphis taxi driver what he thought.

"Is Elvis still alive?" he asked me back. "If he is, I ain't seen him, and I drive all over town. But you might check with my cousin, Frank. He's a barber and he hears all the latest gossip."

I tracked down Frank the barber.

"Some say Elvis is dead," Frank began.

"Others say he's still alive. What I heard is if you go out to the K-Mart at midnight when there's a full moon, you can make out somebody in a black leather jacket doing wheelies in the parking lot on a motorcycle. Some say it's Elvis."

Lewis Grizzard

"Why the K-Mart?" I asked.

"You ever seen how Elvis decorated his house?" asked Frank the barber.

I also went over to the Peabody Hotel, where the ducks put on their show in the lobby.

I talked to Sherman, the bellman. Bellmen hear a lot of conversation.

"I heard Elvis died, but his soul came back and got hold of Jimmy Swaggart," said Sherman. "But that can't be true."

"Why?" I asked.

"Did you see the pictures in Penthouse of that hound dog Swaggart was hangin' out with? Elvis wouldn't have messed with her five minutes."

Over at Graceland itself, I talked to tourists visiting the Elvis home and gravesite.

Wanda Jean McElroy said she had ridden a Greyhound all the way from Roopville, Ga.

"I come once a year," said Wanda Jean. "I still can't believe he's gone."

"Have you heard rumors that Elvis might still be alive?" I said.

"What?"

"Some believe Elvis is still alive and his death was just a put-on so he could get away from the pressure of all that public interest."

"You mean I been comin' here for 10 years and puttin' flowers on a grave that somebody might not be in?" said Wanda Jean, incredulous.

"It's just a rumor," I said.

"If that don't beat all. Last week somebody told me rasslin' was fake, and now this."

As I left Graceland, a wino confronted me and asked for a couple of dollars. I reached in my pocket for the money and asked, "What do you think Elvis would be doing if he were alive today?"

The wino put my two bucks in his pocket, thought for a minute and then said, "Scratchin' and clawin' tryin' to get out of that casket would be my guess."

I headed back to the Peabody. It was almost time for the ducks.

Lunch at Moses revives Dream's hopes

Editor's Note: The following is a guest column submitted by a young Pampa woman who wishes to remain anonymous.

As I sat in the M.E. Moses luncheonette one afternoon, I was filled with a profound thought. Sitting there in the old-fashioned, little five-and-dime that is almost extinct today, I realized the significance of my being there.

The advertisements looked as if they hadn't been changed since before my birth in the year 1969, so they could have been there during days which had greatly affected my life, but that I hadn't been a part of.

So I was there, surrounded by nostalgia that consumed me. Then in the mirror along the back wall, my eyes met the reflection of a black woman.

I remember, vividly, studying about the sit-ins and the marches that my people had engaged in during the 60s to get the smallest of rights. One, such as having lunch in an M.E. Moses luncheonette, was protested by fighting. Many lost their lives, such as the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King.

People died for something I was able to do that day on a whim.

It is an idea so ironic today, that sometimes my generation, and some before and all to come after, may find it unbelievable. Therefore, we take our opportunities for granted, and we do the worst thing of all ... we forget.

I see the forgetfulness of my people every day. I see teen-aged girls with the brightest futures, bought by their ancestors' blood, ruined by teen-age pregnancy. I see young men who have no ambition in life but to disintegrate their possibilities into drugs and alcohol. I see adults who have lost the ability to teach and nurture their children so that they may be able to dream and accomplish and then dream something impossible and accomplish it, too.

I see us as a people, turning our backs on each other, trying to keep one another down, and constantly tugging at others' possibilities so that we may all rot in poverty together. We are a people no longer interested in the Dream, or any dreams of our own.

As I write this, I cry because I realize until we are able to realize the significance of eating at the M.E. Moses luncheonette, being accepted to universities and colleges, walking down a sidewalk without having to step aside because a white person is on it, being able to attend integrated schools instead of segregated ones, and even walking through the front door at the local McDonald's, we will never fully realize the Dream.

I can imagine that if Dr. King were alive today, he would address the young of our race. He would tell them that he had a new dream. He would tell them to strive for the education that was theirs for the asking.

I can imagine that he would say to always reach, and when you don't grab it, reach for it again. He would tell them to develop their talents, and no matter if it seemed like they never got rewarded, to keep on trying.

He would tell them not to dwell in what they don't have, but to rejoice in what they could have.

He would tell them to NEVER be afraid to dream, and most of all, he would tell them to hold to God's hand and to be proud, so that we may all realize the Dream.

Questions listings for police report

To the editor:
I wish to question your policy of publishing names of the people who have been arrested by the police. What possible good is this information to your readers?

The reason I am bringing this up is because a friend of mine here in White Deer was arrested for the crime of absent-mindedness. Your paper published her name in the police report column in the Daily Record. She was branded a thief.

Although the whole matter was straightened out when she was allowed to explain what happened, she is still branded in the eyes of everyone who does not know the whole story of what happened to her and what caused the mistake to be made. Your paper has done irreparable damage to her reputation, not to mention her self-esteem.

What public service did you accomplish by putting her through this ordeal? And even those who are guilty of the charge brought against them are not helped in any way by having their names published in the paper. It certainly doesn't keep them from repeating their offense, does it?

I would like to ask you to consider discontinuing this practice, not for my friend's sake — it's too late to undo what you did to her — but I feel sure that hers is not an isolated case. It has probably happened to others. Just think how you would feel if that were your name printed in the paper saying you were a thief and you had simply forgotten to do something you intended to do.

Secret meetings?

To the editor:
As per our recent phone call on Thursday, I feel that our superintendent and school board were in violation of the "Open Meetings" law.

I was recently made aware of a meeting that occurred during their recent trip to Austin in which I believe all board members were present. I believe that the budget and possibly other school related matters were discussed.

Mr. Hollis, I do not believe that an agenda was posted nor was the general public informed that this meeting would take place.

Thank you for the opportunity to express our complaints when we feel that the laws of this country and our personal rights are violated.

Still owed money

To the editor:
You ran a job ad in the paper and when I answered it, it was for the Pampa Policemen's Association. It was to sell ad space for the Drug and Alcohol Awareness magazine, and to sell tickets for the Jim Ed Brown concert.

I went to work for this man for a total of 7 hours. Every time I went up to collect the money he still owes me, which is only $9.10, he either told me it wasn't in, or he wasn't there.

I have tried everything I can think of, including talking to the police. I have talked to the president and vice president of the Pampa Policemen's Association, and they told me they would take care of it.

The man told me his name is Ernest; I could never get his last name. I know of at least one other person he has cheated. He told me the last time I saw him, he would pay me out of his own pocket, if the money wasn't there by 5:00. I went back about 4:45 and he wasn't even there.

I got a phone call from the president and he said that Ernest would be there until 6:00. After I got off work, I went straight over there and he wasn't there. He left me a note, telling me to come back Thursday or Friday, again.

I wouldn't have taken the job if I hadn't just gotten back into town and needed the money. I thought the people of Pampa would like to know of this problem.

These guests won't be returning again

To the editor:
Recently I visited your city because of the city of Pampa's Fourth of July Talent Search. This was the third year my husband and I came and we brought our 9-year-old daughter. We also brought four of my dance students.

The Talent Search is an event we look forward to each year; it is a family oriented event and the people that attend are families that teach their children only the highest morals.

We stayed at the Coronado Inn, and while I believed that we were on a family vacation, I soon learned that we were staying at a concentration camp. Nowhere else that we have paid to stay have we been treated so rudely. We had myself, my husband and our daughter in our room, and we were told we could only have two bath towels and two hand towels per room. Also, we were told that we had to stay in our rooms and were not allowed in the hallways or to sit in the lobby.

Isn't this being held hostage? The night of the street dance the owners of the Coronado Inn were trying to lock all of the exit doors. Isn't this against some kind of fire law? Not to mention very dangerous in case there might have been a fire!

The children that attended the Talent Search were not defacing any property, they were there to compete. They were all staying in their rooms except during the daylight hours, at which time they were in M.K. Brown competing. A guest that stayed there was told to put her 3-month-old baby in the bathtub to sleep because they wouldn't allow three people to a bed, even though the three people were a young mother, an 8-year-old young lady and a 3-month infant.

It looks to me with the faltering economy that the owners of the Coronado Inn would welcome the families who attend the Talent Search with open arms. Instead the owners were going around trying to evict everyone without returning any money.

We patronized many of the businesses while we were in Pampa, and everywhere with the exception of the Coronado Inn we were treated so nicely and graciously; isn't it too bad the owners of the Coronado Inn are spoiling the chances for other businesses in your community to profit from the business that the Talent Search brings in? And isn't it too bad that such a great and positive event for children and young adults will suffer from these people?

Because of the rudeness and harassment we were subjected to, we will not be returning to your fair city, and I know that we are not alone in those sentiments. I do end this letter with a suggestion that someone in Pampa build another motel that everyone could stay in; it seems that the owners of the Coronado Inn do not want anyone to stay in their motel; maybe with an additional motel in Pampa they could have their wish come true — to have their motel remain empty.

We shouldn't pay any reparations!!

To the editor:
While engaged with attacking surface boats and aircraft, two hundred and forty seconds is far too long to weigh options of secondary importance. All systems of offense efficiently ready, there is no option but to employ available weapons expediently.

There is no itchy finger, no hair trigger, no "oops-a-daisy." There was no accident, nor any mistake. We don't need forgiveness.

Flight 655 at Bandar Abbas to Dubai was ready on schedule, then detained by an accident but by design. It was rescheduled to approach the USS Vincennes being engaged and distracted by Iranian surface boats and aircraft. This approach by the A300 airbus was by no means an ingenious tactical scheme, but its end was achieved by the martyrdom of two hundred ninety sacrificial human lambs.

Human lives are much cheaper than weapons when available in Iran, as proven by events on the Iraq front where women and children are expendable troops. Fanatical rationalisms dominate all thought. This was executed, all for propaganda.

Some sincere people in the United States, and some insincere but opting to remain as well-doers in public opinion, are considering reparations to Iran. We should not be inclined to waste taxpayers' dollars as war dollars to promote slaughter. This truly would be callousness on our part.

'Bored youth' has found excitement!

To the editor, and Tracy Bezner:
Well, Tracy, from your letter I figured out that you're domineering, egotistical or simple-minded. You probably fit into one of those categories.

Now, the reason I haven't written in a long time is because of two reasons: (1) I moved out of this town, and (2) I cleaned up my language. Now I guess I'll bring it down to your simple, narrow, egotistical mind.

Tracy, I solved my boredom problems. I did something that most egotistical and narrow-minded people as yourself wouldn't do. Most of you people are so scared to leave mommy and daddy. Also, I'm totally demented? Well, if there weren't people like me, the world would be low in human population.

Anyway, I moved to Oklahoma City, where there is plenty of excitement, so if you can leave your parents, come and see me at White Water.

I sign off wishing Pampa ... Well, whatever happens to it.

A trip to the bonfires of the Rainbows

EDITOR'S NOTE: "A liberal is a conservative who has been arrested." — From Bonfire of the Vanities by Tom Wolfe

By JOE MURRAY
Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN (AP) — A journalist friend of mine had to go forth into the Rainbows' forest encampment in the dead of the night to check out a report that some of their number had been arrested.

Like most of the local folks, he didn't know quite what to expect, these being the vanguard of some 20,000 Rainbow hippies due to descend on us for their summer family gathering. Some gathering. Some family.

But he drove as far as he could into the primeval pineywoods, finally arriving at a gate that's been erected by the forest service in the name of traffic control.

Whereupon, my friend was greeted by the Rainbows' greater-gatekeeper-guard, to whom he stated his business.

He received permission to enter but with this admonition, that he talk only with Yugoslob (not his real name) and avoid all others. What with the arrests, "bad energy" was about in the camp.

So, there he was, in the deep dark woods, searching for a man called Yugoslob and fearful of bad energy, whatever that might be. Across the way he could hear a snarling dog, the resonance of which indicated a beast of similar proportions to a small car.

For a moment he wished that the g-g-g on duty had told him the dog's name. In the next moment, it occurred to him that perhaps he had.

As he stumbled along the trail he resisted calling out into the night, "Here, Bad Energy. Good dog."

He eventually came upon a campsite and inquired if one Yugoslob, of whom he sought knowledge, was in residence.

"Noooo," a Rainbowian responded slowly, scratching his beard, "but I think you'll find him at the next camp over."

As my friend started away, the fellow added, "He's the one what's deaf, isn't he?"

"Oh, great," my friend said under his breath. "The only man who can answer my questions can't hear them."

As it turned out, Yugoslob was not only deaf but mute as well, at least in his present condition, that which passeth all understanding. What he was was passed out.

So instead my friend sought the counsel of another individual, Cinnamon Buns by name. (Not really, but close enough.) Before Cinnamon Buns would answer his questions, my friend had to answer a question himself.

"Do you love mankind?" Cinnamon Buns demanded.

"Yeah, sure," my friend said, truthfully.

"Then let us embrace."

Actually, all it amounted to was a healthy hug. (Or unhealthy, as the case may be, though it's too early to tell.) After that, they talked. Despite their mutual devotion to love of mankind, Cinnamon Buns wasn't in the best of moods. Blame it on bad energy.

"Sometimes I get so angry when I think about the oppression that we're subject to, that I'm not responsible for what I do." The rage in his voice was such that somewhere off in the woods, the snarling dog, he lay low.

"I just don't know ... I just might ... I ..." At this point he sounded like a man in agony. "I JUST MIGHT GET A WHITE FEATHER AND WALK AROUND THE CAMPFIRE THREE TIMES!!!"

Fortunately, reason prevailed and Cinnamon Buns managed to restrain himself, resisting so desperate a measure, lest they all might live to regret it.

But my friend finally got his story and got the hell out of there, unscathed if not unhugged. I don't think he'll be going back, leastwise not at night.

Even so, it's doubtful that he'll ever be quite the same. Just don't ask whether he loves mankind.

All of which I tell you, simply to suggest this: A conservative is a liberal who has been to the bonfire of the Rainbows.

Award-winning crew members gather in front of Celanese plant they aided in November.

Southwestern Bell employees honored for customer service

Eleven Southwestern Bell Telephone employees from Pampa have been awarded the company's prestigious Charles Erwin Rider Service Award for outstanding performance of customer service.

The Rider Service Award is presented to employees nominated by their peers for providing exceptional service on behalf of Southwestern Bell Telephone customers.

The Pampa employees were honored for restoring telephone service in wake of the Nov. 14, 1987 explosion at the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Co.'s Pampa Facility that killed three and injured nearly 40 people.

Employees receiving the award were O.K. Lee, installation and repair manager, and customer service technicians Stan Beck, Fred Martin, Clifford Martindale, Cindy Moore, Scott Moore, Ray Mouhot, Kenneth Mumford, Gary O'Kelly, Eria Smith and Bill Stephens — all members of Southwestern Bell's Network Distribution Systems department.

"I've got the best crew there is," Lee said. "They worked long hours to take care of a serious customer problem."

The Pampa crew also was praised by Jim Adams, president

EPA to study Galveston Bay

AUSTIN (AP) — The federal Environmental Protection Agency has announced a study of Galveston Bay, with the goals of maintaining good water quality and making the bay more productive, the Texas Water Commission said.

The commission said the focus of the proposed Galveston Bay National Estuary Program Management Conference will be on the four-county area surrounding the bay system.

Six committees will be set up, including a citizens advisory group. A project office will be established in Austin under the water commission's direction.

"If there is one attribute that ties Rider Service Award winners together, it is their willingness to place service to customers above all else," Adams said. "These employees represent the risk-taking spirit we encourage all of our employees to adopt."

The award-winning crew toiled for several days to provide telephone service after the disaster. Immediately following the explosion, Lee and Stephens rushed to the site to assess damage to telephone cable serving the plant and surrounding area.

The two sent generators to the site for emergency power and had members of their repair crew establish a temporary telephone line to the area.

The next day, Lee and Mouhot established lines to a command post near the still-burning plant. Other crew members began installing a series of phone lines to serve the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce and local media.

During the next three days, crew members installed lines for Celanese in several locations throughout the city. They also repaired defective cables, rebuilt a building terminal and went onto the plant site in contamination suits to remove damaged telephone circuits.

The crew members were honored with a luncheon Friday at Dyer's Bar B Que.

Concrete water tank collapses, kills four, destroys nine homes

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Residents say they warned authorities for weeks about a crack in a concrete water tank that collapsed, releasing a 750,000-gallon wave that killed four people, injured 19 and destroyed nine homes.

"But as always they never listen," Perfecto Guerrero de la Cruz said Friday as he paused from digging through his house's rubble with a pickax.

The gray, rectangular tank was near the top of a steep hill overlooking a neighborhood of adobe, cinder-block and concrete houses. A 120-foot-long wall broke away from the tank without warning about 9:20 a.m. Friday.

"We heard a very loud sound, like an explosion," said Vicenta Saucedo, 33. She said she followed her daughters when they went out to see what had happened. "I saw a torrent of water flowing past."

Nine-year-old Martin Torrez de la Rosa was grinding corn near the bottom of the hill when he heard the noise and looked up.

"When I was running away, I saw a boy over there," he said in a shaking voice, pointing to a spot farther downhill. "The water took him away."

The water swept away people, walls, roofs, furniture and clothing. Survivors dug through the rubble Friday afternoon, searching for buried possessions in this border town near El Paso.

Some residents dried their salvaged clothes on parked cars. Others cleared spots in the dirt where they placed dishes, appliances, religious artifacts and other items.

Three people died at the scene and a fourth died later in a hospital, Fire Chief Gabriel Rodriguez said.

City engineer Luis Soria told the El Paso Herald-Post that authorities were looking into the possibility that the 3-year-old tank's foundation was weakened by three weeks of unusually heavy rainfall.

Manuel Ortega, director of the city Water and Sanitation Department, said he inspected the tank after the collapse and could find no defects in materials, workmanship or design.

The rectangular gray tank measured 120 feet by 60 feet and rose about 12 feet from the ground. Cracks started developing in the walls a few weeks ago, said Guerrero, adding that he and other neighbors reported the problem to authorities.

The tank was filled earlier this year, giving residents of two subdivisions running water for the first time.

"So we finally got water, but then we got too much — and lost a life," Guerrero said.

Guerrero's 17-year-old nephew, Francisco Olvera Guerrero, was killed. Jorge Martinez, 3, and Jose Antonio Martinez Lin, 9, also were dead at the scene, the fire chief said. Rodriguez said a man died Friday afternoon at a hospital, and that his identity was being withheld pending notification of relatives.

One person was in critical condition at Juarez General Hospital, a police spokeswoman said. Twelve others were hospitalized with minor injuries and about six others were treated and released.

Irene Vallez, who lives near the accident site, said she also had seen cracks in the tank's walls. She said water started leaking from the structure's roof last week, prompting her to call authorities.

She said she saw water trickling down the street from the tank's direction about 9:05 a.m. Friday. "Then, about 15 minutes later, I heard a sound like an explosion."

The east wall appeared to have broken away cleanly from the rest of the tank. A 90-foot section of the wall was thrown 20 feet across a dirt road, where it came to rest leaning against a house, steel reinforcing bars sticking out of the broken concrete like a cat's whiskers.

The rest of the 9-inch-thick wall was pushed to the side and blocked the road. The tank's other three walls and roof stayed intact.

The water slammed into the homes before draining into a gully about 100 yards downhill.

Group says germ warfare research dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group called the Committee for Responsible Genetics has announced a campaign to persuade university biologists to turn aside Defense Department requests for additional research into germ warfare.

Four scientists on the committee said the Pentagon is asking for $300 million to conduct research into biological warfare techniques and the researchers said this work could lead to the development of weapons for a war nobody could win.

Christin Anfinsen, a Nobel Prize-winning biologist at Johns Hopkins University, said biotechnology has advanced so rapidly that "the production of biological weapons is relatively simple."

"We could develop warheads to spread anthrax (disease) within six months and so could the Soviets," said Anfinsen.

No nation, he said, could win a war with biological weapons because a counterattack would be swift and deadly.

Army Lt. Col. John Chapla, a Pentagon spokesman, confirmed that the military is seeking funds to conduct biological research, but he said the effort is aimed at developing a defense against germ weapons, not at making the weapons themselves.

Chapla said a hearing will be held Monday on the environmental impact of a planned $5.4 million biological aerosol test facility at the Dugway Proving Ground in Utah.

In a telephone interview, Chapla said the Army has let more than 100 biological research contracts to private research groups. The Army, he said, plans to research defensive measures, such as protective clothing, and detection and decontamination equipment. He said Army researchers also will attempt to develop vaccines that would protect against germ warfare agents.

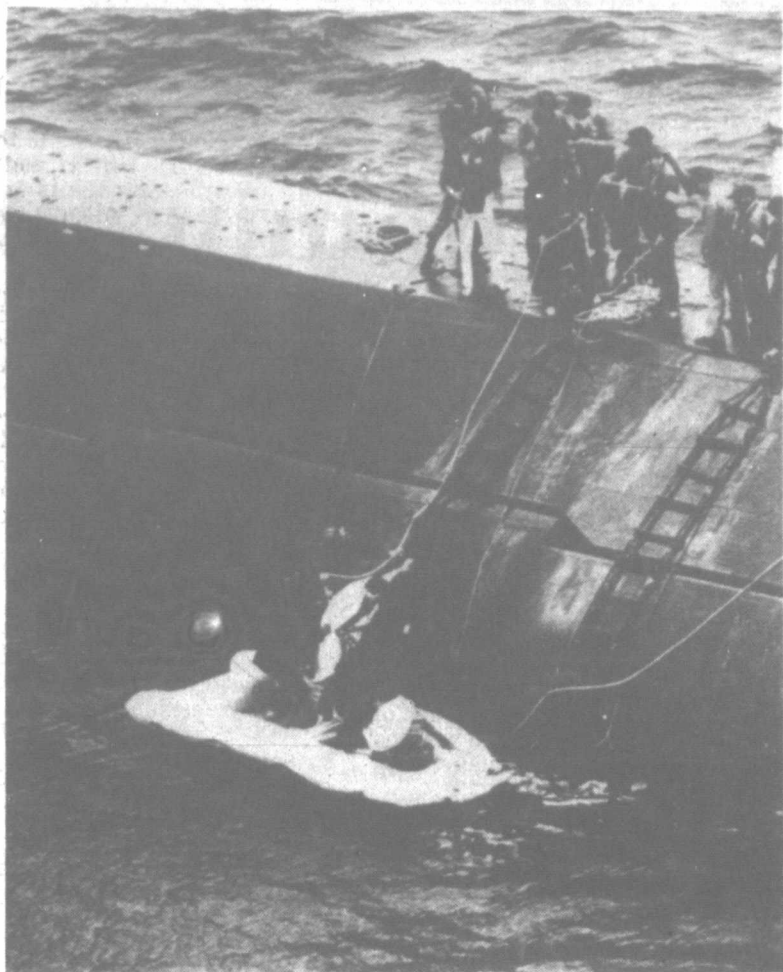

But he said none of this work was aimed at producing weapons.

Chapla also said that for germs to be used as weapons, the Army would have to develop a delivery system, a way to manufacture the germs, and a doctrine for the use of such weapons. He said no work is being done in any of these areas.

At the scientists' news conference, Jonathan King, a professor of biology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said the same techniques needed to develop a defense against biological weapons can be used to develop the weapons themselves.

"In an offensive biological warfare program, the first thing you do is develop a vaccine to protect your own troops," he said.

King also said the most serious danger of biological weapons is that they could lead to uncontrolled contamination of vast populations if they are released.

Crew members rescue fisherman. Japanese submarine collides with fishing boat; 20 missing

TOKYO (AP) — A submarine collided today with a fishing boat off the port of Yokosuka, and police said about 20 people were missing.

The Maritime Self-Defense Force submarine, the 2,200-ton Nadashio, collided with the fishing boat, the 150-ton No. 1 Fujimaru, two miles off Yokosuka in the mouth of Tokyo Bay, Yokosuka police said.

Police officials said 48 people, including weekend sport fishermen, were on board the fishing boat. Initial conflicting reports indicated that about 30 people from the boat had been rescued.

There were no immediate reports on the extent of damage to the submarine or injuries to those aboard, the Maritime Self-Defense Force said.

Eight vessels, two planes and two helicopters from the Maritime Self-Defense Force and the Maritime Safety Agency were searching for the missing people from the boat, they said.

The submarine was returning to Yokosuka after a training exercise in adjacent waters, while the fishing boat from Yokohama was leaving Tokyo Bay, the officials said. The cause of the accident was under investigation.

Eastern plans to cut 4,000 jobs, 14 cities

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines' announcement that it would lay off 4,000 employees and eliminate service to 14 cities to cut costs was met with bitterness and fear by workers, who should learn their fate by Monday.

"I've heard rumors this way since I've been working here," said Evelyn Perez, a ticket agent at Kansas City International Airport who has been with Eastern for 11 years. "It's always been felt, but now it's real."

The plan announced Friday by the loss-plagued airline would trim 12 percent of the work force and eliminate service to the 14 cities on Aug. 31.

The 14 cities being cut are Albuquerque, N.M.; Fort de France, Martinique; Las Vegas and Reno, Nev.; Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn.; Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla.; Omaha, Neb.; Dallas and San Antonio, Texas; Pointe-a-Pitre, Guadeloupe; San Diego; St. Lucia, West Indies; and Tucson, Ariz.

Included among the layoffs or early retirements will be 520 jobs in Miami, 300 in Atlanta and 350 in Kansas City, Mo., which will no longer be the carrier's Western hub, Eastern President Phil Bakes said.

The reductions also will include 1,100 jobs from the New York City area, including 600 at a reservations center in Woodbridge, N.J., and 500 flight attendants, pilots and managers based at Kennedy, LaGuardia and Newark airports. Last November, Eastern eliminated 3,500 jobs, mostly from the company's union ranks.

"We are preserving the airline. We're strengthening the airline. I don't care to place the blame anywhere," Bakes said, citing high operating costs and increased competition for Eastern's huge losses.

But John J. Bavis, chairman of the 3,500-member Air Line Pilots Association contingent at Eastern, disagreed.

"They've done nothing over the past two years except squeeze the assets out of Eastern in order to help subsidize our sister airline, Continental," he said.

Both Eastern and Continental are subsidiaries of Houston-based Texas Air Corp., which lost $466 million last year.

The announcement came in the seventh month of bitter contract talks between Eastern and the Machinists union, which is seeking raises for 10,000 Eastern workers. The carrier is seeking $161 million in pay cuts and other concessions.

The Miami-based airline also is seeking $69 million in concessions from its pilots union, which began formal contract talks with the company Friday.

"Last year, we lost $182 million. In essence, Eastern is returning to its basic roots in an attempt to regain strength in the marketplace," Bakes said.

Clarence Reed of the Pampa 11-12 All-Star team legs out a grounder in their win over Plainview last week for the championship of the West Texas State Bambino Baseball Tournament. Next stop for Reed and his teammates is the Southwest Region Tournament.

Pampa faces Louisiana in Southwest Regionals

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

After claiming the West Texas State baseball title with an 18-3 rout over Plainview last Wednesday night, the Pampa 11-12 All-Stars will trek some 800 miles next week to Donaldsonville, La., to compete in the Southwest Regionals Bambino Tournament.

Beginning Saturday, July 30, Pampa will meet the best baseball teams in the southwest, including state champions from Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, and South and East Texas.

At stake there is nothing less than a trip to the Bambino World Series in Nashua, N.H.

The tournament in Donaldsonville runs from July 30 through August 4, and features seven teams in double-elimination action. Pampa will embark upon the 14 to 16-hour journey by bus early Thursday morning, arriving in Donaldsonville Friday in time to sign in and attend the banquet that night at Lemann center.

The players will stay in the homes of host parents to help defray costs as well as introduce them to Louisiana families.

Following the 2 p.m. opening ceremonies at La-La Field on Saturday, Pampa faces Louisiana at 3 p.m. in the first game of the tournament. Coach Larry Gilbert is optimistic about his team's chances against the team that advanced to the finals last year. "Since they are the state champs, you've got to figure they're pretty good," he said. "We haven't had a chance to do any scouting, but they were one of the best teams last year."

"Pampa came within one game of making it to the finals last year, and I think we've got just as good a chance as anybody this year. We've got a real strong team, and I think we handled Plainview fairly well.

"I don't think we should be in awe of anyone, although it is an awe-inspiring situation. When you get to this level, you expect the competition to be tough, and they expect you to be tough, too. "Our main strengths are team speed and defense. We've got some good hitters, too, and we can really explode on somebody. We've got a lot of contact hitters that will put the ball in play."

If the All-Stars win their first game, they will go up against East Texas at 3 p.m. Sunday. If they lose, however, they will drop to the loser's bracket and play Monday at 5:30.

As the week-long tournament progresses, longevity will be the ticket to New Hampshire. If Pampa wins every outing, they could advance to the World Series after only four games. But losing the first contest Saturday could force them to face a total of six opponents. The championship game is scheduled for Thursday, August 4.

Although the All-Stars will be hosted by Donaldsonville families, each providing room and board for two players, the team is in need of donations to cover the costs of transportation, meals while on the road, and lodging for the coaches.

Terry Moore and Austin Sutton, who are heading up the fund-raising campaign, hope to collect enough money for the team members to do a little sight-seeing while they are in Louisiana. "This tournament is in a part of the country where there are things the kids need to see," Moore said.

"Some of these boys have never been further than Amarillo or Plainview," said Sutton. "They might as well see a sight or two. Nothing extravagant—but we'll only be 35 miles from Baton Rouge and 70 miles from New Orleans."

Moore stressed that "most of the money will go toward travel expenses and food down and back. A kid that age needs three meals a day. They'll be on the road eight days, and that's very expensive."

Anyone who is interested in donating money for the trip can contact Terry Moore or Austin Sutton by calling 665-0071, 665-9716, 665-2030, or 669-3708. Contributions may also be mailed to P.O. Box 612, Pampa, TX 79065.

Walker has dominant role in Pokes' plans

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Doctors say he has only 1.5 percent body fat but Herschel Walker doesn't look like he has any.

Chiseled from flint is what the 6-foot-2, 225-pound Walker looks like. Muscular and fast, he appears indestructible. Indestructible he must be if the Dallas Cowboys are to appear in the NFL playoffs for the first time in three seasons.

Walker says he does 3,500 sit-ups and 1,500 pushups daily. Make it 4,000 and 2,000, Herschel, you have a big load coming.

With Tony Dorsett now a Denver Bronco, Walker will be expected to carry the ball 25 to 30 times per game with the aid of an offensive line that is large, young and inexperienced.

"If Herschel gets through this season without getting hurt then he REALLY is Superman," said a member of the Cowboys' organization.

"Did Coach (Tom) Landry really say he wanted me to carry the ball 25 times a game?" Walker asked. "He didn't tell me that but that would be fine with me."

What Landry said was: "We're counting on Herschel to play the dominant role because he has that kind of ability. We are building for the future with Herschel as the foundation."

Landry figures Walker could get 1,500 yards rush and 1,000 yards receiving this year.

Walker said he's ready to carry the Cowboys back to the top of the NFL standings and he has a special feeling about the upcoming year.

Freeman File

"Last season was a big disappointment for me and the team," Walker says. "But I think we can surprise some people like we did in my first year at Georgia. People didn't think much of us then we went out and won the national title. This situation sort of reminds me of that."

Walker is the talk of the camp now that Dorsett is gone.

"Did you see Herschel on the Oprah Winfrey show?"

"Did you see Herschel make that diving catch?"

"Did you see Herschel talking with Magic Johnson?"

The camp is Herschel's except that he didn't bring his dog "Al Capone" to camp because he didn't think Landry would like it.

Other than that Walker can do no wrong.

As club president Tex Schramm put it: "Herschel is our man. There are no ifs or questions about it."

Schramm says with Dorsett gone Walker can be himself.

"Walker was on his tip-toes because he and Tony were friends," Schramm says. "The tension is gone. Herschel can be Herschel without any distractions."

Even during the lunch hour

Walker is active. He can't sit still. On one particular day at noon he was showing a Cowboys' secretary how to use Tai-Kwan-Do to break a mugger's hold.

"You do it like this, now try it on me," said Walker, twisting her wrist.

Walker seemed pleased that she eventually was able to use the technique to break the hold despite his tremendous strength.

"That's great, just great," Walker says.

Of course, Walker sees himself as Mike Tyson's equal in the boxing ring but says "he knows want to fight him but we just laugh about it. I just like competition and doing different things."

In the offseason, Walker won the Superstars' competition and also performed for the Fort Worth Ballet.

On the field, Walker has been flawless except for a halfback pass he tried at the end of a practice which fluttered to the ground like a wounded duck.

The players began to chant "Quack, quack, quack."

Nobody's perfect but in the Cowboys' case Walker had better be if the Cowboys have playoff possibilities.

"If you dream big you have a lot of work in store," Walker says. "If you dream small you don't have to do anything. I want to win. I've been with a winner all my life."

Owner likes Oiler image

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams likes the team's new image, even if they are called "dirty players" by some NFL coaches.

Adams hosted his annual "state of the Oilers" news conference here Friday and expressed his appreciation to Coach Jerry Glanville and General Manager Ladd Herzog for the team's turnaround.

Greeting the fans as he left the Astrodome after games last season was much more fun than the year before, Adams said.

"It was like 'Hi, Bud, let's win the next one,'" Adams said. "I can't tell you what they said the year before."

The Oilers don't play dirty, the play aggressively, Adams said.

"I don't like the word dirty but after looking at the film, I thought Pittsburgh had two or three more bad plays or dirty plays than we did if you want to talk about dirty plays," Adams said.

Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll called the Oilers a dirty playing team after each of two losses to the Oilers last season.

"One guy got beat twice and I'm sure it had to affect his ego to a guy like Glanville, who is an upstart in the NFL, to wax him twice last year," Adams said.

Blanda scores ace

Pete Blanda of Pampa had a hole-in-one Friday at the Pampa Country Club. Blanda used a four-iron to ace the No. 7, par 3, 147-yard hole.

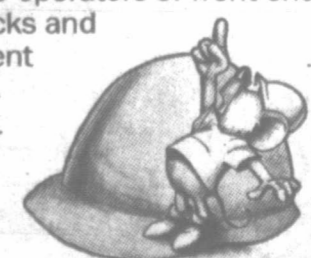

Witnesses were Ed Myatt, Elmo Wright and Creel Grady.

Out on the JOB

WATCH UP FOR POWER LINES

Out on the job, power lines bring needed electricity to the site. But they can be dangerous . . . if you don't watch up! You need to be especially careful when you are handling re-bar, pipes, scaffolding, or tools that are long enough to contact overhead lines. Contact with power lines is also a potential danger to operators of front-end loaders, dump trucks and any other equipment of unusual height.

Keep an eye up for power lines. Watch up, for safety's sake.

Neumann leads Women's Open

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

BALTIMORE — Swedish rookie Liselotte Neumann compiled a bogey-free 69, tied still another scoring record and pulled away to a two-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the 43rd U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship.

Neumann completed three trips over the hilly Five Farms course at the Baltimore Country Club in five-under-par 208, which tied the Women's Open record for 54 holes, set by Amy Alcott in 1980.

The 22-year-old Neumann has led or shared the lead all the way and has set or tied tournament scoring records at the end of each day's play.

She set the Women's Open first round record with a 67, tied the 36-hole record with 139 and dropped an 8-foot par putt on the final hole Saturday to tie still another mark.

Veteran Patty Sheehan, with a 68, moved into second at 210, three under par.

Tammie Green and Colleen Walker, at 212, were the only others under par going into Sunday's final round. Green matched par 71 and Walker shot 68 in the hazy, cloudy weather that produced a brief shower shortly before the leaders finished.

Amy Benz matched par-71 and was five strokes back at 213.

Juli Inkster, one of three tied for the second-round lead, had a share of the top spot until her drive on the 12th trickled into a pond.

It was the start of a slide that saw her lose six shots to par over the last seven holes. She finished with a 75 that put her in a tie at 214 with Michele Bertecotti and Beth Daniel.

Bertecotti had a 68 and Daniel closed up with the best round of the tournament, a 66.

Dottie Pepper Mochrie, tied with Neumann and Inkster for the second-round lead, bogeyed five holes in a row on the front nine, shot a 76 and drifted back to 215.

Nancy Lopez scored an eagle-3 in a round of 71 that left her at 217, nine shots back. Veteran JoAnne Carner had a 76 and was at 218. Defending champion Laura Davies of England was out of it at 75-220.

While she's listed as a rookie on the American LPGA Tour, Neumann is a veteran of European play.

Track threesome complete double victories

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Track Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Florence Griffith Joyner, Jackie Joyner-Kersey and Mary Slaney completed double victories at the U.S. Olympic Trials Saturday, while the courageous bid of hurdler Greg Foster ended in disappointment as did John Powell's attempt to make his fifth Olympic team.

Griffith Joyner, who set the world record of 10.49 seconds for the 100-meter dash a week ago, won the 200 in 21.85.

Joyner-Kersey, who set the world record in the heptathlon on the same day her sister-in-law shattered the record in the 100, won the long jump with a wind-aided 24 feet, 5 1/2 inches. The distance matched her American record, but will not count as a record because the wind exceeded the allowable 2.0 meters per second.

Slaney, seeking her first Olympic medal after a career of heartbreak and injury, added the 1,500-meter title to the 3,000 she had won earlier. She was timed in 3:58.92, the fastest in the world this year and the fastest ever run in the United States. Foster's valiant bid in the men's 110-meter high hurdles came to a sad halt when he did not complete his semifinal heat, pulling up before the ninth hurdle.

Roger Kingdom, the 1984 Olympic champion, won the hurdles in a wind-aided 13.21, after winning his semifinal heat in a legal 13.14, the fastest time in the world in three years.

World record-holder Renaldo Nehemiah, who is trying a track and field comeback after playing with the San Francisco 49ers of the NFL, failed to finish the final. He pulled up after the fourth hurdle.

Discus throw Mac Wilkins, 37, made his fourth Olympic team, winning with a throw of 216-6, but his arch-rival, Powell, 41, wound up fifth at 202-0.

In a surprise, little-known Jeff Atkinson won the men's 1,500 in 3:40.94, beating former American record-holder Steve Scott, second in 3:41.12.

Third-place finisher Mark Deady, clocked in 3:41.31, has yet to achieve the Olympic standard of 3:38.5. If he doesn't meet it by Sept. 4, he will not be eligible for the Olympics, therefore, giving his spot to Jim Spivey, the fourth-place finisher in 3:41.52.

Other winners Saturday were Doug Padilla in the men's 5,000 in 13:37.86, Louise Ritter in the women's high jump at 6-6 1/4, and Ramona Pagel, who had tied for first in the women's discus, in the shot put at 63-5.

Foster suffered a broken left forearm July 4. His heartwarming story came up short when he stopped before the ninth of the 10th hurdles, after having hit the sixth and slammed into the eighth.

When he stopped running, Foster, whose left arm was heavily wrapped with tape, grabbed the arm in apparent pain.

Foster suffered the injury during a routine hurdles drill and underwent emergency surgery. He was hospitalized for three days, and as soon as he was released from the hospital, he resumed training for the Trials.

He got through the first two rounds Friday night, but complained that he was in pain.

Saturday, his dream ended. Still, Foster, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist and 1983 and 1987 world champion, had to be satisfied with a gallant effort.

Doctors had advised him that he was taking a tremendous risk in trying to compete in the Trials, but Foster said, "I'm a hurdler and I want to hurdle."

In the women's 200, Griffith Joyner, who set the American record of 21.77 seconds in Friday night's quarterfinals, ran a wind-aided 21.90 in the semifinals. Joining her on the team were Pam Marshall, who ran a career-best 21.93, and Gwen Torrence, who was third in 22.02, also a career best.

The 1984 Olympic champion, Valerie Brisco, finished fourth in 22.11.

Slaney, the American record-holder at all distances from 800 to 10,000 meters, previously had made the team in the 3,000.

But just like in the 3,000, she was pressed hard, this time by Regina Jacobs.

teams in 1972 were coached by females, down to 48.3 percent last season. And the number of coaching jobs for women's teams in all sports increased by 52 since 1987, but women didn't get any of the positions. How will the Lobster and Lone Star team handle that problem?

THE PRIVILEGE OF PRAYER

"For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears unto their supplication: But the face of the Lord is upon them that do evil" (1 Peter 3:12; Psalms 34:12). The "righteous" are those who live by faith (Romans 1:17; Habakkuk 2:4.) To "live by faith" is to be justified by faith (Romans 5:1.) To be justified by faith is to realize no condemnation and there is no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus (Romans 8:1.) To be in Christ Jesus is to be baptized into Him (Galatians 3:27.) Conclusively, then, the righteous are those who, by faith, have been baptized into Jesus Christ where they have realized the forgiveness of their sins and are thereby members of the one body, the church of the Lord.

was writing to those who had "fellowship" with him and others who enjoyed "fellowship" with God. The word "fellowship" means "association or participation with." In this instance, it refers to the association the Christian has with God. Only Christians have this fellowship and therefore only Christians have Jesus Christ as their Advocate with God the Father.

"Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holy place by the blood of Jesus, by the way he dedicated for us, a new and living way, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; and having a great priest over the house of God; let us draw near with a true heart in fullness of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience; and having our body washed with pure water, let us hold fast the confession of our hope that it waver not; for he is faithful that promised." (Hebrews 10:19-23.) The pronouns in this passage, "us" and "our" have reference to those who are members of the "House of God." The "house of God" is the church of the living God (1 Timothy 3:15). Therefore, Jesus Christ is the great priest over the church.

The apostle Peter makes it clear that God hears and answers only the prayers of the righteous, those who are His children. The apostle John writes: "My little children, these things write I unto you that ye may not sin. And if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; and He is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the whole world" (1 John 2:1-2.) Lake Fryer —

a place to get away from it all

Lake Fryer, near Perryton, is part of Wolf Creek Park.

One Panhandle lake and recreation area is getting a major facelift, thanks to a state grant and lots of hard work.

Lake Fryer, which is part of Wolf Creek Park north of Pampa, is being renovated with a total of $153,000 in labor, equipment usage and grant money.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department granted half the monetary total to be used for the overhaul, and the other half is being provided by Ochiltree County in the form of manpower and equipment.

The funds were not received in a lump sum. "We send in bills and they reimburse us," said Larry Hardy, Ochiltree County commissioner for Precinct 4, which includes the park. Hardy is responsible for the park area and is supervising the improvements.

ing the improvements.

The lake and creek have been dredged and improvements have been made to the campsites. "It took between two and three years to dredge the lake and creek," Hardy said.

The silt that was removed from the waterways has been dumped in various pits around the site. These pits are now being covered, and plans are to plant grass and allow vegetation to cover them.

A bathroom, complete with shower stalls and hot water, has been built and is in operation. New campsites are being built for tents and camper units.

"With the grant money, so far we have put in about 52 new campsites," Hardy said. Each campsite includes a concrete porch, concrete picnic table, utility table and firebox. All are provided with electricity hookups; some have a pull-through design for campers, and these also include water outlets.

Other facilities already in use at the lake include Lobo Trading Post, a restaurant/store which provides groceries and fishing supplies; a covered picnic area, a boat dock, a horseshoe pit for playing horseshoes, a dump station, two water wells and a firehouse.

Part of the camping area is designated for wilderness living, with no through traffic or utilities. Hiking is also an offered activity around the park, which is well-shaded with elm and cottonwood trees. Wildlife includes deer, antelope, buffalo, beaver, a variety of birds and smaller animals. Not-so-wild life includes three geese, which make the rounds of the campsites panhandling tidbits from lake visitors.

Visitors can choose from hiking, camping, fishing, picnicking, water skiing, swimming, boating or just relaxing. No entrance or fishing fee is charged; fees for campers are $6 a day with hookups, $3 daily for tents (no utilities), and $2 for boats.

Skiing is allowed only on Mondays through Wednesdays; the rest of the week is reserved for quieter activities such as swimming and fishing, Hardy said.

Only street-legal motorcycles are allowed in the park, and only in designated areas.

The park and restaurant is open year round; winter restaurant hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. but may be extended if there is a demand for it, Hardy said.

The park, nestled in an area rich in archaeological finds, was purchased by Ochiltree County in 1935. In 1939 the area was given to the federal government for construction of a dam and creation of a lake. The lake was named in honor of longtime resident and landowner Jim Fryer.

Lake

Ochiltree County Commissioner Larry Hardy relaxes in the Western-style Lobo Trading Post's restaurant at Lake Fryer.

In 1947, floods caused by torrential rains washed out the dam and drained the lake. The area was returned to cattle grazing until 1954, when Ochiltree County purchased the land from the federal government and rebuilt the dam with local funds.

Thanks to the recent dredging, which removed over 500,000 cubic yards of silt, the average depth of the lake is 18 feet, and average depth of the creek is 10 feet, Hardy said. The entire park area covers some 500 acres.

The two-year grant from Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is due to expire Dec. 1, but Hardy hopes to obtain an extension.

"We have some money left over and are submitting a proposal on what to do with it," he said. "We're looking for an extension hopefully through next summer. We want to add more campsites to the north side of the lake."

Other planned improvements are another covered picnic area or gazebo, "large enough for family reunions," Hardy said; a covered fishing dock, or "doughnut hole"; a second boat dock, a designated swimming area with beach; additional benches and other niceties for the bathhouse; and a second dump station.

The lake area is five miles off Highway 83, just southeast of Perryton. Special seasonal events include a Fourth of July fireworks display and Springfest, a weekend celebration that includes a Texas cook-off and bicycle races.

Pampa visitors to the lake average between 40 and 50 per month.

"We invite people to come and take advantage of our facilities, which we're very proud of," said Ochiltree County Judge Howard Stone.

VOLUNTEERS — THE BACKBONE OF 4-H

The success of a 4-H program stems from many factors. In Gray County, we can credit the huge success of our 4-H program to the leaders.

Gray County has been extremely blessed with an abundance of leaders. Currently we have over 60 volunteer leaders to help serve some 260 Gray County 4-H'ers.

Without these volunteer leaders, many of our 4-H clubs would not exist. Currently Gray County has seven 4-H clubs with two adult leaders in charge of each club. These club managers coordinate the club meetings as well as supervise the activities that their club may be included in.

Besides club managers, we also have adult leaders who serve in other roles such as project leaders. The project leaders may be in charge of a sewing group, rifle team, livestock projects or a woodworking project. These leaders are very valuable in that they invest much of their own time and money into the 4-H program.

Volunteer leaders are really the lifeline of a successful 4-H club. In the 1987 National 4-H statistics, I found some very astonishing facts that dealt with leaders.

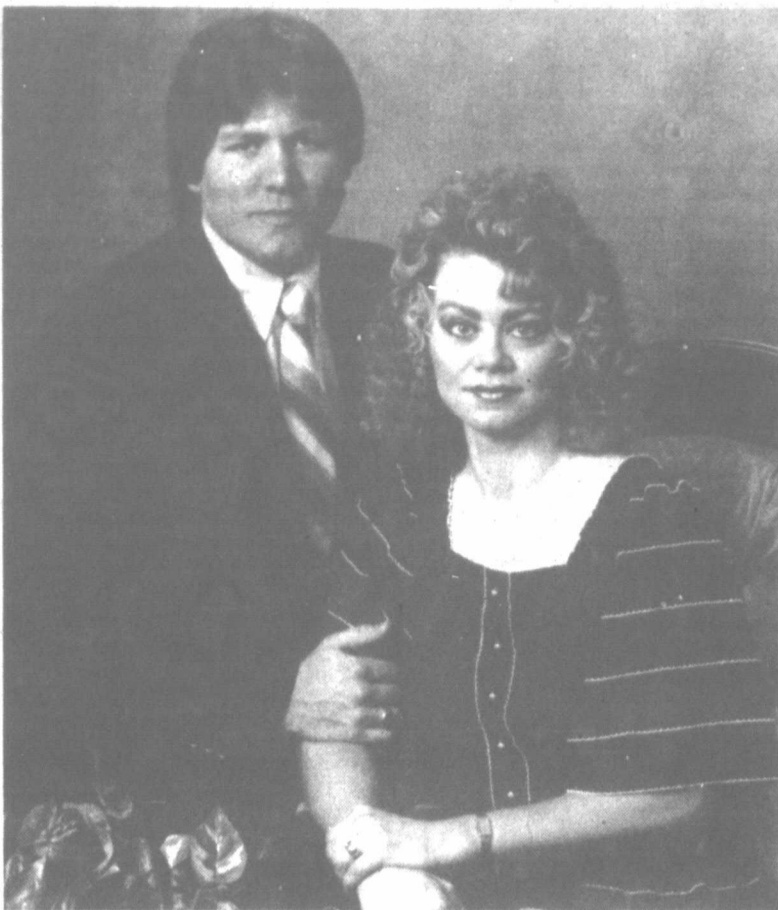

On the average, an adult leader donates over 220 hours per year to the training and teaching of 4-H'ers. If you divide that out into 8-hour days, the average adult leader volunteers just under one month a year to the 4-H program.

Without the help of volunteers, our 4-H program would not be able to reach as many young people as it does. The statistics show that for every one hour that salaried staff spends in 4-H, a volunteer leader spends 12 hours.

On the average, an adult leader drives over 400 miles a year and invests around $100 in teaching materials. With over 600,000 volunteer leaders in the U.S., our 4-H program is sure to grow.

Leaders invest a great deal in our 4-H program, and it's easy to see why they are important. When asked why they do it, many will reply that "It makes me feel good." It's a great feeling to know that you have helped impact the lives of young people in such a manner as to help prepare them for the future.

If you would like more information dealing with the 4-H program, please feel free to contact one of the Gray County Extension agents at 669-8033.

BRIDAL BOUQUETS
by Sherry Thomas

THE LITTLEST ONES
Child attendants have long been a part of wedding traditions. Whether it's a sister, nephew, or child of an earlier marriage, the youngsters in your party need special consideration.

The attire of the children in your wedding party should reflect the colors and styles of the adult attendants, in styles that are appropriate to their age. Flower girls, for example, could wear a high-necked version of your bridesmaids' off-shoulder gowns.

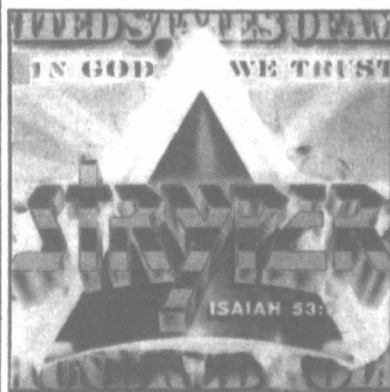

The youngest gentlemen in the wedding party may wear short pants and knee-socks instead of trousers, but remember to ask the young men's opinion — those not used to the fashion might decide to disapprove at the last minute!

Keep in mind that young folks have short attention spans. Very junior bridesmaids can amuse themselves quite a bit longer with baskets than they can with bouquets.

Some physicians refuse to help those who don't help themselves

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently told me about a friend of hers who went to her doctor with a serious respiratory problem and was told: "If you do not stop smoking, you can find yourself another doctor!"

I want to share this with you because I thought it was a brilliant way of telling a patient that if she is not willing to participate in maintaining her own health, the doctor is not going to spin his wheels doing it for her.

Likewise, I have a friend who was told by her pediatrician that if she didn't buy an infant restraint device for carrying her child in the car, she could find herself another pediatrician.

I'm wondering if you've ever heard of other doctors giving patients these kinds of ultimatums? And what do you think of such doctors?

JIM KERR, LAS VEGAS

DEAR JIM: I've never heard of doctors who have given such ultimatums to their patients, but I applaud their professional integrity as well as their courage. No physician wants to "lose" a patient — one way or the other.

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for the letter from "Second Choice," whose friend with one of those "call waiting" signals on her phone put "Choice" on "hold" because the friend got a call from someone who was more important.

I had "call waiting" on my phone for one month, then I had it disconnected. My friends ask me

Dear Abby

why I don't have "call waiting" anymore when they call me and my line is busy. I tell them that I can talk to only one person at a time anyway, so I don't really need it.

Abby, I think phones were better when we used Dixie cups and a string when we were kids, rather than with all the electronic gadgets that are on phones these days. What do you think?

CLICKED OFF

DEAR CLICKED: I'm not prepared to go back to two Dixie cups and a string, but I agree that the "call waiting" signal is a rude intruder. I wonder how many people have canceled theirs?

DEAR ABBY: Today we live in a material world where success is measured by one's worldly goods. I know in my gut that this is not correct. Abby, how do you measure success? Can you tell me in fewer than 100 words?

56 AND STILL LEARNING

DEAR STILL LEARNING: So am I. And I have yet to find a more apt description of success than this one:

"To laugh often and love much; to win the respect of intelligent persons and the affection of children; to earn the approbation of honest critics and to endure the betrayal of false friends; to appreciate beauty; to find the best in others; to give of one's self; to leave the world a bit better, whether by a healthy child, a garden patch, or a redeemed social condition; to have played and laughed with enthusiasm and sung with exultation; to know that even one life has breathed easier because you have lived — this is to have succeeded." — Ralph Waldo Emerson (1803-1882)

DEAR ABBY: You told the office worker who was subjected daily to the boring details of a fellow employee's personal life that co-workers are like "family" and it's only natural to talk about their personal lives.

You missed an important point, Abby. In addition to being a selfish boor, the woman is also cheating her employer — twofold. When engaged in these lengthy "conversations," not only is she failing to do the work for which she is being paid, she is keeping her co-workers from doing their work as well.

What's wrong with the listener simply saying, "You'll have to excuse me now so I can get to work and do what I am being paid to do?"

SHIRLEY IN VAN WERT, OHIO

DEAR SHIRLEY: Nothing is wrong with your suggestion. It was better than my answer.

Understand terms of lease before signing an agreement

Today's economy dictates consumer responsibility as a key issue in enabling individuals to stay or become financially fit. As we look at those responsibilities as they relate to housing issues, we can identify understanding a lease and security deposit as two major keys to responsible rental arrangements.

A lease isn't just a formality for getting into a new apartment or house. It is a legal document that can serve you well or have a negative impact on your pocketbook and your lifestyle.

Read the lease and be sure you understand all of its terms and provisions. You are committed to pay rent for the duration of the lease, even if you want to move, so know what you are getting into before signing anything. If you are unsure, have the lease explained to you by an attorney or housing counselor.

When a lease contains any of the following clauses, consider them a danger, discuss them with the owner and try to have them changed in writing on the lease, or look for another rental:

The owner is not liable for repairs. This means you could have

Homemakers' News

to pay for routine maintenance or repairs, even when you did not cause any damage.

The owner can cancel the lease if the property is sold. Under this circumstance, you would have to move even if it is inconvenient and the lease has not ended.

If the owner is "dissatisfied" with your behavior, the lease can be cancelled.

You give the owner the right to enter your rental unit at any time. Renters should have the right to privacy. This may also be a security risk.

You agree no one else will live with you. The problem with this clause is that your landlord may define it to include anyone who visits. Be sure to add a written clause about visitors.

You agree that all improvements belong to the owner. If you invest in removable improvements such as light fixtures, cabinet hardware, a fireplace screen or other items, you should be able to take them with you when you move, as long as you replace the original items so the rental unit is in the same condition as when you began the lease.

When you sign a lease, you will probably be asked for a security deposit equal to one or two months' rent. That's a lot of money that you may never see again unless you know your rights and responsibilities.

The deposit protects the owner's investment and is a motivation for you to live up to the lease agreement. The deposit can be used by the owner to cover the costs of returning the house or apartment to the same condition as when you took possession.

The problems that arise between landlords and tenants over the return of security deposits usually result from the lack of a clear, written agreement in the lease. To protect your security deposit, take the following steps:

Insist on a clause in the lease which states the conditions under which the security deposit, or a portion of it, will be returned to you.

Get a receipt for your deposit.

Don't sign a lease stating that a dwelling is in good condition while it's still occupied by others. You could be charged for someone else's damages.

Ask that on moving day, the owner inspect the premises with you and that you jointly sign a checklist of its condition at that time.

Take pictures immediately before moving in and upon leaving to help prove the conditions of the housing unit.

New businesses, residents come to Pampa

If you think July is a sleepy and uninspired summer month of dog days, perk up and read on. Recent news items include new Pampans, new businesses, new-lawyeds and more.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!" to Omicron Enterprises, a sand blasting and solids control company based in Oklahoma City, Okla. Sam Gann, owner, of Oklahoma City, has spent enough time in Pampa while getting the new business started that he qualifies as a new Pampan.

Local president Steve Knutson (Noot-son), formerly of McLean and then Oklahoma City, his wife, Peggy, and two daughters, Debi and Tammy, are having no trouble in becoming Pampans. Steve's brothers, both Pampans, Harley and Donald, and nephew Larry Knutson pronounce their name "Nut-son."

Steve's son, Sam Gann (His real name is William), works as a salesman/service technician. Other family members are his wife Teresa (infanticipating) and son Michael.

Johnnie McNeil, salesman/service technician, came from Brownfield. He is the father of three, Chanel Crista, John David and Stephanie Renea.

Another s/st is Wayne Magnuson, who lives in Sayre, Okla., but will be a Pampan at least part of the time.

All are pleased as can be to be a part of our community.

Newlyweds? Ah, yes!!! Mavis Dedmon and Bill Freudenrich, longtime Pampans, were married about three weeks ago. Bill has an enviable work record of 69 years that began at age 7, with no date of retirement in mind.

Lois Fagan, longtime Pampan and piano teacher, retired in May. She and the Rev. Amos Meador, retired Nazarene minister of Borger and well-known in Pampa, were married early this month.

Both couples will make their home in Pampa. Wedding congratulations and good wishes to all four!

Julie Noles spent most of the summer at camp near Kerrville. Her parents, Brenda and Jerry, picked her up there, then met Dr. Jay and Linda Johnson, Laura and Anna and made a vacation loop to San Antonio and Corpus Christi. Beach people?

Ann and Lee Carmichael took a long train ride with their grandmother of Wichita Falls all the way to Michigan for a vacation at their grandparents' summer home. In the meantime Doug met a friend for a few rounds of golf and relaxation at Horseshoe Bay near Austin. All are back home in the family setting.

Diana and Lee Waters, Colby, Kellen and Emily, Betty and R.H. Dyson, Kent and daughter Leanne, and Blake Nipper of Houston enjoyed a family vacation of paddle boats, fishing and family togetherness at Fun Valley, Colo., near South Fork. Leanne had seven stitches taken in her forehead as a reminder of her summer vacation.

Kim and Dennis Laycock vacationed on the Caribbean island of St. Kitts.

Boydean Bossay and her son Lance took in the bright lights of Las Vegas, came home to repack, and took off for a vacation in New York City.

Peeking at Pampa

By Katie

If you want to see Chris Hite's black eyes twinkle and shine, ask him where he spent his vacation. He flew to Germany where he visited the former Tracy Rice and family. The trip included a long tour of Europe.

Tracy and her little girl returned to Pampa with Chris to visit her parents, Joy and Ronnie Rice. Don't you just love for Chris to wait on you in the family drug-store?

Charlene and Roy Morriss and Charlene's sister and husband, Edith and Jack Flynn of Carmine, met and visited the girls' parents, Martha and Arthur Carter, in Georgetown.

Becky Buzzard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bryant, flew here from Austin last week. The three then went to Holloway, Okla. to attend a family wedding.

Nancy Coffee, Peggy Baker and Nancy Harwell vacationed in Cuernavaca and on to Puerto Valarto for a stay in Peggy's condo. Of course, they had fun — lots of it!

Joyce and Buddy Epperson met family in San Antonio for a look at Sea World.

A girls-for-lunch group gathered at The Loft for lunch after a morning of golf. The lunchers were Elaine Riddle, Mary Jo Fiveash, Andrea Walling, Shirley Stafford, Ginger Hall and Joyce Epperson.

Benny and Joann Shackelford moved back to Pampa one at a time from Nocona. Benny, a vice president at National Bank of Commerce, came in February. Joann in June when school was out. Joann by now has met her daughter Sharla, who is working on her master's degree in music with a major in conducting at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. They will swing by Atlanta and Asheville, N.C. before returning to Pampa to complete the family circle.

The Shackelfords are longtime Pampans, who are as happy to be back home again as family and friends are to have them. Joann's aunts, Garnet, Jackie and Jodie Poole, head the welcoming committee!

Joann, a graduate of three Pampa schools, previously taught at Travis and Austin Elementary Schools, and will teach in a Pampa school this fall.

Karen Kleiboeker and her daughter, Kristi Ann, came from their home near Kansas City, Mo. to visit family for a few days. Karen's mother, Janet Warner, had a large table of guests for Sunday dinner at the Pampa Country Club that included Karen, Kristi Ann, Kerrick (Karen's twin sister) and Benny Horton, Meredith and J.B., Judy and Patti Warner and Ruth Ann Holland. Karen is a stewardess for TWA and, of course, a native Pampan.

Viola Coffee will be honored with a birthday reception Sunday, July 31, from 2 to 5 p.m. at her home at 501 Grimes in White Deer. All friends and relatives are invited to attend the reception hosted by her sons and their wives: Doug and Nancy Coffee of Pampa; Don (Rocky) and Norma Coffee of Dallas; and Ron and Pat Coffee of Atlanta.

Viola is a well-known artist, Pampa's Artist of the Year for 1987, and an area pioneer. As a member of the First United Methodist Church in White Deer, she served as secretary of the administrative board for more than 30 years. She is also a board member for the Square House Museum in Panhandle. She's a lovely, gracious, talented lady, well loved and admired by all who know her.

A reminder to all you fruit and vegetable lovers: Do remember that the Farmer's Market opened yesterday on the parking lot of M.K. Brown Auditorium, to be in gear Wednesday and Saturday mornings.

See you there and back here next Sunday.

Watering tips help assure healthy lawn, garden plants

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

GUIDES FOR EFFECTIVE LANDSCAPE IRRIGATION

Watering plants seems to be one of the most confusing parts of gardening. The trouble is, too many gardeners don't realize this until it's too late. "How often should I water?" and "How much should I apply?" are, at this time of year, the top questions from gardeners. Since water is both essential for healthy plant growth and expensive, it's important to get it to the plant's roots and keep it there.

The following are several suggestions for watering. These techniques apply to all gardening, from shade and fruit trees and vegetable gardens to lawns and houseplants.

- Never water strictly by the calendar. We don't drink water every 10 minutes or every hour, so why should plants be watered every two days or once a week? Instead, learn to recognize dry plants and soil and use these as your tip-off for watering. Too many factors determine how fast a soil dries for us to put watering on a regular basis.

For Horticulture

- When the plants are dry, water thoroughly. Water lawns so that the soil will be wet several inches down, to encourage deep rooting and drought tolerance. One of the worst mistakes people make on their lawns is trying to "sprinkle" them each day by using their thumb and the end of a running hose. Most gardeners just don't have the patience to stand in one spot long enough for deep water penetration.

- Water trees by taking the sprinkler off the end of the hose and letting water run slowly for several hours. Root feeders are also effective.

- Most plants should be watered in the morning. Watering during the day results in great water loss by evaporation and can result in burned leaves where sunlight hits the water droplets. Evening watering increases the likelihood of disease invasion, as most diseases develop rapidly in cool, moist conditions.

- While watering your lawn, try to keep water off the leaves of trees and shrubs as much as possible. This is especially important for such plants as crape myrtle and roses, which are troubled by leaf diseases which spread rapidly on wet surfaces.

- Symptoms for plants which have been kept too wet are about the same as for those kept too dry. Roots in waterlogged soils die and do not take up water, so plants wilt and turn yellow. Try not to water a drowning plant!
- Organic matter, such as peat moss and rotted manure, can reduce water loss by runoff when they are worked into the soil. To keep moisture in the soil, use a mulch such as straw, grass clippings, redwood bark or gravel. In addition to reducing evaporation, mulches also keep the soil cooler.
- Be especially careful to keep newly planted trees and shrubs well-watered. Their developing root systems are sensitive to under- and over-watering.
- Always soak inorganic fertilizers into the soil immediately after applying. These materials are excellent sources of plant foods, but they are all salts and can pull water out of plant tissues, resulting in burn.

VEGETABLE GARDEN QUESTIONS/ANSWERS

Q. Should you allow tomatoes to become fully ripe and red on the vine before harvesting?

A. Generally, yields will be increased by harvesting the fruit at first blush of pink instead of leaving them on the plant to ripen fully. A tomato picked at first sign of color and ripened at room temperature will be just as tasty as one left to fully mature on the vine.

Picking tomatoes before they turn red reduces damage from birds.

Q. If tomatoes are picked green or before they are fully mature, how should they be handled to insure proper ripening and full flavor?

A. Never refrigerate tomatoes picked immature. Place them in a single layer at room temperature and allow them to develop full color.

When they are fully ripe, place them in the refrigerator where they will store for several weeks. Those handled in this manner will be of high quality and full flavor.

Q. After harvesting, how should I handle my potatoes to result in the longest storage time possible?

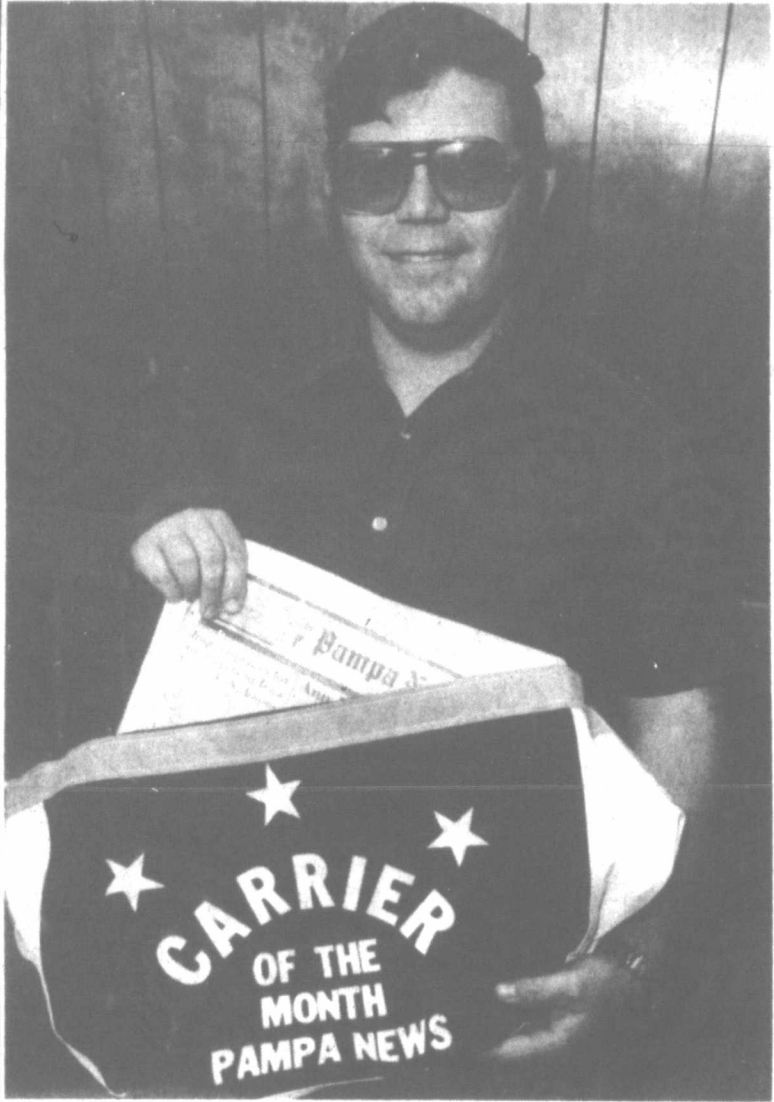

A. Dig potatoes when the soil is dry, being careful not to skin or bruise the tubers. Do not wash the potatoes. Place them in crates or some suitable container and store them in a dark area for about 10 days at a temperature of 60 degrees to 65 degrees F. with a relatively high humidity.

After this curing period, keep the potatoes at 40 degrees to 45 degrees F., with the humidity near 85 percent, and provide good circulation.

Q. Will it help to remove the tips of my pumpkin vines late in the season to encourage fruit size?

A. The tips of vining pumpkins may be removed about 45 days prior to the anticipated first fall frost to discourage plants from further spreading. This practice will generally encourage larger fruit and will not harm production, as any additional fruit which might set after that time will not ripen before the first killing frost of the fall.

The Point Is Pets

by Ron Hendrick, D.V.M.

Q: I heard recently that dogs and cats can get Diabetes. Is this true?

A: Yes. Diabetes is seen in both of these species, and rarely, in other species. The usual symptoms include excess thirst, (and subsequent excessive urination) and usually a ravenous appetite, but without the weight gain one would expect. In fact, the animals normally are seen because of weight loss. Sometimes the only other symptoms the owner has noted are possible weakness, constipation and maybe dryness of the skin. Many times these symptoms come on gradually, and are easily confused with those of other diseases. I myself have been guilty of jumping to the conclusion that the above symptoms were simply those of tonsillitis or some other minor problem, when in fact, the problems were more severe. Luckily, we now have excellent lab equipment which can help us make a more rapid and accurate diagnosis. I have recently purchased a set of equipment which can do CBCs, Blood chemistries and more, in a matter of minutes. This not only gives me rapid, accurate diagnostics, but helps me initiate the proper treatment immediately, instead of waiting 2 days for the lab results to come back from the Diagnostic Lab in Amarillo. Diagnosing Diabetes, Kidney disease, Heart disease, and more is much easier and faster now. Today, diabetes is relatively easy to diagnose. Appropriate treatment, (usually giving insulin injections daily) plus proper dietary controls makes for a fairly normal life for our pets. Hopefully, the experimental work in this field, especially, injecting the insulin-producing cells into the recipients, will prove to be economically feasible for pets as well as humans. It is still experimental, but looks promising.

Bell offers customers points for sales calls in telemarketing deals

Telephone customers have varying opinions about sales calls made over the phone, but these sales calls need not be a problem if customers keep a few important points in mind when answering them, says Gary Stevens, area manager of external affairs for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

Telephone sales calls, commonly known as telemarketing, are legal, he said, adding that the telephone is an effective marketing tool widely used by many companies and organizations.

Telephone customers, as consumers, have the right and responsibility to make their own judgment about each sales call received, he explained. Those judgments might be based on the following questions:

- Are you interested in, or do you want or need, the product or service offered?
- If you do, is the offer reasonable? Does it make sense?
- Are you being pushed to make a decision immediately? Is there a legitimate reason why you can't buy the same product or service tomorrow or next week just as well as today?
- Does the offer sound too good to be true? If it does, then it probably is.

Those who receive sales calls have the right to verify the information they have been told and should ask for a call-back number, Stevens said. Checking with the Better Business Bureau or another appropriate neutral source is also wise, he said.

Consumers should use caution when giving credit card numbers and should check who they are giving the number to and how it will be used.

Texas Public Utility Commission has established specific guidelines for Texas companies using a computer to make sales calls within the state:

- The message must state the nature of the call, and the name, address and call-back number of the company or organization making the call.

- Any call from a computer is required to disconnect within 10 seconds after the consumer has hung up.
- Computerized calls may be made only during certain hours: Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Sunday, 1:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.
- If calls from a computer are used for payment collection purposes, the calls have to be made within hours specified by federal law.

Southwestern Bell Telephone has the authority to disconnect or refuse service to any company or organization operating within Texas that violates these rules.

The PUC does not have any authority over sales calls originating outside of the state and many sales calls are made from other states.

Those who want to reduce the number of sales calls received, send name, address and telephone number (including area code) to Telephone Preference Service, Direct Marketing Association, 6 East 43rd St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Doing this does not guarantee that all sales calls will be eliminated, telephone company officials say, but the number of calls made from national telemarketing companies will be reduced.

To report an abuse of Texas' telemarketing laws or to file a complaint against a specific telemarketing organization, call the Southwestern Bell Telephone business office at the number printed in the telephone directory.

To file a complaint about a sales contact with Southwestern Bell, it is essential to have the name of the company making call. It is also helpful to have some information about the phone number or address of the company, the kind of sales offer and the time the call was received.

First Texas asks for help

DALLAS (AP) — The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. has been asked to provide undisclosed aid to two of Texas' largest savings and loan institutions, who between them lost almost $170 million in the first quarter.

A spokeswoman for First Texas Financial Corp. confirmed that the company submitted a plan to federal regulators that would provide more than $250 million in private funds in return for the FSLIC help.

"I can confirm there has been an offer and that we are optimistic about it, but at this time, we don't know how much federal money is involved," said the spokeswoman, who wished to remain anonymous.

First Texas Financial, the state's largest savings and loan holding company, is the parent company of Dallas-based First Texas Savings Association and Houston-based Gibraltar Savings Association.

With 44 branches in the state, First Texas has assets of $3.4 billion. Gibraltar, with 53 locations and assets of $6.1 billion, is the state's largest thrift.

The proposal submitted by First Texas includes financial backing from New York investor Saul Steinberg's Reliance Insurance Co., and private funding by First Texas Chairman and Chief Executive J. Livingston Kosberg and Dallas real estate developer Richard C. Strauss.

FORAGE AVAILABILITY

The drought in parts of Texas and in many sections of the Central United States has surfaced the need for many producers to find adequate forage to supplement cattle through this short grazing period.

If you need hay for your cattle or if you have surplus hay for sale, we would like to know so we can help everyone throughout the state have access to forage for their livestock.

We will be maintaining a list of producers who have hay for sale at the county Extension office. We would like to know if you have hay for sale. A form is available in the county Extension office if you have hay for sale.

Then each week, please call to let me know if you have hay for sale or if you have sold any hay you have listed.

If you need hay, please call us and we will be able to give you the name and phone number of producers who have hay for sale.

Remember, a new list of people with hay for sale will be developed each week, so keep me informed of your situation. Counties with surplus hay will be listed on a statewide news release that will help bring the buyer and seller together.

Your cooperation is very important to the success of this operation. Please help us and your fellow livestock producers by letting us know weekly what your hay situation is.

BINDWEED

As I drive around, I see a lot of bindweed in full bloom. Bindweed is a noxious weed that only gets worse over the years. It can ruin good farmland and has, in some situations.

Landowners must make a determined effort to eradicate any bindweed on their property.

I don't know of a herbicide that can eradicate bindweed once and forever with a single treatment. However, there are herbicides that will eradicate bindweed with continued work over several years. There is considerable expense involved with bindweed eradication, but landowners don't really have a choice if they want to stay in business.

Some of the more commonly used herbicides include Tordon, Banvel, Landmaster, Roundup and 2,4-D. Each one of these products has its good points and weaknesses. Also, there is the cost involved. And one must consider whether it is small areas or large areas that need to be treated.

I want to urge anyone with bindweed to start doing something to reduce bindweed on his land.

One of the factors that makes bindweed control last for several years is the fact that seeds may lie dormant in the soil for years before they germinate. The other factor is the deep root system that stores food, which enables it to resprout a lot before the reserve underground food supply is exhausted.

When you take these two facts in consideration, it is easy to see why eradicating bindweed is a long-term project and requires fairly constant checking every month during the growing season.

Each field or farm needs a definite plan tailored for its bindweed situation in conjunction with the cropping system and financial condition of the landowner.

I will be glad to assist producers in developing a bindweed control plan tailor-made for each farm situation. Come by the Gray County Extension Office.

Old peanut research gets a healthy new look

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sometimes old research, like yesterday's fashions, makes a comeback, or at least is done up in new packages, says the Agriculture Department.

Back in the 1960s, USDA peanut researcher Joseph Pominski and others developed and patented a chemical-free process that removes about half the fat from raw peanuts, which then can be roasted and eaten as a snack food with about a third fewer calories than regular peanuts.

The department's Agricultural Research Service said that the patent expired in 1983, but renewed health interest "has helped bring new interest to the research."

A major food company, Heinz USA, began selling partially defatted roasted peanuts made with a commercial process based on the technology developed by Pominski and colleagues at the agency's Southern Regional Research Center in New Orleans.

Pominski, a chemical engineer, and his fellow workers used a press to squeeze out about half the oil from raw peanuts. After that, the raw peanuts are soaked in hot water and then roasted for five minutes.

KOMX Morning Personality

Several months ago, reports filtered out of Nashville that Hollywood was again interested in bringing the country music lifestyle back as a "cool" way to live. "Was it ever uncool? Not to the people of the Panhandle who live a country lifestyle every day of their lives."

Nonetheless, it is always nice to have entertainment alternatives that don't scream of the punk rock, urban mile-a-minute life.

Two weeks ago this space was spent on newcomer Larry Boone. However, Boone's big break may not be in music, per se — he is slated to star in a new motion picture titled Music City Blues. The blond-headed star should be well suited for the role; he's playing a struggling young singer in the 16th Avenue jungle.

Also appearing in roles close to the heart will be the Judds. They are starring in their own sit-com on CBS this fall. The writers strike may cause the show to be temporarily shelved, though.

Apparently the failure of Dolly Parton's variety show on ABC has not daunted the network opinion that country stars can make it on the "big three."

Singer/songwriter Hoyt Axton is back in the spotlight. After winning much acclaim in the movie Gremlins, he is now starring in Waiting for Salazar. The movie is a Walt Disney production. With filming in Montana and much free time during production, Axton once again has decided to make a few concert appearances.

Perhaps the music bug will again bite Axton, a former Childress resident. His most popular song is "Della and the Dealer." Axton is also well-known as the voice of the Busch Beer ads.

Heartthrob Randy Travis is making his motion picture debut soon in a western with the working title Young Guns. Travis was scheduled to play the good-guy role of the town's handsome barber. After a screen test and interview, he was recast, though, as the bad guy. Talk about role reversal!

Willie Nelson has now starred in a handful of made-for-TV movies on CBS. The best was the remake of the John Wayne classic Stagecoach. The movie also starred Johnny Cash, Waylon Jennings, Kris Kristofferson and John Schneider.

Now Nelson is working on Where the Hell Is the Gold, another western for CBS. The movie will also star Merle Haggard. The two have previously teamed up on video for the vignette version of the hit "Paunch and Lefty." While neither man could be considered handsome, both have a road-worn look that translates well onto the screen.

If you missed the pseudo-western starring Mel Tillis and Roy Clark from last summer, you are lucky. The film — who really cares what the name was — was a two-hour redefinition of the word "bad." Get the gong out, Mom!

Tillis and Clark are now making a new feature film, Orange Blossom Special, about a cross-country bus race. First, the Orange Blossom Special was a train, not a bus. Second, the Hee Haw humor both actors/singers gravitate toward is what gives country people a bad name.

While Hee Haw and related forms of country humor have their place, they tend to pander to a lowest common denominator kind of approach. Perhaps stars like Clark and Tillis don't feel country fans can handle subtlety. Wrong, banjo breath!

More sophisticated humor is badly needed in the country vein. Nashville comedians Williams and Ree are a good example. Their "Indian and the white guy" approach is perfect for getting laughs without insulting anybody's intelligence.

If all of this movie mania is not enough for you, we'll try one more: George Burns' country hit of a few years back, "I Wish I Was 18 Again," has been made into a feature film. The 92-year-old star is also re-releasing the song to country stations to coincide with the movie, which will be out later this summer.

The law of averages says several of these movies will not get the much ballyhooed two thumbs up. But I'll give a big double-thumbs for the fact that country is again taking the national spotlight.

Midnight Run

From It Happened One Night to Planes, Trains and Automobiles, the road picture has been a Hollywood fixture. So you think all the freshness has gone? Wrong. Here comes Midnight Run, with more twists and turns and better scenery than Route 66.

What elevates Midnight Run out of the ordinary is an ingenious, witty script by George Gallo, slam-bang direction by Martin Brest and a superior cast, headed by Robert DeNiro and Charles Grodin.

DeNiro is not exactly a private investigator. He's a bounty hunter from Los Angeles, an ex-cop reduced to tracking down deadbeats and bringing them to justice. Lawfully or otherwise, it doesn't matter. Bailbondsmen Joe Pantoliano gives him a daunting assignment: bring back an accountant, Charles Grodin, who is in danger of skipping out on his huge bail.

Grodin is not just any accountant. He embezzled $15 million from a Las Vegas crime boss (Dennis Farina), giving the fortune to charity. All DeNiro has to do is locate his quarry in New York and return him to Los Angeles in five days. Easy? Not when Grodin is also wanted by the FBI and is targeted for execution by Farina, and claims he is unable to fly.

Fans of former Go-Go's member may be surprised by song lyrics

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Fans of the Go-Go's will recognize the catchy pop music on Jane Wiedlin's new album, Fur. They may be surprised, however, to hear what she has to say.

"This is not any easy life, it's hard to hang on to hope," Wiedlin sings on "Inside a Dream," the first single. "There's so many things need to change. Well, I wonder how we cope."

"The world's a really crummy place, but we can't give up because we know that," Wiedlin said. "We have to keep fighting to improve things."

Wiedlin was the rhythm guitarist for the Go-Go's, an all-female band whose debut album, Beauty and the Beat, went No. 1 in 1982.

"The Go-Go's were always perceived as being upbeat but there was a lot of suffering as well," Wiedlin said.

Fur is Wiedlin's second solo record. Anyone familiar with Go-Go's songs such as "Our Lips Are Sealed" and "Head Over Heels" may not be prepared for the more serious mood of "Inside a Dream," but Wiedlin is not concerned.

"I've learned a lesson because of the Go-Go's, and that's not to worry about how people see me," she said in an interview.

Wiedlin has become more politically active since leaving the Go-Go's in 1984. On her first solo LP, she included postcards to be sent to President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, urging them to dismantle nuclear arms. She became a vegetarian five years ago and has campaigned actively for animal rights.

The title song on Fur is a direct plea not to wear animal furs.

"I wore a fur coat in the band and it really never occurred to me, the violence behind it," Wiedlin recalled. "When I see people wearing fur, they overlook the violence. I want people to connect fur coats with animals. I just feel that people should take more responsibility for their actions."

Wiedlin co-wrote all the songs on Fur. At the suggestion of her record label, EMI-Manhattan, she used several different partners, including Regina Cole, who wrote "Baby Love" for Regina, and Peter Rafelson and Garder Cole, who have worked with Madonna.

Wiedlin's up in the air with success.

The album was produced by Stephen Hague, who had worked on the hits "West End Girls" and "What Have I Done to Deserve This?" for the Pet Shop Boys. Wiedlin said Hague was her "one and only choice" for Fur.

"He brought this feeling of coherence to the album. He gave it such a strong sound; it was almost like a concept album."

Wiedlin wants to tour before the end of the year and hopes her music will get people more involved in social causes.

"It has the ability to change things. I get letters from fans that say they're really proud of me," she said. "... Getting even just one fan to help is enough."
