Shuttle set for new test

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — For the first time in 21/2 years a space shuttle is on a launch pad here, and engineers and technicians are grooming it for an engine test crucial to the ship's return to space in early September

Preparations for the engine firing began shortly after Discovery reached the launch pad Monday and workers had hooked up electrical, environmental control and other connections.

The July 24 test is to subject the three main liquid fuel engines to a 19.4-second ignition while Discovery is bolted firmly on its launch mounts. The exercise will check scores of engine modifications and provide the launch team with countdown practice

Discovery rolled to Launch Pad 39B on a Fourth of July filled with emotional outpourings from officials, thousands of space workers and one of the astronauts who will fly on the first shuttle mission since the Challenger disaster in January 1986

'America, the dream is still alive," astronaut Dave Hilmers told about 2,000 Kennedy Space Center workers who cheered as the spaceship moved out of an assembly hangar to start the 4.2-mile trip to the pad. 'It's been a long 2½ years since Challenger, and I'm very pleased with the progress we've made during that time," center director Forrest S. McCartney told the crowd. "It's been a team effort.

. This is a proud day. McCartney presented Hilmers with a book containing the signatures of more than 15,000 center personnel who have labored to return the shuttle to flight. The book will be carried into space aboard

"Wonderful!" "It's great!" "We're back in business," were among the comments as drivers slowed to allow their passengers to take photographs.

The launch-pad firing of Discovery's engines is the next major milestone along the route to

The next day, July 25, the shuttle's other propulsion system, the redesigned solid fuel booster rocket, will undergo its final preflight test at the Morton Thiokol plant in Utah.

A faulty booster rocket joint led to the explosion of Challenger and loss of its seven crew members on Khamenei: Iran has right to avenge

Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - President Ali Khamenei of Iran said today his country has the right to avenge the victims of the Iran Air jetliner shot down by the U.S. Navy, Tehran Radio reported.

He did not say if, how or when Tehran would seek revenge. Iran said all 290 people aboard the aircraft were killed in Sunday's missile attack.

The radio, monitored in Nicosia, quoted Khamenei as saying: 'Iran considers it to be its definite right to avenge the blood of innocent children, men and women.

In Beirut, the spiritual guide for Iranian-backed guerrillas holding foreign captives in Lebanon was quoted as saying today that the hostages should not suffer because the U.S. Navy shot down an Iranian jetliner.

But an anonymous caller purporting to speak for Islamic Jihad, which holds Americans Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland, threatened to kill one of them in revenge. It was not possible to authenticate the call. Islamic Jihad has said it would authenticate its statements with photographs of the hostages.

Iran's top diplomat in London had hinted that the attack might endanger the lives of 18 Western hostages in Lebanon.

In Tehran, mass funeral services were scheduled today and Wednesday for some of those killed in the attack.

The United States said the crew of the the USS Vincennes mistook the plane for an Iranian F-14 fighter and said it failed to respond to seven radio warnings.

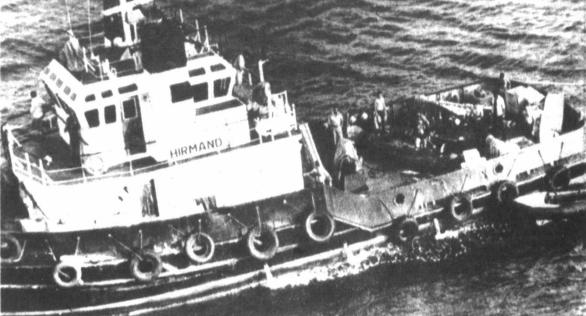

An Italian naval spokesman said today that an Italian frigate in the gulf heard the Vincennes radioing an approaching aircraft, requesting identification and change of course.

However, the spokesman, Capt. Alfredo Saitto, said the Italian ship could not determine whether the Iranian airliner was flying outside the commercial air corridor, as Italian officials had said Monday.

In Dubai, about 400 mourners gathered Monday for a memorial service at a Shiite mosque and regularly burst into chants of 'Death to America.

On Tehran radio Monday, Khomeini said: "We must all be prepared for a real war and go to the war fronts and fight against America and its lackeys. I donate my worthless life for the sake of our victory.'

In Lebanon, Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, the spirtual leader of Hezbollah, or Party of God, was quoted as saying he finds "no justification for making the hostages account for a matter with which they have no link."

In London, Iranian charge d'affaires Mohammed Basti was asked whether the foreign hostages are now in greater danger.

"It is a natural human reaction," he said. "People in the area, they have seen this thing with their own eyes. ... Naturally they do not remain indifferent."

In the southern gulf, Iranian news reports said 168 bodies had been recovered and the search area had been expanded.

The commander of the search and rescue operation said bodies had been recovered up to five miles from the area where most of the jetliner's debris fell. It was hit at 7,500 feet by at least one of two missiles fired by the Vincennes, a guided missile cruiser.

Despite fires, Pampans have relatively quiet 4th

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Pampans celebrated a relatively quiet Fourth of July, although more than a dozen grass fires caused by fireworks in and around the city kept Pampa firefighters hopping.

And while the death toll rose to 28 on Texas highways this holiday veekend, only two minor accidents were reported around Pampa. Local Department of Public Safety troopers, however, made eight driving while intoxicated arrests

Cars driven by two Amarillo men collided at the Top o' Texas rodeo grounds Saturday, with no injuries reported and no citations issued. Two people received minor injuries in an accident early Saturday morning, 3.2 miles east of White Deer of U.S. 60.

Marvin Daniels, 47, of Hereford, and a passenger in the vehicle he was driving, Betty Brock, 41, of Memphis, were both taken to Coronado Hospital Emergency Room by Rural-Metro Ambulance where they were treated and released, according to hospital officials Pampa police officers responded to 14 fireworks-related calls from July 1 through 4. On July 4, a dirt road passing by the Top o' Texas Rodeo grounds was lined with revelers setting off fireworks. Onlookers parked along nearby Texas 152 to admire the pyrotechnic displays.

On Loop 171, more celebrants parked along both sides of the overpass to set off fireworks, some going off in the roadway. Underneath the overpass, fireworks were causing small grass

Despite laws against the practice, fireworks within the city limits caused a number of small grass fires. Pampa Fire Department had no reports of fires the first three days of the weekend, but beginning at about 11 a.m. Monday, the fires began.

Fires were reported at Craw ford, Henry, Craven, South Barnes, Rosewood, Sumner and Faulkner, East Tyng and Naida streets within the city. Three times firefighters were called to the overpass on Loop 171, east of Pampa. And a grass fire was reported at the rodeo grounds and near Grandview-Hopkins school, 13 miles south and 10 miles west of the city

The final call came in at 12:42 a.m. today, with a grass fire reported three miles south of Pampa.

Most were small grass fires causing little damage and many were out by the time they arrived, firefighters said

Pampans led a relatively safe weekend, with only one fireworks-related injury being treated at Coronado Hospital's emergency room, according to Linda Haynes, hospital spokesman. A 27-year old man was treated and released for a burn on his leg due to fireworks, she said.

A day of parades, picnics 4th of July:

By JONATHAN W. OATIS Associated Press Writer

Americans from Hawaii to New York marked the Fourth of July with fireworks, parades, food and fun including pitchfork fondue in Montana and marchers dressed as rodents in Columbus, Ohio.

"Have a happy Fourth of July," said President Reagan, who played host to hundreds of White House and Secret Service personnel watching fireworks over the Washington Mall on Monday night.

The joy of America's 212th birthday was muted by the drought, which snuffed fireworks in many communities because of wildfire fears, and by fireworks-sparked fires, which injured at least 18 people.

In Boston, Gov. Michael Dukakis, the certain Democratic presidential nominee, and his wife Kitty joined Jesse Jackson and his wife Jacqueline beside the Charles River for the traditional Boston Pops concert and fireworks. The couples shared dinner earlier at the Dukakis home in Brookline. Vice President George Bush, the Republican nominee apparent, made a number of campaign appearances, including a reception for nearly 200 people sworn in as U.S.

citizens at the VP Fair in St. Louis. "It's a great feeling," said Ali Omiar, an immigrant from Western Samoa. "I came here to get an education. Now I have that and this, too.'

There were other ceremonies.

In Aransas Pass, Texas, about 500 shrimping vessels took part in the 40th annual Blessing of the Fleet

At the Angelina National Forest in Texas, more than 2,500 members of the Rainbow Family, many wearing only a layer of mud, held a prayer vigil for peace and harmony in the culmination of the 17th annual "gathering of the tribes."

Peace also was a theme of a parade in Coralville, Iowa, where Soviets taking part in the America-Soviet Peace Walk marched two miles to the applause of hundreds of residents

"This is great," said Mayor Michael Kattchee. "I was born in Lithuania, so for me it is a great pleasure to see this happening."

About 220 Soviets and 100 Americans are on the cross-country journey that began in Washington, D.C., June 17. In Willimantic, Conn., about 500 people marched down Main Street carrying their own music in the form of portable radios, or "boom boxes," to the delight of 1,000 spectators. The radios, tuned to a local station, played 25 marches and a finale featuring Kate Smith's rendition of "God Bless America."

In Columbus, Ohio, residents dressed as rodents wearing gas masks staged a DooDah parade to mock odors from trash and sewage-treatment operations and factories on the city's south side.

"We dwell with the smell," said marcher Bob Lipetz. "A little chaos is good for society every now and then.

After a parade in Choteau, Mont., about 1,000 people repaired to the town park for pitchfork fondue: sirloin steaks impaled on the end of a pitchfork and plunged into a huge vat of rendered beef fat.

There were fireworks aplenty. In Hawaii, there were six displays throughout the islands, most at military bases. At Pearl Harbor, the battleship USS Missouri fired a 21-gun salute from a signal cannon. In Chicago, a crowd estimated at 1.2 million filled Grant Park to watch a pyrotechnic extravaganza over Lake Michigan. New York City's spectacular, billed as the nation's largest on the Fourth, included a 60foot electric Statue of Liberty and fireboats spouting water 300 feet into the air.

But the fun was marred by accidents. In Jacksonville, Ill., a mortar misfired, causing minor injuries to nine people in a parking lot, said police Cadet Kim Heisler.

In Duluth, Minn., a fireworks explosion started several small fires at Bayfront Park on Lake Superior, forced the evacuation of tens of thousands of specatators and slightly burned three people, police said.

Man optimistic about brother's release

HOUSTON (AP) — The brother of a Galveston executive kidnapped by guerrillas in Colombia last month says he remains optimistic about his brother's release and safety.

Charles Gambini said he has heard no word of his brother's whereabouts, saying, "The only thing we've heard is what's in the newspapers.

His brother, Giacomo "Jake" Gambini, 42, chief of operations for General Pipe Services Inc., was kidnapped June 24 by the pro-Cuban National Liberation Army, known by its Spanish acronym ELN, who are demanding a $2 million ransom, Colombian and U.S. authorities said.

"We're optimistic at this point," Charles Gambini said. 'Usually they don't hurt people.

They just want the money.' General Pipe Services, which rents exploration equipment to some of the 20 foreign oil companies working in Colombia, refused to comment on conflicting news accounts of the kidnapping of Gambini and possibly of another General Pipe executive. Houston private investigator Clyde A. Wilson said his firm

'had a call from a relative of Mr. Gambini in Galveston, and we told him we'd be glad to help him on it." Wilson reported that the caller said he was going "to talk to the rest of the family and to Texaco," the oil firm for which General Pipe Services is a subcontractor

"I would sure hope they'd let me have a shot at this one," Wilson said.

A Texaco spokesman said General Pipe Services had been contracted to the company's Colombian subsidiary - Texas Petroleum Corp. — at times during the last several years, but was not sure if Gambini was working for the company at the time he was kidnapped.

In 1974, Wilson flew to East Africa on behalf of Tenneco Inc., and obtained the release of three Tenneco employees and a Texaco employee taken captive by Eritrean rebels seeking independence from Ethiopia after their helicopter went down in a sand-

Public ranks education No. 1 election issue, new poll says

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - The public ranks the quality of education as the No. 1 issue in this year's presidential campaign, according to a Gallup Poll being released today.

Asked to rate 13 foreign and domestic policy issues on a scale of 1-5, with 5 representing a "most important issue," 77 percent rated public education at least a 4.

Sixty-six percent of the 2,113 Americans surveyed by telephone between March 31 and April 20 said they would be more likely to support a candidate who favored increased federal aid to public schools.

Those were among the findings of an annual survey of public attitudes about school issues commissioned by the National Education Association, the 1.9 million-member teacher union holding its annual convention here this week.

'The American people understand the need for change. And they clearly indicate, in this poll, that they want to make education a national priority,' said NEA executive director Don Cameron, who was to discuss the poll at a news conference today.

In San Francisco on Monday, delegates to the American Federation of Teachers' annual convention re-elected Albert Shanker unopposed to his eighth two-year term as president of the 677,000member union.

The 3,000 delegates were to end their four-day meeting today after listening to a talk via satellite from Boston by Michael Dukakis, the certain Democratic presidential nominee.

In the poll, drugs ranked second in importance behind education, with 75 percent rating drugs 4 or 5. Sixty-nine percent rated U.S. ability to compete economically and technologically as a critical

The federal deficit and homelessness each were cited as most important by 67 percent, and AIDS by 66 percent.

Twenty-nine percent said "politicians and public officials not doing enough to provide necessary funding" is the chief obstacle to school reform. School administrators who "can't decide on the right way to achieve the goals of reform" were blamed by 25 percent.

Only 16 percent blamed teachers or teacher un-

Seventy-one percent felt schools are having trouble attracting new teachers. But 68 percent opposed lowering standards by allowing college graduates with no formal teacher training to work in public schools.

The poll had a sampling margin of error of plus or minus 2 percentage points. It was released a day after 8,227 NEA delegates overwhelmingly endorsed NEA President Mary Hatwood Futrell's pet proposal that urged the naming of at least one school district per state as 'learning laboratories' where teachers or anyone else with good ideas could freely experiment and take the lead in creating better schools.

AFT delegates ratified a similar program of school experimentation, calling for establishment of thousands of "schools within schools" where groups of six or more teachers could try innovative ideas free of bureaucratic meddling.

Both proposals drew immediate criticism from Assistant U.S. Secretary of Education Chester

"That they are willing to admit that things aren't hunky-dory in schools, that much is good," he said in a telephone interview. "But the bad part is that they seem to suggest that we need to have a vast experiment, as if we didn't know or have the faintest idea of what works in schools.

Even some teachers expressed doubts about the NEA reform proposal.

"I'm a little afraid that it may be just another experiment. It could be limited to districts that are already innovating," said Kathleen Conklin, who teaches English at Malcolm X. Shabazz High School in Madison, Wis.

The NEA gathering hit an emotional peak with an appearance by 16-year-old Ryan White, the boy with AIDS who gained national attention with his fight to have a normal public school education.

'Teachers can play an important role in helping an AIDS student be accepted and treated as normal as possible by teaching the facts, not the myths," he said. "By proper education, AIDS can be a disease, not a dirty word."

Communist Party sidesteps call for a strong president

MOSCOW (AP) — The Com- legislative council, the Supreme munist Party conference approved Mikhail S. Gorbachev's call for an overhaul of the legislature but did not endorse his proposal for a strong presidency, according to a resolution published today.

In his speech last week opening the national conference he had called, Gorbachev said, "The president of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet should be granted sufficiently broad state authority

'Specifically, the president could exercise overall guidance in the drafting of legislation and of major socio-economic programs, decide on the key issues of foreign policy, defense and national security, chair the Defense Council" and name the prime minister, he said.

presidency, now a largely ceremonial post, the locus of Soviet power. Most authority now rests with the party general secretary Gorbachev — and the party's ruling Politburo.

The resolutions adopted by the 5,000 delegates, as published today by Soviet newspapers, were silent on the question of presidential authority.

The resolution on political reform did propose creation of a new elective body, to be known as the Congress of People's Deputies, which would meet annually to set general policy and elect members of a smaller, full-time Soviet.

The Supreme Soviet now has 1,500 members who meet twice a year to give rubber-stamp approval to party policy. The resolution also would limit officials to two five-year terms in the same party or government office, eliminating the common practice of what amounts to lifetime tenure for many officials. The congress also would "elect by secret ballot the president of the Supreme Soviet," the document said. But it was silent on what that officer's duties would

It was not immediately clear whether the 13-member Politburo had moved to block Gorbachev's plan.

He said the body also approved the general secretary's more controversial plan to have the party leader at every level - local, regional, republic and national — stand for election to head his or her governmental council, or soviet. That would consolidate party and government power in one person, who would have to be elected not only by the party organization but by the lawmakers as well.

Gorbachev did not specifically say the party general secretary should seek the presidency, but Lukyanov said the conference made the recommendation to apply to all levels, setting the stage for Gorbachev to seek election to the new president

Members of the Rainbow family prayed for peace under a rainbow while Texans celebrated the Fourth of July in more traditional ways with cookouts, baseball games and swimming pool parties.

It was a special holiday in Houston for 85 people who became citizens of the United States on the country's 212th birthday. The ceremony at Sam Houston Park was part of the opening ceremonies for the daylong Houston Freedom Festival

Two natives of Chile, Carmen and Hernan Vera, were among those taking the oath.

"We can participate in the destiny of the country," said Mrs. Vera, who has lived in the country for 20 year. "We're anxious to vote. People in this country take it for granted. People have to realize they can change things if they have to "

"This is a very special day for me and for all of my family because we become citizens of the United States — a free land where there are opportunities for everybody," said Pedro Romney, another new citizen.

"There are equal rights that you can't find in another place and that's why we're grateful today."

The Freedom Festival was the biggest event scheduled during the weekend in the state's largest city. More than 300,000 people converged in Sam Houston and Buffalo Bayou parks downtown to celebrate with games, crafts, food and a fireworks finale.

The Rainbow Family held a prayer vigil for peace and harmony in the Angelina National Forest as their 17th annual "gathering of the tribes" culminated.

"I almost started crying it was so beautiful," said one Rainbow woman named Alita after the service. "All these people were melded together."

Officials held the 40th annual Blessing of the Fleet in Aransas Pass.

"I'd rather be here than anywhere else," World War II veteran Bill McCormack said during Monday's ceremony at Seaman Memorial Tower. "People will always have to give their lives to pay for our freedom and we will always have to pay tribute to them," the 73-year-old McCormack said.

Mayor Robert Watson said there are approximately 500 shrimping vessels "of all shapes and sizes" in the Aransas Pass harbor.

"The tradition of blessing the shrimp fleet is so important to this town because that industry is vital to our wellbeing," he said. "It brings up our tax base and provides much-needed jobs."

Thousands of Lubbock residents turned out to watch the annual holiday parade, which featured floats, clowns, music and vintage cars.

And at Maxey Park in Lubbock, 5,000 plastic ducks hit the water for the YWCA's First Annual Great Texas Rubber Duck Race. For a donation of $5 participants were assigned a numbered duck.

With 5,000 ducks in the water Samuel Romero, 9, thought he had no chance to win the grand prize.

He was mistaken. After waiting about 20 minutes after the small plastic ducks were pushed into the water and helped along the 50-yard raceway by two people making waves, Romero's duck, number 75, was declared the winner of the grand-prize trip for four to Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

The Highland Park Yacht Club held volleyball tournaments and limbo contests on tons of trucked-in sand in Dallas

The New York Yankees provided the fireworks on the baseball field, but 41,093 people turned out to watch the post-game fireworks at Arlington Stadium. The Yankees blasted the Rangers, 13-2, before the second largest crowd of the season at Arlington.

Beaumont's RiverBlast '88 ended with performances by the community band and local symphony, followed by fireworks. The 11-day-long summer festival along the Neches River included pig races each day.

Rainbow Family prays for peace in East Texas forest

ZAVALLA (AP) — Members of the back-to-nature Rainbow Family, holding one of their smallest gatherings in years, began leaving an East Texas national forest after their 17th annual ''gathering of the tribes'' culminated with prayers for peace and harmony.

The loosely knit group, which had predicted as many as 20,000 people would attend, drew 4,392 participants, according to federal marshals stationed in the Angelina National Forest, about 125 miles northeast of Houston.

"The presence of officials wearing official clothing made it intimidating," said one Rainbow member who called herself Alita.

Participants had been dogged by repeated court challenges from the U.S. Forest Service, which has been insisting the Rainbow Family comply with regulations covering use of the forest area.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice finally ruled that up to 5,000 people could gather at each of three designated campgrounds, although most of the people selected one site known as Mud Flats.

The judge also ordered that the group each day buy 15,000 gallons of fresh water to be trucked to the campground.

Forest Service and health officials sought to prevent a recurrence of dysentery that struck some 6,000 people from 29 states after they attended last year's Rainbow gathering in North Carolina. Nearly 13,000 attended there.

On Monday, a rainbow appeared in the sky overhead and thunder and lightning crackled as the family's meeting culminated with a prayer vigil on the shores of Lake Sam Rayburn.

Some of the people, who had been arriving in the forest since last week, reached the prayer site at dawn Monday and sat in silence, meditating around two banners as temperatures climbed to near 100 degrees.

One of the banners, emblazoned with a rainbow, read: "Silent Vigil For World

Many of the participants sat Indian-style, back-to-back, in various states of dress and undress. Some wore only mud.

"Back to front, yin to yang, a chain is built — a chain that binds in love and peace," said a Rainbow member who identified himself as Wu Qi. He continuously circled the gathering, wearing only a coat of mud that hardened on him as the sun baked him.

Other members who clothed themselves only in mud said it was meant to cleanse their skin.

"Women in Beverly Hills pay $300 for this and we get it for free," said a woman who identified herself only as Marcia from Arizona.

Just after noon, the group began humming a monotone while some members spread incense over the site.

The sky darkened as a thunderstorm approached and a rainbow around the sun, known as a "Sun Dog," appeared and drew exclamations of joy.

"It felt so good," said Diana, who said she came from Cleveland, Ohio, to attend with a brother. "It made me cry. It's wonderful."

Then rains came to the parched area, which had seen little rain in weeks. The group broke out in a continuous chorus of the John Lennon song, "Give Peace A Chance."

Forest Service officials said this year's gathering was significant in that legal questions were addressed that will affect future such gatherings. "Public health and safety, for example," Carl Gidlund, a Forest Service spokesman, said. "Now we have the Public Health Service in to ensure it's clean. It's a technical point, but now people have some protection. And for the first time, it's a controlled gathering."

Texas state police made about 100 arrests in the past two weeks, most for drunk and disorderly.

The most serious incident occurred Sunday night when a Rainbow Family member was struck by a four-wheel-drive vehicle being driven on the beach by a Zavalla man. The woman, Antoinette Radice, of Santa Cruz, Calif., who went by the Rainbow name of "No Guns," remained hospitalized. The driver of the vehicle was free on bond and charged with failure to stop and render aid, Department of Public Safety spokesman Jimmy Kirksey said.

According to a court order, family members must be out of the forest by July 10 except for those assigned to clean the area.

Officials: Phone calls mark alarming pattern of racism

DALLAS (AP) — City leaders say recent threats and harassing phone calls are indicative of an alarming pattern of racism here.

Some black elected officials say they believe minority leaders receive a disproportionate number of threats because they are viewed as antiestablishment or radical.

"Anytime you're trying to change things in this city, you can expect some nasty letters or phone calls," said Dallas school board member Kathlyn Gilliam, who is black. "I guess it goes with the turf, but it shouldn't."

Dallas Mayor Annette Strauss said, "We've gone through some tough times, including the shootings of three (police) officers...and people are just real emotional. Things have just been real tense." After three police officers were killed in separate incidents in January, police intelligence officers examined 17 threatening letters to one City Council member.

Police wouldn't say how many other threats they investigated, but acknowledged that an overwhelming number of the threats were directed to the council's two black members — Al Lipscomb and Diane Ragsdale.

Hardly a day goes by that three of Dallas' most visible black elected officials — County Commissioner John Wiley Price, Ms. Ragsdale and Lipscomb — don't receive a nasty or threatening letter or phone call, they told the Dallas Morning News.

On April 4, during a ceremony commemorating slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, an anonymous phone caller threatened to kill the three if they participated in a march.

The threat prompted the FBI and local authorities to rush to the South Dallas church where the ceremony was taking place. The FBI advised them not to participate in the march.

"But we marched anyway," Price said. "If we stopped doing something every time we received a threat, we never would get anything done. And that's what they want to see happen anyway."

Such threats are Class B misdemeanors, punishable by a jail term and a $1,000 fine.

But they are hard to prosecute officials say

But they are hard to prosecute, officials say, because it's difficult to identify the source of the threats, which usually come in anonymous letters or phone calls.

"When we catch them, we generally prosecute them to the fullest," said Capt. W.R. Rollins, head of the police intelligence division, which investigates terroristic threats and threats against elected officials.

'In terms of the volume of letters, I think probably the highest point was in January when the officers were killed,'' Rollins said.

At least 28 people have died in traffic accidents during the holiday weekend, authorities said.

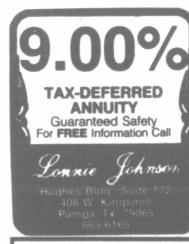

The final total may exceed the Texas Department of Public Safety's prediction of 36 deaths, said DPS spokesman Tom Mobley. The counting period began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight today.

"If nothing happens to change the course, it looks like we'll go over," DPS spokesman Tom Mobley said. "With everybody going home Monday night, they're trying to get there in a hurry so they can get some sleep before going back to work Tuesday."

The number of traffic fatalities in Texas over the Independence Day weekend includes at least five pedestrians, Mobley said.

Charles Beasley, 57, of Rt. 6 in Abilene, was killed late Sunday night when his motorcycle collided with a car on U.S. Highway 80 in Abilene, Mobley said. The car dragged the motorcycle more than 350 feet, where both vehicles caught fire, he said.

Jury selection begins in jail death

HEMPHILL (AP) — A defense attorney for a white police chief facing civil rights charges in connection with the death of a black jail inmate says the trial will bring out two completely different sides of the stary.

rent sides of the story.

"Our position is that the actions taken by the officers were justified whether it was a black man or a white man, whoever was involved," said John Seale, who represents Hemphill Police Chief Thomas Ladner.

Ladner, 40, and county deputies Bill Horton, 58, and James Hyden, 34, have been charged in connection with the death of Loyal Garner Jr.

State District Judge O'Neal Bacon summoned 500 residents for jury selection today in anticipation that many people in Sabine County may have already formed opinions in the case, or may be familiar with the defendants.

Garner, 34, of nearby Florien, La., was arrested on Christmas night of last year on suspicion of drunken driving and imprisoned in the Sabine County Jail. Two days later he died from head injuries.

Within days of Garner's death, Ladner, Horton and Hyden were charged with depriving Garner of his civil rights. The three, who were suspended without pay, were later indicted on murder charges and named in a civil suit by Garner's widow.

The officers, who have remained silent since the death, are expected to testify in the trial, which concerns the civil rights charges. They will be tried on the murder charges in Tyler later.

The chain of events that led to Garner's death began at 7 p.m. Christmas night when Garner and two brothers were arrested just outside Hemphill, a small East Texas town, on suspicion of several violations, including drunken driving and public intoxication.

One of the brothers, Johnnie Maxie, later said that the men were not drunk and that Garner was beaten by officers after he asked to phone his wife. After the beating, Maxie said Garner was dumped unconscious in his jail cell. Will Smith Jr., who preaches at a predominantly black church in Hemphill, said that many of the town's blacks are encouraged that a trial is being held.

"It's given hope. To see things moving like they're moving really says something to the black community," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Foreign aid kills

One of the ironies of our age is how foreign aid has caused recipient countries to deteriorate. Intended to help such countries' economies, the aid has only enriched resident bureaucrats while imposing immense burdens of new government controls and taxation on the people.

Most recipient countries are also deeply in debt to the very Western nations whose aid was supposed to ensure economic independence. The worst case is Africa, where average income in the 44 sub-Saharan countries has dropped since 1980, according to a new study by the International Monetary Fund, while the nations' foreign debts have increased faster than anywhere in the world.

To meet this crisis, the seven industrial nations whose leaders met in June in Toronto agreed to write off or reschedule much of these nations' debts. There is no other choice. You can't expect payment from those who are bankrupt. Moreover, it's clear that the Western nations themselves killed these countries' economies with kindness.

The best analysis of development economics is by P.T. Bauer, who has pioneered research in this field for 40 years. In his book Rhetoric and Reality, Bauer writes: "Foreign aid is the transfer of taxpayers" money to distant governments and to the official international organizations. The use of the term 'aid' to describe these transfers pre-empts criticism, obscures issues and prejudices results.

Bauer himself doesn't withhold criticism. "Aid helps or even enables governments to pursue policies which patently retard growth and exacerbate poverity. There is a long list of such policies, which includes persecution of the most productive groups, especially minorities, and sometimes their expulsion; restraints on the activities of traders and even the destruction of the trading system; restriction on the inflow of foreign capital, enterprise and skills;... forced collectivization; price policies which discourage food production.

Indeed, though the IMF report on Africa rightly spells out the problem, the IMF itself is largely to blame. The IMF doles out the damaging aid loans, then when recipient countries can't pay, it grants delays in payments only if the countries enact economy-killing austerity measures.

The IMF still refuses to see reality. Its report on the African nations puts the blame on "adverse historical and natural circumstances, depressed commodity prices and poor economic policies." Yet other nations have developed despite adverse historical and natural climates. And the "poor economic policies" were themselves imposed by IMF.

What should be done? All American foreign aid should be stopped. And we should encourage others to do the same. The best way to promote economic development? Bauer says the West should reduce 'its often severe barriers to imports from poor countries. External commerce is an effective stimulus to economic progress." Trade, not aid, promotes economic development.

Automakers won't play game

A friend of mine was in the market for a new car not long ago and couldn't decide whether to buy an American or a Japanese model. On the advice of acquaintances who knew more than he did, he settled on the latter. But he wondered if he had made the right decision.

So on a trip to New Orleans, he rented a Buick to sample what he was missing. He was impressed until he stopped at a gas station, where, confused by the array of buttons and levers in front of him, he mistakenly pushed one that opened the hood instead of the gas tank.

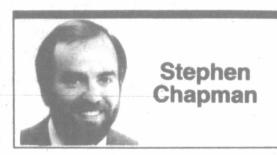

When he tried to close the hood, a roller fell off, which he replaced. When he tried again to close the hood, one corner crumpled like tinfoil. preventing it from closing. After some wrestling with it, my friend finally got the hood to latch — only to see a piece of chrome fall to the

Now, ever time he gets into his Mazda, my friend feels as grateful as if he'd just missed being struck by lightning.

Who could blame him? Even overlooking this unsettling experience with one of Detroit's products, it's hard to see why anyone but an economic nationalist, an insatiable masochist or a member of the United Auto Workers would buy an American car if there was anything comparable available from Japan.

The Big Three claim to have made great strides in quality, but the claims are no sturdier than their cars Ford ads declare that "Quality is Job One." Chrysler touts its long warranties. And I remember sitting with several other journalists across the table from General Motors chairman Roger Smith a couple of years ago, as he assured us that GM's cars were as reliable as any on the market, airily dismissing all evidence to the contrary.

He and his competitors in Detroit ought to take a look at the April issue of Consumer Reports magazine, which features its annual "frequency-of-repair' survey covering more than half a million cars — though they shouldn't do it

Out of all the cars sold in the U.S., I found none made in the U.S. by an American company that rates better than average on the "trouble index" in the most recent model year. By contrast, there is no car made in either the U.S. or Japan by a Japanese company that rates worse than average. Put simply, the worst Japanese models are as good as the best American ones.

The Ford Taurus and Mercury Sable, they of the "flying potato" shape, were supposed to change this bleak record. Introduced in 1986, they were a hit with both the public and car buffs. Zooming sales produced record profits. As Ford proudly notes in a current magazine ad, Car and Driver magazine has named the Taurus one of the 10 best cars in the world for three straight years.

But if you know Detroit's record, you can guess how this story ends. It now turns out that the Taurus and Sable are about as reliable as a body here play this game?'

$4 umbrella. Consumer Reports, which once lavished them with praise, has exiled them from its list of recommended cars, complaining that they are "persistently trouble-prone in their electrical and fuel systems." The Taurus and Sable have gone through six safety recalls.

Ford, noting that the cars are still selling well.

says buyers "are the ultimate critics of vehicle quality," which is not a bad tune to whistle when you have to walk past a graveyard. But though consumers may learn slowly, they learn well. GM's X-car was another early success that turned out to be a lemon, and even though the X-car is history, GM's lousy reputation is not.

You can bet that people who have to spend lots of time and money getting their Tauruses fixed won't head for a Ford showroom the next time they want to buy, even if Ford's quality undergoes a miraculous improvement between now and then. People who have been happy with Hondas and Toyotas will need powerful reasons to go back to Chevys and Mercurys

Judging from what they say, the U.S. automakers know the importance of quality, but trying for it and getting it obviously are two different things. They might hve done better if they hadn't been shielded from the consequences of their ineptitude.

If Chrysler had been left to the bankruptcy it had earned back in 1979, or if Ford and GM had been forced to face the Japanese onslaught without Washington's protection, managers and workers would have pursued better quality with a keener sense of urgency.

As it is, a lot of American car owners now know how it felt to be a New York Mets season ticket holder in 1962, when the team lost a record 120 games. And they may find themselves asking Casey Stengel's question: "Can't any-

Gambling with cigarettes not a good bet

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Rose Cipollone was a gambler.

We'll never know when it was that she realized how dangerous was the game she played for 40 years; obviously, not in the first 20 years she smoked, because the only information she had about its dangers was experiential: what she could see and feel. The information she got from the tobacco companies was that L&M's were "Just What The Doctor Ordered," and she should "Play Safe" by smoking Chesterfields.

We do know that Rose knew the dice were loaded against her since 1966, when her cigarette packs carried the warning that they were potential snake eyes. And we can't know what she saw and felt of its dangers the last 18 years of her life, once the warnings went onto the packs and until she died of lung cancer in 1984. But we've all known enough smokers to at least be able to conjecture:

Being a smoker, she probably had friends who were also smokers. As they continued to smoke, Rose and her friends probably contracted a good number of bronchial infections every year. They coughed. They complained about shortness of breath doing things they used to do easily mowing the lawn, moving furniture,

As she and her friends reached middle age, they may have attributed these physical symptoms to just not being as young as they used to be. But as newspapers and magazines began to carry stories of health problems associated with smoking, they recognized the possible link between cigarettes and diseases befalling people they knew: emphysema, tumors, can-cer. They knew they were gambling;

they just didn't know the odds. Around her, Rose Cipollone saw other people trying to quit smoking. She watched them struggle to free themselves from an addictive drug that had become more like an old friend than merely a habit. Perhaps she even tried to quit herself. If she did, she either decided it was too hard and she couldn't do it, or she made the conscious decision to gamble a little

The cigarette manufacturers were gamblers, too. They knew of possible health risks associated with cigarettes years before the news came to Rose Cipollone and her friends, yet they gambled the information would never come back to haunt them. For as long as they could get away with it, they advertised their products as safe, and fought against putting warnings on packs. They gambled that either their record would never catch up with them, or by the time it did, they'd have spent the profits and been long

System used to down airliner focus of Pentagon probe

WASHINGTON (AP) - Investigators in the Pentagon bribery probe are looking closely at how the Navy awarded contracts for its Aegis ship-defense system — the type used by the USS Vincennes to shoot down an Iranian passenger jet.

Pentagon officials now find themselves defending the system's capabilities, in addition to facing questions about the role of private consultants in determining which defense contractors won the multibillion-dollar Aegis production contracts.

The Vincennes relied on its Aegis nerve system to track and destroy an incoming aircraft on Sunday during hostilities with Iran. The aircraft, mistaken for an Iranian F-14 attack plane, turned out to be an Iranian jetliner with 290 people aboard.

Aegis, named for the shield of the Greek god Zeus, combines computers, radar and weapons in a protective net around Navy ships like the Vin-

Reps. Jim Florio, D-N.J., and H. James Saxton, R-N.J., have called on the Defense Department to determine whether the Aegis contracts are tainted by disclosures in the ongoing Pentagon purchasing

A chief target of the bribery probe is Melvyn Paisley, a former assistant Navy secretary who oversaw division of the Aegis work. Paisley left the Navy in 1987 to become a consultant to, among others, a company that got Aegis work. Paisley, though his attorney, has denied any wrongdoing.

Aegis systems had been built for 15 years at RCA's Moorestown, N.J., division when, in 1985. the Navy sought production changes despite the system's then-stellar reputation.

Unisys Corp. of Detroit eventually was awarded a contract to begin work on a key radar compo-

Unisys spokesman William Beckham confirmed that Paisley was hired by the company as a consultant after he left the Navy, but said he did not offer advice directly on Aegis.

Beckham said another Unisys consultant, William Galvin, "monitored" the Aegis proposals. Investigators reportedly are looking at links between Paisley and Galvin, and federal records show that Paisley's wife had a $50,000 ownership share in a company associated with Galvin.

Then-Navy Secretary John Lehman had a simple explanation for his order to "second-source" some of the work: Congress had told him to do so. Congress had required second sources on an effort to spark competition.

"I have yet to meet a second source I didn't like." Lehman scribbled at the bottom of a May 1985 letter defending the shift.

But despite the goal of increasing competition, the Navy announced that it would transfer the radar work without competitive bidding — to the Sperry Corp. of Great Neck, N.Y., now part of

New Jersey legislators rallied to protect some 600 jobs at RCA and as many as 5,000 related positions. Saxton wrote to colleagues at the time that "RCA has been on time, below cost and has exceeded all performance goals." The New Jersey group suspected that Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of the House defense appropriations subcommittee, was behind the plans — trying to get the Aegis work for his home state. Addabbo died in 1986.

"They clearly muscled their way in through Joe Addabbo," said Rep. Jim Courter, R-N.J. As originally proposed, the Aegis competition was to include dividing both the work on developing and making the systems' nearly 900 major components, as well as the delicate task of putting the parts together.

Aegis' 6 million parts and 4,900 cables are weaved together at RCA's $141 million "cruiser of the cornfields," a mock warship in a rural area along the New Jersey Turnpike.

The New Jersey delegation eventually collected enough congressional muscle to fend off part of the Navy's plans. Lehman's successor, James Webb, announced the Aegis assembly work would remain

Dukakis, Jackson share holiday

By The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush today was holding his first face-toface meeting with President Reagan since a U.S. Navy ship shot down an Iranian passenger jet. Democrats Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson shared a holiday meal — and a reluctance to discuss their dinner conversation with reporters

Both Bush and Dukakis made campaign-style appearances on the Fourth of July. The vice president made a one-day swing through three Midwestern states, while the Massachusetts governor stayed in his home state.

Jackson and his wife Jacqueline joined Dukakis and his wife Kitty for dinner at the Dukakis home in Brookline, Mass.

'We were talking about lots of things," Dukakis told reporters after the dinner.

Jackson told reporters when he arrived at the Boston airport, "It's a private meeting. He's the host and we are the guests." He had no comment after the dinner on what the two talked about.

Dukakis was tending to gubernatorial business today at the Statehouse.

Both Bush and Dukakis said they were saddened by the shooting down of an Iran Air Airbus on Sunday over the Persian Gulf. All

290 aboard were killed, Iran said. Bush, who waited a day before speaking out on the incident, said Monday at a stop in Elmwood Park, Ill., that he could "identify with the dilemma faced by the captain of the USS Vincennes."

The vessel's captain, Will Rogers III. told the Pentagon he believed his ship was under attack by an Iranian warplane.

The vice president, who was a World War II pilot, was asked how the Navy cruiser's sophisticated radar equipment could have failed to distinguish between the wide-bodied airliner and a small F-14 fighter, which was believed to be the target.

"Ever been in combat?" Bush snapped. "Combat is quite different than the laboratory.'

He said he did not expect U.S. policy in the gulf to change as a result of the incident. "Life goes on," the vice president said.

Bush made campaign stops outside Detroit and Chicago, and in St. Louis before heading home to Washington Monday night. He had spent the weekend at his summer home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

The vice president was in Kennebunkport when word of the gulf incident was relayed to Washington Sunday. He spoke with Reagan in a conference call that afternoon, spokeswoman Sheila

Tate said, and was meeting with the president today at the White House

Dukakis, in a Fourth of July speech at the Navy's oldest commissioned warship — the USS Constitution, berthed near Boston - called for an end to the Iran-Iraq war. "I believe that the United States must take the lead ... to stop this war permanently," he said. Dukakis also warned Iran that "this is no time for acts of terror or revenge in response to the incident.'

Jackson reacted to the incident by criticizing Reagan administration policy in the Persian Gulf, calling it "failed and vague." He urged the president to promptly offer reparations to the families of the victims.

Jackson also said there was 'no evidence" that the Vincennes was under attack at the time of the incident, and compared the shooting down of the Iranian airliner to the Soviet downing of a Korean Air Lines jetliner in 1983.

Both Reagan and the Pentagon have said such comparisons are unfair, because Sunday's incident occurred in a war zone, and because the Navy repeatedly radioed warnings to the approaching Iranian plane. Neither was the case in the KAL

Isham Green Harris, a Tennessee Democrat, to create a new position on the Senate staff — superintendent of the Senate

As Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas told the story last week, Harris's move was successfully blocked by Sen. Eugene Hale, a Maine Republican.

Hale contended the Senate stables already had three employees for each horse and did not need another. But that did not end the matter, Dole told the Senate.

An enterprising newspaper reporter decided to investigate. Inspecting the stables, the reporter found nine official "Senate horses." Five were used to pull Senate wagons. Four were for the

Episcopals study abortion

DETROIT (AP) - Episcopal delegates to the church's 69th General Convention urged in hearings that abortions be discouraged but that women should retain the right to have

Witnesses at a hearing Monday of the Committee on Social and Urban Affairs debated two resolutions that would discourage abortion but keep it legal. They said laws outlawing abortion would only force women to seek out unsafe, unsanitary means of ending pregnancies or in cases of rape. The other would discourage any legislative or other governmental effort to remove women's right to consider abortion.

The legislative resolution "basically restates the position of the General Convention of 1976," said the Rev. Neil G. Lebhar of Jacksonville, Fla.

The resolutions were the result of a study ordered in the 1985 general convention.

The committee adjourned for the day without acting on the resolutions. If approved in committee, the resolutions would be sent to the convention's 3,000 delegates for action.

The General Convention meets every three years to set policy for the 2.6 millionmember church. The convention runs through July 11.

Louisa Rucker, executive director of the National Organization of Episcopalians for Life, opposed the resolution addressing existing law on the right to abortion, saying it violated principles of separation of church and state for the church to take a stand

But she backed the resolution supporting women who decide on abortion in some

"It encourages and calls on the church to provide help and support for women caught in untimely and unwanted pregnancies," Rucker said. "We acknowledge a legal right for women to have an abortion, but we call on Christians to a higher standard.'

JOINT PROBLEM. MUSCLE PAIN

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of ba-

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one side of the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms.

The doctor of Chiropractic will est the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved. Perhaps some laboratory procedures will also be

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or eliminated.

Security tight as alleged TWA hijacker faces trial

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) - A Lebanese Shiite Moslem accused of murder and air piracy in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner to Beirut went on trial today under heavy security.

A clean-shaven Mohammed Ali Hamadi entered the courtroom in a Frankfurt state prison wearing a light-blue open-neck shirt, no tie and dark blue trousers. He had previously worn a beard.

Almost as soon as the trial began, Chief Judge Heiner Mueckenberger called a brief recess in a dispute over Hamadi's inter-

Fadlallah says attack shouldn't harm hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - The spiritual guide for Iranianbacked guerrillas holding foreign captives in Lebanon was quoted as saying today that the hostages should not suffer because the U.S. Navy shot down an Iranian jetliner.

"I find no justification for making the hostages account for a matter with which they have no link," Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah said in an interview with the Sohofiya News Agency, a Lebanese newsletter based in Moslem west Beirut.

'There's no link between this subject (the hostages) and the shooting down of the plane.

The United States said servicemen aboard a U.S. warship shot down the Iran Air jetliner on Sunday after mistaking it for a fighter and after it ignored warnings. Iran said all 290 aboard were killed

Iranian leaders called for war with the United States, sparking fears that the kidnappers may retaliate against the hostages.

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union's various reactions to the U.S. Navy's downing of an Iranian airliner appeared designed to maintain smooth Soviet-U.S. relations while satisfying some allies' desires for a harsh response Moscow radio said Monday that the Navy committed "deliberate mass murder," but Kremlin reaction was milder and defense officials did not even bring it up with an American visitor.

The United States said the crew of the USS Vincennes shot down the Iran Air jetliner over the Persian Gulf on Sunday when they mistook it for an F-14 fighter and it failed to heed warnings. Iran said all 290 aboard were

The spokesman also said the profile of the KAL jet was similar to that of American spy planes, while the profile of an Airbus and an Iranian fighter are distinct. He said the South Korean plane was shot down at night and the Iranian jet in daylight.

Moscow radio's reaction was far stronger. Its English-language service called the attack "deliberate mass murder in cold blood" and asked:

"What was the American cruiser defending itself from? Was it threatened by the 66 children and 52 women who were among the nearly 300 passengers of the airplane?"

It called the Vincennes "a brazen intruder in an alien land.

"There is a difference between a true act of self-defense - protection of a nation's borders - and deliberate, cruel murder," it said, claiming the KAL flight was on a spy mission and received warnings.

Neither Gerasimov nor official media accounts mentioned U.S. contentions that the Airbus had flown into a war zone. The radio, quoting Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, said the jet was in "a corridor reserved for civilian aviation."

Aides to Air Force Secretary Edward C. Aldridge had feared the event would make his current visit to Moscow difficult. A U.S. official said it was not mentioned in meetings Aldridge had Monday.

Mexico's president

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid promised Wednesday's general elections will be fraud-free, while the leading opposition presidential candidate said politics were behind the weekend killings of two of his aides.

"We Mexicans are committed to have a clean, legal and peaceful election" on Wednesday, de la Madrid said.

'Today I confirm to you it is a commitment of the government of the republic to comply strictly with the law. There will be respect for the will expressed in the ballot boxes," he said during a brief televised address to the nation Monday night.

Francisco Javier Ovando, 45,

the national coordinator and a congressional candidate of the leftist National Democratic Front coalition, and Roman Gil Heraldez, a 28-year-old aide, were shot to death Saturday night in a car in downtown Mexico City.

"I feel rage over these political crimes, committed by professionals, groups of assassins led by reactionaries," said Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, the front's presidential candidate.

He did not elaborate on who he thought was responsible.

Polls indicate Cardenas could finish second on Wednesday to Carlos Salinas de Gortari, candidate of the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI. The PRI has not lost a presidential election since its creation in 1929.

Ovando and Gil helped create the Effective Suffrage Assembly, a citizens' watchdog group, to expose any fraud in the elections. Ovando also served as Car lenas' private secretary.

A lengthy statement issued by the attorney general Monday night said Ovando and Gil died instantly from .22-caliber bullets fired at point-blank range -Ovando with four bullets in the head and Gil with one in the temple

It offered no leads or a possible motive and said there were no witnesses to the slayings, reported to police by an anonymous caller at 11:30 p.m. Saturday

Luis Sanchez Aguilar, a senior official of both the Front and the watchdog group, charged the killings were politically motivated. He said Ovando was carrying confidential documents about the opposition effort to detect election fraud at the time he was killed. The documents were not found inside the car, Sanchez

Aguilar said. Cardenas has appointed a Front official to participate in the police investigation, the attorney general's statement said.

And, in an open letter, he urged de la Madrid and the Mexico City attorney general to bring those responsible to swift justice.

De la Madrid did not mention the shootings in his address.

PCS Executive Director Johnny Raymond said, "These vans we now have are getting to the place where they will be expensive to maintain and causing us problems with downtime for repairs. The federal and state governments have a program that allows PCS to buy a new vehicle for this program by raising 20 percent of the cost; the governments' matching funds of 80 percent will put a new van in service.

"I know times are tough in the Panhandle now," he said. "The number of people coming to requesting help under all of our programs is increasing in all 26 counties...I hope folks here will help us on this fund raiser anyway because, to many of the people we transport, our van is their lifeline to treatment. This is why it is so important to have new, reliable equipment.

To promote the 1988 van campaign, PCS is sponsoring their first annual PCS ball, "A Night at the Ritz," Aug. 20.

"A Night at the Ritz" will be a ballroom dance with an eightpiece band, a floor show and a dress code (semi-formal), requiring dresses for the ladies and coats and ties for the gentlemen.

The ball will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight. A cash bar will be available. 'We want to give everyone in the Panhandle a really great night on the town, an annual event we expect to grow in popularity every year," said William Paine, producer of the event for PCS. "I feel this is also a bargain for the contributor to PCS' van fund drive...the tickets will be $25 per couple, and with 27,000 square feet in the Civic Center exhibit hall, we'll have plenty of room for all who want to come and enjoy the dance.

"The theme, 'A Night at the Ritz,' pretty well says what to expect. We want to re-create the elegance of the nightclub of the '30s through the '50s.

Tickets are on sale now and orders may be placed by calling 353-9644. Several ticket locations will be set up throughout the 26county territory and will be announced later.

A souvenir program will be printed with advertising space available and listings of sponsors and patrons of the ball and the 1988 van project.

Businesses and residents throughout the Panhandle will be contacted by telephone to be sure as many folks as possible are aware of the PCS ball and van fund drive.

Heart Association approves plan to endorse some foods

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Food products bearing a 'heart-healthy'' stamp of approval from the American Heart Association will begin appearing on store shelves within a year, the group says.

A system to identify and endorse processed and packaged foods that are low in salt, cholesterol and fat has been approved by the association.

The first group of foods to be examined by an independent testing laboratory will be margarines, cooking oils and salad dressings. The association does not plan to endorse meats, fruits and other non-processed food items.

The idea is to make it easy for consumers to rapidly identify a product that is appropriate for them," said Dr. Louis Rakita, vice chairman of a committee that studied the food product-approval program for two years.

Committee members said dietary control is one of the most effective ways to reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease. Since 1961, the Heart Association has been recommending a diet low in fat, salt and cholesterol as a way to help reduce heart disease

"Many Americans have adopted healthier eating habits, and dietary improvements recommended by the AHA clearly have played a part in the welcome decline in heart attack and stroke death rates that we have seen in the last two decades," said Dr. W.W. Aston of Dallas, committee

Heart and blood vessel diseases are the nation's leading killers, and took nearly 1 million lives in the United States in 1985, the most recent year for which statistics are complete. The Heart Association said nearly 65 million Americans have one or more forms of the diseases.

Approval of the program came at the annual meeting of the association's policy-making delegate assembly

Aston said two independent nationwide surveys of consumers and health specialists showed that they wanted more specific information about fat and cholesterol levels.

The program will include creation of a consumer health information program. It will establish a tollfree national nutritional telephone hot line staffed by registered dietitians who will give information about nutrition and risk factors for heart disease to the public and health professionals

The program also will include media campaigns and a brochure listing products that receive the association's stamp of approval.

osting of student grades is not only cruel but illegal

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a parent who had attended an open house at her daughter's school where an English teacher had posted all the students names and their grades for public

You were correct to say that it was improper as well as cruel, but did you know that it also violates federal law?

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, commonly known as the Buckley Amendment (giving credit to its author), forbids educational institutions at any level from releasing any information about any student without written permission. (The exception is for the release of certain "directory" information. Most states have similar laws in addition.)

I find that most teachers and many administrators are not aware of the provisions of this important statute, and do not realize that they should not discuss students with anyone who does not have a right to information according to the law, or without written permission of the parent (or the student if he or she is old enough)

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter about original works of art given by the artist to friends who stick them away in a closet never to be seen again?

I happen to be an artist, and a fairly good one. I've given some of my paintings as gifts, and if I go to the home of someone to whom I've given a painting and I don't see it displayed anywhere, here's how I handle it: I ask if I may "borrow" my painting for an "art show." (I even offer to pick it up.)

Then I keep it "indefinitely." Of course, should I be asked to return it, I would, but so far, nobody has asked.

Almost all artists said that rather than have their work hidden in a closet, they would prefer to have it returned.

Few people realize that an original painting — valuable or not — is part of the artist's divine inspiration and represents time and talent (be it ever so modest), and should be respected as such.

After training, 'Q-tip' haircut, woman trooper is on the job

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) --- When Dana Sonnier walked into the Department of Public Safety training academy in Austin five months ago, the sergeant who greeted her at the front desk handed the energetic cadet a map to a barber shop.

Twenty minutes later, she returned looking like "Q-tip in a meat grinder," she says.

Now she's on the job, one of four women in a class of 53 cadets to graduate from the academy a month

"I knew I was going to stay and make it all the way through from the first day I walked into the academy," Sonnier says, recalling the grueling training. "And I earned every bit of this uniform."

One of the first things the 22-year-old Nederland native learned during the 18 weeks of training it took to become a trooper was that while her training wouldn't be tougher because she was a woman, it certainly wouldn't be any easier.

We had to face the same things as male recruits, since we won't get treated any different on the streets just because we're women," she said, reflecting on 12 hours of classes and more than five miles of running each day.

123 N. Cuyler

That message hit hard during the three weeks cadets learned to box.

"I'd be in the ring with these guys thinking, 'I can't believe they're hitting me in the face,'" she said. "But it helped teach you about having an attitude and a will to survive. That if you get knock, ed down, you've just got to get right back up and take control of the situation.'

She says not a day went by at the academy that she didn't wonder whether she'd gotten in over her head, but encouragement from other cadets and a strong will to succeed helped her make it through the toughest drills.

'After a couple weeks when people started dropping out, some of the guys would say they really respected me for staying through it all," she said. "But I was determined that whatever they threw at me, I'd handle.

Sonnier hopes to one day be stationed on a highway patrol, but she's content to learn everything she can at her post in a drivers license bureau.

'When you get out of the academy, you're powerful within yourself," she says. "It's a great WIMBLEDON, England — Eight years after Bjorn Borg won the last of his five Wimbledon titles, another blond Swede held aloft the gleaming gold trophy on Centre Court.

He had the same big serve, the same crisp volleys and the same lightning returns. More important, he had the same mental toughness. His name is Stefan Edberg.

'I watched all the Wimbledon finals he's been in. I think he's been a big influence on me ... as a person and a player," Edberg said after Monday's rain-delayed championship victory over Boris

"All of us grew up watching him in the Wimbledon finals," the 22-year-old Edberg said. "It's always going to be in my memory.

Edberg's 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-2 success brought memories of the Borg era flooding back as he took apart the man who never had lost on Centre Court. Becker, the champion in 1985 and 1986, had dropped only one set in six matches on his way to the

Edberg, with a reputation for mental weakness, had dropped sets in every except match one as he reached the championship here for the first time

But in true Borg style, the Swede peaked when it mattered most, got his opponent against the ropes and squeezed the last resistance out of him.

"It hasn't sunk into my system yet," said Edberg, a two-time Australian Open champion who had never been able to master the grass of Wimbledon despite his classic serve-and-volley game. "This is something I've worked for a long time. It could be the best match I've ever played in a Grand Slam tournament."

Edberg, accused in the past of lacking the killer instinct, buried Becker with a high quality performance of sustained volleying that had his opponent slashing at the ground in frustration.

"I never really gave him a chance," Edberg said. "I had it in my mind today that I was not going to give up until the last point."

Becker wrapped up the set when play resumed for good, but Edberg refused to be intimidated by the West German's fearsome reputation or illustrious past at the mecca of grass-court tennis.

As Becker started making unforced errors for the first time in the tournament, Edberg took his chance. He ripped through the second-set tiebreaker and stormed on to capture the third and fourth

Becker, for once, was beaten at his own game. "I just felt I could hardly miss the ball," Edberg said. "I really believed in myself today. That was very important."

Becker, who says he builds every season for Wimbledon, could not get motivated for the event he loves the most.

He said his earlier matches against 1987 champion Pat Cash and top-ranked Ivan Lendl "took a lot out of my body and my mental strength. I couldn't push myself when I needed to most. That was the bottom line. He was more psyched up."

In other finals decided Monday, Americans Ken Flach and Robert Seguso retained the men's doubles title with a 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 victory over Anders Jarryd and John Fitzgerald in a match spread over three days, a first in Wimbledon history.

Steffi Graf, who won her first Wimbledon women's singles title on Saturday with a three-set victory over Martina Navratilova, completed a successful tournament by winning the women's doubles as well.

Graf and Gabriela Sabatini saved two match points in beating Soviets Natalia Zvereva and Larisa Savchenko 6-3, 1-6, 12-10.

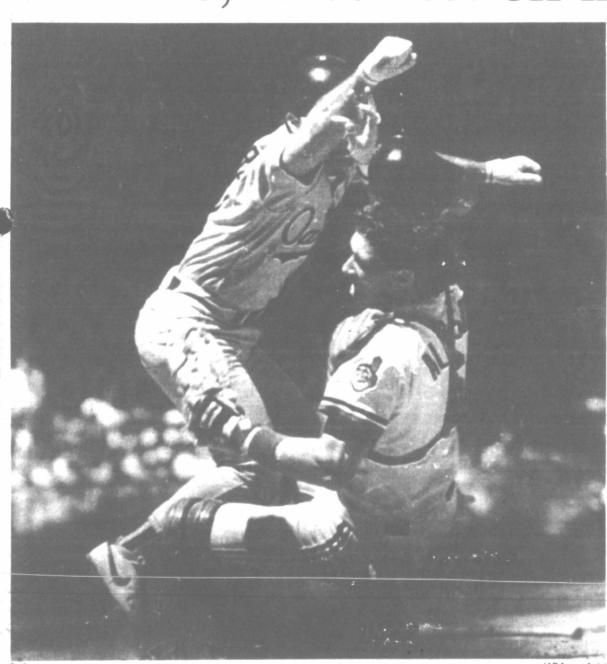

In the mixed doubles final, the United States collected its second trophy as Sherwood Stewart and Zina Garrison beat compatriots Kelly Jones and Gretchen Magers 6-1, 7-6.

Centennial rodeo ends at Canadian Area cowboys, cowgirls win big prizes

By SONNY BOHANAN Sports Writer

The dust has finally settled from last weekend's Fourth of July Rodeo and centennial celebration in Canadian, and quite a few cowboys and cowgirls emerged victorious from the three days of festivities.

In the bareback bronc riding, Randy Manns, Cole Tindol and Shawn Wright tied for first, second and third places with a score of 72. Casey Strange was fourth with 70 points.

Marty Jones won the calf roping competition in 7.34 seconds. Randy Bomar was second with a time of 8.17, and Stran Smith was third, finishing in 8.68 seconds.

Karen Cochran captured first prize in the ladies' breakaway roping with a time of 2.68, followed closely by Candy Watts, who finished in 2.86 seconds, and Dana Arute, 2.93 seconds. In the bull riding, Denny McLanahan and Mark

Crutchfield tied for first place with a score of 71. Jimmy Cleveland was third with 69 points. Rocky Bentley wrapped up first place in steer wrestling in 5.26 seconds. Kelly Flowers finished second with a time of 5.51, followed by Greg Gudgell, whose time of 5.70 put him in third place. Brandy Lynch won the barrel racing event in 17.010 seconds. Tracy Hedeman was second with a time of 17.243, and Nancy Hill was third, finishing in 17.279 seconds

In team roping, Junior Crump and his partner Cliff Tippett took home first prize with a time of 5.65 seconds. Jim Reimer and Mike Goad finished second in 5.96 seconds, and Brian Caison and Jay Waller were third with a time of 6.24.

In the Hemphill County team roping, Shane Goad and Royce Zybach captured first place in 7.28 seconds. Lesa Schafer and Ronnie Hill, with a time of 11.34, were second, and Buddy Dickinson and Kelly Flowers took third in 11.37 seconds. In the "special events," the team consisting of Jim Boy Hash, Duane Evans and Don Roy Howard won the Teen-age Steer Saddling, and were awarded tickets to see Asleep At The Wheel.

Bill Kemp, Weldon Cawyer and Mike Mitchell, a team from Perryton, won the Wild Cow Milking. The prize was a $100 gift to their favorite charity in Canadian. The Bear Grass Bull Station, comprised of Ernie Wood, Lynn Guthrie and Bobby Martin, won $60 for their first-place finish in Sunday's Wild Horse Race. Sunday's race was such a success that another was run on Monday. Lindsey Schafer, Lonnie Cal-

HOUSTON (AP) - Montreal's Andres Galarraga isn't choosy where he hits the ball.

Any old place will do. The National League's leading hitter got four more hits Monday night, one to center field and three others to right field, helping the Expos roll up 15 hits against Houston en route to a 7-4 victory.

"That's the beauty of Galarraga," Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers said. "He doesn't have a macho image about pulling the ball. He hits it all over the ball park."
