Report: Military uses substandard bolts, nuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of substandard bolts and nuts have been used in everything from military equipment and weapons to the space shuttle and commercial trucks, a congressional committee said Saturday.

"The millions and perhaps billions of substandard fasteners used by our military and sensitive industries make it a wonder that we haven't had a major catastrophe," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee and its investigations subcommittee.

A two-year-long investigation by the subcommittee uncovered millions of substandard bolts, nuts, and screws — many of them imported from Japan — and Dingell said the problem could have wide-ranging effects.

For example, 1,200 M-60 tanks were removed from Army front lines for at least two months while defective bolts in the gun mounts were replaced, and substandard fasteners were sold to the Navy for use on both submarines and aircraft carrier jet catapult systems, the panel said.

The fasteners contained more boron and less carbon than specified in industry standards, making them more likely to break or shear, the panel said.

While the report was being prepared, Dingell and 50 other House members introduced legislation to try to correct the problem.

The bill would require laboratory testing and greater documentation of fasteners to make it more difficult to substitute cheaper and less effective parts.

"We must take steps to ensure that the fasteners sold to industry and government in this country meet the standards necessary to hold our products together," said Rep. Thomas J. Bliley of Virginia, ranking Republican on the subcommittee.

The report said about 7 billion bolts and large screws are used annually by U.S. industry, including about 1.5 billion of the high-strength 8.0-grade fasteners.

The Pentagon has purchased millions of the bad bolts and is still trying to track them all down, the panel said.

Crowd-pleasing thrills and spills continues at White Deer Rodeo

By SONNY BOHANAN
Staff Writer

When the chute flew open and half-a-ton of raging bull angrily tossed Kent Hamit to the arena floor, the second night of the 29th Annual White Deer Amateur Rodeo was officially under way.

Friday's events began with the crowd-pleasing bull riders, guaranteed to capture the attention of everyone present.

Greg Grant of Amarillo tied Thursday's third-place bull rider, Odessa's Dale Gideon, with a score of 69. Michael Gafney of Snyder remains the man to beat after posting a 76 Thursday. Lubbock's Kenneth McKee currently holds second place with a 73.

An especially ornery bull, "Bad to the Bone," disposed of his rider, Tony Tyk, before turning on rodeo clowns Pat Turk and Marvin Gorrell and throwing them to the seats of their pants.

The bareback brons provided plenty of action themselves as Wade King of Clarendon jumped to the top of the heat atop "Low Down" with a score of 75. Portales' Travis Howe, who scored 74 Thursday, dropped to second, and Carr Vincent is currently third with 70 points.

In the calf roping, Claude's Rod Cleveland, whose 9.970-second finish led the field Thursday, was pushed back to third on Friday. Larry Cohorn of Las Cruces, N.M., boasts the lowest time of 9.590 seconds. Stran Smith of Tell, N.M., enters the final night of competition in second place with a time of 9.665.

Canyon's Paige McElhanon became the top breakaway roper when she posted a time of 4.254. Karen Cochran of Lubbock moved to second place with 4.449, and Callie Smith of Dumas is third, finishing in 4.770 seconds.

Steve McConnell of Hereford was the only successful steer wrestler Friday, although his 19.798-second finish failed to put him in the top three. Adrian's Greg Gudgell is still the heat leader after roping and tying his calf in an enviable 5.352 seconds. Shawn Audrain of Fritch is second with 10.604 seconds, and Hereford's Delbert Davis is third with a time of 10.796.

Celanese hopes to be back in full production by end of year

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Hoechst Celanese Chemical Co. hopes to have its Pampa Facility back in full production by the end of the year, Downtown Kiwanis Club members were told Friday.

Larry Henderson, rebuilding project manager at the Pampa plant, said the demolition processes from the Nov. 14 explosions are essentially completed, with the plant now in the process of actual rebuilding.

Addressing the Friday noon luncheon meeting, Henderson said, "We're currently hoping to start up the remainder of the plant by the end of this year." He said four production units are already in operation.

Presently, rebuilding project contractor Fluor Daniel has approximately 1,500 people working in two shifts, and local contractor Arthur Brothers has approximately 300 employees on the site to aid in the cleanup and reconstruction efforts, Henderson said.

Structural foundation work is "70 to 75 percent complete," with buildings now going up, he said. A number of interim buildings have been placed at the plant to house the Hoechst Celanese and Fluor Daniel administrative staffs, to shelter emergency vehicles and to provide working areas

Temporary boilers were brought in to power the units already in operation and one of the cooling towers has already been rebuilt, Henderson said. Asbestos removal operations also were undertaken during the cleanup process, he added.

"We're making some long-needed modifications ... so the plant will be more efficient when we start up," he said, adding that the modifications also will help the chemical plant to be even more competitive.

One of those modifications includes a new control building designed to be blast proof, he said.

Henderson, who transferred to Pampa in December to assist in the rebuilding of the plant, said figures indicate that in the cleanup and initial reconstruction work, the company has already spent $24 million in the Panhandle area to purchase goods and services, $5 million of that in Pampa alone.

"And that information is two months old," he stated, noting that the figures only go through the first of June.

While the company hopes to have all chemical process operations back by the end of the year, there will still be other construction work continuing through 1989 and some into 1990. This will include work on administration buildings and maintenance shops, he said.

should be completed by the end of this year, he said.

Henderson showed a series of slides showing damages to the plant following the two explosions that ripped through portions of the plant in November and showing some of the cleanup and repairs that have already been completed.

He said the causes of the explosions have been thoroughly investigated, though the results have not been fully released yet.

He did say that the first explosion, occurring in the northeast portion of the plant, apparently released a cloud of vapors that drifted toward the southwest. That cloud then apparently ignited, creating a blast that caused most of the damages to the plant from the subsequent shockwaves.

"We estimate the explosion occurred about 100 feet in the air," Henderson said, causing a strong downward force at first and then a subsequent upward force. He noted that many of the windows and walls showed evidence of being drawn outward from the structures, indicating the upward force.

Buildings and structures with square corners and flat surfaces sustained most of the damage, Henderson explained, since "the flat sides were the ones getting the main force of the blast." Structures with curved or rounded surfaces away from the center of the blast "rode out the shockwave pretty well," he said.

explosion," he stated, noting that the main fire was contained in a relatively small area where it could be controlled. Officials eventually decided to let those flames burn themselves out.

The explosions and shockwaves left twisted metal, bent pipes, collapsed and buckling walls, caved-in roofs, buckled storage tanks and shards of glass throughout the plant, all shown in the slides Henderson showed to the Kiwanians.

Piles of scrap metal have been located on the north end of the plant by the railroad tracks, visible to motorists passing on Highway 60. That scrap metal will be sold off, Henderson said.

Henderson said the investigation has not indicated any need to change much in the chemical processing operations at the plant, saying the plant had operated as best as could be expected in accord with standards and procedures. However, he said there will be more thorough training and some modifications to "make it even safer."

Henderson joined Celanese at its Bay City plant after graduating from the University of Nebraska in 1966 with an electrical engineering degree and has been with the company ever since. Over the years, he has worked at the company's Clear Lake, Edmonton, Alberta, Dallas and Corpus Christi locations.

Pampa High School student dies in accident on Hwy. 70

A Pampa teen-ager on his way to work at Lake McClellan died Friday following a one-vehicle rollover 5½ miles south of Pampa on Texas Hwy. 70. The driver of the vehicle received minor injuries in the accident.

Charles Ray Wallace, 17, 504 S. Finley, was pronounced dead at about 2:20 p.m. Friday at Coronado Hospital of massive head injuries suffered when he was thrown from the passenger side of a 1975 Chevrolet pickup in a rollover, said Department of Public Safety Trooper Danny Pierce.

Driver of the vehicle, a juvenile, was taken to the hospital for an examination and released, he said. The juvenile was wearing a seatbelt at the time of the accident and Wallace was not, the trooper said.

The accident occurred about 1:08 p.m. Friday about 5.4 miles south of Pampa on Texas 70. According to DPS reports, the pickup was traveling south when it left the road and traveled a short distance along the west shoulder.

Pierce said the driver overcorrected while trying to steer the truck back on the road, resulting in a side skid across the highway and into the bar ditch on the east side.

The pickup struck the embankment and flipped completely over, ejecting Wallace, rolling over him and then landing on all four wheels facing north, the trooper said.

dent, Pierce said, adding there was no alcohol involved.

Services for the accident victim are to be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in St. Mark CME Church with the Rev. Vurn C. Martin, pastor of New Hope Baptist Church, and the Rev. H.R. Johnson pastor of St. Mark's, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Carmichael-Whately Funeral Directors.

Mr. Wallace was born and raised in Pampa. He was a student at Pampa High School and a member of St. Mark CME Church. He was employed by the Pampa Independent School District and Lake McClellan.

His survivors include his mother, Shirley Irving of Pampa; his father, Ronald Baker of Stamford; his stepfather, Henry Irving of Longview; two brothers, Ronald Wallace and Antoin Wallace, both of Pampa; one sister, Kindra Shree Rainey

Hospice of Pampa to begin caring for patients Monday

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Monday, Hospice of Pampa begins accepting patients, culminating months of work and years of dreams.

"It's something that's been needed here a long time," said Dr. Wil Beck, who along with Dr. Robert Philips will be the physicians directing the hospice's interdisciplinary team.

"Especially now. People cannot die in the hospital any more," Dr. Beck said. Patients must be treated when in the hospital's care, she said, adding "that means IVs and injections."

"I've heard that hospice is contrary to the usual idea of medicine. To me that's not true. Hospice is the natural course after you go all the way with a patient and you've done all you can do," she said. Bereavement care for the family for one year after the patient dies is an important part of hospice, she added.

Several years ago, the Rev. Joe Turner, former pastor of First Presbyterian Church, and Fred and Dorothy Neslage helped bring the idea of hospice to Pampa with an informational meeting. The Neslages have been actively involved with St. Anthony's Hospice for some time.

Since that time, Samaritan

Counseling Center of Amarillo and the Ministerial Alliance of Pampa have hosted meetings on hospice, followed by a one-day program presented at First Christian Church and a seminar at Clarendon College.

Then the college sponsored a 10-week volunteer training in February 1987 from which members eventually formed the nucleus of the hospice movement in Pampa. A second volunteer training several months later brought more devotees to work towards the goal of establishing a hospice here.

As time passed, funds were raised and the legacies of forming a hospice were taken care of. Hospice of Pampa is now licensed and has a fully-formed interdisciplinary team, essential to providing hospice care.

Sammie Pohnert of White Deer, recently hired as patient care coordinator, has completed a three-day visit at Hospice of El Paso and two days orientation with Hospice of the Plains patient care coordinator in Plainview.

"We're going right along," she said. "We expect to admit some patients this week. We have several prospects and I have received information about some others, but we have to wait for them to contact us."

Pohnert, a registered nurse, says she feels confident about her new duties, "but not overconfident."

Other members of the interdisciplinary team, in addition to Pohnert and Drs. Beck and Phillips, include Sara Northrup, social worker; Father Bill Bailey of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church and the Rev. Jim Wingert of St. Paul United Methodist Church, pastoral care; and Sherry McCavit as volunteer coordinator with Naomi Martin assisting. Hazel Barthel will continue as executive director.

Chuck White, chairman of the Hospice of Pampa board of directors, said all donations received in the next 30 to 60 days will be considered "founding donors."

White explained that the names of all founding donors will be inscribed on a scroll, including those who have already given to Hospice of Pampa. White said hospice officials will be contacting some prospective donors privately, while anyone interested in donating may call the hospice office at 665-6677.

"We're all very excited about getting started," White said.

People who are interested in hospice care can also call Hospice of Pampa at 665-6677 for more information, as can physicians who wish to refer patients.

Hospice is a concept of care, not a place, not a building, Barthel emphasized. Hospice of Pampa's offices are on the first floor of the Combs-Worley Building, but Hospice of Pampa, a not-for-profit organization, is not a place for someone to go to die. Hospice will be providing an alternative to the dying patient, a form of palliative (to ease without curing) care rather than therapeutic (to heal).

Through a "tent of caring" given by the hospice interdisciplinary team, Hospice of Pampa will ease the last months of a patient's life, supporting not only the patient but the patient's family as well. Care will be given in the patient's home, with respite care available at St. Anthony's Hospice in Amarillo when necessary.

Hospice Medicare is available for anyone who has been certified by two professionals as being terminally ill and who is eligible for Medicare (Part A) hospital insurance.

The patient must sign a statement choosing hospice care instead of standard Medicare benefits for the terminal illness, and the patient must receive care from a Medicare-certified hospice program.

Hospice of Pampa will be delivering care before it will be Medicare-certified, Barthel said. Hospice of Pampa cannot be considered for Medicare certification until it begins operation, she explained. Patients handled by the agency during the time before the hospice is surveyed by Medicare will receive the same care, at no charge, as they would have if the hospice was certified.

Patients and families will never be billed, Barthel said. Hospice of Pampa will bill Medicare directly for those who are eligible. Anyone who is not eligible for Medicare will not be billed for hospice care, she said.

Patients will be responsible for any drug and equipment costs; however, the hospice team's social worker will be available to help patients locate sources of aid for these expenses, Barthel said.

A hospice volunteer training class has been set to begin Sept. 12 at Clarendon College-Pampa Center. The 10-week course will meet each Monday night from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and will end Nov. 14. To register, call Clarendon College-Pampa Center at 665-8801.

Anyone interested in volunteering their time to help with the new hospice program can call McCavit at 665-6948.

Marching band to practice

Pampa High School's "Pride of Pampa" marching band begins practice for the 1988-89 school year Tuesday, Aug. 2.

Percussion and color guard begin Tuesday morning with percussion meeting at 9:30 a.m. and color guard at 9 a.m.

Tuesday evening, drum majors, drill instructors and color guard are to meet at 6 p.m.

Wednesday, all incoming freshman and new students meet at 3:30 p.m. Students are asked to have all necessary equipment at all rehearsals.

Upperclassmen are to report at 6 p.m. Monday, Aug. 8. All rehearsals are to be conducted in the Pampa High School band room.

Director Charles Johnson invites the public to come watch rehearsals as the Pampa High School band prepares for another marching season.

dustrial Supply Center from a variety of lots showed a defective rate of more than 30 percent, the panel noted, which would mean 30 million bad bolts in the 100 million 8.0-grade fasteners purchased every two years.

The investigation by the Army into the M-60 tank teams are now in the running for first- and second-place money. Joe Coutts, Mike Darcy and Jim Don Baggett enter the finals Saturday as the top team after rendering their steer immobile in 30.636 seconds. The team consisting of Terry O'Neal, Bunker Hill and Gary O'Neal is second with a time of 44.874.

After posting a time of 5.395

Thursday, team ropers Steve Purcella and Jeff Medlin of Lovington, N.M., remain the heat leaders. Jesse Valdez and Wade Jewel are close behind, finishing in 6.585 Friday. Valdez, teaming up with Brian Casison, is also a member of the third-place team that recorded a time of 7.676.

The barrel racing competition grew more fierce Friday as three new competitors took over the lead. Bobbi Spillers of Elk City finished the 165-yard cloverleaf course in 17.106 seconds to grab first place. Pampa's Amy Cockrell finished in 17.114 to occupy second, and Debbie White of Summerfield is currently third with a time of 17.292.

The competitors were still battling it out at press time Saturday. The All-Around and individual titles were awarded following Saturday's events, and The Pampa News will feature complete results in the Monday edition.

Jordan Barbara Jordan hospitalized in critical condition

AUSTIN (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan, who rose to national fame during the Watergate impeachment hearings, was hospitalized in critical condition Saturday after an apparent accident at a backyard swimming pool, authorities said.

Jordan, 52, suffered cardiac arrest during the near drowning and was flown to Brackenridge Hospital by emergency helicopter, said Carolyn Hinckley Boyle, hospital spokeswoman.

Emergency medical personnel and law officers responded to a report of a possible drowning at Jordan's residence shortly after noon.

She was treated at the house by paramedics for about 20 minutes before being flown to the hospital, officials of the Travis County Sheriff's Department said.

"Upon our arrival, EMS was there (at the home) working on Ms. Jordan and Starflight was landing," said sheriff's Lt. Gary Irwin. "We learned that she did regain consciousness at one time, but then went unconscious again."

"They kept her at the scene before transporting her to ensure they got her stabilized," he said, adding that Jordan's pulse and respiration was restored. "EMS technicians stabilized her, then transported her by Starflight to Brackenridge Hospital," he said.

Doctors treating Jordan said she suffered from fluid in the lungs and cardiac arrest. She remained in the intensive care unit, breathing with the help of a ventilator, said Kari Larsen, a Brackenridge spokeswoman.

Dr. Pat Crocker said Jordan also was being given medication to help clear fluid from her lungs. Irwin said investigators were trying to determine the cause of the mishap.

Jordan has had medical problems for several years and has been confined to a wheelchair, although she has continued to teach at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas.

According to UT's Helen Tackett, the woman who lives with Jordan, Nancy Earl, had left the house to go to the store for about 10 minutes. When she returned, she found Jordan floating in the pool. She administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation until medicals arrived, Tackett said.

"Barbara Jordan was found floating in a backyard pool. She was pulled from the pool and they began CPR right away. EMS paramedics arrived at the scene pretty quickly," said Boyle at Brackenridge.

Paramedics who first treated her "said she had a pulse, was trying to breathe and they were able to help her breathe en route to hospital," she said.

Jordan week before last delivered a nominating speech for vice presidential candidate Sen. Lloyd Bensten at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

State searching for hay donors

The Texas Department of Agriculture would like to hear from farmers and ranchers willing to donate hay to help those in drought-stricken areas.

A department spokesman said the department "would like to know who would be willing to donate hay from CRP acres if they were able to recover their baling costs of approximately $30 per ton."

The spokesman said Friday that Secretary Richard Lyng has made this allowance in Minnesota, "and we expect Texas farmers also will be allowed to help their neighbors" in a similar manner.

So that the department can know how much acreage would be available for the program, farmers and ranchers willing to participate are asked to call 1-800-DIAL HAY.

Former legislator wanted on charges found

DALLAS (AP) — Former Texas state legislator Mike Martin, who in 1981 was accused of having his cousin stage an assassination attempt against him and now is wanted on a child custody charge, has been located in New Zealand.

Federal and state law enforcement officials have been searching for Martin since July 1986, when he took his two children from his ex-wife's home for a two-week visit and never returned.

In October 1986, Martin was indicted in Dallas County on a charge of interfering in child custody, a crime punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine upon conviction.

Authorities are working to extradite him to the United States on that charge, Texas Ranger Ron McBride told The Dallas Morning News.

But so far those attempts have been in vain, said Debbie Case, Martin's former wife and the mother of their two children — Michael Trent Martin, 10, and Arianne Hewitt Martin, 7.

She said that because of an extradition treaty between the United States and New Zealand, Martin cannot be forced to return to face the child custody charge.

FBI officials in Dallas refused to comment on the case, saying that Martin has been "very mobile" in the last several years and that divulging too much about their attempts could prompt Martin to pack up and move.

Since leaving the country in 1985, Martin has lived in American Samoa, a cluster of islands in the South Pacific, and Saipan, an island in the West Pacific.

Martin, a conservative Republican and born-again Christian from Longview, Texas, was wounded in the arm in July 1981 during a shooting attack outside a trailer park in Austin.

Martin basked in the subsequent publicity, claiming the attack was the work of a satanic cult, until investigators accused him of hiring his cousin to help him fake the assassination attempt.

His cousin later confessed that Martin promised him a high-paying state job if he acted as the triggerman in the charade.

Martin maintained his innocence, but pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor perjury charge connected with the investigation and resigned his office in a plea bargain with prosecutors.

Mrs. Case, who has remarried, said she divorced Martin three years later and was granted full custody of the children.

On July 15, 1986, Mrs. Case said, Martin took the children for their two-week visitation. She has not seen them since.

Last March, the FBI told Mrs. Case that Martin was living in Wellington, New Zealand, where he has remarried, is known as Wayne Martin and works as a biomedical engineer for a local hospital.

She said she has spoken with Martin and her children once in the past two years and pleaded with him to bring her son and daughter back to Dallas.

"I told Mike when I talked to them that he could live in peace with his new wife, just put the kids on a plane and let them come home," Mrs. Case said Friday.

Martin has turned the children's passports over to the New Zealand government and obtained a restraining order preventing them from leaving the country with anyone but him, Mrs. Case said. He also has gained temporary custody of the children under that country's laws, she said.

Martin's attorney, Chris Ruthe, said in a telephone interview from Wellington, "The children expressed a very, very clear desire to stay in New Zealand."

"If the children want to go back to their mother, there would be no problem," Ruthe told the newspaper.

Mrs. Case said that she doesn't believe her children do not wish to see her and that Martin has refused even to send her pictures of her children.

"I can't do one thing about it," said Mrs. Case, who lives in the Dallas-suburb of Garland, and has a three-year-old daughter.

Judge: Dapper Bandit suspect 'competent' for trial

DALLAS (AP) — A partially paralyzed Dallas man suspected of robbing more than 25 banks in the past decade is mentally competent to stand trial, a state district judge said.

A trial date will be set later for Mark Ervin Reeves, suspected of being the so-called "Dapper Bandit," to allow him to recover further from a stroke he suffered after a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the throat when police caught him May 4.

Two psychiatrists have found Reeves mentally competent to stand trial, state District Judge Richard Mays said Friday.

"His speech rehabilitation is very effective and will in short order put him back in a position where he'll be close to normal," Mays said after reviewing the report by court-appointed psychiatrists James Grigson and Clay Griffith.

The finding of competency allows the case against Reeves to proceed, Mays said, adding that unless attorneys agree to a plea bargain, a trial is likely this fall.

Reeves faces a maximum of life in prison. Reeves has been indicted on charges stemming from two bank robberies — one on the day of his capture and one in January 1987.

Authorities trying to link Reeves to more of the heists attributed to the Dapper Bandit, a polite, business-suited gunman, said they have only come up with a profile of an apparently jobless man who spent a lot of money.

Brad Lollar, the lawyer appointed by Mays to represent Reeves, said Friday he was surprised that psychiatrists found his frail client competent.

"If they say he understands me, that's fine, I believe them. But my problem is I can't understand him," Lollar said, adding that nonetheless he is unlikely to contest the finding.

Mays ordered Grigson and Griffith to examine Reeves after the wheelchair-bound defendant appeared in court last week.

Reeves was moved last week to the infirmary at Law Sterrett Justice Center and visits Parkland Memorial Hospital for therapy three times a week, Lollar said.

During last week's hearing, Reeves told Mays that while he understands everything said to him and knows he is charged with bank robbery, Reeves believes he is incompetent to stand trial because, "I just can't talk."

Reeves indeed "talks slower than other people and talks very softly," Mays said, but he meets the legal definition of competency because he has "sufficient present ability to consult with his lawyer" and a "factual understanding" of the charges against him.

THE WORKS OF THE FLESH
"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, sorcery, enmities, strife, jealousies, wraths, factions, divisions, parties, envyings, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of which I forewarn you, even as I did forewarn you, that they who practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (Galatians 5:19-21.) Thus the inspired writer makes it clear that those who are guilty of the works of the flesh have no hope of heaven. Many of these works are still very much with us today. The apostle Paul lived during the time of the Roman Empire, one of the most corrupt and immoral kingdoms that ever existed. Yet, alarmingly, we note much of the immorality listed as prevalent in Paul's day in our society today. There are many bitter and tragic fruits of the works of the flesh. For example, the sins of fornication and adultery result in disease, murder, incest, abuse of children, etc. The tragic results of drunkenness seem virtually endless as we are appalled at the number of people who are killed every year because of this evil work. And so much of the time it is the innocent who suffer the most. But even as bad as the physical suffering is as the result of these works of the flesh, the eternal suffering is far greater and lasting. In a fearful picture of eternal suffering, the apostle John was given to write these words: "But for the fearful, and unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and fornicators, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, their part shall be in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death" (Revelation 21:8.) No suffering in this life can compare with the eternal suffering of the condemned soul. The gospel of Jesus Christ is God's power to save the soul (Romans 1:16.) The most important thing in the world today that man has is his soul (Matthew 16:26.) We have the assurance that all those who obey the gospel of Jesus Christ shall be saved (Mark 16:15-16.) Nothing, therefore, should be more important to us than obedience by faith to the gospel. —Billy T. Jones

Forget Garner; beef promoters can't match bid

FORT WORTH (AP) — Forget James Garner, who apparently beefed that he could get more money for pushing foreign cars. American cattlemen have assembled a new, meatier lineup of spokespersons.

Garner, who starred in the Western television series Maverick, has signed an exclusive promotional contract with Mazda Motors of American.

The veteran actor reportedly had been earning $1 million a year for his television and magazine advertising appearances for the Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board in Englewood, Colo., and the Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock and Meat Board in Chicago.

Gary Enright of the beef promotion board told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the cattle raisers simply could not compete in the high-stakes bidding contest.

"We made every effort to extend his contract," Enright said. "He's a very valuable property."

So the beef folks will go to a full house to replace the actor, who was known for his wily card-playing skills.

Among the new faces and voices scheduled to be making the beef push will be award-winning actress Lauren Bacall, NBA basketball stars Larry Bird and Michael Cooper, country music star Reba McEntire and fashion model-TV commentator Kim Alexis.

"We're looking to appeal to all sectors of society," Enright said.

New ads featuring the five fresh faces are scheduled to debut and air 35 times during the upcoming Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, in September and October.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

There's still fears of minimum wage

Like Rasputin, the call for a minimum wage increase just won't die, however many bullets economists fire into it. Congress is preparing to pass legislation that will increase the minimum wage 30 to 40 cents an hour during each of the next three years; that would boost it from the current $3.35 to between $4.25 and $4.55 an hour. Democratic leaders are looking for a way to write the bill so that enough Republicans will sign on as to force President Reagan into signing it.

Given his record — Reagan has vetoed fewer bills per year than any recent president, despite facing a hostile Congress — he probably will sign it. Democrats also are hoping George Bush will push Reagan to sign the bill to avoid making it a campaign issue. Even so, the president might hold the line he has maintained throughout his administration of not boosting the minimum wage; and Bush might wise up and recognize that he could turn the Democrats' call for a higher minimum wage to his own advantage.

That's because, if the bill is written into law, it would spell disaster for the economy. A recent report by the Democratic-controlled Congressional Budget Office shows the proposed minimum wage hike "could cause the loss of approximately 250,000 to 500,000 jobs" and add "about 0.2 to 0.3 percentage points to the annual inflation rate." Those hurt worst would be "the groups in the labor force with low wage rates ... and especially among teen-agers."

To look at the issue cynically, it's not hard to see why Democrats favor such a bill. A low minimum wage encourages the young and poor to find jobs, work hard, and rise through the job marketplace; soon they're in the middle class and voting Republican. But a high minimum wage keeps workers, in particular young blacks, from entering and on welfare, and vote for their Democratic "benefactors"; and the government poverty bureaucrats, so influential in Washington, are provided with lucrative jobs.

Are we being too cynical? Perhaps. But after so much economic evidence has been presented, all of it opposed to increasing the minimum wage, you have to wonder why anyone would favor a law that would slam the poor so hard. And, of course, it's not just Democrats who favor a high minimum wage. Many Republicans also favor keeping the poor addicted to welfare; it's the easy way toward political compromise.

Even so, Sen. Phil Gramm, a Republican from Texas, opposed the bill so much that he has threatened a filibuster. But it takes more than a filibuster to kill Rasputin.

Yes, he's just a troublemaker

To ask for evidence supporting some ideas is often seen as looking for trouble, being insulting, or just plain being rude. Let's run a few by you to see where you stand.

"Well, you know how it is, the rich get richer, and the poor get poorer." Surely that idea could not apply to our country. By any measure of affluence, be it life expectancy, possession of consumer goods or education, Americans of any income group (low, middle, or high) are richer than their counterparts of 50, 30 or even 15 years ago. This same progress is seen in most relatively free economies such as Hong Kong, Japan, Canada and Australia.

Where the rich get richer and the poor poorer are in the Third World tyrannies in Africa and Southeast Asia. There, a few elitists who are nothing more than leeches rob their own people under the guise of Marxist equality and government planning.

"We need to get rid of the system" is an idea you hear from revolutionaries blinded in their pursuit of justice. Let's look at overthrowing the systems. In 1776, we overthrew a colonial system and replaced it with one based on unprecedented human freedom, but most people haven't been that fortunate.

In 1959, Batista was overthrown in Cuba; 30 years later, can anybody say Cubans have freedom? In 1977, the remnants of Haile Selassie's regime in Ethiopia were overthrown. Are Ethiopians better off under the Mengistu Mariam regime? In 1979, the shah of Iran was ousted by the Ayatollah Khomeini; are Iranians better off? In Africa white colonists were either ousted or pressured to leave. Yet, in nearly all of those countries the average African is less free and poorer than under colonial rule.

In some cases overthrowing the system bore some meager fruit, but at an astronomical cost. In Russia and Mainland China, the overthrow of the systems and internal political purges left an estimated 40 million people dead.

The world's sad experience with the overthrow of systems is not an argument for maintaining the status quo. It's an argument for the kind of caution George Orwell calls for in his book Animal Farm: when you get rid of one evil it is often replaced by another that is far worse. Animal Farm, by the way, is banned in some African countries.

Here's another idea: "The world is made unsafe by nuclear weapons." How does that statement square against this fact: Since 1945, nuclear weapons killed roughly 150 thousand people. Over that same period conventional weapons have killed about 145 million. On an after-the-fact basis nuclear weapons seem almost benign.

Sometimes people provide their own best proof against their ideas. That may sound strange, but ask anyone for his or her general opinion of politicians. If your experience has been like mine, you'll hear words like: dishonest, greedy, self-serving hustlers and crooks.

Yet when we discuss important areas of our lives, such as educating our children, seeking medical care, buying homes or preparing for our old age, we say government ought to control it through this or that program.

But who runs the government? The same people (politicians) you've just described as dishonest, greedy, self-serving hustlers and crooks. As for me, the only thing I'd let Congress plan is the scheduling of the Saturday morning TV cartoons.

Now you can see why I often don't get invited to parties a second time. Party conversation flows better if you don't have to put up with the embarrassment of having someone challenge your assertions. Demanding evidence is the first sign of a troublemaker, and yours truly is definitely a troublemaker.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, July 31, the 213th day of 1988. There are 153 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On July 31, 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette, a 19-year-old French nobleman, was made a major-general in the Continental Army after offering his help to the rebelling American colonies.

On this date: In 1498, Christopher Columbus discovered the island of Trinidad. In 1556, St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus, died in Rome.

In 1875, the 17th president of the United States, Andrew Johnson, died in Carter Station, Tenn., at the age of 66.

In 1948, President Harry S. Truman helped dedicate New York International Airport at Idlewild Field. (The airport was later renamed John F. Kennedy International Airport.)

In 1953, Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, known as "Mr. Republican" for his conservative philosophy, died in New York at the age of 63.

In 1964, the American space probe Ranger VII transmitted pictures of the moon's surface.

In 1981, a 7-week-old major league baseball strike ended.

The gold chain has gotta go

A great number of you have been kind enough to ask how my dog, Catfish, the black Lab, fared as the guest of honor at the recent First Annual Festival in Scottsboro, Ala.

For those who might not have read earlier, Catfish's Aunt Louise drove him over to Scottsboro for the festivities, which was Catfish's first public appearance.

When Aunt Louise returned with him that evening she couldn't wait to tell me.

"Your dog was wonderful," she said. "He didn't embarrass me or the corporation?" I asked.

"Not in the least," she said. "You never know about a rookie at his first gig. He could have become nervous and bitten someone, committed an indiscretion during the parade or chased the 4:15 Greyhound from Birmingham."

"He was a perfect gentleman," said Aunt Louise.

"He let all the children pet him, he sat on command and never whined or barked once."

"Did the people seem to like him?" I asked.

"They loved him. He got to ride in a police car with the siren on, he appeared on two television shows, and they gave me a key to the city with his name on it." This could be the start of an entire new career for Catfish.

Previously, by trade, he's been a shoe chews, door scratcher and a squirrel chaser.

He grew out of his shoe chewing and now has his own door through which he comes and goes as he pleases.

He has remained ever vigilant on squirrel patrol, however. Every day of his life, he chases squirrels.

He's never come close to catching one because they all run up trees, but doggedly, if you will, he continues his efforts.

But where might his new public career take him?

To other such festivals, of course. Also to shopping center openings, used car sales-romas, Moose Club barbecues and perhaps even to a hog-calling contest or at least a rat killing.

After that perhaps he could catch on with a beer company like those other dogs, or appear in a dog food commercial.

(On second thought, I hate dog food commercials. We all know the dogs are starved when they finally get a bowl of dog food put in front of them, and how does Ed McMahon know Alpo tastes all that good? Has he ever eaten any of it?)

At the moment I'm also talking to Carson and Letterman. Earl Carson and Marvin Letterman, two guys who want Catfish to appear at the annual Red Bug Roundup in Ithclikehell, W. Va.

I'm also negotiating with a man who wants Catfish to become national spokesperson for Sooper Dooper Doggie Scooper. A product dog owners especially need, lest our sidewalks become unwalkable.

I do intend, however, to bring Catfish along slowly. Too much too soon is a dangerous thing. That's why I told him he could keep the cigar he came home smoking last night.

"But that gold chain," I said, "has got to go."

What's happened to the unity of faith?

By KELLY VARNER EBEL

Guest opinion

Do you ever get the feeling that people of certain faiths are more interested in converting others to their own religion instead of to God?

A young Christian woman received a visit from two men. When she opened the door, they proceeded to tell her of Jesus. She was very polite and told them of her present relationship with the Lord. Instead of wishing her well and moving on, they continued to advance the conversation.

The young woman continued to talk with them, for she felt there was nothing wrong with sharing one another's lives in the Lord. However, they soon began to admonish her for her own beliefs.

"Are you going from door to door to bring people to God or to your own faith?" she asked.

"To God," was their reply.

"Well, you already know that I am living my life for the Lord, but still you continue to waste time on me. If you were truly leading people to Christ, then you would be to the next door already," she explained.

They left, but continued to bother her and her family for the next six months. The sad part of it was, an unsaved family across the street could have used their time and effort.

The word "denomination" should not be known to the Christian tongue, but because it is, the entire world seems to be divided spiritually. There is little unity, support or strength! Believing has become very confusing for some and near impossible for others because of the conflicts.

Even Pope John Paul II was quoted by the Associated Press as saying, "There is bitter confrontation among Christians themselves, cynical criticism of the church even in the church's own publications." And the pontiff added that "these are all warning signs that God's command and the joyful message of Christ for many are no longer the basis of their behavior."

Why are Christians pitted against each other and church against church? Because man has managed to thwart the simple truths of the Bible by integrating his own laws into the system. Conflicts arise and people leave one church to start a new one, and the cycle continues. We are no longer a part of the vine.

John 15:4-8 explains this: "Stay in me and I will stay in you. No branch can produce fruit on its own; it must stay on the vine. In the same way, you cannot produce, unless you stay in me. I am the vine; you are the branches. Who will produce much fruit? The person who stays in me and in whom I stay. You can do nothing without me!"

Instead of keeping the truth of the word in our hearts, we are adding to it or taking away from it.

In my field, I have the pleasure of meeting many of God's children from many differing beliefs. I have written stories of individuals dedicating their time and talents to support God's work. Not once did I ask their religion before writing the story. What mattered was the fact that they were living for the Lord in the best way they knew how.

The Bible calls the church divinely instituted, with Jesus Christ Himself as the chief cornerstone. We should be drawing strength and comfort as we congregate in the church. Instead, we are pushing people away by the example we set and the petty rules we follow.

All Christians everywhere should be a body of one church, and if we were all following the simple truths of the Bible, we would be. Imagine the unity and might we would have in worship together. I doubt this will ever happen until Jesus comes and sets things straight. So what do we do until then?

Obey the commandments and condemn not, study scripture with fervor, listen with your heart and do what feels right to you. Then witness the purity of the word to others and fellowship. Help others to know God for who He really is and not something man has created.

Perhaps children need more to do

To the editor:

Do you know where your children are and what they are doing?

For four or five weeks, we have been receiving harrasing phone calls from apparently unsupervised children. Not just one or two a day, but over and over again. I know children do things like this, but to this degree is ridiculous. Children need to be taught respect for others' privacy.

We have elderly parents that are very ill. So we need to have our phone lines free. Please talk to your children. If they are so bored that they have to play with the phone, perhaps they need a few chores to do.

To the editor:

On July 1, 1988, Cabot Corporation made a report to the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Texas Water Commission (TWC) concerning its releases to the environment of certain substances.

This report is required by the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986. Title III of the act is known as the Emergency Planning and Community Right to Know Act, and authorized the EPA to identify where some 300 chemicals are being used in the United States and where they might represent a threat to communities.

Cabot Corporation had four chemicals from the EPA list present at its Pampa carbon black plant during 1987 in amounts above the reporting threshold required by law. These were carbon disulfide, nitric acid, hydrochloric acid and sodium hydroxide. Because the amounts produced or present during the year were above an amount set by law, Cabot was required to report them to the EPA and TWC.

Cabot feels that questions may arise as a result of these reports, and we have decided, as a public service, to offer additional information to the community in conjunction with our required reports.

First, carbon disulfide was the only substance in the reports which was emitted. Cabot does not purchase or store carbon disulfide. It arises as a by-product of the carbon black manufacturing process, due to small amounts of sulfur present in our oil feedstocks. The other chemicals were safely stored on our plant site, and none were allowed into the air, water or ground. Because the amounts of the other chemicals were above the threshold set forth in the law, we had to report them, even though none were emitted.

Secondly, reporting these emissions as required by law does not represent a change in plant operations. Emissions of carbon disulfide, for instance, began at this location when the plant first began operations in 1947.

Thirdly, in 1977 the EPA and its contractor, Monsanto Research Corporation, measured the concentrations of carbon disulfide in carbon black off gas, and estimated the ground level concentrations which might result. Their conservative estimates of "source severity" did not identify carbon disulfide as a cause for concern.

Since 1977, Cabot has succeeded in further decreasing the emission of carbon disulfide, by using the off gas as an in-plant process fuel. Burning the off gas this way conserves natural gas, while destroying carbon disulfide.

Cabot has been an active participant in the Community Awareness and Emergency Response (CAER) program, a program set up by the Chemical Manufacturers Association to assist communities in developing emergency procedures. Cabot will continue to be a positive influence in the Pampa area. We hope that this information will be of assistance to the community.

If we can answer any further questions or concerns in this matter, please feel free to contact us at 665-0833, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

He feels new film blasphemes Christ

To the editor:

Would you pay someone to blaspheme Jesus Christ?

That's exactly what many will do when they go to be entertained by the movie The Last Temptation of Christ from Universal Pictures. This movie portrays Jesus Christ as a hypocrite and liar, violating His own teachings concerning the sanctity of the sacred relationship in marriage by committing fornication.

The old adage "Don't knock it until you've tried it" does not hold water. A person can knock heroin although he has never tried it, and a host of other things. You certainly do not have to climb into a garbage can to know garbage stinks.

What we so often fail to realize is that our minds are the greatest computers ever created, and whatever enters in cannot be erased. For that reason alone I, for one, advocate the boycotting of this movie.

Furthermore, I would think that the theaters and video rental shops in Pampa, Amarillo, Fritch, Borger and the surrounding areas would respect the feelings of the majority of their patrons and boycott this film as well!

Certainly we cannot force our opinions on those who delight in degrading Jesus Christ, but for those of us whose lives have been enriched by our faith in Him, and since all mankind has benefitted from His teachings, we all owe Him our respect.

John Kimbrough, minister

And some others object to stories

To the editor:

This is regarding the front page article about Roy Leon Williams, Pampa News, Sunday, July 22, 1988.

We, people who knew Leon, were very insulted by this article. First, the skull that was featured had nothing to do with Leon. Are you reporting facts or trying to create a haunted house? Second, you say acquaintances said the two, meaning Leon and his roommate, liked to drink together on weekends and shoot guns. We don't think it is anybody's business when Leon liked to drink a beer. When Leon did shoot his guns, it was hunting or target practice. He did not just shoot anything or anywhere.

You have to understand, this man liked guns. It was his hobby. He was very serious about this hobby. Also, you say the yard is littered with beer cans. We can guarantee you that Leon was not solely responsible for this. He had a lot of friends that came out there a lot. We all helped with the beer cans over a long period of time.

Let's not forget the bullet holes in the walls. Is "reportedly" meaning rumored? We think so. Those of us that have been out there have never noticed any bullet holes in the walls. Nor did we ever see Leon or his roommate shoot a gun in the house.

In closing, we would like the people who are talking about this tragedy to get your facts straight. Roy Leon Williams was the best friend most of us will ever have. He had a heart of gold. If any of us ever needed Leon, he was there. He will be missed dearly.

Family and Friends of Roy Leon Williams.

And goodbye to him

To the editor:

"Bored youth" has moved to Oklahoma City, where there is plenty of excitement. Did he get his MTV?

The satisfaction gained from the type of excitement he craves will soon wear off and he'll be demanding of his parents more money to spend on more "void" entertainment.

Tracy B. had the courage to sign his name and give his age. His age apparently didn't concern "bored youth," but I am glad to know his age, for it is refreshing to hear an 18-year-old express some positive and wholesome ideas. It shows he has priorities in order and his head on straight.

"Bored youth" labeling him egotistical and narrow-minded only shows his own lack of understanding and, yes, his level of intelligence. Pampa should be a better place to live now that it has one less "grumbler resident."

Pets need attention in summer months

To the editor:

It is time to remind people, once again, to please look after their pets during this hot weather. Be sure they have plenty of water and put them in the shade, if possible.

If you have dogs chained outside, check them often to be sure they haven't wrapped their chains around something and can't get to water or shade. Check their water often, as the chain may tip the container over. They don't know to go back around the way they came; they just keep going in the same direction, and before you know it, they have shortened their chain to 4 or 5 inches and can't go anywhere. If you have to be gone all day, be sure the chain or rope is free of all restrictions.

Another thing: check your dogs' collar once in awhile, or the flea collar. Sometimes we tend to forget the little dog is growing but the collar doesn't grow with it.

If you have cats or other animals around, keep water out for them also. In spite of what you might think, cats cannot always find water. While you may be sitting in an air-conditioned building all day, your pets could be suffering death in the heat. Take care of your pets. They love you; why can't you love them in return with a little responsibility?

Please, please, don't take your pets shopping with you and leave them in the car. Even with the windows rolled down a little, it is much too hot in there for them. If they get too warm, they get excited and start barking, and this makes matters worse. Too many times we think we are going to be in a store for just a few minutes, and it turns out to be a lot longer. Your pet will be much happier and safer at home.

Remember: pets don't know what is good for them. That is your responsibility. If you don't want that responsibility and don't really care that much about the animal, then try to give it to someone that does care. Don't keep them and make them pay for your uncaring carelessness.

I know a lot of people train their dogs to ride in or on the back of their pickups, and the dogs seem to be enjoying it. Although they get a breeze when the vehicle is moving, it is a hot breeze and they are in the hot sun. The metal of the pickup bed is also hot, and it just can't be all that comfortable for them to stand on all the time.

If you stop for any length of time at all, and the dog stays in the vehicle, he is suffering in the heat. It might be best if he would stay home on such hot days, even though he thinks he wants to go with you. If you must take him with you, carry a pan and give him water once in awhile.

Animals are not dumb; they are very faithful and cannot talk. Know your animal, and do what is best for him. They have endurance limits, just like you self.

An animal lover

Dragging out those 'evil pens' again?

To the editor:

This paper has once again gotten hold of a story that it will repeat over and over and over again. I am talking about the tragic death of Leon Williams.

It's bad enough what happened to him and what his family must deal with, but must it be front page news until y'all can find something else to put in its place? Who or what gives you the right to do this to his family? Do you not feel your readers were smart enough to get the gist of it the first time? Was it that important to say there were beer cans and bullet holes in and around the house? All I can say is, it is pretty low to discredit someone who is dead.

For those of you who did not know Leon (including the writer of the article), he was really a fine young man, a person always there when you just needed someone to talk to — in fact, he was probably too nice for his own good. At least his family and friends can seek comfort in knowing he is at home with God.

This paper needs to realize you're not the judge and juror of this town, and from now on before a word is written, think of how it would be to be in that person's place or family.

I only hope no one else must suffer from one of your evil pens. News is news but not when it's more of a gossip column.

Editor's Note: This is not New York City, Chicago, Los Angeles or the like, so a murder is not an everyday occurrence here; it's a heinous crime and, like it or not, of great public interest here because of its thankful rarity. Yes, we can sympathize with the family, and do; we will not call them up to ask for their reactions nor stand in front of their house to snap pictures of them in their grief, as you would see occurring in many places. And as to being a "judge," we have never in any of our stories had such great wisdom and insight as to be able to judge another as "evil." We also have the courage to put our names on the articles we write and bear the responsibility for that writing in public.

Sometimes pain is in the nature of news

By CAROL RUST
Beaumont Enterprise

BEAUMONT (AP) — I got that look again the other night.

It made me wonder all over again what I'm doing in a business that makes my ears perk up at the sound of sirens and punctuates my dreams with the crackle of police radios.

I got that look again the other night, one that told me I was the collector of calamities, unwelcome in the womb of another's grief.

"Go away," it said. "You people never stop at anything."

And I guess that look is right. It's the nature of news.

The next day's headline would be that a policeman was murdered.

He would be a decent man, clean-cut and dedicated.

He would have died from a gunshot wound in the line of duty.

The unwritten part of the story would be a hospital emergency room literally blue with the uniforms of police officers, men who had known the slain officer, whose children maybe played with his children. They leaned against the wall in sad, silent human clumps, weary and teary-eyed.

As I was wondering what I was doing in my particular business that draws me into the paths of tornadoes and gravesides of grief, perhaps they were wondering what they were doing in theirs.

And some of them gave me that look when I asked them questions, an understandable look of sad resentment.

"Go away," the look said, "and let us be sad among ourselves."

The next day's story would be neighbors remembering a young man, a family man, who always waved when he passed them driving down the street. The son of a police chief himself. Father of two.

The tone of their voice when I called them told me, too, that I was intruding into their homes, shrouded in sadness.

"Why are you bothering me?" the tone in their voice asked. "Isn't it enough that we've lost our neighbor?"

The unwritten part of the story would be a shocked relative walking slowly from the room where the slain officer's body was, a 29-year-old body that all the physicians and paramedics in the world couldn't bring back to life.

Three hundred miles away, a frantic mother waited by the telephone.

She would soon learn her son had died, now just the body of a boy she praised and punished when he was growing up, a boy she nurtured and who nurtured her.

The unwritten part of the story was the consoling cluster of people who wrapped their arms tightly around others in the emergency room and walked slowly with them down the hall, going nowhere in particular.

The unwritten part of the story was the white plastic garbage bag one of the policemen clutched to him, containing the slain officer's uniform and wallet.

They would give me that look that says silently what vultures they think we news-types are. And they will be partly right.

But if we are predators of tragedy that puts us in uncomfortable situations where we fumble to find words to ask victims and criminals and judges and robbers things they don't want to recall or think about, it's because the people who pick up the paper the next day want to know.

They wanted to read what co-workers thought of a civil servant the city will mourn, what kind of neighbor he was, what kind of husband.

Nation

Era ending: America's last Playboy Club closes doors

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The nation's last Playboy Club closed Saturday night, as America's last nine bunnies gave up the high heels, tails and form-fitting costumes that delighted a generation of men.

"They may allow us to keep our ears," bunny Rochelle said at a farewell bash for the public Friday night that filled the 250-patron club to capacity, drew television crews and reporters, and left 60 people waiting outside. The club dropped its membership-only restriction and became an open-admission cocktail lounge about a year ago in the face of dwindling business that closed every other domestic Playboy Club.

Saturday night, almost every one of the club's trappings went on auction in a $50-a-plate benefit for cystic fibrosis research.

That included a blow-up of a Playboy magazine cover featuring nothing but two big breasts, a couple dozen framed photographs of Playboy founder Hugh Hefner and glass panels etched with the bow-tied bunny logo.

About the only things that weren't for sale were the patented, custom-fit bunny uniforms, which remain the property of Playboy Enterprises, said Playboy spokeswoman Terri Tomcsin in Chicago.

Friday night's affair at the Lansing Hilton in this state capital of 130,000 drew hundreds of curiosity-seekers.

"I want to grab a cottontail," said Bill McDonald, 42.

Bob Wood, 32, said he wanted to see what the club was like. "I've never come here," Wood said. "They came out with topless bars everywhere, so I didn't need to."

In the hotel hallway outside the club, bunny Michelle — even in the last nights they have been obeying the rule against revealing their last names — was taking a snapshot of the 60 people waiting to get into the club.

Rochelle posed for a photograph with a beaming man who tipped her $10 and whispered his hotel room number.

The bunny just rolled her eyes. "We get a lot of this," she said. Milos Tavorsky, a quiet man of "around 60," sat alone at the end of the club's bar, shaking his head as he watched television camera crews record the end of an era.

"A week ago there weren't 20 people here," said Tavorsky, a three-times-a-week patron for the past four years who said he couldn't remember the club being so crowded. "This is something."

Hefner opened the first Playboy Club in Chicago in 1960. The clubs had their heyday in the 1970s, when there were 22 around the world.

But the hedonistic "Playboy philosophy" that made Hefner's clubs a hit with American men began to go out of fashion with the rise of the women's movement, and lost more appeal in the conservative '80s.

Perhaps its final death knell sounded earlier last week, when Hefner, once a dedicated bachelor, announced he planned to marry one of his former Playboy centerfolds.

The company-owned clubs were closed in 1986, and the three remaining franchise contracts — with hotels in Des Moines, Iowa; Omaha, Neb.; and Lansing — were not renewed this year, Tomcsin said.

Thriving clubs remain in Japan and the Philippines, and Playboy plans more overseas operations, she said.

Tomcsin said the media attention received by the closing of the last U.S. franchise demonstrates the Playboy philosophy had an impact on America.

"We were more than just a fad," she said. "We had become an important part of American culture."

Couple gets shock from electric bill

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Sure, this summer's been hot, and the air conditioner has been running all the time.

Still, a retired couple got quite a jolt when they opened their bill from Tampa Electric Co.

According to the statement, they owed $5,062,599.57 for July.

Not to worry. The helpful folks at Tampa Electric offered a "budget billing" plan that would allow them to pay monthly installments of a mere $62,582.27.

"It's lucky I don't have a weak heart," said Jim Schoelkopf, a former nurseryman. Tampa Electric refigured the bill Friday and discovered the Schoelkopfs really owe $146.76.

The mistake was tracked to an error by a key punch operator who entered a large transaction number in the computer on a line where the dollar amount should have gone, said company spokesman Mike Mahoney.

"It appears to be a 1-in-5 million occurrence," said Mahoney.

"A man called today from TECO and apologized," Winnie Schoelkopf said.

The Schoelkopfs actually were using less electricity this month than the same month last year.

"I'm going to send them a check for $146.76 and mark it right on it, 'paid-in-full,'" Mrs. Schoelkopf said.

Her husband plans to frame the exorbitant bill and use the numbers for another purpose. "I think we'll play the lottery with them."

Bentsen gets plenty of help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mindful of Geraldine Ferraro's ill-fated vice presidential quest in 1984, Michael Dukakis had aides accompany Sen. Lloyd Bentsen on his first campaign solo flight.

The 67-year-old Bentsen is no stranger to campaign work, and the silver-haired senator took several of his own aides with him on the campaign foray to California, Nevada, New Mexico and Texas last week. But Francis O'Brien, a senior aide to Dukakis, also was aboard Bentsen's plane.

Officials in both the Dukakis and Bentsen camps remember how Ferraro, Walter F. Mondale's running mate four years ago, hit the campaign trail unprepared, and want to closely coordinate campaign activities.

Mrs. Ferraro badly mishandled the controversy surrounding her husband's finances, and the issue quickly destroyed any momentum the Democrats had following their nominating convention in San Francisco. The ticket went on to lose 49 of the 50 states to Ronald Reagan.

"They put her out, basically without any senior help from the Mondale campaign," said O'Brien, who had been called in to help rescue the Ferraro campaign.

Four years ago, "there was a lack of communication between the two campaigns," he said. "People who went through that experience learned from that experience."

O'Brien led a cadre of Dukakis people on the Bentsen plane, including Tad Devine, the Dukakis chief delegate-counter before the convention, who will coordinate and direct the senator's campaign from the Dukakis headquarters in Boston. Devine also worked for Mondale four years ago.

But Bentsen also will keep a group of his long-time advisers with him to handle day-to-day issues.

"We've done a very good job of integrating the Dukakis staff," said Joseph O'Neill, a former Bentsen aide on Capitol Hill, who will become his top traveling campaign staffer.

A formal announcement of the campaign staff is planned later this week, said Jack DeVore, Bentsen's spokesman.

Bentsen's campaigning was kept at a deliberate pace last week with careful staging of each event.

His speeches were cautious, citing his Senate record on issues of interest to each audience and working in some digs at the Reagan administration — but avoiding harsh attacks.

Care was also taken to emphasize areas where he and Dukakis agree.

While the Bentsen choice is certainly a lot less daring than Mondale's Ferraro decision, Bentsen and Dukakis probably have more disagreements on policy. Bentsen is much more conservative on some issues, including his opposition to gun control, support for aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels and school prayer.

The political message for the trip was found mostly in the locations, which were designed to highlight the Dukakis campaign theme of aggressively going after electoral votes that the Republicans have controlled for years. The Democrats last won Texas in 1976, and haven't won New Mexico, Nevada or California since 1964. Bentsen, a supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment, found a friendly audience with a businesswomen's group in Albuquerque. He played a "come home to the Democratic Party" theme to a union audience in San Francisco, in Nevada and at his Texas stop in Amarillo — a Republican area that's home to his opponent in this year's Senate race, Rep. Beau Boulter.

As permitted by Texas law, Bentsen is running for the vice presidency and the Senate at the same time.

The trip hit two areas a day, instead of the three-day plan for later in the campaign.

As a state-wide campaigner in Texas, the national campaign isn't as big a step up for Bentsen as it was for Ferraro, a member of the House from Queens, N.Y. Bentsen also has the experience of his unsuccessful 1976 campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The senator said that from his viewpoint "it's gone very well," and he was surprised he didn't face a sea of Bush signs at his rally in Amarillo.

"I think we could have done a few more things," he said. "But we wanted some time in there in case things weren't working out."

Dukakis aides said Bentsen's congressional schedule was a plus even though it will cut into his campaign time.

Iraq claims it will pull troops out of Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq Saturday promised to pull its troops from all remaining towns it captured in western Iran during the past week, and Iran again accused its enemy of attacking a village with chemical weapons.

Iran said Iraqi forces chemically bombed a village just inside the border near the town of Marivan in northwestern Iran, and shelled villages near Sardasht in the same region.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said 10 civilians were wounded when chemical bombs were dropped on Bilo village.

The agency also said Iraqi conventional shells wounded 40 civilians and damaged several houses in 10 villages around Sardasht in the mountainous northwest.

A military spokesman quoted by the official Iraqi News Agency said Iraqi forces would withdraw within 48 hours from Qasr-e Shirin, Sar-e Pol-e Zahab, Sumar and Amirabad on the central front.

On Friday, Iranian Commander in Chief Hashemi Rafsanjani said Iraqi forces drove 65 miles into Iran before Iran pushed the invaders back toward the border.

Rafsanjani, who also is speaker of Parliament, warned Friday that if Iraq "decides to continue the war, then they must know that our strength today is by far greater than that of the time prior to the acceptance of the resolution."

An Iranian defense industries worker kisses his mother before setting out to the war front.

Iran accepted a U.N. cease-fire resolution July 18.

In the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, a spokesman for the rebel fighters, the National Liberation Army of Iran, said that Iraqi forces pulled out of Esfahabad and Karand, 60 miles inside Iran, after holding the cities for three

A seven-member U.N. team, meanwhile, arrived in Baghdad to discuss implementing the U.N. resolution. The team arrived after visiting Tehran.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar denied persistent reports that his peace talks with Iran and Iraq are in trouble.

"Be patient," Perez de Cuellar said. "And we will make progress rather soon ... I am constantly in touch with the parties. I keep working."

The process has stalled over Iraq's insistence on direct talks and Iran's rejection of a face-to-face meeting before a cease-fire is declared in the 8-year-old Persian Gulf conflict.

Speaking at a prayer service broadcast Friday on Tehran radio, Rafsanjani said Iraqi-backed Iranian rebels entered a hospital in western town of Esfahabad and "rained bullets on some 30 patients," killing all of them.

Iran said it drove the Iraqi-backed rebel fighters out of Esfahabad and Karand, killing or wounding 4,500 invaders in a "heavy battle" against "forces of the Baghdad regime and their hypocritical mercenaries."

Iran's armed forces were chasing the troops back toward Sar-e Pol-e Zahab, 24 miles from the Iran-Iraq border, Iran claimed.

Iranian press reports, monitored in Nicosia, said thousands of invaders were wounded and more than 1,000 Iraqi tanks and personnel carriers were either destroyed or seized intact.

No independent observers were allowed near the fighting and claims from both sides could not be verified.

Burmese authorities seize 10 dissidents

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Burmese authorities have arrested up to 25 people, including a prominent critic of the authoritarian government and an Associated Press correspondent, U.S. officials and other diplomats said Saturday.

The arrests came less than a week after Sein Lwin, a former army general known for ruthless suppression of dissidents, replaced Ne Win as president and chairman of Burma's sole political party.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Nancy Beck said U.S. officials in Burma "understand that perhaps as many as 25 people have been arrested within the last 24 hours."

She said those arrested included retired brigadier general Aung Gyi, a longtime critic of Ne Win's authoritarian regime.

Beck and Western diplomats in Burma said AP correspondent U Sein Win was also among the arrested.

In a brief message telexed to the Associated Press bureau in Bangkok, the journalist's family said: "Daddy has been taken away. He won't be available to answer your queries." The message was received at 12:58 a.m.

The 70-year-old Aung Gyi, once regarded as a probable successor to Ne Win, had written a series of letters attacking economic and political conditions in Burma. He had targeted Sein Lwin, criticizing his role in the bloody suppression of student protests.

Analysts in Burma had predicted Aung Gyi would be silenced in a society where public dissent has been stamped out swiftly in the past.

Sein Win, 66, formerly publisher of the English-language daily The Guardian, was jailed for three years in Burma in the 1960s in connection with his journalistic activities. He joined The Associated Press shortly after his release in 1968.

In 1963, he was awarded the Golden Pen of Freedom by the Paris-based International Federation of Journalists for his work in fostering a free press in Burma. He also served on the executive board of the International Press Institute and founded Burma's first national news agency.

Letters by Aung Gyi dated June 8 and July 19 attacked Sein Lwin for "turning a blind eye" to "all kinds of human rights violations."

The new leader is widely believed to have commanded forces that brutally suppressed student demonstrations in the capital in March.

Aung Gyi, giving gruesome detail of rapes and beatings, claimed that 283 people died. The government has acknowledged 43 deaths, including 41 who suffocated in a crowded police van after their arrests.

South African police remove 'Cry Freedom' from theaters

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police have ordered the film Cry Freedom seized from theaters across the country, hours after the government gave permission Friday for it to be shown.

Police Commissioner Hendrik de Witt issued the order in the evening under state of emergency regulations. The order came less than nine hours after the Publications Appeals Board, the government's censorship body, announced the film could be shown.

Movie-goers said police began arriving at theaters around the country with orders to confiscate the film.

The Publications Appeals Board ruled Friday morning that the film, about the friendship between Biko and white journalist Donald Woods, could be shown uncut to viewers at least 19 years old.

Later, the Justice Ministry noted that it had not given permission to quote Woods, as actor Kevin Kline does in the film, because of Woods' banned status under national law.

A blast occurred outside a black township theater where the film was to be shown. No injuries were reported. Bomb threats were reported at other cinemas.

Cry Freedom had been scheduled to open after government censors last November approved showing it without cuts or age restrictions. But Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha on Monday ordered the board to reconsider. He did not give a reason.

The movie, directed by Richard Attenborough and filmed in neighboring Zimbabwe, stars Denzel Washington as Biko and Kline as Woods.

Biko died in 1977 in police custody after founding and promoting the black consciousness movement in South Africa.

Kobus van Rooyen, head of the censorship board, called the film a "mediocre product" that had "obvious and blatant bias against the (South African) police."

But he added: "The board came to the conclusion that the film does not present a risk to race relations or to the security of the state."

The script is based on two books by Woods, who fled the country after Biko's death.

Hours after the board's ruling, an explosion was reported behind the Kings Cinema in the Alexandra township outside Johannesburg. Theater manager David Shadow said the cinema was empty and no one was injured.

N.C. firm takes over First Republic Bank

DALLAS (AP) — The long-awaited FDIC announcement that First Republic Bank Corp. has been taken over by NCNB Corp. was called a "monumental day" in Texas history Friday by several financial and real estate experts.

"We start rebuilding Texas tomorrow," said Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot, who FDIC officials say has offered to support the North Carolina-based holding company's share of its investment.

Those with large stakes in the financial community feel state economic conditions can only improve if the state's largest bank-holding company is brought back to good health, analysts say.

"The problems of First Republic continued to hamper the Texas economy," said Frank Anderson, a bank analyst for D. Latin and Co. of Dallas. "In order for Texas to get back to the level it has been historically, First Republic had to be recapitalized. It's a monumental day."

Under the plan announced by the FDIC on Friday in Washington, NCNB Corp. will acquire 20 percent of the new NCNB Texas National Bank, with an option to buy the rest from the FDIC. All deposits have been assumed by the new bank-holding company and service will continue without interruption, FDIC officials said.

"The restructuring of First Republic is good for Texas," said Texas Bankers Association President Jeff Austin Jr. "It will mean that Texas banks are hanging out the 'For Business' sign again."

Reece A. Overcash Jr., chairman of the Dallas-based Associates Corp. of North America, said the takeover should create a tide of new economic development.

"We need capital in the state and this is a very forward progressive bank," Overcash said.

Arthur C. White, a consultant for Spicer & Oppenheim of Dallas and a member of the state Banking Board, said anyone associated with the financial community was anxiously awaiting Friday's announcement to see what First Republic Bank's fate would be.

"I would hope this is positive," White said of the takeover. "We've all been very concerned."

Those involved in real estate, which First Republic Bank blamed for its decimated holdings through fallen market values and bad loans, say they hope the recapitalization will give the state a psychological boost.

Mary Frances Burleson, executive vice president of Ebby Halliday Realtors in Dallas, said she believes the deal "can do nothing but help our market."

"I don't think it will affect our interest rates, or do anything else financially," Burleson said. "But this will be a great psychological boost for all of us."

Burleson said the takeover, and bids from other non-Texas holding companies, also demonstrate that things are not as bad in Texas as advertised.

"They're exhibiting faith in this marketplace," she said. "They're telling us, 'You're OK. I like it.'"

The only apprehension seemed to be on a more personal level.

Drought helps push July prices up over last year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drought continued to take a toll of crop and livestock production, helping push prices of some major commodities 10 percent higher in July than they were a year ago, the Agriculture Department says.

Preliminary figures released Friday showed that prices farmers got for raw products in July rose 3.6 percent from June, including higher levels for corn, soybeans and eggs. Those gains were partly offset by lower prices for oranges, cattle and hogs.

Compared with a year earlier, July prices averaged 10 percent higher. The report also included revised figures showing that the index rose only 2.2 percent in June, compared with the preliminary reading of 3.7 percent announced a month ago.

Department projections earlier this month showed that 1988 grain production may be reduced by 24 percent from last year. Heat and drought have dried up pastures and forced many producers to thin out herds to cut down on rising feed costs.

Prices of some major commodities are based on mid-month averages and then are revised the following month when additional information is available.

John Buche of the department's National Agricultural Statistics Service said the July report did not reflect most of the recent downturn in feed grain and soybean prices after rains improved harvest prospects from earlier in the month.

However, the market continued to be highly volatile. At the Chicago Board of Trade on Friday, crop futures soared after rains improved harvest prospects from earlier in the month.

By the market's close, most corn and soybean futures had risen their respective daily limits of 10 cents and 30 cents per bushel, while the limitless August contract for soybeans soared more than 34 cents.

The USDA report, which uses prices at the farm level, showed that as a commodity group, prices of feed grains and hay — in great demand for livestock in the stricken drought areas — rose 16 percent from June to July, averaging 71 percent above a year ago.

Prices of food grains, mostly wheat but also including rice, rose 2.9 percent during the month and averaged 54 percent more than in July 1987.

Oil-bearing crops, mostly soybeans, were up 8.5 percent from June and averaged 57 percent more than a year ago, the report said.

Kirk wins Tri-State championship

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Jim Kirk figured luck and skill went hand in hand when it came to winning a golf tournament.

How right Kirk was as the Ardmore, Okla. golfer overcame one predicament after another down the stretch Friday to win the Tri-State Senior Tournament by two strokes. Kirk shot a 1-under par 70 yesterday for a three-round total of 213 and held off a late charge by Lubbock's Dick Alexander to win the silver tray in his first Tri-State tourney.

Kirk felt confident of victory going into the last nine holes.

"I wasn't real worried because I was three-up at the turn and I usually play the back nine better than I do the front," Kirk said.

Not Friday, however. The lanky Kirk had two birdies on No. 1 and No. 9 and went into the turn with a 2-under par 33. Lady luck played a role on the final nine as Kirk hit a couple of trees and a sand trap, but recovered nicely for a 1-over par 37.

"You've got to have some luck to do well at this game and I had some on the back nine. It got pretty tight there for awhile," added Kirk.

The breaks went Kirk's way on No. 13 when his tee shot missed going out of bounds by a mere 1 1/2 inches. He still made his par, but Anderson missed tying things up when his 7-foot eagle putt slipped by the hole.

Anderson did knot the score with a par on No. 14 while Kirk's second shot sailed over the green and he ended up with his first bogey of the round.

However, Anderson bogied three of the last four holes and Kirk regained the lead with a par on No. 15 and went 2-up with a birdie on No. 18.

"I figured all I had to do was 3-putt the last hole to win and I got it down in two," Kirk said.

Kirk still had some good fortune saved for that final hole. His tee shot hit a tree and bounced back into the middle of the fairway.

Both Kirk and Anderson were tied for the lead after two rounds of play at the Pampa Country Club course. Kirk led by three strokes after the first round with a 3-under par 68.

Alexander, who finished fifth in last year's tournament, had strong wood, but a shaky putter throughout the day.

"All I could do was come close on my putts. On one hole I thought the ball was going to jump right out of the cup after it went in," he said.

Kirk, who enters the International Senior Open next week in Scotland, said tournament golf brings out the best in most golfers.

"You tend to get a little sloppy when you play on your home course all the time. Tournaments get you keyed up," added Kirk.

Alexander placed second with a 215. Max Hickey of Spring and a former Pampan tied two-time winner Jake Broyles of Lamesa for third at 218. Broyles' 69 was Friday's best round.

"That score made me feel a little bit better after my first two rounds," Broyles said.

Ken Bailey, Amarillo, and last year's winner withdrew after a two-round 156.

Final results are listed below:

Coaches happy over rainfall

LONDON (AP) — And on the fourth day the heavens opened and it rained. And football coaches Don Shula and Bill Walsh rejoiced.

The typical rainy English weather that had plagued other American tourists and extended Wimbledon and the British Open an extra day was a welcome sight to Shula's Miami Dolphins and Walsh's San Francisco 49ers.

"This is almost ideal weather for football," Walsh said. "We've been training in temperatures over 100 degrees. The men practice so long and hard and it's so grueling that extremely hot weather takes too much out of you."

Shula commented: "I hope the weather is like this for the game. It's perfect."

On Sunday, the Dolphins and the 49ers meet at Wembley Stadium in an NFL exhibition game. Billed American Bowl III, the game is designed to give the two NFL teams preseason match practice and give the expanding British football audience another close look at "American football."

With the temperatures around 66 degrees Fahrenheit and rain clouds surrounding the Crystal Palace track arena, Walsh and Shula put their squads through a final practice session Friday.

Twitty shares lead in Buick Golf Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Sometimes, according to PGA veteran Howard Twitty, it's better to be lucky than good.

"I really didn't feel like I played that well. I felt fortunate," he said after shooting a 68 to earn a share of the third-round lead at the Buick Open. "This is the first time in probably a year that I've been tied for the lead going into the last round."

Twitty, seeking his first Tour victory in eight years, was tied with Steve Elkington, who shot a 67, and Scott Verplank, who had a 70 after a pair of 66s. All three were at 14-under-par 202 after 54 holes.

Ken Green, the 1985 Buick Open champion, shot 65 and was alone at 13-under 203. Dave Eichelberger was at 204 after a 67.

Twitty, 39 and a pro since 1975, has been struggling all season. He missed nine cuts in his previous 20 tournaments, including seven straight from March through early May, and his best finish is a tie for 21st in the Kemper Open.

He can't afford to take a vacation from the Tour. "I need the money," Twitty said.

Twitty is 152nd on the money list with earnings of $25,655. Unless he turns it around, this will be Twitty's worst season on the Tour. He has finished as high as 14th in 1980 and 15th in 1979.

This is the first time this season Twitty has broken 70 twice in one tournament. His 65 in the second round was his best round of the season.

Twitty has won two tournaments in his career, the last being the 1980 Greater Hartford Open.

"Anybody can go out and have a hot round Sunday and win," Twitty said. "I was disappointed that I couldn't make a few more coming in because I could have kept a few guys out of it."

Elkington, a 26-year-old Australian, started the day three strokes behind Verplank and one back of Twitty, made the turn at 1-under, then birdied four of the final nine holes, capping the burst with a 20-foot putt on the 435-yard 18th hole.

"You've got to make birdies, there's no use playing timid out there," Elkington said. "I'm playing well, so I like my chances. I was tied for the lead going into the last day at Westchester. I think I've learned a lot from that. I'm looking forward to Sunday."

Twitty started the third round at 10-under, two strokes behind Verplank, his playing partner in the final twosome.

"Looking back on the circumstances, it wasn't too bad," Verplank said. "I was kind of nervous. I haven't been in this spot for a while."

Mercury Morris book getting big hype nationwide

FRIENDS INSIDE AND OUTSIDE the Dallas Cowboys tell me the top echelon of that staid and sainted organization are very nervous about the forthcoming, and as yet untitled book by Duane Thomas. The one-time NFL star is in a love-hate relationship with the Silver and Blue, apparently, and the hope is that Sports Illustrated's Paul Zimmerman, who is doing the actual writing, will verify information before putting things on paper.

A book already out that should be of interest to anyone who has played or been around minor league baseball is "Short Season and Other Stories", written by Northern Iowa University professor Jerry Kinkowitz, who summers as executive director of the Waterloo Indians. His tales of a fictional ballclub describe the long bus rides, fast-food burgers, cold showers and roach-ridden locker rooms, based on what he sees and hears from the major league hopefuls daily.

But the big one already out, and getting big hype nationwide, is "Against the Grain", the Eugene Morris story. The former West Texas State teammate of Thomas is pictured on the dust cover beside a Miami Dolphin helmet and wearing the Super Bowl ring he earned while leading that team to championships in the early 1970s. Written by Steve Fifer, an Illinois attorney and writer, it is not primarily a football book but rather a detailed account of Mercury's association with drugs that eventually gave him a different uniform number in the Florida prison system. He spent 3 1/2 years of a mandatory 15-year sentence behind bars following conviction on a drug trafficking charge, which he still feels was "unjust."

Mercury details and freely admits being a cocaine user, but as he always did as a college athlete, find excuses for his actions. As outstanding a verbal communicator and salesman as he was an elusive runner, he can draw on your sympathies. Morris tells how he turned down a deal that would have reduced his stay to one year if he turned in other players in the NFL whom he knew were involved with the drug, and his reasoning for not doing so.

Of special interest to fans in this area are the brief chapters that deal directly with his playing days, from high school through college. Mercury discusses his recruitment by Joe Kerbel, and devotes one full chapter to "College Days". Morris relates tales of encounters with Kerbel, conveys his opinion of the Canyon community, and tells of his running battle with O.J. Simpson for NCAA rushing records and superiority. Explained are the details of his apparently being ejected from a game at Colorado State in which he set the records for most yards in a single season and also in a three-year career.

An author of note who was covering that game for the Amarillo Daily News at the time, Carlton Stowers, told me recently that was the game in which his coaching career began and ended. "I was in the press box keeping very accurate statistics on Morris' rushing yards. When it got to the fourth quarter and seemed a certainty he would get the record, I went to the sidelines. With the Buffs about to get the ball back late in the game he needed six more yards. The quarterback, Roy Winters, came over and asked me where it stood. I told him to just keep giving the ball to Morris until he got the needed yardage and then not give it to him again. They used to sweep Mercury wide and he would sometimes get thrown for a huge loss, which would have nullified the record. Waters did, Morris did, and he had the record," laughed Stowers.

Earlier that season, 1968, Morris had set a single-game rushing mark of 340 yards. As we sat together on the charter flight coming home he was pretty nonchalant about it. The bigger goals were those other two marks. And his single game record was broken shortly anyway.

Always an opportunist, Mercury has taken advantage of his football reputation, combined with the drug conviction, to become a self-styled drug fighter from a podium and through his book. He has given more than 200 speeches to date, relating how he and he alone had made the decision to use drugs and ruin a major portion of his life. For that effort the Miami, Fla., Metro Dade Commission has accepted those speaking engagements as payment for $8,600 in legal fees incurred during his 1982 conviction.

He has convinced at least one of his former WT coaches that he was set up. "Mercury took the rap for some bigger drug dealers. If he hadn't, they'd have killed him," the coach told me recently.

Morris now claims he has found a new spiritual faith to go along with his changed attitude. Hopefully that is true. Most of the time he could be a decent person while performing at Buffaloland. But one has to wonder about the honesty.

The book contains several pages of pictures, many taken while at the Canyon school. But the very first picture, showing this handsome athlete in a West Texas State football uniform, carries the caption: "This is me in high school, just starting out." The picture is of Hank Washington, senior quarterback during Morris' sophomore season.

I hope the rest of the story is more accurate.

Mets increase NL East lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Sid Fernandez and Randy Myers combined on a four-hitter, Howard Johnson homered and the New York Mets beat Pittsburgh 3-0 Saturday night to take a four-game lead over the Pirates in the National League East.

The Mets pitched their 16th shutout, most in the majors, and it followed Bob Ojeda's three-hit, 1-0 victory over Pittsburgh Friday night.

Fernandez, 6-8, scattered four singles in seven innings and struck out 12, tying the league high this season. Myers finished with perfect relief, including one strikeout, for his 16th save.

The Pirates are batting just .181 in their last eight games and have won only twice.

Johnson, hitless in his last 14 at-bats and in a 2-for-37 slide, put the Mets ahead with a solo home run in the fourth. Johnson's 18th home run came against Brian Fisher, 6-8, with one out.

Four inducted into Pro Football Hall of Fame Players talk about role fate played in careers

By RUSTY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio — Mike Ditka remembered his late boss George Halas as the Chicago Bears coach became the first true tight end inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame Saturday.

"The Bears drafted me and told me I'd play tight end," said Ditka. "I only caught 14 passes my senior year in college. They knew I could block, so we worked on catching the ball. My first game I didn't catch a pass. But Mr. Halas devised a way of getting me open."

"All the credit (for revolutionizing the tight end position) goes to him," Ditka, Jack Ham, Fred Biletnikoff and Alan Page were inducted in a ceremony on the front steps of the Hall.

Their induction was followed by an NFL exhibition game between the Cincinnati Bengals and the Los Angeles Rams, the league's preseason opener.

Each inductee noted the role fate played in his career.

Ditka was scouted by several NFL teams while at the University of Pittsburgh, and all but one projected him as a linebacker. Only the Bears, for whom he played for six seasons and for whom he now coaches, envisioned him as a tight end.

Ditka, with 427 receptions and 43 touchdowns in a 12-year playing career with the Bears, Philadelphia Eagles and Dallas Cowboys, was presented at the ceremonies by former Bear teammate Ed O'Bradoovich.

Ham said he did not win the last scholarship available to Penn State after graduating from high school, he might not have developed into an all-pro linebacker.

"So many things fell into place for me," said Ham, who was presented at the induction ceremonies by Penn State coach Joe Paterno.

"Football is a team game. It's not like golf or tennis. I had great football players around me," Ham said.

Ham was a cornerstone during the Pittsburgh Steelers' four Super Bowl titles in the 1970s.

Biletnikoff got off to a slow start in the pros. He said he owed his induction to the faith that Oakland Raiders owner Al Davis showed in him.

Davis presented Biletnikoff at the induction ceremonies.

Biletnikoff was relatively slow of foot and at 6-foot-1, 190 pounds, wasn't able to run over anyone. But he eventually thrived, in part because of his ability to catch.

Page starred as a fearsome 278-pound tackle for more than a decade with the Minnesota Viking "Purple People Eaters" defense.

Despite his success — in 1971 he was the first defensive player ever named the NFL's Most Valuable Player — he spent 190 pounds and lengthened his career.

Astros gain ground on Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alex Trevino hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning off an injured Fernando Valenzuela and Rafael Ramirez's two-run triple sparked a five-run sixth as the Houston Astros defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 14-6 Saturday.

The Astros moved to within 3½ games of the first-place Dodgers in the National League West.

Trevino, Bill Doran and reliever Danny Darwin, 3-9, each had three RBI. The Astros had 16 hits, three by Doran. The Dodgers used five pitchers, including outfielder Danny Heep, who gave up Ken Caminiti's first homer, a two-run shot in the eighth. Heep also worked a scoreless ninth.

Neither starting pitcher, Valenzuela or Joaquin Andujar lasted five innings. Valenzuela led 2-0 through four innings but after a pitch to Ramirez with two outs in the fifth, the left-hander appeared to have injured his shoulder.

Valenzuela was allowed to continue and gave up a single to Ramirez. Trevino followed with his first homer. Andujar greeted Brian Holton, 3-6, with a single but suffered a strained knee rounding first and came out for pinch-runner Craig Reynolds. Darwin closed for Houston, allowing seven hits in five innings.

Doran singled in two more runs later in the fifth to give Houston a 4-2 lead. Valenzuela's injury was diagnosed as diffused tenderness in his left shoulder.

Houston broke the game open with five runs on six hits in the sixth. Ramirez had a two-run triple, Trevino doubled home a run, Young hit an RBI triple and Doran a run-scoring single.

Darwin, who snapped a personal five-game losing streak, gave up a pair of runs to the Dodgers in the sixth on RBI singles by Mike Scioscia and pinch-hitter Franklin Stubbs. Darwin had a three-run double in the seventh.

Los Angeles added two runs in the ninth on an error by first baseman Jim Pankovits and an RBI single by Steve Sax.

Kirk Gibson hit his 19th homer in the first for the Dodgers and John Shelby had an RBI single in the fourth.

"Pops" joins Hall

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer
COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The Hall of Fame family is getting a new pop.

Willie Stargell has the stage to himself Sunday as he takes his place among baseball's all-time greats.

"To be in the same room as Babe Ruth, Hank Aaron, Ernie Banks and Roberto Clemente is a great honor and a wonderful feeling," Stargell said.

Stargell hit 475 homers with 1,540 runs batted in and a .282 batting average in 21 seasons with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

He was equally regarded for his qualities as a leader on the field and in the clubhouse and was affectionately known as "Pops" to his teammates in the 1970s.

Last Jan. 12, Stargell became the 17th player to be elected in the first year of eligibility. He was named on 352 of 427 ballots (82.4 percent) returned to the Baseball Writers' Association of America. In order to be elected, a player must be named on 75 percent of the ballots, which this year was 321.

Jim Bunning, who won 100 games in each league, almost made it. After missing by 21 votes last year, the Kentucky congressman fell four votes short with 317 (74.2 percent) in his 12th year of eligibility.

After Bunning, Tony Oliva was third in the voting with 202, followed by Orlando Cepeda 199 and the late Roger Maris with 184. It was Maris' 15th and last year of eligibility.

Next year, Johnny Bench and Carl Yastrzemski are eligible and are expected to make it the first time. Gaylord Perry, Jim Palmer, Rod Carew, Tom Seaver and Pete Rose are among other top candidates who will come up for election in the near future.

For the first time since 1956, the Veterans Committee failed to elect anyone to the Hall, again passing up such former stars as Phil Rizzuto, Leo Durocher, Joe Gordon and Gil Hodges.

Stargell was a team player, a team leader who grew in stature and ability as he aged. In 1979, at age 38, he led the Pirates back from a 3-1 deficit in the World Series against Baltimore. He was selected the Series MVP and shared the National League MVP with Keith Hernandez of St. Louis.

In the decisive seventh game at Baltimore, Stargell hit a two-run homer, two doubles and a single.

It was a strange repeat of history. In 1971, Stargell scored the winning run in the Pirates' seventh-game victory over the Orioles at Memorial Stadium.

"That (1971) was Roberto Clemente's series," Stargell said of the Pirates' Hall of Fame outfielder. "He was the greatest. It was Roberto who started the Pirate spirit."

And it was Stargell who kept it going.

Sanders hopes to start new streak

● A worthy candidate to replace Jimmy "the Greek" Snyder is Daryl Sanders, managing editor of Athlon's Pro Football Magazine.

For three straight seasons going into 1988, Sanders correctly picked at least one of the teams in the Super Bowl. For two seasons in a row, he correctly picked the winner. But all good guessers can have an off-year, just ask Jimmy "the Greek." Sanders' streak came to an end when he failed to pick either the Washington Redskins or the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XXII. The Greek's year was much worse. Sanders gets to keep his job while Snyder lost his after making racial remarks in front of a TV camera.

Sanders can't be faulted too much for his oversight, however. Not many other prognosticators picked the Redskins or Broncos in the Super Bowl. Sanders hopes to get his string going again for Super Bowl XXIII, but some of his fellow experts may think his crystal ball is cracked. But Sanders may be right on. His latest prediction has the up and coming Cleveland Browns winning the NFL title. Sanders picks the Minnesota Vikings to come up empty-handed again in another Super Bowl.

Strate Line

By L.D. Strate

Let's see what Sanders' magazine says about these two non-Super Bowl champions.

Cleveland has been one of the most consistent winners in the NFL for the past three years. The Browns have won three straight division crowns which is the best winning streak in the AFC and second-best overall.

Browns' quarterback Bernie Kosar may not be the most coordinated around, but he gets the job done. He was the number one ranked passer in the conference last season and has thrown fewer interceptions than any other NFL quarterback the past two seasons.

Kosar has receivers galore to choose from. Webster Slaughter was one of five receivers with more than 30 catches. Slaughter was the top receiver with 47 receptions for 806 yards and seven TDs. Brian Brennan caught 43 passes for 607 yards and six TDs.

Earliest Byner and Kevin Mack were a potent running back combination and together they made the best in the league. They combined for over 1,900 yards in rushing and pass-receiving last year.

Cleveland's offense can open up the holes, especially inside the opponent's 20-yard line, scoring on 46 of 54 possessions inside the 20.

The Browns' defense is a force to be reckoned with. They were the best in the AFC and ranked third in the NFL. Their defense allowed the second-fewest points in the league and were led by Pro Bowl selections Bob Golic, Clay Matthews, Frank Minnifield and Hanford Dixon.

Sanders figures the Minnesota Vikings are just a notch below the Browns.

Minnesota almost forced

Washington into overtime in the NFC title game last year. Going into that game, the Vikings were the hottest team in the playoffs. Along the way, Minnesota knocked off New Orleans and San Francisco in lopsided wins, 44-10 and 36-24, respectively.

The Vikings' main offensive weapon is Pro Bowler Anthony Carter, who led the NFL in per catch average at 24.3 yards. Quarterback Wade Wilson threw for 2,106 yards and 14 TDs.

Up front on offense the Vikings are led by Pro Bowl tackle Gary Zimmerman and Pro Bowl tight end Steve Jordan.

Minnesota's defense is paced by end Chris Doleman and safety Joey Browner, two more Pro Bowl players.

Sanders says a Browns-Vikings matchup in the Super Bowl would seem to hold the most promise in recent years for close games. He says the two teams will have some other close contests to make it to the big game.

Sanders could be on target with his picks, but it's hard to ignore the Washington Redskins making like the Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA and pulling a repeat.

Notwithstanding the pressure of winning the Super Bowl two years in a row, the Redskins should be better than last season with the acquisition of Pro Bowl linebacker Wilbur Marshall from the Chicago Bears.

Whichever team makes it, the road to the Super Bowl is always interesting.

Honeyghan retains boxing title

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Lloyd Honeyghan felt bad after retaining his World Boxing Council welterweight title.

Winning was one thing, but winning because he nailed Youngkil Chung with a low blow in the fifth round was a little too much.

It made the victory feel somewhat cheap and Honeyghan wouldn't even wish that upon his worst enemy, Marlon Starling on Friday night.

"I hope Starling wins," Honeyghan said before Starling defended his World Boxing Association welterweight title against Tomas Molinares of Colombia. "I hope he wins with a knockout and not like this. I hate to see a fight end this way."

Not as much as Starling hated to see the way his fight ended against Molinares.

Starling lost his 147-pound title to his Colombian opponent on Friday night after being knocked out with a wild overhand right punch that was clearly thrown after the bell sounded. There was not doubt about the timing of the punch. The bell could clearly be heard on television replays in a post-fight news conference and then the punch was thrown that sent Starling sprawling to the canvas.

Referee Joe Cortez took a few minutes after the knockout and then ruled that both fighters were in the process of throwing punches just before the bell sounded.

"I've done 24 professional fights," Cortez said. "Punches were in progress. Unfortunately both sides got caught in the heat of the battle. I would not second guess myself."

Neither would Larry Hazzard, the commissioner of the New Jersey Athletic Commission, nor James Binns, the counsel for the WBA.

"It's very difficult to stop a punch in midair," Hazzard said. "The rule in boxing is to protect yourself at all times. If you neglect to do so you cannot be compensated because you did not." Mort Sharnick, a spokesman for Starling, said the decision would be appealed to the WBA.

"Molinares won on a foul," he said. "Marlon Starling lost his title on a foul. That was the only way Molinares was going to win, either that way or by hitting him with a stool."

There seemed some truth to that statement.

Starling of Hartford, Conn., was ahead on two of the three judges' scorecards, and tied on the other. He had had his best rounds from the third round on and was unscathed at the time of the knockout, while Molinares had a bruise under one eye.

"I won the title up in the ring, where it's supposed to be won," Molinares said through an interpreter. "You guys want to take it away go ahead."

The loss dropped Starling to 43-5-1, while Molinares now is 23-0 with 20 knockouts.

Honeyghan also was in control of his fight against Chung when the end came because of the low blow.

Chung hesitated a second after it hit, went down to the canvas on his back and then rolled onto his stomach, frequently reaching for his groin area with his gloves.

Referee Tony Orlando motioned Honeyghan to a neutral corner and then had Chung's cornermen enter the ring to help him. After conferring with Hazzard, Orlando gave Chung five minutes to recover from the blow which was delivered less than a minute into the round.

Guess who's coming to Cowboy workouts?

Allen begins new career as analyst

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — There was George Allen standing on the sidelines watching a Dallas Cowboys' practice at California Lutheran College.

Such a scene decades ago would have ended with security guards taking the former Los Angeles Rams' and Washington Redskins' coach away in manacles.

Today, however, Allen is the "spy" who came in from the cold. He has begun a new career as an analyst for the Cowboys' pre-season games, his first being Saturday's annual Blue-White scrimmage.

The transformation was so complete that Allen even wore the blue shorts, white shirt and cap of the Dallas Cowboys' coaching staff at one of the practices. However, Allen forgot and wore his red Redskin shoes.

"I'm still convinced that he spied on us but he was always able to talk his way out of it," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He was a good psychologist. He always tried to get us mad so we wouldn't play our best game."

Landry smiled and added "Oh, I guess we'll help ol' George any way we can. It is a little ironic, isn't it?"

Landry believed that Allen sent spies to a hotel overlooking the George Allen (right) visits with Schramm.

Cowboys' old home practice field on Forest Lane. Allen counter-charged that the Cowboys were spying on him.

And the feud went on. Club president Tex Schramm, noted for his revolutionary ideas, decided to recommend Allen to Fort Worth television station

WBAP for the preseason broadcasts.

"I think George was a little surprised when I called," Schramm said. "He told me it would be a lot of fun. He said he kept close tabs on the Cowboys."

"He is a good analyst and won't wing it like some of those color guys do."

And Schramm admitted it wouldn't be a bad publicity gimmick.

"It sure got a lot of attention didn't it?" Schramm said.

Allen said when Schramm called him, "I thought he had the wrong number. I liked the idea of doing the Cowboys' games. We had a good rivalry going."

Asked about the spying capers, Allen wouldn't deny he did it.

"Oh, I remember one time we got a call from the league office that a helicopter was circling the Dallas practice field," Allen said. "I asked how high the helicopter was and they said it was 3,000 feet, which would be too high to shoot film. They said the pilot had a Santa Claus outfit on. I had to laugh at that one."

Allen said, "We all tried to use a little psychology when we played each other. I know we got nervous every time a plane or helicopter came over. One time we chased a guy out of a tree near our practice field because we thought he was from Dallas."

Allen showed up at a Landry press conference this week and told Landry: "I never expected to be here. This is another first."

Landry quipped: "I'll have to be careful with my answers. I'll have to treat George like the rest of the media."

Allen will be the color analyst for the Aug. 6 preseason game in San Diego, the Aug. 13 game at the Los Angeles Raiders, and the Aug. 27 game in Texas Stadium against Houston.

Green Bay signs top draft choice

By The Associated Press

On a day when the Green Bay Packers finally signed their top draft choice, they also lost one of their top players.

While bringing No. 1 pick Sterling Sharpe into the fold Friday, the Packers also revealed they had lost defensive end Alphonso Carreker for at least a month with stretched knee ligaments.

"You hate to lose a player, and a guy of that caliber is going to have a degree of an impact," defensive line coach Greg Blache said.

The 6-foot-6, 270-pound Carreker, a starter the last two seasons, injured his right knee during drills Friday morning. The injury will not require surgery, but the knee must be immobilized for between four to five weeks, a Packers spokesman said.

Physicals set

Freshmen and seventh grade boys and girls, who plan to play sports during the 1988-89 Pampa school year, must have their physicals before school starts.

Physicals will be given at the high school fieldhouse with the following schedule: ninth-grade girls and seventh-grade girls, Thursday, Aug. 4, 1 p.m.; ninth-grade boys and seventh-grade boys, Thursday, Aug. 11, 1 p.m.

New students who did not participate in athletics last year, and who are in the eighth, tenth, eleventh or twelfth grades and plan on participating this year, can get their physicals during one of the above-scheduled dates.

If more information is needed, call Albert Nichols at 665-5491, Dick Dunham at 669-6722, 665-2921, 665-6758 or the athletic office at 669-6722.

Midland ends losing streak

Midland exploded for four runs in the eighth to beat Shreveport 9-6 and end a 5-game losing streak in the Texas League.

In other league games Friday night, Wichita beat Arkansas 3-2, San Antonio beat Jackson 9-2 and El Paso beat Tulsa 3-1.

Tom Alfredson was the hero for Midland with 5 RBI, including a first inning grand slam. Alfredson's double in the eighth scored the tying run. The Angels scored what proved to be the winning run on an error by Angel Escobar.

Marty Reed, 4-1, allowed only one hit in three innings of relief for the win. Randy McCament

BLUEGRASS MUSIC
FINGER PICKING GOOD

Last weekend, the quiet, peaceful countryside surrounding the Old Mobeetie Jail Museum came to life with music as about 3,000 country and bluegrass music lovers converged on this small Panhandle community east of Pampa for the eighth annual Bluegrass and Ole Tyme Music Festival.

The pickin' and fiddlin' began last Friday, July 22 and ended Sunday morning, July 24, concluding three days of some of the hottest bluegrass music anywhere to be found. Ranging from smooth, tight harmonies of the gospel vocal groups to the lightning-fast precision of the banjo and guitar pickers, each band took the stage to perform their own unique brand of bluegrass music.

Some of the bands performing were Jack Selby Family,

Southern Express, Knee Deep In Bluegrass, Sunrise, Top of Texas Cloggers, The Plainsmen, Now & Then, Herb Mayfield & Friends, Smith Family Gospel, Charlie Hutchinson & Kiwi & Bill Murry, Burk Brothers & Sherman, West Texas Ranch Hands and the Tri-State Bluegrass Express, to name a few.

As Sunday's activities wound things down and the crowd began to pack up their tents, lawn chairs and fiddles, maybe one could hear the strains of "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" echoing in the distance as the trail of cars, trucks and trailers rambled homeward. Although these music lovers are diverse in their backgrounds and occupations, one thing brings this fraternity back to Old Mobeetie year after year — bluegrass.

Carolyn Selby of Pampa steadies a bass fiddle before while waiting to perform with her family.

'TIS BETTER TO GIVE
Before all the wedding planning subsides and the big day is upon you, be sure to remember those all-important gifts for your wedding attendants. Often brides who leave it to the last minute wind up with uninspired gifts they later regret. Here are some tips for thoughtful gift-giving.

Jewelry is traditional and always welcome; engravable items with your wedding date are a cherished touch that call for advance planning.

A combination gift and memento can be a picture and picture frame. Arrange with your photographer (or friend) to take instant pictures of the wedding party, but the frames ahead of time; put them in decorative boxes with glittery elastic ties, and they can be assembled in time to give to your attendants at an appropriate moment during the reception.

Personal gifts that you can buy include indulgent containers of bubble-bath, or cologne in decorative purse-size flasks.

4-H'ers to compete in state fashion show

Seventeen Gray County 4-H'ers made a superior showing at the District 4-H Fashion Show contest held July 25 in Borger, according to Gray County Extension Agent Donna Brauchi.

Four of the Gray County 4-H'ers earned a chance to compete in the State 4-H Fashion Show, Aug. 22-23 in Corpus Christi.

Heather Kludt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fran Kludt, won top honors in the senior construction non-tailored daywear category. Her entry was a powder blue cotton broadcloth dress featuring pin tucking, entredeaux and lace on the bodice and sleeves and diamond pintucked accents with entredeaux and lace forming the shirt hemline. In addition, she was awarded the prize for being judged the "Best Cotton" entry.

Becky Reed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe VanZandt, earned top honors in the senior construction tailored daywear category. She created a 100 percent wool three-piece ensemble featuring a short, loose-fitting coat with shawl collar, a plaid challis skirt and a wool tissue crepe blouse with soutache braid accents down the front band. The "Best Wool" prize this year was awarded to Reed for her entry.

Stacie McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee McDonald, earned her third trip to the State Fashion Show this year in the senior construction evening wear category. She constructed a shorter length body-hugging formal of black sequins with white glitter organza forming a sleeve and a slanted bottom ruffle.

In the senior buying division, Jeffrey Lane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Lane, walked away with the top prize in the tailored daywear division. Lane used his consumer skills to purchase and model a gray wool suit and white button-down collar shirt. He also earned the "Best Model" award in the senior division.

Other participants placing in the top four in their respective categories included Sherri McDonald, senior buying—evening wear; Kirk McDonald, intermediate dressy daywear; David Kludt, junior buying; and Sheila Sanders, junior specialty wear. Heidi Phetteplace was also awarded the "Best Wool" prize in the intermediate division.

Rounding out Gray County's participants were Mary White, senior buying, non-tailored daywear; Tamara Lane, senior construction, active sportswear/specialty wear; Holly Abbott, intermediate casual daywear; Erin McCracken of McLean, intermediate active playwear; Kara Kay Skaggs, intermediate buying; Heather Hess of McLean, junior dressy daywear; Kimberly Dittberner, junior casual daywear; and Mindy Randall, junior active playwear.

Lewis-Dyer

Mr. and Mrs. William Herschel Lewis of 2215 Beech announce the engagement of their daughter, Amy Denise Lewis of Hereford, to William Lamont Dyer II of San Diego, Calif., son of William Lamont Dyer Sr. of New Port-Richey, Fla., and Charlotte Dyer of Greeneville, Tenn.

The wedding is scheduled for Oct. 22 in First United Methodist Church of Pampa.

The bride-elect is a 1980 graduate of Pampa High School and a 1985 graduate of West Texas State University, with a bachelor of science degree in elementary education. She is employed by Hereford Independent School District.

The prospective bridegroom is serving in the U.S. Navy aboard the U.S.S. Truxtun, where he is a fire controlman. He has formerly served in the U.S. Marine Corps for a total of 10 years in military service.

Married woman takes advantage of widower's loneliness

DEAR ABBY: I am going to tell you a story you may not believe, but it's true. I am 80 years old, but feel and look like 60. My wife died a year ago after a nine-year illness. We had no sex during her illness.

After she died, I couldn't eat or sleep, and I lost 14 pounds in two weeks. After being married for more than 50 years, I couldn't live alone. My friends took me to a singles club where I met this wonderful 65-year-old lady. On our second date I took her to my apartment where we had wonderful sex. I thought I was impotent, but I satisfied her anyway.

We saw each other for several months, then I told her I was going to the unveiling of my wife's headstone, which is a Jewish custom. She said, "I didn't know you were Jewish." The next week she said she couldn't see me anymore because she was going with another man. Then she called a week later wanting to see me again. The next few weeks we had a better time than ever.

Dear Abby

She has been married twice. Both husbands were drunkards. She's still living with her second husband because he pays the rent and buys the groceries, but she says she has no respect for him. Her other boyfriend is also a drunkard. In spite of all this, I love her and am getting jealous and sick over this. Can you help me?

BROKENHEARTED IN N.Y.
DEAR BROKENHEARTED: Not unless you help yourself. Find a therapist. (Call the local office of Jewish Family Services.) You need to discuss this with an understanding professional. It appears that this "wonderful" lady took advantage of your loneliness, grief and vulnerability. Examine the motives of a married woman who goes to a singles club, yet is living with a drunkard for whom she has no respect but tolerates him because he pays the rent and buys the groceries. I think you deserve better, don't you?

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old woman who has been divorced for five years. (No children. It was a short marriage.)

Not to brag, but I am a very attractive woman and I've never had a problem getting dates. I have another problem, however. I have broken a lot of hearts. Whenever I meet a man, I work very hard to make him fall in love with me. And when he does, I lose all interest in him. This has happened to me many times, and I am not proud of it, but I can't seem to help myself. I don't want to hurt any more men, but neither do I want to depend on an electric blanket to keep me warm for the rest of my life. Help me, Abby.

ALABAMA HEARTBREAKER

DEAR HEARTBREAKER:

You're like the sportswoman who doesn't eat fish but loves to catch them. You're guilty of a more serious crime than just fishing for the sport of it — you are toying with human hearts.

Get on the couch (alone) and ask an analyst why you work so hard to get something you don't really want. You will learn a great deal about yourself, mature in the process, and will also get over the need to hurt men.

Club News

Altrusa Club
Altrusa Club of Pampa met at 7 p.m. July 25 in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

Daisy Bennett, president, opened the meeting with the Altrusa Grace and the Pledge of Allegiance. She mentioned the district conference, Oct. 21-23 at Lufkin, which will be attended by Stella T.J. Nyham of Dublin, Ireland, president of Altrusa International.

Guests at the Pampa meeting were Ellen Smith and Pam Dickerman.

Lib Jones gave the Altrusa Accent on "How to Sponsor a New Member in 10 Easy Steps."

Glyndene Shelton and Lynda Queen gave the program on "Tryouts," concerning the active participation of each member and ideas for seeking new members.

Shelton and Queen were also hostesses for the meeting, assisted by Virginia Wilkerson, greeter.

The next meeting will be at noon Aug. 8 in Coronado Inn.

4-H promotes citizenship

DATES
Aug. 5 — 9 a.m., 4-H County Camp, Central Park, Pampa.

4-H'ERS LEARN GOOD CITIZENSHIP

Citizenship means many things to many people and is hard to pin down. It is something like trying to define happiness.

The 4-H program, however, can help youths learn what citizenship is all about.

For some people, citizenship means participating in government, holding an office, campaigning and voting. For others, it is patriotism, defending the country, displaying the flag and singing the national anthem.

Citizenship education through 4-H provides for three-fold learning:

— Understanding: Using our heads for clearer thinking, getting information and understanding issues.

— Attitudes: Using our hearts to appreciate our rights and feel our responsibilities.

— Skills: Using our hands and healthy bodies and minds to put into practice what we understand and feel we should do.

young American with enough love, courage and sense of direction to rise to the challenge of good citizenship. The 4-H program can help young Americans do just that.

A community is built by close relations among citizens. The individual good of every citizen depends upon the harmonious working of all the community. The 4-H club is a functioning group that promotes community activity.

4-H'ers see themselves as highly individual but, at the same time, as responsible citizens using organized action to improve this living environment.

Citizenship education through 4-H provides for three-fold learning:

— Understanding: Using our heads for clearer thinking, getting information and understanding issues.

— Attitudes: Using our hearts to appreciate our rights and feel our responsibilities.

— Skills: Using our hands and healthy bodies and minds to put into practice what we understand and feel we should do.

Through 4-H, youths can learn to become more active citizens working toward a better America.

Residents entertain family, friends; go on vacation trips

Trips, out-of-town guests, a class reunion, bits of info on friends and neighbors all fit together to fill last week's calendar.

The class of 1978 held its 10th year reunion last weekend, with Kathy Cudney Black serving as general chairman. Assisting were Lynn Esson Ferrell, Cheryl Green Couts, Melody Scarbrough Baker, Kim Smith Lancaster, Bonnie Feese Need (dance decorations — beautiful! — green and gold balloons and streamers), Debbie Eggleston Dixon, Rhonda Fath Rains, Patti Elliott Williams, Kim Sims Hopkins, Kathy Brown Bradley and Barry Hedrick.

On the agenda were registration at Pampa Community Building, a family picnic in Central Park, class picture followed by a dance at M.K. Brown Auditorium. More than 450 people — 192 classmates and families — attended.

At the pre-party at the Club Biarritz on Friday night, 75 people attended. Good response?

Awards were given: most changed male — Chris Coffman; most changed female — Deanna Davis Perkins; least changed male — Bobby Burns; least changed female, Martha Skoog Weyandt; traveled farthest — Tracy Rice Magnus from West Germany; having oldest child — Brenda Smith London; having youngest child — Cecelia DeWitt Henley; most children — Terri Harris Peavy; married longest — Diane Richardson Crawford; most newly wed — John Grady; most degrees — Sam Gilbert.

Karlett Whaley Baker and her mother, Lois Whaley, hosted a dinner and a "diaper bag shower" on Saturday evening for nine classmates and husbands. All have remained special friends since high school. Shower honorees were Lynn Esson Ferrell, Linda Bowman Carey, Kim Sims Hopkins, Traci Balcom Schwerdtfeger. Other guests were Melody Scarbrough Baker, Kathy Cudney Black, Deanna Davis Perkins, Ann Carmichael and Tracy Rice Magnus.

Fond goodbyes were exchanged Sunday morning.

Newsmakers

Bill Nidiffer
NORMAN, Okla. — Bill Nidiffer, son of Bill and Bernita Nidiffer of Clarendon, is participating in the University of Oklahoma summer theater program which will be featured in Santa Fe, N.M. Aug. 2-14.

The Southwest Repertory Theater at Santa Fe will feature plays, cast, crew and sets from the OU School of Drama's four-week season which ended July 23 in Norman. The New Mexico Repertory Theater, directed by Andrew Shea, is cooperating in the venture, which will utilize the NMR's vacant theater near the Plaza.

The OU company will present Pump Boys and Dinettes, a country and western musical, Aug. 2, 6 and 11; The Rainmaker by N. Richard Nash, Aug. 3, 7 and 12; Bedroom Farce by Alan Ayckbourn, Aug. 4, 9 and 13; and The Octette Bridge Club by P.J. Barry, Aug. 5, 10 and 14. Performances will be at 8 p.m. in the New Mexico Repertory Theater, 217 Johnson. For more information, call (505) 986-1336.

Nidiffer is a shop assistant for the productions. He is a senior theater major and a graduate of Aurora, Colo. High School.

Norma and Frank Slagle entertained family and friends with a western party — red bandannas and cactus for decorations, western menu.

Attention, family and friends of Viola Coffee of White Deer! Hosting a birthday reception for her today from 2 to 5 p.m. are her sons and wives: Doug and Nancy Coffee, Don (Rocky) and Norma Coffee, and Ron and Pat Coffee.

Oh, my! How slim and trim girls at Margie Gray's office in the Courthouse look! They are all on a health kick, eating the proper food for good nutrition, walking and exercising. Keep up the good work, girls!

Brad Wolcott, a guest last weekend in the home of Kaye and Jim Presley, enjoyed meeting and greeting friends around town. Finishing his first year at Holy Cross Seminary of Notre Dame, Brad is spending the summer with his parents, Judy and John Wolcott, in Muskogee, Okla.

Don't be surprised to see ROLAND "Buck" Williams with Joyce shopping for a small rifle, rod and reel, western hat and boots. Well, isn't that what you would expect of the game warden with a brand-new grandson?

The wee one was named Devan ROLAND Shults by his parents, Velda and Kurt, who showed him off at Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ last Sunday when he was only three days old.

Peeking at Pampa

By Katie

Congratulations to the ecstatic family!

A warm Pampa "Welcome!!!" to Dr. Anna Harral, who begins her practice in obstetrics/gynecology in Pampa bright and early tomorrow morning. Anne and her husband, Texas Ranger Tommy Ratliff, recently moved to Pampa from Lubbock. It makes sense that Dr. Moss Hampton is plenty pleased to have a new associate.

Betty Stokes so enjoyed her work as a teacher's aide in Pampa schools that she went back to school, earned her degree, did her student teaching at Lamar Elementary School under the watchful and efficient supervision of Betty Boynton. When school starts, she will be Lamar's only new teacher. Congratulations, Betty!

New teacher's aides at Lamar will be Linda Baldrige — reading; Connie Diaz and Jan Gibson — self-contained resource aids. Jo Sikes has been reassigned as a library aide. Tim Powers is principal. Emily White has been appointed head of cafeteria services for all schools. Member of the Top of Texas Revue, 20 singers and entertainers, have resumed meeting each Tuesday and Thursday evening at M.K. Brown Auditorium with a target of singing at Chautauqua on Labor Day weekend. Danny Parkerson is director of the group.

Friends and relatives hosted a bash of a birthday party last night at McLean to honor Lush Rogers on his 90th birthday. Well-wishers by the dozens enjoyed visiting while eating homemade ice cream and cake. Congratulations, Lush, on your big nine-0 milestone birthday!

Dr. ViJay and Shanta Mohan, Salil, Sameer and Sarita vacationed in New York City. After driving in New York City, ViJay could no doubt qualify as a speed racer in the Indy 500.

Elmo and Ruth Thompson vacationed in — er, uh, California (?)

Brenda and Jack Malone enjoyed a well-deserved long weekend in Red River, N.M. Molly and Jimmy Goodwin visited Molly's mother, Dona Cornutt.

Janice and Tim Powers, Zane and Janelle vacationed in Alabama and Tennessee. They reported the Mississippi River to be extremely low, an impressive sight.

Danny Parkerson served as judge of the Little Miss National pageant last Saturday and Sunday in Norman, Okla.

Bill Dial of Roanoke visited his sister, Mary McCrary.

Wanda and Jack Mitchell enjoyed a weekend visit with their daughters, Molly of Webster and Susan of Dallas.

Mary Gutierrez of Los Angeles visited Maria and Dexter Hacker.

House guests of Nelda and Phil Savage were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carol Stepp of Eden, and Melony and Mike Richardson of Van Court.

Jimmie Jordan and her granddaughter, Gay Lynn Smith, are having all kinds of fun with Jimmie's two great-granddaughters, Jill Ann and Jami Porche of Salt Lake City, Utah. During their three-and-a-half-week stay, the agenda includes swimming, bowling, birthday parties, a visit to Pampa Sheltered Workshop and a trip to Carlsbad, N.M. with their grandparents, Sue and Kelly Jones.

Jeremy Epperson of Lindale is visiting his grandparents, Betty and W.C. Epperson. It's good to see W.C. up and about after recent bypass surgery.

Mavis and Bill Freudenrich took a slightly delayed honeymoon to parts of New Mexico and Colorado.

Becky Buzzard and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bryant, enjoyed a week's vacation in Florida.

Lynda Queen, public relations coordinator for Pampa public schools, spent last week attending the annual convention of the National School Public Relations Association in New Orleans. Lynda has again received prestigious recognition by being asked to serve as judge of high school newspapers in international competition by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, New York City, an offshoot of Columbia University. Lynda deserves a pat on the back for the accomplishments of her own journalism students.

See you next week.

The Point Is Pets
by Ron Hendrick, D.V.M.

Q: My dog continually eats grass. Is this unusual, and is it dangerous?
A: Dogs and cats are carnivorous, by nature. That means, the bulk of their diet should be meat, or food made from meat. When they eat grass, it occasionally means they are needing a fresh source of fiber, or vitamin C. However, when it is a frequent occurrence, it can mean there are other problems at hand. Dogs and cats often eat grass (and other rough objects) in an effort to make themselves vomit. They also do this when they have tonsillitis, or a "sore throat". This past week we did surgery on a large dog who had been eating grass for quite a while, as his stomach was completely full of it. Complications arising from this prevented him from recovering and, unfortunately, he died. The whole point of this is to point out that any change in eating habits should alert you to the fact that all is not well with your pet. At the very least, give your veterinarian a call and ask his opinion. It could save your dog's life.

We will be giving a FREE Prescription Flea/tick collar with every bath & dip during the month of August. Our First-of-the-Month 25% discount of vaccinations and Spays/castrations, will be August 1-6. Checking the charts

KOMX Morning Personality

It has become a trivia question: Whatever happened to Buck Owens?

For years his red, white and blue guitar and Bakersfield sound pretty well epitomized what country music was about. Then ... nothing.

To start at the end and work back, Buck is back!

Owens is currently featured in a duet with Dwight Yoakum called "Streets of Bakersfield." The song was debuted on the Academy of Country Music Awards last spring. It features two generations of the Bakersfield sound and is tearing up the request lines around the nation.

The song resulted from Yoakum's much publicized praises of Owens as the father of modern country music. Then, when Yoakum recorded "Little Ways" on his second album, it was an overt call for a return to Owens' individual sound.

Close to 200 people called FM 100 when the song was first released and asked, "When will you play the new Buck Owens song?"

To have Owens now featured on a Yoakum single is the icing on the "Little Ways" cake. It has also spawned a wave of interest over Buck's current doin's.

Originally Buck was perceived much the same way Yoakum is today: a young trouble maker whose style fits perfectly in the country venue and yet doesn't fit at all.

Owens was the first to add a strong drum beat to his sound. And, strange as it seems today, when the Beatles expressed their love for Owens' music back in the early 1960s, it created an outrage. Country fans accused Owens of selling out to the hoodlums from across the ocean.

Owens was one of the first country stars to publicly say that good music should not be bounded by categories. Today "Tail Dark Stranger" sounds as western as a tumbleweed bumping a cactus. In the Owens heyday, it sounded a little too pop for many country fans.

The rift between Owens and mainline country fans became so deep that he went as far as to take out full-page ads in Music City News swearing his devotion to country music.

Today we might ask how anyone could question Buck Owens being "true country." Maybe 10 or 15 years from now we'll ask the same thing about "questionable" talents such as Exile and Eddie Rabbitt.

From "I've Got a Tiger by the Tail" to "Act Naturally" and "The World Famous Holiday Inn," Owens literally owned the country charts for the better part of the '60s. Even such rock and rollers as Creedence Clearwater Revival paid homage to the Bakersfield Boy. In "Lookin' Out My Back Door" John Fogerty sings of "listenin' to Buck Owens, doo doo doo lookin' out my back door."

Besides being an innovator of style, Owens was also a masterful songwriter, having tunes that were covered by such diverse acts as Ray Charles, Dean Martin and the Fab Four.

However, after a decade and a half of being part of the country music menagerie, Owens gave up recording for the host job on Hee Haw. Unfortunately, this is the Buck Owens most people remember. While he certainly brightened the show's often silly script, Hee Haw was definitely not his best work.

Gone were the days of the Bakersfield rebel ... here was the totally inoffensive host of TV's most popular syndicated show.

When Buck Owens left Hee Haw earlier this decade, it was to give full time to his growing media empire. Already Owens owns a chain of radio stations and newspapers that span from California to Arizona. KNIX FM Phoenix, an Owens-owned station, won Station of the Year honors from the Academy of Country Music last year.

Talking with Owens' Bakersfield staff, you sense immediately that he is not ready to take up recording full-time again.

Why should he? He's paid his dues, won every award, been to the top and back down. And yet so many fans wish he would "come back." Or at least reissue the old albums again.

For most fans, a reissuance would be the only way they could get one of Buck Owens' recordings. Several years ago Capitol records quit releasing Owens' material and the masters have been returned to vaults in his Bakersfield offices.

Perhaps the new single will spark enough interest to warrant a return printing for certain of Owens' works.

We can hope so, anyway.

Actor was ready to step into stage role

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Even before he saw the play, Bruce Weitz had made up his mind to step into Frankie and Johnny in the Clair de Lune, a two-character romantic comedy that suggests people over 40 can fall in love.

In the youth-oriented entertainment industry, that's a novel idea, but the play has turned out to be one of the biggest hits of the 1987-88 off-Broadway theater season. Now famous and not-so-famous film actors and actresses of a certain age are trekking to the Westside Arts Theater to size it up as a stage or screen possibility.

Weitz savors the role as a terrific theatrical opportunity.

"What attracted me to the play was the way it was written," says the 45-year-old actor, a wiry, intense performer. "All I saw was good writing. Besides, I wanted to do something in New York."

Frankie and Johnny was written by veteran playwright Terrence McNally, author of Bad Habits, The Ritz and It's Only a Play.

The story concerns two employees of a Manhattan greasy spoon — Frankie, played by Carol Kane of television's Taxi, and Johnny, played by Weitz. Frankie, a waitress, brings Johnny, a short-order cook, back to her one-room tenement apartment. During a long night, the two blue-collar lovers discover they have something that could be the start of a relationship.

When the show opened last October, it starred Kathy Bates and Kenneth Welsh. They departed in May, and Kane and Weitz replaced them.

For Weitz, Frankie and Johnny was a big step — at least psychologically. Although a theater veteran, he hadn't been on stage in eight years. Until last spring, television was his main concern, particularly Hill Street Blues where he had a seven-season run and earned an Emmy Award for his off-beat portrayal of detective Mick Belker.

"Coming back to the stage was hard on the central nervous system, but it was not difficult physically," Weitz says. "The approach to the theater is the same as it is to film."

"The difference is that in film most of it is from here up," adds Weitz, pointing to his head. "So you don't have to use your body quite as much. On stage, you have to use the whole instrument. Body language is important on stage. Otherwise, the techniques are the same. You just have to be a little bigger and a little louder on stage."

Audiences expecting to see another off-the-wall Belker on stage in Frankie and Johnny are in for a jolt. Johnny is a bit of a romantic, a man who quotes — and misquotes — Shakespeare and who's not afraid to make a permanent commitment, unlike the skittish Belker.

Weitz, born and raised in Norwalk, Conn., says none of his career was planned.

"I just knew that when I graduated from college, I wanted to work in a regional theater for a little while," he says. "That was all. The rest just happened."

"A little while" turned into nearly nine years, but they were years where he honed his craft doing Shakespeare, Shaw and many other playwrights in between. His first job after graduating from Carnegie Tech, now Carnegie Mellon, in Pittsburgh was at the Long Wharf Theater in Connecticut. He spent a year there, then several more at the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis and finally four years at Arena Stage in Washington.

"Those jobs came from people seeing me work," Weitz says. He eventually moved to New York and landed roles in several Broadway plays including Norman, Is That You? and The Basic Training of Pavlo Hummel.

The quest for better-paying jobs took Weitz to Los Angeles and eventually to Hill Street Blues.

"My preference was the stage but I wasn't making enough money, even though I was working constantly in New York," he says.

The character of Belker stood out in the large, repertory-size cast on Hill Street Blues. Whether that was good or bad, Weitz isn't sure.

"If people remember me at all, they'll remember me from Hill Street Blues," he says. "I have no control over that. So I don't even think about it."

'All I saw was good writing. Besides, I wanted to do something in New York.'

JOHN CHEEVER: A Biography. By Scott Donaldson. Random House. 416 Pages. $22.50.

John Cheever died in 1982, full in honors and touched by moderate riches. They were late in coming to a masterful storyteller and a writer of immaculate prose. To some influential critics, Cheever was essentially a New Yorker writer and therefore viewed as, as a sophisticate without substance.

Suspensions in the literary intelligentsia were deepened by Cheever's indifference to politics, issues, social movements and ideologies. He was best known as the chronicler of the upper middle class, in hot pursuit of happiness among the greenery, swimming pools and tidy homes of the suburbs.

Cheever, however, managed to look penetratingly into the untidy psyches, seldom judgmental but never betrayed into moral nihilism. In splendid short stories and, not quite so effectively, in several novels he traversed what became Cheever country. Not until his novel, Falconer (1977), did he break away, with a prison setting and a tale of fratricide and homosexual love.

Though straying (one of his affairs was with the actress Hope Lange), he stayed married for life to his formidable, intelligent and gifted wife, a strangely jumbled marriage of love, aloofness and mutual criticism. Cheever was bisexual most of his life and wholly male-oriented in his later years, though perhaps never wholly at ease with his preference. And he bore the burden of alcoholism, from which he recovered only after a sojourn in the depths.

Scott Donaldson tells this far from simple story crisply and interestingly, with sympathy and understanding but without glossing over Cheever's less admirable traits, and he manages to resist the considerable temptation to off-the-cuff psychoanalyzing.

Donaldson's interweaving of life and art is entirely plausible and Cheever, with all his complex interplay of light and darkness, emerges as a person, not merely a personality. Donaldson writes lucidly and, unlike so many American biographers of today, spares us the usual mountain of research minutiae.

Readers will feel justice has been done. And Cheever himself might have felt that way.

Hey, ma, here comes those aliens again

By MAX RIZLEY JR.
Galveston Daily News

CLEAR LAKE CITY (AP) — It's been a while — almost seven years, in fact — since the last rash of flying object sightings around Galveston. That was in October 1981, when the big orange light seen hovering over the isle made news nationwide.

But if the UFOs do come back, John Schuessler and his MUFON volunteers will be ready.

MUFON is short for Mutual UFO Network, a non-profit organization that investigates claims of UFO sightings. Their members include engineers, pilots and astronomers; their methods are scientific and methodical. These are not people you'll find sitting on mountaintops in aluminum-foil hats, talking to Martians.

As a matter of fact, you'll more than likely find Schuessler, MUFON's deputy director for administration, sitting in the office that takes up much of his home's second floor, "talking" to a personal computer.

He and about 50 people cover the Galveston-Houston area, interviewing witnesses of sightings, taking down descriptions of what they see, and calling area airports, military bases and the Goodyear blimp base to make sure they aren't flying anything unusual.

Schuessler and his MUFON colleagues pore over the data, looking for the high-value stuff — multiple-witness sightings, sightings involving animal reactions or interference with electrical equipment, things beyond a vague "light in the sky."

Some 90 percent of UFO sightings turn out to be identifiable, Schuessler said. "It's generally re-entry debris (the burning remains of old satellites falling back to Earth) or aircraft in unusual positions," he said. That's pretty easy to track down — it just takes time.

It's that 10 percent of sightings that remain unidentified that keep this sober, silver-haired space operations engineer fascinated with his hobby.

"My personal interest is in cases that are more than just a light in the sky," he said. "I like the cases where there are a number of witnesses, and — I hate to say it — where people are injured. People won't do that to themselves."

Injuries? Oh, yes, Schuessler said. Some people who have been close to a UFO suffer burn injuries; severity varying with proximity. The injuries usually appear to be radiation burns — not the kind one would get from exposure to a radioactive substance, he explained, but rather the sort of injury a high-energy source might cause.

"Something has to cause an injury," he said, explaining the value of such incidents. "If you can get enough data, you can model a range of things that might have caused it. It begins to tell you a little bit about the nature of the object."

Other valuable sightings are those seen by several independent witnesses — such as Galveston's 1981 visitation, which was seen by several policemen as well as civilians and is thus especially valuable.

"A policeman is a very good reporter," Schuessler explained. "He puts it in a distinct, police report terms — just the facts, as they say."

The UFO scene, at least in Galveston County, is quiet now, although Schuessler says there has been a worldwide upswing in sightings last year. In fact, there was one tumbling light in the sky over Red Bluff Road in Pasadena April 22.

by bernice bede osol

It's important in the year ahead that you raise your level of expectations and hopes. Even if you fall short of your mark, you will still be able to tuck substantial victories under your belt.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) When dealing with others today, strive to be tolerant because they too have needs and expectations. Self-centered behavior will leave a poor impression. Major changes are ahead for Leo in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't let an old grievance have a negative affect on your involvement with another today. This issue has not been properly resolved, and it must not be permitted to surface.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be realistic regarding your financial expectations. Until you have the funds you anticipate in the bank, don't make new monetary commitments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to keep your priorities in order today. If your aims overlap, the possibilities of succeeding in your endeavors could diminish considerably.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Unfortunately, the people you are likely to listen to today might be the ones with all the wrong answers. Bear in mind that facts and convincing phrases are not synonymous.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to avoid involvements with an individual who always strive to prove he or she is superior to you. You'll have no patience for this person's shenanigans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It could prove unwise at this time to rely too heavily on recently acquired allies. These associations need more firming up before putting them to the test.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be very sensible about health habits today. If you know mustard, onions and pickles always upset your stomach, eat your hamburger plain.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In order to expedite matters you may be inclined to take gambles or chances that you usually avoid. It's best to go back to your secure pattern.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Having specific objectives is an effective, methodical way to operate. However, today you might give yourself so much to do you could create a log jam.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't flaunt your knowledge if involved in a conversation with a person who isn't as bright as you. Others will not side with you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Before you take your pen out to write a check today, make sure you're not juggling your finances in a way that could cause you complications further down the line.

Dairy farmers feeding chocolate to their cows

YORK, Pa. (AP)—To a typical teen-ager with a little money, a pound or two of chocolate to nibble each week wouldn't be out of the question.

But that's nothing compared with the amount of chocolate the dairy cows in Ralph McGregor's herd eat each week on a farm in northeastern York County. His 240 milking cows take in between 3 and 4 tons of KitKats and Reese's Pieces a week, an average of more than 30 pounds per animal.

McGregor has been feeding his herd salvage chocolate — candy "mistakes" that cannot be sold to the public — from Hershey Foods Corp. in Hershey for about eight years, and he's not the only farmer following the feeding regimen.

According to William Flickinger, a livestock nutritionist from East Berlin who operates the Cal-Pen Nutrition Service, at least 60 other dairy farmers in Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey also are feeding chocolate to their milk cows.

Flickinger, who has 20 years' experience in livestock nutrition, said feeding candy to livestock started in California more than two decades ago.

"This is nothing new, except in these parts. I started to try it with the farmers I work with after I moved back to York County in 1978," he said.

"Tests have shown that cows that eat chocolate produce milk higher in butterfat," he said. "The higher the butterfat content, the more the farmer is paid for his milk. That's what this is all about: farmers making the highest margin of profit possible. We're not feeding cows chocolate just to be doing something different. It works."

The standard for whole milk is Peanut program aims at keeping higher standard

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government's peanut program restricts production and causes "somewhat higher retail prices," says an Agriculture Department economist.

But the program also helps provide "a steady, high-quality supply of peanuts for consumers" through a two-tiered price support system, says Jim Schaub of the department's Economic Research Service.

The two-tier system is scheduled to continue at least through the 1990 peanut marketing year. It involves a support rate for peanuts grown under a national quota, and a much lower rate for peanuts grown in addition to the quota.

Quota peanuts are sold for domestic food and related uses, while the "additional" peanuts are used for export or crushing into oil and meal.

Schaub, whose analysis is in the current National Food Review, said net outlays by the department's Commodity Credit Corp. averaged $10 million annually between 1982 and 1986, well below the average of $30 million during the 1960s and the $61 million of the 1970s.

"The current program is expected to keep costs to U.S. taxpayers to a minimum because the program is designed for quota production to equal domestic food and related demand," he said.

However, Schaub acknowledged that the peanut program could cost substantially more if the national marketing quota greatly exceeded what processors want to buy at the quota rate. Should that happen, the government would wind up buying the unwanted peanuts and hold them as surplus.

The 1988 price support, or loan rate, is $615.27 per ton for peanuts grown within a farmer's quota. The support for additional peanuts is $149.75 per ton.

Farmers put their crop in storage arranged by grower associations. The peanuts then are pooled and controlled by the associations and the CCC. If the association sells the peanuts at a profit, growers participating in that pool are eligible for dividend payments.

If the peanuts cannot be sold on the market at the quota price, the CCC is obligated to buy them at the quota rate.

Schaub said the peanut program does raise consumer prices and lower supplies by supporting farmers' prices and setting quota.

"We do know that the break-even price for peanuts — the longrun average price needed for growers to recover all production costs — was about $420 (per ton) in 1986," he said.

3.5 percent butterfat. For every tenth of a percentage over that standard, a farmer is paid an additional $1.28 per 100 gallons of milk.

The sweet feed also has another advantage: It allows McGregor to feed his herd a higher quality diet at a greatly reduced cost.

"That reflects in the profit margin, too," he said.

McGregor talks in terms of total mixed ration, or TMR.

"A lot of dairy farmers are living in the past," he said. "They feed their herds grain one day, hay the next day, silage the next day and let them graze in the pasture the following day. That's fine, but it's not a modern feeding concept."

The TMR for the McGregor herd is available to the animals 24 hours a day and includes a mixture of hay silage, corn silage, soybean and cottonseed meal, grain (corn, oats and barley chop), vitamins, trace minerals and the chocolate. The chocolate makes up about 10 percent of the dry matter, McGregor said.

McGregor pays about $65 a ton for the chocolate, which "compares to about $105 per ton for corn, which is probably what I'd use in the feed mix if I didn't use chocolate," he said.

That's about $7,000 a year McGregor saves by using chocolate in his feed.

Flickinger describes chocolate as an "energy" product.

"It has good fat content, starches and sugars — about twice the amount of energy of one ear of corn. It's about all you need for energy. Of course, the more energy a cow has the more milk it will produce, because it takes an increased amount of energy for every pound of milk produced."

In addition, Flickinger said, the chocolate doesn't make a cow gain weight and doesn't affect its behavior. There are no hyperactive cows as a result of chocolate consumption.

For the cows' part, they love chocolate just as much as most humans do.

"Put a pile of candy bars out in the pasture," Flickinger said, "and they'd eat themselves to death. They show no restraint when it comes to chocolate."

'HEIFER SYNDROME' — TIME BOMB FOR TROUBLE

Typically, sexually immature heifers have not been considered a factor in the brucellosis problem. But results of studies and a change in U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) regulations are changing that idea and creating some confusion.

In meetings with producers, Texas Animal Health Commission representatives often are asked about the reasoning behind USDA regulations set to be in effect Oct. 1 that will prevent these calves from being moved, regardless of age or vaccination status, unless they are "S" branded or spayed. Spayed heifers may be moved without restrictions, and adult cows will be under the same regulations already in effect.

The new regulations are an outgrowth of U.S. and European studies that reveal heifers born in infected herds can incubate brucellosis, then test positive when they calve or abort during their first — or even second — pregnancy. By this time, the heifer has spread disease throughout the herd. This phenomenon of long incubation has been dubbed "heifer syndrome."

Because no test is available to detect the disease in young, sexually immature heifers who are in a long incubation phase, safeguards are needed to protect herds. Vaccinating the heifers will not protect animals already carrying the disease.

The TAHC has traced infection in a number of herds to heifers that originated from an infected herd, or to heifers purchased from an unknown source.

A June 1988 survey shows that, of 1,080 herds now under quarantine, infection in 66 herds in 43 counties can be traced to heifers. This accounts for more than six percent of the infections.

An earlier report, in June 1987, showed that heifers were the source of infection in 103 herds in 53 counties. This represented 11 percent of the 900 quarantined herds.

Taking action can help prevent "heifer syndrome" problems.

1. Preferably, select only vaccinated heifers and buy them from certified-free herds or from herds with no known history of disease.

2. Keep purchased heifers separate from other herds until they test negative after calving.

3. When keeping replacement heifers from an infected or previously infected herd:

a. vaccinate heifers no later than 6 months. (This will not provide protection, however, if the heifer is already carrying the disease.)

b. keep the replacement heifers in a separate herd after weaning and until they test negative after calving.

PANHANDLE PEST REPORT

CORN: Southwestern corn border moth emergence will likely begin the week of July 25. Soon after moth emergence begins, eggs will become evident on corn. Most eggs will be oviposited on the upper surface of the middle seven leaves — two leaves above the ear leaf and four leaves below the ear leaf. Control is justified when 20 to 25 percent of the plants are infested with eggs or newly hatched larvae.

Spider mite infestations remain quite low. Continue to keep a watchful eye on this pest, for we are at that time of the season when spider mites have the potential for rapid development.

The Section 18 request for Azodrin on corn for spider mite control has been denied by EPA. The Texas Corn Growers Association is appealing the decision.

Western corn rootworm adults have been observed feeding on silk. Infestations of 8 to 10 beetles per plant may cause silk pruning which may result in poor pollination. No current infestation has exceeded an average of 1 per plant.

Light ear infestations by corn earworm have been observed in the Hereford area.

FORAGE AVAILABILITY

The drought in parts of Texas and in many sections of the Central United States has surfaced the need for many producers to find adequate forage to supplement cattle through this short grazing period.

If you need hay for your cattle, or if you have surplus hay for sale, we would like to know so we can help everyone throughout the state have access to forage for their livestock. We will be maintaining a list of producers who have hay for sale at the county Extension Office.

We would like to know if you have hay for sale. A form is available in the county Extension Office if you have hay for sale.

Then each week, please call to let me know if you have hay for sale or if you have sold any hay you have listed.

If you need hay, please call us and we will be able to give you the name and phone number of producers who have hay for sale.

Remember, a new list of people with hay for sale will be developed each week, so keep me informed of your situation. Counties with surplus hay will be listed on a statewide news release that will help bring the buyer and seller together.

Your cooperation is very important to the success of this operation. Please help us and your fellow livestock producers by letting us know weekly what your hay situation is.

Ask about a down payment and we whisper just 3 little words.

"You keep it!"

That makes The Continental very different from other top-quality, full-service retirement communities.

Because the other guys answer with a staggering number. Anywhere from $10,000 to more than $100,000. And they require you to pay before you've spent a single night there.

Frankly, we couldn't sleep if we did that.

So when you retire in The Continental, you keep your hard-earned savings where it belongs.

You pay only a modest security deposit and the first month's rent. No "endowment." No entrance fee or down payment of any kind.

After that, your monthly rent covers your new apartment home as well as services from dining to travel, and activities from dancing to shopping.

Women need to be aware: Heart disease can be 'equal opportunity'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Heart disease is an "equal opportunity" illness and women should be as aware of potential cardiovascular problems as men, warns Dr. Carolyn Corn, cardiologist and assistant professor of medicine at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center here.

Although men are generally associated with heart disease, more women die of heart ailments per year than all forms of cancer combined, numbers that should be taken seriously by women, she says.

Roughly 300,000 women die annually of heart disease compared with 231,000 female cancer victims, according to American Heart Association and American Cancer Society figures.

"I saw a classic case recently when a 41-year-old female patient learned she had extremely high cholesterol," said Corn. "Her reaction was 'It can't happen to me. I'm a woman.' But that's simply not true."

The reason women are generally overlooked in most scientific cardiovascular studies is that most women who die of heart disease are in their 60s or beyond, while many more males are affected in their 40s and 50s, said Dr. Karen Hamilton, cardiologist and assistant professor at the OU Health Sciences Center.

"Being male is only one of several risk factors for heart disease," said Corn. "In mid-life, the death rates in men are three to four times greater than for women, but within 10 years after menopause, the rates tend to equalize."

Women generally are protected from heart attack, strokes and other cardiovascular ailments until menopause, Hamilton points out, because the estrogen they produce tends to increase the beneficial form of cholesterol (HDL) and decrease the harmful form (LDL).

Some studies indicate that women who have had a hysterectomy (in which the ovaries were also removed) and who take an estrogen replacement have a much lower incidence of heart disease than those who don't take estrogen, said Dr. Leann Olansky, endocrinologist and assistant professor at the center.

Only about half of all post-menopausal women take estrogen replacements, however, because estrogen is believed to increase the risk of some forms of cancer, Olansky said.

"Those cancers are not very common, though," she said. "Only 3,000 women a year die of uterine cancer."

Said Hamilton, "Even if estrogen replacements increased your risk of uterine cancer tenfold, your risk of that would be very minute compared to your risk of dying of heart disease."

Post-menopausal women who have a strong family history of cancer are usually the only ones for whom estrogen supplements are not recommended, said Olansky.

"The time to change your lifestyle is when you're 25, not when you have a heart attack," she says.

'Nobel' babies are his pride, joy

By SHARON L. JONES
Associated Press Writer

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — The walls of Dr. Robert K. Graham's relatively ordinary-looking office are lined with the pictures of dozens of babies he says are far from ordinary — the products of the so-called Nobel Prize sperm bank.

"This is our pride and joy and, by God, every one is a gem," said Graham of the children born to mothers inseminated with "superior" sperm provided by his Repository for Germinal Choice.

Graham, 81, a multimillionaire who developed the shatterproof eyeglass lens, is on a mission to save the human species. Superior genes are being lost, he says, because society's smartest don't have enough children while the masses proliferate with zeal.

Graham founded the bank in early 1980 and began collecting the sperm of a select few "outstanding intellects" and giving it to qualified couples, with the goal of bringing into the world potential leaders or great scientists.

The bank claims responsibility for 55 babies, and 18 women are pregnant.

Graham says his program is working, that most of the children develop at a much faster rate than their peers and are judged gifted. Geneticists, however, still find fault, saying the program minimizes women's role in reproduction and exaggerates the likelihood children will inherit all their parents' good genes.

But the proud parents cheer

Graham for bringing them bright children they deserved but couldn't have, usually because the father was infertile.

"I just wanted to have a child," said Adrienne Ramm, a dancer from New York City whose daughter Leandra turned 4 last week. "I believe that the donor sperm was from a man that seemed to be a great human being. We were increasing our chances of having a bright and healthy child."

When Graham opened his repository, critics ranging from feminists to communists and the Roman Catholic church denounced it as a "master race" plan reminiscent of Adolf Hitler. The controversy was fueled by Nobel Prize winner William Shockley's revelation that he was a donor and by Graham's own views.

Shockley, a physicist who invented the junction transistor, believed that certain races were genetically disposed to be intellectually inferior.

Over time, artificial insemination became common, and more radical techniques, like in vitro insemination and gene mapping, took the spotlight in the reproductive industry. To Graham's delight, protestors disappeared from outside his office about 30 miles north of downtown San Diego.

Alexander Capron, a former member of President Reagan's Commission on Bio-ethics, has concerns with the repository, but gratefully notes "it hasn't become a major force in reproduction."

The identities of Graham's donors are withheld from parents and the public. The list includes two Nobelists and an Olympian. All are of European descent or Jewish, and most are California scientists. Graham says he's invited blacks and Asians to donate, but that they've refused.

Donors are declared of good health and genetic ancestry, and the sperm is screened for the AIDS virus.

Applicant parents must show they are married, intelligent, emotionally and financially stable, with a clean physical and mental health history. The mother must be under age 38. About half the applicants are rejected.

When they had Leandra, Adrienne and David Ramm chose a fair-haired science professor of European roots described as loving gardening, skiing and children. For their second child, due next month, they chose the Olympic athlete.

"At first, I did feel inadequate and weird about the idea of using a donor," said Ramm, a computer systems manager who is infertile. "But Adrienne really wanted a baby and that was fine by me. The only tough part is that since Leandra is so incredibly bright she's constantly exploring and challenging and into everything, which can be exhausting."

Graham requires annual reports from parents, but is frustrated that his experiment lacks rigid scientific standards because the donors and parents vary and the children are raised in different environments.

FOUR THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT SECURITY CHECKING

1. It won't nickel-and-dime you to death. Because there's no per-check charge. Ever.
2. There's no service charge if you keep just $200 in your account. And even if you fall below the minimum, the fee's only $4.00.
3. You can get a free Security PULSE card to use in thousands of machines nationwide without ever paying a transaction fee.
4. It just about pays for itself because every dollar in your account earns interest.

So you've been all over town, looking for the best checking account, relax. You just found it.

One Great Territory For One Great Salesperson

We have sales opportunity for "our kind of person". And what's that? A really nice individual who likes people...and more importantly, who is well liked in return...a hard worker concerned with their own and their family's well-being and future...someone with courage and determination who can turn prospects into clients. If you're for us, your earnings should exceed inflation ($30,000 + first year potential income). Our benefits are outstanding. This is a life time opportunity. If management is your goal, it's nice to know that we promote from within our sales organization. So if selling is for you and you would like to be part of a company whose primary interest is your success, please get in touch with me. To arrange a LOCAL, confidential interview, Please
