Rain-laden building collapses

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Rescuers picking through tons of concrete and twisted steel for the victims of a department store collapse today rescued a woman and 2-year-old girl trapped for more than 15 hours and worked to free at least four more people. At least 11 people were killed and 43 injured.

Hundreds of onlookers clapped and cheered as the workers freed the screaming toddler from the rubble where three hours earlier the woman had been rescued.

cue from the debris where they were buried.

Sgt. Dean Poos, a police spokesman, said it could take several hours to free the victims who remain trapped.

"The little boy (who remained trapped) kept crying that he wanted to come out. He was scared and he wanted a little ball and he wanted some refreshments," said fireman William Briggs. "He was also a little scared, which is natural, and he's also afraid of dying."

The three-story La Tienda Amigo, known as Amigo Store, collapsed Thursday afternoon during a storm that dumped more than 2 inches of rain in less than 30 minutes. Some witnesses said as many as 125 people sought shelter inside the downtown building before it crumbled, but Poos said only about 50 had been inside. Authorities gave no figure this morning on how many people were missing.

To reach the trapped woman and two children, rescuers dug a makeshift, 17-foot tunnel, and doctors were able to check their vital signs, said Johnny Economedes, head of one rescue team.

"It's very hard for them. They are in terrible pain, both emotional and physical," he said.

As the second woman was carried to safety and taken to a first aid station across the street, 300 onlookers cheered. Authorities identified her as Maria Lire, 37, of Yucatan, Mexico, but were unable to give her condition.

Brownsville Mayor Ygnacio Garza said: "I think they (the people who are still trapped) have been panicked; they have been afraid. We have had some priests in there talking to them."

"Now that we're to them, we're able to get them through it. I think we have an IV in one or two of them. So I think they're being calmed down now but obviously they want to get out of there and we're making every effort to get them out of there as fast as possible."

Hundreds of rescuers working through the night removed debris with tractors, a crane and finally by hand, fearful of further injuring trapped survivors. Working through the night under portable floodlights, they used dogs and sensitive microphones to hunt for victims.

The store was half a block from the international bridge across the Rio Grande River to Matamoros, Mexico. When the storm began, a large number of Mexican nationals "were running there to get out of the rain. The store was packed," sheriff's Lt. Johnny Castillo said.

A woman sitting in a car in front of the store was among those killed when the roof and walls collapsed.

Rescuers cut through a wall inside a Woolworth's store next door to reach some of those trapped. Linens and clothing blown from the store by high winds were used to wrap the wounds of the injured.

Six bodies had been removed by midnight and two other bodies had been found in the rubble, Economedes said. Authorities said early today three more bodies were discovered, but provided no details.

"They've got two steel beams across them and about 20 or 30 tons of concrete" on them, Economedes said. Authorities fear that dozens of people may still be trapped.

Dr. Jose Carrera of Matamoros identified three of those trapped. See BUILDING, Page 2

School studies proposed budget for $13.1 million

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Pampa Independent School District's administrative staff presented board members with a proposed 1988-89 budget of $13.1 million during a special meeting Thursday at Pampa Middle School library.

"We've been as conservative as we can and at the same time meet the needs and, I think, the expectations of the community," Dr. Harry Griffith, school superintendent told board members. He said he and his staff had invested "hundreds of hours" into planning the budget. "This budget was built from the bottom up," he said.

The $13.1 million budget is to be supported by increased in state revenue and a tax rate of 90.75 cents, a four cent increase over last year's tax rate, but 7.9 cents below the effective tax rate of 98.74 cents.

The proposed budget reflects an increase of about $650,000, which Griffith said "absorbs" the almost $400,000 deficit from fiscal year 1987-88.

"This budget will not have a deficit," he said. "Pampa Independent School District will become once again a budget-balanced district."

Griffith pointed out that the proposed budget not only eliminates deficit spending, but also meets the majority of the final requirements of House Bill 72 and provides materials necessary for a quality education program.

The increased tax rate will help buffer the school district against the eventual loss of state aid in three years, he explained.

Texas Education Agency has agreed to pay PISD $1.87 million in additional state aid over the next two years to compensate the district's loss of tax income following the Celanese plant explosion last November.

State funds will be sent to the district each month on a percentage schedule, Griffith said.

Highlights of the proposed budget include the following:

■ For the first time since 1984, the school district will meet state student teacher ratio requirements for pre-kindergarten through second grade.

■ Each school campus will have an increased amount of instructional travel for students.

■ Computer instruction will be enhanced by purchase of new equipment, building of a special computer lab at Pampa High School, and a half-time instructor to support computer education for elementary schools.

■ More books will be purchased for Pampa High School and Middle School and a full-time library program will be developed at all elementary schools with teaching assistants.

■ A third counselor for Pampa High School will be possible through grant monies, plus continues progress in health service support to the school district.

■ Budget includes the purchase of one school bus, plus purchase of a second bus is being considered by board members.

■ Budget allows for reorganization in the general administration. See SCHOOL, Page 2

High and dry

With rains keeping Pampans scurrying for drier ground Thursday, a cat at a residence in the 1000 block of West Terry Road found the peaceful surroundings of his porch

"throne" a pleasant place to observe the passing pedestrians' activities. Pampa has received nearly 1 inch of rain from the current system.

State's jobless rate dips further

DALLAS (AP) — Slow, steady improvement in the Texas job market pushed the state's unemployment rate down by another 0.3 percent in June, leaving the figure at 6.9 percent — its lowest point since January 1986.

The state's labor force surpassed 8.5 million last month, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today. An estimated 7.9 million people held jobs while another 592,000 were looking for work.

"Over almost two years the numbers have been very slow but very steadily going in the appropriate direction," said Nic Santangelo, a BLS labor market analyst. "I would say this is a decided step toward saying we're improving."

June's rate was 1.7 percent below the level of one year earlier and the best showing since the 6.5 percent recorded by the BLS at the start of 1986.

"We've seen ups and downs every month or every several months, but the long-term trend has been decidedly downward," he said.

The average unemployment rate for the second quarter came to 7.2 percent, marking a full-point improvement from the first three months of 1988. It was the fifth decline in the last six quarters, Santangelo said.

The labor force of 8,518,000 is at its highest point since at least early 1985.

Sharp plans to chart path for students

By SONNY BOHANAN

WHITE DEER — David Sharp has a philosophy of education that cuts through the haze of numbers and quotas right to the heart of learning — discovery and understanding.

In his new position as superintendent of schools at White Deer, Sharp hopes to chart a course which has the well-being of students, their motivation and sense of self worth as its primary focus.

Sharp, who earned a bachelor of science degree and a master's degree in education from Texas Tech University, embarks on his mission in White Deer following two years of service as assistant superintendent of schools in Cuero, a city 90 miles south of Austin.

Before becoming assistant superintendent, Sharp was junior high principal. He moved to Cuero from Abernathy, where he was a high school and elementary school principal. Prior to that he was counselor supervisor of Abernathy schools.

Sharp was accompanied to White Deer by his wife Linda and his daughter Bridget, who will be a sophomore at White Deer High School. His son Michael is attending summer college classes at Victoria Junior College.

Sharp said he was lured away from Cuero by the "good teachers, good students and good parents" in White Deer. "Those are the strengths of this school

Search resumes, but little hope for 149 missing in rig blast

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — Rescue workers in ships and planes today resumed a massive search for 149 workers missing after an explosion blew apart an oil rig, but officials said they had little hope of finding anyone alive.

Seventeen bodies and 64 survivors were pulled out of the North Sea after the blast Wednesday night on the Piper Alpha oil rig 120 miles off Scotland.

The owner, U.S.-based Occidental Petroleum, said the explosion was apparently caused by a gas leak.

Asked whether rescuers had given up hope of finding more survivors after the world's worst oil rig disaster, British Energy Department minister Peter Morrison said: "To be honest, yes. At this stage there is very little hope indeed."

A joint statement issued by Occidental spokesman David Mathys in London and police in Aberdeen this morning said:

"In all, 230 personnel were involved in the incident. This was made up of 227 on Occidental facilities and three in a small rescue boat. Seventeen bodies have been recovered. Total survivors to date are 64, and 149 are unaccounted for."

Mathys said initial confusion had caused discrepancies in the figures earlier.

The three men in the rescue boat, which was on permanent standby, vanished into the flames while trying to rescue oilmen from the rig.

Mathys said American oil expert Red Adair of Houston, Texas, and assistants were to visit the wrecked rig later today at Occidental's request.

He said Adair, who was brought in to cap the first blowout on a North Sea rig in April 1977, was asked "to assist however possible in making the platform safe."

Survivors said that when the platform blew up, at least half of those on the rig were in its accommodation block.

The blast demolished the block and turned the rig into a tower of flame.

Eoin Kerr, communications officer at British Telecom's maritime radio station at Wick on the Scottish coast, told reporters he was in contact with the rig when the blast occurred.

Kerr said the last message he heard was: "We're abandoning the rig. Jesus Christ, we've got to get out of here. There's no more time. We've got to get out." Then the line went dead.

Occidental said 75 percent of the 649-foot-high rig was destroyed.

Some survivors told of having to choose between braving the flames in hope help would come, or plunging 150 feet into an ocean blanketed with burning oil but cold enough to kill.

"It was a case of fry and die or jump and try," said Roy Carey, 45, who jumped.

Rescue pilots said flames were up to 400 feet high.

John Maxwell, 50, who was aboard the semi-submersible rig Tharos alongside the doomed platform, said: "I saw a group of about six or seven men in survival suits on the rig's helicopter pad with flames all around them. They were screaming, shouting and waving for help... Then the whole of the rig was rocked by another huge explosion and a kind of fireball shot across the helipad and all the men on it disappeared."

Others said the rig became so hot that water jetted out from fire-fighting ships simply turned to steam.

A death toll of 166 would make this the world's worst oil rig disaster, surpassing the 123 deaths when the Alexander L. Kielland platform capsized in Norwegian North Sea waters in March 1980.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government promised what it called a deep and far-reaching inquiry into the disaster.

and provides for renovation throughout the district for buildings and grounds.

According to the proposed budget, Pampa ISD's revenues for the coming year will be split almost equally between local taxes, 47.93 percent, and state aid, 49.85 percent. A little more than 2 percent of the budget comes from federal funds.

More than half of the yearly expenditures, 59.39 percent, will go towards instruction service, comprised primarily of teacher salaries. Another 14.49 percent will go for pupil services, 10.6 percent for instructional services and 10.56 percent for plant services, plus 4.96 percent for administration.

Payroll costs make up almost 80 percent of the budget. Purchased and contracted services take up a little over 8 percent. Other expenditures include supplies and materials, 6.63 percent; operating expenses, 3.57 percent; and a capital outlay of 2.13 percent.

Griffith told board members that Pampa's salary scale, while quite low when compared over the state, is "very competitive with the Panhandle."

The budget reflects a three-year plan to increase the tax rate to 96.7 cents per $100 valuation, the superintendent said. He said that such an increase would protect the school district from the loss of state aid, plus allow for a 2 to 3 percent growth in the budget.

Even so, Griffith said he believes Pampa school district's tax rate will remain below comparable districts in the area by the end of the three-year time span. "I think they'll be over a dollar by then," he said.

No action was taken on the proposed budget at the meeting. However, another budget workshop was set for Aug. 4, and board members tentatively planned to consider the budget for approval on Aug. 16.

In other action, board members accepted bids for canned food purchases for the coming year. After the district's food service director and some of the cafeteria managers tasted samples of the food products offered by the seven bidders, they recommended the purchase of the majority of the low bids in most cases. Higher bids were recommended in some circumstances, however, because of the quality of the product.

"In almost all cases they recommended the low bid," Griffith said. "But in some cases they did not go with the lowest price because the food was inferior."

Also accepted were bids for classroom furniture and a new table for the school board members and members agreed to participate in the Enterprise Zone, a plan offering some tax abatements as an incentive to bring new industry into the city.

Following a brief closed personnel session, board members accepted the resignation of Pampa Middle School art instructor, Judith Lisman and hired two new employees. Larry Kilbreth was hired part-time to the Pampa High School ICT program. Scharlene Gattis was hired as a half-time speech pathologist.

district, and that's why this job was so appealing," he said. "You've got to have these three essentials to have a quality program."

With the recent focus on basic reading and writing skills in Texas schools, Sharp is quick to give fundamental subjects their due. But he is also inclined to see beyond immediate answers, looking instead to education's larger meaning.

"Basic skills are a necessary starting point," he said, "but they are worthless unless you know how to apply them. And that comes from understanding."

Sharp's goals for the White Deer Independent School District are bound up in his philosophy. "We have to let the students realize that they are important, unique," he says. "Our job is to instill in them a feeling that they are special...."

"We must also teach them that it's all right to fail. Don't be afraid to try. Lou Brock held the major league record for the most stolen bases. He also held the record for being thrown out the most times while trying to steal. People remember the positive things you do. If you have given it your best, you're a winner."

The first issue Sharp will face as superintendent concerns the combining of White Deer and Skellytown elementary schools. After a lengthy discussion on the subject at the June 13 White Deer school board meeting, the trustees postponed a decision until their next meeting on July 18.

Combining the two schools would necessitate busing the students from one town to another. "Of course you want your kids to go to school locally, and at this point we anticipate no major changes," Sharp said. "The issue is based primarily on financial necessity."

"We have a duplication of services in White Deer and Skellytown, creating financial issues that don't occur in a situation where the students are on the same campus. We'll come up with the best program possible with the amount of money the taxpayers can keep up with."

Sharp cites a $20 million loss in the local tax base as the culprit in school funding problems. In addition, he said, House Bill 72 has mandated but failed to fund higher teacher-to-student ratios. Thus, combining the two elementary schools is being considered as a method of consolidating White Deer ISD resources.

Sharp believes that achieving stability and consistency in the local economy will go a long way toward alleviating some of the problems the school district is now experiencing.

He also dispelled any doubts concerning an in-depth audit of the White Deer schools, which the board approved last month.

"It's not uncommon for a new superintendent to have such an audit," he said. "And since no one in the central office has been here for more than a year, it's a good way to let us know where we stand. We'll get a clean start and know exactly where we're at, so we'll know which direction to go."

Sharp stressed his commitment to White Deer, which he characterizes as "one of the best school systems around. Our goal is to be the best. We're going to compete in every area — academics, athletics and life."

alive as his wife, Leticia, 36, their son, Israel, 9, and daughter, Terese, 4.

"I feel very happy that they are alive and I hope they can get them out soon," he said.

Ambulances, firefighters and volunteers from across the Rio Grande Valley joined the rescue effort and numerous companies provided heavy machinery.

"There are so many helping hands that it's too much once you look at it," said City Commissioner Harry McNair. "Brownsville hasn't seen a disaster of this magnitude since 1967 with Hurricane Beulah."

Many people went to blood banks to donate blood in case it was needed.

At least eight injured people were admitted to hospitals; 34 others were treated and released, Pooos said.

Among those injured slightly was store owner Bernard Levin, 67, who was working at the cash register at the time.

"It was a shock. I was cashiering and all of a sudden it happened," Levin said. "It was a well-built building and we still don't know what caused it to collapse."

He escaped with three employees and three customers and said there were 10 other employees and several more customers in the store.

The 40-year-old structure housed the department store on the first floor, with the other two floors vacant but made of concrete, Economedes said.

"That's what's making us go much slower. There are tons of concrete on there and we are using cherry pickers to help us remove the debris," he said.

The National Weather Service said the collapse could have been caused by the weight of rainwater from a storm that also caused street flooding, especially in the downtown area.

Anthony Padilla, a photographer for the Brownsville Herald, was taking weather pictures across from the store before it collapsed.

"It was coming forward, then the window, the entire storefront, the windows just exploded out," Padilla said. "Glass just went out. People just went like this, covered their heads, kind of ducked down, and in the next instant, the whole thing just came down."

"The people I had been looking at were just covered with rubble," he said.

Bentsen joins Dukakis for Texas swing

DALLAS (AP)—Democrat Michael Dukakis was taking another look at one of his potential running mates today while on a campaign swing through Western states that is designed to challenge George Bush on his own turf.

Dukakis was being joined by Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, one of eight Democrats who has met with the presidential nominee-in-waiting to discuss the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

The Massachusetts governor began his four-day trip through six Western and Rocky Mountain states Wednesday evening, jabbing at Bush in the vice president's adopted home state of Texas. Dukakis went before a Hispanic group in Dallas where Bush a day earlier had made a "solemn pledge" to put a Hispanic in his Cabinet.

"Some people think it's enough to wake up after eight years and then promise opportunity for one Hispanic," Dukakis said in reference to Bush's promise. "I want to stand with you and create opportunity for 20 million Hispanic citizens across this country."

Speaking to the League of United Latin American Citizens convention, Dukakis made fleeting reference to a similar pledge he made — to appoint a Hispanic to his Cabinet if elected — at the group's meeting a year earlier.

"I'm just looking around the room for Cabinet secretaries," Dukakis said as he received the gathering's welcoming applause.

Bentsen, who ran for president briefly himself in 1976, was appearing with Dukakis at a rally in Texarkana on the Arkansas border. Dukakis aides said he expected to be joined at the rally along the state line by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, who will place Dukakis' name in nomination at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta in less than two weeks.

In Dallas, Dukakis took a swipe at departing Attorney General Edwin Meese III while at the same time criticizing Bush and the Reagan administration for opposing legislation passed by the Senate requiring 60 days' notice for workers before companies close plants.

He said it was ironic that Meese, in resigning, was "willing to give himself 30 days notice," while the Reagan and Bush "don't believe working Americans are entitled to one day's notice before they're thrown out of their jobs."

Dukakis press secretary Dayton Duncan said Dukakis did not plan a private meeting with Bentsen to discuss the vice presidential nomination, but noted that they had already held one such discussion last week in Washington.

Dukakis was flying to Arizona later in the day for an appearance with former Gov. Bruce Babbitt, an early drop-out from the Democratic presidential race. He also planned stops in California, Oregon, Washington and at a park in the Colorado Rockies before returning to Boston on Sunday.

Texas and California loom as major electoral battlegrounds for the fall campaign, and like the others represent states that have generally gone Republican in recent presidential elections.

Dukakis aides depicted his trip — his third campaign swing since locking up the nomination in California a month ago — as signaling the Democrat's intention to challenge for those states this fall and serve notice on Bush that he will have to protect his traditional GOP base as that party's nominee.

"It sends another strong geographic signal that we can win anywhere, even in places that have been historically Republican, because that's the nature of this thing," said Leslie Dach, Dukakis' communications director.

He said that extended to Arizona, the most reliably Republican and conservative of those states.

"It means George Bush has no secure base, and if he wants to win there, he's going to have to campaign there," Dach said.

Dukakis' schedule remained in flux up to his departure, however, as the campaign dropped plans to visit Montana and added a stop in Oregon.

Dukakis and Bush both made forays into each other's territory Thursday, as Bush's Air Force II taxied by Dukakis' chartered jet on the tarmac in Boston as the vice president arrived for appearances in the Democrat's home city.

Before departing Boston, Dukakis said Bush's promise to Hispanics amounted to a "rather late" commitment to affirmative action. He accused the vice president of breaking his pledge not to support new taxes by supporting a provision of the trade bill that calls for $1 billion in taxes for job training programs and catastrophic health care legislation that included $6 billion in taxes on elderly people who opt for the comprehensive care.

"So much for iron-clad no tax commitments," said Dukakis, who himself had to renege on a no-tax pledge in his first term as governor.

Collapse turns downtown Brownsville into disaster scene

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE (AP)—Floodlights bathed downtown Brownsville with an eerie glow early today while rescuers struggled to find life in a heap of rubble that once was a department store.

The air smelled of diesel fumes pumped out of the heavy construction equipment hauling the debris of the Amigo Store that came crashing down Thursday afternoon about 2 p.m. in a tragedy on Elizabeth Street.

Fire and police radios blared while a clashing mixture of colorful clothing tangled in the gray concrete and steel beams and splintered boards.

In the midst of a human conveyor belt passing chunks of building materials, timbers, pillows and other merchandise to waiting dump trucks, a rescue worker held a pair of shiny, bright green gym shorts to his waist.

Donated pizzas, soft drinks, hamburgers, sandwiches and other foods were continuously distributed by volunteer helpers.

Hope rose at different times during the long night, when rescuers began finding survivors buried underneath with some of the dead.

Rescuers covered with dust called for silence, then "Paramedic, paramedic!" and later "Una nina! (a girl)."

Yet there also were cruel disappointments.

"They thought they heard sounds last time and it was a crew working on the other side of the wall," said Sgt. Dean Poos, spokesman for the Brownsville Police Department.

Finally, rescuers' efforts started paying off.

Passersby peer at wreckage of car that was parked in front of store.

"I got a rosary in to one of the ladies," said Father Tom Pincelli, who was asking Father Gilbert

Piette where he could get more rosaries for other survivors.

"It's to calm them down, to let them know there are a lot of people out here working for them," Pincelli said.

"With the economic situation, a lot of people have been just looking out for themselves," Piette said. "This certainly has brought people together."

Rescue workers flocked to Brownsville from every city in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, which has suffered hard economic times in recent years.

A mobile blood unit at Sunrise Mall in Brownsville had to turn people away because they did not have the staff to handle all of the willing donors Thursday afternoon.

Brownsville residents Janie Gonzalez and Sheri Kenner raised $800 on their own, as did many other people who were moved to help in one way or another.

"Everybody just spontaneously did this," said Ralph Cowen, who brought $50 worth of refreshments to the scene.

An emergency treatment center at a vacant store front across the street from the tragedy scene found too many doctors and nurses available.

"We've had to turn some people away," said Colleen Madigan, director of the intensive care unit and emergency room at Valley Regional Medical Center.

Bags of intravenous fluid hung next to makeshift treatment tables in the space that once housed Leon's Centro de Gangas (Leon's Bargain Center).

Because the collapsed three-story department store was one block from the Gateway International Bridge leading to Matamoros, Mexico, officials closed the bridge, to keep the traffic out of the rescue scene.

Senate approves Texas water projects

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate has sent President Reagan legislation appropriating $156.61 million for water and energy projects in Texas and $100 million for the super collider.

The Senate gave final congressional approval to the water and energy package Thursday on a 91-3 vote, including $126.51 million in water construction projects and studies for the Lone Star State and another $30.1 million for energy projects.

"In this tight budget year, I am pleased that we have been able to get some pretty solid funding for Texas projects," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

The legislation also appropriates $100 million for research and development of the multibillion-dollar super collider. The bill decrees no construction can begin on the atom-smasher but allows for detailed engineering and some capital equipment purchases.

Bentsen called preservation of funding for the super collider "a major victory in this budget cycle."

Texas is one of seven states in the running for the super collider, a physics project which is expected to create 4,000 permanent jobs and have an annual budget of $280 million.

Also included in the package was a $22.8 million appropriation to continue construction of the long-awaited Cooper Lake on the South Sulphur River in Northeast Texas, and $11.3 million to deepen Freeport Harbor in Brazoria County.

Cooper Lake backers received a scare during the appropriations process, when the Senate initially decided to set aside $21.8 million. They feared environmentalists would take a lawsuit challenging the project back to federal court if another $1 million was not added to purchase land that will mitigate the effects of construction on wildlife.

The case was in court for years and the lake has been on the drawing board for decades.

"The Cooper Lake project can remain on track with the extra million we were able to get for mitigation," Bentsen said. "Cooper Lake is well on its way to being completed, and I think that it is about time."

Backers of deepening Freeport Harbor say the Brazoria County project will play an increasingly important role in the state's economy once completed. Dredging work could begin later this year.

The energy funding includes an appropriation for the Pan-TeX nuclear weapons plant in Amarillo, which will get $20.5 million. Of that total, $13 million is for a high-explosive machining facility and $7.5 million for security enhancements.

The University of Texas at Austin received $3 million for nuclear robotics, and Texas

A&M University will get $600,000 for hydrogen research. Additionally, the Pleasant Bayou geothermal well in Brazoria County and two Louisiana counties received $6 million.

Additional funds were included in the bill for operation and maintenance of existing flood control and navigation projects in the state.

The following other construction projects are included in the bill:

- $25 million for a flood control project on the San Antonio Channel in San Antonio.
- $20 million for construction of Ray Roberts Lake in Cooke, Denton and Grayson counties.
- $8 million for a flood control project on Boggy Creek in Austin.
- $7.5 million for a flood control project on Lake Wichita and Holiday Creek in Wichita and Archer counties.
- $4.5 million for construction of Joe Pool Lake in Dallas, Ellis and Tarrant counties.

Welfare board adopts Medicaid change

AUSTIN (AP)—The Texas Board of Human Services has adopted a plan to extend Medicaid benefits to 23,424 more children and 15,404 more pregnant women, bypassing a broader expansion because of a recommendation from legislative leaders.

The plan, approved 2-1 Thursday, would serve about 45,000 fewer children next fiscal year than a plan previously recommended by the Department of Human Services staff.

"The state of Texas has for many years never provided services at a level commensurate with the need and the wealth of the state of Texas," said board member Vicki Garza of Corpus Christi, who voted against the plan.

"While I recognize that there is opposition from the governor's office, the speaker of the House and the lieutenant governor, I refuse to succumb to their wishes," said Garza, getting applause from people at the hearing.

Board Chairman J. Livingston Kosberg of Houston said he voted for the scaled-down plan because of the strong recommendation from the Legislative Budget Board, not because of the merits of the proposals.

Kosberg said he was told by friends of the department that it would be "departmental suicide" to oppose the budget board, which includes Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis. But Kosberg emphasized that retribution was not threatened by lawmakers.

"We are partners with the Legislature," Kosberg said. If the department's budget is cut, needy welfare recipients would be injured, he said.

Human services board member Rob Mosbacher of Houston, in making the motion to go along with the budget board recommendation, also emphasized the need to cooperate with lawmakers.

The board in May delayed the staff proposal to spend $114 million in fiscal year 1989 — $48.2 million in state funds and the rest federal — to provide services to 15,404 pregnant women and 68,780 children up to age 6. The fiscal year begins Sept. 1.

The delay in action was requested by Hobby, Lewis and Gov. Bill Clements.

The plan adopted Thursday would cost $88.2 million, with $36.8 million from the state, in fiscal year 1989.

It would allow pregnant women and children with family incomes at or below the federal poverty level to qualify for Medicaid benefits. Currently, those at or below 34 percent of the poverty level qualify for the benefits in Texas.

In the second year of the plan, 18,062 pregnant women and 41,699 children up to age 3 would be eligible for benefits under the expansion. Beginning in September 1990, there would be 20,643 eligible pregnant women and 67,567 children.

The budget board, in its recommendation, encouraged the department to obtain local funds to use to obtain federal matching funds to cover additional children up to age 6.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Commission report should be rejected

Should Democrats win the Oval Office this November, the shape of their economic policies is predictable. The Cuomo Commission on Trade and Competitiveness, named for New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who appointed its members, has issued a 270-page report. The commission's recommendations coincide with themes already sounded by the Gov. Michael Dukakis campaign for president.

The Cuomo Commission called for a few reductions in federal spending programs. But its main plank was a call for a value-added tax (a kind of national sales tax popular in Europe). As a complete replacement for the income tax, the VAT might be less objectionable than other taxes, but the Cuomo Commission proposes imposing the VAT on top of the income tax. The idea is to discourage consumption (by taxing it), while not affecting investment (by not boosting taxes on it). But consumption itself creates investment, as companies use the profits from sales to invest in research and development.

Cuomo called for what he dubbed "producer economics," by which he means a halt to deregulation and reliance on market-place competition, and more reliance on government control and direction. The idea is to set up an American counterpart to MITI, the Japanese Ministry of International Trade and Industry. Yet MITI is not so powerful, nor so prescient, as American big-government advocates think. Twenty years ago MITI discouraged Soichiro Honda from going into the auto business, but since then his company has become Japan's second largest exporter of cars.

For better guidance than Cuomo's, we might look to the actions of Japan itself. In 1987 the United States economy grew at a respectable 2.9 percent clip, but Japan's grew at a hefty 4.9 percent. And so far this year Japan's economy has risen at an 11.3 percent annual rate — phenomenal for an industrial economy. Indeed, this has occurred as the country's government removed some restraints on consumption — essentially opposite the Cuomo Commission prescription for the United States.

Underlying Japan's sustained strong economic growth is the country's relatively smaller burden of government. Total government outlays stand at about 32 percent of GNP, lowest for any major industrial nation except Switzerland, compared to the U.S.'s 38 percent. The conclusion is clear. Big government chokes industries and workers; small government frees them to innovate and compete. Alas, such good sense may be ignored if the Cuomo Commission's recommendations become national policy in 1989.

In July of 1984, the Supreme Court voted 7-0 that women must be admitted to membership in the Jaycees. In May of 1987, the vote was 7-0 that women must be admitted to membership in Rotary. A few days ago, the high court made it a clean sweep: It ruled 9-0 that women must be admitted to membership in large social clubs that hitherto have been for men only.

The decision will not "lead to the demise of private clubs," as the National Club Association has gloomily predicted. Neither will it have an economically "ruinous" effect upon these organizations, as the Conference of Private Organizations contends.

In such high-toned precincts as the Cosmos and Metropolitan clubs in Washington, the impact will be barely perceptible. A few old goats may resign in protest. After the novelty wears off, the few women who may force their way into membership will wonder why they ever bothered. This is not the end of the world.

Even so, the high court's decision of June 20 is regrettable. Technically it involved only private social clubs affected by New York City's Human Rights Law of 1984. By extension it reaches large social clubs everywhere. These are clubs that have more than 400 members, provide regular meal service and receive payment "from or on behalf of non-members for the furtherance of trade or business."

Under the ordinance, such clubs may not discriminate by reason of race, creed, color, national origin or sex. The court held that the law does not violate the Constitution's guarantee of freedom of association.

The facts here were significantly different from the facts in the Jaycees and Rotary cases. The Jaycees case arose in Minneapolis and St.

James J. Kilpatrick

Paul under a state law forbidding discrimination in "places of public accommodation." Because the Jaycees unselectively signed up just about any socially acceptable male between 18 and 35, the court concluded that the organization had none of the characteristics of "intimacy" that might qualify it as a truly private association.

The court's reasoning was substantially the same in the Rotary case of 1987. Speaking through Justice Lewis Powell, the court observed that Rotary's 20,000 clubs and 900,000 members are specifically oriented toward business and the professions. The clubs conduct conferences intended to sharpen managerial skills. Reporters are free to cover Rotary luncheons. There is nothing very "private" here.

The court took a great and unwarranted leap from the Jaycees and Rotary to the social clubs that are the subject of New York City's law. (Chicago, Buffalo, San Francisco, Detroit and Los Angeles, among others, have substantially identical laws.) These clubs are highly selective in their membership policies; they are not business oriented, though of course members discuss their business in club rooms; they have been formed and maintained as enclaves of privacy where members of generally shared tastes and interests may associate.

The effect of the court's ruling is to treat such a club as just another McDonald's. Under the New York ordinance, clubs are merely "places of public accommodation." They must be open on equal terms to "all persons" who seek a "fair and equal opportunity to participate in the business and professional life of the city." Such persons, said New York's City Council, must be "unfettered" in availing themselves of business opportunities.

It had never occurred to some of us, until this very moment, that government has a "compelling interest" in opening a private men's club to any woman who can pay dues and get a member to sponsor her.

Where did this compelling interest come from? The implicit premise is that access to the club is essential, perhaps indispensable, to a successful career in one's business or profession. But this is manifest nonsense. In every large city, thousands of men and women become highly successful without ever setting foot upon the sacred carpets of a Cosmos or Metropolitan Club.

The troublesome thing is that the court has here sanctioned one more intrusion by the state into the essentially private and personal relationships of a free people. Such interference by government is contrary to the rights of the people "peaceably to assemble."

My own thought is that nothing is constitutionally wrong with social clubs for women only, men only, blacks only or Swedes only. The constitutional wrong occurs when government compels people to give up their precious right simply to be left alone.

Get dirt under the fingernails

From Phil Stanford in the Portland Oregonian:

It was graduation day at Harper High School, southeastern Oregon.

The gymnasium was decorated with streamers of pink and white.

Perhaps a hundred relatives and friends filled the folding chairs. Mostly farmers and ranchers. With no big budget ...

The invited speaker was one of their own — Pete Fenton, who raises sheep on his small spread just outside town.

He is also driver of the Harper High school bus.

And his wife, Marvella, is the school cook.

Pete Fenton said:

"I want to begin by talking to you young graduates about some very important people, your friends and neighbors who support this school with time they can't afford and money they can't spare.

"It's a good school and it will start you out to be anything you want to be — and you can succeed. Those who graduated before you have succeeded."

Paul Harvey

He mentioned that nationally one in four drop out of high school.

At Harper High we've had only two dropouts in 25 years.

Then Pete Fenton told this story.

"One of my sons had just started college, and the first night a bunch were sitting around drinking Kool-Aid, when one guy said to another, 'You're a graduate of Bend High School.' 'Yes,' the second guy answered, 'how did you know?' And the reply was, 'By the ring on your finger.'"

"Then he pointed to another and said, 'You're a graduate of Boise High.' And that guy said,

'Yes, how did you know?' And he replied, 'By the ring on your finger.'

"Then one said to my son, Mark, 'You're a graduate of Harper High,' and Mark asked, 'How did you know?' And the guy said, 'By the dirt under your fingernails.'

"They all had a big laugh, but my son was embarrassed by the put-down of Harper High. 'Mark said he's thought of these guys lately, and most haven't amounted to much. They didn't know how, or they didn't want to work. Some got into drugs from boredom.

"He said that thanks to his parents, he learned how to work. And thanks to this town he was given an opportunity to work.

"So the moral is this: Although Mark's nails weren't clean, he wasn't afraid to get his hands dirty — and you shouldn't be either. So the joke was on them."

After graduation exercises there was a reception line, and everybody got a chance to give the graduates a hug. And, of course, they didn't forget to congratulate Pete Fenton, either.

Some of them even said it was the best graduation speech they ever heard.

Recycling can change sludge into dollars

By ROBERT WALTERS

DES MOINES, Iowa (NEA) — First, a warning: This is probably not a column to be read at the breakfast table.

That's because it's about sludge, much of it the product of human waste, generated when solids are removed from sewage at municipal wastewater treatment plants throughout the country.

The subject may be unpalatable but it's certainly not unimportant. Approximately 7 million tons — or 14 billion pounds — of residual sludge solids now are being produced every year in the process of cleaning the water that goes down the drains in the nation's homes, offices and factories.

That's "dry weight" and it's not an especially realistic figure because most sludge ends up in the form of cake that's 30 percent solid but 70 percent water. It is much heavier in weight and larger in volume than sludge would be in its dry form.

Moreover, sludge production is constantly increasing, not only because the population is growing but also because the federal government is requiring communities to more thoroughly clean their wastewater.

Thus, primary treatment — physically separating solids from the liquid but doing little to cleanse the water — is being supplanted by more elaborate secondary and tertiary treatment procedures that produce additional sludge.

Finally, landfill capacity is rapidly diminishing. Even when it was more readily available, the open dumping of untreated sludge was an unpopular practice because of its foul odor and the presence of disease-bearing organisms.

That's the bad news. But just when the problem appeared to have become insoluble, here's the good news: A new technology has been developed that not only neutralizes sludge's smell and pathogens, but also produces a superb fertilizer.

"The end product is unbelievable," says John P. Bellizzi, director of the Public Works Department here in Des Moines. "It's amazing that you can completely eliminate the smell from something that stinks so much."

Bellizzi adds, "It has tremendous fertilizing value. It's better than what you can buy at the garden store."

Des Moines is among those at various stages of either utilizing the new technology or exploring its possibilities.

The other cities include Minneapolis; Toledo, Ohio; Chattanooga, Tenn.; San Antonio, Texas; Fort Smith, Ark.; Wilmington, Del. and Oak Ridge, Tenn. "A lot of places are taking a hard look at it," says J. Patrick Nicholson, chief executive officer of N-Viro Energy Systems Ltd., a Toledo-based firm.

The new technology being promoted by N-Viro is especially impressive because its principal component is available in abundance but previously had no use — the 20 million tons of kiln dust produced annually as a by-product of cement manufacturing.

When kiln dust and sludge are combined, the resulting product is what N-Viro describes as a "low-cost, nutrient-rich, organic fertilizer" that can be used on residential lawns, public parks, golf courses and other locations.

Such recycling is not new. For the past 60 years, the city of Milwaukee has relied upon aerobic digestion (a process in which bacteria consume solids) to disinfect its sludge, then heat-dried what remained and sold it as a landscape fertilizer known as Milorganite.

But Milorganite costs $250 per ton to produce and N-Viro claims that it can make a superior product at a far lower cost of $100 to $120 per ton. (Anaerobic digestion costs $130 per ton, composting costs $160 per ton and incineration costs $240 per ton.) For Des Moines, which is in the process of building a $165 million sewage processing facility that will handle upwards of 50 million gallons of wastewater daily, the technology holds great promise.

Bellizzi notes that "it's in the embryonic stage now," but he has high expectations for a procedure that could ameliorate one of the many problems faced by the nation's cities.

Opposition vows civil resistance if it loses Mexican elections

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The city's main opposition party says it won't stop at just blocking bridges and highways in protest if it becomes convinced that the government steals congressional elections.

National Action Party leaders in Juarez said Thursday that preliminary results from Wednesday's elections showed the opposition party winning the city's three congressional districts over candidates from the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

The right-of-center opposition party, known as PAN, is strong in Juarez and its state of Chihuahua.

PAN officials said Thursday the situation was similar to that after the 1986 mayoral and gubernatorial elections in Juarez and Chihuahua. At the time, PAN claimed it was winning in unofficial vote totals, but the PRI-controlled electoral commission later certified the PRI candidates as winners.

PAN leaders then claimed massive vote fraud and for several days blockaded highways and international bridges linking Juarez with El Paso, Texas.

PAN senatorial candidate Gustavo Elizondo said Thursday that the party is stronger in numbers and commitment this year, and that it will again resort to civil disobedience if it looks like the government is preparing to steal the election.

"I said from the first that we would start where we finished in

'86," Elizondo said. "If, with the blockades of highways and the blockades of international bridges, we don't make the government straighten out, we're going to force them to desist."

But Elizondo did not specify what further actions of civil resistance are being considered.

PRI officials continued to deny accusations of vote fraud, and said the PAN resorts to such complaints because it can't win.

With about half the nearly 400 precincts in Juarez counted, PAN said Thursday it had garnered 73,592 votes for presidential candidate Manuel J. Clouthier. PAN officials said PRI presidential candidate Carlos Salinas de Gortari — who is almost certain to be declared the winner when the nationwide results are reported Sunday — had 53,953 votes with about half the precincts reporting.

Jose Antonio Badia, president of PAN in Juarez, said PAN candidates were winning the city's three congressional seats by similar margins. It was not known who was winning Chihuahua state's two senatorial seats.

The PRI said it would not release preliminary vote totals and would wait until official vote tallies are released Sunday.

The PAN said some ballot boxes were stuffed by PRI operatives, that thousands of PAN sympathizers were selectively omitted from voters' rolls and that PAN vote-watchers were expelled from polls where they were allowed to be legally.

The Civic Democracy Group, an association of mostly college students who said they weren't affiliated with any party, reported that the voting in Juarez was generally peaceful. They reported at least 30 fights at the polls, and police and soldiers had to be called in to at least 14 precincts, the group reported.

U.S. shutting door on Armenian immigration

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States will not process any Soviet immigrants until Oct. 1 because a huge surge in refugees has exhausted government funds, a U.S. Embassy spokeswoman said today.

Armenians, who were the hardest hit by the move, criticized the decision.

Embassy spokeswoman Marguerite Squire said the United States would continue to accept applications from Soviets wishing to resettle in the United States, but on Monday embassy officials began postponing the last step in approval of the applications, pre-departure interviews.

She said the government has run out of funds for the refugees' housing, food, clothing and transportation.

The cutback is to last until a new fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

The restrictions affect any Soviet applying to the embassy for political asylum in the United States, but they affect Armenians most of all.

Last month, the embassy issued a record 2,063 immigration visas, 94 percent of which were for Armenians.

The figures do not include most Soviet Jews, who generally leave the Soviet Union on Israeli visas and get U.S. visas in Western Europe.

"We are ready to start a new life in a new country and what happens?" would-be immigrant Mushegh Sarafyan said today. "Already they are deceiving us."

Sarafyan was among about 50 Armenian men, women and children huddled on a street next to the embassy under overcast skies. They said they had received permission from the Soviet government to emigrate to join relatives in Los Angeles, but that American diplomats told them of the delay this week.

They accused the U.S. government of being insensitive and questioned whether budgetary constraints are the real reason for the new restrictions.

"America is such a rich country. Why can't it afford to take in 70 families?" Sarafyan said.

He said American diplomats had told 70 Armenian families who applied for immigration within the past few months to show up this week at the embassy for the pre-departure interviews. But now the families have been left out in the cold.

"We moved out of our apartments, our homes, we sold our clothes and quit our jobs, and now we are left practically on the street," he said.

Sarafyan said the would-be emigres had expected to leave the Soviet Union this week after completing American paperwork and have no place to stay in Moscow until October.

"The U.S. Embassy should have given us at least a month. This way they told us nothing. Who is responsible? No one is helping us," he said.

Squire and other American diplomats refused comment on the Armenians' complaints and said any response would have to come from Washington.

From last Oct. 1 to Sept. 30 of this year, the embassy expects to grant 9,500 Soviets, mostly Armenians, permission to resettle in the United States. From Oct. 1, 1986, to Sept. 30, 1987, 1,800 immigration requests were approved.

The sharp rise is a result of a recent easing of Soviet emigration restrictions under Kremlin chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Scientists says Mars mountain may be relic of civilization

WASHINGTON (AP) — Huge rock formations on Mars that resemble a human face, a pyramid and a fortress could be the work of a lost civilization or "just a trick of nature," say scientists urging a close-up look at the outcroppings.

Four scientists including a former astronaut said Thursday that the mysterious formations should be scrutinized further by spacecraft.

Photographs taken in 1976 by the Viking 1 spacecraft as it orbited Mars show a sphinx-like face staring outward into space. The image resembles a death mask, with a long shadow obscuring one side of the face while emphasizing a human-like brow, nose, eye socket and mouth.

Nearby is an angular mountain, suggesting the sharp lines of a pyramid, and a grouping of rocks that some view as a forress near the center of what they suggest could have been an ancient city of a lost civilization.

Or, the scientists said at a news conference Thursday, the images captured by the Viking camera could all be "a trick of light and shadow."

"We have found something that is so interesting that it demands we go back to Mars and get more data," said Richard C. Hoagland, founder of The Mars Project, an organization that is studying the Viking photographs.

Brian T. O'Leary, a former astronaut and an expert on Mars, said there is so much uncertainty about the origin of the rock face that it should be a major target for future spacecraft sent to Mars.

Gerald Soffel, the mission scientist on the Viking project and currently chief of the space and Earth sciences branch at the Goddard Space Center, said in a telephone interview that the face-like image captured by the camera has been dismissed by most scientists as an illusion caused by bright sunlight and shadow.

He said some of the world's finest geologists have examined the photos and "they said what we were seeing is light and shadow."

But Mark Carlotto, an optical engineering expert, said a new, sophisticated computer study of the photos suggests that the face and other formations are not of natural origin.

In an article published in Applied Optics, Carlotto said a computer enhancement of the Viking photographs shows the rock shapes appear to have been carved by "intelligent design" and not by the random forces of nature.

In one study, Carlotto said, the face was compared statistically with other shapes photographed on Mars, and he concluded that "the face is not natural."

Soffel said he planned to study Carlotto's paper. He said its publication in Applied Optics, a learned journal supervised by scientists who evaluate each submission, gives credibility to the work.

But he said Viking scientists first spotted the face in 1976 and "never took it seriously."

The Carlotto study was published in May, but Hoagland did not call the news conference until Thursday, the same day that the Soviet Union launched a probe toward Mars.

O'Leary said Soviet scientists showed great interest in the Mars formations when he talked with them in January, but was told their spacecraft was not technically designed for such a survey of the Cydonia region of Mars where the structures are located.

Hoagland said NASA scientists dismissed the images found in the photographs as oddities of no significance, or "a trick of nature."

Hoagland, however, said he has studied the photos for years and has discovered that in addition to the face there is "a complex of unusual objects" that he believes could have been built by "intelligent design."

The complex, which he calls a city, includes a five-sided mountain that resembles a pyramid, a grouping of rocks that he said could be a fortress and a bluff that he believes could have been part of an astronomical marker.

NASA plans to launch an unmanned probe, called the Mars Observer, in five years, and Hoagland said it will have on board a camera that could settle the question about the origin of the stone features on the planet.

U.S. moves closer to reparations offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is moving closer to a decision on offering reparations for the destruction of Iran Air flight 655, saying the United States will not shirk its "moral responsibility" in the wake of the Persian Gulf tragedy.

"I suspect that doing what we think is right will be the deciding factor," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater's comments Thursday marked a significant change in the tone of administration pronouncements after several days of noncommittal responses on the issue of reparations for families of the 290 victims.

"One of the driving forces behind our consideration is simply the moral responsibility of America and the fact that we've always been a humane nation that takes these kinds of problems very seriously and assumes personal responsibilities," he said.

The Defense Department acknowledged Thursday that the Iranian A300 Airbus shot down by the U.S. warship was within a commercial airline corridor, but said that alone did not guarantee its safety.

"An airway is not a safety zone," said Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard. "All this means is that within that zone, within that area, the air traffic control authorities have agreed to track aircraft."

Fitzwater stressed that no decision on reparations has been made either by senior staff or President Reagan. But in contrast to his suggestion earlier this week that the decision will await the outcome of the Navy's investigation of the incident, Fitzwater said he wanted to emphasize that "we're moving along through the consideration process."

"We don't have final decisions yet, but it clearly is an issue that is under active discussion," Fitzwater said.

On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Congress would likely support a request for compensation if it came from the president.

"It should come from the president," Wright said.

The Pentagon spokesman, in a briefing with reporters, said that even though the airliner was in a civilian air corridor, Vincennes skipper Capt. Will C. Rogers III still could not rule out the chance he was facing an attacking F-14 fighter.

Howard said Iran must share some responsibility for the deaths because the Airbus took off from a military-civilian airport at Bandar Abbas during an exchange of fire between the Vincennes and Iranian gunboats.

"The Iranians are the ones who bear the responsibility for ensuring that if they are the ones who provoke the hostilities, they are the ones who began the shooting in this incident, that they ensure the safety of their civilian aircraft by not sending them into harm's way," Howard said.

Howard discounted speculation on Capitol Hill that an Iranian warplane might have been flying behind the commercial flight in an attempt to use it as a cover to sneak up on the USS Vincennes.

He repeated that U.S. warships had broadcast 12 warnings to the Iranian aircraft, seven from the Vincennes and five from the USS John H. Sides. And he released the transcript of an Iranian F-14 responding to a similar warning the day before the Airbus went down.

The F-14 identified itself to the USS Halsey and "went away," Howard said.

On Sunday, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William Crowe, had told reporters one reason Rogers believed the Iranian aircraft was a military jet was that it was outside the air corridor.

But both Crowe and Howard have said the most compelling reason Rogers mistook the aircraft for a military plane was an electronic emission from the Airbus. On Tuesday, Howard identified the transmission as signals broadcast on a frequency used only by military aircraft.

The signal sent by the Airbus, said Howard, was similar to codes broadcast within the previous several days by Iranian F-14 fighters recently stationed at Bandar Abbas.

Military issues directive on AIDS policy

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The Army and Air Force have ordered commanding officers to tell soldiers or airmen who test positive for the AIDS virus that they face discharge or prosecution unless they inform all sex partners of their condition and use condoms.

The regulations, and a similar Navy policy, spell out rules of behavior at issue in a number of cases in which military personnel who have tested positive for the AIDS virus have been charged with criminal offenses. The charges have ranged from aggravated assault to having unsafe sex without warning partners of the test results.

In an AIDS-related court-martial scheduled to start at Arizona's Fort Huachuca this month, defense lawyers have argued that the defendant was not ordered either to use condoms or to inform partners of his condition.

All members of the military must submit to AIDS blood screening tests, which detect the presence of antibodies and indicate whether a person has been exposed to the virus.

The Army regulation, which became effective April 1, requires a commander to discuss a written counseling statement with any soldier who has tested positive and has received medical counseling, said Lt. Col. Greg Rixon, an Army spokesman at the Pentagon.

The form states that the commander is "imposing the following restrictions: 'You will verbally advise all prospective sexual partners of your diagnosed condition prior to engaging in any sexual intercourse. You are also ordered to use condoms should you engage in sexual intercourse with a partner.'"

Rixon said the form also states that failure "to adhere to your previous medical counseling or the counseling I have just given you will subject you to administrative separation and/or punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice as I see fit."

"This is serious business," Rixon said recently. "Those words take the form of a direct order."

Col. Harry Beans, staff judge advocate at Fort Huachuca in Sierra Vista in southeastern Arizona, said, "We don't order them to refrain from sex. I don't think we could do that." But, he said, partners must be informed "so that he or she can make an informed decision."

The upcoming court-martial at Fort Huachuca, initiated by the Army in 1987, was the military's first AIDS-related prosecution. Then-Pfc. Adrian G. Morris Jr. is accused of failing to use condoms and to warn three soldiers with whom he had sex, including one man, that he had tested positive for the virus.

His lawyers have argued that there was no order for Morris to do either in July 1986, when he was informed of the virus' potential danger and counseled that he should inform partners and use a condom.

His court-martial was delayed while a ruling on blood test admissibility was appealed.

In the meantime, a soldier at Fort Hood, Texas, pleaded guilty last December to AIDS-related charges, including disobeying an officer's order virtually identical to the new regulation.

Several other military AIDS-related cases have been tried, including that of a soldier at Fort Sill, Okla., who pleaded guilty to aggravated assault and of an airman at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, who was convicted on such a charge.

Rixon said that as the element of assault kept coming up, "it became clear that we needed a very definitive guideline to assure there is a standardization of orders."

The Air Force regulation, similar to the Army's, provides a form that must be signed by both the affected airman and his or her commander. Signing acknowledges that the person has been given the directive and understands it.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

NO LONGER Sewing

Once this home housed a family, was full of laughter, protected its members from the elements. Now it is an old abandoned home...decaying, and falling apart. No longer of any use to anyone.

A person away from God is like this old abandoned home, gradually decaying in spirit and serving no purpose in God's will. Return to a regular church worship with the Lord. Receive God's great love, and live a joyous full life.

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Hi-Land Christian gives Bible School program schedule

Hi-Land Christian Church, 1615 N. Banks, will host its annual Vacation Bible School this Monday through Friday, July 11-15, from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon daily. Lessons will be based on the life of Christ and will emphasize our need to imitate his attitudes. Refreshments, crafts and music will reinforce each day's theme. Shirley Fresh of Hawaii will be the missionary this year. Fresh is currently working in Hawaii establishing Christian day care centers. Friday will be "Hawaii Day" at the Bible School, complete with leis and a luau. Children from ages 4 to those entering sixth grade are invited to attend. For more information, call 669-6700 or 665-9217.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree
Scripture: Many, O Lord my God, are the wonders you have done. The things you planned for us no one can recount to you; were I to speak and tell of them, they would be too many to declare. (Psalm 40:5 NIV)

One beautiful morning, a young mother was busily delivering her children to day care. She had her arms full of a baby, a diaper bag and a couple of what appeared to be much-loved, stuffed animals. Her pretty 4-year-old daughter dawdled along behind her. Though only 8 o'clock in the morning, the young woman was hurried and kept urging her little girl to hurry. The child, full of the wonderfulness of life and the beautiful day, was undaunted. She stopped to pick up a pretty leaf. She skipped to the curb and walked a few steps with arms out to her sides as though balancing on a high wire.

When her mother adopted a threatening tone, the child aimed herself for the door being held open for her but entered only after a couple of pirouettes and an awkward cartwheel. Like the mother, we typically become hurried by the concerns and responsibilities inherent with familial, professional and social survival. Just beyond our reach are the time and patience to revel in the sight of a pretty leaf or to feel the exhilaration of a healthy body in motion. If only times were easier and our pace were slower... but we never manage to finish the thought, much less execute the dream.

However, moments of child-like joy, by God's grace, surround us in luscious profusion. Tucked into the cracks and crevices of our necessarily busy existence are little cushions of delight — a little beauty here, a little laughter there, a spoonful of spiritual tonic just when it's most needed — succulent grains of blessings to be gleaned and devoured with relish. "Many, O Lord my God, are the wonders you have done." © 1988 Charlotte Barbaree

Religion roundup

ARLINGTON (AP) — The chief executive of the World Council of Churches recently offered some sharp criticisms of TV preacher Jimmy Swaggart — but not over the sexual exploits that got him defrocked. The Rev. Emilio Castro, an Uruguayan Methodist minister and the council's general secretary, speaking at an ecumenical gathering here in May, had this to say about Swaggart's preaching abroad:

"If someone was thinking of giving $10 to Jimmy Swaggart and asked my opinion, I would say for my country, his ministry is a disaster." Castro said Swaggart, through his support for the military government of Chile and apartheid government of South Africa, is harming the cause of Christ and "scandalizing Christian people."

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) says "one clearly understandable and divinely given rule would do more than all else to check" the AIDS epidemic: "Chastity before marriage and total fidelity in marriage."

In a statement on AIDS, the church's first presidency said "our concern for the bitter fruit of sin is coupled with Christlike sympathy for its victims... We should reach out with kindness and comfort to the afflicted, ministering to their needs and assisting them with their problems."

Shoeshiner now a preacher

By MAX ALBRIGHT
Amarillo Globe-News

AMARILLO (AP) — The 60-year-old man who shines shoes for a living keeps going with hard work and self-respect, but that wasn't enough when his name changed, temporarily, from Jones to Jonah.

Many years before he identified with the Old Testament character, he was stuck by a taxicab while riding a bicycle. As a result, his left leg was amputated above the knee. He was 16 years old.

"No one would ever hire me because I lost that leg, so I had to keep shinning shoes," said Walter Jones, who serves as bishop of the Whosoever Will Let Them Come In Jesus' Name Church, which he founded in Amarillo nine years ago, and who makes his living from the shoeshine stand at Tascosa Barber Shop.

"The doctors thought I wasn't going to live, so they just whacked the leg off, and after I lived they went back a year later and took (part of) it off again so I could wear an artificial limb.

"I've been shining shoes ever since I was a little boy. Started with a box, with 5 cents a shine in 1935."

While he was in the hospital — "weeping and crying; I was lying there feeling sorry for myself" — he discovered an elderly patient was wearing an artificial leg.

Jones talked to the man, who explained some of the pain and discomfort that sometimes comes with wearing an artificial limb. But still, Jones was inspired and found some self-confidence.

"It's not going to be easy and you are going to have to make up your mind that you are going to wear that leg," the man told Jones.

"I said, 'You did it, didn't you?'" Jones asked. "He said, 'Yes sir.' I said, 'I can do it too.'"

Jones returned, sitting on a stool, to shining shoes and mopping floors in Amarillo to raise money for his first artificial limb.

"I wanted to prove to myself what I could do," said Jones. "I wanted to prove to myself I wasn't out of the race. This I did."

In the next few years, he worked at the Amarillo Air Force Base, shining shoes at the Officers' Club and bowling alley, and shining shoes at the old city air terminal.

He raised his 10 children shining shoes; bought his own home on Poplar Street; and, he said, he keeps his vow to himself to keep on working and stay off disability. He has shoeshine customers that have been loyal to him for 40 years. But, according to Jones, he should have paid more attention to a fish story in the Bible.

The way the bishop tells it: God told Jonah to "Arise, go to Nineveh" to preach, and several epochs of history later God told Jones to start a non-denominational church here. Neither one did what they were told, at first.

"Out of the belly of hell cried I," said Jonah, according to the King James Version of the Old Testament, after he disobeyed his calling and was swallowed by a "great fish."

Jones, for his part, said he ended up having emergency abdominal surgery. "I wasn't doing what the Lord told me to do," Jones recalled. "The Lord told me to start a church."

"Then when I was in the hospital I could hear the Voice saying, 'I told you what to do.' And I promised God, I said 'I'll tell you what Lord, if you let me get out of here alive, you won't be bothered with me any more.'"

With a $4,000 bank loan, he was able to buy the small church building at 1400 N. Ong. Over the years, he said, he has put more than $25,000 of his own money into the church. He furnished it with pews, carpet, piano, organ and more. Drums and a guitar are also used during services. He has also supplied the church with a van, and a large portable barbecue pit.

At one point the church had 24 members, but now it's made up of mainly Jones' family and a couple of other families. The church is open to the public. Jones — as preacher and overseer, two words that he said describe the role of bishop — receives no salary.

The name of the church, Whosoever Will Let Them Come In Jesus' Name Church, comes from verse 17 of the last chapter of the Book of Revelation: "And let him that is thirsty come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

Even though he started the church under direct orders — he had preached before he began his church — he said he loves his ministry, which he carries out in addition to his five-day-a-week job.

"I teach God is love," said Jones. "I teach Jesus died for the sins of the world."

Hopper
'Happy' Hopper to minister here at local church

R.C. "Happy" Hopper will be ministering in song and in sermon at 7 p.m. Sunday at Briarwood Church, 1800 W. Harvester.

Rev. Hopper has been a successful pastor in Kansas; however, in 1985 he began a full-time evangelistic ministry known as Happy Psalmist Ministries.

Hopper received the nickname of "Happy" as the host of a local cable television talk show which he hosted in Liberal, Kan., from 1971 to 1974.

On this Christian show, guests were interviewed, sharing their testimonies of what Christ had done in their lives. He always appeared with his 12-string guitar, presenting songs which he has written.

Hopper has written many songs, most of which are taken from the New International Version of the Bible. However, he also has written songs about the Southwest in the form of ballads and folk songs.

Pastor Gene Allen said everyone is invited to attend this special service as Rev. Hopper presents the gospel, both in preaching and special music.

Cecil Todd

Evangelist to bring his 'Hear From Heaven' crusade here

Evangelist Cecil Todd and the Revival Fires Ministry will bring the nationwide "Hear From Heaven" crusade to the First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, for the 10:30 a.m. Sunday service, according to Herbert Peak Jr., pastor.

Evangelist Todd, the speaker for this crusade, is the founder and president of the Revival Fires Ministry, a world-wide outreach ministry based in Joplin, Mo.

Todd and his teams have conducted evangelistic campaigns in 57 different countries, including India, Africa, Central America and behind the Iron Curtain. More than 350,000 people have made public decisions for Christ in Todd's services, ministry officials claim.

Todd was the program host and speaker for the popular Revival Fires television show seen nationwide for more than 20 years.

His "Hear From Heaven" crusades, being conducted in all 50 states, are designed to unite people to encourage putting prayer back into public schools, ending abortion and bringing more influence on government leaders.

Those in attendance at the rally will be given an opportunity to express their support for prayer in schools and an end to abortions.

Todd has received media attention for his stance on abortions and school prayers. He has claimed that his private undercover investigation revealed that many cosmetics are now using, sometimes unknowingly, remains of aborted babies in their beauty products. He also has gathered petitions in support of school prayer that have been presented to the Supreme Court, President Reagan and various congressmen.

He has authored many books, including While America Played. He is a 13-year member of the National Religious Broadcasters, where he has spoken twice, and chairman of the first national "Clean-Up TV" crusade. Todd also has received a doctor's degree in divinity.

Pastor Peak said the services are open to the public and invited the public to attend.

Gonzales shows off the car he calls home.

Old car serves as man's shelter

By TAMARA S. WALL
The Bay City Tribune

BAY CITY (AP) — Benito Gonzales' home is carpeted with dirt, his closet is nothing more than a rope strung from two branches of a tree, and his bed is an old car — his only shelter from the unpredictable cries of Mother Nature.

Gonzales, 62, moved to a vacant lot on Avenue K in Bay City almost two years ago. His brother, Victor Gonzales, owns the property that Benito now calls home.

In broken English, Gonzales explains that he is trying to teach himself to read "the language" he was never taught in the little Spanish-speaking school he attended.

Gonzales sits in his shaded chair housed underneath two trees and puts on his glasses to proudly demonstrate his new skill.

"The small pig likes to eat," he reads. "See, he's hungry," Gonzales says laughing and pointing to the picture of a pig in the book. He said he found the book — which is not only teaching him to read but is helping him speak better English — in the garage.

Gonzales said he is also trying to read the paper but "it is hard." He has a large, plastic bucket of water he uses when washing his hands and an old, green wine bottle holds his clean drinking water. "It's nice out here," Gonzales says, while washing his hands in the bucket of water. "It's a good place to live."

He says he has good neighbors, although Gonzales doesn't really know them. "I don't know what they think about me."

Neighbor Albert Alameda says he does not know Gonzales but he likes having him for a neighbor. "He's a pretty good neighbor," Alameda says. "He minds his own business, stays to himself."

Gonzales says he is content with his way of life. "I like living anywhere," he says. "This is a good place because we eat, first place and we working, second place. I like any place. A big town, a small town," Gonzales says.

He says he has never been married and does not think he will ever meet the right woman.

"Nobody lives with me," Gonzales says. "Just me and my dogs."

He says his two dogs — Blackie and Coyote — are his best friends.

"When I got nothing to do I taught them to shake hands and bring me something," Gonzales says, walking over to Coyote with a ball. "He likes to play ball all the time."

He says he receives no government aid. Gonzales says he walks around the town and collects aluminum cans for money.

"Everyday I collect cans," he says. "I can do easy work. We have to eat."

Gonzales says he suffers from a hernia so he cannot do very strenuous work. However he says he is willing to work odd jobs to make money and eventually hopes to have enough money for an operation. He says he never goes hungry and most often eats cheese and bread.

"I got two of these for $1," Gonzales boasts, holding a loaf of bread.

He says he feeds his dogs scraps he finds in the trash.

Presently, Gonzales is on parole for shooting a man 26 years ago who he says was trying to steal his money.

"He tried to (rob) me," Gonzales says. "I had $500 in my pocket and I told him he not my wife."

Anita Garza, Gonzales' niece, lives in a small house on the back of the property. He says he does not live there because the home is too small, but he shares the bathroom. Ms. Garza says her father, Gonzales' brother, is building a house on the property that will include a bed for her uncle.

Gonzales has a weathered map with circles around some of the places he has lived in Texas — Robstown, Corpus Christi, Hebronville, San Diego and Realitos where he was born.

Gonzales stresses that he is happy with his life. "It's a free country for everybody," Gonzales says, smiling.

State wins in mineral lease battle

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has ruled in the state's favor in a legal battle over a mineral lease on land partially owned by Exxon Corp.

In a unanimous decision, the court said that Exxon is not entitled to a share of the settlement paid to the state by Mobil as a result of a separate lawsuit.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro hailed the unanimous decision as a million-dollar victory for the state.

The dispute grew out of the settlement of a lawsuit concerning oil and gas leases on land in Duvall and Webb counties. South Texas rancher Clinton Manges in 1982 sued Mobil, claiming the company had violated terms of its 1925 mineral lease on the land. Manges sued on his own behalf as surface owner of the land, and as an agent for state, which owns the minerals.

The suit claimed Mobil had failed to adequately develop the lease, therefore depriving the state of oil and gas money that would be used for public education.

The state intervened as a plaintiff in 1983. Later that year, Manges and the state reached an agreement with Mobil. Exxon then entered the suit by asking for a portion of the settlement to be paid to the state.

The Supreme Court's ruling Wednesday upheld the summary judgment granted for the state by the Laredo trial court. The high court overruled the Texarkana Court of Appeals' decision in favor of Exxon.

Justice Raul Gonzalez' opinion for the Supreme Court said Exxon is not entitled to any portion of the settlement because the company "chose not to participate in developing and prosecuting the suit against Mobil."

"Thus, Exxon has not provided (the state) any valuable service that might entitle it to any part of the settlement," Gonzalez said.

Japanese stock scandal spreads; former Takeshita aide implicated

TOKYO (AP) — A former secretary to Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita Thursday joined the list of top political aides who reportedly made questionable stock dealings in a scandal spreading through the ranks of business and politics.

In related developments, the president of Japan's leading economic newspaper and the chairman of the company whose stock was involved in the dealings resigned because of the scandal.

Takeshita told reporters Thursday that one of his former secretaries, Ihei Aoki, earned profits by trading the shares of the real estate company Recruit-Cosmos.

He said Aoki obtained shares from the company then sold them shortly after it went public in 1986, when Takeshita was finance minister.

The dealings were not illegal, but the revelations were on the front pages of almost all Japanese newspapers Thursday and critics said the case highlights questionable ethics in the links between Japan's politicians and businessmen.

Takeshita did not elaborate on the number of shares Aoki traded or his profits from the deal, but acknowledged that the scandal would seriously affect the upcoming session of the Diet, Japan's parliament.

He said he would not take responsibility for his aide's action.

The controversy surfaced last month as a bribery case in a local government, but has entered a new dimension with a series of revelations that aides to leaders of the governing Liberal Democratic Party profited with Recruit-Cosmos stock.

According to reports in the Japanese press, Recruit-Cosmos gave stock or sold it at an artificially low price to high-ranking politicians. In some instances, the company reportedly lent money to politicians to buy the shares.

When the company went public and the stock price soared, the politicians were able to reap large profits from a negligible initial investment.

It was not clear what, if anything, the politicians did for Recruit-Cosmos in return.

Not only politicians are involved in the scandal.

The president of Japan's leading economic daily, Nihon Keizai Shimbun, resigned Wednesday after it was revealed that he, Ko Morita, had dealt in Recruit-Cosmos shares, violating the rules of his newspaper.

Hiromasa Ezoe, chairman of Recruit-Cosmos and its parent company Recruit Ltd., a giant information service company, announced that he will resign the two chairmanships.

The president of Recruit, Naotaka Ida, said Ezoe will also withdraw from the government's tax commission.

So far, the scandal has touched aides to Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa; former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone; Liberal Democratic Party Secretary General and former Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe; former Defense Agency Director General Koichi Kato; and Michio Watanabe, the former minister of international trade and industry.

Of them, only Miyazawa has denied knowing of the stock deals, while the others said they had become aware their aides had received the stock and made profits.

Saburo Tsukamoto, chairman of Democratic Socialist Party, the third largest opposition party, was also found in the list of people who gained about $200,000 through the transactions.

"Whether they are politicians or company heads, those who have responsibilities must behave prudently not to be criticized by the general public," Chief Cabinet Secretary Keizo Obuchi told a press conference in the only official comment from the government on the matter.

Legislation to ban insider trading took effect only in 1987, but is not retroactive.

Area representatives vie for state crown

By MARILYN POWERS
Lifestyles Editor

At least two representatives of the Texas Panhandle are among the 63 young Texas women who are competing this week in Fort Worth for the 1988 Miss Texas crown.

Amy Hester of Canadian, this year's Miss Wheatheart, and Laura Wansley of Lubbock, Miss Top O' Texas, are entrants in the scholarship pageant, which includes 20 returning veterans of the event.

Hester, 18, daughter of Jim and Beth Hester of Canadian, will sing the 1985 Sheena Easton hit, "Almost Over You," in the talent competition.

Her hobbies include piano and snow skiing. She is a 1988 graduate of Canadian High School, where she was active in band, the student newspaper, Future Teachers of America and Spanish Club. She is a vocal student of Susie Wilson of Pampa.

She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Williams of Shamrock and the great-granddaughter of Mrs. G.F. Morris of Pampa.

Wansley, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Wansley of Lubbock, is 5'7", 118 lbs., with dark brown hair and blue eyes. She is a student at Texas Tech University and hopes to become a hotel or resort manager after graduating.

Her talent entry in the 1988 Miss Top O' Texas Pageant was a jazz dance, and she planned to use the same entry in the Miss Texas pageant. Wansley edged out nine other competitors for the Miss Top O' Texas crown on March 5.

A third area pageant affiliated with the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant system, the Miss Lake Meredith Pageant, was not held this year.

Preliminary competition for the Miss Texas title began Wednesday and will run through tonight. Each contestant competes in four areas — swimsuit, talent, evening gown and judges' interview.

According to Don B. Magness, chairman of the board and chief executive officer for the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant, intelligence, talent and beauty (in that order) are the main requirements to become Miss Texas.

"The Miss Texas pageant isn't for beauties only; the girls have to be intelligent and talented also," he said.

A variety of talent acts are featured in this year's pageant, including two comedy monologues, a flutist, a fiddler, two ventriloquists, a harpist, a magician, several gymnasts, dancers and singers.

The judges' interview is one of the most crucial areas of judging in the pageant. During this time, each contestant meets the judges face to face and is asked questions ranging from their favorite color to current events. The contestants are then judged according to their intelligence, poise and response.

This year's theme, "An Evening With Barnum," is being directed and produced by Denny Keller of Ripley, Ohio. Included in the production cast are the reigning Miss Texas, Jo Thompson, who was also in the top 10 at the Miss America Pageant last September; former Miss Texas title-holders Tamara Hext Hilliard, Miss Texas 1984; Dana Rogers Harrison, Miss Texas 1983; and Gloria Gilbert Barron, Miss Texas 1982, who will be mistress of ceremonies.

The pageant will award more than $400,000 in scholarships and prizes, plus $40,000 in cash scholarships. Each contestant will have at least one college scholarship available to them.

The top 10 finalists will be chosen after preliminary competition ends tonight. These 10 will compete in the final pageant events at 8 p.m. Saturday, July 9, in the Tarrant County Convention Center Theatre.

Saturday night's competition will be televised live across Texas on an 18-station network which includes KAMR-TV, Channel 4, of Amarillo. Winner of the Miss Texas title will compete in the Miss America Scholarship Pageant later this year.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Sailor's dream woman comes to life by letter

DEAR ABBY: I am currently in the U.S. Navy and have just returned from a six-month deployment in Keflavik, Iceland. I want to tell you that through Operation Dear Abby, I met the woman of my dreams! We corresponded for six months and I finally met her when I came home on leave, and we've been inseparable ever since.

I want to thank the thousands of Dear Abby readers who sent letters to our troops in Keflavik. What a great morale booster! It helps to know that people appreciate our efforts when we're overseas. Needless to say, it made my holiday season much happier. Now my future looks brighter because of the wonderful woman I met — through you. Thank you.

A02 BRUCE BLOUNT,
KEY WEST, FLA.

P.S. Here's a letter from "her":
DEAR ABBY: I took part in your Operation Dear Abby to cheer those men in uniform who would be far from home over the holidays. I decided to write to someone in Iceland because that seemed like the most desolate place in the world to be over the holidays.

To my surprise, a Navy man named Bruce answered my letter. During the six months we exchanged letters, we discovered we had a lot in common. And when we finally met, I became a true believer in "love at first sight."

Abby, there is something very special about getting to know a person "between the lines" of letters. Our lives will never be the same. Thank you for bringing us together.

LIN CHARVAT,
SCHAUMBURG, ILL.

DEAR BRUCE AND LIN: Congratulations. Although not all pen pal relationships lead to romance, many do. Schoolteachers have made class projects of America Remembers and Operation Dear Abby with fascinating results.

For those out there who would like a pen pal in the North Pole and Alaska, here's the address for troops stationed there: Operation Dear Abby, America Remembers U.S. Forces in Alaska, c/o USCG Support Center Kodiak, Attention: PAO, Kodiak, Alaska 99619-5000. They represent men and women from all branches of the military.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I received a graduation announcement from "Jennifer," the daughter of a man who works for the same company my husband works for. They live in another state, we have never met the girl, and my husband and her father are not close friends. We saw no reason to send this girl a gift, but we did send a very nice card.

Today, we received an acknowledgment from Jennifer. Inside the envelope was the card we had sent her, folded to fit the small envelope. Her message was: "Thank you so much for the nice card for my graduation. I thought maybe you would like to use the card again. (Signed) Jennifer."

Abby, I never knew it was mandatory to send a gift when one receives an announcement. We send graduation gifts to all our relatives and friends we know well. Were we wrong to send only a card? I am now thinking that perhaps she could have used a book on etiquette. Please comment.

BEWILDERED IN NEWARK

DEAR BEWILDERED: An announcement is not a bill. Under the circumstances, you were under no obligation to send a gift. I doubt that an etiquette book would help. What Jennifer could really use is a good spanking.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding unprofessional remarks made to patients, and violations of privacy by so-called "office nurses," please keep in mind, Abby, that many of these workers are not registered nurses — they are just called so by either themselves or the physicians for whom they work.

An education in nursing does not automatically guarantee tact, but we nurses do learn subtle ways of posing embarrassing questions to patients.

A former nursing instructor of mine resented the free use of the title "nurse" for anyone wearing white in a doctor's office, so she got her point across by merely asking, "And from what school of nursing did you graduate?"

M.V. R.N., B.S.N.,
ALBERTSON, N.Y.

DEAR M.V.: Thanks for the important reminder: All that glitters is not gold, and all who say, "Yes, Doctor," are not nurses.

Use dry brush for blending, shading

By PRISCILLA HAUSER

Power failures can give us very enlightening lessons about the way life used to be lived. One example is the use of candlelight, definitely romantic but tricky as a functional light source.

If you've ever tried to read or work by candlelight, you know that the amount of light you get depends on a number of things, such as the size and shape of the candle and where and how it is positioned.

Shown here is an adjustable candle stand with crossbar feet, typical of the early Pennsylvania Dutch. A ratchet mechanism in the pedestal made it possible to raise and lower the table top, to provide the best light from a candle.

Most such candle stands had only a small candle holder attached to the adjustable base. This one has a small table top instead, which makes it a more versatile piece of furniture in our time.

It also provides a perfect space to decorate with a lovely painted design! I painted Pennsylvania Dutch roses on top.

This folk-art flower form begins as a simple ball or circle of paint. Blending and shading techniques transform the ball into a lovely, blossoming rose. Commastroke leaf forms and border complete the picture on this candle stand table.

If you would like to work from our step-by-step plans, you may order them in our new packet, Priscilla Hauser's Toile & Decorative Painting on Wood. It contains a booklet of detailed painting instructions, full-size patterns and paint-along color worksheets for six lovely designs, plus illustrated step-by-step plans for building 10 easy, useful and charming wood projects.

To order, specify Packet No. 4300 and send $24.95, a special savings through your newspaper of $10 off the regular $34.95 price. Mail to: For Whom the Brush Toiles, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008.

Although most designs can be very attractively color-book painted (without shading), they are really more beautiful, eye-catching and satisfying to paint with the subtle nuances of a little blending and shading. It gives a quality of life, depth and realism to the design elements.

I hope you will at least try some blending and shading. I know you can do it beautifully! It's easy, with practice, and will make painting much more interesting and pleasurable for you.

For dry-brush blending, thin the paint only slightly, to the consistency of soft, spreadable butter or cake icing. Use a flat brush, as large as you can be comfortable with, because you do not want tiny stroke marks to show in the finished work.

It is difficult to remember, but this "dry brush" technique requires that you DO NOT TOUCH THE TURPENTINE with your brush, as you would quite often when doing brush strokes or line-work. I find it helpful to cover the turp container with a rag or piece of cardboard, to keep myself from dipping the brush without thinking.

Practice blending in a rectangle on a piece of tracing paper. Put down the first color on the paper, filling in the rectangle except for a small area at one end. Wipe your brush on a soft, absorbent rag or towel, but do not clean it in the turp.

Pick up a second color with the same brush and put it down on the paper at the unpainted end of the rectangle. Wipe the brush again, and then begin blending by stroking the second color, moving it into the first color.

Wipe the brush often and add more of the second color if necessary. Blend with a LIGHT TOUCH, moving only the top-most layer of paint. Don't wipe too much paint off the brush, and, most important, STOP when you think it looks good, before you overblend and make mud!

You may also blend by patting the second color over the first, rather than by stroking. Patting is a more difficult technique to master, but practice makes perfect.

Armstrong County plans centennial celebration

CLAUDE — The 57th annual Caprock Roundup and Rodeo will be held Friday and Saturday, July 22-23, at Claude.

The event has been designated as the Centennial Caprock to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Claude's founding. In the fall of 1887, the Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company laid tracks through Armstrong County, and cities such as Goodnight, Washburn and Armstrong (later renamed Claude) were organized.

Regular activities have been scheduled for the weekend, along with many special events. On Friday, July 22, the American Legion Harold Gist Post 344 will hold a TCRA-approved rodeo at 7 p.m. at the Claude rodeo arena. Immediately following the rodeo, a country and Western dance will be held on the open slab north of the rodeo grounds.

Saturday's activities will be held on the courthouse square, beginning with a parade at 10 a.m. Adobe Walls Indian Dancers will perform at 11 a.m., followed by a barbecue served by Claude Lion's Club at noon.

The Top of Texas Cloggers will dance at 1 p.m., and judging of a beard growing contest will be held at 1:45 p.m. The Little Mr. and Miss Armstrong County Pageant will begin at 2 p.m., followed by the Miss Armstrong County Queen Contest.

Throughout the day Saturday, the Plum Creek Brigade (Mountain Men), the Lone Star Shootists and a working blacksmith will provide demonstrations and skits. A local art show will be held in the west side of the Country Store.

On Saturday night, the rodeo will resume at 7 p.m. and another dance will be held immediately afterward.

People you have helped in the past make a concerted effort to repay you the year ahead. Two, in particular, look like they will make outstanding contributions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can find plenty of enjoyable things to do today that won't be expensive. For the sake of your budget, steer clear of the activities that are hard on your purse. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Matchmaker can help you understand what it might take to restore the relationship. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll make a favorable impression today if you are expansive and friendly, rather than assertive. Don't come on strong.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be self-assured if you have to deal with a person who likes to cause problems. You'll know how to handle the situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Business situations should work out favorably for you today if friends are not directly involved. Keep your social and business lives separate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't be too upset with your mate today if he or she can't see what you want to do for their own good. The dawn will eventually break.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) though this will be a productive day might not be as rewarding as it could be because of some actions you may take later in the day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Moderation is a must today, because you might have to contend with a tendency to overindulge. Enjoy yourself, but keep a foot on the brake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A close friend may be a source of annoyance today, but it's nothing that can't be managed. If you laugh it off, the friend will too.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your first ideas are likely to be your best ones today, so strive to follow them through. The revisions you make aren't apt to be as effective.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Material opportunity is about you today. There is a possibility you might not capitalize on it properly, owing to impulsiveness or indifference.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your motives will be unselfish today, yet you are likely to fare better than the people you are trying to assist. It won't be your fault.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Things in general should work rather smoothly today. However, there is a chance you might undermine one of your own achievements. Don't be irrational.

All-Star rosters complete

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Greg Maddux and a bunch of newcomers hope to continue one of the oldest traditions in baseball: Beating the American League in the All-Star Game.

Maddux and rookie Chris Sabo are among 18 players who made the 28-man National League All-Star roster for the first time. Pitchers and reserves were announced Thursday by NL President Bart Giamatti and St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog.

"Making the team isn't something I expected going into this season. I was 6-14 last year," said Maddux, who leads the NL with 14 victories. "I was just hoping to get back to .500."

Maddux, 22, is one of six Chicago Cubs on the team, the most All-Stars from any club in the majors. He is scheduled to pitch Sunday against San Diego, but said he might be able to work Tuesday night in the showcase event at Cincinnati.

"I've never aired it out on just two days' rest," Maddux said. "But I think I could go an inning."

Joining Maddux from the third-place Cubs are second baseman Ryne Sandberg, shortstop Shawn Dunston, third baseman Vance Law and outfielders Rafael Palmeiro and Andre Dawson. Sandberg and Dawson were voted as starters in fan balloting, which was announced Wednesday.

"We got six? That's great," Maddux said. The NL leads the All-Star series 37-20 and has won 14 of the last 16 along with 22 of 25. "I just hope I can help the National League win it some way," said Cincinnati's Sabo, a third baseman, is batting .310 with 10 home runs and 26 stolen bases.

David Cone, in his first full season with the New York Mets, is 9-2 with a 2.35 earned run average. Other first-time All-Star pitchers are San Diego's Mark Davis, Philadelphia's Kevin Gross, Cincinnati's Danny Jackson, and the Cardinals' Todd Worrell.

Dwight Gooden of the Mets, making the All-Star team for the fourth time, and Houston's Bob Knepper and Los Angeles' Orel Hershiser, both selected for the second time, round out the nine-man staff.

Twins' Viola expected to start on mound

NEW YORK (AP) — Even if they didn't land a starting berth in the All-Star Game, the Minnesota Twins will be well represented, thanks to Manager Tom Kelly.

Starting with ace pitcher Frank Viola, Kelly placed five players from his defending World Series champions on the American League team which faces the National League in Cincinnati on Tuesday night.

Along with Viola, who leads the AL with a 14-2 record and 2.24 earned run average, pitcher Jeff Reardon, catcher Tim Lardner, infielder Gary Gaetti and outfielder Kirby Puckett were among the pitchers and reserves selected Thursday by Kelly and AL president Bobby Brown.

"This is something you dream about. You'd be lying if you said it wasn't a dream when you were growing up to play in an All-Star Game," said Viola, who would appear to have the inside track on starting the mid-season showcase at Riverfront Stadium.

Another pitcher with a good chance to start is Boston's Roger Clemens, who at 12-3 with a 2.45 ERA is second in both categories.

Clemens, Mark Gubicza of Kansas City, Dave Stieb of Toronto and Doyle Alexander of Detroit were the other starters who made the team in addition to Viola. Gubicza is 11-5, Steib 10-4 and Alexander 8-4.

Relievers Dennis Eckersley of Oakland (25 saves), Doug Jones of Cleveland (20 saves), Dan Plesac of Milwaukee (19 saves) and Reardon (23 saves) also were picked.

Jeff Russell of Texas, a spot starter who is 10-2, completed the 10-man staff, which has only two left-handers — Viola and Plesac.

In filling out the American League team, Kelly and Brown selected two shortstops — Cal Ripken of Baltimore and Ozzie Guillen of Chicago. One of them probably will replace starter Alan Trammell of Detroit who is on the 15-day disabled list with a broken left elbow. Ripken is batting .276 with 13 homers and 46 runs batted in after a slow start and Guillen is batting .265 with no homers and 19 RBIs.

The other infield reserves picked were Carney Lansford of Oakland, Don Mattingly of New York, Johnny Ray of California, Harold Reynolds of Seattle and George Brett of Kansas City, who was named to the team for the 13th consecutive season.

Brett, a long-time third baseman, made the team after moving to first.

Mike Greenwell of Boston and Puckett are the backup outfielders behind Jose Canseco of Oakland and New York's Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield. Puckett, who finished fourth among outfielders, 80,000 votes behind Henderson, is batting .350, the leading average of any reserve in either league. Greenwell is fourth in the AL in batting at .337.

O's blank Rangers

BALTIMORE (AP) — At the expense of the Texas Rangers, signs of life are emanating from the Baltimore Orioles.

Another solid pitching performance and three Baltimore home runs gave the Orioles a 6-0 victory over the Rangers Thursday night. Baltimore has beaten Texas in three of four meetings in the last week.

Rookie Oswaldo Peraza held the Rangers to six hits over seven innings for his second major league victory. He struck out seven and retired 11 in a row at one point, raising his record to 2-3.

Peraza's performance gave the Orioles pitching staff a 3.12 ERA over its last 10 games.

"I'm very encouraged," said Oriole manager Frank Robinson when asked about the club's recent improvement in its pitching. "We're very happy with four of our five guys. The young guys are pitching well, but the old guys are, too."

"You have to feel good. I do," Robinson said. "Not just about the rest of this year, but the future. If these guys continue to improve we have the makings of a good pitching staff."

Peraza earned his second victory in four starts since being called up from the minors on June 20.

"The first four innings were a struggle, but he settled down into a groove after that and really pitched well," Orioles manager Frank Robinson said of Peraza. "Since he's been back (from the minors), he's pitched the way we thought he could after watching him in spring training."

The Orioles have suddenly found a way to beat left-handed pitching. They have won four of their last five against left-handed starters after losing 22 of their first 25 against lefties this season.

Baltimore roughed up Texas starter Paul Kilgus for six runs, five earned, and knocked the left-hander out two batters into the eighth inning.

Kilgus, 7-8, lost to the Orioles for the second time in five nights and has a 1-5 record over his last nine starts.

The Orioles also continued their recent home run binge with three more Thursday night — a two-run homer by Ken Gerhart and solo homers by Mickey Tettleton and Cal Ripken. Baltimore has outscored its opponents, 18-8, in its last 15 games.

All three were first-pitch home runs.

Matson still the humble giant

"I can't believe that he isn't already there," wrote Texas A&M track coach Charley Thomas. But that oversight has now been corrected...or at least will be shortly after 7 pm tonight.

Thomas statement was part of a letter of recommendation for his former star weightman's installation into the National High School Sports Hall of Fame. Tonight, at the Hyatt Regency in Kansas City, Randy Matson will join 13 other outstanding individuals who are part of the Class of '88, sixth group to be installed and raising the total number to 90 since the hall was begun in 1982.

The Hall of Fame, housed at the headquarters of the National Federation of State High School Associations in Kansas City, Missouri will contain 35 athletes, 31 coaches, nine sports officials, 13 other people associated with sports, and two corporate members.

Matson, who was unquestionably Pampa High School's most successful athletic achiever, said he "wasn't all that excited" when first notified of his selection last March. "But when they sent me the list of those already installed, I was truly honored and proud to be chosen." Going in with him tonight are athletes Len Dawson, Cliff Hagab, Elroy "Crazylegs" Hirsch and Jim Taylor.

The list of athlete's names already installed is impressive: Alan Ameche, Denise Long Andre, Johnny Bench, Bill Bradley, Chandra Cheeseborough, Bart Conner, Dwight Eddlemann, Joe Ferguson, Dan Gable, Red Grange, Ken Hall, John Havlicek, Janet Karvonen, Don Kessinger, Jerry Lucas, John Mayasich, Rick Mount, Kim Mulkey, Jack Nicklaus, Cindy Noble, Al Oerter, Merlin Olsen, Jesse Owens, Arnold Palmer, Oscar Robertson, Jim Ryun, Pat Summerall, Fuzzy Vandivier and Byron "Whizzer" White. No wonder the winner of two Olympic medals, the first man in the history of the world to throw the shot past the once-impenetrable 70-foot barrier, and the man whose personality remains totally unchanged by all the honors, was humbled to be chosen.

Matson competed against Oerter in throwing the discus, and with Ryun on the professional track association's limited existence.

Selection to this honor is a two-level process involving a screening committee composed of active high school administrators, coaches and officials, and a final selection committee composed of highly respected athletic and business leaders across the nation. Nominations are made through member state associations and three other professional associations. Most area sports fans know Randy's credentials. But for the younger generation who wonder about the name on the high school track and the picture in the trophy case, here is a brief resume.

As a schoolboy at PHS in the early 1960s, Randy set state records in the shot put (64-7) and discus (185-0) as a junior en route to state titles in both events. His senior year he set records at most every meet and climaxed the year with new state records of 66-10½ in the shot and 199-4 in the discus, both close to all-time national marks. And before those track seasons he also participated in football and basketball, earning all state honors his senior case season, played in the Texas HS Coaches Association all-star game and finished PHS with 1,171 points.

His greatest fear following graduation was travelling to St. Louis alone for his first AAU meet, wondering if "I might get lost", he told me the night before leaving. But no problems, and he quickly gained an international reputation, winning a silver medal in the shot put at the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo, and a gold during the 1968 Games in Mexico City, his father sitting in the stands rooting him on.

In between those Olympic performances he was making headlines at Texas A&M, where he now serves as executive director of the 100,000 member-Former

Pampa 16-18 team entered in tournament at Canadian

The Pampa 16-18 year-old baseball team is entered in a Babe Ruth Tournament Saturday at Canadian.

Pampa meets Childress at 12 noon Saturday. Other teams entered include Dalhart, Dumas, Perryton and Canadian.

The Babe Ruth 16-18 District Tournament starts next week in Perryton.

Pampa's first game is against Dumas at 8 p.m. Tuesday night. If Pampa wins, they will play again Wednesday, also at 8 p.m.

Pampa split a doubleheader with Childress in Babe Ruth 16-18 baseball action Tuesday night.

Childress scored four runs in the fifth inning of the opener for a 6-5 win. It was Pampa's first loss after six straight victories.

Losing pitcher was Brandon Knutson while Morgan picked up the win.

Pampa bounced back to win the nightcap 8-0.

In the opener, Billy Wortham, Mike Cagle, Sammie Franklin, Troy Owens and James Bybee each had hits for Pampa.

Owens struck out 10 and walked six

Mast takes one-stroke lead in Busch Classic

By JOE MACENKA Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Long after many other golfers would have abandoned professional aspirations, Dick Mast pressed on, and his diligence is starting to produce results.

Mast, a 14-year pro seeking his first PGA Tour victory, found himself leading the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic after shooting a 7-under-par 64 in Thursday's opening round.

"I definitely was pleased," said Mast, who came within one shot of the course record on the 6,776-yard Kingsmill Golf Club layout.

Leads by one

Going into today's second round of the $650,000 event, Mast held a one-stroke advantage over Tom Purtzer, Tom Byrum and Bill Buttner.

Two shots behind the leader were Larry Rinker, Charles Bolling, Clark Burroughs and Jerry Pate, who is attempting a comeback from three shoulder operations that sidelined him for much of the past six years.

Mast, 37, of Orlando, Fla., spent several years in the 1970s trying to make it on the tour before losing his card for the third time after the 1979 season. At that point, he retreated to the satellite circuit to hone his game, and enjoyed success at that level for five years.

"I guess I was dubbed 'King of the Mini-Tours,'" said Mast, who got his PGA Tour card back in 1986 after winning his qualifying school session.

Mast finished 109th on the winnings list in 1986 and 103rd last year. This season, he tied for seventh at the Kemper Open in early June, and tied for sixth the following week at the Westchester Classic.

"I've played well this month and would like to continue," said Mast, who made seven birdie puts of between 2 and 20 feet. "My putting has been a little inconsistent, but I putted well today."

Like Mast, Byrum played in the morning before rising temperatures and winds hardened Kingsmill's greens. Byrum was seven under before bogeying the final hole, and began his round by three-putting the first hole for a bogey.

Buttner, playing in the afternoon, went five under after eight holes. He bogeyed the ninth and added three birdies and a bogey after the turn.

Purtzer, who missed the cut at last week's Western Open after shooting a pair of 78s, said he should "get the most improved player award from last week. I don't know if I'm 13 shots better. I do know the course isn't 13 shots easier."

Nine tied at 67

The nine golfers at 67 included 1986 Anheuser-Busch champion Fuzzy Zoeller; Bobby Clampett, the runner-up in this tournament last year, and Peter Jacobsen, who lost the Western Open when he double bogeyed the final hole.

A large group at 68 was headed by U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange, who lives on the grounds of Kingsmill; defending Anheuser-Busch winner Mark McCumber and Mark Wiebe, the 1985 champion.

Sixty-three golfers broke par Thursday, and the 146-player field was to be trimmed to the low 70s scorers plus ties after today's second round.
