Auditorium workers Jamie Thames, left, and Billy Roberts make final stage preparations for Talent Search.

Pampa planning early 4th of July party

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

While America officially celebrates its independence Monday, Pampa plans to get the festivities under way two days early.

Pampa's third annual July 4 celebration and talent search is scheduled Saturday and Sunday, featuring something for everyone.

The two-day party gets underway at 9 a.m. Saturday at M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium as starry-eyed hopefuls begin their quest for more than $15,000 in prize money and a chance to compete on TV's Star Search.

Preliminary rounds of the Talent Search will continue all day

Saturday and much of Sunday before the finals, scheduled for 6 p.m. Sunday.

The top five acts in each age category will re-compete during the finals, according to Auditorium Manager Danny Parkerson.

Outdoors, opening ceremonies get under way in Coronado Park, just south of the auditorium, at 10 a.m. Saturday. Food and game booths will be open from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m.

Also outside will be a car show featuring vintage models, and a live entertainment stage, sponsored by KGRO-KOMX radio station. Prizes will be given in the car show.

Saturday night, a street dance is scheduled in the auditorium parking lot, featuring Still River playing country music, Kickback playing '50s and '60s rock'n'roll, and disc jockey Onyx playing rock'n'roll. A late-night breakfast is scheduled from 11 p.m. until 1 a.m.

A non-denominational church service, led by the Rev. Aaron Thames of Faith Tabernacle, will open Sunday's activities at 8 a.m. in the auditorium.

Following is a schedule of the weekend's festivities:

FRIDAY

★ 2 p.m. until 8 p.m. — early registration for Talent Search.

SATURDAY

★ 8 a.m. — continued registration for Talent Search.

★ 9 a.m. — preliminary rounds of Talent Search in auditorium.

★ 10 a.m. until 7 p.m. — opening ceremonies; food and game booths open; car show begins; entertainment begins on stage in park.

★ 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. — street dance in auditorium parking lot.

★ 11 p.m. until 1 a.m. — late-night breakfast served at dance.

SUNDAY

★ 8 a.m. until 8:30 a.m. — non-denominational worship service in auditorium.

★ 9 a.m. — preliminary rounds of Talent Search continue with group competition.

★ 6 p.m. — Talent Search finals begin.

Montana 4-H'ers get view of Panhandle

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

They were impressed by the size of the feedlots and the professionalism of the cast of TEXAS, but were a bit perplexed about biscuits and gravy for breakfast and shocked by the choppy waters of Lake Greenbelt.

"They" were the 22 Montana 4-H students and six sponsors who arrived in Pampa Saturday for a five-day visit with Gray County 4-H families in an exchange program. Next year, local 4-H students will travel to Hardin, Mont., to see the world from their guests' point of view.

Hardin is a small community of a little more than 3,000, explained Montana 4-H'er Terri Pitsch. Most of them are related in one way or another, she added, indicating her cousin, Michael Bastrom, who was preparing to ski at Lake Greenbelt Wednesday.

Tanya Egget, guest of the Frances and Eileen Kludt family, said she is the youngest daughter of a surveyor who also works with the Bureau of Indian Affairs at the Crow Indian Reservation near Hardin, located in the southeast corner of the state.

Egget, a recent graduate of Hardin High School, plans to enter a nearby university and become a veterinarian. Her specialty? Big cats, she calmly replies. "I want to work in a zoo with the big cats," Egget explains. Why? "Because I want to do something different."

As many Panhandle experiences as possible were crammed into the five-day visit. Gray County hosts took their Montana guests to a tour of the American Quarter Horse Association and the Discovery Center in Amarillo. That afternoon, they visited the Panhandle Plains Museum in Canyon, followed by a look at Palo Duro Canyon and the outdoor play, TEXAS.

Next came a capsule look of Pampa, with the Montana youth visiting the Hudson Horse Farm, Moody Farms and Barrett Ostriches. Bus driver Ron Johnson quipped that he was in the wrong business once he learned of the value of the big birds.

Wednesday, 19 of the Montana youth and all the sponsors went to Westgate Mall in Amarillo and were to meet the others at Lake Greenbelt near Clarendon for skiing and a cookout. However, the bus had other ideas. Its starter went out, stranding the group for several hours. They arrived a bit late, but still eager to join the fun.

Lake Greenbelt's choppy waters surprised the would-be skiers. "Where we ski, it's as smooth as glass all the time," said Cory Meredith, valedictorian of Hardin's 1988 graduating class.

Undaunted, they crowded the five boats brought by hosts Joe VanZandt, Earl Smith, Jim Bruton, Ron Brauchi and John Mark Bagerman. Soon the waters were choppy, indeed, with the wakes of the passing boats and skiers.

Less adventurous 4-H'ers, or those waiting their turn, passed the afternoon playing in the lake or lying on the sand while adult sponsors and hosts watched them in-

Two-day bus drive of 12 hours each day brought the group to Pampa, with a one-day stay in Denver. While there, the 4-H'ers saw the Denver U.S. Treasury mint, toured the Coors Brewery and ate at the prestigious Casa Bonitas restaurant. Their hotel was near Denver's Mile-High Stadium, giving them the opportunity to watch the minor league Denver Zeppers and Toledo Mudhens play.

At 6 a.m. today, the group were on the road again, heading home. After an overnight stay in Fort Collins, Colo., they expect to arrive in Hardin at 5 p.m. Friday, just in time for their bus driver Johnson, who is also the town fire chief, to start preparing for the Fourth of July fireworks.

Exchange trips through 4-H have increased in popularity in past years. Next summer, local 4-H youths will have the opportunity to see what life is like in Big Horn County, Mont.

Last summer, Gray County 4-H'ers traveled to Illinois in a similar exchange. Ironically, the Montana 4-H'ers went to Illinois last summer also.

Michael Bastrom of Montana wonders about the choppy waters at Greenbelt.

Supreme Court favors special prosecutor law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's resounding endorsement of the special prosecutor law dispels any doubt about the authority of independent counsels investigating alleged wrongdoing by past and present Reagan administration officials.

The high court's 7-1 decision Wednesday removes a cloud from the Iran-Contra conspiracy case, and it clears the way for the sentencing of former White House aide Michael K. Deaver for lying under oath about the lobbying business he formed after leaving President Reagan's staff.

The ruling also removes the special prosecutor issue from former White House political director Lyn Nofziger's challenge to his 90-day sentence and conviction for illegally lobbying former administration colleagues.

And the court's decision revives independent counsel Alexia Morrison's long dormant investigation of allegations that former Assistant Attorney General Theodore B. Olson lied to a congressional committee investigating the Superfund scandal at the Environmental Protection Agency.

Challenges by Olson and two other former high-ranking Justice Department officials to grand jury subpoenas obtained by Morrison led to the high court's ruling on the independent counsel provisions of the Ethics in Government Act.

"Obviously we are very pleased with the opinion and particularly at the fact that it was reached nearly unanimously by the court," said Morrison, whose investigation has been stymied for nearly a year.

The high court, in a decision written by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, rejected arguments that appointment of independent counsels by a special court violated the Constitution's doctrine of separation of powers.

Rehnquist wrote that the special prosecutors did not encroach on the power of the executive branch to investigate crimes.

The decision drew an impassioned dissent from Justice Anto-

EPA rules against oil, gas wastes regulation as hazardous material

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has decided against regulating oil and gas drilling wastes as hazardous material, saying another layer of regulation is impractical for the hundreds of thousands of wells across the country.

But the agency is promising to get tough on states that fail to enforce existing regulations governing the disposal of such wastes as brine and drilling muds, and ensuring abandoned wells are capped.

"It was a tough decision but I think we made the right decision," said J. Winston Porter, EPA's assistant administrator for solid waste and emergency response. "We were concerned about layering on another level of regulations."

The biggest problem found by the EPA at the nation's wells was the disposal of brine — salt water that is extracted from wells in the drilling process. Porter said regulations already exist to cover that problem.

An environmental group criticized the decision as contrary to the public interest.

"These substances ... do contain hazardous wastes with names 14 syllables long," said Mike Matz, Alaska representative of the Sierra Club. "Clearly the EPA once again is favoring big oil and big business and is shunning its responsibility to protect the public health and the environment."

Congress in 1976 gave EPA authority to decide what waste needs to be covered by the strict handling and disposal regulations that apply to hazardous wastes, but it required a study before decisions could be made about oil and gas production wastes.

EPA in December completed the study and then allowed public comment before drafting its recommendations. The final report was to be presented to Congress today.

EPA estimated in its report that oil and gas production would be cut up to 12 percent if drilling wastes were treated as hazardous. The cost of the program would have been at least $1 billion and could have ranged up to $6 billion, Porter said.

The American Petroleum Institute had put those costs much higher — up to $37 billion the first year and $7 billion annually thereafter.

EPA said stripper wells — those that generally produce less than 10 barrels a day — could not have easily absorbed the additional costs for hazardous waste management.

Oil-state lawmakers such as Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Texas, opposed any new treatment requirements. He said compliance would have been virtually impossible from an economic standpoint and in many instances unnecessary.

Laws dealing with hazardous wastes are "not very flexible and just didn't seem to fit this industry very well," Porter said.

County commissioners to begin budget studies

Discussion on Gray County's 1989 budget begins Friday when commissioners meet at 9:30 a.m. in the courthouse. The meeting is open to the public.

Commissioners normally hold several budget meetings and hearings throughout the summer before finalizing the budget in late August or early September. Currently, the county tax rate is 25.6 cents per $100 valuation.

County taxpayers face a budget squeeze this year because of November's fatal explosions at the Hoechst Celanese chemical plant west of town. The twin blasts killed three men and injured 37 people.

Although Celanese currently is in the process of rebuilding the plant, its value dropped nearly $100 million as a result of the explosions, according to figures released by the Gray County Appraisal District.

Pampa schools have been able to make up the difference with state disaster aid, but no such relief exists for counties in Texas.

In other action Friday, commissioners plan to:

■ consider the price for a lease renewal with the Soil Conservation Service;

■ discuss appointment of Gray County Appraisal District board members on a staggered term basis;

■ review a county self-insurance plan for medical coverage;

■ authorize advertising for independent auditing services on 1988 county books;

■ consider a request from County Clerk Wanda Carter to attend an election school in Austin during August;

■ consider an adjustment to the 1988 budget; and

■ pay salaries and bills and consider time deposits and transfers as recommended by the county auditor.

Obituaries

RAY G. BURGER

Funeral services for Ray G. Burger, 92, are scheduled for 2 p.m. Friday in Carmichael-Whately Colonial Chapel with the Rev. Harley Stump of McPherson, Kan., and the Rev. Laverne Hinson of Church of the Brethren, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Mr. Burger died Wednesday. He was born Jan. 17, 1896, in Memphis, Mo., and moved to Indian Territory with his family in 1901. He married Gladys Forney in 1921 in Thomas, Okla., and they settled in Ochiltree County. They moved to the Pampa area in 1945, remaining until his retirement from farming and ranching in 1970.

Mr. Burger was a World War I veteran and had served on the school board and tax equalization board in Waka. He was a lifetime member of Church of the Brethren, a charter member of the American Legion in Thomas, Okla., and a member of the Knife and Fork Club in Pampa, Persimmon Hill and the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. He had a great interest in music and tape recording.

Survivors include his wife, Gladys; a son, Dean H. Burger of Pampa; a sister, Irene Mayo of Sequin; two grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be to Pampa Meals on Wheels, Groom Memorial Service or a favorite charity.

JOHN "JACK" PLUMMER

Funeral services for John "Jack" Plummer, 72, are scheduled for 4 p.m. Saturday in Carmichael-Whately Colonial Chapel with Keith Feerer, associate minister at Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Mr. Plummer died Wednesday night. He was a member of Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ and retired from Cabot Corp. in 1978 after 20 years of service. He was a World War II veteran. He married Mae Derrick in 1946 in Pampa.

Survivors include his wife, Mae; a daughter, Debbie Parish of Austin; two grandchildren, a niece and a nephew.

BEVERLY JOHNSON

MIDLAND — Funeral services for Beverly Johnson, 38, a Shamrock native and sister of a Shamrock woman, were to be at 1 p.m. today in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Alfred Johnson, minister of Main Street Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Westlawn Cemetery at Fritch.

Mrs. Johnson died Tuesday. She was reared in Shamrock and Fritch and a 1967 graduate of Sanford-Fritch High School. She moved to Midland in 1970, working for several oil companies as an accountant. At the time of her death, she worked for John Hendrix Corp.

Survivors include her parents, Fred and Charlene Farmer of Fritch; two sisters, Freda Smith of Shamrock and Mayda King of Great Bend, Kan.; three nieces and two nephews.

The family requests memorials be to the local chapter of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Law

nin Scalia, who wrote that "by its short-sighted action today, I fear the court has permanently encumbered the Republic with an institution that will do it great harm."

Ruling as it did, the court further validated the authority of independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh to prosecute former White House aide Oliver North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and others on charges stemming from the Iran-Contra affair.

Walsh accepted a parallel appointment offered by the Justice Department last year to blunt constitutional challenges to the law.

But if the high court had ruled the other way, North, Poindexter and their co-defendants might have been able to challenge evidence Walsh gathered before he was given the second appointment.

Harvard University law professor Laurence H. Tribe, who represented Walsh, said the court found that "vague notions of separations of powers are not enough to justify invalidating" Congress' solution to "a serious problem that would otherwise have undermined credible law enforcement."

James C. McKay, the independent counsel who prosecuted North, also accepted a backup appointment five weeks after he began his investigation.

If the law had been invalidated, North would have challenged the use of evidence obtained by McKay before he was given the parallel authority.

Morrison and Deaver's prosecutor, independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr., refused to accept the Justice Department's offer, choosing instead to set the stage for the constitutional battle.

Deaver's conviction was put in jeopardy in Jan. 22 when the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here ruled 2-1 that the special prosecutor law was unconstitutional.

Following that decision, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson stayed further proceedings in the Deaver case pending final resolution of the issue by the high court.

Seymour called the decision "a major victory for the public interest" and said he would ask Jackson to set sentencing "at an early date."

Deaver could be sentenced up to five years for each of three felony convictions for lying to a House subcommittee and a grand jury that investigated his lobbying activities for possible conflict-of-interest violations.

Deaver still faces a difficult time trying to stay open permanently. Bill Ellis, an El Paso lawyer representing 10 former clients of the program, said, "I think we have to remember that their license has been revoked," and compared the situation to that of someone out of jail on bail while he appeals his conviction.

No date has been set for appeals hearing.

New state laws target AIDS, rolling papers, sports agents

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

Rhode Island will tax rolling papers to discourage marijuana use under new laws effective Friday, while Georgia and Washington state will begin testing sex offenders for AIDS, and Colorado will require tests even before conviction. Washington state, Indiana, Idaho and Georgia are making it a felony for an AIDS carrier to knowingly transmit the disease.

In other legislation effective July 1, motorists will pay higher fuel taxes in Connecticut and New Jersey. Georgia will bar executions of murderers who are mentally retarded, Indiana, Mississippi and Georgia will impose regulation on sports agents, and many Kansas taxpayers will begin paying lower rates.

Georgia's new law requires AIDS tests of anyone convicted of crimes involving sex or drug abuse and, eventually, of all inmates in state prisons. Beginning Friday, an AIDS carrier who engages in AIDS-transmitting behavior in Georgia without informing his or her partner will be guilty of the felony of reckless conduct.

Washington state's law, which also extends anti-discrimination protection to persons infected with the AIDS virus, requires testing and counseling for those convicted of sex crimes, prostitution or intravenous drug use. Violent prison inmates could be subjected to AIDS tests against their will under the statute.

Persons who intentionally infect others with AIDS would face a 10-year prison sentence in Washington.

Colorado's AIDS-testing law applies to suspects in sex crimes even before the case has gone to trial. Results would be available "to any victim of the sexual offense who requests such disclosure," according to the law, but those victims would face fines or jail terms if they disclosed that information to unauthorized people.

New legislation in Indiana will require AIDS education for health care workers, teachers, public-school students and marriage-license applicants. Each school corporation in Indiana will be required to have a community advisory committee to screen AIDS education materials.

Indiana also is making it a crime to knowingly donate AIDS-contaminated blood or to fail to notify state officials when a person tests positive for the AIDS virus. The maximum penalty for donating contaminated blood would be eight years in prison, or 50 years if someone becomes infected by the donated blood.

The law also allows Indiana judges to order the temporary detention of AIDS victims who persist in high-risk behavior.

Starting Friday, applicants for marriage licenses in Idaho will have to state they have read a pamphlet on AIDS provided by the county clerk. Another law provides for testing for the AIDS virus in organs and fluids to be transplanted and of people donating organs or fluids for transplant, and makes it a felony to knowingly transmit the disease to another.

Georgia is also creating a new option for juries in murder cases. They will be allowed to find a defendant "guilty but mentally retarded." Such convictions would not be subject to capital punishment.

Indiana, effective Friday, will require agents who recruit athletes with remaining amateur eligibility to notify schools 10 days in advance of signing. An agent who fails to disclose recruitment and then signs an athlete could face up to four years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Mississippi will require sports agents to register with the state, and has established guidelines for contracts and business relationships between college athletes and agents.

Georgia's Athlete Agent Regulatory Commission, also intended to curb abuses by athletic agents, will come into existence Friday.

Connecticut is raising its tax on gasoline by a penny, to 20 cents a gallon, while New Jersey is adding 2 1/2 cents to its tax on motor fuels, raising the total to 10 1/2 cents a gallon. Both states will use the added revenue for transportation improvements.

Kansas is scrapping its nine-bracket income tax system, which had rates from 2 percent to 9 percent, in favor of two brackets, and repealing the state deduction for federal taxes paid. Single taxpayers earning up to $27,500 will pay 4.8 percent; those earning more will pay 6.1 percent. Married taxpayers who make up to $35,000 will pay 4.05 percent, while those with higher incomes will pay 5.3 percent.

State officials say one-third of Kansas residents will pay more taxes, but lower-income families will pay less.

Rhode Island's cigarette tax is going up 2 cents, to 27 cents a pack, effective July 1; and the tax will also apply for the first time to rolling papers, in an effort to discourage marijuana use. Each paper will be taxed as if it was one cigarette.

Prosecutors report documents destroyed for Pentagon probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — People implicated in the Pentagon bribery probe have destroyed documents on at least two occasions in the past two weeks, according to prosecutors who say making key information public would trigger a coverup by "major felons."

"In the short time since the execution of the search warrants became public (June 14), the government has already become aware of several incidents of destruction of documents related to this case," U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson, who is coordinating the probe, said in a court brief released Wednesday.

In an affidavit, Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica said prosecutors have learned of two incidents of document destruction.

On Capitol Hill, members of Congress called on Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci to make a "dramatic move" such as halting new Pentagon contracts to win back public credibility in the wake of the bribery probe.

"We're fighting a credibility problem here and it seems as though tough action is required," said Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio.

Hudson, in his court brief, discussed the possibility of further document destruction in arguing against release of sealed court documents.

"Revealing the precise contours of the government's intentions and current information may well encourage document destruction and other acts" which "would have the practical effect of putting major felons beyond the reach of justice," said Hudson, the U.S. attorney in Alexandria, Va.

Newsday Inc. is asking U.S. District Judge Edward Korman in Brooklyn, N.Y., to lift the seal on several search warrants and supporting affidavits in the probe for Unisys Corp.'s plant in Great Neck, N.Y.; Charles Gardner, a defense consultant to Unisys and former Unisys vice president; Dennis Mitchell, an employee at the Great Neck Unisys plant; and the Hazelton Consip. in Greenlawn.

Newsday said the seals should be lifted because the investigation has been extensively reported in the media, but Hudson said previous news stories haven't disclosed significant portions of the material, "particularly the wiretap information."

Hudson also said disclosing the affidavit in support of a search warrant at Hazelton would reveal the identity of a confidential source cooperating in the investigation.

Hudson did not provide any details on who destroyed what types of documents, how they were destroyed or how they might have been related to the probe of alleged bribes to Pentagon personnel in exchange for confidential information funneled to consultants and defense contractors.

In Washington, the Pentagon's top purchasing official, Robert B. Costello, testified before Congress and said he would talk with Carlucci today about a suggestion to halt Pentagon contracts.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Carlucci should order "absolutely no contracts signed for 60 days (or) six weeks" with companies involved in the criminal investigation.

"Carlucci could make a dramatic move," Aspin told Costello, the undersecretary of defense for acquisition policy.

"We're going to write some tough language into these contracts so that we can recoup some of this stuff and make sure that all contracts that are let, from here on out," are legal, said Aspin.

Aspin noted that contractors and weapons involved in the investigation include McDonnell-Douglas and the F-A-18, the top-line Navy fighter. After the two-year investigation became public, the Pentagon went ahead with contract awards for the plane, Aspin said.

Public Utility Commission members not getting along

AUSTIN (AP) — Battles about who could start the meeting and who could end it are the latest chapters in the public bickering between state utility commissioners Jo Campbell and Marta Greytok.

After the Wednesday disagreements, Ms. Greytok said she wants an end to Ms. Campbell's "harangues" during Public Utility Commission meetings. Ms. Campbell's aggressive style has marked PUC meetings since she joined the commission.

"Commissioner Campbell's behavior is her own business," Ms. Greytok said, adding, however, that that behavior sometimes "takes up staff time and it takes a lot of energy away" from commission efforts. "I'm not going to get into the harangues that have gone on in the past," she said.

Ms. Campbell defended her style, saying all she wants to do is "call the law as I see it."

"I've disagreed with her on legal issues. But I'm not going to apologize for my over 10 years of experience in utility law," she said.

Ms. Greytok cut off Ms. Campbell Wednesday by adjourning the meeting over Ms. Campbell's objections. The move ended a meeting marked by heated disagreements between the two commissioners, who are waiting for Gov. Bill Clements to appoint a third commissioner to replace former Chairman Dennis Thomas, who resigned May 31.

The Wednesday session, including final consideration of the long-running Gulf States Utilities rate case, began with a battle about who could call it to order.

Ms. Greytok moved into the chairman's seat before the meeting began. Ms. Campbell entered, took her usual seat and tried to start the meeting. Ms. Greytok challenged Ms. Campbell's action, saying the two had agreed to alternate the chairmanship until a new commissioner is selected.

Ms. Greytok said it was her turn. "That's fine with me," Ms. Campbell said after saying she did not remember the agreement to alternate. The meeting ended on a similar sour note when the commissioners disagreed on whether the PUC staff, without commissioner approval, has improperly and perhaps illegally been approving rate changes for some Southwestern Bell services.

The argument grew heated and Ms. Greytok said, "I am not prepared to discuss it at this time. I consider this meeting adjourned."

"I don't think you have the right to adjourn until I at least have a chance to reply," Ms. Campbell said. Ms. Greytok replied, "I certainly have the right to say, as far as I'm concerned, the meeting is adjourned."

Ms. Campbell then tried to get some comments into the record of the meeting. Ms. Greytok would not allow that.

"I am going to leave. I am chafing this meeting. We are off the record," she said as she gathered her papers and walked out, leaving the court reporter confused as to whether the meeting had ended.

Ms. Campbell continued, addressing her remarks to the press.

Later Wednesday, Ms. Greytok said, "Even though she sometimes has expertise, that expertise is used in a way that is abusive. That's my concern." "Marta is a delightful human being," Ms. Campbell said of Ms. Greytok, denying any feud.

Federal judge says Rainbow Family violating court order

ZAVALLA (AP) — Authorities limited access to the Rainbow Family's main camp after a federal judge said the group exceeded the 300-person limit allowed inside to prepare for the thousands more expected to attend a July Fourth gathering.

As many as 750 family members were camped at an area known as Mud Flats on Lake Sam Rayburn in the Angelina National Forest, site of the back-to-nature group's 17th annual "Gathering of the Tribes," federal marshals and U.S. Forest Service officials said Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice said that number exceeded the limit and he ordered the camp closed Wednesday. Texas Department of Public Safety officers and Forest Service officials complied, blocking the main road into the campsite.

Last week, Justice ended weeks of litigation by allowing the group to meet in the East Texas forest about 125 miles northeast of Houston.

Justice's order, however, placed limits on the number of people in the camping areas until proper health and sanitary facilities could be built.

His order Wednesday decreed the campsite be closed until either 300 or fewer people were there or until the site was in compliance with the health standards.

"People are warned before they leave that they can't return unless they are coming in with food, water, medical supplies or construction material," Forest Service spokesman Carl Gidlund said. "We are allowing free passage of vehicles carrying those items."

Also Wednesday, federal health officials arrived to begin inspections of the facilities. Approval by the U.S. Public Health Service will allow up to 5,000 people at each of six designated campsites.

In addition, U.S. Customs Service officials arrived Wednesday with drug-sniffing dogs in an effort to curb what authorities believe will be considerable illegal drug use at the campgrounds.

Authorities were bracing for as many as 20,000 people in the area, but they were hopeful the number would be much smaller.

"The numbers are falling way below the levels they have been predicting," Forest Service spokesman Doug Williams said. "But we're preparing for the number they have been predicting."

Little Hawk of Woodstock, N.Y., flashes a peace sign as officers of the U.S. Forest Service stop cars from entering the Rainbow Family camp site.

When the group met in North Carolina at this last year, there were about 3,400 campers. That number eventually swelled to nearly 13,000, according to Forest Service estimates.

Still, officials say the meeting is expected to cost some $500,000 in federal money used for additional staff to handle the group, according to Mike Lannan, forest supervisor for national forests in Texas.

Lannan, however, said he believed the number of participants was down because of media attention about the litigation and because Forest Service officials had insisted they would not tolerate lawlessness.

Several arrests have been reported in the past week, most for being drunk and disorderly or public nudity. One man was arrested Tuesday and jailed for driving a car stolen in Louisiana.

Officials also attributed the intense Texas heat for keeping many Rainbow Family members away. On Wednesday, temperatures in the forest were in the high 90s.

The Forest Service, which normally has one law enforcement officer for the 154,000-acre area, bolstered its force to 40 officers from as far away as California. In addition, some two dozen Texas state troopers were patrolling the area and that number was expected to about double by the Fourth of July weekend, when the Rainbow Family gathering climaxes.

Two U.S. marshals were also at the sites, plus three or four Angelina County sheriff's officers.

At the campground, where construction of sanitary and health facilities was supposed to be taking place, the scene resembled a page out of the "Flower Power" generation of the late 1960s.

Girlfriend says shooting victim warned too late he was in danger

HOUSTON (AP) — The girlfriend of a man slain in what is believed to be a religious cult feud says former members of the group tried to warn him he was in danger, but the man already had been ambushed and killed.

Eddie Marston, 32, was gunned down in a Dallas suburb at almost the same time two men and a young girl were killed in two separate attacks Monday in Houston. All three men were former followers of the late Ervil LeBaron, a polygamous cult leader whose current followers operate from Mexico.

Killed in the Houston attacks were brothers Mark Chynoweth, 36, and Duane Chynoweth, 31, and Duane's 8-year-old daughter Jennifer.

Marston's girlfriend said that former group members in Houston tried to warn him of a likely attempt on his life, but their call Monday came a few hours after he was killed in Irving.

"They were calling to tell Ed that somebody had been shot," the woman said Tuesday. She was unable to relay the tip, and about half an hour later, Irving police officers came by to say that Marston, who ran a second-hand appliance store, was dead.

Houston authorities also had alerted the Irving Police Department about the killings at about 6:05 p.m. Monday, said Lt. K.L. Rowe.

"By then, it was too late," he said. The woman — whose first name was Beverly but who did not want her last name published — said Marston received a call Monday morning from a man offering a washer and dryer. Marston went to the house, but no one showed up, the woman said.

She said she suspects this was the originally scheduled time for the Houston and Irving killings.

"Something must have screwed up" in Houston, forcing a delay, the girlfriend said.

She said the seller called back, telling Marston could pick up the appliances at 4 p.m. if he was still interested. He went to the house where he was fatally shot. All four people were killed around 4 p.m.

Investigators are trying to determine if Monday's slayings were directly related to the men's past involvement with Ervil LeBaron. No arrests have been made in the shootings.

Local authorities and the FBI searched for three brothers for questioning in the case. One is Heber LeBaron, who is wanted in a 1986 bank robbery in Richardson. He fled after being released on bail, officials said. Police also sought Aaron LeBaron, 20, and Andrew LeBaron, 28.

Ervil LeBaron, founder of the Church of the Lamb of God, a radical polygamist group believed responsible for more than 20 killings, died in prison in Utah in 1981.

Before his death, LeBaron targeted a number of people for death, primarily for being unfaithful to his preaching, his daughter Lillian Chynoweth told The Salt Lake City Tribune in October.

The victims had been followers of LeBaron but had broken from the religious zealot after his 1980 conviction on a charge of conspiracy to commit murder.

Friends say Baptist minister's arrest as rapist a 'nightmare'

DALLAS (AP) — Friends and relatives of a Southern Baptist minister say they were stunned when he was charged with five cases of sexual assault in connection with a string of attacks blamed on the so-called Village Rapist.

Gregory Charles Goblen, 28, was jailed on $453,500 bail on four counts of sexual assault, one of aggravated sexual assault and in an attempted burglary, Dallas County Sheriff's spokesman Jim Ewell said Wednesday.

Goblen was arrested late Monday in an attempted burglary of an apartment, said police Sgt. Larry Lewis. Unidentified sources told the Dallas Times Herald that Goblen was linked to assaults in the area through fingerprints.

The Village Rapist is believed responsible for as many as 20 attacks since 1986 in the sprawling apartment complexes known as The Village.

Friends described Goblen, pastor of Outreach Baptist Church in suburban Garland as a man devoted to his church, his and wife and two sons.

"He's always been one of the finest, kindest young men I've ever known," said the Rev. John Sullivan, pastor of Broadmoor Baptist Church in Shreveport, who has known the suspect since Goblen was a teen-ager and football star in Shreveport.

"This is just unbelievable; it's a nightmare," said Jerry Jones, Goblen's brother-in-law, who is a lawyer in Shreveport, La. "He didn't do it. We just hope and pray it's something that will be resolved."

She said Goblen told his parents that he was out on a nighty run when he was stopped by the security guard. "There were two men who had just been robbed who saw him run by and thought he (committed) the robbery. So, they took after him," Ms. Teer said. "He ran through this apartment complex, and the security guard saw him running and put handcuffs on him."

The Outreach Church is one of 28 mission churches sponsored by First Baptist Church of Dallas.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Trade bill danger still not over yet

The Senate has voted not to override President Reagan's veto of the trade bill, giving us what will, alas, likely prove only a brief respite from its protectionist sections. And thanks to a parliamentary maneuver by Majority Leader Robert Byrd, the Senate could vote again, perhaps with enough votes this time to override. But that might not be necessary. Treasury Secretary James Baker has indicated that the administration is ready to compromise on the bill after only a few changes, none of them deleting the bill's worst provisions.

Reagan's main objection to the bill is that it includes a section forcing companies to give employees a 60-day notice if their factory was going to close. This is reason enough to veto the bill; in addition to being government usurpation of private authority and property, plant-closing laws reduce a company's productivity, and so hurt workers still employed. But by focusing on that one section, Reagan has diverted attention from the bill's worst parts, which include provisions that strengthen the government's power to retaliate against foreign companies for allegedly unfair trading practices, and a three-year ban on Toshiba Corp. imports.

The claim of "unfair" trade practices, or "dumping," is one of the oldest in the protectionists' book of tricks. But when American firms do it, it's called selling a "loss-leader." For example, Ford sells its Escort model at a loss; it does so to get people into the showroom, where they might be sold a larger, high-ticket car, on which Ford will make a good profit.

As to the Toshiba ban, it's nothing but protectionist spite. True, a Toshiba subsidiary sold milling machines to the Soviets, which helped grind out quiet propellers for the Soviet Navy. But Toshiba has profusely apologized and has taken measures to make sure the same mistake isn't repeated. And the Pentagon has itself called on Congress not to seek revenge against Toshiba.

Indeed, a ban on Toshiba would stop the Pentagon from itself buying the company's state-of-the-art electronics components, thereby crippling the very U.S. defense efforts the ban is supposed to help.

These are just two of the worst sections of the mammoth, 1,000-page protectionist bill. Unfortunately, Reagan isn't fighting against them with the tenacity used against the plant-closing provision. As Marlin Fitzwater, Reagan's spokesman, said after the Senate vote not to override, "It is certainly clear that the president wants a trade bill; the Republicans want a trade bill; the Democrats, most of them, want a trade bill; and we would like to see it proceed as quickly as possible." So unless something drastic happens, this terrible bill, only slightly modified, will still become law and will prove to be a millstone around the necks of American businesses and consumers.

Necessity is mother of policy

Stephen Chapman

In foreign affairs, Americans generally have an attention span about as long as the house arrest of Haitian Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, who became a prisoner on a Friday and the country's military ruler on Monday. For those whose minds had wandered, the general's bloody coup against a civilian government reminds us once again of the limits of good intentions.

Just 2 1/2 years ago, Americans were heady with the ease of doing good things in the world. Pressure from the Reagan administration had quickly removed two of the world's least engaging dictators, Jean-Claude Duvalier of Haiti and Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines. Rarely have noble purposes and convenient circumstances converged so neatly.

Unfortunately, in Haiti and the Philippines, they no sooner converged than they abruptly parted company. Haiti endured a military government headed by Gen. Namphy for two years before an election was finally held in January. (An earlier one had been cancelled due to a wave of political terror assisted by the army.)

The new president, inaugurated in February, needed barely four months to deplete Gen. Namphy's patience with democracy. What the human rights group Freedom House said at the end of 1987 remains true: "The country appeared to be sporadically under military, vigilante, gangster and anarchic rule."
In the Philippines, President Corazon Aquino has maneuvered her way through an unending series of attempted coups. She still faces a persistent communist insurgency, as well as potentially violent opposition from young military officers and former Marcos cronies.

Other frustrations bedevil U.S. policymakers. In Panama, a drug-running dictator has defied American efforts to force him out. El Salvador's president, the best hope of building a durable democracy, is dying. Nicaragua, whose military dictator the U.S. helped to topple nine years ago, has only paused in its brisk march toward communism.

News items like these evoke two responses in Americans. The first impulse is to simply withdraw from world affairs, leaving these impossibly troublesome nations to their ordained fate. The second is to blame U.S. policies for everything that goes wrong, and to prescribe vast new programs of intervention to atone for past mistakes. Neither reaction is healthy.

Americans are not unusual among the world's peoples in wanting to win all the time. They are unusual, though, in expecting to win all the time. Foreign policy is less like football, where teams sometimes go undefeated, than like baseball, where the best lose two out of every five games. We shouldn't be surprised that in countries which receive (and deserve) only occasional, modest attention from the U.S., we don't necessarily get our way. The real surprise is that we ever do.

We are also unusual in expecting other nations to give us clear moral options. But foreign policy is the art of making the best of bad situations. The U.S. joined forces with the second worst tyrant of the century, Stalin, to defeat the worst, Hitler. As Shakespeare wrote, there is no virtue like necessity.

Often we have little choice but to cooperate with authoritarian despots, like those who have ruled South Korea, or with ineffectual democrats, like El Salvador's president Jose Napoleon Duarte. The crucial question is not how good they are but how bad the alternatives are.

That's not to say that when a better option emerges, we have any moral duty to stand by an old ally. Nations have no friends, someone said, only interests. The U.S. was in no position to depose Marcos on its own, because it had neither the means nor the will to install a democratic replacement. But when a popular movement set his regime teetering, it was entirely proper for the U.S. to push it over.

Both policies — the alliance with Marcos and the decision to abandon him — served the only central purpose of American policy, namely protecting American interests. It demonstrated a sober approach to our relations with strategically placed nations: Do business with nasty governments when necessary; help democratic forces when possible.

The coup in Haiti and the troubles in the Philippines don't mean we were wrong to help depose the old tyrants. They simply illustrate that the real task of building democracy lies with their people, not ours. The U.S. role, though sometimes decisive, is no more than secondary. Our foreign policy will be more effective if we don't demand of it too much morality or too much success.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, June 30, the 182nd day of 1988. There are 184 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Twenty-five years ago, on June 30, 1963, Pope Paul VI was crowned the 262nd head of the Roman Catholic Church in an outdoor ceremony at St. Peter's Square. In a homily delivered in nine languages, the Pope said he intended to encourage "greater mutual comprehension, charity and peace between peoples."

On this date: In 1977, President Jimmy Carter announced he had decided against production of the B-1 bomber, saying it was too costly. The B-1 was later revived by President Reagan.

In 1982, the time limit for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution expired, with proponents falling short of the three additional states needed to ratify it.

Today's birthdays: Actor David Wayne is 72. Singer Lena Horne is 71. Actress Nancy Dussault is 52.

They actually wanted the dog

It's going to sound like I made all this up, but I promise I didn't.

I recently received an inquiry from the good people of Scottsboro, Ala., regarding their First Annual Catfish Festival.

Scottsboro is a lovely riverside village in north Alabama.

The Catfish Festival will feature arts and crafts displays and various other activities, such as contests for catfish-skinning and catfish-cooking.

People are expected to come from as far away as Haleyville and Boaz to attend.

When I saw the date in the letter I realized I had another commitment and couldn't possibly appear in Scottsboro. Then I read further and realized it wasn't me they wanted in Scottsboro, it was my dog.

My dog, a black Lab, is named Catfish. I'm not sure why I named him that. It just seemed a great name for a dog. Certainly better than something like Buster, Rattler, Old Bullet or Blackie.

I have written often of Catfish. Once, I wrote how he drinks out of the toilet.

Lewis Grizzard

A woman wrote back and said, "Of all things. Only ruffraff doesn't keep the lid on their toilet shut."

I closed all the lids on the toilets. Catfish learned to lift them with his nose.

I have also written of Catfish's continuing fruitless pursuit of the 100,000 or so squirrels in my yard and how intelligent he is to awaken me at 6:30 in the morning when the guy comes to steal our garbage again.

"We would love to have your dog Catfish as a special guest of the festival," the letter said.

"He will be introduced at noon at the Goose Pond Amphitheatre."

I talked it over with Catfish, and he wants a shot at this.

"It could be my big break," he said. "Lassie was discovered doing tricks for quarters on a Hollywood street corner."

I have given my OK for Catfish's first public gig. His Aunt Louise is going to accompany him to Scottsboro.

I have warned Catfish about certain things he cannot do while appearing in public.

We know what one of these things is. It nearly ruined the career of UGA, the bulldog mascot of the University of Georgia.

"I wouldn't do that," said Catfish.

"See that you don't," I said. "I couldn't take the embarrassment."

I also cautioned Catfish to watch whom, what and where he sniffs, not to try to eat any of the geese in the Goose Pond and, by all means, not to chase any cars.

He caught one once and chewed up the tires. I wonder if Brooke Shields' mother ever felt this proud and excited.

APLOGUES TO GARY WOOD

Public to get pollution information now

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — For the first time in the nation's history, concerned citizens soon will have access to meaningful information about the release of toxic substances into the air, water and soil of their communities.

Until now, only limited data was available in widely scattered locations about the extent to which manufacturers or users had discharged harmful chemicals into the biosphere.

Reports on airborne releases were maintained by one unit of the Environmental Protection Agency, while information about wastes dumped into landfills was the responsibility of another EPA unit. Regulation of toxics discharged into rivers and other navigable waterways was under the joint jurisdiction of the Army Corps of Engineers and the EPA.

"Some of the information may have been publicly available, but it certainly wasn't publicly accessible," says Dr. Gerry Poje, an environmental toxicologist with the National Wildlife Federation.

Beginning July 1, however, every substantial producer or user of 328 chemicals known to cause adverse health or environmental effects must provide annual Toxic Release Inventory reports to the EPA and to state environmental protection agencies. Those submissions are mandated by the Emergency Planning and Community Right to Know Act of 1986.

Companies must report all discharges into the environment of substances known or reasonably expected to cause serious or irreversible reproductive or neurological disorders, cancers, genetic mutations or other chronic health effects.

Until now, "most citizens had no means of discovering the sources of these chemical releases, the identity of the toxic pollutants being discharged into their community, or the health and environmental effects of those emissions," notes a coalition of environmental and other public interest groups.

The reports that have been required are often vague. A pulp mill, for example, could disclose the discharge of "spent liquors" into a river without specifying the composition, concentration or other important details.

The organizations now working to promote awareness of the salutary change in the law include the Advocacy Institute, Environmental Action Foundation, Environmental Defense Fund, Environmental Policy Institute and Natural Resources Defense Council.

The revision of the federal law is aptly characterized by the director of EPA's Office of Toxic Substances: "The program is quite revolutionary... We have never had this kind of information, even here at EPA."

Moreover, the law is the first ever to require a federal agency to establish and maintain a computerized data base readily accessible to the public. Beginning next spring, computer users anywhere in the country should be able to gain instant access to the information about hazardous discharges.

Considerable effort was expended in drafting the legislation to deal with the chemical industry's concerns. The law includes an elaborate procedure to protect proprietary data while insuring that "trade secret" claims do not thwart the release of material that should be public.

No information about toxic, carcinogenic or otherwise harmful chemicals can be withheld from health professionals — but they must sign agreements pledging to keep confidential whatever is disclosed to them.

Exempt from reporting are companies with fewer than 10 employees, producers or processors of fewer than 75,000 pounds of chemicals annually (a figure that will drop in stages to 25,000 pounds) and users of less than 10,000 pounds per year.

Finally, those who repeatedly violate the law could be subject to judicially imposed penalties of as much as $75,000 per day. Overall, the law is a major advance toward citizen and community participation in dealing with the external forces that heavily influence people's lives.

Nation

Little cheer in store for nation's dry areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hot, dry weather plaguing America is likely to shift East and South in the next month, and forecasters offer little hope that the widespread drought will be broken.

The 90-day outlook issued by the National Weather Service on Wednesday does indicate a chance of more rain than normal in some western sections of the Great Plains by the end of September.

But in the nearer term, the watchwords were for more of the same weather that has been parching fields and reservoirs, stalling river traffic and baking crops and livestock.

The 6- to 10-day outlook is "very close to holding stationary the pattern of the last few weeks," Donald L. Gilman, head of the Long Range Predictions Group at the National Weather Service, said at a news conference.

And the 30-day prediction shows

"only subtle changes," Gilman added. "Unfortunately, reliable predictions of the drought's end, its geographic spread, or changes in severity, cannot be made today," the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration cautioned in an accompanying statement.

Gilman's 6- to 10-day outlook calls for much above normal temperatures in Montana, Wyoming, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Iowa.

In addition, above normal readings are expected in much of the rest of the nation except the Columbia River valley, West Texas and along the Atlantic Coast from North Carolina through Georgia and northern Florida.

In the short range the rain forecast is "patchy" said Gilman. He said no precipitation is likely in Oregon, California, Nevada, southern Idaho, western Utah, western Arizona and Texas.

There is a chance of some scattered moisture from the Gulf of Mexico causing rain here and there in the Midwest, but only Kansas, South Carolina and Georgia seem likely to have more rain than normal for the period.

In July, above normal heat is expected throughout most of the northern Plains and upper Midwest, Gilman said, while the outlook for rain is "very uncertain."

The greatest chance of hot weather is in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, Gilman said. He gave that region a 65 percent chance of being hotter than normal for July, an unusually high ranking for a summer forecast. Typically, the 30-day outlooks are considered only 55 percent likely in summer.

In addition, July has a chance of warmer than normal weather from Pennsylvania west through the Great Lakes states to Montana, south to Oklahoma and Arkansas and east to the Appalachian Mountains.

The rest of the country should expect near normal readings in July except the Puget Sound region, where it is expected to be cooler than normal.

The outlook for rain in July shows below normal precipitation expected for California, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky. Above normal is expected only in Puget Sound and along the Arizona-New Mexico border.

Other regions are likely to be close to normal, Gilman said, with the added warning that the below normal region could expand back into the plains.

Finally, he issued a long-range 90-day forecast for July, August and September.

That outlook anticipates above normal temperatures along the Pacific Coast, in southern Arizona and in Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, the Carolinas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

Below normal temperatures are expected in Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico, with near normal readings elsewhere.

The three-month rain outlook is for below normal in California, Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and parts of West Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky.

The lone bit of good news may be the chance of above normal precipitation for Montana, Wyoming, southern South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, West Texas and western Oklahoma over the 90 days.

For the rest of the nation, the chances are too close to call over such a long period.

AMA clashes with nurses over proposal

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association has called for a new field of hospital workers to handle bedside chores, blaming nursing leaders for a "bankrupt policy" that has contributed to a severe shortage of nurses.

The AMA's House of Delegates on Wednesday rejected stiff arguments from nurses and recommended training "registered care technologists" who would take vital signs, bathe patients and perform other types of patient care.

The delegates also approved two major policies calling for a new direction in the nation's war on drugs and an overhaul of the government's Medicaid insurance program for the poor.

The decisions by the policy-making arm of the nation's largest doctors organization, with 295,000 members, were made by voice vote.

The delegates were scheduled to adjourn the annual policymaking session today after taking action on a series of proposals on AIDS.

One proposal calls for mandatory testing of all prison inmates to see if they're infected with the virus that causes the deadly disease. Another recommendation calls on states to trace the sexual partners of all AIDS victims.

In an attempt to offset the nursing shortage, the AMA's governing board of trustees will develop pilot programs for training the technologists to help nurses care for patients.

The technologists would receive from two months to 18 months of training and work under the direction of nurses, handling such chores as changing bandages, making beds and dispensing some medications.

The American Nurses' Association strongly opposed the proposal, contending the answer to the nursing shortage is to raise salaries and improve working conditions, not create a new category of worker.

"I really am appalled that in the face of opposition from all of organized nursing that medicine has gone ahead with this decision to test the creation of a new category of caregiver," said Judith Ryan, executive director of the American Nurses' Association, which represents 188,000 nurses.

Bakker joins gang of four hoping to buy PTL

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker presented a $100 million offer for the failing PTL ministry during a bankruptcy court session in which his wife, Tammy, sobbed when the judge ordered the sale of the Bakkers' former parsonage.

PTL trustee M.C. Benton, who said he has received four offers, one for $200 million, to buy the ministry, promised that the former television evangelist's proposal "will be considered along with everyone else" if he can back it up.

"We are ready to go forward with earnest negotiations," Bakker told reporters Tuesday outside U.S. Bankruptcy Court. But he refused to identify who provided him with the $100 million line of credit to buy PTL.

The appearance of the Bakkers sensationalized an otherwise routine, 2½-hour bankruptcy hearing. They received a standing ovation when they entered the courtroom, Tammy wearing a linen dress studded with pearls and Bakker with a crisp, double-breasted gray suit.

"Look how pretty she looks," whispered Bee Huffman, who said she supports the return of the Bakkers to PTL.

Judge Rufus Reynolds gave initial approval to PTL's reorganization plan, which calls for sale of the 2,300-acre Heritage USA religious theme park in Fort Mill. He ordered the plan sent to creditors for a vote next month.

Mrs. Bakker broke into tears and sobbed for several minutes after Reynolds initially agreed to sell the PTL parsonage where the Bakkers lived while running the ministry.

Reynolds later rescinded the order and said PTL could auction the mansion to one of two proposed bidders — neither of them connected to the Bakkers — on Tuesday.

Bakker, with the letter of credit in his uplifted hand, said he was "committed to the restoration (of PTL) as a Christian retreat center, to pay all creditors 100 percent on the dollar, to restore all lifetime partner benefits ... everything restored and all the people back happy and caring and ministering one to another."

Benton said he hopes to decide which proposed buyer to present to the court by mid-August. Informed of the $200 million offer from a group Benton would not identify, Bakker told reporters he doubted its legitimacy.

Steelworker: Reforms not working

MOSCOW (AP) — In a stinging critique of the Soviet reform program, a steelworker told the Communist Party conference today that three years after it was launched his town still doesn't have meat and consumer goods have vanished.

Veniamin A. Yarin, a middle-aged mill operator at a huge industrial complex in the Ural Mountains, told his 5,000 fellow delegates at the extraordinary gathering that despite promises to reward workers for increased productivity the government has cut housing subsidies.

And although of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's program of "perestroika," or restructuring, is supposed to provide incentives by making enterprises operate on their own finances, the government still takes his factory's profits, Yarin said.

"Workers are asking straight out: 'Where is the 'perestroika?'" he said. "For example, in stores, the way it was before with food products is the way it still is. On top of that, they have introduced rationing for sugar. There wasn't any meat, and we still don't have any. Consumer goods have vanished completely."

Addressing the third day of the conference Gorbachev called to assess his reform program and set a course for the future, the steelworker from the city of Nizhny Tagil, 900 miles east of Moscow, demanded that top officials be held accountable for the failure of programs under their control.

Directing his remarks to the top Soviet leadership, whose members were sitting behind him on a dais in the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses, Yarin said, "It's high time the Central Committee should apply its power."

In his speech, broadcast by Soviet television from the closed conference hall, Yarin said, "People tell us straight out: we don't know what issues individual members of the Politburo are responsible for."

The exact duties of individual Politburo members are not announced, although each of the 13 members of the ruling body are understood to be assigned specific areas of responsibility.

Yarin said all people should be given reports on "how things are going, who must be thanked for successes and who must be made accountable for failures."

Gorbachev, who was among those listening to Yarin, has complained repeatedly that the entrenched bureaucracy is stalling his reform drive, and despite the Soviet Union's concept of collective leadership, he has demanded that individuals be held responsible for their own actions.

Soviet party conference bringing discord to light

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party's first conference in 47 years, though far from the wide-open battles of Western conventions, is exposing discord rarely seen since the turbulent decade after the Bolshevik Revolution.

For two nights in a row, Soviet television viewers have seen members of their nation's only political party disagree with one another and with Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Only selected segments of the conference are being shown on television and foreign and most Soviet reporters are barred from the conference hall.

But accounts in the state-run media and comments from delegates make clear this is not a routine Kremlin gathering of tame, stone-faced delegates applauding and voting in unison.

The squabbles and splits over everything from the economy and ethnic issues to the press and politics signal the kind of break with vestiges of the Stalinist past that Gorbachev advocated in his keynote address Tuesday.

In the early 1920s, internal party battles were fierce and obvious. But Josef Stalin took the fighting behind tightly shut doors, then eliminated it in a gruesome wave of show trials and executions.

When Nikita S. Khrushchev denounced Stalin in 1956, he did so in a "secret speech" that still has not been published in the Soviet Union.

Even the new Soviet openness has not fully penetrated the infighting in the party leadership. In November, Boris N. Yeltsin was fired from his job as Moscow party chief for attacking the slow pace of reform.

His speech remains unpublished.

Gorbachev made it clear Tuesday that his drive for "glasnost," or openness, should not become weighted in favor of liberals.

When actor Mikhail Ulyanov complained to the conference on Wednesday that the state-run media have become a combative force, Gorbachev peered over from his perch on the dais to interrupt.

"In the past, there was a monopoly on the media by one group of people, and we know what that has brought about," the Soviet leader said.

"Now we see another group, acting very gradually, wants to use the press as a national rostrum... We want the pluralism of views."

In a 3½-hour keynote speech, Gorbachev lambasted conservative apparatchiks for blocking change and outlined plans for redistributing political power so the party is no longer involved in the day-to-day business of governing.

But he made clear it was not too late for opponents to climb on the bandwagon of reform.

In the 15 minutes allotted to them, delegates have taken a much more strident stance for or against economic reform, political change and the increasing outspokenness of the Soviet press.

There has been no hint of a split in the Politburo or criticism by name of the party leadership. But Gorbachev's proposals came under fire right after they were unveiled.

Economist Leonid Abalkin, a noted reformer, labeled as undemocratic the suggestion that local Communist chiefs should head local governing councils.

Abalkin even uttered the once-unthinkable phrase "multi-party system" as he asked whether one-party rule could guarantee unfettered political debate.

That passage of his speech was not televised.

Traditionalist cleric ordains four bishops

ECONE, Switzerland (AP) — Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre today defied the Vatican and consecrated four bishops of his traditionalist movement, provoking the first major split in the Roman Catholic Church since 1870.

The Vatican had warned that consecrations without the approval of Pope John Paul II would bring automatic excommunication, or ejection from the church. Vatican officials today were preparing a response on the church status of the bishops and Lefebvre's lay followers.

"We are convinced we are following the call of God," the French-born prelate told about 10,000 supporters in a homily.

The pope, who had pleaded with Lefebvre not to open "a new wound," urged the French prelate in a last-minute telegram to refrain from the elevations "for the love of Christ and his church," Vatican sources said.

The archbishop placed his hands over each of the new bishops to complete the consecra-tions in a tent on a vast meadow in front of the traditionalist seminary in this hamlet surrounded by vineyards and Alpine peaks.

About 180 traditionalist priests and 150 seminarians were among the faithful assembled under bright sunshine after a night of rain.

Ecône is the birthplace of Lefebvre's St. Pius X Fraternity, founded in 1970 for clerics opposed to the 1962-65 Second Vatican Council, whose reforms included modernizing the liturgy.

He continues to celebrate Mass in Latin, dismissing the "bastard rites" in the vernacular that took its place.

Named after a pope who condemned "modernist" trends in the church in a 1907 encyclical, Lefebvre's movement claims to have millions of sympathizers.

Lefebvre, 82, says his age makes the consecrations urgent to ensure continuity of the fraternity's struggle against "self-destructive trends."

Church law allows only bishops to perform ordinations so, Lefebvre says, the fraternity would be "orphaned" unless he consecrates new bishops before dying.

Lefebvre, in a recent magazine interview, dismissed excommunication as "worthless" and said it will not slow him in pushing for a "true renewal of the church."

"These events will strengthen our unity," he was quoted in the conservative French weekly Figaro-Magazine. "In 10 years, one will see that I have defended the last bastion of faith."

The four new bishops are Richard Williamson, 48, English-born head of the Ridgfield, Conn. seminary; Bernard Tissier de Mallerais, 43, Secretary General of the fraternity; Alfonso de Galarreta, 31, Spanish-born head of the seminary in Argentina, and Bernard Fellay, 39, administrator of the Fraternity, a Swiss.

Lefebvre, left, walks from his seminary at Ecône, Switzerland, to a nearby tent to ordain 16 of his traditionalist priests Wednesday.

Morales release decision called example of Mexican sovereignty

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government kept silent about Washington's anger over the release of Puerto Rican separatist William Morales, but local editorials praised the decision as an example of national sovereignty.

"The Mexican government denied the extradition of William Morales, and that is a decision that merits all the support of the citizenry because it strengthens national sovereignty against external pressures," the newspaper Uno mas Uno, or One plus One, wrote Wednesday.

La Jornada wrote that the United States tried "to magnify a diplomatic-political matter whose limits are clearly defined" and "has taken the case of the patriot William Morales as a new pretext for confrontation with Mexico."

The editorial said that course "can be risky for both countries, especially because of the time and space in which the conflict is introduced."

The competing, left-leaning newspapers have followed the Morales case closely. La Jornada broke the story earlier in June that the Foreign Ministry had decided to grant the imprisoned Morales political asylum.

On Friday, he was released from prison after serving five years of an eight-year sentence for murder and allowed to fly to Cuba. The Cuban government has not made any statement about Morales' presence there.

The U.S. government recalled Ambassador Charles J. Pilliod Jr. from Mexico City for consultations as a sign of displeasure.

Pilliod last week wrote to La Jornada objecting to its editorial praise for the Foreign Ministry's decision and its description of U.S. policy on Puerto Rico as "colonialism."

Record-breaking forest fires are expected with drought

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Current drought conditions throughout the state have forest firefighters gearing up for an anticipated record-breaking fire season this year.

Rainfall in Texas and even East Texas, where forests are located and which usually gets considerably more rainfall than more western counties, has been below-normal rainfall this year. "Besides the injury to crops and livestock caused by the lack of rain, there is another and even more-immediate danger — that of wildfires. We are warning Texans to be extremely careful with all fires, both inside and outside the home," said Bruce Miles, director of the Texas Forest Service, a part of Texas A&M University System.

The fire danger is not yet critical, but it is serious and the dry weather only aggravates the situation, said Murry Fly, head of the Forest Service's fire control operations in Lufkin.

"We have already had more than 200 wildfires, burning more than 3,800 acres in East Texas during June and from January through June to date, forest fires and acres burned are ahead of the pace in 1980, the worst fire year in Texas during this decade," Fly said.

For this year, to date, the forest service has responded to more than 1,500 fires, burning almost 28,000 acres in East Texas — almost as many acres burned as during the entire year in 1987, Fly said.

"If the current drought continues, we'll surely break a number of fire records," he added.

"Especially dangerous when it is dry around the Fourth of July are fireworks," Fly said.

Police chief pursues melodies

MURPHYSBORO, Ill. (AP) — Criminals might not know it, but Police Chief Larry Tincher's hands play keyboards as well as they snap handcuffs shut.

Tincher has created melodious sounds in public from keyboard and organ for a year now, a skill that surprises many listeners.

"The police chief playing in church — it raised some eyebrows," joked the soft-spoken Tincher, 47. "They're surprised we're not all bad guys all the time."

Tincher belongs to a group called The Joyful Noise, organized at Berean Christian Church, where he is a member, in this southern Illinois town.

One of the group's favorite spots to perform is at the Jackson County nursing home, where it plays once a month, and where it recently entertained about 40 residents with songs of years gone by.

Lead vocalist Sam Deluca carried the microphone to several in the audience, who sang along as the other musicians — Dorothy Loy, Raymond Schwebel and Kevin Ebersohl — continued along on their instruments.

Tincher said the band usually draws a large crowd at the nursing home.

"If someone else enjoys it, it's that much better," he said. "It makes you feel good."

Deluca stumbled onto Tincher's talent a year ago, which led to Tincher's role at the organ on Sunday mornings.

Court ruling makes it easier for workers to withhold union fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a high-stakes defeat for organized labor, made it easier Wednesday for millions of non-union workers to withhold financial support from the unions that represent them in collective bargaining.

The court, by a 5-3 vote, ruled that non-union employees of private employers may not be forced to pay the equivalent of union dues if some of that money is used for activities not directly related to collective bargaining.

Using compulsory fees paid by non-union employees under so-called "agency shop" contracts to pursue a union's political goals violates federal labor law, the court said.

Thousands of labor contracts require workers who choose not to join the unions representing them to pay the same amount in fees as members pay in dues.

Although federal labor law allows states to pass "right to work" laws barring such agency-fee requirements, 29 states representing two-thirds of the nation's population have chosen not to pass such laws.

In those states, over 90 percent of the collective bargaining agreements to which a key federal labor law applies carry agency-fee requirements.

The justices were told that six million workers are covered by such contracts.

The high court in 1977 ruled that public employees — those who work for some governmental entity — have the right to withhold that portion of their non-member union fees used by the union for activities not directly related to collective bargaining.

Today, the court ruled that employees of private employers have the same right.

The ruling could deprive many unions of significant portions of their revenue.

And it likely will require many unions to establish costly book-keeping procedures to assure that agency fees paid by non-members are not used for anything but collective bargaining.

Motion picture president recalls Texas roots

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Jack Valenti remembers reciting Shakespeare while rolling down the highway in an unairconditioned Ford as he and his boss circled Texas and called on Humble Oil Co. gas stations dotting the road.

"I've seen Texas and it's fantastic, and I've never forgotten that," says Valenti, who took the job at Humble to put himself through night school at the University of Houston.

Together, Valenti and Humble's Garvin Allen "Pop" Mabry visited almost all 254 counties in Texas—tracing the Rio Grande from Brownsville to El Paso, back through the desert and over the Davis Mountains, up to the Dalhart in the corner of the Panhandle, across the Plains into Central Texas, up to the Red River, down through the Piney Woods, back to Houston.

Since then he's circled the world and met the stars—but says Humble is still the best business he's ever known and the Texas landscape remains imprinted in his memory.

Humble is now Exxon Co. U.S.A.; Valenti is another Texas success story—the son of a clerk in the Harris County Courthouse and grandson of Italian immigrants, adviser to President Lyndon B. Johnson, only the third man to reign over the Motion Picture Association of America since its founding in 1922.

A plaque on his desk reads "It CAN be done." Valenti has done it, with the help, he says, of "serendipity in a macabre way."

Valenti has gone from usher, clean-up man and popcorn concession operator in a second-rate movie house to the voice of the movie industry. He went from stumping for Harris County candidates as a child to an office in the White House.

In between, he flew 51 combat missions as a World War II bomber pilot, was awarded the Flying Cross, six air medals and three battle stars, and earned a master's degree in business administration from Harvard.

"I can't say I planned all that," Valenti says. He's 68 now—trim and fit, his hair white and his eyebrows bushy, his eyes sparkling as he talks of the movie industry and how it found him.

"You're sitting in the White House and the movie moguls offer you a job you never expected to have, and then your life takes another turn," he says.

That was in 1966. Three years before, life took another sharp turn for the Houston ad man who had done the Democratic Party's 1960 advertising campaign for Texas and had come to know Johnson three years earlier.

Valenti was sitting six or seven cars back from President John F. Kennedy's limousine when Kennedy was assassinated as the motorcade snaked through Dallas.

At Parkland Memorial Hospital, Johnson ordered Valenti to accompany him to Washington aboard Air Force One. Johnson was sworn in as president on that flight. Valenti became his chief spokesman and has been in Washington since.

Although his home is in Washington, Valenti is frequently on the road, making sure American movies "move freely and unhobbled around the world."

But unlike his Humble Oil travels to places like Valley Mills and Van Horn, Valenti now calls on Rome, London and Paris, Rio de Janeiro, Singapore, New Delhi and Dakar. He's in California three times a month, New York a little less.

"The back yard of the movie business is the world," he says.

"Movies are fascinating. There are a lot of crazy people, flaky people, a lot of charlatans. Thank God they're in a minority. You also meet some of the most intelligent, interesting, creative people. The movie business is unlike any other enterprise I know, with the possible exception of politics. It's tedious sometimes, even pedestrian sometimes.

"But for the most part, it's been great fun. There's a continuing roll of problems—that sort of avalanche on you. But all are different and you're constantly meeting new and interesting people," he said in a recent interview.

His contract with the association has been renewed several times since 1966, and the current one doesn't expire until the end of 1991.

"As long as I'm having fun here, I'll stay," he says.

Valenti tasted politics and power when he was a child, meeting, through his father, the county sheriff, district attorney and county judge.

He was 10, he says, when he gave his first political speech—for a sheriff.

"Very early on, I went on the stump—everyone thought that was cute," he said.

He finished high school at 15 and spent the next year working seven days a week at the Iris Theater—where Tarzan of the Apes and cowboy films were the main fare.

Donna Slavick
ULYSSES, Kan. — Former Pampa resident Donna G. Slavick was crowned Mrs. Kansas International on May 28 in Wichita, Kan. and will compete in the Mrs. U.S. International Pageant, to be held Sept. 15-17 in Dallas.

Mrs. Slavick and her husband Randy are parents of Pampa residents Debbie Douglas and Mark Lamar. The Slavicks also have six grandchildren in Pampa, along with several aunts and uncles and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R.E. Jones of Pampa.

She has been involved in pageants for the past 16 years. In 1987, she was crowned Mrs. Southern Charm in a pageant held in Paduka, Ky. She has also been crowned Kansas Mrs. Southern Charm as well as first runner-up in the Mrs. Kansas State Pageant.

Mrs. Slavick was selected as the 1986 World's Universal Mrs. Mini-Queen and was in the World's Universal Top 10 Mrs. Also included in her titles are World's Universal second-alternate Living Doll, Best Figure for Grandmother, Best

 Portfolio and Mrs. Congeniality. In addition to competing in pageants, she has served as judge, master of ceremonies, pageant coach, consultant and advisor. She has managed a retail clothing store and also been a buyer at the Dallas Apparel Mart. She has taken several modeling courses and modeled for workshops and fashion revues, along with designing several of her own pageant costumes. Mrs. Slavick is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and served as a page at the Kansas State Conference for three years. Her hobbies include classic cars, rod and custom show displaying and drag racing.

She is secretary/treasurer of Kansas Irrigation Engine Inc., in Ulysses.

Stuart Layne Greer Lawrence Edward Sturgill
PLAINVIEW — Two students from Pampa have been named to the Dean's Honor Roll for the spring 1988 semester at Wayland Baptist University.

Those named to the list were Stuart Layne Greer, junior, 3.75 grade point average, and Lawrence Edward Sturgill, sophomore, 3.57 grade point average. Sturgill is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Sturgill of 1149 Huff Road.

The Dean's Honor Roll is announced at the end of each semester by Dr. Bill Hardage, academic vice president and dean of the university. It lists the names of students who compiled a GPA of at least 3.50 on a 4.00 scale while completing at least 12 semester hours during the term.

A total of 148 students from 15 states and four foreign countries were named to the Dean's Honor Roll at Wayland for the spring semester.

Thieving son-in-law steals daughter, too

DEAR ABBY: We need help. Our son-in-law is a thief. When he and our daughter visit us, invariably after they leave we discover that several objects are missing. (They live in another town.) If we confront them, we will lose our daughter's visits. In the past she isolated us for a couple of years at a time because she felt we did not treat her husband "right." They have been married for 17 years, and the only really good part of their marriage is our one and only grandchild.

We love our daughter, but her husband is a liar and a thief. This last visit, he took three items from our home — one is something that is very precious to me. We do not want to do anything as drastic as notifying the police. Please tell us how to handle this.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y.

DEAR WHITE PLAINS: Call your daughter and tell her what is missing — particularly the piece that is very precious to you. Then see how she responds.

She surely knows that her husband is a thief, but if he steals from her own parents,

Dear Abby

and she accepts it, she is no better than he is. Perhaps it would be better if you didn't entertain them in your home if you have to go through the emotional turmoil and fear of wondering what will be stolen next.

DEAR ABBY: As a 47-year-old man who does not feel or think he looks older than he is, I resent clerks in stores asking me if I am entitled to a senior citizen's discount. Perhaps they think I look elderly, but I think it is impertinent of them to ask a question that implies that they think I am.

Some businesses offer discounts to "senior citizens," but it would be more tactful and better business for managers to provide clear, conspicuous signs explaining their senior citizens policy — then leave it up to the customer to decide whether or not to volunteer his (or her) age as a means of obtaining a discount. What do you think?

Please air this in your column, Abby, and see if other readers agree with me.

CHARLESTON, S.C., READER

DEAR READER: I like the sign idea. In a society that values youth, as evidenced by the many products that promise to make us feel and look younger, it is not surprising that many people would be offended to be asked, "Are you entitled to a senior citizen's discount?" — especially those who look as though they are, but aren't. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: The phrase, "innocent until proven guilty" has been around for a long time and the wording really bugs me.

Wouldn't "innocent unless proven guilty" have a more positive effect on one's subliminal thinking?

R. BLOOMFIELD, POMONA

DEAR R.: Yes. "Until" implies that the person ultimately will be proven guilty. "Unless" suggests that the person may remain innocent forever.

Happy birthday

Cora Patterson, 828 W. Kingsmill, received a cake from Meals on Wheels on her 97th birthday June 18, one of four cakes baked in her honor that day. Her daughter, Nora Gabriel, and friend, Ruby Denny, both of Pampa, served cake and ice cream to the 16 guests attending the celebration.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

It looks like there will be a number of interesting changes for you in the year ahead. Some you will initiate yourself; others will be governed by circumstances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's best not to gamble on situations today that could affect others, as well as yourself. Both parties will feel badly if your calculations misfire. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to resolve misunderstandings between you and your mate as promptly as possible. Something that starts out small could grow quickly if the flame is not extinguished.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can lead associates to work today, but you can't make them perform. Things could get tasty if you start bossing co-workers around.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, do not treat lightly commercial or business matters that require serious attention. If you're too indifferent, something that can be gained might be lost.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to yield to your nobler instincts today and put the priorities of others above your own. If you don't you might feel guilty later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's best not to jump to conclusions today, because your initial assessment of situations could be erroneous. Gather facts instead of frustrations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good day to re-examine your recent expenditures so you can determine the difference between essential and non-essential spending.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In front of others today acknowledge the help of people who have been instrumental in your success. This will assure their continued support.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Profit from your past experiences and guard tendencies to repeat mistakes that formerly caused you problems. Live and learn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A close friend who has the reputation of being cool under fire is the person you should talk to before making a decision you are unsure about.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Follow your inclinations today where your ambitious interests are concerned. Unenthusiastic associates who do not see things as you do could throw you off course.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Leave your work in the office today. Injecting shop talk into social situations might be of interest to you, but it could bore your listeners to tears.

Becker eliminates Cash

Wimbledon

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — As he watched the chances of retaining his title slip by, Pat Cash glanced high up into the grandstands where, 12 months ago, he clambored to embrace his family in an outburst of happiness.

"This time, it was too late for inspiration." The 23-year-old Australian, whose aggressive serve-and-volley game carried him like a whirlwind to last year's Wimbledon title, was himself blown away on Wednesday by Boris Becker, the man who won the title in 1985 and 1986 and is hungry to get it back.

"It's a matter of winning the big points and I couldn't do that," Cash said after his 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 defeat on Centre Court. "When he had the chances, he got them." Today's action focused on the women's semifinals, with Martina Navratilova pursuing her bid for a record ninth Wimbledon singles title and Steffi Graf trying to succeed where Mats Wilander failed, and capture the third leg of the Grand Slam.

Both matches were repeats of last year's semifinals, with Navratilova, the defending champion, up first against Chris Evert for 78th time in her career, and Graf taking on Pam Shriver afterwards.

Navratilova almost didn't get there, rallying from 4-2 deficits in the second and third sets of a delayed fourth-round match Wednesday to beat unseeded Roz Fairbank.

"I was playing on instinct and guts," Navratilova said after the 4-6, 6-4, 7-5 victory that put in the last four for the 11th straight year.

In Friday's men's semifinals, Becker, a 20-year-old West German, will play Ivan Lendl in a repeat of the 1986 final.

Lendl, the world's top-ranked player but still searching for a first Wimbledon title, for once had a straightforward victory.

After a couple of gruelling five-setters, the 28-year-old Czechoslovak downed American Tim Mayotte 7-6, 7-6, 6-3.

The other semifinal will be between Stefan Edberg of Sweden and Miloslav Mecir. Edberg ousted unseeded Patrick Kuhen of West Germany 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, 7-6, while Mecir dashed the Grand Slam hopes of another Swede, Wilander, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3.

After being outscored for two sets, Cash got back into the match when he broke Becker for a 4-2 lead in the third. But he couldn't hold on and immediately dropped his own serve.

Then came the crunch. With his title slipping away on a muggy afternoon on Centre Court, Cash saved three break points in the ninth game as his fans cheered.

On the fourth, he sent a forehand deep into the backcourt and positioned himself perfectly at the net to cut off the return. But the ball had flicked the net on its way and gave Becker just enough time to pound a backhand down the line past the lunging

Cash.

The Australian, as if realizing the end was close, stood at the sidelines, threw his arms up in despair and took one last glance up at the stands.

Becker completed the break, served out the match, and Cash's reign was over.

"I had it the way I wanted in the first set," Cash said. "But I didn't have enough to put it together. I haven't been happy with my form the whole tournament."

Becker was more than content with his.

"If you play the defending champion, you obviously have to play at your best to beat him," Becker said. "I did that today."

"But I have only played five matches. You have to win seven. It gives me confidence ... but it does not give me the trophy yet."

Wilander, the Australian and French champion, had reached the quarterfinals without dropping a set on his least favorite surface.

But his manufactured grass-court game got found out against Mecir, who baffled the Swede with a mixture of guile and grace.

"It's just too difficult," Wilander said of the Grand Slam. The last man to win the Slam was Rod Laver, 19 years ago.

Lendl, runner-up for the past two years, said he was confident of taking the trophy on the third attempt.

"I think I can win at the level I am playing," he said after beating Mayotte. "It all depends how Boris plays."

Mayotte praised his conqueror. "He's a champion," the American said.

Jeremy Barnes had a triple for Dixie.

Dixie, Texas Furniture reach finals

Dixie and Texas Furniture clash at 8 p.m. Friday night for the Minor Bambino League championship after semi-final victories last night at Optimist Park.

Dixie downed Holmes 13-3 and Texas Furniture won over Thomas Automotive 6-1 in Wednesday night's semis.

Pitchers for Dixie and Texas Furniture were also the leading hitters for their respective teams.

For Dixie, Ryan Cook led his team's hitting attack with a triple and two doubles while picking up the mound win. Cook gave one run on two hits while striking out two and walking four.

Clint Ferguson and Duane King added two singles to Dixie's attack while Jeremy Barnes had a triple.

Josh Starnes and Chris Peak each had a single for Holmes. Catcher Blake Crockett along with Cook and third baseman R.J. Russell played well defensively to hold Holmes in check.

Ryan Cornelsen, Holmes third baseman, made several outstanding plays. Losing pitcher was Todd Finney.

Winning pitcher for Texas Furniture was J.J. Mathis, who also contributed two base hits to lead his team.

Mathis struck out three, walked two and didn't allow a run on two hits. Trent Davis earned a save while giving up one run on two hits and striking out three and walking two.

Others collecting hits for Texas Furniture were Jereme Stone, a triple; Serenity King, Kevin Chesher, Bobby Davis and Randall Mobbs, one base hit each.

Trey McCavit had two singles to lead Thomas Auto while Billy Thomas and Brian Cota had one base hit each.

Bobby Davis, Kevin Chesher and Serenity King came up with some good defensive plays for Texas Furniture.

Ryan Davis was the losing pitcher. In a semifinal game, Texas Furniture won a 10-9 squeaker over Citizens Bank Tuesday night.

J.J. Mathis and Phil Everson had doubles and Kevin Chesher singled for Texas Furniture.

Rayford Young had two singles and a double for Citizens while Todd Harrison had two doubles, and Seth Stribling, a single.

Mathis was the winning pitcher in relief, giving up six runs on four hits while striking out four and walking six. Trent Davis started on the mound and allowed three runs on one hit while striking out six and walking four.

Brian Cota was the losing pitcher.

Thomas meets Holmes at 6 p.m. Friday night to determine third place in the 9-10 year old league.

Thompson Parts defeated Wayne's Western Wear 17-5 in tournament play last night to win the overall championship of the Rookie League.

Leading hitters for Thompson were Aaron Dunnam, two singles and a double; Kris Roth, single, homer and triple; J.T. Hamilton, triple, single and double; Josh Blackmon, home run and double. Chad Wilson and Matt Garvin had three singles each to lead Wayne's.

Titan Specialties Dodgers slipped by Bob Lyle DDS Inc. Astros 14-13 last night to finish second overall.

Top hitters were Brian Brown, two doubles; Erick Greer, two triples, and Shawn Miller, two doubles. Others were Justin Roarke, home run; Randall Ellis, home run; Aaron Whitney, triple; Jason Velasquez, home run;

Tyson has had enough

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson has had enough.

Tyson, who turned 22 today, apparently has turned his back on boxing. After his 91-second knockout of Michael Spinks in their heavyweight championship bout Monday night, Tyson warned that it might be his last fight. He complained about the treatment he and his family received from the media before the fight.

On Wednesday, saying he is "burned out," told the New York Post, "You can't never say never. But as of today, I am retired."

Considering his youth and the riches boxing has brought him — including more than $20 million for his quick knockout of Spinks — it's difficult to believe Tyson won't be back in the ring.

"I'm willing to sacrifice, to give up boxing to save my family ...," he said. "I just feel it's the best thing to do."

During a news conference after the Spinks fight, Tyson, who married actress Robin Givens on Feb. 7, blasted reporters for their treatment of himself and his wife. He cursed out many members of the media, saying they tried to "disgrace my family."

"The difference in my personal and professional lives is so vastly different," Tyson said at his home in Bernardville, N.J. "I'm depressed. I'm unhappy. Losing a baby like that (Givens recently suffered a miscarriage), when you're trying to fight, is very sad. "I'm inexperienced in handling things like that. I've put my wife through a lot of stress."

Personal problems send Tyson reeling

Following his annihilation of Michael Spinks on Monday, Mike Tyson hinted that it may have been his last fight ever.

And on Wednesday, the 22-year-old undefeated heavyweight champion confirmed his retirement. "I'm depressed. I'm unhappy.... Boxing was good to me, but nothing lasts forever. I decided it's time to move on. It's time to call it a day."

Tyson cites family and business problems, as well as unfair treatment by the press, as his reason for permanently vacating the ring.

The rift between the champ and his business manager, Bill Cayton, has been well-publicized the last few weeks. Being inexperienced in business affairs, Tyson believes he was tricked into signing a four-year contract with Cayton earlier this year. He has brought suit against Cayton in hopes of voiding the contract.

Tyson thinks that his manager is getting too much of the revenue that Tyson has earned, both in and out of the ring. While the fighter risks his neck in the ring, the manager sits in the counting house up to his neck in money.

In Stride

By Sonny Bohanan

If you've ever watched Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom, then you probably recognize the scenario. While host and wildlife expert Marlin Perkins sits by the fire in the cozy lodge, drinking coffee and narrating the action, his "partner", Jim, chases, wrestles and puts ear tags on the wild musk oxen outside in the arctic blizzard. Jim and Mike Tyson are kindred spirits.

Although Tyson does the dirty work, I certainly don't feel sorry for him. He knows that's what he does best, and that's what he was hired to do. But let's face it — without Tyson, there's no show. Without Cayton, however, the show goes on.

Tyson knows he's a commodity, and if he believes he's getting a raw deal, he should search for a better one.

No one seems to believe his assertion that he will never fight again. I hope he doesn't retire. He may have trouble getting someone to fight him after the way he hurt himself at Spinks Monday night, but that's simply a reflection on his greatness.

Tyson is young and apparently quite emotional. But if he can get his personal problems resolved, his career could surpass anything the boxing world has ever witnessed.

To those of you who were unlucky enough to actually read the attempt I made at making light of my poor television reception during last week's NBA Championship game, heave a sigh of relief. The nightmare is over.

My brother-in-law, in a truly humanitarian gesture in behalf of Pampa News readers, offered to climb the telephone pole outside my house and hook up my television antenna.

I have been planning to string a wire up there for some time, but with my wedding looming two short weeks on the horizon, I've been unable to get anything done for the past three years. My procrastination certainly had nothing to do with fear of climbing a silly 250,000 foot telephone pole.

So, with one inspiring source of commentary fallen by the wayside, I'm on the lookout for a new angle. Maybe I'll get cable.

Nelson looking forward to Western Open

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

OAK BROOK, Ill. — There's no question about the state of Larry Nelson's game. His only concern is how long he can keep it going.

"It's nice to be coming in to play a course and a tournament you like — and to be coming in having won the week before," said Nelson, who comes into the Western Open off a victory last week in the Atlanta Classic.

"This is one of the first tournaments I put on my schedule each year," Nelson said after a practice round for the $900,000 Western Open, which started today. "This golf course is one of my favorites," said Nelson, runner-up in the Western last year.

Nelson was near some PGA Tour records through three rounds of last week's Atlanta tournament. He was at 21 under par through 54 holes, one stroke off the record for three rounds, but missed a chance at the 72-hole record when he faded to a 1-over-par score in the final round. That was still good enough for a one-stroke victory.

"I wanted to get the record, score a lot of birdies on Sunday, but I got off to a slow start and that was it," said Nelson, a former U.S. Open champion who won his second PGA championship last year.

"It gives me something to shoot for. I know I'm still playing well, but they're two different golf courses, requiring two different mind-sets. I don't think you'll see anyone making 23 birdies in the first three rounds."

Nelson, 40, faces a field of 156 that is led by three-time Western Open winner Tom Watson and D.A. Weibring, who beat Nelson by a stroke in the flood-shortened Western last year.

Hough shuts Major League standings out Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — Texas Rangers' pitcher Charlie Hough and his Seattle Mariners counterpart Mike Moore staged a classic pitchers' duel, and when it was over, the durable veteran had outlasted his younger opponent.

The 40-year old Hough, 8-7, on Wednesday night pitched the longest outing by a major league pitcher in 1988 to overshadow the brilliant four-hit effort of Moore and lift the Rangers to a 1-0 victory, their second straight shut-out over the Mariners.

That's a tremendous baseball game for baseball fans," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "That wasn't a lack of hitting, it was outstanding pitching."

Hough endured 11 innings, surpassing the season's previous major league best of 10 2/3 innings by Chicago Cubs ace Greg Maddux.

"I struggled with my knuckleball early in the game, but threw some better ones later in the game," said Hough, who lasted through the ninth inning for the sixth consecutive game. "When you pitch that many innings, they're going to get some hits."

Hough struck out eight and walked three en route to his first shutout. He left in favor of reliever Mitch Williams after yielding a lead-off single to Glenn Wilson in the 12th inning.

Williams retired the next three batters to earn his 11th save.

Moore held the Mariners hitless for 4 1/3 innings before Larry Parrish's single. He struck out five and walked one in nine full innings.

Four Pampa Dolphins competed with other C swimmers in a recent West Texas League meet recently at the Amarillo Aquatic Club.

Amanda Hays turned in an impressive performance in her first meet. In the girls' 10 and under age group, Amanda won the 50 breaststroke and placed second in both the 50 backstroke and 50 freestyle.

Results in the 11-12 age group are as follows: 100 IM — 1. Talitha Pope; 2. Rene Hill; 4. Heidi Venal.
50 backstroke — 1. Talitha Pope; 2. Rene Hill; 3. Heidi Venal; 50 breaststroke — 1. Rene Hill; 2. Talitha Pope; 4. Heidi Venal; 50 fly — 1. Talitha Pope; 2. Rene Hill; 4. Heidi Venal; 50 freestyle — 1. Rene Hill; 3. Heidi Venal.
Talitha Pope achieved a National B time in the 100 IM and Rene Hill improved her best times in every event. Six Dolphin swimmers will travel to Moore, Okla. June 9-10 to compete.

Shumate next SMU coach?

DALLAS (AP) — Assistant Notre Dame coach John Shumate will be named as new head basketball coach at Southern Methodist University, two Dallas newspapers reported today.

Both the Dallas Morning News and Dallas Times Herald reported that Shumate will be named as replacement for Dave Bliss, who left the team May 18 to become the head coach of the University of New Mexico.

The other finalist was Stu Starner, head coach at Montana State. The Morning News reported that Starner said he will not be coming to Dallas for the news conference where the new coach will be introduced.

Decline in Americans' taste for citrus worries industry

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Americans are losing their taste for orange juice and the demand for fresh grapefruit has soured at a time when the Florida groves are laden with a bumper crop.

And that has the billion-dollar Florida citrus industry worried, worried enough to fight back with a proposed $72 million promotional campaign.

For the first time since such statistics have been kept, retail sales of orange juice — Florida's premier citrus product — have declined two years in a row. So has the demand for grapefruit juice, but that's not as serious since much less of the crop goes into juice.

Orange juice is facing increased competition from other juices, diluted products and soft drinks, says Dan Gunter, executive director of the Florida Citrus Department.

Image-makers have some concerns about fresh fruit, too.

"Fresh citrus products lack identity, especially fresh grapefruit," Gunter told the Florida Citrus Commission recently.

The department, charged with the promotion and marketing of the state's fresh and processed citrus products, is proposing some hard-hitting programs and increased budgets for the 1988-89 season.

Merchandising and publicity campaigns are being mounted to try to convince mom, dad and the kids that orange juice is just as refreshing as any other beverage and probably much better for them.

"We want to maintain orange juice as the gold standard of juices," says the Citrus Department's marketing director, Bill Gordon.

Surveys show that the orange juice market share dropped six percentage points from 1980 to 1987, while apple juice gained six points. Orange juice sales are at 59 percent of the juice market, with apple juice solidifying its hold on second place at 17 percent.

Florida expects to produce 140 million 90-pound boxes of oranges this season, 90 percent of which will go into processed juices.

The current grapefruit crop is estimated at a near-record 53 million 85-pound boxes, with production expected to soar to about 60 million boxes by the mid-1990s. Most of the state's export grapefruit is grown in the Indian River section of the citrus belt.

Excellent growing conditions (ample rainfall early in the season and mild winter weather) have resulted in outstanding crops since the 1983 and 1985 freezes, which devastated the northern sections of the citrus belt.

"There can be little doubt left that our industry is making a strong recovery from problems encountered earlier this decade," Gunter says.

The projected orange crop for this season would be the largest since the 1980-81 season, when 172 million boxes were picked. "The fruit just kept right on growing," says Bob Terry, citrus statistician with the Florida Agricultural Statistics Service in Orlando.

In the coming season, the department wants to spend $39.4 million to promote orange juice sales, a 17.3 percent hike over the current $33.6 million.

The problem is rather more complicated with grapefruit, fresh or otherwise, since it is seen as sour and sour, an unglamorous sort of lump for today's lifestyles.
