Defense probe search reveals firm had competitor's secrets

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Engine maker Pratt & Whitney possessed sensitive documents that rival General Electric Co. had submitted to the Defense Department in competing for contracts worth hundreds of millions of dollars, the FBI told a judge last week in its nationwide investigation of Pentagon bribery, fraud and leaks.

The FBI assertion was made in a search warrant obtained to seize materials from the offices of Eugene Tallia, vice president of Pratt & Whitney and head of the company's Washington office. Pratt & Whitney is an operating unit of United Technologies Corp. A copy was obtained by the trade paper Defense Week and made available Saturday to The Associated Press. The warrant focuses on the relationship between Tallia and two Washington consultants who previously emerged in the procurement investigation - Melvyn R. Paisley and William Galvin It sought "statements of work proposals, agreements, purchase orders, invoices, bills, correspondence, memoranda, notes and other documents relating to Pratt & Whitney and its employees and Galvin and Paisley or their corporations" from 1985 on. Paisley, a former Boeing Co. executive, is a central figure in the broadening investigation. Then-Navy Secretary John Lehman recruited Paisley in 1981 to be his assistant secretary of the Navy for research, engineering and systems.

Paisley resigned from the post in April 1987 — at the same time Lehman left the Pentagon and he became a consultant for United Technologies and also for the nation's No. 1 defense contractor, McDonnell Douglas, as well as other defense manufacturers.

Galvin is also a United Technologies consultant

A search warrant issued in St. Louis Tuesday said Paisley had given McDonnell Douglas "substantial information obtained from government officials which has been classified and-or confidential or not available to the contracting public.

In a related development, sources who declined to be identified told The Associated Press Saturday of a conversation between federal prosecutor Henry Hudson, who is spearheading the investigation, and Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, a critic of Pentagon spending policies.

Grassley and aides met with Hudson for 15 to 20 minutes Thursday afternoon and then the two met alone for another 30 to 40 mi-

After Hudson laid out the scope of the probe, the sources said, Grassley - aware of the close ties among Paisley, Lehman and Everett Pyatt, assistant Navy secretary for shipbuilding — asked if Lehman was a target of the investigation. Hudson answered with a blunt, "No comment."

Lehman, Paisley and Pyatt have not returned numerous phone calls seeking their

The Los Angeles Times and the Baltimore Sun said Saturday the 2-year-old FBI investigation was code-named "Ill Wind" in its initial stages.

The Sun said that term turned up in a suicide note left by Tom Pappas, chief aide to Rep. Roy Dyson, D-Md., who fell to his death from a Manhattan hotel May 1. Pappas had left a note with the phrase "Ill winds that taunt us through peace and understanding will not cause us to have a crash landing.

The Baltimore Sun and the Los Angeles Times also said activities of the late Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., are being investigated. Addabbo was chairman of the House Appropriations defense subcommittee. He was succeeded by Rep. Bill Chappell, D-Fla., who characterized as "a bunch of bunk" reports Friday that he was under scrutiny.

The Washington Post, in Saturday's editions, quoted law enforcement sources as saying investigators were looking at the dealings of Dyson and Chappell with Charles Gardner, a New York-based consultant who had been a vice president of Unisys. The paper said wiretaps picked up Dyson's name in Gardner's phone conversations.

In an interview Saturday, Dyson told The Associated Press that he had met with Gardner perhaps three times but "he never lobbied me directly.

He said he Unisys has facilities just "a long walk" from his home in Maryland.

He said the first time he met Gardner was a year or so ago, probably when "he came to a fund-raiser.

They met during the weekend that Pappas ended his life, a meeting that Dyson said Pappas probably arranged. During that meeting, Dyson visited a Unisys plant in Great Neck, N.Y., for a "fairly lengthy" briefing and then went to dinner with a group that included

Hospital prepared for battle with AIDS

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Patients showing up at Coronado Hospital after July 1 may think they're helping to film the next Star Wars fight scene, but they'll really be participating in the latest round of the war against AIDS.

Complete with clear plastic face shields, goggles and a host of other futuristic-looking devices, the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the state health department are forcing doctors and nurses to put on the gloves - the latex variety and do battle with the killer disease. The strategy, in this case, is one of defense. Most of the equipment purchased by Coronado Hospital is designed to prevent the spread of AIDS from patient to employee or from one patient to another said Dee Barker, coordinator of in-service eduation and the hospital's infection control nurse. Barker said that, by July 1, Coronado Hospital hopes to be following "universal precautions" established by OSHA and the Centers for Disease Control. Eventually, the precautions will be required in all

'Pillowcase bandit' suspect now in jail

By PAUL PINKHAM

The man authorities believe held up four Allsup's stores this week - three while wearing a pillowcase over his head — is now staring out from behind bars after he was arrested Saturday on armed robbery charges.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said he arrested Johnny Mack Irvine, 26, also known as Mack Bailey, in the 500 block of Harlem Street shortly before 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

Justice of the Peace Bob Muns set Irvine's bond at $30,000, Jordan said.

Authorities have said the "pillowcase bandit" struck four Allsup's Convenience Stores in three nights last week.

In three of the early-morning holdups — at Price Road and Alcock Street and twice at Faulkner and Wilks streets - the robber was wearing a pillowcase with eye holes cut in it.

The first robbery Wednesday, at Foster Avenue and Starkweather Street, was committed by a man with a similar physical description and method of operation but wearing a black ski

At the request of Allsup's officials, authorities have refused to say how much money was taken

Chief Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Ken Kieth said the robber, armed with a butcher knife, took less than $100 from the store at Price Road and Alcock

Jordan said he arrested Irvine after the accused robber tele-

"He called me (Friday) night and told me he wanted to surrender," Jordan said Saturday. However, when the man failed to show up at the sheriff's office, Jordan drove to his grandmother's old house at 532 Harlem and found him there.

Jordan said Irvine has been charged only with Friday morning's robbery at Faulkner and Pampa police had the store under surveillance early Friday, but the robber managed to slip into the foggy night and elude officers. Police recovered a pickup truck registered to Irvine's stepfather, Jessie Bailey, 76, 1056 Huff Road, about a block from the store.

Also recovered near the store Friday were several knives and the pillowcase believed used in the robberies, Pampa Police Chief Robert Eberz said.

The case is expected to be presented to a 223rd District grand jury early next month.

Moynihan savors welfare bill victory but still faces a battle

WASHINGTON (AP) - A canny mix of expertise, persistence and pragmatism has brought Sen. Daniel Patrick Movnihan to the brink of achieving his longtime goal of radically reshaping the country's Depression-era welfare system.

But the professorial New York Democrat, a leading thinker on poverty and welfare problems since the 1960s, faces critical tests of personal and political diplomacy in the upcoming battle over what type of welfare bill will go to the White House

The Reagan administration is on one side seeking shorter welfare rolls and ever more stringent work requirements for those that remain; the House is on the other with a five-year, $7 billion plan that would add families to the rolls and reward states that raise cash benefits.

In the middle are Moynihan and his delicately balanced bill, which won a ringing 93-3 endorsement Thursday night on the Sen-

The Family Security Act is ambitiously described as a way to turn an outmoded income maintenance system into a jobs, education and training program in tune with today's realities.

Yet its cost — $2.8 billion over five years — is relatively modest. To welfare recipients, the bill both offers opportunities and dictates responsibilities; for states, too, it mixes mandates with incentives.

For 18 months Moynihan has pressed the bill gently, academically, with eloquent lectures on the history of the welfare system (a widow's benefit, established in 1935); the status of children today (one in four born into poverty, no other age group is as poor); the coming labor crunch ("we need all our children now, as never before in this century; thus indeed does necessity reinforce compas-

On the House side, Democrats and Republicans emerged from cordial but unsuccessful committee negotiations and said they had unalterable, fundamental, philosophical differences on wel-

The 230-194 vote, split largely along party lines, reflected the unhappiness of GOP members and the obligation many Democrats felt to side with their leadership. Moderates in both parties pined for something that looked more like the Moynihan bill.

Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., fell into the job of chief House welfare booster last year after Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., was indicted on tax fraud and other charges and had to relinquish his chairmanship of the House subcommittee that handles welfare.

The House-Senate conference will start early this summer. Downey is promising a "hotly fought" battle over whether states should receive extra money for raising their benefits.

He's also planning to try to up the Senate ante on money for state jobs programs and keep the House bill's mandatory yearround benefits to poor two-parent families — as opposed to the sixmonth-a-year minimum approved by the Senate. The White House is the wild card in the welfare equation. Senators complained repeatedly before they passed their bill that they were confused about what the administration wanted.

Former education commissioner to be at June chamber luncheon Dr. Raymon Bynum, former

Texas commissioner of education, will be the guest speaker for the June membership luncheon of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce.

The luncheon will be held at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building, 200 N.

Bynum will speak on school finances.

Now serving as a consultant on school management and financial studies to various school districts, Bynum also conducts workshops throughout the United States.

"He is considered one of the top school finance experts in the country," said Dr. Harry Griffith, Pampa public schools superintendent.

In his workshops within Texas, Bynum covers such topics as history of state school funding, current school finance system, details of local finance, the relationship between state and local funding, current developments including the Edgewood court case, and the new Select Committee on Education.

A former mathematics teacher and coach, Bynum has a bachelor of science degree from McMurry College and a master's of education from Southern Methodist University.

He earned his doctorate from McMurry, where he also has been presented the Distinguished Alumni Award and has been inducted in the Athletic Hall of Fame.

Bynum served as assistant superintendent of schools in Richardson from 1958 to 1975. He then became associate commissioner of finance at the Texas Education Agency. From May 1979 to June 1981, he served as deputy commissioner for program administration and finance. He was Texas commissioner of education from June 1981 to October 1984.

Griffith said Bynum is "highly informative and entertaining."

Bynum resides in Austin with his wife Mary Ester. The barbecue buffet will be catered by Dyer's Bar-B-Que. Cost is $5.50 per person.

Reservations should be made with the chamber office at 669-3241 by noon Monday.

Juneteenth celebrations under way

By The Associated Press

Organizers of Juneteenth activities marking the June 19, 1865 emancipation of Texas' slaves say they hope people look beyond the festivities of the day and recognize its historic significance.

Texas blacks planned to observe Juneteenth with church services, music, parades, games and various other activities.

In Austin, weekend activities include free outdoor concerts, a museum exhibit, and a one-man show called Theatre in Black. Juneteenth celebrations for the state capital also will feature a parade with Miss Juneteenth and Miss Black Austin

"I hope that young people celebrate the significance of Juneteenth and not just focus on the gaiety and traditions," said Louis Hicks, curator of the Carver Museum and Cultural Center in Austin.

Juneteenth is a celebration of the day Union troops arrived in Galveston in 1865 and freed Texas' 200,000 black slaves by enforcing President Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation, which had gone into effect 21/2 years before.

At a Dallas Fair Park museum, a copy of the Emancipation Proclamation was on display.

'Juneteenth is significant not only because it commemorates the freeing of slaves in Texas, but also because it took two years for the news to get here," Hicks said. Young people need to reflect on the price that their forefathers paid to get that freedom.'

The Texas Legislature made Juneteenth a state holiday in Fort Worth's fourth annual Juneteenth celebrations began Friday with a church ceremony at City Hall, where the Rev. Ralph Waldo Emerson Jr. addressed more than 100 people.

"I need to say to you that we are still in slavery," Emerson told the audience. "I'm talking about the slavery we continue to practice on each other, talking about each other and tearing each other down with our mouths.

"If it's from slavery to freedom, look free and act free, and you'll be free," he said.

Other activities planned for the Juneteenth weekend in Fort Worth were a five kilometer run, a rap festival and showings of two plays entitled Miracle in Harlem and Murder in Harlem. In Houston, A Juneteenth Freedom Parade was to move through the downtown area to $30,000 a year," she said. "We won't know because OSHA keeps coming up with new rules every few months."

Barker noted that the initial target date for the new precautions was October. It had to be pushed back, she said, because many small, rural hospitals couldn't afford to comply that quickly.

However, OSHA already has begun inspecting some hospitals in West Texas. Fines for non-compliance can reach $10,000 per offense.

At Coronado Hospital, part of the cost of compliance will be passed on to patients, Haynes said. That includes the cost of disposable items such as gloves and face shields if used. Haynes said the hospital will absorb the cost of permanent equipment like the goggles and needle receptacles. Barker said Coronado Hospital also is planning training sessions for employees and the community "so they won't be shocked." She said hospital officials probably will show off the new equipment at Pampa grade schools in the fall and plan several public demonstrations at the hospital. Training of hospital employees is scheduled for the next two weeks, she said.

Haynes said she doesn't expect to much resistance from employees, other than concerns about the extra time it will take to don the new equipment. She said hospital employees are aware of the need for AIDS precautions.

"We understand it better in this business than anywhere

In the mid-afternoon hours of May 21, Choat plopped himself down between the gray tombstones of sons Ronnie, 27, who died last year of cancer, and Jonathan, 15, who was killed in an accidental shooting in 1977.

In a solitary ritual that has confounded his family, friends and Somervell County authorities, he's remained in the same horizontal position at the same spot at Squaw Creek Cemetery near Glen Rose, the Somervell County seat about 50 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

Choat says God instructed him to lie there not to grieve for his dead sons, but, quite simply, as a publicity stunt inspired by the Almighty.

"God does strange things on occasion to get people's attention," he said as he perched beneath a sleeping bag fashioned into shelter against midday temperatures that climbed into the 90s.

According to Choat, God said, "I want you to lay there between the two graves and I want you to lay there until I tell you to get up.'

So Choat did just that. When relatives found him a few hours later, "They thought I was nuts," he said.

After they were convinced he was not joking, Choat's relatives provided him with the necessary items for an indefinite stay, which for the first three weeks included only water for sustenance.

Later, when it became apparent the word of Providence might be a while in coming and after he lost about 15 pounds. Choat began easing back into solid food, culminating with a shrimp dinner on his 31st wedding anniversary.

Every few days, Choat takes a sponge bath. His wife periodically brings fresh clothes, and relatives bring water and food daily

He gets little exercise, but says he is fit. He reads a Bible to pass the time and has several visitors to fill his days. Although he says he is prepared for the long haul, Choat admits he is more than ready for home if God is ready to send him. The first order-of business will be a long shower, followed by a haircut, he said.

His wife, Margaret Choat, says she just tries to understand.

"There's a lot of things we haven't heard of before. That doesn't make it right or wrong," she said from her brown trailer home several hundred vards from the cemetery.

Somervell County authorities say the gravesite homesteader is within his legal rights, having bought and paid for the cemetery plots.

'My friends, we're going to win because we are America's party," Dukakis told the 5,288 delegates to the state Democratic convention, which ended

Dukakis supporters fended off a determined effort by Jesse Jackson backers and took 29 of the 64 national convention delegates awarded here. Jackson, who energized the convention with his

Friday night speech, got 25 delegates and U.S. Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee earned 10. Those delegates are in addition to the 119 handed out according to the popular vote in the March 8 Texas primary. Dukakis picked up 43 of those delegates to 42 for Jackson, 25 for Gore and nine for Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt.

The final 28 members of Texas' 211-member delegation to the Atlanta convention are "superdelegates" selected from among party and elected officials. Dukakis is expected to have a plurality, and possibly a majority, of the superdelegates.

Not counting the superdelegates, Dukakis will have 72 Texas delegates at the national convention in Atlanta next month. Jackson will have 67. Gore 35 and Gephardt nine. Many of the Gore and Gephardt delegates are expected to wind up in the Nationwide, Dukakis already has won more than enough delegates to guarantee his nomination on the first ballot at the July convention. Republican Vice President George Bush will get the GOP nomination at New Orleans in August.

"Over the past 15 months, I've campaigned from one end of this country to another. And I know that the citizens of some states and some communities and some neighborhoods are doing very, very "Dukakis said. "But opportunity for some isn't the standard we Democrats set for America." He called for a national energy policy "that will unite us, not divide us.' "Here in Texas you have abundant supplies of clean, efficient natural gas. We in the Northeast need that gas to produce electric energy. We need a president who can make that happen, and I want to be that president," he said.

Dukakis predicted he would carry states in all

'If anyone tells you that we can't win in the South or that we can't win in the West or that we can't win in the great state of Texas, don't you believe it," he Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a state convention favorite for vice president, told delegates, "If we work hard and remain united, 1988 is going to be a great year for the Democratic Party.

In his Friday speech, Jackson said his campaign has not ended, despite the numbers.

"Our campaign started before Iowa. Our campaign will last beyond Atlanta. This campaign will continue to seek delegates until the roll is called in Atlanta," he said, urging his backers to "Keep your eyes on the prize.'

U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston and Jackson's Texas chairman, said he was "disappointed" that Jackson was edged by Dukakis at the convenhow Jackson is treated at the national convention. "The Democrats cannot win if Rev. Jackson is not happy about what happens in Atlanta," Leland said, adding that Jackson supporters expect their candidate to be offered the vice presidential Texas Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle said Jackson could hurt the ticket, both in Texas and

"Polling indicates it's not a particularly good idea," said Slagle, who favors Bentsen for vice

"I don't know if they are going to be totally happy for awhile," he said of Jackson's Texas backers. 'The fact is they've been on a rather historical mission and you never like for those to stop if you're part of it.'

But he predicted the Jackson forces would be on board for Dukakis' general election campaign. "All Jesse has got to do is pronounce himself satisfied and they'll be satisfied," Slagle said of

Dukakis eulogizes Hispanic leader Velasquez at funeral

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Democratic presidential hopeful Michael Dukakis eulogized Willie Velasquez Saturday, saying the Hispanic rights activist changed the world by inspiring people to

Velasquez, 44, president of the San Antonio-based Southwest Voter Registration Education Project, died of kidney cancer

Wednesday. Velasquez' non-profit organization helped increase Hispanic voter registration from 2.5 million in 1976 to a projected 5 million for the general election in November. The organization also filed suit against hundreds of local governments, forcing them to change from at-large election systems to single-member districts in order to gain Hispanic representation.

The Massachusetts governor likened Velasquez to the late Robert F. Kennedy. "Willie Velasquez believed in democracy. He believed in the ability of people to make the right decisions in their own lives when given the freedom and the power to do so," Dukakis said. 'He changed the world because he understood great victories required great efforts and today Willie's victories are every where — in the state legislatures, in city halls and county courthouses all over the Southwest," Dukakis said.

Dukakis said Velasquez will never be forgotten and that his work will continue.

"We must open up the door of opportunity to all of our people. We must make democracy live for every man, woman and child in our land and people everywhere," said Dukakis, who spoke in English and Spanish during his 10-minute eulogy. Velasquez, who had taken a year's leave from SVREP, had been scheduled to introduce Dukakis at the state Democratic Convention in Houston on Saturday. Velasquez also was debating whether to join the Dukakis campaign as a Southwest political consultant.

More than 1,000 people packed St. Mary's Catholic Church and 200 others stood outside listening to the two-hour funeral Mass. Among those seated inside were Mayor Henry Cisneros, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, Treasurer Ann Richards and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

Trumpet-playing mariachis started and ended the bilingual Mass, which was celebrated by several priests, including Archbishop Ricardo Ramirez of Las Cruces, N.M.

"Once in a rare moment in the world's history, the Lord raises a man such as this, kind of like a comet that doesn't appear very often but flies to the sky in a shining and brillant light, but always only for a brief moment, Ramirez said.

'But the image and impact of that comet remains imprinted in our minds forever and that was the life of Willie," Ramirez said. "We are very grateful to him."

Velasquez, who grew up and attended Catholic schools and universities in San Antonio, became involved in Chicano activities in the mid-1960s.

He helped form the Mexican-American Youth Organization and he also was involved with El Movimiento Social de la Raza Unida, before it became a political party.

Velasquez helped organize a farmworkers strike in the Rio Grande Valley in 1968 and later became involved with the Mexican-American Unity Council of San Antonio. He later worked for the National Council of La Raza before helping found the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project in 1972. Velasquez traveled extensively throughout the Southwest for voter registration workshops and to address

Angry tax protestors parade

SHERMAN (AP) — About 3,000 angry tax protesters, many of them elderly and on fixed incomes, paraded through the center of this North Texas town complaining of property appraisals that have in some instances doubled.

"I don't think there's ever been that many (people) before, not even for the Santa Claus parade." said Billie Jo Walton, a police department clerk in this city about 70 miles north of Dallas. "That's the biggest parade

The protest of mostly senior citizens was organized by H.K. Lyde, a retired businessman who warned city, county and school officials against using the increased property appraisals the basis for setting each taxpayer's levy on real estate and other property - "as an excuse to hide behind a tax increase." Lyde said the higher assessments, coming during a downturn in local real estate, tapped a general anti-tax sentiment in a county with a high proportion of retired residents.

"We're a marching tax army," said Lyde. "We're mean and Carrying signs that said we're mad. We ain't backing

Bob Tollison, administrator of the Grayson County Appraisal District, said some tax assessments jumped dramatically because the county was conducting its first comprehensive reappraisal in five or six years.

Although the average increase countywide was 14 percent, as many as 700 property owners saw their assessed values rise by at least 75 percent, he said.

"Some of them went up 100 percent, but that was very rare," Tollison said. "Eighty percent of our complaints are from people over 65 years of age. They're on fixed incomes, and they're concerned with taxes.'

Many protesters complained that the appraisals were inaccu-

The tax appraisal is the foundation local governments use for setting property tax rates and is supposed to be based on the "fair market value" of a taxpayer's real estate and other property. City councils, county commissions and local school boards set tax rates — the amount of tax per $100 of assessed property value.

For example, the 1987 tax rate for a Sherman homeowner was $1.88 per $100 of assessed value. Hence, the owner of a home appraised at $50,000 paid $940 in school, city, county and junior college taxes this year.

An increase in tax assessments without a corresponding lowering in tax rates results in an automatic increase in tax revenue.

Lack of fuel may have caused crash

PERRYTON (AP) - A plane crash in Central Texas which killed four Panhandle residents may have occurred when the single-engine Cessna ran out of fuel, said a federal investigator.

While the cause of the June 10 crash has not been determined officially, National Transportation Safety Board investigator J.O. Johnson said the pilot told air traffic controllers in Austin that he was out of fuel.

"There was no fuel in the aircraft or very much on the ground," Johnson said. There was no evidence of a fuel leak in the aircraft, he said.

The plane crashed in a hay field six miles south of Elgin and was carrying four men associated with Ochiltree General Hospital.

A memorial service for Jerry Weatherly, Roy Henry Grunden and Doug Holmes, all of Perryton, and Dr. V.S. Christopher of Booker was held Thursday at the hospital here.

The men were flying to Austin for a meeting, officials said. Johnson said a final report on the crash is not likely to be issued by the NTSB for another six months.

Superpowers can't dictate to others!!

During the run-up to the Moscow summit, some State Department officials expressed the hope that Reagan and Gorbachev might be able to "make progress" toward "resolving the conflict" in Angola. That the leaders of the two superpowers should broker a solution in a Southern African country torn by civil war is geopolitical arrogance, and it probably wouldn't work

The current conflict in Angola began after the Portuguese withdrew from the former colony in 1974.
One of the anti-colonialist guerrilla factions, backed by Soviet and Cubans, took power and refused to hold elections. The leader who would probably have won if reasonably free elections had been held was forced to flee to the bush and reorganize his UNITA movement from scratch, this time with the intention of liberating Angola from Soviet colonialism.

Jona Savimbi has taken overt and covert help wherever he could get it, from South Africa, the United States and numerous black African countries. He has also had aid from these sources abruply cut off from time to time, for various reasons. He has built an indigenous movement that controls about a third of the country and will continue to struggle whether it gets outside aid or not.

The government, meantime, gets most of its revenue from drilling licenses issued to U.S. companies for the rich Cabinda province fields, and uses the money to pay for advisers, about 40,000 troops and material from Cuba and the Soviet bloc. Without that assistance from outside, it would probably fall to Savimbi's guerrillas, though the outcome would be in doubt for some time. The government is more a puppet of outside forces than is Savimbi, but both can boast indigenous support. The only way the U.S. and the Soviets could really dictate the outcome of Angola would be with a massive joint invasion and the determination to run the country with colonial governors for the foresee-

Both superpowers could remove their support from the Angolan factions simultaneously and let the Angolans themselves resolve the conflict. The U.S. State Department is urging the Soviets to urge the Cubans to withdraw. But would either superpower trust the other not to meddle covertly? Would they relish admitting that for all their super powers, neither one can really dictate to this small country, but only exert indirect influence?

Foreign aid isn't the answer

British economist Lord Peter Bauer has written a booklet for Washington's Cato Institute entitled "The Disregard of Reality." In just 18 pages he makes more sense about economic development than volumes of reports by development experts.

Experts proclaim that poor countries face a vicious circle of poverty where poverty and stagnation are self-perpetuating. Accordingly, foreign aid is the only way to break it.

This is a self-serving melody sung by the U.S. State Department, International Monetary Fund, World Bank, U.N. officials, research grant recipients and ungrateful foreign tyrants receiving American taxpayer largesse. But Lord Bauer says, "If the notion of the vicious circle were valid, mankind would still be in the Stone Age at best."

Throughout history people, families, societies and countries have moved from abject poverty to affluence without external donations or foreign aid. In 1776 we were a poor country. And virtually everyone who came here was poor: the Jews, Irish, Germans, English, Swedes, Poles, Orientals, you name them.

When these poverty-stricken immigrants hit our shores, there wasn't even a domestic aid program much less a foreign aid program. According to today's experts, we could not have developed, yet we did, and one thing is sure it wasn't due to foreign aid.

the heart of some of our policies toward poor countries. He says, "Materially, the West never had it so good, nor ever felt so badly about it ... Guilt has contributed to the confusion between the merits of charity in helping the less fortunte and the notion that income differences as such are reprehensible results of oppression and exploitation."

Guilt causes the West to pour out lavish sums of money on brutal, genocidal regimes all over Africa yet single out South African rulers for special hate. Whatever one may think of South African rulers, the fact is their killing of blacks is only a tiny, tiny fraction of that done by the rulers in places like Ethiopia, Uganda, Angola, Mozambique and the Central African Empire. Were South Africa's rulers, Peter Bauer adds, ... any color other than white, their conduct would arouse little or no comment in the West."

Part of the solution to poverty and stagnation Lord Bauer suggests that Western guilt lies at in much of the world calls for at least law and order, private property rights, savings and investments, and an increase in human skills.

These factors aren't guarantees of economic growth but they seem to be an important part of it. Countries managing to escape abject poverty tend to have systems that foster private property, savings and investment, and development of human skills. Moreover, countries with higher income generally enjoy greater human rights protections which lead to greater inventives to save, invest and learn skills. We suspect that's no coincidence.

Ethiopia and several other African countries now hover on the brink of disaster. Western welfare has been like giving an aspirin to a cancer patient when radical surgery is needed. Africans must rid themselves of the leeches, tyrants and kleptomaniacs who masquerade as African leaders. Foreign aid only strengthens the hand of oppressive governments.

The supreme irony of much of Africa is the inescapable conclusion that the average man was better off under colonialism than black rule. This irony would be doubled if, 30 or 40 years from now, a black South African can say he was better off under apartheid than black

These observataions are not an argument in support of colonialism or apartheid. They are strong recommendations for Africans to look before they leap and read George Orwell's Animal Farm.

voice is a real

I don't want to sound too high and mighty here, but if it weren't absolutely necessary, I don't think I'd spend the night at a Motel 6.

THE ORINGE COUNTY REGISTER

I spend about half my life in motels and hotels as it is, and I've gotten to the point I need my comforts - minibar in my room, little jars of shampoo, and turndown service where they leave a candy mint on my pillow.

I'm certain a room at a Motel 6 would be clean, but I've got the feeling the towels would be small and there wouldn't be but one pillow and there wouldn't be HBO on the television.

Regardless, I've become a Tom Bodett fan, and if you listen to radio at all, you know Tom Bodett is a national spokesman for Motel 6.

His commercials are homey and clever and he always signs off by saying, "We'll leave the light on for you," which is what your mother used to say when you were going to be out late.

In a world where an advertiser would hire that idiot from Australia to scream at you about batteries, Tom Bodett's calming voice is most wel-

He talks about Motel 6's great room service (there's a pizza place nearby that delivers) and he even spoke the recent good news that in some Motel 6 rooms, there are new bedspreads.

Since I'd never heard of Tom Bodett before he broke in with Motel 6, I set about to find out more

I even tried to talk to the man directly, but he lives in Alaska, as it turns out, and he was off on his dogsled somewhere.

I did learn the following about him: Tom Bodett was born in Michigan in 1955. He has been a cannery worker, a logger, a building contractor, and a commentator on National Public Radio's All Things Considered.

He lives in Homer, Alaska, with his wife and I also found out he is an author. I am now in possession of two of his books and I have read them and they have brought me much joy.

One book is As Far As You Can Go Without a Passport, (Addison-Wesley). The other is Small Comforts by the same publisher. Both books are filled with essays that come across as a conversation with your neighbor.

Tom Bodett has a lot to say about stacks of wood, McDonald's coming to Alaska, getting a truck out of a ditch, naming a baby, and machinery.

"Machinery and I have an understanding," he writes. "We hate each other."

What I like most about Tom Bodett's writing is he's not topical. He neglects AIDS, nuclear war, racism, the falling dollar and airline deregulation, and deals instead with the fact he's never been able to spit very far.

Tom Bodett has the most believeable voice in radio advertising since Arthur Godfrey tried to sell me tea.

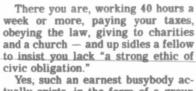

And you know, he is the sort of person who would, in fact, leave the light on for you if he said he would

Berry's World

"And now, Igor, to give him the inseparable component of TV journalism - SHOW BIZ!'

We should forget about Citizens Corps

Yes, such an earnest busybody ac tually exists, in the form of a group known as the Democratic Leadership Council. Founded in 1984 by elected officials determined to moderate party positions, the council recently issued an appeal for a program of national service available to both young and old

As the council's report explains, "The Citizens Corps is essentially a new G.I. Bill expanded to include civilian as well as military service to the nation.'

In return for a year of subsistence labor performing one of a variety of social services, a volunteer would receive a voucher worth $10,000 toward college, vocational school or down payment on a home. Or a young person could join the military and earn a $12,000 voucher every year.

According to the leadership cour cil, voluntary service that included the carrot of student aid would infuse the military with more middle-class recruits, as well as install badly needed aides in classrooms, child-care centers and other social agencies. Not only that, the report claims, the program won't cost much - a few billion Unfortunately, the report never really explains what's so terrible about the poor and disadvantaged finding opportunity in what is, after all, a volunteer military. Would moderate Democrats prefer to see some of today's willing recruits displaced by young people who already enjoy other career options? Apparently so.

Then there is the matter of expense. How many major new programs end up costing as little as their proponents promise? Approximately none is how many.

For that matter, it isn't clear the program would even deliver the promised cheap labor for social work. For example, a $15,000 annual salary ($10,000 voucher plus $100 a week basic pay) for labor in a day-care center is not far out of line with what the private sector offers in some communities. Why is this expense better borne by taxpayers? In reading the report, however, you get the feeling the Democratic Leadership Council would favor national service even if it cost more than advertised and shifted jobs from the private to the public sector. Its main goal is not the creation of jobs or a socially balanced Army, but the shoring up of our collective esprit de corps.

National service will slay the "prevailing climate of moral indole the council claims, "build social solidarity and counteract forces in our pluralistic culture that engender anomie and alienation.'

The council refers wistfully to the 19th century, when Americans supposedly plunged into civic affairs with a gusto unheard of today.

Unfortunately, this nostalgic reverie fails to acknowledge that 19th century activism was fundamentally different from a federal citizens corps. It was both voluntary and private in part because government itself was so much smaller.

Now that government at all levels devours nearly 40 percent of the average income, most Americans naturally look to it to solve problems our ancestors took upon themselves. Indeed, from birth until death today, in the public schools and the media, Americans learn that government is mainly responsible for their well-being and in areas where it isn't, it certainly

One of the rich ironies of the council's proposal is that it seeks to spur civic commitment by having the government undertake yet more. This, apparently, is what passes today for political moderation.

It seems very appropriate this Father's Day to take a moment to tell you about my dad. His name is Melton Burns, and he worked for Cabot for 40 years. During that time he was one of the company's best community works

I have been the manager of chambers of commerce around the state the past 20 years trying to carry on the heritage of service to others that Daddy passed to me. In all of these communities, there have been outstanding community leaders working hard to get things done. But in my whole career I have never seen anyone do so much for others and totally escape notice as my dad has.

He built an outdoor screen in the park on the lower-income side of town, borrowed a company projector and showed movies and cartoons in the park many summers. Cabot had a snow cone machine for company picnics, and he borrowed it for refreshments. He helped build the Optimist Club Youth Building. He spent years building and helping maintain little league diamonds.

I have seen the countless times he was there for friends, relatives and acquaintances ... mowing, doing, fixing and responding to anyone in need. He can't do these things anymore for health reasons, and he misses doing them.

This Father's Day, however, I'd like him to know that he has a son who wants him and the community he served so long to know I'm very

Glad she selected a doctor in Pampa

To the editor:

I just recently moved to Pampa. After moving here, I became ill, and in trying to find a doctor in this area, several Pampa folks advised me to seek medical help in Amarillo.

I chose to find a doctor here, and I'm very happy I did. I find the doctors and nurses that attended to my needs to be very sufficient and effective, and their bedside manners to be a big plus. I am very impressed! I also found Coronado Hospital to be exceptionally clean and also very efficient. With the shortage of doctors and nurses we have nowadays, being overworked and facing long hours, I am proud of you and your time and concern!

I would like to express my thanks to the health care I received from you at Coronado Hospital and to Dr. Alberto Sy and Dr. Alfred Juan, and to Norma (RN) and Penny (LVN) at the hospital.

Mrs. Bransom

He's still bored but wants his MTV

Greetings editor and 'bored youth' adviser: Well, in June 9's letters to the editor, I wrote a letter explaining how boring the city of Pampa is. Well, in the June 12's letters to the editor, somebody gave me some advice. Well, she told me to listen to the birds sing, watch the sunrise, scrub the floors (that's what moms are for), etc

Well, I thought about your ideas and basically, in nice words, those ideas are for old people. It's the '80s, not the '50s. Teens need excitement in their lives, not get their thrills by watching two birds having sex on the highwire.

By the way, I do mow my yard, and five others. Then you said, "Park your car, take a walk, Pampa has beautiful parks." Well, it would save on gas, but I don't like to walk around because the parks are not that great unless you meant the bugs were beautiful. Any-

Then you said, "Visit Lovett Library." Well, I hate to say this, but I'm one out of many dyslexic people in Pampa. If the school board would set up classes for us, maybe I could enjoy books. Anyway, life goes on. In another letter, "Loves Baseball" com-plained about two kids French kissing. Face it! It's the law of nature. Oh, but little kids were watching? They have to learn sometime. Then the pit bull puppies — let them fight; it's their dogs. Then to the DPS stopping the watergun bandits - What's with the DPS? Why are they picking on the teens? Why don't they go do their job on the highway, not the drag? Anyway, life goes on.

Now to something everybody wants here in Pampa — MTV! I WANT MY MTV!!!!! Why doesn't this hellhole town have MTV!?! We all know this cable system isn't that great, but we still WANT OUR MTV!!!!!

I sign off, wishing Pampa a rude awakening. If you don't like what I said, tell me! You can find me in a vehicle with two original bumper stickers on the back window. Remember, I WANT MY MTV!!!!!

It shouldn't have happened to her!

To the editor:

It is so surprising to see what happened to a child at middle school, one that I watched from seventh grade on up.

How could you coaches, or the entire school system, allow this to happen? I am not her mother, but I know how she feels. All I can say to the child is, don't be discouraged, keep on

A lot of times we get done wrong and don't understand why. I want to tell you, Nikki Ryan, you are a winner in everything and don't let them take that away from you!

I am glad I don't have children going to school at Pampa Middle School.

I've enjoyed watching and keeping up with you in the papers, Nikki.

Understands why few see film here To the editor:

Recently, my son and I decided to attend a movie. The movie that was showing, or so we thought, was the Walt Disney film The Fox and

After arriving, we bought the usual popcorn and soft drinks. We sat down in a theater that smelled heavily of must and body cdor. It was extremely hot and the room had no ventilation. The smell and the heat, I thought I could tolerate since my son was so excited about seeing

When it was time for the feature to begin, the manager walked in and informed us that there were not enough people in the auditorium to show the feature. There was no offer to refund my money, although it was refunded without so much as an apology or a smile.

Needless to say, my son and I were disappointed at the turn of events. We had set aside our time to see a feature we were told would be shown.

As I drove home, I wondered, "How many people does it take to merit turning on the projector? Does it cost so much to run the projector that it is worth disappointing a child, or could it be that he simply did not want to be bothered with the effort?"

It is not often that Pampa's theater offers a "G" rated movie. I have often thought that it was sad that more people do not take advantage of the opportunity to view these movies when they are available, but now I understand. When I wish to view a movie in the future, I, along with many other parents, will take my child to another theater even if it requires an hour's drive

Disgusted

The caring should be shared equally

To the editor: Do you have the responsibility of taking care of your parents? While you make a meager living and your family does without, your brothers and sisters enjoy good jobs, vacations, fancy clothes and new cars. They come by to visit their parents only when necessary or when money is handed out.

Promises are made, you will get back everything you have been out. Don't believe it! When everything is said and done, the ones who have done the least get their choice and you are left out in the cold. When you try to get your fair share, you are called mean, greedy and a liar. You still wind up with nothing. They always get their way

Make sure the responsibility for your parents is on everyone's shoulders. If something needs done, make sure everyone does their fair share. Make them cancel their appointments instead of you. Look out for yourself; no one else will.

After reading this you will say, this always happens in someone else's family, not mine. Believe me, it happens. You may be next. You have one hope — there will be a judgment day.

Thanks for making Summer Sing work

We want to thank all of the townspeople that attended the Top of Texas Summer Sing on Saturday, June 11. We put a lot of work into the preparations for this big event. There were between 1,300 and 1,400 people attending, so all the work was worthwhile. This goes to show this is a ministry of itself, and the people of Pampa make it possible to spread the gospel. We had six different a cappella gospel groups perform, and several variations of a cappella gospel music. 🤎

Thanks again for making the Summer Sing a success. We look forward to seeing you next year for a bigger and better (if possible) Summer Sing!!!

Look professional!

Around 4 p.m. on May 22, I saw something that struck me as disrespectful, rude, inconsiderate and, above all, unprofessional

A Pampa city police officer was parked in his car in the corner of Fairview Cemetery shooting radar while people were trying to pay respect to their loved ones. I feel this was totally wrong in respect and morals to our dead. I believe Pampa city police should hide and shoot radar someplace else besides the BE PROFESSIONAL — LOOK PROFES-SIONAL. Then respect will come to the Police Department.

Name withheld

Editor's Note: Perhaps those who so willingly speed along Harvester and Duncan streets or toss litter from their cars in that area also could show more respect for the location, too. Then perhaps the police wouldn't feel inclined to have to "shoot radar" in that area.

Students deserve a public apology!

To the editor:

This is in regards to the athletic awards assembly at Pampa Middle School.

I think it was very unfair for Nekesha Ryan and others of her ability to not have received the awards that were due them at the

For the Outstanding Athletic Award of the year, who else deserves it more than this athlete? Everytime I picked up the paper, this name and her picture was almost headlines in every paper. Even the Amarillo newspaper knows this child for her ability.

I think the public should be aware of this. Everyone should know how our school works. The children (athletes) bring in the trophies, and in the end, the rug is pulled from under

Editorial ignored the economic costs

To the editor:

An April 6 editorial contended that the U.S. should continue to pursue the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). The editorial, however, did not consider the detrimental effects of SDI.

The News' argument states that the president's SDI proposal has made enormous technological strides since the Star Wars speech in March 1983. Yet the secretary of defense, Frank Carlucci, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have directed that the SDI program be scaled back to concentrate on providing better protection for missile silos only.

Cities and other population centers are not protected under the revised SDI design. Accordingly, The News' contention that SDI would save lives rather than avenge them is not supported by Secretary Carlucci's description of the revamped SDI.

The editorial also charges that the Soviet Union is developing its own SDI system which could leave the U.S. vulnerable to nuclear blackmail in the early to mid-1990s. An analysis by the Council on Economic Priorities indicates that the Soviets are at least 10 years behind the U.S. in 15 of the 20 most basic military technologies identified by the Pentagon. These include military electronics, sensors, satellites and computers. CEP recommends that the U.S. invest $2 billion a year in SDI research to protect against a Soviet breakthrough

The News' editorial ignores the potentially severe economic costs of SDI to the U.S. economy. Our economy cannot be healthy and competitive when so much money is devoted to military research and production in only a few select geographical regions.

If SDI production and deployment goes forward, the possible "brain drain" of scientists and engineers to the defense sector could leave industries that desperately need technological innovation without the required pool of talent. Thus, continued SDI spending will act as a drag on our national economy.

While the title of the editorial is "U.S. can't afford to be without SDI," the potential for economic dislocation caused by carrying Star Wars to completion shows the U.S. cannot afford to have President Reagan's version of the Strategic Defense Initiative. Andrew J. Shapiro

Space is available

To the editor:

The old phone company building is for sale. Without too many renovations, it should make a good tax department and water department. Wouldn't it be nice to have all the utilities close to each other? I've given newcomers instructions on how to find the different facilities Moving these departments out of the City Hall and Courthouse would allow more jail space or other needed space in these facilities.

paper expresses support for American hostage

MOSCOW (AP) - A Soviet newspaper published an emotional cutpouring of support Saturday for Terry Anderson, the hostage held longest in Lebanon, urging him to be strong and assuring him his captors would be punished.

The article in Sovietskaya Rossiya was one of the strongest expressions of public support for Western victims of Middle East terrorism ever to appear in the state-run media. It was in line with current Kremlin policy seeking closer East-West cooperation against terrorists.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped March 16, 1985 in Beirut. He was returning from a tennis match when three men dragged him from his car, shoved him into a Mercedes and drove off.

Sovietskaya Rossiya noted that Anderson, 40, has never seen his daughter, Sulome, who was born nearly three months after his

"Hold on, Terry!" the paper said. "We want you to know that here in Russia our hearts too are gripped with pain and indignation, when we try to imagine your anguish and sufferings.

"And another thing, Terry, your jailers are bound to face punishment. A human life and human dignity are supreme values. and nobody must be allowed to get away with abusing them."

Anderson, a native of Lorain, Ohio is the longest-held foreign hostage in Lebanon. In all, 18 foreigners, including nine Americans, are missing in Lebanon. Most are believed held by groups linked to the Iranian-backed militant Shiite Moslem organization known as Hezbollah, or Party of God.

These groups include Islamic Jihad, Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, Revolutionary Justice and Holy Warriors. Islamic Jihad claims to hold Anderson.

The kidnappers have demanded freedom for 17 pro-Iranian terrorists jailed in Kuwait for bombings in 1983 of the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait.

In another show of support, Saturday's edition of Beirut's Leftist newspaper As-Safir carried a message to kidnapped British journalist John McCarthy.

The message was sent by his family, telling him they were longing to have him home and asking him to "stay cheerful, my friend

Sovietskaya Rossiya, published by the Communist Party Central Committee and the government of the Russian federation, the largest of the Soviet Union's 15 constituent republics, offered no support whatsoever for the kidnappers or their goals.

The religious fanatics who kidnapped Terry and other hostages don't at all consider life to be a holy gift from Allah; for them, the murder of totally innocent people has become common," it said.

Sovietskaya Rossiya said it was not possible to identify with certainty the "brain center" directing the kidnapping in Lebanon, but it strongly hinted that it was Iran.

It mentioned the storming of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in 1979 and the holding of 52 U.S. diplomats and embassy workers Ruhollah Khomeini.

Agricultural subsidies could disrupt summit's tranquility

TORONTO (AP) - World leaders went out of their way to stress international cooperation Saturday on the eve of the seven-nation economic summit, but a contentious fight over agricultural subsidies threatened to disrupt the hoped-for tranquility.

The 14th annual meeting between the world's largest industrial countries - the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada — was being held under the tightest security ever seen in Canada's largest city.

A 3,000-member security force was deployed around the Metropolitan Toronto Convention Center where the government leaders will begin meeting Sunday, protected by 15-foot-high chain link security fences

In his weekly radio address, broadcast from the Oval Office, President Reagan looked back to his first economic summit, also in Canada. He said there had been changes for the better in the world economy in the intervening seven years.

"We have led the world toward a remarkable consensus that economic freedom, not state plan-ning and intervention, holds the key to growth and development," Reagan said.

Reagan said the Toronto summit would be a chance to assure that this "great venture to progress continues" through doing more to support economic coordination among the major countries and by removing remaining trade barriers.

This year's summit is expected to be a low-key gathering, in part because President Reagan is a lame-duck with only seven months left in office but also because the economy is doing surprisingly well, especially in light of the fears of a global recession that were widespread immediately following the October stock market crash

Growth in most of the major countries has accelerated this year, driving down unemployment rates to the lowest levels of this decade.

Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, who is hoping his position as the summit host will give him a political boost at home, said Saturday that it would be wrong to dismiss the summit as a do-nothing affair just because no major initiatives are expected.

"The coordination and cooperation economically that emanates from the summits is a very major contribution towards world growth," Mulroney said during a visit to the rooms where the nearly 3,000 journalists from 50 countries were setting up shop.

The president said Saturday that efforts to stop illegal drug trafficking and rebuild the economies of Afghanistan and the Philippines also would be on the agenda for the summit as would his proposal, first made last year at the Venice summit, to end farm subsidies by the end of the

But Reagan's farm proposal has drawn support from few of the other leaders, with Japan, West Germany and France raising some of the strongest objections move too quickly on the farm question, and Jacques Delors, who represents the European Economic Community at the summit, complained that the U.S. position on farm subsidies threatened to "spoil the atmosphere" of the talks.

In an interview Saturday, Treasury Secretary James A.

Baker III acknowledged that the United States was facing intense opposition on the farm question and any breakthrough would be "extraordinarily difficult.

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements and other officials are considering a plan to use surplus welfare funds to solve the state's jail crowding crisis, officials said.

Clements hinted his first use of recently created "budget execution" power might transfer welfare funds to ease crowding in county jails, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

An estimated 5,000 felons being held in county jails because the state prison system has limited admissions of new inmates to 150 a day.

In an appearance on his monthly television show Thursday night, Clements said he and other state officials are scouring the state budget for money to ease jail crowding.

Asked if that includes the Texas Department of Human Services' budget, Clements said, "We may be. We're looking for excess funds — wherever they may be. And no one is inviolate in this sense."

Clements also said welfare officials have not answered all his

"I think there is a distinct probability that both of those things will come to fruition," Kosberg said.

The welfare board's proposal to expand the Medicaid program would take an estimated $79 million, Kosberg said.

But he added, "Even after spending those dollars, there could be an additional $30 million or $40 million" in the budget.

"I am sure from the governor's standpoint the jail crisis is a priority. He is probably looking at every agency," Kosberg said. "I don't think he is singling us out . If I were in his position, I'd be # looking for agreement among top

state officials in financing a plan to solve the jail crisis. What we are trying to do is evolve a plan where we can transfer funds within the budget without calling a special session of the Legislature," Clements said. Under budget execution authority approved by the 1987 Legislature, the transfer of funds between various state agency budgets must be approved by a panel composed of the governor, lieutenant governor, House speaker, comptroller and chairmen of the House Appropriations and Senate Finance committees.

Darryl Dorcy, a top aide to House Speaker Gib Lewis, said he would not recommend transferring all of the welfare agency's budget surplus to solve the jail

Clements said his proposal to to reduce jail crowding would include having judges send some convicted felons to probation 'camps'' instead of prison. Non-sent to "return-to-custody" parole facilities instead of being returned to prison.

State officials also are investigating whether they can reimburse counties for the cost of housing inmates who cannot be transferred to the state prisons system. Clements said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says "the law of averages" dictates there will be corruption in Pentagon procurement and he praised how federal agents have handled what Republican senators call a bribery investigation of unprecedented scale.

Some 275 grand jury subpoenas were issued to companies and individuals last week, said federal law enforcement sources, speaking on condition of anonymity. Attorney General Edwin Meese III said he anticipates indictments by the end of the summer.

But Reps. Roy Dyson, D-Md., and Bill Chappell, D-Fla., dismissed reports that they had come under scrutiny in the investigation, while two more defense contractors - Martin Marietta Corp. and LTV Corp. - disclosed they had been served with subpoenas in the probe.

Reagan said he was "very proud" of the investigators who conducted the probe without telling the president until last week. The secret investigation meant "there was no panicking and no leaks or anyone running for cover," Reagan said on CNN's

But with about 6 million people involved in the defense procurement process, "the law of averages says that not all six million are going to turn out to be heroes," he said.

Dyson confirmed in a telephone interview Friday night from his home that he and his late aide, Tom Pappas, had met with a military consultant and former vice president of Unisys Corp., Charles Gardner, in New York the weekend Pappas committed suicide.

The FBI served a search warrant Tuesday on Gardner's home in Malverne, N.Y., as well as on Unisys plants and offices in Great Neck, N.Y. and Eagan, Minn.

"It was a very standard invitation to come tour their plant, get a briefing on a number of programs Unisys is involved in," Dyson said, adding that as a member of the House Armed Services Committeee, "There's really nothing unusual about that." The congressman noted there is a Unisys facility two miles from his home and his district includes a large Navy facility, the Patuxent Naval Air Test

Dyson said the defense probe had nothing to do with Pappas' suicide May 1 when he leaped to his

Rain brings little relief to parched land CUSTOM PICTURE FRAMING

By The Associated Press

A drought that has dried up crops, pastures and rivers will continue in the Midwest for at least another month, forecasters warned, while crews Saturday dredged the shallow Mississippi and Ohio rivers in hopes of freeing 1,700 stranded barges.

Showers and thunderstorms extended Friday across parts of Iowa, Kansas, Arkansas, South Dakota, Montana and the lower Mississippi Valley, as well as parts of the Southeast and the West.

But the widely scattered rain had little impact.

"The drought continues, basically," National Weather Service meteorologist Lyle Alexander said Saturday from Kansas City, Mo. "The heart of the Midwest will remain dry, the areas that are most critical right now.'

The weather service has predicted a continuation of the dry weather through at least July 15, with the possibility of a 20 percent to 25 percent loss in corn yields compared with the 10 percent loss suffered to date.

Northeastern Iowa needs 5 ingrowing conditions, and the rest of the state needs between 2 and 4 inches, Iowa State extension climatologist Elwynn Taylor said. Some areas received up to an inch Friday, but most parts got less than a quarter-inch, Alexander said.

Iowa ordered irrigators and other heavy water users along the Winnebago, English and Little Cedar rivers and a section of the Cedar River to stop pumping water, with officials saying similar bans are being considered to protect other low-flowing streams.

Minnesota officials also suspended river-fed irrigation by 22 farmers along the Elk River, which has dropped so low that a landowner reported hearing "fish at night trying to flop their way through the river.'

Responding to the growing crisis, which could lead to higher food prices, members of a congressional task force on the drought met Friday with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng in Washington.

Lyng has said lawmakers should wait to learn more about the full extent of the damage beches of rain to restore normal fore writing legislation to aid far-

USDA officials reiterated that much of the wheat crop in those growing season could save the Midwest's corn and soybean fields.

AIDS anti-discrimination barely survives vote WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House AIDS commission's final report, made up of two crucial sections stitched together at the end of a marathon session, calls on President Reagan to designate a single government official to head the national fight against the epidemic.

The-13 member panel spent two days going over the nearly 600 specific recommendations in the 269-page report word-by word, but wound up making no major changes from two draft versions issued earlier this month.

However, the decision to stick with a call for federal legislation to prohibit discrimination against people infected with the deadly virus barely survived a final, formal vote.

Although all commissioners expressed support for the sentiment during informal discussions last week, when the final vote was taken, only seven of the 12 present backed the proposal being pushed strongly by retired Navy Adm. James D. Watkins, the panel chairman.

He told reporters later it "would have made it very difficult for us to feel we had done a good job" if that provision had been lost.

Watkins has said repeatedly that strong anti-discrimination legislation lies at the heart of many other things that need to be done to combat the epidemic, such as more widespread testing.

"Comprehensive federal antidiscrimination legislation which prohibits discrimination against their mail fraud convictions because the Hobbs convictions are still in effect," Price said.

He said the ruling "would have only a limited effect on a few cases in the Eastern district and very little effect in the Western district."

The prosecutor said a committee of U.S. attorneys is working with Congress to amend federal law to include a section that would provide penalties for intangible losses.

"In political corruption cases we need plain, simple statutes,"

'It does them no good to appeal

Ruling complicates commissioners'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - U.S. Attorney Bill Price says prosecutors would still likely have convicted the county commissioners charged in connection with a wide-ranging kickback scandal despite a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that later overturned some of their mail fraud convictions.

"The ruling doesn't declare anyone innocent of committing a crime," Price said. "It was a ruling that was technical in nature and we could have applied different statutes to the cases."

Price said the 1987 decision, known as the Supreme Court's McNally ruling, now limits the federal mail fraud statute specifically to cases where a tangible financial loss was established.

'Now we have to prove a particular loss from a particular case," Price said.

The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at Denver in 1983 and 1984 upheld the former commissioners' mail fraud convictions on direct appeal, but because of the McNally decision later overturned the convictions that were based on intangible losses - "the citizens' right to a good government.

Some 235 commissioners and suppliers were convicted in the scandal, which has been called the largest public corruption scandal in United States history.

Price said the irony of the ruling was that prosecutors "could prove tremendous losses" because of the scandal. 'Studies since the cases have shown that there has been a drop of 40 to 50 percent in prices after the scandal was uncovered." Price said. "Due to the uncovering of the scandal, the counties saved from $200 million to $300 million a year and continue to do that.'

In addition, Price said, the federal government recovered more than $1 million in unpaid taxes and an additional $1 million was repaid in restitution.

"I want the public to know that the cases really cost that much," Price said. "The McNally ruling makes it sound like there weren't any crimes committed and that's not the case.

Price said the federal government "was very lucky" that the Supreme Court ruling had not been issued when the scandal surfaced because the cases would have been more difficult to prosecute under the Hobbs Act, which outlaws public officials' acceptance of bribes, or federal tax sta-

"If the ruling had been five years earlier, the effects would have been devastating," Price

He said the McNally ruling 'could have been a problem" for prosecutors if the convictions of the commissioners were solely on mail fraud charges, "but in the Western district, 90 percent of them pled guilty to a combination

He also said some of the fraud cases, which involved the purchase of nonexistent materials, would still be prosecutable under the McNally ruling "because the finacial losses are obvious."

Home building hits 3-year low

By The Associated Press

Single-family home building dropped to a three-year low in May, the government reported, while the continuing drought kept pressure on commodities prices

Apartment and house building plunged 12.2 percent last month, the Commerce Department said.

Economists, who were surprised by the steepness of the nosedive, blamed rising interest rates and high home prices, particularly in the Northeast, where construction starts fell 22.3 percent.

Housing activity is closely watched because it often is a harbinger of the direction of the economy as a whole. However, analysts cautioned against overreacting to one month's report and said they expected at least a modest rebound this summer.

The report had little effect on the stock market Friday, where the Dow Jones indust rial average of 30 stocks rose 9.78 points to 2,104.02. Trading of nearly 344 mullion shares on the New York Stock Exchange, heaviest of the year, was attributed to dividend plays and technical factors associated with "triple witching hour" expiration of futures and options contracts.

Inflation fears continued to plague the credit markets, where the yield on the 30-year Treasury bond edged above 9 percent.

The biggest moves in the financial markets were again in the commodities pits, where soybean futures prices soared to 11-year highs on the Chicago Board of Trade and corn futures advanced the daily limit for the fourth consecutive session in anticipation of more dry weather and deeper crop losses.

Lumber prices tumbled in reaction to the disappointing report on housing starts.

San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - If you run short of cash at the end of the month, imagine the dismay of newly elected Mayor Art Agnos when he found San Francisco in the same boat — floundering in $179 million of red ink.

When former Mayor Dianne Feinstein turned over the reins to Agnos in January, she boasted of the city's fiscal strength and pointed proudly to nine consecutive years of balanced budgets.

When she first took office, the city faced a $120 million deficit. Once during her tenure there was a substantial surplus. Three years ago, the city faced a $76 million deficit, but erased it through budget cuts.

As Feinstein left, she warned of the toll taken on city finances by the AIDS epidemic, homeless problem, Proposition 13 and the elimination of the federal revenue-sharing programs.

Other factors contributing to the latest deficit, she said, included unforeseen costs of toxic controls, comparable worth, jail expenses, decreased water revenues and repeal of a utility tax that cut revenue by $10 million.

While Agnos acknowledges the problems Feinstein cited, he criticized her administration after arriving at City Hall to find a flood of red ink facing him for fiscal 1988-1989.

"Raiding reserves for a one-time fix that will simply roll the deficit problem into the next year does not solve our budget problem," Agnos said. "In fact, that is how we got into this deficit situation in the first place.

In a bid to partially refill the city's coffers, Agnos backed Proposition K on the June 7 ballot. The measure would have allowed San Francisco to raise strict spending limits set by the statewide Gann initiative and collect additional taxes from businesses, hotels and parking. Without that permission from voters, Agnos warned that essential city services would suffer. He called for wage freezes and forecast that 160 police officers would have to go, along with three fire stations and four library branches.

Agnos watched in dismay as voters rejected the measure, sending a message to City Hall to live within its means.

The voters did provide some help, approving a measure that will save $43 million by freezing city employee salaries. With a July deadline looming for adoption of a tentative budget and August deadline for the final document, battle lines are being drawn.

Union leaders, city supervisors, department heads, private business executives, nei borhood representatives and city employees are making their cases in backrooms, boardrooms and rallies at City Hall.

But despite the mayor's warning that there are no "magic bailouts," he appears to have found a few surprise windfalls to help fill out the $179 million shortfall.

A week after the election, the mayor announced the city had discovered it mistakenly counted court-mandated expenses when setting its spend-

By excluding such expenses, Agnos said, San Francisco can raise the limit by an estimated $20 million to $30 million. That means business taxes and fees can be implemented and public safety layoffs may not be needed.

A few days earlier, budget analysts said they had uncovered about $16 million in additional spending potential because a 1981 Muni fare hike was incorrectly charged against the Gann limit.

AUCTIO

Mexican stock exchange reviving MEXICO CITY (AP) - The Mexican stock exchange, one of the world's hottest less than a year ago, has regained some of the strength it lost after its collapse last October. The Index of Prices and Quotations, the main gauge of market activity, has recently surpassed the 200,000 mark, surging more than 90 percent from the start of the year. But the index, made up of the prices of 50 stocks, is still far off the high of 373,216.24 posted on Oct. 6. The index crashed to 86,606.75 on Jan. 7 before beginning its slow rebound. Rogelio Ramirez de la O of the private Ecanal forecasting firm describes the market as 'cautiously up.

Other analysts say the exchange may be reflecting the initial success of the government's Economic Solidarity Pact, the_ anti-inflation program put in place in mid-December by President Miguel de la Madrid.

The program has frozen the minimum wage, the prices of government-regulated goods and services and the peso-dollar exchange rate. It also has promised to cut government spending, restrain monetary and credit policy, and open the economy to more foreign trade.

Since its inception, interest rates have tumbled sharply. The interest rate on 28-day Treasury bills has plunged from a high of nearly 160 percent in February to about 40 percent. Bank interest rates have taken a similar dive.

With a steady exchange rate, Mexicans have been bringing their money back from foreign, mostly U.S. banks and investing in short-term instruments and possibly the stock market, analysts said.

As a result of the capital return, analysts said, international reserves soared $2.1 billion in the first quarter of the year for a total of $15.8 billion. The stock index stood at Secu ANKARA, Turkey (AP) - An escaped convict shot and wounded Premier Turgut Ozal Saturday, police said, moments after Ozal urged his country to reject violence. Twenty-one people, including the gunman, were injured when police opened fire and the crowd stampeded.

Ozal, 61, was shot in the right hand and slightly wounded as he gave the opening speech at the convention of his governing Motherland Party.

'We have a more civilized atmosphere now. People of different views can now talk to each other instead of fighting or drawing their guns," Ozal said before the first shot struck the microphone. A second bullet hit the Police wounded the assailant in the arm.

Scores of people ran screaming as shots rang out. Sixteen suffered bullet wounds and four were bruised in the stampede.

Ozal ducked behind the lectern, the Anatolia news agency said. Interior Minister Mustafa Kalemli, a physician, quickly wrapped a white cloth around Ozal's wound after the shooting. As blood seeped through the bandage, the premier returned to the lectern and declared, "No one can take away the life given by God except God himself!'

The delegates jumped to their feet and applauded.

Ozal's doctor, Cengis Aslan, told reporters a bullet entered Ozal's hand through the right thumb and exited from the palm.

Lidy leaps to victory in Keebler meet

By SONNY BOHANAN Sports Writer

Pampa's Tanya Lidy gained national recognition again Saturday as her 19-71/2 long jump carried her to a gold-medal finish in the 17th Annual Keebler International Prep Track and Field Invitational in Elmhurst, Ill.

Lidy captured first place from among a field that featured the premier prep jumpers from the U.S. and abroad, including one competitor from Jamaica and another from Mexico City.

This makes the second consecutive weekend that Lidy has won gold medals in national com-

Lidy had been scheduled to run the 200-meter dash at the Keebler meet, but she suffered a quadricep strain in her fourth attempt in the long jump. Rather than risk the chance of worsening the injury, coaches Gary Cornelson and Mike Lopez chose to pull her out of the 200.

"I don't know how serious it is," Cornelson said in a telephone interview Saturday afternoon, "only time will tell. We didn't want to chance it by putting her in the 200.

"Tanya's lucky, she's never been injured before. She was a little discouraged at not running. We knew that the field was tough, and we decided to keep her out of it to avoid a worse injury. The girl that won it ran a 23.4 qualifying time, and we didn't want to throw her in there.

Cornelson cited the lack of warm-up time as the possible culprit in Lidy's injury. "She had only 15 minutes to warm up, and there was no place to warm up, either. We're used to taking about 35 minutes, and that might have had a little to do with it.

Lidy was invited to compete for the 1988 National Junior Team after beating some of the best high school athletes in the United States at last week's Great West Classic in Sacramento, Calif. She won both the 100-meter dash and the long jump in that meet.

Her winning jump was 19-7 after scratching at 20-4, which Tanya Lidy brings home another gold medal with a 19-7 jump Saturday at the Keebler International.

Her best performance in the long jump is 20-2.

In the 100 last weekend, her first time to compete in that event, Lidy clocked in at 11.8 to take the gold medal. Although the 200 is her specialty, Lidy ran the 100 because the Great West meet did not offer the 200 meters. Lidy set the state record in the 200 in 1987, running a 23.9.

Lidy's long jump mark is currently third in the naton in the high school division. Earlier in the spring she was ranked first.

At the state track meet in May, Lidy won the 200 and anchored the winning 400 and 800 relays. She has won three consecutive state gold medals in the 200 and led the Lady Harvesters to state championships in 1986 and 1988.

She was also named the track athlete of the year by the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame in 1987.

Lidy sifted through many college scholarship offers before deciding to attend the University of Nebraska in the fall.

After being invited to try out for Lidy is scheduled to compete in the National Junior Championships June 24-25 in Tallahassee, Fla. If she finishes first or second in either event, she would advance to the World Junior Championships in Sudbury, Canada. An impressive performance in Canada could qualify Lidy for the Olympic Trials next month in Indianapolis, Ind.

"Hopefully in a week she'll be ready to go again," said Cornelson, in reference to Saturday's injury, "We'll let her rest this week and see how she feels, and then decide what to do when we get there (Tallahasse).

"We feel like next week in Tallahasse, we may concentrate only on the 200. I don't think it's (quadricep strain) severe, but here's no way to tell yet.'

In order for Lidy to enter the National Junior meet, funds are needed to send her to Florida. At least $2,000 must be raised, and persons interested in donating to the fund can contact Gary Cornelson at 665-0323, Mike Lopez at 665-7063, or Sandy Clark at 665-7668.

Strange holds oneshot lead in Open

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

BROOKLINE, Mass. - Curtis Strange survived a late lapse Saturday and clung to a one-shot lead after the third round of the 88th U.S. Open Golf Championship.

Strange, needing only a major title to confirm his stature as one of the game's great players, was three shots ahead of the field with three holes to play, but had to oneputt the final green to retain sole control of the lead.

He had to contend with a storm delay - which he demanded and occasional driving rain before completing a 2-under-par 69 for a 54-hole total of 206 on the historic course at The Country

"I made a lot of good putts. I felt very comfortable all day long," said Strange, hailed by many of his fellow pros the finest player in the world.

But bogeys on the 16th and 17th cut into his comfort zone, trimmed his once-commanding margin to a single stroke and opened the door to a host of potential challengers in Sunday's final

Foremost among them are British Open champion Nick Faldo of England, the lone surviving serious contender of the formidable foreign contingent, defending champion Scott Simpson and Bob Gilder, who hasn't won in five years.

They are tied at 207, one shot back. Faldo's last-hole birdie finished off a 68 and Gilder shot a

Oklahomaleads in rodeo finals

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) -Southwestern Oklahoma State University jumped into the lead of the men's standings following the end of the second go-round of the College National Finals Rodeo Friday.

Southwestern Oklahoma netted 276 points to hold a slim 18point lead over the College of Southern Idaho heading into Saturday's final performance.

Idaho State University and Dickinson State University shared the women's team lead with 210 points each following Friday's performance at Montana State University. Southwestern Oklahoma State was 15 points further back in third place.

The top 10 in the average — the total time or markings for two appearances in the rodeo - will compete in Saturday's final round of the rodeo.

Michael Gaffney made the biggest splash on Friday night. The Western Texas College cowboy marked a 78 in bull riding to win the second go-round and move to the top of the average with a tworide score of 149.

Also making a big push on Friday was Richie Hamilton of the College of Southern Idaho with a 75-point ride in bareback riding to win the go-round. He also moved into a tie for first place in the average with Kirk Allred of Southern Idaho at 147.

Patty Dixon helped her Eastern New Mexico University squad in the team race by winning the go-round in barrel raing on Friday night with a 13.57second run. She moved into second place in the average behind Denise Adams of Brigham Young University.

A fourth new leader on Friday was Ed Dufurrena of West Hills College who makred a 75 in saddle bronc riding to take over the lead in the average at 149. Craig Latham of Panhandle State University won the go-round with an 80 marked on Wednesday night.

Look for wet mophead if Pistons upset

"Ask your buddy to find me a job. I've got to get out of here," said Gary Moss, right after his team had been eliminated from the final Missouri Valley Conference basketball tournament in which the West Texas State Buffaloes would ever participate.

Dyers' Gross tries to slide safely into second but is game of the Major League tourney.

Fifteen minutes later that "buddy" and I were sitting together watching the next tourney game. I relayed the request to Dick Versace who, as head coach of the Bradley Braves, was to be named Coach of the Year a week later by the National Sportswriters-Sportscasters Associa-

"He expects me to help him!" laughingly smiled Versace "after he called me a mophead." The reference was to the unusual one's hairstyle, yelled out in the heat of the game. At least he didn't call you a wet mophead, Dick. That hanging, gray, curly hair can be seen this afternoon sitting to the immediate left of Detroit Piston Coach Chuck Daly as the Motown-Showtown battle continues for the NBA championship.

He didn't find Moss a new post but the man who identified all-American Hersey Hawkins as a super propect when no one else would offer the Chicago high schooler a scholarship, found himself a new position. The selfproclaimed "army brat" who travelled the world with his career military family, moved a few miles north to Michigan and the job with the pros. He and Daly had become good friends while Dick was establishing himself as a coaching talent on his first college job at a Detroit-area junior college. And today he still believes Daly is the greatest.

"I think he has a terrific gut for the game. He has a way that you can't define. He has a way of pushing the right buttons at the right time," says Versace, who reportedly once had to push a few fists toward a talented but nonperforming malcontented player following a loss to WT in Peoria a few years ago. That player learned, perhaps, from that altercation, and today plays in the pros. The dapper Daly is not one to hold grudges. "I don't Sports Forum

Daly's Pistons have the opportunity of their careers in LA this week. They need to win one of the two remaining scheduled games to upset their way to the NBA crown, generally climaxed by a wild, champagne-pouring celebration in the dressing room. I hope, and expect it to happen. I want to see what a wet mophead looks like.

Some alleged sports fans eagerly await the end of each basketbail season and dread the start of the next. Mike Burks, producer of the NBA playoff telecasts for CBS-TV, perhaps explains that sort of reasoning. Says Burks: "Basketball is a thinking man's game in a lot of ways," and points out that showing and explaining the "games within the game" is important to understanding each contest.

The State of Texas recently passed a law requiring all hunters age 17 or younger to take a Hunter Education course prior to obtaining a 1989 Texas hunting

The class is designed to teach young hunters firearm and hunting safety rules in an effort to reduce hunting accidents in Texas.

The Hunter Education course will cover a broad range of topics with which all hunters should be familiar, ranging from firearm safety to shooting techniques, survival instruction, proper care of game after shooting, water safety and methods to prevent getting lost in wooded areas.

In Pampa, Jim Baker and Wes Thomas are both licensed to instruct the course. Baker characterizes Hunter Education as "a common-sense course that is good for all sportsmen, whether they are hunters or not. It covers topics that all hunters should know, but non-hunters can benefit also Baker has scheduled a Hunter Education course for June 29 and 30, and July 1 at the Pampa Rifle and Pistol Club indoor range. Each course covers three nights, three to four hours a night. The cost is $5 for the entire course. The money goes directly to the state to pay for the textbook, a Safe Hunter shoulder patch. ammunition for use in the course and the certification card. The card must be carried at all times while hunting.

In addition to shooting instruction and classroom lecture, each night the students will view a 25-30 minute video which discusses safety problems.

One of the videos, entitled Shoot, Don't Shoot, stresses the necessity of having an animal in full view before squeezing the trigger. According to Baker, shooting at uncertain targets is the major problem plaguing hunter safety.

The course is mandatory for hunters age 17 and younger who wish to obtain a 1989 Texas hunting license. Persons interested in signing up for the course may contact Jim Baker at 669-1035 (day) and 665-2749 (night), or Wes Thomas at 665-7235.

Braves sweep doubleheader

By ED SHEARER AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Dale Murphy and the Atlanta Braves left Houston manager Hal Lanier speechless.

"I got nothing to say," a deiected Lanier said Friday night after Murphy delivered the winning hit in both games as the Braves swept a twi-night doubleheader from the Astros 4-3 and "I know we haven't done that in a long, long time," Murphy said after capping a five-run ninthinning rally with Atlanta's seventh single of the inning, a grounder between short and third with one out.

Murphy won the opener with a two-out home run in the eighth inning, his 10th of the season.

They were only the second and third game-winning RBI this season for Murphy, who has been battling a slump all year. "The guys scoring the four runs put me in that position," he said of the second game, one he was supposed to sit out, but came on as a pinch-hitter in the fifth inning and stayed in the game 'It's a funny game," he said. "I thought I was going to get a rest." Instead, he stole a victory from disgruntled Houston right hander Juaquin Andujar and handed a loss to the Astros' ace reliever, Dave Smith, 3-4.

"It's just a shame to lose two games like this," Houston's Billy Hatcher said. "We put in our best left-handed reliever and our best right-handed reliever and they beat us anyway.

The sweep was the first by the Braves since July 26, 1986 when they beat the New York Mets. It extended Atlanta's winning streak to three games for the first time this season and the nightcap rally ended an 0-36 mark for the Braves in games in which they trailed after eight innings.

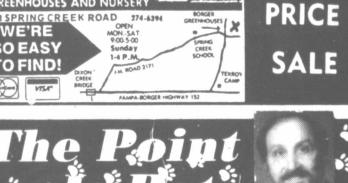

"Oh, gosh, it's great," Atlanta manager Russ Nixon said. "The biggest thing is how these guys go about their business. They want to do well. They're trying.

"I don't know what their work habits were before I got here, but they've worked awfully hard since I got here," added Nixon, who replaced the fired Chuck tagious is it? Does my dog really need annual vaccinations? After all, he is 8 years old! A: Canine distemper is a viral infection which is generally considered the most important contagious disease of dogs. It affects a wide variety of body tissues, including the intestinal, respiratory and nervous systems, usually resulting in convulsions and death. The length of time varies from 1 to 12 weeks depending on the individual's ability to fight it The virus is air-borne, i.e. it travels through the air, like our cold and flu viruses. Nearly every dog will be exposed during its lifetime, making vaccination necessary. Dogs of all ages can be infected. Annual "booster" vaccination for the life of the dog is imperative, since the immunity resulting from vaccination lasts only about 11-12 months. Any stress, such as another illness, "automobile disease" (animal hit by a car), pregnancy, heat stroke, etc. lowers a dog's resistance, making it more susceptible. This is the main reason why veterinarians insist that any dog kept in a hospital be "current" on vaccinations. Just being around the hospital, where all kinds of disease germs are present, is enough to expose a healthy dog, much less one stressed by illness, injury, etc.

In order to help protect the dogs and cats of Pampa, we will be having a reduced price on our annual vaccinations, regularly $36.00. For a limited time, June 20-30, annual vaccinations for dogs and cats will be $25.00, which, for dogs, includes, Rabies, Distemper, Hepatitis, Leptospirosis, Parvo, and Corona, or for cats, Rabies, Distemper, Calicivirus, Rhinotracheitis and Leuke mia. # It's Dad's Day!

Father Time, Father Christmas, Daddy Warbucks, the father of our country—there are a lot of famous fathers, but none is more special that the ones we honor today, the ones that are our very own fathers.

Father's Day, which falls on the third Sunday in June, was begun by Sonora Louise Smart Dodd of Spokane, Wash., who in 1909 persuaded the Ministerial Society of her city to salute fathers with special church services.

The idea was officially approved by President Woodrow Wilson in 1916, and in 1924, President Calvin Coolidge recommended national observance of the occasion "to establish more intimate relations between fathers and their children, and to impress upon fathers the full measure of their obligations."

The red or white rose is recognized as the official Father's Day flower.

Three generations who have harvested wheat at the Harvey farm east of Pampa are, from left, Rankin Harvey, 17; Lloyd E. Harvey; and Lloyd R. Harvey, all of Pampa.

Exchange trips have become quite popular in the past few years. These exchange trips offer 4-H'ers a chance to do just that exchange. Our local 4-H'ers will have a chance to show Big Horn County, Mont. how we live, our lifestyles, our part of the world and, in general, a chance to share ideas and thoughts. We'll be taking Big Horn County to visit many different sights and attractions of the Panhandle.

The Gray County 4-H'ers have planned a wide array of events to entertain the Montana 4-H'ers. We'll start off with a pork burger supper and barn dance. This will enable the 4-H'ers a chance to relax and get acquainted.

Monday morning, we'll pack up and head to Amarillo for tours of the American Quarter Horse Association and the Discovery Center. That afternoon, we'll stop by the Panhandle-Plains Museum, then go see the play "TEXAS" and tour Palo Duro large circle around the Pampa area to visit several horse training facilities, some large greenhouses, feedlots and oil fields. This day is going to be primarily dedicated to showing off our part of the world.

To conclude things on Wednesday, we'll visit a game reserve, then spend the afternoon at the lake. On Thursday, June 30, Big Horn County, Mont. will pack up and head home. Local 4-H'ers are excited about this unique opportunity. It's going to be a very busy week and a lot of hard work, but it will be worth it. To complete the exchange next summer, Gray County 4-H clubs will visit Big Horn County, Mont.

There are a wide variety of exchange programs in the 4-H program. Some of these include instate county exchanges, out-ofcounty exchanges, and even a program in which we exchange with other countries around the world. The exchange program is just another one of the many ways that 4-H helps to develop young people.

Texas melon crop is plentiful, flavorful

Although a February freeze cut melon acreage in South Texas, good weather conditions produced an excellent crop earlier than usual. That means attractive prices for consumers as the peak of the crop hits the markets.

With the melon harvest running about two weeks ahead of last year, cantaloupes, watermelons and honeydew melons will be plentiful from now throughout summer.

Texas cantaloupes are not only in good supply, but are of excellent quality. This year's crop is especially flavorful because of the high natural sugar content.

For consumers seeking something different in melons this summer, Texas growers are marketing a number of exotics. Casaba, Crenshaw and Santa Claus melons will be available in supermarkets and farmers' markets, although at higher prices than cantaloupe and honeydew.

The Casaba is a large golden yellow melon with a wrinkled rind and white meat. The Santa Claus melon looks somewhat like a small watermelon, but has the flesh of a honeydew. The Crenshaw comes from the same family as the cantaloupe, weighs in at 7 to 9 pounds and has bright, salmon-colored meat. The exotic melons will keep uncut at room temperature for up to three months because they have a thick skin and don't lose moisture. Seedless watermelons are also entering the premimum melon category, at two to three times the cost of the standard watermelon with seeds. Seedless watermelons are expected to have their biggest following in the food service industry, because the melon makes a good display and is easier to eat.

Consumers may also find "icewatermelons in the markets. These are smaller-sized, round melons that fit easily in the refrigerator. The icebox melons are conveniently sized, but have just as many seeds as a regular watermelon in a smaller amount of flesh

Texas melons are hard to beat for nutrition and low-calorie content. Anyone who's counting calories will find that melon is wonderful in salads, as a snack, or dessert because it's sweet and contains relatively few calories.

The primary nutrient in all melons is water, which is why they are low in calories. Melons also offer a good source of several other nutrients. For example, a cup of cubed pieces contains 57 calories, exceeds the recommended daily requirement of vitamins A and C and provides calcium, phosphorus, iron and

A cup of diced watermelon supplies about half the recommended daily requirement of vitamins A and C for 50 calories. It's also rich in potassium and other essential minerals.

One of the key elements in enjoying melons is selecting those that are ripe. There is no absolutely certain way to determine quality in melons from the outside, but there are some signs consumers can look for in select-

On cantaloupes, look for a pronounced cavity where the melon was pulled from the vine with no trace of a stem. Also look for a thick netting and a slight golden background color under the net-

A mature honeydew will be creamy white or pale yellow, even on the underside. Look for fruit at least 61/2 to 7 inches in diameter, since smaller melons seldom have a thick meat.

For cantaloupe and honeydew, as well as the exotic melons, the best general rule of thumb is to select those that have a good color in the outer skin, give off a rich aroma and are slightly soft at the blossom end.

Watermelon quality is determined largely by maturity and size, and color is a good indicator. A yellowish underside, regardless of the green color of the rest of the melon, is a good sign of

THE REIGN OF CHRIST

'Let all the house of Israel therefor know assuredly, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom ye crucified" (Acts 2:36.) The apostle Peter had explained to those Jews gathered in Jerusalem on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ, that this Jesus whom they had crucified was indeed the Christ, the Son of God. He pointed out that the prophecy of David was not speaking of himself, that is David, but rather Jesus when it mentioned that His bedudient that His body did not see corruption neither was His soul left in Hades (Acts 2:25-32; Psalms 16:8.) The resurrection of Jesus, therefore, preceded His exaltation to the right hand of God (Acts 2:33.)

The New Testament scriptures verify the fact that Jesus Christ is seated now at the right hand of God. Note: 'If then ye were raised together with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God' (Colossians 3:1.) This coincides with Peter's affirmation that Jesus was "by the right hand of God exalted" and now enjoys that presti-

Lord of lords".

The reign of Christ is over His church. Paul declares that God has shown His power and might "which he wrought in Christ, when he gious position as "King of kings and raised him from the dead, and made him to sit at his right hand in the heavenly places, far above all rule, and authority, and power, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and he put all things in subjection under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all." (Ephesians 1:19-23.) Jesus claimed that "all authority'' had been given unto Him (Matthew 28:18.) All of this is in perfect harmony with the Old Testament prophecies regarding the reign of Christ Psalms 2:7; 2 Samuel 7:14; Psalms 104:4; Psalms 45:6.)

While some teach that Jesus is coming again and then He is to be-gin His reign, the Bible teaches that He is reigning now and will reign until He comes again.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., calls Friday's vote by the House Appropriations Committee a 'victory for both the taxpayer and the small Schumer said he hopes "this is the beginning of the end for huge handouts" to agribusiness concerns for overseas advertising.

If giant companies ... want to advertise their brands in Japan they shouldn't ask the American taxpayer to pay for it," he said.

The Appropriations Committee's action held the program to its usual level of $110 million from a proposed level of $325 million for fiscal 1989

The Agriculture Department says the program is part of an overall effort to make U.S. farm products more competitive overseas. It notes that American exports fell from $38 billion in 1984 to $26.3 billion two years later. The level crawled back up to $27.9 billion last year and is projected to hit $32 billion in 1988.

A persistent critic of "excesses" in the agriculture budget, Schumer prompted the General Accounting Office to conduct an investigation of the Targeted Export Assistance program. The congressional investigative agency said it found 'insufficient accountability and management controls" in the program as well as an array of other

The TEA program was established by a voluminous 1985 law that put into place all of the nation's current major agricultural programs. Since 1986, it has supplied $110 million a year in Commodity Credit Corp. generic certificates to reimburse 66 organizations for promotion of a wide range of farm exports.

The generic certificates are issued by the Commodity Credit Corp., which is owned by USDA's Agricultural Conservation and Stabilization Ser-

The certificates may be redeemed for their face value's worth of surplus crops held by CCC. The corporation acquires these goods primarily through federal programs under which farmers pledge their crops as collateral for price-support loans, with the option of forfeiting the commodities rather than taking them to market themselves.

When the crops are transferred to another owner under an Agriculture Department payment-inkind program, such as Targeted Export Assistance, the amount of the original loan goes on USDA books as a "realized loss.

Pears, wheat, peaches, fruit cocktail, peas, lentils, grapes, apples, wood, poultry, eggs, soybean meal, dairy cattle, citrus, prunes, nuts, raisins, rice, potatoes, chocolate, red meat, pasta and cotton have all been the subject of overseas advertising supported by the Targeted Export Assistance

The program is intended to give first crack at the money to products that have faced unfair foreign

TEA operates two kinds of programs. One subsidizes associations for generic advertising of specific U.S. products, such as "American pears." The other pays private companies to promote not just "American pears" or "American apples" but farm products marketed under their brand names.

Individual amounts can be substantial. Sunkist Growers Inc., for example, received $7.93 million in fiscal 1986 and $9.55 million in fiscal 1987 for overseas promotion of California citrus

At least $900,000 was allocated under TEA to promote U.S. tobacco exports, the GAO reported. USDA says an exporting group, Tobacco Associates, used money from the program to participate in a 1987 tobacco show in China and that this "is paying off in greater contacts with the Chinese tobacco monopoly.

'Several new TEA activities are now planned with China, including sponsorship of a leaf grading school in China and reciprocal trade team visits between China and the United States," according Farmer Billy Faulk looks over a barren crop of cotton last week near Autaugavill, Ala. Faulk said farmers in the area would really suffer if they didn't get rain soon. The last time it rained on this field was in April.

In agriculture

Wheat harvest is just getting started. This week harvest should be in full swing unless rainy weather slows down harvest. I don't expect any bumper yields due to several factors: namely insects, diseases and a dry spring. We had excellent moisture conditions last fall and the winter snows certainly had us in good moisture conditions through March. However, the dry April and May have added to our wheat troubles along with the Russian wheat aphids and wheat streak mosiac virus. I feel like our overall yields will be a little below average taking all of these factors into consideration.

MOSQUITOES Mosquitoes are a problem throughout the Panhandle. Since mosquitoes do not travel far from their breeding sites, individuals can do much to alleviae the pests in their immediate area. The following are suggestions: (1) Eliminate breeding sites - Mosquitoes can develop wherever standing water is available. Old tires, tin cans, bird baths, and roadside ditches hold enough water to provide breeding sites for mosquitoes. (2) Treat standing water with a larvicide such as Malathion, Dursban, No. 2 diesel oil, or Bucillus thuringiensis israelensis (Teknar,® or Vectobac®). (3) Apply residual insecticide on resting sites such as shrubs, sides of buildings (especially around entry ways), tall grass and weeds, and sides of fences. (4) For personal protection, wear protective clothing and use repellents

COWS NEED ADEQUATE PHOSPHORUS

For high level reproductive performance, beef cows need a mineral supplement with 10 to 12 percent phosphorus.

This level of phosphorus is important for maintaining a sound reproductive program in a cow

A two-year demonstration in Calhoun County showed that lack of adequate phosphorus can delay conception, which means a late calf crop and generally light-

The study involved two herds of 140 crossbred cows each. The first year each herd received an 11 percent phosphorus mix. The second year one herd's phosphorus mix was reduced to 8 percent while the other was kept on the 11

Conception patterns were monitored each year. Cows receiving the lower level of phosphorus during the second year were slower to conceive than they were during the first year. However, those on the 11 percent phosphorus mix had the same conception patterns from year to year.

Such a delay in conception rates can be costly to producers. Late calves are usually smaller at weaning time, and that means money down the drain.

Maintaining a high level of reproduction is one of the keys to a profitable beef cattle operation, and using a mineral mix with 10 to 12 percent phosphorus can lead

I still hear of cattle operators who do not use a high quality mineral mix. Some folks only use salt blocks. I really believe you are cheating yourself if a mineral mix containing over 10 percent phosphorus is not used on a free choice basis for range cattle.

NEW BRUCELLOSIS TEST A new brucellosis test — the CITE test — is being used by TAHC inspectors at livestock markets to assist producers who have in a consignment a vaccinated animal that tests positive to the card test.

The CITE test takes only 12 minutes to run but is very expensive. The TAHC will limit the test use to vaccinated animals that have positive card test results. Also, animals tested must be in a consignment of more than one animal. If the CITE test is negative on the animal in question, the rest of the consignment may be sold. The CITE-tested animal may not be sold at that time.

Soviets saying Nyet to grain for vodka, da for livestock WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle, pigs and chickens in the Soviet Union have a record amount of grain to eat, but vodka makers are going to have to keep on skimping, says an Agriculture Department analyst.

'Domestic use of grain for feed is estimated at a record 132 million (metric) tons, reflecting the continued Soviet policy of boosting livestock production,' according to Christian J. Foster of the department's Economic Research Service.

The latest USDA estimates show Soviet total grain production this year at 215 million tons, up from 211.4 million tons in 1987 and 210.1 million tons in 1986 --- an unprecedented string of bumper harvests for the Soviet Union.

By far the largest use of grain in the Soviet Union — as it is in the United States — is for livestock

The 132 million tons of grain expected to be used as feed in 1988-89 compares with 47 million tons for human food, 25 million tons for seed, and only 5 million tons for industrial purposes, which includes the manufacture of vodka.

Lyng won't lift conservation regs for major drought

WASHINGTON (AP) - Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich emerged from a visit with Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng and reported no progress in getting the government to suspend conservation restrictions to combat drought problems.

"I hope there'll be rain in the next two weeks," Perpich said last week after the session in

He said Lyng was encouraging about an emergency feed program to help livestock producers whose hay and grazing land have been scorched by drought but refused to lift curbs imposed under the Conservation Reserve

That program, established in 1985, aims to take 45 million acres out of crop production by 1990 and cover them instead with trees and grasses. Farmers sign contracts to include such highly erodible lands in the reserve and in exchange obtain government

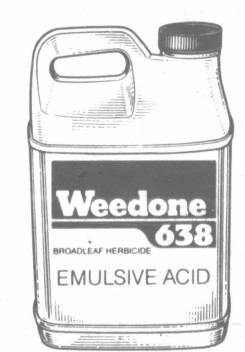

USDA officials recently estimated the overall cost of the reserve program to the taxpayers at $677 million for 1987, $1.864 billion for this year and $2.16 billion

Lyng has the power in an emergency to suspend program rules that bar cutting hay and grazing livestock on such lands.

Perpich said, however, that Lyng was reluctant to do so, saying the lands involved are fragile and should remain in conservation use. Under an emergency feed program, the federal government would pay substantial costs for acquiring feed for livestock and bringing it into the state. But local officials would have to app-

By BEAR MILLS KOMX Morning Personality

Anybody recognize the names Diana and Christina Ciminella? They are two of the biggest stars in country music. And they have a new book out that charts their meteoric rise to success. It also talks about their legal change of name, from Ciminella to Judd. Spend some time trying to put together the Wynonna and Naomi Judd story. Let's see, there was the bad marriage in Hollywood; the messy divorce; the California mom who takes her two daughters and moves to an isolated town in Kentucky; the decision to be stars; and (Ta-Da!) the hit records and awards shows

If you were to script all that and send it to Warner Brothers, they'd probably get a good laugh and throw it in the "get real" file.

When Bob Millard decided to chronicle the very fishy sounding Judds success story, he was dedicated to it being more than just another trashy $2.95 groupie book. However, when he tried to get the inside story, he very nearly got a knuckle sandwich.

RCA, the Judds' record lable, told him the best they could do was send him their file of newspaper and magazine clippings on the duo. The Judds' agent said much of the story was not pretty and was best left untold. The Judds' L.A. and Kentucky friends said the people known as Wynonna and Naomi are not the same ones they remember as their neighbors

What all this makes for is some excellent music biz mystery. In The Judds: A Biography (Doubleday/Dolphin Books 1988) Millard puts all the pieces together.

What finally comes to light is the story of a woman driven since childhood to success.

Divinyls arrive on U.S. musical shores

By MARY ANNE O'CAL- says LAGHAN For The Associated Press

The Divinyls - is that a girl group from the '60s?

No. It's the latest band from Australia to hit the American music scene.

"Coming from Australia, you are influenced by English and American bands," says singer and lyricist Christina Amphlett. "An Australian band has to be very good live or a record company won't even look at you.

"Performing is the primary source of income for a band in Australia. If you have a contract and sell records, you make money but you don't always have that. There is a huge audience for live shows. Here in America, you can get a record contract without ever having been on a stage. That wouldn't happen at home - you have to be legit.'

'We didn't get as intense about it as we did about the others.'

The Divinyls are certainly that. The band first came to the notice of American audiences with Monkey Grip, a 1982 Australian film that dealt with the punk music scene Down Under. The band recorded several songs for the film. The debut record, Desparate, increased the group's substantial following on American college campuses.

Tempermental, on Chrysalis Records, the band's third album, was produced by Mike Chapman. Amphlett says she believes it's the band's best to date. "We didn't get as intense about it as we did about the others. We're more ourselves on this one."

Amphlett has a distinct vision of her songs.

'I think of them as little windows on the different aspects of us as a band. On this album, the songs are more natural and aren't about characters as they were on the other records," she

Tempermental has a more commercial sound than the two previous albums, but, Amphlett says, "We didn't write the songs to be commercial. It was relevant at the time we were writing. Amphlett says she and Mark McEntee, the other band member, were living in a black middle class neighborhood in Los Angeles while working on the record.

"It was very different from anything we had experienced back home. The neighborhood gave an edge to the music," she She adds, "Also, by now, we are familiar with the procedures. That may account for the commercial sound.' Amphlett says she finally feels comfortable with her performances and recording work.

"Mike (Chapman) creates a very happy environment to work in. It took only six weeks to record this album. He provided us with an objective point of view about the music. I'm a live performer and never have really felt comfortable recording. Mike, however, lets me be comfortable."

The Divinyls went through major personnel changes after its 1985 What a Life! album, which took almost a year to record. The album introduced them to Chapman, who was brought in to work on the record. It also gave them a reputation for being difficult to work with.

"I think you are viewed as being 'difficult' or 'temperamental' when you want to control your own work. We do. We have definite ideas about our songs and the way they sound. But I do not think that we are difficult to work

Amphlett gets credit for the band's name. It came from a shopping trip with a friend. They were calling everything "divine," which evolved into divinyl. It struck them as a great name for a band.

McEntee, also from Australia, met Amphlett while she was singing in a choir in Sydney to develop her voice. She got her microphone wire wrapped in her seat and ended up dragging the seat all over the stage. McEntee was in the audience and decided they had to work together.

"We had an instinctive collaboration right from the start." says Amphlett. "It's grown over the years we've been writing together.'

She says McEntee comes up with the music, then they meet to work on the songs. "Once in a while I have something I've been working on and it will work together. Sometimes, I might have a melody but the music is mostly Mark's.'

'I think it's possible to maintain your integrity and still be a commercial success.

She says her songs come from personal experiences.

"I used to read for inspiration. particularly Tennessee Williams' plays, but I don't have to do that anymore. I think you have to write about what you know,' she explains.

with," says Amphlett.

Christine Amphlett

Amphlett says she would like to see the band break out of its cult

"I'd like us to be a huge and massive band. I want to broaden our audience as much as possible. I think it's possible to maintain your integrity and still be a commercial success," she smiles. "I'm willing to give it a

Has being a woman in the music business caused Christina Amphlett any problems?

"Yes and no," she responds. 'Actually, now that I think about it - no. I'm used to it. Everyone in this business has a problem. It all depends on your state of mind.

"I just want us to be the biggest band in the business.

She changed from pop to opera

By MARY CAMPBELL Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The Metropolitan Opera was so certain about soprano Erie Mills that it offered the lyric-coloratura a contract for its performances in Japan before she made her actual Met debut last Thanksgiving as Blondchen in Mozart's The Abduction From the Seraglio.

In Japan, where ticket prices run as high as $265 for an opera performance, she sang Olympia, the wind-up doll, in The Tales of Hoffmann, during the Met's May 25-June 10 tour. She also was standby for Susanna in The Marriage of Figaro. She'll sing both roles at the Met in the 1989-90 season.

Mills stands 5 feet 2. voice is light, perfect for such parts as Blondchen and Adele in Die Fledermaus, which she will also sing at the Met next season.

Mills, a native of Granite City, Ill., sang art songs at the College of Wooster and thought she wanted to be another Elly Ameling, the Dutch lieder singer.

"Then my practical self took over," she said. "I realized you don't make a living in this country singing recitals. You have to make it in opera."

The summer of 1977, after she received a master's degree from the University of Illinois, she was an apprentice at the Lake

George, N.Y., Opera Festival. Later, she went to the Houston Grand Opera's studio, and in 1979 she sang The Daughter of the Regiment in the Kennedy Center Summer Opera. Until her Met debut last November, her biggest break was joining the New York City Opera in 1982 and triumphing in Bernstein's Candide. She's often asked to sing the coloratura "Glitter and Be Gay" from Candide at benefits. Many opera stars have "crossed over" by performing popular music; Mills did it the other way. She paid for college by singing in musical comedies at the outdoor St. Louis Municipal Opera for six summers, performed in the 1985 Follies concert and record and did "Naughty Rahy" on the 1987 TV George Gershwin tribute. first time in New York.

Now, she seldom sings popular music but includes Gershwin. Irving Berlin and Cole Porter songs as recital encores.

The soprano and physicist Thomas Rescigno will mark their second wedding anniversary June 24 with her in Japan and him in Pleasanton, Calif.

Her first name comes from her great-grandmother whose name, it was discovered when Mills was an infant, was Arie, not Erie. Her name was left Erie but her mother pronounces it Arie.

After the Met tour in Japan and a week's vacation in Hong Kong with her husband, Mills will sing this summer with the New York City Opera in a new production of The Barber of Seville and in Lucia di Lammermoor for the

Galveston trolley gets off track

GALVESTON (AP) — Galveston's shiny new trolley car made an dubious debut, running up a curb on the very first turn out of its garage even before making it to the man trolley line.

The accident last week came on the initial trial run of the first of four trolley cars ordered by the city to take tourists from the beachfront on the Gulf of Mexico to the historic Strand District downtown.

The grinding stop atop the curb caused no damage to the vehicle, but jolted one battery out of place on a rack on the underside of the car, said Don Schattel, executive director of the Galveston Park Board of Trustees. The offending curb quickly was removed by city workers moved by city workers.

After getting off on the wrong track, testing resumed without incident.
About six officials were on the trolley, but no one was injured.

This notice is being furnished as required of all Public Water Systems in the United States by the Environmental Protection Agency in 40 CFR 141.34. The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) tal Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard. EPA and others are concerned about, lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women. Lead levels in your drinking wa-

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:
if your home or water system has lead pipes, or if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and if the home is less than five (5) years old, or if you have soft or acidic water, or if water sits in the pipes for several hours.

Pampa's water is well below acceptable limits for lead and is tested daily to insure delivery of minimally corrosive water to you. However, tap water may contain higher levels of lead leached from pipes in your home. Some home water treatment devices make water more corrosive and thus can increase the amount of lead leached from your pipes.

your pipes. Dissolved lead cannot be seen in water. Testing by a qualified private laboratory using the EPA approved methods is the only way to determine if your water has high levels of lead. The EPA estimates that a test should cost between $20.00 and $75.00

If your drinking water is determined to have high levels of lead, or if you suspect lead contamination, you can do the following to minimize exposure:

1. Flush each cold water faucet until the water is as cold as it will get before using the water from this faucet to drink or for cooking. This is especially important if the water has set in the pipes for several hours. Please remember other household water use such as toilets, bathing and laundry will flush water thru the pipes and reduce the time the tap should be flushed.

2. Do not use hot tap water for drinking or cooking. Hot water dissolves lead faster than cold water. Especially avoid using hot tap water to make baby formula. If hot water must be used for drinking or cooking, use cold water after flushing the tap and heat.

3. Make certain only materials conforming to the federal law regarding lead content are used for any plumbing repairs or new plumbing work in your home. If the City becomes aware of any source of lead contamination within the City's distribution system corrective measures will, be taken.

There are other methods which
