Duplicate vets records could reopen claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration is launching a massive review of rejected disability claims following the discovery of 10 million military medical records that duplicate some lost in a 1973 fire.

Veterans groups say thousands of veterans from World War II and the Korean War could be affected by the discovery. They say the newfound records would provide verification for claims denied because there were no records to substantiate them.

Thomas K. Turnage, the VA administrator, announced the discovery on Thursday and called it a "very important" development.

"It opens up new vistas for us. It means that these people who before had difficulty establishing a basis for their disability compensation, or the degree of it... it means we can have another chance to look at it and, in effect, may come up with a different result," Turnage said.

Eighteen million military personnel records were destroyed or seriously damaged in the July 12, 1973, fire at the National Personnel Record Center in St. Louis. The lost records were from the years 1912 through 1959 for Army personnel, and 1947 through 1963 for Air Force personnel with the surnames of Hubbard and through the letter Z.

The duplicate records cover the years 1942 to 1945 and 1950 to 1954, and so will primarily affect veterans of World War II and the Korean War.

The VA said that it would immediately begin going through the new data and reviewing claims rejected because of lost records. The agency urged veterans seeking information about their claims to contact their VA regional offices.

Turnage said the VA had become aware of the information last week, and it was too early to say how many people would be affected. He also did not have figures on how many claims were denied because of lost records.

Officials cautioned against overestimating the impact of the discovery. R.J. Vogel, the VA's benefits director, said that most veterans who made disability claims did so during their initial years after service and would likely have filed claims before 1973.

But John Sommer, director of the American Legion Veterans Affairs and Rehabilitation Commission, whose office helps veterans with their disability claims, said there was no doubt the development could affect thousands.

"You'd be amazed at the number of people, World War II veterans in particular, who waited until they retired to file a claim with the VA, and then found the records had been destroyed," he said.

State ag official pleads for federal drought aid

DALLAS (AP) — A state agriculture official issued a plea to federal officials to provide drought-stricken farmers and ranchers with money, land use and other assistance.

"We estimate right now that farmers and ranchers are losing $1 million each day as long as this drought goes on," Deputy State Agriculture Commissioner Mike Moeller said Thursday.

"We're trying to find ways to help the farmers and ranchers in our state survive the situation we're in."

U.S. Department of Agriculture officials, on the same day, notified 98 Texas counties that they may use hay from lands set aside for conservation use.

Federal officials said the USDA is moving as quickly as possible to assist those farmers and ranchers hurt by the drought, and that the agency is already pursuing several of the actions suggested by Moeller.

"It's easy to criticize when you don't have the responsibility for administering something like that," said Donnie Bowman, assistant director of the Texas office of the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Official claims president nixed Pentagon reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger failed to support efforts to reform the multibillion-dollar Pentagon weapons-buying system, and the result is a "national crisis," says the Pentagon's former acquisitions czar.

Richard P. Godwin says he quit his job last September because Reagan and Weinberger showed an "unwillingness to make some hard decisions."

Godwin is likely to be among the witnesses when Congress begins hearings next week into Pentagon purchasing, the subject of a mushrooming criminal investigation.

The investigation focuses on whether private consultants, many of them former defense officials, bribed Pentagon employees for inside information and then sold the details to contractors. The secret information could have given the recipients the advantage in winning contracts worth billions of dollars.

Congress wants to know how many "rotten apples" are among the people buying weapons for the Pentagon and whether the military purchasing system itself is to blame, leaders said Thursday.

The hearings will be held separately by the House and Senate Armed Services Committees and will not review the ongoing criminal investigation into whether private consultants bribed Pentagon officials for inside information about contracts.

The House Armed Services Committee will go first, with a hearing next week, said Warren Nelson, a spokesman for the Democratic-controlled panel.

"We are not investigating the criminal case," Nelson said Thursday. "What we are looking at are the by-products of the case, such as what happens to the contracts that are under a cloud."

The Senate Armed Services Committee has tentatively scheduled hearings July 12-13, said chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga. The panel met behind closed doors Thursday afternoon with Navy Secretary William Ball.

"We will not have hearings on the investigation," Nunn said. "The last thing we want to do is interfere with the ongoing investigation."

The hearings will be "on the general procurement system," he explained, "to find whether there are a few rotten apples or many rotten apples or basic flaws in the procurement system."

Godwin said in an interview with The Associated Press that he quit in frustration last fall after spending 18 months as the Pentagon's top procurement official, a position created in the wake of earlier defense spending embarrassments such as the purchase of $400 hammers.

The multibillion-dollar Pentagon purchasing system has become a "national disgrace" comparable to drug trafficking, he said.

"We have institutionalized a bad system," he said.

Godwin said he was thwarted in his attempts to centralize the Pentagon's weapons-buying authority and remove it from the service heads — "warlords," to use Godwin's term — who now lobby Congress and approve contracts for weapons.

Godwin said he resigned "basically when I wasn't supported by the president or the secretary of defense" in his attempt to establish a centralized purchasing information system. Asked why, he replied: "I don't know. They just didn't support it."

Both Reagan and Weinberger have said some amount of dishonesty is likely in such a large operation, but they also have called for swift punishment of any lawbreakers.

Melvyn Paisley, a former top Navy official who became a high-paid consultant after quitting his Pentagon job last year, has emerged as a key target in the investigation.

Sources speaking on condition of anonymity said Deputy Assistant Navy Secretary James Gaines, whose office was searched last week, is believed to be one of several people who passed procurement information to Paisley.

Paisley and Gaines worked together at the Boeing Co. in Seattle in the 1970s.

10 governors request federal drought relief plan

By The Associated Press

Mental health workers and congressmen say they've been besieged by calls from farm families anguished because "now God's against us," as 10 governors prepared recommendations for federal action to save drought-stricken farms.

A persistent heat wave, meanwhile, continued to exacerbate the worst drought since the 1930s, though parts of the Northeast and Midwest enjoyed cooler weather on Thursday than the record-high temperatures of recent days.

In St. Louis, the medical examiner's office said that a 99-year-old woman whose body was found in a sweltering bedroom Wednesday had died from heat.

In related news, federal research biologists report that the continued drought is threatening stop-over places for migrating fowl.

Biologist Gary Krapu reported that prairie potholes in North Dakota, for example, are running in mere trickles, down from their normal depths of two or more feet. The potholes are a critical stop for migrating waterfowl on the Central Flyway through the nation's midsection.

Governors from North Dakota, South Dakota, Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Iowa, Ohio and Wisconsin warned Thursday that the drought is seriously affecting food production.

The situation is "much more critical than we even realized," said Gov. George Sinner of North Dakota, chairman of the National Governors' Association's agriculture committee.

"I'm afraid we're going to lose some farmers, and we've lost enough already in my state," Sinner said after a Chicago meeting of 10 governors, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, farm representatives and agricultural experts.

The governors agreed to 36 recommendations aimed at protecting farm income, encouraging conservation and efficient use of water supplies, and preventing early sales of livestock due to feed shortages.

Gov. George Mickelson of South Dakota said the meeting would only be successful "if we go to Washington and see that these things are actually implemented."

Lyng promised that the federal government "will do what is necessary to minimize the severity of the damage." He noted that 1,200 counties in 30 states have been granted permission to cut hay or graze cattle on government-owned land set aside for conservation or crop reduction.

But, he said, the extent of the damage is undetermined.

Sinner said Lyng's speech "confused us a bit" since experts already predict a 25 percent to 30 percent drop in wheat yields this year. He said livestock feed also has been harmed.

The worsening outlook has set loose an "alarming" number of calls from families troubled by the drought, say mental health officials.

Many of the calls are from "adolescents with families who are feeling tremendous pressure... because the parents are under such great stress," said Myrt Armstrong, a spokeswoman for the North Dakota Mental Health Association hotline.

Many farm families already suffered from a tough agricultural economy, said Milan Christianson, a family therapist at North Dakota State University.

Biologist Krapu inspects shrinking prairie potholes that are normally a stop for migrating waterfowl.

"And now some of them are even saying, and they're shaking their fist and saying it, 'Nature. Now God's against us,'" Christianson said.

U.S. Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., said he's received many calls from desperate farmers. Dorgan said one woman even blamed him for the drought.

"During the course of the conversation she was saying, 'You know, you guys gotta do something. You can't let this happen.'" Dorgan said. "I said, 'Well, listen, unfortunately we don't control the drought.'"

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across much of the Southeast, the Gulf Coast and central Texas.

Pope John Paul II meets Jewish leaders in Austria.

Pope: Palestinians need a home

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Pope John Paul II today told Austria's Jewish leaders Palestinians have a right to a homeland. At the same time, he recalled the "incomprehensible pain, suffering and tears" of the Nazi Holocaust.

Meeting with Jewish leaders on the second day of his five-day Austrian trip, the pontiff did not respond to their call for the Vatican to give full diplomatic recognition to the state of Israel.

A half-dozen Austrian Jewish leaders, led by Jewish Community President Paul Grosz, sat in an ornate room of the Vienna archbishop's residence to hear the pontiff today. There, the pope urged understanding for the Vatican's longstanding call for a Palestinian homeland.

"The Jewish people have the right to a homeland, as any other nation has according to international law," the pontiff said. "The same goes for the Palestinian people, many of whom have become homeless and refugees."

John Paul reminded his audience he had made a similar call last September in Miami during his U.S. tour.

"By means of a common readiness for understanding and compromise, solutions should finally be found which lead to a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in this area," the pope said, delivering his remarks in German.

Speaking of the World War II-era Nazi murder of an estimated six million Jews, the pope said: "The incomprehensible pain, suffering and tears still are before my eyes and etched deep in my soul."

But he added: "It would be clearly unjust and untrue to charge Christianity with these unspeakable crimes."

The Roman Catholic leader said the Holocaust instead arose from a world "without and even aimed against God" and called for an end to anti-Semitism.

Some Jewish leaders have accused Christians, and the Vatican in particular, of failing to do enough to prevent the Holocaust.

Grosz, in his remarks, said the pontiff's decision to receive controversial President Kurt Waldheim at the Vatican last year shows that "many Austrians still have not come to terms with their past."

Waldheim has faced allegations of complicity in Nazi war crimes during his service in the German army. He has strongly denied any wrongdoing during his military service.

The Jewish community leader added: "We sincerely regret that full diplomatic relations between Israel and the Holy See have not yet been established."

Pampa man injured in barroom scuffle

A 49-year-old Pampa man sustained numerous cuts and bruises on his head and a broken jaw in a barroom scuffle late Thursday.

Victor Rodriguez, 1214 Barnes St., was treated in the Coronado Hospital emergency room and released after he was attacked by two men shortly before 11 p.m. at The Party Station, 600 S. Cuyler

St. According to Pampa police Sgt. Steve Chance, knives were used in the attack.

Police said Rodriguez was inside the bar when two Hispanic men came in and began fighting with him.

Rodriguez picked up a chair to defend himself, witnesses said. After the fight, the suspects fled in a gray and red Ford pickup truck.

Witnesses told police the scuffle was part of an on-going fight between the men.

No arrests have been made in the case.

Personal income rises slightly in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income, held back by a decline in subsidy payments to farmers, rose a modest 0.3 percent in May, the government said today.

However, because of a decrease in federal tax payments, which followed a big tax bite in April, Americans' disposable personal income shot up 1.5 percent in May, the Commerce Department said. That followed a 1.0 percent decline in after-tax income in April, the biggest drop since April 1987.

Before-tax income had edged up 0.1 percent in April after a 1.2 percent surge in March.

Today's report said both the April and May increases look weaker because March income was boosted by profit-sharing payments to auto workers and retroactive Social Security payments. A lag in federal payments to farmers also held back the May advance.

Excluding those special factors, the government said personal income would have advanced 0.8 percent in April and 0.4 percent in May.

In all, personal incomes rose $13.3 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual level of $3.95 trillion.

Personal consumption expenditures, which include virtually everything except interest on debt, rose a moderate 0.5 percent in May following a 0.4 percent rise in April.

Americans saved $151.9 billion in May, compared with $119.6 billion in April, boosting the personal savings rate to 4.5 percent, up from 3.6 percent. The April savings rate was unusually low because of income tax payments.

The report said personal tax payments fell at an annual rate of $35.2 billion in May after jumping $36.9 billion in April.

Wages and salaries rose at an annual rate of $12.2 billion in May after an $11.8 billion increase in April. Farm income fell $2.4 billion last month compared with an even bigger $11.9 billion decrease in April.

Officials: Soviet observers won't see any top secrets

KARNACK (AP) — Soviet observers will be allowed to watch the burning of medium-range nuclear missiles at an East Texas military installation, but officials say the visitors won't see much else.

Tall pine trees surrounding the plant will shield sensitive operations from the team of up to 20 observers, who arrive in mid-August under terms of a joint U.S.-Soviet treaty, officials said.

"On-site inspection does not mean that the Soviets will get a free look at our secrets," said Lt. Col. Allen L. Germain, commander of the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant.

Morton Thiokol Inc. won a $1.1 million contract to burn 74 of about 800 rocket motors being eliminated under the agreement. The work will be done at the plant about 170 miles east of Dallas, one of two sites the Army selected to burn Pershing missiles banned under the INF treaty.

Morton Thiokol officials said state and environmental officials have given their approval to burn the missile motors through static firings and by open-air ignition.

"We are pleased to be associated with the Pershing motor eliminations," said Hal Cornish, Morton Thiokol general manager. "We think it only fitting that the plant that was associated with building the motors can also aid in their elimination. We manufactured many of the rocket motors that will be eliminated."

Soviet observers, mandated by the treaty to watch the burnings, will arrive at the Gregg County Airport, stay at area motels and dine in local restaurants during their stay, but will interact little with residents, company officials said.

"We plan no special events or contacts with the community for the Soviets," Germain said. "Our contacts will be professional—a charge we take seriously. We have a detailed security plan."

The two superpowers must, under the terms of the treaty signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, reduce their medium-range nuclear missiles within three years.

The other Army-authorized burning site, in Colorado, has raised the ire of some environmentalists.

Dave Harris, spokesman for the Army Missile Command in Huntsville, Ala., said Colorado officials want the military to answer questions about the project.

"They (state officials) have had no previous experience with rocket motor testing," Harris said.

More than 200 Pershing rocket motors have been fired at Longhorn in quality-assurance testing over a 27-period, officials said.

The Army conducted a static missile firing in late May for Colorado officials "to establish whether we can meet their requirements" he said.

Data from that firing will be analyzed and released next month, said Harris, adding he was confident the Army's application for missile burning at the Pueblo Army Depot would be approved.

Missiles to be burned in Texas would be transported by rail or truck from several locations, primarily Pueblo, said George L. Huffman, Morton Thiokol plant engineering manager for the Longhorn Division.

At the Longhorn plant, reporters were taken by bus down tree-lined roads to a signal testing area, where missile motors will be fired, then to a circular field where solid rocket propellant will be burned in open-air cages.

"This is the exact route the Soviet visitors will be taking when they come for on-site inspection," Huffman said.

"All they can see, with any significance, is we have a lot of trees," said Huffman.

At the static test site, the two Pershing stages—each about nine feet long and 40 inches in diameter, will be locked in turn horizontally on a metal-and-concrete stand and ignited.

The stages contain thousands of pounds each of granular propellant. Static firing takes about 45 seconds, while open-air burning of the fuel requires 10-15 minutes, Huffman said. But he added static firing is environmentally preferred because the combustion is more complete.

The plant's pine forests will help to muffle noise from the rocket motors, Cornish said.

"State and local communities support the plant and its operations," said Cornish. "There's also a vivid need for elimination of the rocket motors."

Area communities could benefit from ripples produced by Morton Thiokol expenditures by about $9 million, Cornish said.

Austin health spas closing could test law

AUSTIN (AP) — The closing of two fitness center chains revealed some weaknesses in a 3-year-old Texas law to reform the health spa industry, state prosecutors say.

The experience of dealing with the failure of the Supreme Court Racquet Club and Dynafit Family Athletic Clubs already has convinced Attorney General Jim Mattox that the Health Spa Act of 1985 needs to be strengthened to protect consumers, the Austin American-Statesman reported Thursday.

Thousands of Austin-area residents with memberships are owed refunds likely to total more than $100,000, but attorney general staff workers say the best they can hope for is a partial refund.

The health clubs are either closed or under new ownership, which is not obligated to honor prior memberships. In one case, officials estimate 200 advance memberships—costing $500 to $1,000 each—were sold to a proposed fitness center that was never built.

To cover some of the money owed to those consumers, Mattox's office is laying claim to $40,000 in letters of credit posted by Dynafit with two financial institutions.

Mattox's staff tentatively has proposed several changes to the law, including:

- Removing the exemption from posting of the bond for health clubs that were operating for at least two years before passage of the Health Spa Act in 1985.
- Prohibiting the taking of pre-paid memberships before a fitness center opens.
- Requiring bonds to be posted before the opening of a health instead of 30 days after the opening.

Judge sets special conditions in petitions forgery conviction

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Judge Sherman Ross wants the custom-made sentence he tailored for convicted forger Rocky Mountain to serve as a thunderous message to other political consultants who think about tampering with the system.

Jurors on Thursday ordered $7,600 in fines and a year on probation for Mountain, 27, who was convicted on 38 misdemeanor forgery charges for showing employees how to put phony signatures on the petitions that got Pete du Pont on the Texas GOP presidential primary ballot.

Southern Political Consulting Inc., of which Mountain is vice president, was ordered to pay $38,000 in fines.

Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Sherman Ross then added the custom touches. Mountain must talk to two civics classes a week on the topic, "The Political Process and How to Make it Work Right" and prepare a public service announcement "about the value of the right to vote."

Ross also ordered Mountain to finish college. He must take six hours of Spanish to do that.

"I hope this message rolls like thunder across the country that at the grassroots level, the most important level of politics, we have to maintain the integrity of the system," Ross, a Harris County court-at-law judge, told the political consultant.

Mountain faced a maximum punishment of one year in jail and $76,000 in fines. The company faced a maximum fine of $380,000. Defense lawyers said the convictions might be appealed.

After the trial, Kevin Burnette, the company's president, reiterated his claim that his firm was the victim of selective prosecution because it is disliked by state GOP officials.

"We reacted very stupidly to a very stupid rule," he said of the petition rule in effect for the presidential primary.

GOP candidates had to submit 5,000 signatures to get on the ballot. That rule has since been changed to allow a $5,000 filing fee instead. The old rule, Burnette said, was a "barrier of competition" aimed at protecting party leaders' favorite candidates.

After the punishment was announced, Mountain said, "I don't believe I was guilty of a crime, but I accept the verdict of the jury."

"It's a Class A misdemeanor and never in my life have I seen a Class A misdemeanor on the front pages of every state paper and TV broadcasts for six months. I think this thing has been blown somewhat out of proportion," Mountain said.

Ross said the case was a "big deal" because people's names were "stolen from them" when they were forged on the petitions.

Asked if he thought it was a big deal, Burnette said, "Anytime anybody fines me $38,000, I think it's ... a big deal."

Mountain testified Tuesday that he ordered the forgeries only because he had been pressured by a du Pont official. He said he never intended for the du Pont campaign to submit them.

Temporary employees hired by Southern Political Consulting testified Mountain gave them beer and showed them how to forge signatures after legitimate efforts failed.

Judge approves branch banking for Texas

WACO (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that national banks in Texas have the right to expand across county lines throughout Texas.

The ruling Thursday by U.S. District Judge Walter S. Smith struck down the state's limit on branch banking.

The ruling could end an 84-year tradition against branch banking in Texas, which voters modified just two years ago to allow branching within individual counties.

Smith's decision, which will be formally filed in Austin today, came in a suit brought earlier this year by Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox against the U.S. comptroller of the currency, Robert L. Clarke, who late last year approved two applications to branch across county lines, exceeding the state's branch banking limits.

The judge ruled in favor of the comptroller after an oral hearing earlier this week in Austin, his law clerk said Thursday.

"He basically agreed that national banks can branch anywhere in the state," said clerk Jeffrey Manske.

The judge's ruling essentially said that banks should have the same branching powers as savings and loans, which can operate offices anywhere in the state and can offer services similar to those of conventional banks, Manske said.

GOP signs

Young volunteers worked Thursday at the Louisiana Superdome on signs for delegates to the Republican National Convention which opens Aug. 15 in the Superdome. Plans are to make 40,000 signs.

Gay rights group favors AIDS testing

DALLAS (AP) — A strong shift in policy by a Dallas gay rights group has prompted the organization's AIDS Resource Center to sponsor on-site testing for the deadly disease for the first time.

The Dallas Gay Alliance had previously voiced strong opposition to AIDS testing, but changed its position because of improvements in the procedure.

"Originally, we said, 'Don't take the test,' because there were no guarantees of confidentiality and the test was highly inaccurate," alliance president William Waybourn said Wednesday.

"The test has been improved somewhat, and there are some treatments that will help you from getting sick," he said, adding that anyone who tests positive can receive treatment.

The alliance's board of directors recently approved the policy, which encourages people in high-risk groups to be tested for the presence of the AIDS antibody. High-risk groups include homosexuals and intravenous drug users.

The alliance still recommends that AIDS testing and counseling be conducted anonymously because of fears that disclosure of test results—or knowledge that a person has taken the test—could result in discrimination.

"The problem is that the safeguards do not exist to prevent people from losing their jobs, housing or insurance," Waybourn said.

The new policy also recommends that those who test positive have their blood T4 cells, which fight infection, monitored quarterly and consider immune-boosting treatment if the cell count continues to decrease.

Agent: Engine thefts part of national probe of stolen equipment

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — About $9 million worth of stolen military property has been recovered in a multi-state investigation that an FBI agent said involves one of the largest amounts of stolen government property seized in recent years.

Part of the inquiry includes the recently announced theft of 10 turbine helicopter engines from the Corpus Christi Army Depot, said FBI Agent Joe Wolfinger.

"The information discovered during this investigation has identified a large number of thefts in government property at various military installations throughout the United States," and given rise to further additional investigations, Wolfinger told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times in an interview from his office in Norfolk, Va.

The $9 million net worth of military items seized during the investigation was "one of the largest recoveries of stolen (military) property in recent years," Wolfinger said.

The FBI last week revealed the continuing investigation into the 1986 theft of the engines from the Corpus Christi depot.

The inquiry also involves stolen turbine engines from Fort Eustis near Newport News, Va., and Fort Campbell in Kentucky. Army turbine engines and their parts have been seized in Texas, Virginia, Oklahoma, Florida, New Jersey, Nebraska, Kentucky and Washington, FBI Agent Joe Wolfinger said in an interview.

The FBI revealed last week that it was investigating the theft of 10 T-55 turbine helicopter engines stolen from the depot in 1986. CCAD's stolen engines were seized by federal agents in the last month in Washington, Kentucky and Texas, the FBI said.

Engines stolen from Corpus Christi would have cost about $430,000 if bought new, said Col. William J. Blair, the CCAD commanding officer.

CCAD is the nation's largest helicopter repair facility and Corpus Christi's largest industrial employer with 3,800 workers. It repairs helicopters from all branches of the military.

The depot discovered the engine thefts during an inventory review in late 1987, after the arrival of Blair as commander of the helicopter repair facility, the colonel said.

FBI officials, however, would not specify the model of engines stolen from forts Eustis and Campbell, or identify where in the seven states the seizures were made.

The FBI's investigation into stolen military turbine engines from the three bases began in September 1986 with the arrest of a Fort Eustis Army sergeant.

Federal agents arrested the man and seized an engine, a JFTD-12 used in the Sikorsky CH-54 Crane aircraft. The sergeant, whom the FBI would not name, was court-martialed, convicted by a military court of stealing the engine and subsequently served time in a military prison, Wolfinger said. The sergeant was later given a dishonorable discharge, he added.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

U.S. should drop quota on refugees

Every time we discover after the fact that a preventable tragedy has occurred somewhere in the world, the goodhearted among us vow "never again." Never again will we permit the kind of holocaust suffered by Jews in Hitler's Germany, or the forced repatriation of Operation Keelhaul after World War II, or the slaughter of Cambodian innocents after the end of the Vietnam war. Bravo!

Nevertheless, despite good intentions, people manage to ignore outrages and do nothing when they are actually occurring — even when doing something would not take that much effort. A tragic example is occurring right now in Southeast Asia, where refugees from Communist Vietnam are being turned back to take their chances on the open sea in tiny boats. Many have died.

Beginning in January, officials in Thailand officially closed its borders to refugees from Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Boatloads of refugees have been pushed off Thai coasts or intentionally rammed by military, police or fishing vessels. Bodies have washed up on beaches throughout the area.

It would be easy to cluck our tongues at the Thai government, but the problem is more complex. Since the end of the Vietnam war, Thailand has agreed to serve as a country of first refuge for those fleeing tyranny and poverty in Southeast Asia, with the understanding that they would be resettled quickly in final destinations, notably the United States, Canada and Australia. In recent years, however, the U.S. has reduced the number of refugees it will accept. Thus refugees are staying in camps in Thailand and Hong Kong and Malaysia for months, even years.

Le Xuan Khoa, president of the Indochina Resource Action Center, believes the U.S. is suffering from "compassion fatigue." Government officials have been stressing the invidious distinction between "political" and "economic" refugees as justification for reducing quotas. Others feel the government has less money for financial and educational assistance for Southeast Asian refugees. None of these excuses is a justifiable reason not to accept the refugees.

It might be nice to offer financial help to Vietnamese refugees, but it's not really necessary. This wave of refugees is not like the boat people of the 1970s. Many have relatives already in the U.S. and, in some cases, relatives have provided money to pay smugglers to get them out. There would little or no reason for these people to be a burden on taxpayers. Southeast Asian refugees in this country have more than pulled their own weight, and there is no reason to believe the next wave will not do likewise.

In the face of this tragedy, the U.S. should raise or eliminate its refugee quotas. That would be an act of compassion from which we would benefit in the long run.

Henry's truth still marches on

RICHMOND, Va. — A group of distinguished Virginians, led by the governor, threw a fine dinner here the other night. The purpose was to honor an old friend, and it seemed immaterial that the old friend has been dead for 189 years. To listen to our political debates in 1988 is to know that Patrick Henry lives.

Born in 1736, Henry died just a year before the 19th century dawned. There were giants on our earth in those days, and Henry both literally and figuratively stood tall among them. He was a big man, red-headed, brown-eyed, a country lawyer who became a statesman. He had an orator's voice, with the resonance of a bass viol and the range of a theater organ.

There was a time in our own century when boys took lessons in elocution; we declaimed, with gestures, Henry's speech of 1765 against the Stamp Act ("If this be treason, make the most of it"), and we rose to forensic heights with his speech of 1775: "Give me liberty, or give me death!" Every schoolboy knew the speeches.

It was not for Henry's role in the Revolution that the old gentleman was honored the other evening. It was rather for his role in the Virginia Ratification Convention of 1788. Two hundred years ago last week, 168 delegates met in Richmond to decide whether the Commonwealth should join eight other states in approving the new Constitution.

By the time the convention ended on June 25, New Hampshire had become the necessary ninth state to bring the new union into being, but Virginia's decision was far from academic. Without Virginia's approval, the fledgling nation would have died aborning, with Georgia and South Carolina severed altogether from Delaware and Maryland.

The two leading players in the Virginia convention were James Madison, who earnestly favored the Constitution, and Patrick Henry, who bitterly opposed it. In the end, Henry lost. Virginia ratified by a vote of 89 to 79, but it was Henry's insistence upon amendments in the nature of a bill of rights that three years later would prevail.

A shorthand reporter took down the speeches. You may read them today — and great reading it is — in Elliot's Debates. Henry was at his best. He was skeptical, cynical, suspicious. "That government is no more than a choice among evils is acknowledged by the most intelligent among mankind, and has been a standing maxim for ages."

The proposed government, he feared, would be dominated by a federal bureaucracy: "The salaries and fees of the swarm of officers and dependents on the government will cost this continent immense sums." The states would be able to compete with the "rich, snug, fine, fat" allurements of federal office. "Who can cope with the excitements and taxmen?" He scoffed at the notion of checks and balances: "What can avail your spacious, imaginary balances, your rope-dangling, chain-rattling, ridiculous ideal checks and contrivances?"

With remarkable powers of prophecy, Henry saw what would become of the states. They would be swallowed up. "What will the states have to do? Take care of the poor, repair and make highways, erect bridges, and so on, and so on." The powers granted to the national government were vast; the powers reserved to the states were petty. It was the nature of power that absorbed Henry's most thoughtful attention.

"Human nature never will part from power. Look for an example of a voluntary relinquishment of power, from one end of the globe to another — you will find none. ... Can you say that you will be safe when you give such unlimited powers without any real responsibility? Will not the members of Congress have the same passions which other rulers have had?"

Henry made no apologies for his suspicions: "I hope to be one of those who have a large portion of suspicion. Too much suspicion may be corrected. If you give too little power today, you may give more tomorrow. But the reverse of that proposition will not hold. If you give too much power today, you cannot retake it tomorrow, for tomorrow will never come for that purpose."

You will hear nothing at this year's national convention to match Henry's glorious command of the language, but you will hear the same fundamental issues debated. What is the proper role of the federal government in child care, labor relations, parental leave, economic regulation? What are wise limits upon executive and legislative power?

Patrick Henry raised the right questions 200 years ago. The old dissenter rests in his grave, but his truth goes marching on.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 24, the 176th day of 1988. There are 190 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
Forty years ago, on June 24, 1948, Communist forces cut off all land and water routes between West Germany and West Berlin, prompting the United States to organize a massive airlift of supplies into the city's western sector to counter the blockade.

On this date:
In 1314, the forces of Scotland's King Robert I defeated the English in the Battle of Bannockburn.

In 1497, the first recorded discovery of North America took place as explorer John Cabot, on a voyage for England, sighted land, probably in present-day Canada.

In 1647, Margaret Brent, a niece of Lord Baltimore, was ejected from the Maryland Assembly after demanding a place and vote in that governing body.

In 1908, the 22nd and 24th President of the United States, Grover Cleveland, died in Princeton, N.J., at the age of 71.

Cross-pollination enriches us

What a country! Old Homer McKee, the Hoosier philosopher, used to describe an all-American American as "mostly something else." And what a blessing our varied ethnicity has proved to be.

England will always be able to boast special gifts that are peculiarly English — in literature — ancient and modern.

Italy will always be able to boast most of the grandest operatic voices in the world. Who knows why? Who cares? Just enjoy!

Ireland's precious exports include Waterford glass and Belleek china and Irish linen and one priceless one: the Irish love of laughter.

And our United States of America has been endowed with some of England and some of Italy and some of Ireland and with enough Orientals to teach us gentle manners and intricate art in stone and silk and lacquer.

We have imported enough Holland Dutch for reminding examples in cleanliness and porcelain artistry.

Enough Swedes to show us how raw wood can be crafted into fine cabinetry and furniture ...

Enough Jews to share their uncommon intellect ...

Paul Harvey

Enough Spanish to teach us happy music and happy dancing and incomparable ways to use color on canvas.

From our own native Americans we have inherited jewelry unlike any other and artistry in tapestry, pottery and silver.

What a country!

Afro-Americans have contributed distinctive original music, great voices and superlative athletic prowess.

The French have been centuries developing their culinary artistry and their singular flair for fashion — and we are the beneficiaries of that.

Every nation has something of which to be proud, but we have inherited it all.

From Germany we have adopted and adapted their genius for things mechanical. And we will never be out of debt to German composers.

Natives in and immigrants from each of these nations will protest that I have left unmentioned many additional claims to fame for each ...

And admittedly there is time and space here to enumerate only the classic gifts with which each nationality is endowed ...

I am constantly re-inspired by the enterprise of Polish-Americans who epitomize what we've liked to consider the "American tradition" of self-sufficiency.

Yet, America has no "tradition" beyond the composite of its polyglot population.

I mention this because now in the name of "equality" — we seem determined to obliterate the differences that have cross-pollinated our cultures and made us so rich.

Cultural homogenization can only leave us poorer.

How are we dealing with S&L failures?

By ROBERT WALTERS

COSTA MESA, Calif. (NEA) — Ignoring the scandal that has engulfed the nation's thrift institutions, the savings and loan industry persists in invoking memories of a long-gone era of responsible, conservative S&L management.

In an ambitious television advertising campaign long on nostalgia but short on reality, the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, the industry's largest trade association, claims that S&Ls are "your partners in the American dream."

"Our relationship with you, your parents and your grandparents before you goes back over a century. We were there, reaching out to help Americans realize their desire for home ownership," says a typical backward-looking commercial in the league's new $5 million promotion effort.

"For over 150 years, individuals and families have turned to savings institutions for a home loan or a safe and secure place to tuck away savings for a rainy day, a child's education, a retirement nest egg," adds the league's president.

Contrast that syrupy rhetoric with the real-life situation at two typically troubled savings institutions here in the Los Angeles suburb of Costa Mesa, where depositors recently required $1.35 billion in bailouts from federal regulators:

• American Diversified Savings Bank was operated by a former pilot in the Indian Air Force who specialized, not in financing home mortgages, but in putting together limited partnerships to entice wealthy individuals into making real estate investments.

The savings bank's ventures in 22 states included two ethanol plants, three wind farms, a cable television system and a contract to collect manure for a co-generation facility.

• North America Savings and Loan was operated by a dentist and his girlfriend who specialized in making investments for other dentists and doctors. More than a quarter of its assets did go into home mortgages — in Alaska, where almost half of the investments went sour.

When California regulators seized North America Savings last year, they described it as the worst case of S&L fraud in the state's history. Federal regulators have filed a lawsuit to recover as much as $40 million they say was unlawfully siphoned out of the S&L.

Those federal regulators prefer to merge ailing S&Ls into healthy institutions, but the two thrifts here in Costa Mesa were in such terrible financial condition that no reputable firm could be persuaded to take them over.

Of the 235 S&Ls that have failed since scandal began swirling about the industry in 1981, only 10 have been resolved through a straight payoff to their depositors.

Moreover, the $1.14 billion required to compensate American Diversified depositors was almost four times larger than the previous record-setting payout — $300 million to customers of a Texas savings institution. (The North America payout was a more modest $209 million.)

Although the interest offered on S&L deposits averaged just over 7 percent nationally, both of the failed Costa Mesa thrifts were paying more than 8.5 percent before they were closed. Those rates attracted short-term depositors, arranged through brokers and invested in highly speculative ventures.

The S&L industry, however, refuses to acknowledge that the thrifts here are typical of hundreds throughout the country in very real danger of collapsing because of irresponsible management, insider fraud or regional economic declines.

Officials of the U.S. League seek to obscure the public into reminiscing about the past rather than focusing upon contemporary greed-driven practices. S&L executives display no interest in crafting and enforcing a code of conduct that would establish standards for the industry.

Instead, they prefer to publicly pretend that no problem exists — while quietly lobbying for federal bailouts that eventually could cost taxpayers billions of dollars.

Scriptwriters reject latest offer of producers

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Scriptwriters voted overwhelmingly to continue their 4-month-old strike, threatening the fall TV schedule and prompting layoffs and angry promises from both sides not to compromise.

Members of the Writers Guild of America voted 2,789-to-933, or 75 percent to 25 percent, to reject the latest contract offer by the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers, the union announced Thursday.

With the exception of the few shows whose producers signed contracts independent of the alliance, virtually all fall TV entertainment programming is threatened by the strike. The exceptions include "The Cosby Show" and "The Tonight Show With Johnny Carson."

The alliance reacted to the results of Wednesday night's vote by saying it had nothing further to negotiate with the guild. Leaders promised to push forward with television programming where possible, and to begin layoffs where necessary.

"It's disastrous for the entire business," said Paul Junger Witt, a guild member and co-executive producer of "The Golden Girls" and "Beauty and the Beast."

Layoff notices were issued almost simultaneously with the announcement of the voting results. At Universal Studios, a memo went out to employees Thursday announcing that the commissary would close today. And more layoffs are planned.

"It's devastating," said Dan Slusser, senior vice president and general manager of Universal City Studios Inc. "We've already made a number of cutbacks in the TV and studio operations group."

Alliance spokesman Herb Steinberg said the guild vote was emotional, rather than a serious appraisal of the offer.

But union officials said producers' stubbornness caused the strong rejection. "The message to the companies is loud and clear," said Mona Mangan, executive director of the Writers Guild, East. "Our members want a contract that resolves the key issues of the strike."

"If the companies end their inflexibility, which forced the strike and prolonged it, we can end this strike quickly and put everyone in our industry back to work," she said.

Meanwhile, "Late Night With David Letterman" head writer Steve O'Donnell said Thursday the talk show, which has been in reruns because of the strike, will return to live telecast Tuesday night. O'Donnell said the show is seeking a waiver contract with the guild, but will resume without its writers if approval isn't granted by then. He said the writers were supporting Letterman.

Members of the 9,500-member guild went on strike March 7 over the issues of residual payments for one-hour shows and programs broadcast in foreign markets.

Producers say their four-year contract offer would be worth an extra $71 million to writers and includes an across-the-board increase in residuals of 14.7 percent. Payments to writers now total about $360 million a year, Steinberg said.

The guild contends its negotiators accepted a flexible formula for payment on one-hour television shows sold for reruns but was not rewarded with a more generous offer for shows sold overseas. The union has linked the two items in an economic package.

The guild said 104 independent waiver contracts have been signed, but alliance officials contend most of those are small producers with little impact on the industry.

Parents of the teen-ager shot by Rowan upset by decision against assault charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The parents of a teen-ager who was shot by syndicated columnist Carl T. Rowan after taking an unauthorized dip in the journalist's pool say their son may have shown immaturity, but Rowan displayed even worse judgment by responding with a deadly weapon.

The U.S. attorney's office said Thursday that Rowan would not face assault charges stemming from the June 14 incident, but it deferred a decision on whether to bring weapons charges against the columnist to District of Columbia authorities.

U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens said in a prepared statement that there was a "substantial basis" for charging Rowan, an avowed gun-control advocate, with possession of an unregistered handgun.

The court developments angered the parents of 18-year-old Benjamin N. Smith of suburban Chevy Chase, Md., who has been charged with unlawfully entering Rowan's northwest Washington property.

Neil Smith acknowledged that his son had committed an "unlawful act" by entering Rowan's yard. But, he added: "Was that act cause for Mr. Rowan to shoot Ben and possibly kill him?"

Dinah Smith said her son "certainly showed immaturity, but Mr. Rowan's judgment is appalling."

The younger Smith, who was wounded in the right wrist by a bullet from Rowan's unregistered .22-caliber revolver, may not recover full use of his hand, his father said.

The columnist has made no attempt to contact her family or apologize for the incident, Mrs. Smith added.

R. Stan Mortenson, a lawyer for 19-year-old Laura Bachman of Bethesda, Md., arrested along with Smith at Rowan's residence, said Ms. Bachman "deeply regrets that the events of June 14th ever occurred."

Mortenson, whose client also faces a charge of unlawful entry, called the government's case "unjustified and highly unusual."

Smith and Ms. Bachman pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge Thursday before a District of Columbia Superior Court hearing commissioner. Trial was scheduled for Aug. 18.

Rowan, who has been ridiculed by pro-gun groups as hypocritical for advocating handgun bans while keeping one himself, refused to discuss the latest developments.

"I am not saying one word about that decision," he said when called at his home. "I think I've been very generous in talking to the media, and I've said all I'm going to say."

Rowan has told authorities that his son, Carl Jr., a former FBI agent, gave him the gun after he received several threats. He said his son had been told by city officials he did not need to register the weapon after leaving the FBI.

The district's far-reaching 1976 handgun ordinance says that all weapons must be registered. Possession of an unregistered handgun or ammunition carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Rowan has defended his use of the weapon, saying he thought his life was in danger. He said he called police after hearing noises in his backyard, investigating and finding four people in his pool.

The columnist said he fired at Smith after the young man lunged at him. Smith disputes that, saying he did nothing to threaten Rowan and was trying to flee when he was shot.

Smith and Ms. Bachman face a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $400 fine if convicted. The two had been charged with illegal entry shortly after the incident, but those charges were withdrawn within hours pending an investigation. The charges were reinstated Thursday.

Stephens said his office found insufficient evidence to warrant an assault charge against the 62-year-old Rowan but believed he should be charged with possession of an unregistered firearm.

The city government traditionally handles weapons charges, and Claude Bailey, a spokesman for the District of Columbia Corporation Counsel, said officials would decide within a few days whether to prosecute Rowan.

Convoy of supplies for Nicaragua circles White House

WASHINGTON (AP)—Buses adorned with slogans in English and Spanish circled the White House to the cheers and whistles of protesters when the Veterans Peace Convoy arrived from a border deadlock at Laredo, Texas.

The 30 dilapidated buses were turned away by U.S. Customs officials at the Mexican border during a mission of delivering the vehicles and tons of food, medicine and clothing to Nicaragua.

"We have come to take care of the children of Nicaragua," convoy organizer Gerry Condon of San Francisco said Thursday. "We intend to lobby and gain support for this convoy to pass. We want to feed the children, not the war."

Customs officials in Laredo last week seized four vehicles and barred the group from crossing into Mexico without posting bond and signing an agreement that the aging school buses and pickup trucks would be returned to the United States.

The Treasury Department contended that to let the vehicles remain in Nicaragua would violate a trade embargo. But Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, expressed support for the group and vowed to pursue a compromise.

Leland introduced a resolution in Congress on Wednesday that the treasury secretary should not regulate the donation of articles to relieve human suffering in Nicaragua.

"It's wrong to thwart the humanitarian impulses of the American people. This tradition has sustained us and made us leaders throughout the world," Leland said in a statement Thursday.

"How ironic it would be to deny assistance to our own neighbors in the Western Hemisphere. There are hungry and wounded children awaiting this aid. People of good will wish to help them. We must and we will find a resolution."

Condon said Reagan administration fears that the vehicles would land in the military's hands are unfounded. Four of the convoy's original 38 vehicles did not survive the long trip from Laredo to Washington because of mechanical problems. The rest, Condon said, are unworthy of military service because of the many miles they have on them — or would have on them by the time they reached Nicaragua.

Convoy spokesman Craig Merrilees said the group, which is made up mostly of Vietnam veterans, would continue its protest across the street from the White House "as long as it takes." But the contingent may take the convoy to the State Department if Elliot Abrams, assistant secretary for inter-American affairs, refuses their demand that he meet with them by Friday afternoon.

Ellen Bork, a State Department spokeswoman, said the convoy's request for a meeting was being considered late Thursday. She initially said the convoy should instead contact the Treasury Department, which is responsible for enforcing the trade embargo.

The convoy formed after groups from Seattle, Missoula, Mont., Minneapolis, and Caribou, Maine, joined in Austin, arriving in Laredo on June 7.

The 30 tons of aid carried by the group includes oats and dry milk and medical supplies such as crutches and wheelchairs.

Another 140 tons of humanitarian aid collected by the group was shipped to Nicaragua, members of the convoy said.

"The Reagan administration is trying to stop a massive people-to-people humanitarian aid campaign," Condon said as an anti-nuclear group chanted and beat on drums nearby.

Shuttle hoist

The shuttle "Discovery" is hoisted to a vertical position by Kennedy Space Center workers late Thursday night. This is the final step before mating the orbiter to solid rocket boosters and its external tank. The shuttle is scheduled for launch in late August.

Tracing the sexual contacts of AIDS infected people worthwhile, study says

CHICAGO (AP) — Tracing the sexual contacts of people infected with the AIDS virus can be a tricky but cost-effective way to slow the spread of the disease as long as health workers don't disclose names, say authors of a new study.

"We tried very hard to develop a positive, empathetic and compassionate relationship with the people we worked with," said Dr. Randolph E. Wykoff, co-author of a study that found contact-tracing to be worthwhile, contrary to the predictions of many health officials.

"I could see very clearly where this would have been a miserable failure if they hadn't trusted us," Wykoff said of the study published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study conducted in a rural South Carolina county in 1986 turned up 82 men and one woman who possibly had been exposed to the virus, researchers said.

The cost of the tracing worked out to about $105 per person tested for AIDS or $810 for each infected person located.

Train may have been traveling too fast

CROFTON, Ky. (AP) — Heat-sensitive phosphorus inside a derailed CSX tanker reignited as workers righted it, spewing more toxic smoke a day after 15,000 people were evacuated from eight western Kentucky counties, authorities said.

Thursday night's cloud, however, was not as severe as the one the previous night, which forced one of the largest evacuations in the state's history, officials said.

"The situation at this hour is they feel it will burn itself out," Don Armstrong, spokesman for the state Department of Disaster and Emergency Services, said late Thursday night.

"We feel the situation is under control. The intensity of the smoke has diminished significantly."

The tanker was part of a CSX Transportation Corp. train that officials say was going too fast through rural Christian County when 34 of its cars derailed in a ravine.

The new cloud, 100 yards wide and 400 feet high, was moving southeast, Armstrong said. He said officials were warning residents to avoid the cloud.

Three huge gasoline tanks burn, two dead, 20 injured

GUADALUPE, Mexico (AP)—A raging fire with temperatures up to 5,400 degrees burned out of control today after three gas tanks exploded, killing two people in this northeastern industrial city, officials said.

Officials said the heat of the blaze melted several cars and the fire's glow could be seen up to 10 miles away.

The blasts and the fire also injured 20 people. Authorities said six of them were in very serious condition early today.

The blaze started after three tanks exploded one after another at the San Rafael tank farm belonging to Pemex, the state petroleum monopoly.

The flames, shooting more than 100 feet in the air, forced the evacuation of more than 10,000 people from nearby homes.

Nuevo Leon state judiciary police director Hernan Guajardo Garza, who visited the site, said at times the fire reached 5,400 degrees Fahrenheit, or 3,000 degrees Celsius, and turned several nearby vehicles into molten metal.

Firemen, rushed in from all around the area, were finally able to douse the flames in two tanks late Thursday using special equipment with 50-foot pipes that can shoot chemical foam at a great distance. A third tank continued to burn.

The equipment was flown in from Ciudad Madero, 280 miles away on the Gulf of Mexico coast, Pemex spokesman Guillermo Guevara said. He said firemen expected to control the flames in the third tank early today.

Guevara and Nuevo Leon state press secretary Raul de la Garza, who spoke at a joint news conference Thursday night in Monterrey, said there were no immediate clues as to what started the fire on the 23-tank farm but that an investigation was under way.

The private television network Televisa quoted Pemex officials as saying the explosions and fire were caused by stray sparks from welding equipment being used nearby.

An explosion and fire May 24 at Pemex's gas and kerosene supply depot in the northern city of Chihuahua was blamed on a spark set off during the installation of firefighting equipment. No one was hurt then, but more than 100,000 people were forced to evacuate their homes for a day.

Guevara said the 23 tanks were loaded with a total of 2.26 million gallons of gasoline and diesel oil when Thursday's disaster occurred.

The tank-farm, employing 250 workers, is used as a retail distribution center for Monterrey and the northeastern region. Monterrey is the country's third largest city with a metropolitan population of 2.8 million people and one of its main industrial centers.

The explosion and fire set off panic among residents of Guadalupe, a small city on Monterrey's outskirts about 440 miles north of Mexico City.

People fled their homes even before the state government ordered the area evacuated at mid-afternoon Thursday. About 10 government and private shelters were packed with an estimated 8,000 people who spent the night there, some looking for lost relatives.

Raquel Garcia Monrial, 35, begged for help finding her 7-year-old daughter.

"We heard the explosion and ran from the house," she said, with tears streaming down her cheeks, searching through one shelter.

"The street was full of people, and my daughter got away from me," Ms. Garcia said. "It was terrible. People were screaming and crying. The flames were so big."

Antonio Bernal, 36, searched frantically through an auditorium packed with about 300 people at the Guadalupe Exposition grounds. "I can't find my son. He's 10 years old," he said. "All the children were in the house, and I guess he ran out. It was pure panic."

The state Integral Family Development agency brought in emergency shipments of food and blankets at several locations, but one director said the organization's main job was to help family members locate each other.

Princess Di spends half-day on 'front'

LONDON (AP)—A khaki-clad Princess Diana fired two powerful guns, detonated a dud charge and drove an armored vehicle in a mock battle with the British Army.

The wife of the heir to Britain's throne was so enthusiastic about her half day on the "front" Thursday that soldiers said they'd love to have her join their ranks.

"She seemed to thoroughly enjoy the number of bangs and noises going off everywhere," said Maj. Willy Peto, an escort to the princess during the Bridge Over the River Avon battle. "I think she would make an extremely good soldier."

Moscow threatens further retaliation in spy squabble

OTTAWA (AP) — In a second round of expulsions for alleged spying, Canada has kicked out a senior Soviet diplomat, bringing to 19 the number of Soviet officials banned from Canada this week.

The Soviet Union promised to retaliate in a move indicating little hope for an end to the tit-for-tat expulsions.

Foreign Minister Joe Clark on Thursday ordered Col. Grigori Stepanovich Roublev, the senior military attache in the Soviet Embassy, out of the country by Monday.

Clark also said Sergei Mikhailovich Kashtanov, a former second secretary at the embassy who served in Canada from 1981-1985, was no longer welcome in Canada because of "espionage activities."

In addition, the total Soviet diplomatic contingent in Canada was cut from 63 to 60.

The move brought to 19 the number of Soviet diplomats and officials expelled or declared

"persona non grata" since Tuesday. Nine have been thrown out and 10 formerly assigned here have been told not to come back since Canadian authorities announced the break-up of a spy ring that was seeking military secrets.

The Kremlin retaliated Wednesday by expelling two Canadian diplomats in Moscow, and banning re-entry for three other Canadians not presently in the country.

Soviet Embassy spokesman Viatcheslav Bogdanov termed Thursday's action "indecent revenge" and said: "There is no doubt whatsoever that there will be retaliation. It is going to happen."

Canadian officials accused the Soviets of trying to obtain highly classified military and civilian technology.

But Defense Minister Perrin Beatty denied reports the targets included U.S. naval communications and weapons systems made by Paramax Electronics of Montréal. The company is a subsidiary of Unisys Corp. of Detroit and a major contractor for new Canadian frigates under construction.

"We have no indication at all of any connection between these expulsions and the (frigate) program," Beatty said.

Disclosure of such naval espionage could be highly embarrassing to Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's government which has asked the United States to approve the transfer of nuclear submarine propulsion technology to Canada.

Canada is currently negotiating the $6.6 billion purchase of its first fleet of eight to 10 nuclear-powered submarines, and the options include a British-designed boat using the U.S. technology.

Clark also accused the Soviets of trying to infiltrate the Royal Canadian Mounted Police security service and its successor, the Canadian Security Intelligence Service.

"We are confident that Canadian security was not compromised," he told Parliament on Wednesday. He said a Soviet translator at the International Civil Aviation Organization in Montreal, Yuri Smurov, had defected to Canada after providing intelligence on the Soviet operations.

Intelligence Service spokesman Jerry Cummings said the expulsions stem from Soviet spying operations going back five years.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

FISHERMAN'S DREAMS

An enthusiastic fisherman, like this young fellow, has to be an optimist. His love of the sport is not so much in the size of the fish caught as "in the ketchin'." He loves the thrill of watching the bobble of the cork; the excitement of the sudden tug on his line. Often it isn't even necessary to have a fish. His dreams are sufficient to keep him standing at this old tub for hours.

How many of us are like this fisherman...willing to go through life living on dreams, subsisting on wishes, hoping against hope that in the end everything will turn out alright. There is no middle ground with God. Fisherman's dreams are useless in man's longing for Eternal Life. The church offers such a way to us all. Go to church; take your family or a friend.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Church plans Spiritual Life Crusade day

Evangelist Samuel Rijfkgogel of North Little Rock, Ark., will lead a special one-day Spiritual Life Crusade in Sunday services at New Life Worship Center, 318 N. Cuyler.

Rev. John Farina, pastor, invites the public to attend the 10:30 a.m. and 6:10 p.m. services for the crusade.

"An inspiring vocalist and motivational speaker, Rijfkgogel transmits Biblical truths in each service, creating an atmosphere which will cause you to rise above life's trials," Rev. Farina said.

Rijfkgogel received his training for ministry at Southwestern Assemblies of God College at Waxahachie. During college, his singing group — Morning Star — traveled widely ministering in rallies, churches and youth conventions, where he shared in ministry with such noted speakers as David Wilkerson.

Farina said Rijfkgogel's ministry communicates with old and young alike as he uses both vocal ability and in-depth Bible preaching to help people tackle life's problems.

During his recent trip to Thailand, "Samuel saw many lives spiritually and physically touched, inspired and transformed as the Holy Spirit changed their lives," Farina said. "He has a worldwide vision that will inspire you to fulfill Christ's great commission."

Rijfkgogel evidenced his strong faith in God during his family's hardships through the Nal holocaust, an Indonesian revolution and subsequent emigration to the United States. That stor has been told in his sister Joanna Garrison's recent book, Tagled Destinies.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: How great is the love the Father has lavished on us, that we should be called children of God! And that's what we are! (1 John 3:1a NI)

When our middle daughter was 3 years old, she had a health problem which required extensive testing in the hospital. She had already been through some of the testing, and knew what to expect and dread.

She, my husband and I were on our way to the hospital in another town when I looked through the rearview mirror at our little girl lying in the back seat. Her face was in the back of the seat, and she wasn't making a sound, but she was curled into herself and crying.

Her daddy lifted her to the front seat and onto his lap and held and loved her while she cried. He talked to her softly, trying to ease her fears and reminding her of the fun things we would do together when her hospital ordeal was over.

Soon she was soothed and playing with her Baby Beans doll.

She still had to go through the testing, and the process was painful and scary; but her daddy was with her every step of the way, always loving her, holding her, reassuring her. Daddies are like that.

Are you confused and frightened? Have your life experiences left you in dread? Are you in need of love and reassurance?

Crawl onto your Heavenly Father's lap and let Him hold you. He will soothe you, dry your tears, remind you of your blessings, be there for you, and love you perfectly.

He's like that!

Waco woman enjoying South African service

By SANDRA GINES
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO (AP)—South Africa has changed in many ways since Janet McElroy went there in 1981 with plans to study for six months.

She is at her Waco home now — only the fourth time she's been back to the United States since 1981 — making plans to move to Jerusalem after her August wedding.

Ms. McElroy spent most of her time in South Africa in the Pretoria area, working with youth at Witbank Methodist Church and the Lytleton Methodist Church in Verwoerdburg.

"Something that I've loved over there is that the people are just polite, both races," she said.

Teen-agers in South Africa are growing up much faster than when she first arrived there, she said. She has worked with white churches and has tried to integrate some activities. One effect she has had on her charges, she said, is "because I was white and friendly to blacks, they saw it was possible to be friendly to blacks."

South Africa's white minority has controlled the country for years under apartheid, a system of government that separates races and restricts voting to whites. Whites make up about 17 percent of the country's 30 million population. The government recently granted more rights to blacks and other racial groups, but racial turmoil continues.

When she arrived in South Africa, Ms. McElroy had to get used to monkeys running in the streets, children drinking coffee from their bottles and the variety of nature at the various game parks.

"Youth camps were actually a new thing. When I arrived seven years ago, they had maybe three per year," she said, adding that they have about 12 a year now. In addition to apartheid and the violence surrounding it, Ms. McElroy said the Pretoria area has a very high suicide rate and child abuse problem.

"I had a youth camp a couple months ago for problem children. They have a whole grown-up mentality with grown-up feelings of fear," she said.

"That's why my ministry in inner healing is so effective, because that's where they need healing the most," she said.

Emotional healing, or healing of the emotions and memory, comes from the idea that Jesus can heal physical hurts and hurts from the past, she said. It is a type of counseling, Ms. McElroy said.

Despite episodes of violence and unrest reported by the international news media, she said she found much of the county peaceful.

But animosity and fear between the races is deep-seated, Ms. McElroy said.

"Because they don't live together, they form weird ideas of each other," she said. "Both sides say the other race smells bad."

The races are taught misconceptions about each other from birth, she said. Whites are taught to fear the blacks, and the blacks are taught to hate whites, she said. Getting the races together is difficult.

"If you have a youth rally in the white side of town and invite the blacks, they often can't afford to come."

"If you have a youth rally in the white side of town and invite the blacks, they often can't afford to come. If you have it in the black section, the whites won't come because they're afraid," she said.

"It's not anything that can be solved easily," Ms. McElroy said.

The only solution she can envision for a country that she said is like home to her is "if we have such a spiritual revival that the walls of antagonism and hurt are broken down by the love of Jesus."

"The love of God is only way," she said.

Pampans' son serving as Alabama missionary

Mark Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Walker of Pampa, is serving as a Baptist Student Union summer missionary in Alabama.

A student at Midwestern State University at Wichita Falls, Walker is part of a group of 126 Texas college students from across the state who are sharing the Good News of Jesus Christ in 22 states and five foreign countries, said Jack Greever of Dallas, director of the Division of Student Work within the 2.4-million member Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Supported by their fellow BSU members who raised $130,000 to undergird the vast missions effort, the student volunteers are serving with career missionaries and other Baptist leaders.

Twenty-seven of the young missionaries are helping advance the cause of Christ in Australia, where they will be joined July 20 through Aug. 2 by 660 other Texas Baptist volunteers serving in the Texas-Australia Baptist Partnership Crusade.

Walker

"These enthusiastic young Christians are shining examples of what God is doing on our college campuses," Greever said.

"They go out to serve in the name of Christ around the world and will return to be better Christian citizens on their campuses and in their communities," he added.

Secretaries workshop scheduled

PLAINVIEW - Advance registration is now being accepted for the 24th annual Church Secretaries Workshop scheduled July 14-16 at Wayland Baptist University in Plainview.

Bobbi Sims, founder and operator of the Total Effectiveness Training Center in Corpus Christi, will serve as guest clinician for the three-day event.

The workshop will include several one-hour sessions on such topics as computers in the church office, the church receptionist and the pastor's secretary. Each of the sessions will be repeated several times during the workshop.

Cost is $65 per person and covers all meals and housing. Interested persons should contact Mrs. Amelia Cline, workshop director, at 1-296-5521.

Artist draws on inspiration for jewelry

By THOMAS MORTON
Beaumont Enterprise

ORANGE (AP) — Nancy Denmark has learned how to draw on inspiration from God for her spiritual life, and designs simple, elegant jewelry with Christian symbolism from that inspiration.

Ms. Denmark, an Orange native now living in Houston, says her spiritual growth fired her creativity and helped her overcome the apparent contradiction of expressing a faith that began in poverty through jewels and precious metals.

"I made a vow to give God a return on his investment in me," she says. "The spiritual growth led to the artistic growth."

Ms. Denmark recently returned to her home church of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Orange to speak about her spiritual and artistic growth.

Her interest in sculpting began when she attended Luther Stark High School and developed at the University of Houston, where she was graduated in 1976 with a bachelor of fine arts degree.

Ms. Denmark got a job in a jewelry store after graduation, took a leave of absence "and played for a year in Europe," returned to her job, but quit the store in 1980 to develop her craft.

She did a lot of work on commission, but turned away from that so she could grow artistically, she says.

While she always believed her creativity was a gift from God, her current calling is still young.

Ms. Denmark compares her recent life to the Christian church calendar, starting with an Advent of three months of what she calls turmoil before Christmas, 1986.

At that time, she says, "I made the commitment to create a body of work to spread the word." The next time of anticipation — her Lent, as she calls it — happened in early 1987 when she had a "flood of ideas" for jewelry designs, Ms. Denmark says, but "I couldn't get anything produced."

But by May 1987 she could present her designs as a body of work, she says. "Now, I'm in the Easter season," she adds.

Ms. Denmark had several personal obstacles to overcome. "I felt like I was commercializing my faith," she says.

That changed when she heard a stewardship sermon on the parable of the talents at her church, Episcopal Church of the Epiphany in Houston. In the parable, the head of the household commends two servants who double the amount of money entrusted to them, but severely punishes the third who buried it in a field and earned nothing.

"That's when I realized it was my responsibility to use my talent to glorify God," Ms. Denmark says. "It brought my religion and faith into my daily life and got away from when you think about it only on Sundays."

Another difficulty Ms. Denmark had was reconciling the creation of expensive jewelry with the Bible's frequent condemnations of the abuse of wealth.

Ms. Denmark's jewelry ranges in price from $18 to $4,000. "I don't think wealth in itself is obscene," Ms. Denmark says, but adds that she doesn't want to strictly appeal to a rich clientele.

Instead of concentrating on exclusive one-of-a-kind creations, she began designing jewelry that could be mass-produced without compromising the design, she says.

"That's when I geared my work toward more production, because the average person couldn't afford custom jewelry," she says.

Many of her creations start with cutting a rough design by special saw into a small block of hard wax.

After she finishes cutting and shaping the piece, she attaches a wax wire to it, mounts it on a rubber base and puts a steel flask around it.

She pours the hot metal into the mold which burns away the wax. Most of her work is in gold and silver. "I work in materials that will last," she says.

With this "lost wax process," Ms. Denmark can make only one-of-a-kind creations.

Often people will bring her precious stones and have her create a setting around them, she says. "I do a lot of wedding rings because people like (them) custom-made."

Her main line is called "From the Heart," which features

Christian symbols such as crosses or the dove symbolizing the Holy Spirit against a heart shaped background. She is also considering a line based on a "cross and crown" theme that began with a custom design for a Temple businessman.

Ms. Denmark, 34, is married to Richard Florack and they live on the west side of Houston. "He's not artistically oriented and is amazed at the process," she says.

Ms. Denmark thanks God for her gift and the process from creating the design to final marketing.

"When it's ready to go (out for sale), I have a real peaceful feeling," she says.

Light pollution a problem for astronomers on mountain top

By HANK MURPHY
The Odessa American

FORT DAVIS (AP) — Depending on whether a faint glow captured by a telescope hails from a distant galaxy or from an earthly beam bouncing off dust in the atmosphere, light can be an astronomer's best friend.

Or worst enemy.

To make sure light reaching astronomers at McDonald Observatory is transmitted from the heavens and not from street lights, astronomers and Jeff Davis County administrators have taken measures to control "light pollution" emitted from street lights — all 17 of them.

"As far as developed observatory sites go, this is acknowledged to be the darkest night sky anywhere in the country," says Curt Laughlin, an observatory superintendent at the 6,800-foot Davis Mountain lookout atop Mount Locke.

Still, astronomers know that increased candlepower in Fort Davis, Alpine, Van Horn, Marathon and other towns that ring Mount Locke eventually will show up in data gathered to help chart the universe.

Laughlin explained that light waves from the earth streak upward until they bounce off particles in the atmosphere and "scatter" throughout the sky.

Although each astronomer at McDonald studies different heavenly objects, "In general, they have in common the fact that they're all looking at very faint light sources," Laughlin said. "Even if they're looking at a fairly bright object like one of your nearby planets, they will be studying the light in such a way that any additional light coming down from the sky and getting into the telescope affects the measurements."

And, Laughlin said, some lights are worse than others. "Mercury vapor is real bad. In fact, mercury vapor has a high ultra violet content which you can't see ... It really gets up into the atmosphere and causes a lot of havoc with measurements such as ours."

Laughlin personally does not consider light pollution a problem at McDonald, but others do, he said.

Harold Butner, a 27-year-old graduate student in astronomy at the University of Texas, said that "even with the cooperation of various counties, there's still a slight increase in light pollution."

Nevertheless, Butner said, "The local geography is helpful" because most of the light-emitting towns are behind hills and mountains. "That helps us some. On a good, clear night, this is very good."

To help the sky stay that way, the Texas Star Party — an organization of hundreds of astronomers who meet annually at the Prude Ranch near Fort Davis — last month committed $7,500 to change mercury vapor street lights in Fort Davis to low-pressure sodium lights, which cause fewer problems for astronomers.

Jeff Davis County Judge Ann Scudday said, "Once things (light pollution) get out of control, it's very hard to get it back under control."

Ms. Scudday said she'll recommend the installation of lights with decreased luminance to cut the county's light bill from $213 to $203 per month. The new lights will be more yellow, she said, "but I think they'll get used to it."

Among major observatories around the nation, McDonald is the only one to escape serious light pollution, Laughlin said. The Texas Legislature has granted counties surrounding McDonald ordinance-making power that regulates the amount and type of outdoor lights residents can use.

Use linework to create folk art details

By PRISCILLA HAUSER

Geese and ducks are fun and easy to paint, and they add a touch of country charm to so many different things. No wonder they are such popular designs!

One of my favorite projects is the winsome goose welcome sign shown here. The little goose has so much personality, and the project is very easy to make.

It takes a little time to paint, but it is well worth your effort. It makes a wonderful gift. The same design is charming on other projects as well.

The upper arch of the sign, on which "Welcome" appears, is stained on the front and painted with a base coat around the edges and on the back. The oval sign is base coated with paint on the front and stained around the edge and on the back.

The goose and decorative border are painted over the base coat. Note that the garland around the goose's neck and the border around the oval sign are repeats of the same basic design: tiny leaves, dot flowers and a little linework. The completed sign may be antiqued for a distinctive finish.

If you would like complete plans, you may order them in our new packet, Priscilla Hauser's Tole & Decorative Painting on Wood. It contains a booklet of detailed how-to-paint instructions, full-size patterns and paint-along color worksheets for six delightful designs, plus illustrated step-by-step plans for building 10 easy and useful wood projects.

To order, specify Packet No. 4300. Please include a check or money order for our special newspaper discount price of $24.95, which is $10 off the normal price of $34.95! Mail to: For

Crafts

Whom The Brush Toles, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008.

In many folk art designs, linework accounts for the lovely, graceful, curving lines that represent vines and curling leaf stems. I used linework on the goose to create his neck bow. It is the technique for striping, curls and outlining.

Linework is done with a liner or scroll brush, which comes to a fine point. This brush is a member of the round brush family.

For linework, the paint must be very thin, like ink, so that it will flow smoothly, easily and evenly from the point of the brush. Fill your brush completely, twisting it on the palette, so that you're sure you have a nice, fine point with which to work.

Hold the brush perfectly upright, perpendicular to the paper, with the handle pointing straight up at the ceiling. Keep the brush in this position as you work — it may feel awkward at first, but practice will cure that. The proper position is most important to attractive linework.

Move the brush slowly, so that the paint has time to flow from the hairs of the brush. Move your arm from the shoulder, keeping your elbow and wrist still.

Don't worry if your hand shakes — mine does too! After all, this is hand-painted work — it should not look machine-done. Just relax and enjoy the graceful movements.

For the goose sign, as well as many other projects, it is often easier to custom mix your own stain than to shop for one that matches your colors.

Making your own stain is a very simple matter — just mix a fair amount of oil color from the tube into some turpentine! More paint produces a darker stain; more turp produces a lighter one.

I recommend a light stain; you can always go darker if you prefer. Apply the stain with a sponge brush, then wipe off the desired amount with soft, absorbent rags.

Caregivers of the elderly also need care

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Much attention is being focused on the needs of the ever-increasing elderly population, but the needs and problems of their caregivers are being largely ignored, says a social worker at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center here.

Futurists predict that by the year 2030, one in four Americans will be over age 60, notes Jacques Cook, associate professor of psychiatry and behavior sciences. Already, one in six is included in the 60-plus age range.

However, she adds, the fact that about 75 percent of this age group depends in varying degrees on family members or friends for physical and emotional support is not widely recognized.

"By the year 2000, there will be five dependent elderly for every one person in the 45-65 age range — those most likely to provide care," she said.

Moreover, the issue of caregivers' needs is very nearly a "women's issue," said Cook, since women are the traditional caregivers, in part because they usually outlive men and because "they are more nurturing by nature."

"These women also may be working and have children at home," said Cook. "The demands on their time can be unrealistic."

She offers some practical suggestions for easing the caregivers' burden:

- Obtain information and skills. Seek the support of organizations such as the federally funded Area Agencies on Aging, of which there are 600 nationwide. They are clearinghouses for information on services ranging from Meals on Wheels programs to transportation for the elderly.

Cook also urges caregivers to seek consultation from physicians, physical therapists and counselors.

For example, caregivers are often unequipped to deal with the emotional needs of the elderly. Older people who outlive their "age-mates" often go through a depression that results from not having peers who can relate to their own life experiences, Cook points out.

"These are people who may have lived through pioneer days, and who have seen men walk on the moon," she says. "That's an enormous amount to experience in one lifetime, and having no one to share it with tends to have an isolating effect."

Though it's often criticized as "living in the past," Cook believes it is therapeutic for older people to reminisce, even if it is with someone many years younger.

"Caregivers should encourage the elderly to talk about the past," she said. "By sharing memories, older people can experience the warmth of human contact."

■ Plan ahead. In the past, the only option for the dependent elderly without a full-time caregiver was a nursing home. Now, however, at-home care, senior living complexes, adult day care and other alternatives exist, said Cook.

"Maximize your choices so you're not suddenly faced with a major decision during a crisis," she said, adding that most care facilities are selected at such times.

Cook advised caregivers to build up a kind of "first aid kit" of living arrangement options, weighing family finances and caregiving resources.

■ Seek emotional support and make time for yourself. Cook advises setting aside time for exercise, relaxation and a formal support group, if necessary.

The very "dailiness" of caring for the chronically impaired takes a heavy toll, she said.

"In our society a 'cure orientation' prevails. You go to the doctor, receive a diagnosis, the doctor performs a procedure or prescribes a drug, and we expect to be restored pretty much to our former state of health. But chronicity, by definition, applies to conditions that cannot be cured."

Caregivers who can afford to do so should hire help — even if it's only a few hours a week, said Cook. If siblings or other family members live nearby, don't hesitate to ask for assistance.

■ Give yourself permission to be human. "Accept that you won't please everybody all the time," said Cook, pointing out that meeting the needs of one or two elderly parents, a spouse, children and others is a tricky balancing act.

■ Maintain dreams and hopes for yourself. Dwelling on feelings of guilt and helplessness can be a debilitating drain on caregivers' energies, said Cook.

"Look beyond your present responsibilities to the future."

Pet owner discovers tobacco smoke is not the cat's meow

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked if secondhand tobacco smoke can affect pets. Here's my personal experience: Michael Francis, one of my Abyssinian cats, itched and scratched himself raw. His fur came out in great patches and his stomach was bald. My other cat, Alexandra Sugarhouse, sneezed and coughed all her short life. My veterinarian didn't know what was wrong, and he didn't try very hard to find out.

Then I found another veterinarian. Vet No. 2 asked if I smoked. (I did.) She then asked me to scrub my walls, shampoo my draperies, carpets, upholstery, etc. to get rid of the smoke deposits. And to quit smoking! I quit smoking and followed her instructions. Michael Francis was miraculously cured, but my little Sugarhouse died before she was 2 years old.

When people ask why I quit smoking, I tell them. Some laugh. Others say they'd have gotten rid of the cat instead. Most make it clear that they don't think a cat is worth "all that trouble." But I see it differently. I had a choice. My cats didn't.

Vet No. 2 said she has other clients whose cats are allergic to tobacco smoke, but I'm the only one who stopped smoking.

This tends to support your statement that if smokers don't consider their children, they are not likely to be concerned about a pet.

ELIZABETH THOMPSON, BATON ROUGE

DEAR ELIZABETH: Hooray for you. Let my readers assume that I am implying that all cats are allergic to tobacco smoke, let me make it perfectly clear — I am not. (P.S. Sorry about Sugarhouse.)

DEAR ABBY: Would anyone be interested in my old Girl Scout uniform? I also have the hat and belt that go with it. I am now 72 years old, which makes my uniform 50 years old. (I guess you could call it an antique.)

I thought maybe some Scout organization might want it. I'd gladly send it to anyone who would give it a good home!

MILLIE FROM MELROSE, MASS.

DEAR MILLIE: I called the national headquarters of the Girl Scouts and spoke with Bonnie McEwan, the director of media information. When I told her about your uniform, she said, "What timing! We would love to have Millie's uniform! We've just established a Preservation Center for just such historic items. Perhaps if you mention it in your column, others will contribute other archival items for the Girl Scout museum."

So, Millie, dear, please send your uniform, belt and hat to: Girl Scouts of the USA, National Historic Preservation Center, 830 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 11002.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the party who wrote about the expression "I could care less," which I agree should be, "I couldn't care less." I want to add that there are many words used in today's conversation that are grossly misused. To mention a few:

People say, "We kept going back and forth." It should be "forth and back." (We don't say, "fro and to" — we say, "to and fro.") When we back a car out of the garage, we go "back, then forth," but ordinarily, we go "forth and back," right?

Another common error is calling a water heater a "hot water heater." There is no such thing as a hot water heater — no one can heat hot water; hot water is already hot and cannot be heated.

Also, most people use the word "indefinitely" incorrectly. They say, "This item will last indefinitely," meaning that it will last forever. Actually "indefinitely" means "uncertain, uncertain, an indefinite amount of time," but it is used incorrectly to mean "forever."

DICK ZONNEFELD, ARTESIA, CALIF.

DEAR DICK: Interesting? Definitely!

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

McEnroe's comeback shattered at Wimbledon

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — With his latest comeback shattered at the spot where he yearned to succeed, John McEnroe faces an uncertain future.

"This is the difficult part," McEnroe said after he was upset 7-5, 7-6, 6-3 by Wally Masur on Centre Court at Wimbledon Thursday.

"The first nine years were like, coast," he said. "One of two things are going to happen. I'll come out of it... or, hopefully not, just continue to stay in this mold and play inferior tennis." Masur, a strong grass-court player, said McEnroe never seemed to be in the match.

"His concentration was sporadic throughout, especially in the first set. ... He definitely wasn't vintage John McEnroe out there," Masur said.

Back at the Grand Slam tournament he won three times in the early 1980s and where he gained a reputation as a foul-mouthed tantrum thrower, McEnroe wanted badly to do well — on two fronts.

One battle he won — that of a reformed family man taking defeat on the chin.

But in bottling up his emotions, McEnroe said he may also have put the lid on the fire he had hoped to ride back to the top of tennis.

"I'm trying to fire up but it's hard. It's a situation where everything I do is so carefully looked at here that everything becomes a big deal," McEnroe said.

While the 29-year-old American reflected on his second-round defeat, he left his rivals with one less potential obstacle.

Three of those rivals — defending champion Pat Cash, 1985 and 1986 winner Boris Becker, and the world's top-ranked player, Ivan Lendl — were in action in today's third round.

Cash took on fellow Australian John Fitzgerald on Centre Court, preceded by Steffi Graf's match against Terry Phelps.

Becker was scheduled for the second match on Court No. 1 against Sammy Giammalva, while Lendl met Michiel Schapers of the Netherlands on Court 2.

Dean's outlasts Dunlap in city baseball tournament

Chase Oilfield extended its record to 7-2 with a 14-7 win over Citizens Bank in Bambino Minor League action earlier this week.

Kory Harris had a triple and two singles and Bryan Waldrip added a single for Chase.

Rayford Young had a base hit for Citizens. Young also pitched. Harris and T.J. Davis combined for two innings of relief, giving up six walks, no hits, and two runs.

Matt Utzman and Devin Lemons played well on defense for Chase.

In an earlier game, Chase downed Keyes Pharmacy 16-15.

Winning pitcher was Matt Utzman. He didn't give up a hit while striking out six and walking 10.

Utzman also delivered a double and single along with Kory Harris. T.J. Davis had a triple.

John Callison had a double for Keyes.

The Titan Dodgers won a 26-15 decision over IRI last night in Rookie League (7-8 year old) action.

Titan ended the regular season with a 9-4 record.

Top hitters for the Dodgers were Jason Cerone with two home runs, Randall Ellis, triple and double, and Shawn Harris, triple and double. Other top hitters were Dottie Youngblood, a double; Kelley McClellan, a triple; Justin Roack, home run; Eric Green, a double; J.D. Woelfle, a triple; Brian Brown, a triple; Jason Velasquez, a triple, and B.J. Wilson, a double.

Gabe Wilbon and Jason Hughes had a triple each for IRI while Chris Hopper, Mike Garza and Steven Price each had a double.

As the Bambino Major League City Tournament rolls on, so does Dean's, still undefeated in tournament play after Thursday's 13-11 win over Dunlap.

Jason Downs collected the mound win by striking out seven batters and walking two, while allowing 11 runs on 13 hits.

Dwayne Nickleberry was the starting pitcher for Dunlap. He was relieved in the second inning by Justin Long, who was in turn relieved by Matt Garvin in the fourth. Nickleberry returned in the fifth to finish out the game. Dunlap pitchers gave up 13 runs on nine hits, with a combined five strike outs and 13 bases on balls.

Matt Winborne smashed the only triple of the night for Dean's. Jeremiah Downs hit a double and a single, while Greg Moore, Michael Hunt and Jason Westbrook each rapped a double. Jason Downs and Brandon Scott hit a single apiece.

Mathew Caswell, Micah Cobb, Andy Elsheimer and Matt Garvin had a single apiece for Dunlap. Justin Long hit two singles. In extra-base hits, Coby Waters cracked a double, and Dwayne Nickleberry smacked two doubles. Greg McDaniel and Seth Haskell each hit a double and a single.

Gerald Reyes, Matt Garvin and Greg McDaniel were Dunlap's defensive standouts. Dean's defensive stars were Justin Westbrook, Brad Baldrige, Michael Hunt, Jeremiah Downs, Chris Brawley and Jeremy Morris.

Dunlap, 2-1 in tournament play, will face Dyers', also 2-1 in the tournament, on Friday evening at 6:30. The winner of that game will challenge Dean's in the tournament championship Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Dyers' advanced to Friday's game against Dunlap following their 9-5 defeat of Glo-Valve on Thursday night. Jackie Gross was the winning pitcher, racking up five strike outs and three bases on balls, while giving up four runs on nine hits. Gross pitched four shutout innings before being relieved in the fifth by Clarence Reed, who finished the game.

Chad Dunham was credited with the loss, permitting nine runs on nine hits. Dunham struck out four batters and walked six.

Dyers' big bats included Jackie Gross, with a double and a single, Bryan Stout, who rapped a double, Clarence Reed, three singles, and Clint Lindsey, Jerry Belt and Cody Gross, who hit one single apiece.

For Glo-Valve, Rodney Scott swung the bat for two singles and a double, Dale Noble cracked three singles, and Clint Cox, Scotty Johnson and J.B. Horton each hit one single.

Dyers' turned two double plays, retiring the inning with runners stranded on base both times.

The game is currently being contested due to calls made by the umpire when Glo-Valve's coach visited the pitcher's mound.

Texas Furniture wrapped up the Bambino Minor League regular season title on Wednesday with a 38-1 romp on Davis Well Service.

Trent Davis brings his pitching record to 4-0 with Wednesday's mound win. He struck out eight, walked three, and yielded only one run one one hit.

Phillip Bernal struck out one batter, walked six, and relinquished 12 runs on seven hits to pick up the pitching loss.

Eddie Pickett rapped a single for Davis Well Service, their lone hit.

Brandon Baxter and Kevin Cheshier hit one single each, Trent Davis and Jerome Stone hit two singles apiece, Brian Phelps and Bobby Davis each smashed a triple, and Serenity King hit three singles. But J.J. Mathis captured the big bat crown for Texas Furniture, cracking a homer and two triples.

The Minor League City Tournament begins tonight and continues through next week.

Like he's done all season, Quincy Williams came through on the mound and at the plate as unbeaten New York Life closed the Babe Ruth (14-15 year olds) League season with a 13-1 win over Bowers Ranch last night.

Williams tossed a one-hitter at Bowers while going three for four at the plate and scoring three runs.

He struck out 12 and didn't allow a walk in the five-inning game.

Dwight Nickelberry was also two for three at the plate for the New Yorkers, who finished the season in first place with a 13-0-1 record. New York Life became the first Babe Ruth 14-15 team since 1984 to go unbeaten in league play. It was also the second consecutive league title for the Life team.

Bowers only hit came on a single by Bryan Ellis in the first inning.

In 36½ innings pitched this season, Williams struck out 68 batters.

Ryan Erwin and Jayson Williams made some outstanding defensive plays for New York Life. Steve Sanders played well on defense for Bowers.

Others playing for New York Life this season were Chuck Jones, David Vencill, Tony Bybee, Buddy Plunk, Richardo Armendaz and Cedrick Wilbon.

Wayne Barkley managed the Life team, assisted by Steve Seeley and Tim Connor.

Barkley will also coach the Pampa 15-year old all-star team which will participate in the District Tournament in Perryton July 6-9.

All-Star Team members are Quincy Williams, Jayson Williams, Tony Bybee, Chuck Jones, Dwight Nickelberry, Richardo Armendaz, David Johnson, Phillip Sexton, Zack Thomas, Donnie Medley, Justin Cross, Brandon Wells, Bryan Ellis, Chris Archibald, Steve Sanders, and alternates Tyson Beck and Doug Kidwell. Nelson Medley and Weldon Ellis are the assistant coaches.

In other games last night, Dixie downed Chase 9-5 in a Minor Bambino League game.

Winning pitcher was Clint Ferguson, who gave up three runs while striking out four, walking two and allowing two hits.

Leading hitters for Dixie were Blake Crockett, single and triple; Jeremy Barnes, a double, and Ryan Frogge, a single.

For Chase, Devin Lemons hit a solo home run and Bryan Waldrip added a single.

Dixie finishes the regular season tied with Holmes for second place, both with 8-2 records. Chase drops to fifth with a 7-3 record.

Axe falls on Martin again

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — The speculation that started the day Billy Martin was hired to manage the New York Yankees for the fifth time is over.

No, he didn't make it to the All-Star break. Owner George Steinbrenner fired Martin on Thursday, ending a short but stormy term punctuated by another bar fight, a feud with umpires, a suspension, rumors about his health, a recent disagreement with the front office and odd handling of his pitching staff.

Lou Piniella, who had been kicked upstairs to general manager last October to make room for Martin, returned to take Martin's place. Piniella had resigned as GM earlier this month and now joins Gene Michael and Bob Lemon as two-time managers for the Yankees.

In all, Steinbrenner has made 15 managerial moves since buying the team in 1973.

Also, coaches Art Fowler, Clete Boyer and George Mitterwald were reassigned and Michael and Stan Williams were hired as coaches. Williams marks the 22nd pitching coach shift under Steinbrenner.

"Things change quickly around here," Piniella said in a major understatement. "Here I am, back in the frying pan."

Piniella said Steinbrenner gave him a contract extension, but did not reveal the terms.

The Yankees got off to a good start under Piniella, ending a four-game losing streak Thursday night by beating Cleveland 4-3.

Under Martin this year, the Yankees also started well. They led the American League East for most of the season until going 2-7 on a recent road trip. They fell out of first place by losing the last three games to Detroit in the Tigers' final at-bat — making it five times New York has lost when it was one out from victory — and that was the final straw.

"I feel terrible for Billy, but what could I do?" Piniella said. "In fairness to him, there were a lot of injuries."

Martin, an excellent offensive manager, was able to work around injuries to stars Don Mattingly and Rickey Henderson, along with Willie Randolph, Don Slaught and others.

But Martin, who has always been criticized for his handling of pitchers, raised more questions this year. He stopped using reliever Dave Righetti, overused Cecilio Guante in the stopper role and erratically employed Tommy John.

Martin wound up with a seven-man rotation at times. He once used Rick Rhoden as a designated hitter, the only pitcher ever used that way, and that move worked.

Martin's plaque in monument park at Yankee Stadium proclaims him "A Yankee Forever."

"I'm still the best manager in baseball," Martin told the New York Daily News from the Manhattan hotel where he lived during the season.

"I'm a proud Yankee. I'm a Yankee and I'll leave like a Yankee," he said. "I'll try to handle it as best I can, but how many times can a man have his heart broken? I'm not a good loser. I never have been."

Martin also said the Yankees' injury problems contributed to his departure.

Martin, who reportedly has a contract as manager through next year and as a consultant through 1991, was offered reassignment to another job, but neither that job nor Martin's inclination to take it were immediately known. The paper said he will meet with Steinbrenner next week.

First-base coach Mike Ferraro, bullpen coach Jeff Torborg and batting coach Chris Chambliss will remain with the club in their current capacities.

Piniella led the Yankees to a 179-145 record in the 1986 and 1987 seasons, but Steinbrenner became angry with him and did not speak with him for weeks at a time.

The Yankees said in a press release that the change was mutually agreed to by Steinbrenner and Bob Quinn, who replaced Piniella as general manager.

Dates announced for Oil Patch golf scramble

This year's Perryton-Ochiltree Oil Patch Four-Man Scramble Golf Tournament, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, will be held Saturday and Sunday, July 9 and 10.

Free coffee and rolls are available each day at 8:00 a.m., and the competition will begin with a shotgun start at 9:00 a.m. daily.

On Saturday, teams will be allowed a 60 or over combined handicap, with a maximum handicap of 18 per player. On Sunday, teams are allowed an open combined handicap, with no limit. The field is limited to 42 paid teams each day.

Golf cart rentals will be available each day on a first come, first served basis.

The entry fee is $120 per team, and all entry money will be returned in gift certificates. Over $3,500 in prizes will be awarded daily, and the top six places of the day will be paid.

The closest shot to the pin on all par threes will receive one dozen golf balls. The longest drive each day will be awarded a $50 gift certificate. Any and all hole-in-ones on all par threes will be awarded a $200 gift certificate.

Refreshments will be available on the course, and all entrants are welcome to eat at the Hamburger Feeds on both days and attend the happy hour banquet on Saturday at 6:00 p.m. Both are free to all entrants and sponsors.

Evaluation of Sunday teams will follow the banquet.

The entry deadline is July 8 at 5:00 p.m. For more information call Danny Riddle at Danny's Pro Shop at 435-5381. Mailed entries should be addressed to Box 707, Perryton, Texas, 79070. Make checks payable to Chamber of Commerce. All gift certificates will be solely redeemed by Danny's Pro Shop.

Canadian plans tennis tourney

The 1988 Canadian Junior Open Tennis Tournament is scheduled Thursday, June 30, for participants age 14 and under, and Saturday, July 2, for participants age 18 and under, at the High School Tennis Courts.

On both June 30 and July 2, singles begin at 8:30 a.m., mixed doubles at 1:00 p.m., and doubles at 3:00 p.m. The finals may be played the following day for both age groups.

Entry deadline is 6:00 p.m. the day before the tournament. For those interested in competing in the doubles division, sign-up deadline for partners is two hours before doubles starting time.

The entry fee for singles participants is $7, and doubles teams pay $12. Interested persons may contact John Hiemstra at 1527 Willard Street, Canadian, Texas, 79014, or call (806) 323-8908.

Astros pick up Bell

CINCINNATI (AP)—Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose is downplaying the effect of losing a game to rival Houston at the hands of Buddy Bell, the veteran infielder the Reds traded last weekend to Houston.

Bell, 36, still suffering from a chronic knee injury, stroked a two-run double in the eighth inning Wednesday night in Houston off Reds starter Danny Jackson to break open a tie game and help the Astros to a 5-1 victory.

The Reds traded Bell, who said he plans to retire after this season, to give a full-time job at third base to Chris Sabo, the Reds rookie who has starred this season after fighting to win a roster spot in spring training. Bell was swapped for a minor-league player to be identified after the season.

Rose shrugged off reporters who asked whether Bell's game-winning hit had an extra sting for the Reds.

"I can't worry that every time Buddy Bell gets a hit, it's more punishing to us because we traded him," Rose said. "You will make a big deal out of it, but we're not going to. We did what we had to do. It just didn't work the last two nights."

Tuesday night, Bell hit a clutch double off Reds rookie starter Jack Armstrong to spark a Houston victory.

"It really means a lot when you help out early," Bell said. "It's nice to contribute, regardless of who it's against."

Bell, a native of Cincinnati whose big-league career dates to 1972, had hoped to finish his career in Cincinnati, where his father, outfielder Gus Bell, played for the Reds before him. But he is no stranger to Texas. He started in the major leagues with Cleveland in 1972 and played for the Texas Rangers from 1979 to 1985, when the Reds traded to obtain him.

"I feel like I'm in a pretty comfortable situation," said Bell.
