Pampa United Way hits campaign halfway mark but only 1/4 of goal met

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Though Pampa's United Way fund-raising drive has reached its halfway mark, only a quarter of the $336,455 goal has been met. United Way officials, however, say they hope to report a "big jump" in contributions at Thursday's check-in.

"We may be halfway through, but we're not halfway on the campaign, I can tell you that," said Katrina Bigham, director of the Pampa United Way. "We hope to have the big ones come in this time, like Celanese and Fluor-Daniel," she said, adding that last year more than $100,000 was contributed in one of the last weeks of the campaign.

United Way volunteer workers and the general public are invited to attend the check-ins on Thursdays.

If several major companies turn in their contributions, she said, it should make a "big jump" toward the United Way's goal.

At the Oct. 13 meeting, division chairmen reported a total of $20,828.40, Bigham said, bringing the total contributions to $86,501.56 or 25.71 percent of the goal.

Major Firms brought in $5,741.40; Commercial, $1,631; Individuals and Special Gifts brought in $1,502; Public, $1,496.50; Professional, $840; and Farm and Ranch, $305.

Commercial Division was given the door prize for the highest percentage of donations.

Professional matches totaled $850; Cabot match, $2,350, and Celanese match, $520, Bigham added.

"Wal-Mart was recognized for tripling the amount of United Way contributions from 1987, she said. Payroll contributions were doubled, she said, and the store also sponsored a United Way Day that brought in the remainder of the donation.

The American Red Cross furnished the refreshments for the Oct. 13 meeting with Pampa Community Day Care Center providing door prizes for the top two divisions.

A cello trio will present the entertainment for Thursday's check-in at 5 p.m. in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Center, 200 N. Ballard. Refreshments will be served by the Southside Senior Citizens Center. The Salvation Army will furnish door prizes.

The Pampa United Way distributes local charitable donations among 14 member agencies which include the Salvation Army, Pampa Family Services Center, American Red Cross, Gray County Child Welfare Board, Pampa Meals on Wheels, Pampa Sheltered Workshop, Girl Scouts-Quivira Council, High Plains Epilepsy Association, Boy Scouts-Golden Spread Council, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Tralee Crisis Center, Community Day Care Center, Genesis House and Southside Senior Citizens Center.

City, county still hunt fire plan

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Few sparks flew despite the subject of a 90-minute meeting between Gray County commissioners and the Pampa city commission Tuesday afternoon at City Hall — fire protection services in the county.

County and city representatives were unable to reach a compromise at the conclusion of the meeting.

Discussion also revealed that county commissioners did not agree among themselves on what route to take in providing fire protection for rural Gray County residents.

"I thought it was a good meeting. I was pleased we could have a very open and frank discussion with the city about this. But we certainly didn't arrive at a decision," Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said today.

"It was obvious that some of the (county) commissioners were for (a volunteer fire department) and others were not ready to commit to that," he said.

"I've got to see that we have a top-notch fire department before I'm in favor (of a county-wide volunteer fire department)," said

Gerald Wright, Precinct 3 commissioner.

"I'm not in favor of jeopardizing lives of people and property because we're not supplying the fire department we should be. I'm not willing to gamble on that," he added.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons and Precinct 2 Commissioner Jim Greene have both come out in favor of a volunteer fire department in the county, though their methods of forming the department have differed.

Judge Kennedy has supported Wright's views in public meetings. Precinct 1 Commissioner O.L. Presley has not expressed strong views in either direction.

County fire protection services have been simmering among the commissioners for some time, but the topic was brought to a boil when the City of Pampa Fire Department asked for a $20,000 per year increase from its $85,000 contract with the county last August.

County commissioners rejected the increase, leading Mayor David McDaniel and Commissioner Ray Hupp of the Pampa City Commission to offer a compromise solution in which the county would pay the $85,000 and provide in-kind services to make up the remaining $20,000.

Tuesday's discussion centered on this proposal, also rejected by the county commissioners.

In the proposal, the city asked that the county use its men and equipment to dig a 920x150x34-foot pit in the city landfill and a 500x350x20-foot lake bed at Pampa Lake near the Top o' Texas rodeo grounds.

Greene told the city Tuesday that using a contractor's rate of 65 cents per foot, the costs of those two projects to the county would total from $134,819 to $155,084 depending on the slope of the lake — a cost far higher than the city's estimate of $20,000.

'I feel like the city has made a very good effort to keep costs as close as we can.'

Though Kennedy said he liked the idea of working out an "in-kind" compromise solution, the city and county did not reach an agreement Tuesday on what services would equal the $20,000 difference asked for by the city fire department.

"I don't want to see the city losing any money," Simmons said.

"I don't mind helping at no cost if you'll treat us right on everything else."

"What I'm hearing is that the in-kind situation we proposed is not going to work out and we're back to the question of coming up with the difference between $105,000 and $85,000," said McDaniel.

"I feel like the city has made a very good effort to keep costs as close as we can," he added.

Greene proposed an agreement between the city and county in which the county would set up a volunteer fire department, but could call on the city for help at a pre-determined rate per call.

"We do have mutual aid agreements, a number of them," McDaniel said. "We could take that approach."

Pampa Fire Chief Bob Young bristled at Greene's suggestion that the county volunteer fire department could also help the city's fire department out when necessary.

"I think you would have more need for us than we would for you. We can take care of whatever comes up. We're doing that right now without the county," he said.

"I think we should explore the mutual aid agreements," McDaniel said. See FIRE, Page 2

School board considers classroom plan

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees are considering a plan to build 14 new classrooms in the district by the fall of 1989. The plan being considered would mean construction at three campuses.

During a special meeting Tuesday evening at Wilson Elementary School, the trustees considered two plans to end a long-term overcrowding problem at the city's six elementary campuses.

The 14-classroom plan would cost the district an estimated $700,460.

Under the plan termed most feasible, construction would include six new classrooms at Austin and four new classrooms each at Mann and Wilson elementaries.

The board decided against pursuing a plan to transform one elementary into an Early Learning Center for developmental classes due to the cost. Such a plan would also mean redrawing district lines.

Meeting with the school board was Lubbock architect Frank Wilson.

"I think logically it would be better to add on to the new portion of each facility. Some campuses may not allow that. We would have to then design carefully in case you later plan on demolishing the older structure," Wilson said.

He told the trustees that some of the elementary schools were over 60 years old and had far outlasted their life expectancy. He also pointed out that some of the buildings suffered hidden deterioration that would have to be addressed by the board in the coming years.

"There is no way we can do everything. We have to be very conservative," said Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of schools. "Seven hundred thousand dollars won't do everything we need to do, but it is a start."

Griffith and the board have decided not to pursue a plan to build up to 20 new classrooms, due to financial considerations.

Joe VanZandt, board president, told the trustees that the meeting was aimed at gaining a consensus opinion.

"We need to come to a consensus so the administration can put together details that we can vote on. Hopefully, we will keep the big picture before us and come up with a plan that is acceptable with the community," VanZandt said.

Wilson presented the board with drawings that outlined potential construction sites on all elementary campuses. The 14-classroom plan would mean that Pampa schools would meet the state mandated 22-1 student-teacher ratio by next fall.

"No matter what plan we choose, we need to give instructions to the architect soon or we'll be dead in the water," Griffith said.

He told the board that even with the new classes, buildings would still be at 100 percent capacity.

Several board members were concerned that even with the new classrooms, Mann Elementary would still be faced with using out-of-date portable buildings. They also briefly discussed the need for long-range plans to deal with problems in parking and antiquated boiler systems at most schools.

Jane Steele, assistant superintendent, told the board that the state accreditation team informed her that libraries on some campuses (Mann, Wilson and Baker) were not adequate by state standards.

The board discussed putting together a long-range plan to deal with capital improvements around the district.

"At one time the board had a wonderful capital improvement plan. But what's happened is we basically have had no improvement plan at all until this year," Griffith said.

The trustees will vote on the 14-classroom plan during their meeting in November. The next regularly scheduled board meeting will be Oct. 25 at Carver Center.

Absentee voting for election opens today

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Local election officials expect to see a heavy voter turnout for the November general election beginning with the opening of absentee voting today.

Anyone who is a registered voter living in Gray County is eligible to vote absentee, said Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter, adding that all restrictions on absentee voting have been lifted.

"You don't even have to have a reason why," she said.

Absentee voting for Gray County residents will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. each week day in the county clerk's office, second floor, Gray County Courthouse. From Oct. 31 through Nov. 4, the county clerk's office will be open during the noon hour also, Carter said. Absentee voting will end at 5 p.m. Nov. 4.

"We ask that voters would please have their voter's registration cards ready at the time they come to vote," Carter said. "We expect a heavy turnout and that will save time for them and for us."

Carter said she expects as many as 12,000 of the 13,940 registered voters in this county to turn out for the upcoming election.

"Since this is a presidential election year, I expect more to vote," she said. "Also, we have two local county commission races and a sheriff's race with two write-in candidates that I think will create more interest."

The county clerk said she predicted a possible turnout of 12,000 voters to state election officials based on the number of voters in the last presidential election, but added that the number may be closer to 11,000.

Handicapped voters may take the elevator in the Gray County Sheriff's Office to the second floor, Carter said. The elevator doors are wide enough to accommodate a wheelchair, she said. Anyone wishing to take the elevator to vote may go to the sheriff's office and someone will take them to the second floor in the elevator, she said.

Nov. 1 is the last day the county clerk's office will accept applications to vote by mail, Carter said. Gray County residents who are eligible to vote by mail must be more than 65 years old, ill or disabled, she said. For more information about applications to vote by mail, call the county clerk's office at 669-8004.

Today is the last day the clerk's office will accept applications to vote by mail for residents outside the county, Carter said. Applications must be mailed to an address outside the county, she said.

Thirty-nine of the 259 applications to vote by mail for residents presently living outside the county have returned ballots by Tuesday afternoon, the county clerk said.

Gray County commissioners Ted Simmons and Gerald Wright are building ramps for handicapped voters coming to the polls at Precinct 7 (Horace Mann Elementary School) and Precinct 9 (Woodrow Wilson Elementary School), she said. Once the ramps are built and installed, all voting places in Gray County will be in compliance with federal standards, she said.

Texan one of federal judge nominees awaiting Senate OK

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nomination of a Houston attorney to take a seat on the federal bench in one of the busiest court systems in the country has fallen victim to what Republicans claim is political gamesmanship by the Democrats.

The nomination of Melinda Harmon to a seat in the federal court's Southern District of Texas is one of 14 that fell into "purgatory" when the Senate recently shut down all chances of any more confirmations for the year.

Hearings were never held or votes were never cast on the 14, and Republicans say the result of not filling the empty seats may be that backlogs continue to swell in districts already designated "judicial emergencies."

Republicans say the Democrats held out on approving the nominations in hopes Democrat Michael Dukakis is elected president and can shape the courts more to their liking with other candidates.

"This year they're really playing politics with a lot of these names," a minority Senate staff member said.

Democrats, however, say the Republicans did the same thing in 1980, when Jimmy Carter was leaving office and Ronald Reagan was on the Republican ticket for president. Seventeen nominees were stranded in committee when Congress adjourned that year, they say.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, had recommended Harmon for the bench, and Reagan nominated her in June. No hearing was ever held, although Gramm's office contends that she was not a controversial candidate.

"I have never heard even a single word of opposition of any kind related to Melinda Harmon," said Larry Neal, a spokesman for Gramm.

A spokesman for Texas' other senator, Lloyd Bentsen, said the Democrat took no position on Harmon's nomination.

Yet other candidates whose nominations were submitted after Harmon's received hearings and were confirmed in the Senate; meanwhile, the Southern District of Texas struggles with an above average caseload.

Gramm's office said the criminal caseload in Houston is 87 pending criminal cases per judge, compared to the national average of 50 per judge. Criminal cases take priority over civil lawsuits.

The Southern District of Texas is certified as a judicial emergency by the Judicial Conference, the policy arm of the federal judiciary. Vacancies on federal benches of more than 18 months' duration are considered judicial emergencies, officials said.

In addition to the nominations held up in committee, another three are stalled on the Senate floor, and a Democratic staff member on the Senate Judiciary Committee blamed Republican objections.

As for the other 14, the staffer said they had problems with a home-state senator, substantive problems, or a combination of both.

"We have standards on what passes and what doesn't pass. We're not just going to roll these people through," the staffer said.

Another 11 nominations to federal appeals courts and district court seats passed the Senate on Friday night, the result largely of negotiations between Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joe Biden, D-Del., and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

"We thought they (all 25) were fine candidates," said Thurmond's spokesman, Christopher Simpson. "We would have preferred to get all the judges through and the Democrats preferred to get as few through as possible."

Presidio conferences to focus on trade

PRESIDIO (AP) — Developers of a plan to bring expanded port-of-entry facilities and a twin industrial park to Ojinaga, Mexico, and Presidio are working to attract financial backing.

The latest step in the drive to diversify and expand the twin towns' economy comes Thursday and Friday when political and business leaders from both sides of the border plan to meet and discuss the plan's merits.

Potential investors want to know whether it would make financial sense to build a maquiladora industrial park in Ojinaga and construct a related industrial park and support facilities in Presidio, said Frank Spencer, owner of a Pecos engineering company that drew up plans for the project.

The economies of Presidio, with a population of 4,000, and Ojinaga, with about 50,000, rely chiefly on cantaloupes, onions, chilis and illegal drug trafficking.

Spencer and others want the cities to diversify into legal, non-seasonal economies.

The twin towns are an ideal place to import fruits and vegetables from northwest Chihuahua state in Mexico, Spencer said Tuesday, adding that manufacturers might be interested in building factories in the area because so many of its people are unemployed or underemployed.

One feature of the proposed development would be refrigerated warehouses where Mexican produce could be stored for U.S. Customs inspection. Then the produce could be loaded aboard U.S. trucks for distribution.

"There's really a need for that kind of facility," Spencer said. "Right now, they're going through El Paso because there are no facilities in Presidio. Putting facilities there will save 300 miles and more."

Presidio County Judge Bobby Martinez shares Spencer's enthusiasm. "That would be a big economic boost to the area," he said. "It would create a lot of jobs. The labor force is there and it's a shorter route to the east."

Spencer put together this week's series of meetings in Ojinaga, Delicias, Camargo and Ciudad Chihuahua, Mexico, in which investors and politicians from Texas will get to meet with Mexican farmers and business leaders to discuss plans for the project and gauge how much support they would get.

The size of the project and its cost would depend on what kind of support it would get, supporters said.

Presidio has been gearing up for an expanded role in international commerce for years. Highway 61 northward to Marfa has been improved, and the 2-year-old international bridge just west of town has a six-lane customs checkpoint.

Because of light traffic, those customs checkpoints aren't nearly as congested as the ones in El Paso, where passenger cars often wait an hour or more to cross three international bridges into the United States and trucks sometimes lose a business day waiting to have their cargo inspected.

"We hope people who get tired of waiting over there can come our way," said Richard Slack, chairman of First Presidio Bank.

Spencer said the Ojinaga-Presidio port of entry could become vitally important in the next century, when control of the Panama Canal is turned over to that nation, which is headed by a man under a drug indictment in the United States.

Jessica McClure movie lingers in planning stage

MIDLAND (AP) — A television movie about the rescue of Jessica McClure from an abandoned well is little more than a gleam in the producer's eye, but he knows what angle the story will take.

"The story is about a town that found its soul, found its heart," said John Kander, executive producer for the movie. "Midland had lost its can-do spirit (with the fall of oil prices) and found its heart again through volunteers."

The movie, which is still in the planning stages and has not been scripted, will focus on the volunteers and city employees who rescued the 18-month-old girl Oct. 16, 1987.

"We're still at the point of organizing — how many characters we can put in it and still be very clear and true to the facts," Kander said Monday.

Jessica fell 22 feet down an 8-inch well Oct. 14. Hundreds of volunteers worked non-stop and rescued the little girl 58 hours after she fell in.

Jessica's parents and doctors say the girl is now a typical 2½-year-old except for a missing little toe and half a big toe on her right foot — casualties of a pressure wound from the long hours in the well.

Kander said scriptwriter David Eyre is researching the story now. Kander hopes the film can be broadcast sometime next fall. It will be shown on ABC and has a working title: Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure.

The scriptwriters' strike delayed the project, Kander said, adding that Eyre was hired after the strike ended this summer.

The movie was delayed even before the strike because of a squabble between two groups that wanted a say in how the story was told. A group of 11 Midland city employees formed to review movie offers, select the best and seek approval of Jessica's parents, Chip and Cissy McClure.

Another group — mostly blue-collar volunteers who walked off their job sites to drill the rescue shafts — sprang up and quickly worked out a deal with a producer, but the municipal employees' group rejected the proposal.

Mayor Carroll Thomas appointed a committee to review the movie deals, and the committee chose Interscope.

Kander said Interscope has reached an agreement with the McClures, but he would not discuss specifics. Some rescue workers will be paid for consulting on the script, he said.

"When you depict someone's story, you have to spend time to talk to them and in a sense, telling their story is an invasion of privacy," Kander said. "They deserve to be compensated. I feel that's totally appropriate. We're not talking big numbers here — there's a lot of people involved."

Yes, it's National Forest Products Week

The week of Oct. 16-22 is National Forest Products Week, a period set aside in appreciation of the importance of trees, the Texas Forest Service notes.

From the largely treeless Panhandle to the Rio Grande Valley and from El Paso to the "Piney Woods" of East Texas, trees and tree products contribute to the Texas economy and the personal well-being of Texans.

Windbreaks in West Texas and the Panhandle shelter homes and fields, thereby reducing residential utility bills and conserving valuable topsoil and soil moisture, TFS officials claim.

Urban forests provide shade, trap pollutants, filter noise and add to the livability of our cities.

Forests across the state provide homes and food for wildlife and support a growing outdoor recreation industry. Texas-grown Christmas trees, which are fresher than trees imported from other states, promise to capture an increasing share of the "natural tree" market in the state, the TFS says.

A look in a forest products industries directory published by the Texas Forest Service reveals that the wood-using industry in Texas extends across the state.

Most of the wood-using industry — the eighth largest employer among Texas manufacturing industries — is, indeed, located in East Texas; however, wood products manufacturing facilities also are located in Potter, Cameron, Tom Green, Ector, Hall, El Paso and other counties far removed from the East Texas timber belt.

Thanks to recent products innovations and marketing initiatives, new manufactured forest products are adding to the state's economic base, TES officials wrote.

One such innovation is the utilization of a statewide tree resource which has traditionally been considered no more than a pest: mesquite.

Mesquite cooking wood production has become a multi-million dollar industry in just the past few years. Also, mesquite wood products such as furniture, flooring, novelties and even briefcases are becoming quite popular, even in other states.

Though it is mostly confined to river areas in Texas, native Texas pecan timber is spread throughout the state. This timber resource is attracting more and more interest due to its availability and unique appeal.

In Texas a fledgling industry is growing in the form of southern pine roofing shakes. As opposed to traditional cedar shakes, pine shakes are manufactured in Texas using Texas-grown timber, thereby contributing to the Texas economy.

Pressure-treated with preservatives, the competitively priced pine shakes promise to last two to three times longer than cedar roofing.

A rather unusual forest product which is beginning to attract interest is shiitake mushrooms. These edible, perhaps even gourmet, mushrooms have been cultivated for years in Japan. Currently, the mushrooms are being produced in large volumes in Virginia and other eastern states.

Shiitake mushrooms are considered a forest product since they must be grown on logs, primarily oak. Mushroom cultivation consumes large quantities of oak pulpwood. One of the appealing aspects of this endeavor is that it can be done on a small scale without a large capital investment, TFS officials note.

With proper care and innovative use of our tree resources, Texas trees will continue to enrich our surroundings and produce useful wood products for future Texans as well, TFS officials say.

Feds: Exchange house laundered drug money

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Up to $6 million of a convicted smuggler's drug money was laundered through one of the Rio Grande Valley's many exchange houses, federal prosecutors alleged in a case being tried here.

Antonio Franco is accused in a 25-count indictment charging that he and Oscar Alvarez-Ortiz, owner of Oscar's Money Exchange in McAllen, smuggled drugs through the Rio Grande Valley from Mexico.

Prosecutors alleged the two laundered millions of dollars in drug profits through the money exchange house, known along the border as a "casa de cambio," where dollars are converted to pesos and vice versa.

According to the indictment, Franco and Alvarez also are charged with conspiracy and possession with the intent to distribute cocaine and marijuana, failure to file currency transactions and money laundering.

The indictment accuses them of operating a continuing criminal enterprise and a racketeer-influenced corrupt organization during 1987 through those alleged activities.

Franco is serving a 35-year prison sentence on a drug conviction in Illinois.

Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics investigator Joe Garza testified Tuesday that he and other officers discovered ledgers during a June 24, 1987, search of the exchange house indicating Franco made a single deposit of $1,299,100 that month.

The ledgers also showed other deposits made during the preceding four months of up to $979,860 each, totaling from $5 million and $6 million between February 1987 and June 1987.

Garza testified an employee at the exchange house told him Alvarez kept two sets of books on Franco's account, attributing deposits, withdrawals and balances to Franco in one set and labeling the other under Pemex, the Mexican government's oil monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos.

One of Franco's pilots was caught by federal agents earlier in the month. He agreed to become an informant in their probe of the marijuana and cocaine-smuggling operation at the tiny Filigonia Airport near Raymondville and also testified.

Federal prosecutors requested the pilot's name not be published out of concern for his safety.

The pilot, whose testimony lasted most of Monday, said he flew thousands of pounds of marijuana for Franco from Mexico to the airport.

From there, he often flew loads of drugs north to an area called Checkpoint Ranch, bypassing U.S. Border Patrol inspection stations, he testified.

In exchange for undercover work, the pilot said agents afforded him immunity from prosecution, returned to the pilot the $17,000 they seized from his home and allowed him to keep the money he earned from flying loads of drugs for Franco.

The pilot's testimony angered Franco's attorney, J.A. "Tony" Canales, who noted the informant was virtually rewarded for his activities as a drug smuggler.

Also named in the indictment is suspected drug smuggler Ricardo Garza, who remains a fugitive.

Pump house more like dream home

ADDISON (AP) — A brick dwelling nestled among fashionable homes in this North Dallas suburb is actually a pump house that municipal officials designed to blend in with the neighborhood.

"They were very considerate," a neighbor, Blaqueta Downs, said Tuesday. "I never really worried about what it would look like."

The pump station, which resembles a red brick ranch house, has a long porch bordered by six white columns, green shutters and shrubs out front, thick grass and a two-car garage on the side.

Newspaper carriers, confused by the station's appearance, have thrown papers at 5510 Celestial Drive.

Inside the building are three blue 500-horsepower pumps that help keep the water moving through Addison, home of some of the Dallas area's prime office space, where 9,000 people live but 60,000 work during the day.

The pumps are lined up in what would be the living room of any other home. In the back yard, sunk 25 feet into the ground, is a concrete water tank that can hold six million gallons.

Mrs. Downs moved to Celestial Drive in 1972. Then Addison, compared with neighboring Dallas, was still considered the country.

Two years ago, city officials told her they planned to put a big water tank and pump station right up the road from her house.

"You could never tell just from driving by," Mrs. Downs said. "When I give directions to our house out here, I say it's the third house on the right. No one ever questions whether or not that's a real house."

"We all moved out here for peace and quiet," she said. "I feel like we still have it. I feel like the city of Addison has done a good job protecting that feeling."

Director of Water Utilities Don Preece said Addison officials went the extra yard to make the pump house look good because most of the homes around it cost between $250,000 and $1 million.

"They would rather us spend a little more than have a sore thumb sticking up," said Preece. "It was worth making it look good." He said no one has complained about the cost of the pump station.

City officials say they haven't figured what the surroundings cost, although the entire cost of the project, started in 1986 and finished in July, was $3.6 million.

Mrs. Downs certainly isn't concerned with the cost.

"I can't really say anything negative about it," she said. "I feel like they've done a real good job."

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Other parties could have aided debates

The League of Women Voters did the American people a service by withdrawing from sponsorship of last week's presidential debate, highlighting the cynical manipulation of the preparation process by both campaigns. But the League missed a chance to strike a blow for even more openness. As long as it was withdrawing anyway, it could have called for inclusion of candidates of active and successful minor parties too.

The untold story of this yawner of an election campaign — untold by the major "national" media and ignored and downplayed by the two "major" parties — is that two minor parties have achieved ballot status for their presidential candidates in 45 or more states.

Ron Paul of the Libertarian Party and Lenora Fulani of the New Alliance Party could, at least theoretically, be elected. Their inclusion in the presidential debates would have made those exercises in evasion more interesting, more wide-ranging, more issue-oriented, and ultimately more serious.

Nevertheless, the Libertarian and New Alliance parties face a Catch-22 situation. The major media won't cover them unless they might be a factor in the outcome of the two-party snore. They have almost no chance of being a factor unless the major media cover them.

Minor parties seldom have enjoyed electoral success in the United States; none has done so since the Republicans displaced the Whigs in the 1840s. But minor parties have contributed more new ideas, more proposals for fundamental reform, than have the major parties, which are biased toward not rocking the boat.

If a debate is to serve the American people rather than the narrow interests of the two major-party candidates, it should be open to candidates of minor parties. To keep it from being unwieldy, it might well be restricted to candidates who have achieved ballot status in enough states to have a theoretical chance of winning, or some other measurement of seriousness.

This year two parties have done enough under any reasonable criterion to be included in the dialogue about the shape of post-Reagan America. The League of Women should have mentioned this.

Thinking hard on gun control

WASHINGTON — For the past two months, ever since columnist Carl Rowan was arrested, I have been thinking long and hard about gun control laws.

My melancholy thought is that laws attempting to control the sale and possession of handguns are largely exercises in futility. Maybe some legislative genius will come up with a good answer to a serious problem, but no such genius is yet in sight.

As a good part of the world is aware, Carl was arrested and tried for violation of the District of Columbia's gun control law. His trial ended in a hung jury. Last week the district abandoned further prosecution. My friend is now free of a charge that might have sent him to prison for a year, but he has suffered an ordeal that was wholly unwarranted.

The circumstances are well-known. Rowan was awakened at 2 o'clock in the morning by what he believed was the sound of an intruder's tampering with a window. He armed himself with a pistol and called the police.

He testified that before the police could come to his assistance, he confronted a half-naked young man who lunged toward him. He fired once, nicking the trespasser on his hand. It turned out that the intruder and several of his companions had climbed over a wall to go skinny-dipping in Carl's swimming pool. The intruders got off with a few hours of community service. Carl went on trial.

The district's law is ferocious. It absolutely prohibits a citizen from owning an unregistered gun, and it makes it impossible for the citizen to register a weapon. We may judge the effectiveness of the law by noting that the District of Columbia is racking up homicides at the rate of one a day — and virtually all of these involve concealable handguns.

The law doesn't catch criminals. It catches Carl Rowan. The law is a farce, an absurdity, a manifestation of legislative imbecility. And it is typical of most such well-intended statutes now on the books throughout the nation.

The Washington Post, commenting on the incident, began an editorial in this fashion: "It's obvious that columnist Carl Rowan should not have had an unregistered gun in the house." Obvious to whom? It certainly is not obvious to millions of Americans who believe they have a right to defend their homes and their loved ones from criminal assault.

While Carl's trial was pending, the House of Representatives took up what became known as the Brady Amendment to the omnibus drug control bill. The amendment would have established a nationwide seven-day waiting period for the purchase of handguns from licensed dealers. On Sept. 15 the House rejected the amendment by a vote of 228-182.

Immediately an outcry arose that the 228 members who opposed the amendment had been bribed or intimidated by the National Rifle Association. Let me acknowledge the NRA's political clout, but let me suggest an alternative view: The amendment fell because members conscientiously concluded that its terms were unwise.

Defenders of the seven-day waiting period said it would give police an opportunity to check on prospective purchasers. Was the buyer an escaped convict? A felon on probation?

Peter Rodino of New Jersey, who supported the amendment, told the House that New Jersey State Police "have caught 10,000 convicted felons trying to buy handguns in the years it has had a waiting period." If true, New Jersey must be home to the most stupid felons who ever walked a street by night.

That was one patent flaw in the Brady amendment. No self-respecting criminal would ever have given a dealer his right name and address. A study a few years ago from the National Institute of Justice found that only one in every six felons purchased his gun from a dealer. The implacable fact is that criminals can obtain handguns with ease. It is the honest citizen who runs into trouble.

The amendment had other flaws. Though sponsors denied it, the amendment would have led in time to nationwide gun registration. It would have piled a mountain of mostly unproductive paperwork on the backs of police.

Rep. Edward F. Feighan of Ohio said the proposal would be "an act to end senseless drug violence." Rodino said it would make it harder "for the criminal and the unbalanced to get guns." Nonsense.

In theory a waiting period might deter an unknowable number of suicides and impulse killings. That is a laudable goal. But would this effort at gun control deter violent crime? The laughter you hear is the drug dealer's snicker.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 19, the 293rd day of 1988. There are 73 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: A year ago, the stock market crashed. Amid frenzied selling, the Dow Jones Industrial Average plunged 508 points, its worst-ever one-day decline. On the New York Stock Exchange, more than 604 million shares changed hands.

On this date: In 1765, the Stamp Act Congress, meeting in New York, wrote a declaration of rights and liberties.

In 1781, British troops under Lord Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown, Va., as the American Revolution neared its end.

In 1812, French forces under Napoleon Bonaparte began their retreat from Moscow.

In 1864, Confederate Gen. Jubal A. Early attacked Union forces at Cedar Creek, Va. The Union troops were able to rally under Gen. Phil Sheridan and defeat the Confederates.

In 1951, President Harry S. Truman signed an act formally ending the state of war with Germany.

A change of diet could help

problems — with a change of diet.

Foods that most frequently tend to cause hyperactivity in some children include milk, wheat, corn, citrus, yeast, sugar, food coloring and artificial flavors, and chocolate. While these are the most common allergens, some individuals do not tolerate grapes, peanuts, apples, pineapple, tomato, oats.

As little as one teaspoon of sugar was enough to send one 3-year-old girl into tantrums.

"Withdrawal" from an irritant food may take five to seven days. But when a child has been on a diet excluding specific allergens for a period of time, he may immediately revert to hyperactivity, hoarseness, nervousness, stuffy nose or other symptoms, with even a few bites of the problem food.

Historically, physicians used limes to treat scurvy before they knew why. They washed their hands to prevent childbed fever before the knew precisely how and why it worked.

It may be years before we understand why individuals react differently to different foods. Meanwhile, a growing legion of family physicians see nothing to lose and much possible benefit in tailoring food intake to individual allergic susceptibility.

Paul Harvey

change of diet that cannot possibly be harmful, it's worth a try. And his results over a period of 30 years have been impressive.

He, too, was at first a skeptic until he began to see evidence that the behavior of many maladjusted children improved when certain foods were eliminated from their diets — with some it was milk; with some, corn; with some, wheat; with some, eggs.

Complicating controlled studies is the fact that an individual's sensitivities are likely to change from time to time. Nonetheless, physicians have successfully treated problems as varied as headache, abdominal pain, bedwetting and recurrent colds — as well as hyperactivity, emotional, behavioral and learning

The summer of 1988 will also be remembered as an extraordinary season for allergies. In addition to the usual "hay fever," causing swollen eyes and runny noses, there was an assortment of airborne pollens and pollution which — in some people — caused lethargy, headaches and other discomfort.

And then there are "allergies" and other sensitivities.

Nobody is certain whether Americans are becoming more sensitive to certain foods or whether the foods themselves are altered by preservatives, pesticides and processing.

Whatever is the case, an increasing number of complaints are being treated by allergists and other physicians.

For the Journal of Learning Disabilities, Dr. William Crook, Jackson, Tenn., allergist and pediatrician, wrote that many hyperactive children — or dull children, even children considered "stupid" — may respond, sometimes dramatically, to a change of diet.

Dr. Crook acknowledges that the evidence is mostly empirical and many professionals are reluctant to embrace any therapy that lacks scientific documentation. Nonetheless, he argues, when the treatment is as simple as a

Reasons for nation's nursing shortage

By ROBERT WALTERS

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (NEA) — Even though the revelation came more than a decade ago, Rosalie Fennell still remembers the incident that forced her to recognize how abysmally bad the salaries are for her and other nurses.

It occurred during a 1975 trip to a supermarket. "I had been working as a professional nurse for five years and I discovered that this check-out person was making more than I was," she says with more than a trace of bitterness.

Dee Christensen, also a hospital nurse here, has another complaint. "Either you work all your life on the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift or you're constantly rotated between shifts," she says.

"I work alternate weekends and seven out of 10 holidays during the year," adds the nursing veteran of 23 years. "Nurses don't lead normal lives."

Poor compensation and insensitive scheduling are only two of the grievances held by those already engaged in nursing and contributing to the reluctance to enter the profession among those considering career alternatives. As a result, the nation now faces a severe shortage of nurses.

That lack of nurses "is real, widespread and of significant magnitude," concludes a report recently issued by the 25-member Commission on Nursing established by the federal government's Department of Health and Human Service.

Hospitals, which employ 68 percent of all nurses, have been most seriously affected. The commission notes that "30 percent of hospitals in urban setting and 15 percent of rural hospitals report that they were forced to close beds temporarily in 1987 due to the nurse shortage."

But the shortage also adversely affects nursing homes, which employ 8 percent of all nurses; community public health facilities, where another 7 percent of all nurses work; and hospices, clinics, long-term care centers and other facilities that account for the remaining 17 percent of the nursing work force.

Even though an increasing number of men are entering the field, 97 percent of all nurses are women. This is significant because the current crisis is directly related to society's traditional devaluation of women's work and to the struggle against sex discrimination.

"When I graduated from high school, there were few options open to young women — teaching, nursing, getting married and, if you were Catholic, being a nun," notes Norma Miller, a nurse in the intensive care unit of a Council Bluffs hospital.

As with most other forms of "women's work," nursing long has been ill-compensated, especially in terms of salary increases for those with experience and seniority.

The average starting salary for nurses, accountants and computer programmers is about $21,000 per year. But the average maximum for nurses is only slightly more than $29,000, compared with almost $43,000 for computer programmers and $61,500 for accountants.

That compression of the wage scale is the most important issue for many current and potential nurses who reach the peak of earning power and professional status within five to 10 years after starting in the profession.

Indeed, many hospitals and physicians long encouraged that salary progression, viewing nurses as disposable. When they left — often the victims of exhaustion, stress and tension — they could be readily replaced by another generation of high school or college graduates.

Today, however, young women can opt instead for careers in law, business or other professions where "they can make a lot more money, have more status and more autonomy," notes an official of the American Nurses' Association.

Thus, resolving the current crisis requires much more than palliative measures to fill existing vacancies. Unless the issues of pride, dignity and self-esteem are confronted, the nursing shortage could become critical and chronic.

Stock traders yawn at anniversary, worry about business

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The world faced the first anniversary of the worst stock panic in history today with cynicism, sullenness and the long-awaited government approval of automatic trading halts designed to foil another crash.

"It's business as unusual," said Arthur D. Cashin, a PaineWebber Group Inc. broker and governor on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, where prices eked to a post-crash high Tuesday despite less-than-bullish attitudes.

Trading remained so slow that dozens of brokers in the nation's biggest stock market stood around with little to do.

"If there's no fire, all you see is guys polishing the engines," Cashin said. "There's a lot of people not participating, a lot of people on the sidelines. I would say the mood is sober, bordering on the sullen."

The atmosphere in the heart of this world financial center contrasts sharply with the heart-stopping, stupefying frenzy of a year ago, when prices tumbled out of control and shattered a five-year bull market that only a month earlier had shown little sign of fading.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished Oct. 19, 1987, with a record 508-point loss from 2,246.73 to 1,738.74, a 22.6 percent decline. By comparison, the percentage decline on Oct. 28, 1929, was 12.8 percent.

More than 600 million shares changed hands last year, nearly double the previous record.

It was a jolt that shook the financial world and threatened to bleed into the nation's banking system. Some analysts even said it augured an economic depression, and many raised fears of recession or, at least, uncertain times ahead.

Since then, forecasts of recession have receded, while the Dow average and other key indices have recovered somewhat.

Late Tuesday, a buying burst lifted the Dow average 19.38 points to 2,159.85, its highest post-crash close.

But many Wall Street professionals say the stock market remains uninspired, even though some of the best-known firms have exhorted investors to buy. They blame continuing uncertainty about the direction of interest rates and the nation's general economic health.

"I think people on Wall Street are more concerned about the economy," said Earl Ellis, a market maker on the New York exchange floor. "If you could assure people that the economy would be good, this market would take off."

The exchange, alarmed about post-crash investor apathy and underlying fear of another crash, joined with other U.S. financial markets in July in proposing "circuit breakers" — coordinated trading halts and price limits to avoid another panic.

Late Tuesday, on the eve of the crash anniversary, the Securities and Exchange Commission approved these proposals, as expected.

The measures, approved on a one-year experimental basis, provide for a one-hour trading halt across markets when the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunges by 250 points or more from the previous day's closing. It calls for a two-hour halt when the Dow falls by 400 points.

Coordination among markets was a key recommendation by a White House panel appointed to study the crash. But it took months for the New York exchange and other markets to finally agree on how to do it.

"There's a time to be stubborn and there's a time to be accommodative and get some stuff done," Exchange Chairman John Phelan told reporters at a briefing earlier this month, when he talked about the circuit-breaker proposals. "I think this last year has been a time to be accommodating."

Biologists view whale surfacing in breathing hole.

More help on way for whales

By BRUCE BARTLEY
Associated Press Writer

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Eskimo whalers wielding chain saws donated by an oil company cut new breathing holes for three beleaguered whales trapped two weeks in thick ice near the top of the world.

The Eskimos on Tuesday cut three holes 75 yards apart in a line leading away from the larger of two small breathing pools the California gray whales have used since being stranded in the Beaufort Sea while migrating south.

The rescuers, who received a telephone pep talk Tuesday from President Reagan, hope the new holes will influence the endangered mammals to move in the direction they must travel if they are ever to escape their icy corral.

"It'll be interesting to see if it works," North Slope Borough biologist Craig George said as he dodged the slushy spray from chain saws chewing through foot-deep ice 18 miles northeast of this Inupiat Eskimo community.

Standard Oil of Alaska donated three chain saws, and planned to send a digging machine by helicopter to speed the work.

Meanwhile, a long-shot attempt to free the whales with an icebreaking barge was delayed until today.

Two Alaska Army National Guard Skycrane helicopters have been rigged to tow the 185-ton hovercraft barge from Prudhoe Bay, an oil field about 200 miles southeast, in a tricky trip across Arctic Ocean ice.

The trip, which is expected to take 25 to 40 hours, was to have started Monday, but was delayed when the barge got stuck in the ice and was slowed again by refueling.

The barge was moved a short distance from its dock Tuesday night, but one of the helicopters encountered some resistance.

Crews planned to work through the night to lighten the barge by 70 tons, National Guard spokesman Mike Haller.

Haller said that if the barge could not be moved by noon today (4 p.m. CDT), officials would consider alternatives.

Officials hoped to use the barge to carve a 40-foot path to open water and freedom for the whales. The barge pulverizes ice with its bulk and the fans that provide lift.

Leads in the ice that were as close as five miles last weekend have been plugged by shifting winds, record low temperatures and drifting ice.

By Tuesday night the nearest open water was believed to be 100 miles away, officials said.

The rescue effort, complicated by the harsh arctic conditions, has become a race against time.

The young whales are tired, and at least one has pneumonia. Their barnacle-encrusted snouts have been worn raw from grating on the jagged ice surrounding the breathing holes. The animals were in shallow water only a few hundred feet from shore.

Last week, ice around the holes was so thin biologists did not dare walk on it. By Tuesday, with a record low temperature of minus 13 degrees, the ice was 18 to 24 inches thick.

The whales are 24 to 30 feet long, but have shown no inclination to smash their way to freedom.

Their plight has drawn international attention.

On Tuesday, Reagan telephoned Army National Guard Col. Tom Carroll, commander of the rescue, to wish him well.

Volunteer poll: Poor give more and rich give less

By CRISPIN Y. CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donations to charity decrease as incomes increase, according to a Gallup poll which says low- and moderate-income Americans are more generous than their upper-income counterparts.

"Giving and volunteering in America is a stark contrast between heart-warming generosity and bone-chilling selfishness," said Brian O'Connell, president of the Independent Sector, a non-profit coalition of 650 corporate, foundation and volunteer organizations which commissioned the survey.

The March survey of 2,775 adults 18 years and over produced profiles of the most and least generous Americans according to income, family status, church membership, community size and region.

Those most likely to make contributions and volunteer their time were members of low- to moderate-income families, churchgoers, rural residents and Midwesterners.

The least generous were the affluent, single individuals, the non-churchgoing, city dwellers and Southerners.

"Contrary to popular opinion, the well-to-do in America cannot be described as generous," O'Connell said.

O'Connell said at a press conference Tuesday that contributing households with incomes below $10,000 gave an average of 2.8 percent of their income to charity. Those with incomes from $10,000 to $29,999 gave 2.5 percent, while those between $30,000 and $49,999 gave 2 percent.

Contributing households with incomes between $50,000 to $74,999 gave 1.5 percent; those earning $75,000 to $99,999 donated 1.7 percent, and those with incomes of $100,000 or more gave 2.1 percent.

Overall, the survey found that 70 percent of the households in America make charitable contributions.

The average amount of annual contributions per household was $790.

Members of almost half of the households — 45 percent — also volunteered time to charitable activities. The average per household was 4.7 hours a week in 1987.

Extrapolated to the entire U.S. population, the figures would translate into 80 million people giving a total of 19.5 billion hours worth $150 billion," O'Connell said.

The study indicated a link between religion and charitable support, with 79 percent of church members contributing money and 51 percent volunteering time. Among non-members, 55 percent made donations and 33 percent volunteered time.

However, more than one in five of the church members — 22 percent — contributed only to religion and not to any other charities.

Eugene C. Dorsey, head of the group's "Give Five" campaign to increase volunteerism, said the study shows it is possible to reach the organization's goal of motivating Americans to donate at least 5 percent of their incomes.

But Dorsey, who also serves as president of the Gannett Foundation, said the findings also confirm the need for establishment of "a basic standard of what we owe to our communities."

Virginia A. Hodgkinson, the coalition's vice president for research, said its previous surveys had missed the link between rising income and decreasing support for charity. She said the earlier studies measured only the amount given without regard to what percentage of income the donated amount represented.

She said the profiles of the most and least generous Americans were based on the averages for weekly volunteerism, contributions as percentage of income and the percentages of family members who were volunteers.

Using this formula, the Midwest was first with individual volunteers donating 2.5 hours of their time and 1.5 percent of their income, followed by the West (2.4 hours, 1.5 percent of income), the East (2.0 hours, 1.2 percent) and the South (1.8 hours, 1.7 percent).

Although those questioned in the South reported giving a greater percentage of earnings to charity, Hodgkinson said this group had a lower overall proportion of households with volunteers and fewer volunteers overall in the general population.

Americans win Nobel in physics

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Three Americans won the Nobel Prize in physics today for their work with particles that are so tiny they can pass through any surface.

The Royal Academy of Sciences cited Leon Lederman, Melvin Schwartz and Jack Steinberger for their work with neutrino beams.

The announcement said their work was carried out in the 1960s and "opened entirely new opportunities for research into the innermost structure and dynamics of matter."

The academy also cited their discovery of the muon neutrino.

Neutrinos, the most common particles in nature, are constituents of matter so tiny that they have "ghostlike" qualities that enable them to pass through any surface.

"The contribution now awarded consisted among other things of transforming the ghostly neutrino into an active tool of research," the announcement said.

Lederman, 66, is director at the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory in Batavia, Ill.

Schwartz, 55, is a former professor at Stanford University and now president of Digital Pathways, Inc., in Mountain View, Calif.

Steinberger, 67, was born in Bad Kissingen, West Germany, and is an American citizen. However, the academy officially lists his nationality as Swiss. He has been a physicist at CERN, in Geneva, since 1968.

On Tuesday, Maurice Allais, whose ideas on balancing supply and demand helped rebuild the French economy after World War II, won the Nobel Prize for economics.

130 die in Indian airliner crash; 34 killed in another crash

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A Boeing 737 slammed into the ground and exploded today as it attempted to land at a fog-enshrouded airport in central India, killing 130 people, authorities said. Five people survived.

About an hour later, a Fokker Friendship passenger plane crashed in torrential rains in eastern India, killing all 34 people aboard, news reports said.

The 737, operated by Indian Airlines, was making a final approach near Ahmadabad airport when it crashed, said Capt. J.D. Rao, operations manager for the airline in Bombay.

The twin-engine aircraft struck the ground while trying to land in heavy fog at about 7:40 a.m. (9:10 p.m. CDT Tuesday), but the cause was not known, said G.K. Rawal, police inspector at the airport.

The jet was carrying 129 passengers and a six-member crew from Bombay to Ahmadabad, about 500 miles southwest of New Delhi. Rawal said 130 bodies had been recovered.

Five survivors pulled from the burning aircraft were expected to live, he said.

According to the passenger manifest released in Bombay, the victims included six foreigners: two Japanese, two Germans and two whose nationality could not be immediately determined.

Authorities said identification was difficult because the bodies were badly burned.

State-run television, in a special news bulletin, showed rescue workers pouring through the debris, twisted luggage and smoldering chunks of wreckage scattered across a field.

The Fokker Friendship crashed en route from Silchar to Guwahati in Assam state, killing the 31 passengers and three crew members, the Press Trust of India reported.

The agency said the plane belonged to the domestic carrier Vayudoot and that radio contact with the aircraft was lost at 8:53 a.m. when it was about 19 miles from Guwahati and about 960 miles east of New Delhi.

Harsh Vardhan, managing director of Vayudoot, said the plane lost contact with the Guwahati tower five minutes before its scheduled landing, but he could not confirm the plane crashed.

There also were conflicting reports about the crash of the 737. Manmohan Singh, Ahmadabad airport police director, said the aircraft barely missed a shantytown near the airport. Residents heard an explosion and rushed from their houses in panic.

Wreckage and bodies were scattered over a mile, he said.

An Ahmadabad airport controller said the jet had started its final approach when it crashed near an industrial area and exploded. No one on the ground was hurt, he said.

The plane exploded on impact, said the controller, speaking on condition of anonymity. Rawal, however, said the plane exploded in the air.

News reports said the aircraft fell from the sky, hit a tree and then a high-voltage power line and exploded.

Indian Airlines, the domestic carrier, has come under fire recently for its poor management and maintenance record and frequent delays. Today's crash was the 16th by an Indian Airlines carrier in the past 25 years.

The last Indian Airlines crash occurred on June 19 at New Delhi airport. Everyone on board survived. An investigation showed the pilot forgot to lower the plane's landing gear.

Boeing 737s have come under scrutiny since an Aloha Airlines aircraft broke apart in April and made a miraculous landing with a 20-foot section missing from its fuselage. A flight attendant was killed.

Joan leaves devastation in Columbia

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The government declared a state of emergency and began evacuating coastal residents as Hurricane Joan spun toward Central America after leaving a trail of devastation in Columbia.

At least 50 people were dead, injured or missing in Columbia and tens of thousands of homes were destroyed or flooded, officials said.

Packing 95-mph winds and puzzling forecasters with its erratic course, Joan churned toward the Colombian island resort of San Andres, 500 miles north of the Colombian coast.

Joan raked the northern Colombian coast with heavy rains and winds Monday, triggering floods that inundated and destroyed homes.

In the northern town of Carmen de Bolivar, 360 miles north of Bogota, the capital, at least three people were killed Monday and about 38 were missing, Victor Leon Mendoza of the Bolivar state government said.

A child was killed and seven people injured Monday in the town of Uribia on Colombia's Guajira Peninsula, police said in a communique. About 75 percent of the homes in Uribia, a town of 45,000, were destroyed or flooded, police said.

Camilo Cardenas, president of Colombia's National Emergency Committee, said in a news release that about 200 homes in Carmen de Bolivar were destroyed or flooded.

Manuel Obando, president of Costa Rica's National Emergency Committee, predicted the brunt of the killer storm would hit Costa Rica early today.

The government evacuated homeless elderly people and children and 86 hospital patients from Puerto Limon, an Atlantic coast port city of 8,000 people about 105 miles southeast of the capital, San Jose, Obando said.

He said 167 inmates also were evacuated from a prison and that authorities were prepared to move another 30,000 coastal residents inland as sheets of rain lashed the coast.

"If by midday we observe that there is imminent danger, we'll begin to evacuate," Obando said.

Heavy rains pushed the Reventazon and Parritas rivers over their banks near the Pacific coast port of Puntarenas, 80 miles northeast of San Jose, radio reports said.

In Panama, a hurricane watch was in effect for the north coast from Punta San Blas to Boca del Toro and for San Andres.

Long lines formed at supermarkets and pharmacies in Panama City, the capital, as people heeded warnings to stock up on supplies. The government declared a state of alert.

"Stay calm, don't become alarmed and don't panic," Colon Mayor Juan Fidel Macias told residents of that Atlantic port in a radio broadcast.

Traffic in the Panama Canal was not expected to be disrupted, said Panama Canal Commission spokesman Franklin Castellon.

In Nicaragua, officials were uncertain what impact Joan would have. "We can't say if the storm will directly affect Nicaragua at this moment," said Pilar Cruz.

Autumn is the time to make a tangy apple gelatin salad

Pick apples off the tree and then use them in a tangy apple gelatin ring. Chopped walnuts add a nutty taste to the salad.

In this recipe for Topsy-Turvy Pizza, the filling cooks in the baking dish while the crust browns on top. After baking, the pizza is inverted onto the serving dish and the filling is poured inside.

Pizza bakes upside down

Upside-down pizza? No fooling, your family will flip over its great flavor. A package of hot roll mix makes enough crusts for eight pizzas, so freeze four for another time.

To freeze them, place crusts on a baking sheet in the freezer for about 1 hour. Then stack with a square of wax paper between the crusts. Place in a moisture- and vaporproof bag and seal. To use frozen dough, thaw 1 hour in the refrigerator or 30 minutes at room temperature.

TOPSY-TURVY PIZZA

- One 16-ounce package hot roll mix
- 2 tablespoons toasted wheat germ
- 1 cup chopped broccoli
- One 8-ounce can pizza sauce
- ½ teaspoon Italian seasoning, crushed
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1½ cups chopped cooked turkey or chicken (8 ounces)
- 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese (4 ounces)
- Milk

Prepare hot roll mix according to package directions for pizza dough, adding the wheat germ.

Let dough rest according to package directions.

Meanwhile, cook broccoli, covered, in a small amount of lightly salted water about 2 minutes or until just crisp-tender; drain. In a medium saucepan combine pizza sauce, Italian seasoning and pepper. Bring to boiling. Stir in turkey and vegetables.

Lightly grease insides and outer rims of four 10- to 12-ounce baking dishes. Sprinkle Parmesan cheese on bottoms of dishes. Divide mozzarella cheese evenly among dishes. Spoon turkey-vegetable mixture into dishes. Divide dough into 8 portions. On a lightly floured surface roll or pat out each portion to extend ¼ inch beyond edges of baking dishes. Place 1 portion on top of each dish. Brush with milk.

Place remaining 4 portions of dough on a baking sheet. Freeze 1 hour or until firm. Seal, label and freeze for later use. (To thaw, let dough stand at room temperature 30 minutes or in refrigerator for 1 hour.)

Bake pizzas in a 375°F oven about 15 minutes or until dough is light brown. To serve, immediately loosen crusts and invert pizzas onto serving plates. If necessary, carefully spread filling to edges of crusts. Makes 4 servings.

Indulge in rich, nutty torte

WALNUT MOCHA TORTE

- 1 cup walnuts or pecans
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- 4 eggs
- ¼ cup sugar
- Mocha Frosting (Recipe follows)
- Walnut or pecan halves

Grease and lightly flour two 8x1½-inch round baking pans. Combine the nuts, flour and baking powder. In a blender container blend eggs and sugar, covered, until smooth. Add nut mixture.

Cover; blend until smooth. Transfer to pans. Bake in a 350°F oven 20 to 25 minutes or until done. Cool 10 minutes on wire racks. Remove from pans; cool. Spread Mocha Frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake. Top with nut halves. Chill several hours. Makes 8 servings.

Mocha Frosting: In a small mixer bowl dissolve 1 teaspoon crushed instant coffee crystals in 1 cup whipping cream; beat on low speed until slightly thickened. Add ½ cup sugar and ¼ cup unsweetened cocoa powder; beat until thick. Makes 2½ cups.

By NANCY BYAL

To unmold a gelatin salad perfectly, take a tip from Janet Herwig, food stylist for Better Homes and Gardens magazine. She slips the tip of a small paring knife or spatula between the surface of the gelatin and the mold, going all around the edge of the mold — including around the center of a ring mold.

Janet dips the mold to the rim in warm — not hot — water for a few seconds. Then she tilts the mold slightly to ease gelatin away from one side. She continues to tilt and rotate the mold so the gelatin loosens all the way around.

Next, she centers an upside-down serving plate over the mold and inverts the plate and mold together. She shakes the mold gently, then lifts it off.

TANGY APPLE RING
2 cups applesauce
One 6-ounce package lemon-

flavored gelatin
One 12-ounce can (1½ cups) lemon-lime carbonated beverage
1 teaspoon finely shredded orange peel
¼ cup orange juice
1 cup chopped apple
2 tablespoons chopped walnuts
Mayonnaise or salad dressing (optional)
In a medium saucepan heat applesauce just until it bubbles. Stir in gelatin. Cook and stir over medium-low heat until gelatin is dissolved. Remove from heat. Cool to room temperature. Stir in carbonated beverage, orange peel and orange juice. Chill until partially set (consistency of beaten egg whites). Stir in chopped apple and walnuts. Turn into a 4- or 5-cup ring mold. Chill until firm. To serve, unmold onto serving plate. Serve with mayonnaise or salad dressing, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

4-H awards presented at banquet

Vested interest

Laura Williams and Tamara Lane received the Gold Star Award, the top county award presented to 4-H members, at the 1988 Gray County 4-H Awards Banquet, held Saturday evening.

The award is presented each year to two outstanding 4-H members who have been active in 4-H for at least three years and who submit a completed 4-H recordbook. This year's winners were determined on the basis of a recordbook score and a personal interview score, with each criteria offering a possible 50 points.

Williams, 14, is the daughter of Bob and Margaret Williams and is a four-year member of 4-H. She has completed projects in consumer education, foods/nutrition, clothing, breads, home environment and leadership.

Along with her partner, Shelley Vinson, Williams won first place this year in the state home environment method demonstration contest, and her consumer education recordbook placed fourth at state. She has served as treasurer and council delegate for E.T. 4-H Club, has been a junior and teen leader in 4-H projects and has participated in numerous 4-H community service projects.

Lane, 16, also a member of E.T. 4-H Club, is the daughter of Mary Lou and Jerry Lane. She has been an active 4-H member for six years and has participated in the county 4-H fashion show all six years, plus several years at the district level. She has won the high point senior award at the Gray County 4-H Fashion Show.

In addition to clothing projects, Lane has completed foods-nutrition projects and has presented method demonstrations at county, district and state levels. She served as council delegate for three years, teen leader in clothing for two years and as club president for E.T. 4-H Club.

Rookie of the Year for Gray County 4-H is Jennifer Williams, 9, daughter of Dennis and Judy Williams of Lefors. The Rookie of the Year award goes to the most outstanding first-year 4-H member. Each of the seven 4-H Club managers nominated club members, and the awards committee selected the winner from these nominees.

Williams is president of Lefors 4-H Club and is in the fourth grade at Lefors Elementary School, where she was listed on the straight A honor roll for 1987-88.

She has been involved in several 4-H projects, including foods/nutrition, lambs, consumer decision making, meat judging, clothing and textiles, breads and photography. She has also done a safety and accident prevention method demonstration, been a 4-H rodeo entrant, entered the county 4-H stock show and Top O' Texas Livestock Show, and completed a foods/nutrition recordbook.

Her accomplishments this year include high point rookie and blue ribbon at the Gray County Food Show, first place team member at the Junior Meat Judging District Contest, blue ribbon and high point junior record form at the county fashion show, second place showmanship and seventh place lamb at the Gray County 4-H Livestock Show, seventh place lamb at the Top O' Texas Livestock Show, county consumer decision making and a blue ribbon at county and district in recordbook judging.

Named as outstanding leaders were Donald and Donna Maul, and Eileen Kludt. The Mauls' contributions to 4-H for the past year have included providing use of their livestock for the 4-H Playdays, providing feed for the livestock at the rodeos, and providing a vehicle and assistance to haul rodeo stock.

Donald serves on the Gray County 4-H and Top O' Texas rodeo committees and is a swine project and horse leader. Donna has kept books at the 4-H Playdays, is secretary of the 4-H Leader Council and is a foods and clothing leader for Gold Star 4-H Club.

Kludt has been a 4-H leader for seven years and is the mother of three active 4-H members. She has served as an activity leader and project leader for foods and clothing, and was a member of the District I foods/nutrition project team who participated in the statewide 4-H foods-nutrition workshop.

"She has had a major influence in developing outstanding senior 4-H project experiences for both clothing and foods, which has enabled a number of our 4-H members to excel in the District and State 4-H Food Show, 4-H Fashion Show and in statewide 4-H recordbook competition," said Katrina Hart, who presented the award.

Kludt has represented her club on the Gray County Adult Leader Council and is currently serving as chairman of the Gray County 4-H and Youth Committee. She is the 1988-89 advisor for Gray County 4-H Fashion Club. She has just returned from the Southern Region 4-H Leader Forum at Rock Eagle, Ga.

This year's Friend of 4-H Award winners are Danny and Sabrina Beebe. They have assisted the 4-H program for the past six years, first serving as leaders of a county-wide project group. They have also worked with 4-H members on horse projects and as rodeo workers, including rodeo secretary duties, event chairman and this year's overall chairman of the Gray County 4-H Rodeo.

Becky Reed and Jeffrey Lane won the "I Dare You" award, presented to members chosen from a list of nominees for their excellent character, good leadership potential and well-balanced lifestyle. Each received a copy of William H. Danforth's book, I Dare You.

Statewide writing, art contest open to students

DALLAS — The Texas Center for the Book and the Texas State Library announce a "Write on Reading/Art of Reading Contest" for the young people of Texas in celebration of the Year of the Young Reader.

The contest will consist of two broad categories, writing and art, and each of these will be divided into subdivisions for kindergarten through third grade, fourth through seventh grades, and eighth through 12th grades. Students in all categories may submit writing and/or artwork about reading and its importance.

Gold, silver and bronze medals as well as honorable mentions will be presented to winners in each of the six divisions.

Selected winning writings will be published. An exhibit of original art and photographs with quotes from written entries will travel throughout Texas. A Texas Center for the Book "Year of the Young Reader" poster will be produced from winning entries. Students may submit stories, poems and humor about books and reading that are no more than 750 words and are typed, printed or legibly handwritten.

Drawings or paintings in any medium will be accepted. Entrants may submit any size poster or paperboard up to 22x28 inches. Black and white or color photographs up to size 8x10 inches are acceptable. Photograph mats are optional and are not to exceed 10x12 inches.

All entries must be original, executed by the listed entrant and accompanied by the name of the writer or artist, home address, name of school or library, and grade.

Entries become the property of the Texas Center for the Book and may be published or exhibited. No entries will be returned.

Mail entries to Texas Center for the Book, Dallas Public Library, 1515 Young, Dallas, 75201. Entries must be received by Dec. 1. Winners will be announced in January 1989.

For more information, contact Gail Bialas, public information representative, Dallas Public Library, (214) 670-7838.

This is National Dental Hygiene Week

During National Dental Hygiene Week, Oct. 16-22, the Panhandle District Dental Hygienists' Society will observe the 75th anniversary of the profession.

The first school of dental hygiene was established in Bridgeport, Conn. in 1913. Since that time, hygienists have worked in partnership with dentists, researchers and other health professionals to improve the public's oral health.

Dental hygiene emphasizes the importance of prevention of tooth decay and gum disease through regular professional visits and proper home care.

"Through the efforts of dental hygienists, many more people can look forward to having healthy teeth and gums all their lives. Seventy-five years of commitment to care has had a positive impact on the public's oral health," said Cheryl Harper of Panhandle, president of the Panhandle District Dental Hygienists' Society.

The society recommends the following tips to help keep teeth and gums in good condition:

- Visit your dental hygienist and dentist regularly. Don't wait until it hurts.
- Follow your hygienist's instructions on how to floss and brush your teeth. Do both at least once every day.
- Use a fluoride toothpaste or mouth rinse.

Husband has 'fatal attraction' problem

DEAR ABBY: My husband is having a mini "fatal attraction" problem and could use your advice. He works at a large government complex in our hometown. This married woman who works in the same complex will not leave him alone. She's had affairs with other men she works with, and now she's after my husband. I have a rock-hard Christian marriage, and my faith in my husband has never wavered, but my patience with this lady is wearing thin.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

She calls his office at least six times a day. He has left instructions with his secretary not to put her calls through, so now she's started to call the house. I have taken to answering the phone at home, and she brazenly asks to talk to him. He always asks me to tell her he's not home. I try to be polite, but I can talk only so much. My husband swears she has never given her any encouragement and I believe him.

How does one deal with such a persistent pest? Having our home telephone number changed and unlisted would be a great inconvenience, but we may have to if there's no other way to be free of her.

FATAL ATTRACTION IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR FATAL ATTRACTION: From what you say, the woman is more than just a "pest" — she's a nuisance. Furthermore, she is harassing your husband. He should tell her that if she calls him again, either at home or work, he will charge her with harassment. One letter of warning (from a lawyer's office) might be all that's necessary.

Any suggestions? WANTS MOTHERHOOD

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I got married, he said he didn't want children "right away." I agreed. That was eight years ago, and now he says he doesn't want any children at all! He's even using a birth control method, and I am heartbroken to say the least.

I was an elementary school-teacher for 10 years, and I love children. I'm approaching my 36th birthday, and not only is my biological clock ticking away, but I would like to be young enough to enjoy my grandchildren.

Whenever I try to discuss it to find out why he's so against having children, he simply says, "I just don't want any kids!" He keeps repeating that sentence, but never gives me a reason. He's only 42 and in excellent health, so I can't understand why he's so opposed to having children.

Don't suggest counseling. I've already asked him, and he says he doesn't need anyone to "counsel" him as he has no problem with his

DEAR WANTS: I think you're fighting a losing battle. It was unfair of your husband to change the rules in the middle of the game, but if it's any consolation to you, a man who must be talked into fatherhood would probably make a very poor father.

DEAR ABBY: We are having a difference of opinion at our office regarding particular wedding anniversary celebrations where the

McGwire's homer lifts Athletics past Dodgers 2-1

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Athletics nearly got even. The losers of Game 1 on a bottom-of-the-ninth-inning home run by Kirk Gibson, the A's beat Los Angeles 2-1 in Game 3 of the World Series on Mark McGwire's ninth-inning homer Tuesday night.

"That's one," A's Manager Tony La Russa said. "Now, we need three more."

The A's still trail in the Series 2-1, but by winning Game 3, they at least stopped the bleeding and averted almost certain defeat. No team has come back from 0-3 in a seven-game Series.

The Dodgers squandered a bases-loaded, none-out opportunity in the sixth inning with the score tied 1-1, and that was where the game turned.

"That definitely picked the team up," McGwire said. "That kept us in it. They could have blown us out right there."

The A's will use their best pitcher, Dave Stewart, in Game 4 tonight as they try to really get even. Stewart, 21-12, gave up three runs over eight innings in Game 1. The Dodgers will go with rookie Tim Lincecum, who lasted only two innings in the opener.

Rick Honeycutt threw two hitless innings of relief for the A's, and McGwire, who hit 32 homers during the season, launched his game-winning home run with one out in the ninth off Jay Howell.

Just as Gibson had homered off the A's top reliever, Dennis Eckersley, McGwire faced the Dodgers' bullpen ace. And he added a taste of defeat to a postseason of insult and embarrassment for Howell.

Howell was thrown out of a playoff game for putting pine tar on the ball, then was suspended for two games. He was belittled first by the New York Mets' David Cone as a high school pitcher, then by the A's Don Baylor, a former teammate, as a guy who couldn't get anybody out. And now this.

Instead of wearing No. 50 on his back, he might be wearing 86.

"I have no excuses," Howell said. "I just made a bad pitch. I tried to get a high fastball by him."

Howell came in to start the ninth. The first batter he faced was Jose Canseco, who led the majors with 42 homers during the season. Howell sawed the bat off in Canseco's hands, and he was out on a popup to second.

That brought up McGwire, hitless in nine previous World Series at-bats.

The count went to 2-2 on McGwire, and he fouled a pitch straight back. He fouled off two more Howell fastballs before hitting a line drive that just cleared the fence in left field.

The Dodgers lost two players to injury early in the game — starting pitcher John Tudor and cleanup hitter Mike Marshall — and when the sixth inning came, Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said he was afraid to use gimpy Gibson as a pinch-hitter for Jeff Hummel. He said he didn't want to run out of players too early in the game.

Gibson has not started in the Series because of injuries to both legs. Tudor went out in the second inning with a sore elbow, and Marshall had to leave in the fourth with a stiff back. The Dodgers said Marshall would be ready to play in Game 4, but they didn't know the extent of Tudor's injury.

Bad blood

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys hope to ride revenge to a victory over the Philadelphia Eagles on Sunday in what is fast becoming one of the premier "bad blood" meetings in the NFC East.

Two incidents last year led to bitter feelings between the two teams, who need a victory after tough losses last week.

"We'll have to win our next three games (against NFC East opposition) to go any place this year," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "Right now our season goal of 9-7 will be difficult to reach but it is still attainable."

The Cowboys have plunged to a 2-5 record, worst start since 1965. They travel to Philadelphia on Sunday, come home to host Phoenix, then go back on the road to meet the New York Giants in the next three weeks.

Last October, the Cowboys felt Philadelphia ran the score up on them in a 37-20 loss. Quarterback Randall Cunningham faked dropping to one knee with time running out late in the game, then threw a long pass that led to a touchdown with one second left.

Eagles' Coach Buddy Ryan said at the time he was trying to get even with Landry for playing some of his regular players in a strike game earlier in the season.

"We'll let our players look at films of the game last year," Landry said. "They'll remember it. We won't have to remind them much."

"It was sneaky and underhanded," said Dallas linebacker Steve DeOssie. "I wouldn't mind jumping all over them."

In a conference telephone call Tuesday, Ryan said, "I never had any animosity toward Tom Landry. He was the Dallas coach when I was coaching high school football in Gainesville (Texas)."

Ryan said he had a few words "sent from my friends in Dallas" on the Eagles' bulletin board.

"A lot of our fans are still upset from that first (strike) game last year," Ryan said. "Of course, a lot of things upset me. I get upset easy."

He added "the Eagles and the Cowboys have been going at it tooth and nail for what seems like 100 years. It's great for pro football."

Landry said he had a lot of respect for Ryan, but added, "my memory is good enough to go back that far (the second game of last year)."

Odds makers made the Eagles five point favorites. It's been 21 years since the Eagles have beaten Dallas in two straight games.

The Cowboys will have a new backup quarterback to face the Eagles with Danny White on the injured reserve list for four to six weeks with ligament damage in his left knee.

Kevin Sweeney moved into the second spot behind Steve Pelluer, who has recovered from the concussion he suffered in Sunday's 17-7 loss to the Chicago Bears.

"It could be interesting if Sweeney gets in there and he might if our quarterback (Pelluer) doesn't start learning how to slide," Landry said. "It might be refreshing to see Sweeney. The players like him. He did well last year in the replacement games."

Landry will tutor placekicking specialist Roger Ruzek, who missed two field goal tries against Chicago and is four for 10 this year.

Pampa spikers defeat Randall

The Pampa Lady Harvesters are in a three-way tie for third in the District 1-4A volleyball standings after defeating Randall 15-11, 15-6 Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Lady Harvesters had to rally to win the first game after Randall had taken an 11-10 lead.

"We got off to a slow start, but we were able to regroup and get our offense going," said Pampa coach Mike Lopez.

Pampa, using spikers by Yolanda Brown and Leslie Bailey, quickly pulled away from Randall in the second game.

"We got our transition game going and were able to set the ball to Brown and Bailey," added Lopez.

Dori Kidwell and Rebecca Howard were also key players in the victory.

"Kidwell was able to pick up their spikers and she had good, overall hustle," Lopez said. "Howard came off the bench and did an outstanding job of spiking and setting the ball."

In junior varsity action, Pampa won 15-3, 15-6.

The Lady Harvesters have a 6-5 record and are tied with Estacado and Borger for third place in district. Their next match is scheduled Saturday at Hereford.

Sherrill says Aggies need emotional lift

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said he wants some of the Aggies' younger players to boost the enthusiasm of the veterans as they prepare for a weekend confrontation with Rice.

"You can't always play on an emotional peak," Sherrill said. "The thing that helps us is we have some younger players who are still excited about just playing in a game."

The Aggies have won three straight and enter the contest with winless Rice at 3-3.

Rams blank Packers

The Rams blanked the Packers 20-0 in Tiger League football action Tuesday night at Optimist Park.

The Rams first two scores came on a 10-yard run by Mark Scott and a quarterback sneak by Chris Gilbert.

The Rams closed the scoring on Gilbert's 40-yard pass to Hank Gindorf. Gilbert also had a two-point conversion.

Both teams have 1-3 records.

Pampa rodeo roundup

The Pampa Rodeo Club competed in the River Road Tri-State High School Rodeo last weekend in Amarillo.

In the boys division, Boy Reames won the saddle bronc riding with 59 points.

In the girls division, Tamra Johnson was sixth in barrels (18.690) and Misty Coleman was fifth in pole bending (22.236). Cydney Morris was second in goat tying (11.700) and fourth in pole bending (22.148).

The Pampa Rodeo Club will compete at Wellington this Saturday.

The Owls, 0-5, have now lost 12 straight, currently the longest losing streak in the nation.

"They have some good players," Sherrill said. "They have been competitive and have played well in the past two weeks."

Close game expected between Miami, Lefors

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

(All games at 7:30 p.m. Friday)
LEFORS AT MIAMI

This is the first meeting between these two teams this season and it should be a close contest. Lefors is 3-4 overall and Miami is 2-6, while both teams are 0-2 in district play.

Whoever wins this game will probably move into sole possession of second place in the District 2A Six-Man standings. At this point there is a three-way tie for first between McLean, Higgins and Silvertown, all undefeated in conference action.

"We know this is a big game," Lefors coach Dale Means said. "Mathematically, we're not out of it yet. And we feel like we're ready."

The Pirates are hoping to break a three-game winless streak that includes losses to Bovina, McLean and Higgins. Miami has dropped its last two games against Silvertown and McLean.

The Warriors have already lost one player to the no-pass no-play rule and may lose another today.

Quarterback Rhett Daugherty will also be missing from the lineup for the remainder of the season due to an injury he suffered two weeks ago against Silvertown.

Miami running back Shane Fields, who hurt his knee against McLean last Friday, still managed to gain 97 yards on 18 carries. He will be ready to play this week.

If last week is any indication, Miami could cut loose this Friday. Although the Warriors were defeated 40-14, they trailed McLean by only two points until late in the third quarter.

"We're due to explode," Miami coach Bob Loy said, "but we've got to be more consistent. If we play four quarters of hard, consistent football, we'll win. If we can't do that, then we'll be back to where we have been."

Lefors had an experience similar to Miami's last week. Despite a 55-22 loss to Higgins, Means was encouraged by his squad's performance.

In that game, Kevin Mayfield and Dewayne Bowley gained 68 yards rushing apiece, while Mike Bowley caught seven passes for 62 yards.

"I feel like we have an above-average offense and an average defense," Means said. "Miami has an average offense and a good defense, and that worries me. They're bigger than us, and they're plenty quick. They really haven't seemed to pass that well — they just run right at you, and that's what we've had the most trouble with this year. And we've both been prone to turning the ball over."

"Like I've said before, it comes down to whoever wants to win."

GROOM AT MCLEAN

The Groom Tigers will get a chance this week to avenge the 20-12 loss they suffered at the hands of McLean on opening week.

Before that game, the odds were in favor of Groom as McLean was suffering from a 40-game, five-year losing streak. The situation has changed considerably since then.

McLean is now tied for first place in District 2A Six Man with a 4-2 overall record and a 2-0 conference record. Groom is 1-6 and 0-2, its only win a forfeit over Texline in week two.

"McLean has all the advantages," Groom coach Jimmy Branch said, "and their confidence is soaring. They're without a doubt a better ball club than we played at the opening of the season — they're much better gelled than they were then."

McLean coach Jerry Miller is wary of Groom, and he knows they're hungry for a win. "They've had a string of bad luck," he said. "I still feel like they could beat anybody on a given night. They're going to get it together — I just hope it's not this week."

During last week's 48-7 loss to Silvertown, Groom unloaded for 180 yards passing on 18 completions, somewhat of a departure for a team that has not had a lot of success through the air this year.

Quarterback Michael Rose completed 16 tosses for 177 yards, including five to Stoney Crump for 64 yards and five to Kevin Kerlee for 73 yards.

Prime time pumps up Smith

NFL report

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Bruce Smith was so pumped up about playing in prime time that he was dressed three hours before the game and went on and off the field seven times before the opening kickoff.

"I've never done that before, that's not like me" he said after being credited with 2½ sacks as the Buffalo Bills, playing in their first Monday night game since 1984, beat the New York Jets 37-14. "To me, it was the biggest game of my career."

Smith needed to look just 90 miles down the New Jersey Turnpike to see the danger that presents.

Just six days after the Philadelphia Eagles, in their first national showcase since 1981, beat the New York Giants 24-13, they bottomed out against Cleveland. They scored just three points, allowed Don Strock to throw two touchdown passes in his first start in five years while Monday night hero Randall Cunningham was sacked nine times.

"I've coached high school, college and in the pros, and it happens at all levels," Eagles Coach Buddy Ryan says. "That's one of the reasons I don't like the Monday night game. It gives us the short week."

But it's not just the short week for teams like the Eagles and the Bills.

The Eagles treated the New York game as a Super Bowl—a chance for national exposure. To the Giants, who had been on prime time 11 times since Philadelphia's previous appearance, it was ho hum.

After the Bills beat the Jets on Monday night, their locker room had that same kind of Super Bowl atmosphere.

It wasn't that they are now 6-1 and two games ahead in the AFC East; it was that they had won in front of the nation. In fact, they interrupted their shower to award owner Ralph Wilson the game ball and serenade him with a bit of off-color verse.

Coach Marv Levy played down the importance of the national television showcase. But he also said, "You'll have to ask the team about that."

But the team, almost to a man, contradicted him.

"It would be an understatement to say we were pumped up," said Smith, ebullient and talkative for the first time since returning three games ago from a four-game substance abuse suspension. "This was a chance to show what the Buffalo Bills can do and we did."

"The sky's the limit," he replied when asked if the Super Bowl is what the Bills can ultimately do. Then he smiled.

But Levy is more practical (coachily).

He pointed out that the euphoria was over the instant the game ended and the Bills have to prove what they can do against New England this week. As the Eagles learned Sunday, it won't be easy to get up again, particularly for the young, budding All-Pro's like Smith and Cornelius Bennett, who are suddenly full of themselves.

Other Bills know differently.

"Winning like we did on Monday night makes you a target," tight end Pete Metzelaars said after the game.

Then there's Fred Smerlas, the 31-year-old nose tackle who knows what it's like to go through two seasons (1984-85) in which the team had fewer victories (four) in 32 games than it has in seven this year.

"We have a great mix," he says. "The front office went out and got us veterans like Art Still and Leonard Smith. The players and the coaches get along fine and we've got great young guys like Bruce Smith and Shane Conlan and Cornelius Bennett.

"But I think this team knows itself. I think it can keep an even keel. We're never too high and never too low."

Arkansas defenders share honors

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—One reason that the University of Arkansas football team is better in 1988 is the pass rush, says Coach Ken Hatfield.

That's where tackles Wayne Martin and Michael Shepherd come in.

"This is the best pair of tackles Arkansas has had since 1978," said defensive line coach Wally Ake. "This school has had some very good ones, but not two like this."

In 1978, the Arkansas tackles were Dan Hampton—later an all-pro at Chicago—and Jimmy Walker.

Martin and Shepherd were at their best Saturday in Austin against the University of Texas. They combined for five quarterback sacks worth 38 yards in losses, often on a three-man rush. Each was also credited with causing a bad pass.

"Our secondary gave us time to get there," Ake said. "The quarterback was forced to look for a second receiver and if our secondary buys us that much time, we think our linemen can get to the quarterback. Really, only our tackles were cut loose and coming hard. (Eric) Metcalf is so dangerous on the draw that our noseguard had to lay back and watch for him."

For their performance, the 6-foot-5, 270-pound Martin and the 6-foot-3, 270-pound Shepherd shared the honor as The Associated Press Defensive Players of the Week in the Southwest Conference. Tyrone Thurman, who caught two touchdown passes and returned a punt 75 yards for a TD in Texas Tech's 38-36 victory over Rice, was named Offensive Player of the Week.

Texas managed only two first downs in the first half against Arkansas, but put together a decent drive in the third quarter with freshman Mark Murdock at quarterback. The Longhorns reached the Arkansas '13, but Martin sacked Murdock for a 7-yard loss on second down.

Pampa needs drug hotline

Sports Forum

By Warren Hasse

School Associations, is working with Walt Disney World in expediting the theme, honoring those students who have demonstrated what Walt Disney termed the "4 C's"—curiosity, confidence, courage and constancy. Disney identified these individuals as the "hope for a better tomorrow," the DREAMERS and DOERS.

It appears that this might be a wonderful opportunity for everyone to do more than just talk. That's about all we have heard relative to the self-destructing drug problem. "Just Say No" signs, talks, pamphlets, all have worn out their usage. Taxpayers have spent millions, even billions nationwide, trying to protect youngsters. How much Pampa has donated in an effort to halt, even slow, the problem in the Pampa schools is unknown. Nor is the effectiveness measurable. So it is time for the Dreamers and Doers in the Pampa student population to quit dreaming of a drug-free society and start doing something about the problem. No one is closer to it than children in high school and middle school. They know who the users are, or at least have strong suspicions. Many of them know where the drugs can be obtained, and many know who the peddlers are. These students are the ones who need to become the brave DOERS. Let the senior class, or student council, rather than raise money for a gift to the school that soon gets lost or left to destruct use that money for something with real lasting value for everyone. May we suggest a drug hotline.

Establish a hotline on which students may anonymously report any and all drug information they know or suspect. Law enforcement officials already involved could use this to assist and support knowledge they either have or suspicion. Yes, there would be many, many anonymous calls from students trying to implicate people they dislike. There will be crank calls. But trained authorities can soon ferret out these voices and learn to disregard them, letting the chaff blow and gathering and benefitting from the wheat. Surely the time spent by lawmen in sorting through such calls coming from those living daily in the key target areas of the problem would be more worthwhile in the big picture than much routine, time-consuming things done presently.

But more importantly, it will transform the "being preached to" group of teenagers into productive, contributing citizens who can take their fate in their own hands in relation to this critical problem. There are hundreds and hundreds of students in the system who want something done about it, so provide the tools for the Doers to take action. Forget all the ego-serving bumper stickers and leaflets groups drag at these young adults lecturing the dangers of drugs. They know all that. Give them some working tools to do something about it, and then use the preaching time and effort to encourage them to use those tools to identify those peddling the product and to help and assist the innocent victims.

What a worthwhile activity and challenge for Dreamers and Doers in the Pampa public school system.

With little, if any, todo locally the ninth annual National High School Activities Week is already half finished. Designed to raise the public's awareness of the values and needs of school activity programs, that special attention is more needed today than ever before as taxpayers seek areas in which the excessive cost of education can be reduced.

Again chaired nationally by former stellar athlete-turned-TV-personage Merlin Olsen and his mother, Mrs. Merle Olsen, the observance began last Sunday in many communities with special recognition at church services. Monday was National Officials Day, an opportunity to show appreciation to the men and women who supervise the games and competitions in which students vie. Yesterday was National Speech and Music Day, an opportunity to promote these non-athletic activities whose lifetime far exceeds that of athletic endeavors.

Today has been designated National Chemical Health Awareness Day, another marvelous opportunity for student-led programs directed to facing the greatest threat hanging over our world.

Friday is National Coaches Day, a chance to publicly salute the men and women who guide the high school youth (many of them unpaid) in extracurricular athletic, music, speech, drama, journalism, cheerleading, etc. programs. And the final day, Saturday, has been titled National Fund Raising Day, a day designed to take advantage of the public awareness associated with "Activities Week" and stress the financial and physical needs of ALL activity programs in an effort by participants and program leaders to generate fund-raising to sustain these programs in ways other than through mandatory taxes.

The Texas University Interscholastic League, through its membership in the National Federation of State High School Associations, has joined 50 other state groups in promoting the week among its member schools. The UIL recognizes the lifelong benefits these voluntary programs afford for the more than 10 million young people (one of every two in Texas) in our nation's high schools. Even the United States Congress and President Reagan have given full endorsement to the weeklong effort.

"Dreamers and Doers" is the theme adopted to fulfill a two-fold purpose: give recognition to deserving students who are the backbone of activity programs, and expand the public awareness of the values of the extra-curricular programs. The sponsoring organization, the National Federation of High schools, is working with Walt Disney World in expediting the theme, honoring those students who have demonstrated what Walt Disney termed the "4 C's"—curiosity, confidence, courage and constancy. Disney identified these individuals as the "hope for a better tomorrow," the DREAMERS and DOERS.

It appears that this might be a wonderful opportunity for everyone to do more than just talk. That's about all we have heard relative to the self-destructing drug problem. "Just Say No" signs, talks, pamphlets, all have worn out their usage. Taxpayers have spent millions, even billions nationwide, trying to protect youngsters. How much Pampa has donated in an effort to halt, even slow, the problem in the Pampa schools is unknown. Nor is the effectiveness measurable. So it is time for the Dreamers and Doers in the Pampa student population to quit dreaming of a drug-free society and start doing something about the problem. No one is closer to it than children in high school and middle school. They know who the users are, or at least have strong suspicions. Many of them know where the drugs can be obtained, and many know who the peddlers are. These students are the ones who need to become the brave DOERS. Let the senior class, or student council, rather than raise money for a gift to the school that soon gets lost or left to destruct use that money for something with real lasting value for everyone. May we suggest a drug hotline.

Establish a hotline on which students may anonymously report any and all drug information they know or suspect. Law enforcement officials already involved could use this to assist and support knowledge they either have or suspicion. Yes, there would be many, many anonymous calls from students trying to implicate people they dislike. There will be crank calls. But trained authorities can soon ferret out these voices and learn to disregard them, letting the chaff blow and gathering and benefitting from the wheat. Surely the time spent by lawmen in sorting through such calls coming from those living daily in the key target areas of the problem would be more worthwhile in the big picture than much routine, time-consuming things done presently.

But more importantly, it will transform the "being preached to" group of teenagers into productive, contributing citizens who can take their fate in their own hands in relation to this critical problem. There are hundreds and hundreds of students in the system who want something done about it, so provide the tools for the Doers to take action. Forget all the ego-serving bumper stickers and leaflets groups drag at these young adults lecturing the dangers of drugs. They know all that. Give them some working tools to do something about it, and then use the preaching time and effort to encourage them to use those tools to identify those peddling the product and to help and assist the innocent victims.

Dolphins compete in Oklahoma meet

Five members of the Pampa Dolphin Swim Club competed in a Smile America Pentathlon held in Moore, Okla.

The Dolphins competed against 179 swimmers from Harrah, Oklahoma City, Lawton, Moore, Norman and Tulsa.

Each swimmer entered five events: the butterfly, backstroke, breaststroke, freestyle and individual medley. The times were added up for all five events to determine the individual winners in each age group.

Rhea Hill won the third-place trophy in the girls 15-16 age group.

In the girls 11-12 age group, Jamie Danner Hill placed second and improved all five of her individual times. Rene Hill placed 14th and Heidi Venal, 26th.

In the boys 10 and under age group, Bobby Venal won a plaque for his fifth-place finish.

Pampa Patriots drop soccer match to Amarillo team

A rally by the Pampa Patriots fell short in a 3-2 loss to the Amarillo Blue Thunder in soccer action last weekend in Amarillo.

Pampa scored first, but trailed 2-1 at the half. The Pampa goals were scored by Salvatore Del Fierro while Kyle Sparkman played an outstanding, all-around game.

The Patriots had some outstanding defensive plays, but missed out on several scoring opportunities.

The Patriots are members of the Under 14 boys' outdoor soccer division. Games are played at Amarillo's Southwest Park, starting at 1:30 p.m. Saturdays.
