Museum gains artifacts from Black Kettle Battle

White Deer Land Museum received artifacts from the Black Kettle Battle field site and a painting recreating the battle scene during a meeting of the Gray County Historical Commission at the museum Monday

Presenting the material to the museum was Gray County Commissioner Gerald Wright, who has been working with others on researching the history and location of the battle site near Lake McClellan and in gathering the artifacts.

The oil painting recreating the 1874 battle was undertaken by Lora Baggerman. The painting will be hung in the museum for permanent display

'Museums are a very important part of education," Wright said, for both school children and adults. "We feel very privileged to be able to give something to this museum.

Wright said the artifacts and painting, along with other material concerning the battle, will add much to the knowledge of early Gray County history.

The battle occurred when a U.S. cavalry unit came across a group of Indians near the lake. The troops were on a mission to drive Indians out of the Panhandle to open up the area for buffalo hunting.

The Indians, the day previous to the battle, had located two white girls who earlier had been kidnapped by another group of Indians in Kansas. The girls had been freed by that group and then had wandered alone in the Panhandle for five weeks.

The cavalry unit was able to rescue the girls during the successful battle against the Indians

'We've had a lot of help from a lot of different people" in researching the battle history and then locating the actual battle site,

Wright said. Some 450 artifacts were located recently at the site, including bullets, shell casings, canister balls, nails, pieces of chains, primer bits, horseshoes and a knife

The artifacts will be arranged for permanent display at the museum, Wright said. "It's been a very rewarding experience," he added. Aiding Wright in the research and location were Stan and Margie Anthony. Anthony presented a brief summation of the events leading up to the battle and the rescue of the two white girls. "We're delighted to have this," Museum Curator Clotille Thompson said of the gift of the artifacts. She later also expressed appreciation for the painting

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy, as part of the program, presented a plaque of appreciation to museum assistant Mona Blanton, who is retiring after 17 years of service to the museum

Wright said local author Kelly Ebel is currently going through the research, historical accounts, journals, government documents and other materials to prepare a book on the Black Kettle Battle. Wright said the book should be ready for publication this spring.

Wright said a microfilm viewer had been purchased to use microfilm material for the research. After Ebel finishes her research and writing, the viewer also will be donated to the museum, he

The actual battle site area is currently on private property near the lake, Wright said. He said efforts are currently under way to gain permission to place a historical marker at the site.

More detailed information and photographs on the battle site will be published in a special article on the front page of Sunday's Lifestyles section in The Pampa

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Re-The IRS for years has been using its comvenue Service could collect billions of dollars puters to compare information returns listing interest and dividend payments to indimore a year by using the same aggressive viduals with the income tax returns filed by enforcement tactics against businesses that it uses against individual taxpayers, a congressional report says. The report by the Government Operations subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs comes amid a presidential campaign in which Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis has made more aggressive collection of unpaid taxes a cornerstone of his economic proposals.

The subcommittee report, released Monday, says the IRS should develop a program to match "information returns" showing interest and dividend income paid to businesses with the actual tax returns filed by each company.

The report estimated that between $3.2 billion and $8 billion a year in taxes on interest and dividends earned by businesses is never collected because the income is not reported the individuals. The program produced $2.35 billion in additional tax revenue from individuals in fiscal 1985.

Banks and corporations are not required to file such information returns, but the House report said the IRS still received 26 million such returns in 1985, showing income payments to 5 million businesses totaling $987 Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., chairman of the subcommittee, has introduced legislation to mandate the filing of information returns by businesses. He said the IRS hasn't even been using the corporate returns it has been receiving without such a requirement. "By casting these information returns aside, IRS is not only missing the chance to assess many billions of dollars of unreported business tax liabilities but has created a double standard of enforcement that is more lenient by far toward businesses than individuals," Barnard said. IRS spokesman Frank Keith said Monday the agency has not seen the House report and will not comment until agency officials review it. But at a hearing before Barnard's subcommittee last year, IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs said the additional tax revenue that would be generated by a document matching program for corporations would not justify the administrative costs. Gibbs said those costs would be much higher than for the document matching program for individuals because corporations use different fiscal years, varying accounting methods and different names.

The House report said the problems cited by Gibbs all "pertain to the way income is reported" to the IRS.

He also said the agency would begin a test program using information returns to detect corporations and partnerships that do not file any income tax returns

White Deer maintains its good attitude

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

WHITE DEER — There may not be a real Mayberry RFD, but the town of White Deer could certainly pass in a pinch. While many other small towns are complaining about hard times in oil and agriculture, this tiny community is the essence of good attitude.

From praising city fathers for taking care of stray dogs and weeds to bragging on the football team, it's hard to find negative talk in White Deer for all the back slapping.

And yet, most White Deer residents seem oblivious to the fact that other small towns are struggling for survival.

Sure, our economy is down. But there's a lot of pride in the town and the school," said Joe Miller, 27-year publisher of the White Deer News. "We haven't had businesses closing. What we've got is real stable. As long as we've got a good school board and City Council, we'll be all

Philip Morris makes blockbuster $11 billion bid for Kraft

By PETER COY AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Philip Morris Cos. Inc.'s $11 billion bid for Kraft Inc. would make it the world's second biggest food company while decreasing its heavy dependence on profitable but stagnating cigarette sales.

Philip Morris, the 12th biggest industrial company in the Fortune 500, launched a surprise tender offer late Monday that would pay $90 a share to shareholders of 31st-ranked Kraft.

If successful, the deal would be the largest nonoil takeover ever, trailing only Standard Oil Co.'s $13.4 billion purchase of Gulf Corp. in 1984. That company later changed its name to Chevron Corp. Glenview, Ill.-based Kraft indicated it might

50 percent above its closing stock price on Monday. Although New York-based Philip Morris is best known for Marlboro, Virginia Slims, Benson & Hedges and Merit cigarettes, it took over General fight the takeover, even though the offer was about

Foods Corp., the maker of Jell-O, Maxwell House. Kool-Aid, Shake 'N Bake and Oscar Meyer, in 1985 for $5.7 billion.

The addition of Kraft would bring such names as Velveeta, Thousand Island dressings, Cheez Whiz, Breyer's, Light 'n' Lively, Sealtest and Frusen Gladje

'Philip Morris is aiming for preeminence among consumer goods marketers, and this will take them there," said analyst John C. Bierbusse of A.G. Edwards & Sons in St. Louis.

In an interview late Monday, Hamish Maxwell, Philip Morris's chairman and chief executive, said, "Being in the food business, we feel that we understand it. Kraft and Philip Morris's General Foods are roughly the same size and together would have roughly $20 billion in annual revenue. That would make Philip Morris the biggest food company after Nestle SA of Switzerland, which had revenue last year of $28 billion. The cigarette business generates enormous amounts of cash for Philip Morris, but its growth is slowing even though the company has been successful in increasing sales abroad, particularly in developing countries.

Tobacco will account for about 78 percent of its earnings this year, compared with 16 percent for General Foods and smaller amounts for Miller Brewing Co. and other units, said Bierbusse.

The dependence on cigarettes has frightened some investors from the stock, analysts said.

Maxwell said the cigarette business continues to grow in profit, revenue, physical volume and market share and has Philip Morris's strong support. But, he conceded, "I don't think most people would pick it as a big growth industry for the future. ... We're trying to build our business, and we're also trying to position it for the future and not just for the present or the past." Despite the $11 billion price, the cigarette and food giant "can well afford it," said Emanuel Goldman, an analyst with PaineWebber Inc. in San Francisco. "Their cash flow is $1.3 billion (a year).

That's $150,000 an hour, 24 hours a day, 366 days a

John M. Richman, Kraft chairman and chief executive, said its board will meet in "due course" to consider the offer.

Kraft's directors will make a recommendation on the tender offer by Oct. 31, Richman said, urging shareholders to hold onto their stock until

The offer took the stock market by surprise. In consolidated New York Stock Exchange trading Monday, Kraft stock rose 621/2 cents a share to $60.121/2. Philip Morris stock rose $1.371/2 a share to $100. Trading volume in both stocks was roughly Complicating the takeover bid is a "poison pill" defense that Kraft has erected to make unwanted takeovers difficult. Philip Morris asked Kraft to dismantle the shareholder rights plan and, to back its request, filed suit in federal district court in Chicago seeking to force Kraft to drop the defense.

place. In everything we do, we White Deer accentuate being the best," Sharp said. No one is sure whether that winning attitude came from the town into the schools or vice versa, but everyone agrees it is a citywide feeling.

"It's not a good time in a lot of places, but I feel like what holds a small place together is the churches and schools. We have an obligation to be the best," Sharp emphasized.

That sentiment is also felt by R.T. Laurie, principal at White Deer Elementary School. "The white oil deal hurt us. We were extremely wealthy. Now we're just wealthy," he said, smiling. We've noticed that it all goes in economic cycles. Oil and agriculture are both low, but people are dealing with it.

"But when times are tough, our people can do with less. The good times will come again," he

That sense of looking forward to tomorrow is as infectious in White Deer as a case of the Asian flu, but without the illness.

"It's mainly an attitude here. I guess it's easier to be happy and go on. These people know how to pull in their belts and take care of what they've got,'' said Jim Weese, president of First Bank and Trust.

Athletic Director Windy Williams sums up the good attitude in White Deer by saying, "At whatever level you want to talk about, this town wants to do it

In a period of rural hard times, that positive outlook is refreshing indeed.

Kidnapping himself suspect hangs

EUFAULA, Okla. (AP) - A kidnapping suspect who apparently hanged himself in the McIntosh County jail told one of his four victims from Texas that he would not be taken alive, police said.

Harvey Dale Webb, 41, surrendered to Oklahoma authorities without incident after he was traced to the state through a phone call made by one victim and a credit card used at a gas station, authorities said.

Capt. Larry Zacharias of the Richardson, Texas, police department said one of the kidnapping victims said Webb "had planned not to be taken alive." Webb, who had been paroled in Texas after aggravated kidnapping and aggravated robbery convictions, apparently hanged himself by tying his socks to cell bars jail, said Sheriff Bobby Gray. Jailers delivering breakfast to inmates found Webb's body. Webb had been in a cell by

Gray said his officers had no reason to believe when they jailed Webb that he would try to kill himself. Gray said an investigation into Webb's death was continuing and that the body would be sent to a medical examiner in Tulsa for an autopsy. Webb and his 38-year-old sister, Joyce Webb of Ward, Ark., were arrested Sunday night on aggravated robbery and kidnapping charges in connection with the abductions of four suburban Dallas residents, police said. Joyce Webb was being held in the McIntosh County Jail in lieu of $75,000 bail.

The series of Dallas area kidnappings began in Garland about noon Saturday, when a man and woman robbed and kidnapped a woman and her child from a car wash, police said. About an hour later, the mother and child were released unharmed, police said.

Insurance company requiring AIDS tests in selected areas is discriminatory for a life insurance company to require people who live in certain areas to take the AIDS blood test

The Dallas Times Herald reported today that Midfand National Life Insurance Co. requires AIDS screening only in certain metropolitan areas.

The areas include Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston in Texas and Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego areas of California, Miami, Fla. and the Newark area of New Jersey.

Many insurers test all applicants for large policies and deny coverage to carriers of the fatal virus.

The newspaper said that in recent newsletters, the company told its agents to check its list of ZIP codes before writing policies for more than $100,000 in Texas, California, Florida and New Jersey, states with high numbers of AIDS cases.

Texas regulations allow AIDS testing on a nondiscriminatory basis, but this is believed to be the first time a company has required blood tests only in selected geographical areas, according to Tom Doyal, an attorney for the Texas Human Rights Foundation. The foundation defends the legal rights of homosexuals.

Doyal said he has filed a complaint against Midland National Life with the State Board of Insurance in Texas.

Glen Maxey, executive director of the Lesbian-Gay Rights Lobby, said the company's practice 'sets a dangerous precedent.'

Maxey said he fears other insurers might use ZIP codes to target specific areas, like Oak Lawn in Dallas and Montrose in Houston, known for having significant homosexual populations. Officials at Midland National Life's headquarters in Sioux Falls, S.D., declined several requests for interviews, the newspaper reported. The director of the company's regional office in Dallas said the practice is intended to cultivate business in rural areas, where AIDS might be less prevalent. The alternative is to "penalize everybody" by imposing statewide testing, according to Bill Read. Read said most of the company's agents are in small towns. The company, a subsidiary of Sammons Enterprises Inc. of Dallas, has annual sales of about $200 million. The practice was criticized by Doyal: "We believe they are discriminating," he said. "If you live in certain ZIP codes, you can get insurance without DALLAS (AP) - A Texas gay rights group says it taking a blood test. If you live in other areas, you have to take the test.

Doyal said he filed the complaint against Midland National Life last month after receiving anonymously in the mail a copy of a June 23 newsletter from the firm to its agents.

"The company believes it is unlikely that your client will have AIDS," the document says, estimating that less than 1 percent of the population is infected with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

But the letter says people who carry the human immunodeficiency virus pose a problem for insurance carriers.

"Overall mortality experience of this group is well beyond the insurable limits which any company can absorb and profitably underwrite," the newsletter said. "Because of this additional risk, we will decline anyone who tests positive for exposure to the AIDS virus.'

But not all policy applicants must take the tests, the newsletter states. It says the company requires blood tests only for applicants who are 15 or older, want more than $100,000 in life insurance and live in ZIP codes listed in the newsletter.

In Texas, the ZIP codes included Dallas and its suburbs, Fort Worth and the Houston area, including Galveston.

In California, ZIP codes include the Los Angeles, the San Francisco-Oakland area and San Diego. All of metropolitan Miami is included in the list of Florida ZIP codes.

In New Jersey, ZIP codes include the Newark area, including Paterson and Hackensack.

The four states rank behind only New York in the number of AIDS cases, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

Rex Shannon, chairman and chief executive officer for Fidelity Union Life in Dallas, said the practice of Midland National Life is "probably a departure from the norm.'

Shannon said insurers must test for AIDS because, at age 35, for example, carriers of the virus are 40 times more likely to die than other people. He said paying the life insurance claims of AIDS patients can threaten a firm's ability to cover its other policy holders.

An industry survey in 1985 found that nearly half of the policy holders who died of AIDS had bought their insurance within the past two years, indicating that many of the policy holders apparently knew or suspected they had been infected with the deadly disease.

One state legislator said any move to restrict the furlough program, which allows qualifying inmates weeklong unsupervised visits to their families, would not only destroy the prison system's most effective management tool but also would be against federal court orders governing prison re-

State Rep. Allen Hightower, D-Huntsville, said the proposal also could force the early parole of even more dangerous criminals.

Terrell said a subcommittee of the Texas Board of Corrections is expected to recommend later this month that the board disallow furloughs to anyone convicted of murder, drug dealing or rape. The subcommittee will meet in San Antonio Oct. 27 to review furlough policies. \

The recommendation would then go before the full, nine-member committee at its Nov. 14

Terrell said if the corrections board approves the recommendation limiting the types of inmates who can be furloughed, it would cut down by 25 percent the number who are allowed to visit their Hightower, chairman of the House Corrections Committee, said such a move could end up creating even more capacity problems for TDC. The prison system already is unable to handle the number of convicts sentenced to its facilities.

The state prison system is under federal court order to limit population to 95 percent of capacity, and inmates who are on furlough are not counted in the daily bed space, Hightower said.

TDC has used the furlough program as a way of controlling bed space and that any great restriction on the program would result in more crowding in the prison system, the nation's third-largest, he Hightower also questioned whether it is wiser to grant early parole to higher-risk convicts or grant five- to seven-day passes to inmates who have reached trusty status.

Terrell said he doesn't believe that crowding problems will be intensified by a more-restrictive furlough program.

"It's not a capacity issue," he said.

Top TDC administrators could not be reached Monday, the Houston Chronicle reported today. One prison source told the newspaper many of them were in meetings all day trying to resolve the flap over the furlough program.

A spokesman for Gov. Bill Clements said Monday that the governor opposes furloughs "except in the case of an emergency and only then on a selected basis and with prudent consideration."

Texas began furloughing inmates in 1977, during Clements' first term in office, Hightower said. The program was expanded during the last legislative session from five to seven days, and Terrell said he's certain the governor signed the bill although provisions on the furlough program probably "were not highlighted to him.

Terrell said he didn't begin looking into the furlough situation until after Republican presidential nominee George Bush made it an issue, criticizing Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis for the furlough program in his home state of Mas-

But Terrell said the prison board would have reviewed the program at some point anyway, just as it has reviewed other ongoing prison programs.

Terrell ordred a freeze on furloughs to convicted killers after learning that about 5,000 felons, including 517 convicted of murder or voluntary manslaughter, have been furloughed in Texas since 1987 when Clements took office.

No furloughed murderers have committed any crime while furloughed and no rapists have been furloughed, but Terrell said he just doesn't like the perception of granting passes to those types of cri-

Dukakis campaign: We're staying in Texas

By MICHAEL HOLMES Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - The Democratic ticket of Michael Dukakis and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen has no plans to abandon Texas, the third-largest state, before Nov. 8, the campaign says.

'Mike Dukakis was in the state on Saturday, Lloyd Bentsen is in the state (Monday) and Bentsen will be back at the end of the week. We are not pulling out," said Missy Mandell, spokeswoman for the Democratic campaign in Republican campaigners, meanwhile, said Vice President George Bush will continue to emphasize his adopted home state in the campaign's final three weeks.

"Texas is an absolute No. 1 priority for the Bush campaign. There is no scenario for a national Bush victory without us winning Texas," said Reggie Bashur, deputy campaign manager for Bush in the

Their comments came after newspaper reports that the Dukakis campaign in Texas was being downgraded.

A Washington Post story on Sunday said Dukakis would concentrate his efforts on 18 states and the District of Columbia, with 272 electoral votes, two more than needed to

The list contained most of the major states - New York. California, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania that both sides describe as key battlegrounds. Given lower priority by Dukakis, according to the Post, were Texas, Bentsen's home state, and

New Jersey Susan Estrich, Dukakis national camapaign manager, said the report was wrong. "We are not writing off whole regions of the country," she

On Monday, The New York Times reported that the Democrats hadn't give up on Texas but that the campaign "acknowledged that victory here is now highly unlikely.

In Austin, Mandell said, "We are not pulling out. That's absolutely not true.

The 18-state strategy referred to was only a theory to demonstrate that Dukakis could win in the Electoral College without Texas' 29 votes, she said.

"It was a demonstration to Republicans to negate their bogus 'electoral lock' theory. We showed them there are 18 states where we're ahead or doing very well, and those 18 states represent 272 electoral votes," she said

Committee asks for review of corporal punishment law

AUSTIN (AP) - A law allowing corporal punishment by educators appears to give them more right to punish children than parents have, said a prosecutor who serves on a special child abuse committee.

The House Select Committee on Child Abuse and Pornography voted Monday to ask the state Legislature to review the law.

'We do prosecute physical abuse of chidren by parents" using a sort of 'reasonable-man test." said Steve Chaney, a committee member and senior staff attorney in the Tarrant County District Attorney's Office.

"But when you throw in the educator, it does seem that they have written in the statute addi tional rights to punish, perhaps punish more severely, than even a parent has," Chaney said.

"It just doesn't make a lot of sense to me," he added.

A section of the penal code under the "Educator-Student" heading says the use of force, but not deadly force, is justified if the person taking action is "entrusted with the care, supervision or administration of the person for a special purpose," and "when and to the degree the actor believes the force is necessary to further the special purpose or to maintain discipline in a group."

Chaney said he thinks the law originally addressed only school districts and educators, but it is being applied to "anybody who's standing in for the parent, anybody who has temporary supervision of the child.'

"The whole idea of corporal punishment is to cause bodily injury," he said.

"I don't think we ought to ever have a statute that says a parent can't spank their child if done appropriately, but I don't know why we need to move it outside the home and allow a school to do it. You have other sanctions that you can use with children in a school," said Chaney.

Chaney said he believes there are problems statewide in the use of corporal punishment by caretakers of children.

If corporal punishment is not eliminated, Chaney said, limitations should be put into the law.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Time to end those crazy fuel limits!

The U.S. government needs a psychotherapist. It continues to impose a contradictory standard toward cars sold in the United States. Under one personality, it imposes quotas on the number of Japanese cars imported to the United States. Under the second personality, it imposes penalties on U.S. car-makers that sell a lot of large cars that slurp a lot of

The government now has a chance to look saner. For 1989 and 1990 it will require each U.S. car company to average 27.5 miles a gallon per each car sold. Companies that don't meet the standard will have to pay huge fines, possibly amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars. GM's current fleet checks in at about 26 mph.

This is crazy. If Americans want to buy big cars, especially those made by our own workers, they should be allowed to do so. Forcing Americans to buy small cars discriminates against citizens who belong to large families and need big cars to carry around all the kids, or who just like tooling around

The government fuel quotas are a remnant of the 1970s "malaise" years. Remember the "energy crisis"? Well, in fact, both the 1974 and 1979 gas crunches were caused by the price controls imposed in 1971 by Richard Nixon. Although most price controls were lifted in 1974, those on oil remained until Ronald Reagan took them off in 1981.

With price controls off, the energy crisis evapo rated. Oil prices, even without taking inflation into account, have dropped from more than $40 a barrel (and rising) to less than $20 a barrel. With the free market restored, the long lines at the pump vanished.

Government controls on American car efficiency and limits on Japanese imports are a double whammy to America's car companies. The car quotas force the Japanese to develop bigger cars for sale here, such as Honda's new mid-sized Acura line, so they can make more profit for each single car sent here; full-sized cars are now on Tokyo's drawing boards. At the same time, the gas limits force American companies to downsize their cars. So the government forces Detroit to stop making big cars, even while it forces the Japanese to enter that market full force.

Won't the Japanese have to meet the same gas-use quotas? Yes, but they're ahead of American companies in producing powerful, gas-efficient engine designs for big cars. And the Japanese still sell many small cars, which pull down the fuel-economy average for the company as a whole, more than offsetting the gas-guzzlers.

The cure for the government's schizoid behavior is free trade. End the Japanese car quotas, giving American companies a dose of the competition they need. But also end the crazy fuel limits that are keeping American car companies locked in a padded cell

He has 'first husband' image

Earlier this year, as George Bush was doing his impersonation of Steffi Graf, demolishing opponents in one Republican primary after another, commentators scrambled madly for explanations

Like many of my colleagues, I was so mystified that I considered resigning from the Fraternal Order of Post-Election Windbags. What did voters see in him that was invisible to the pundit corps?

Sen. Bob Dole, one of the vanquished, offered one explanation: Republicans weren't voting for Bush, but for Ronald Reagan. I don't wish to undertake a defense of the intelligence of homo Republicanus and I won't deny that American reading skills have deteriorated. But I doubt that even the dimmest Republican (well, not counting Dan Quayle) could be fooled into thinking that "G-e-o-r-g-e B-u-s-h" spells "Ronald Reagan.'

About that time, I heard a comment that has since become famous: George Bush reminds every woman of her first husband.

When I first heard that, I thought: Well, of course. If Bush reminds every woman of her first husband, then of course he'd be exceptionally popular. In fact, he'd be almost unbeat-

I fully expected Bush to adopt the characterization as his campaign slogan, a sure way to close the gender gap. After all, what married woman could refuse to vote for a candidate who reminds her of the man she loves, the father of her children, the person she chose out of 5 billion people in the world to spend her life with, till death do them part?

Not only that, but Bush's powerful first husband aura was bound to attract other women as well. Millions of single women are searching tirelessly for first husbands of their own, which shows that they hold such creatures in the highest esteem. This group generally refers to first husbands by such flattering terms as "Prince Charming," "Mr. Right" and "The Perfect

In fact, aspiring brides have been known to complain that there are no good men available because the best ones are already married (i.e., are first husbands). What keeps some of these women from marrying is their inability to find someone as flawless as everyone knows first husbands to be.

Widows and reluctant divorcees would also be drawn to a candidate who brings back thrilling memories of their one true love. And plenty of young women, old enough to vote but not yet thinking of marriage, might be pleasantly reminded of the first husbands they know as

Obviously a candidate who bears an unmistakable resemblance to a first husband would have a matchless appeal to women. I speak with some authority on this subject. In 1984, highly dissatisfied with the options on her presidential ballot, my wife cast a write-in vote for her husband - me.

Now I have never been infatuated with the vice president. But, I must admit, I took a secret pride that what attracted so many female voters to him was an undefined but irresistible quality to us first husbands.

Only after I had heard this observation repeated several times, and hearing other listeners laugh heartily, did the unpleasant truth finally dawn on me: The comparison of Bush to a first husband was meant as an insult.

You heard it right: The people repeating the line were suggesting that there was something universally ridiculous about first husbands. They assumed that a candidate who reminded women of such a person would suffer at the Democrats believe this proposition so fervently that they spurned several first husbands who wanted the party's presidential nomination - in favor of Kitty Dukakis' second husband. Given a choice between a first husband and a second, they assumed, women would overwhelmingly prefer the second.

I find this implausible. The truth is that most women who get married stay married to their first husbands. And nearly half of those who get divorced never remarry, suggesting that they never find anyone as enchanting as their first husband were. (In all fairness, who could be?)

In fact, I suspect the Democrats have fallen into a diabolical Republican trap. My hypothesis is that Bush's campaign operatives started the joke in the hope that their opponents would adopt it as their own, unwittingly bolstering the vice president with female voters. The Democrats, unfortunately for their own nominee, did exactly as the Republicans hoped.

The latest poll proves my point. It finds that 45 percent of American women plan to vote for George Bush, and 12 percent haven't decided. The other say they're holding out for Prince Charming.

ot all Bubbas are the same

For years I have attempted to enlighten those individuals who hold biased and ill-based opinions about the name "Bubba.

Most think men named Bubba are nothing more than ignorant swine who wear caps with the names of heavy equipment dealers on the front, shoot anything that moves, listen to music about doing bodily harm to hippies and put beer on their grits.

There may be Bubba's who fit the above description, but there are plenty who don't.

I once wrote in this space of a man - collegeeducated, with no tobacco juice stains on his teeth - whose family had always referred to him as Bubba.

"I got that name," he explained, "because my baby sister couldn't say brother. She called me

The man's problem was that he had taken a iob with some sort of high-tech corporation, and his boss insisted he drop the name Bubba because he felt clients wouldn't respect a man with such a name.

Our Bubba refused to use any other name, however, and became quite successful with his new company and wound up with his former boss's job. The former boss now refers to his old employee as "Mr. Bubba."

Anyway, I happened to pick up a back issue of Southerner magazine recently and on the very front cover were the following words: 'Bubba! You don't have to be dumb, mean, fat, slow, white or male to be one!" I turned to page 37 and began to read:

"Of all the Southern stereotypes," the story began, "the one that answers to 'Bubba' is probably the least flattering.'

The article went on to do portraits of eight

Bubbas. Do any of the following fit the typical "Bubba stereotype"? KEITH (BUBBA) TANIGUCHI: Attorney,

Austin, Texas. Full-blooded Japanese. Into Zen. JOHN (BUBBA) TROTMAN: State director of the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Montgomery, Ala. On people moving to Alabama: "At first, they say, 'Alabama, that's Tobacco Road.' Then you can't blow them out of Alabama with a cannon.

EFULA (BUBBA) JOHNSON: Narcotics officer, Savannah, Ga. Mr. Johnson is a large, black man and he carries a large gun.

WALTER (BUBBA) SMITH: Minister, Ashdown, Ark. Claims no relation to Bubba Smith of football and beer commercial fame.

JAMES (BUBBA) ARMSTRONG: Surgeon. Montgomery, Ala. Careful poking fun at anybody who knows his way around a scalpel. PAULA (BUBBA) MEINER: Owns a barbecue joint in Winter Park, Fla. Nice lady. BERNARD (BUBBA) MENG III: State administrator for U.S. Sen. Ernest Hollings, Columbia, S.C. He's "Little Bubba," Dad was "Big, KYLE (BUBBA) PATRICK: Elementary school student, Auburntown, Tenn. He wants to be a basketball player when he grows up.

One more thing: The University of Georgia veterinary school recently produced the state's first test-tube calf, a Holstein bull, weighing 100 pounds.

They named him Bubba. What else?

elfare reforms should

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Both houses of Congress have passed the Family Support Act, a welfare reform bill that's the first major overhaul of the welfare system in 25

Hard-line conservatives say it won't do what it aims to - cut welfare rolls and save taxpayers money and hard-line liberals say it's un-

I say it's a start, and high time. How the country has stood the welfare mess as long as it has without polarizing its citizens even more than it has, I don't know. Certain features of the bill, I believe, are positive steps that, even if they don't work exactly as planned, are at least in the right direction: · Welfare parents with children older than 3 years old would have to participate in a new Job Opportuni-ties and Basic Skills — or JOBS program offering education, training and work activities ranging from high school to community jobs. · Under the "workfare" provision, starting in 1994, one adult in each two-parent welfare household would have to participate in a job search and, failing to find a job, work 16 hours a week in a state-organized work activity. A young parent could instead work toward a high-school diploma.

 States would automatically withhold wages from a non-custodial parent who owes court-ordered child su port and isn't paying. States would also receive federal money to set up computerized systems to better track monitor child-support enforcement. The child-support collection provision is the most popular, because most people are familiar with the enormity of the problem. The most unpopular is the "workfare" provision. True, it may not work. But it's a better way to approach the problem than the way we've been doing it, for

First, by trying this approach we will watch the dynamics of the program unfold. If it doesn't work, we will understand why, and we will be closer to reaching a more workable

Second, I don't believe any one group of people are "entitled" to be supported by anyone else, unless they are physically or mentally incapable of working. We've gone through 25 years of letting our welfare system be guided by the assumption that because the rest of us didn't make the economy good enough, one group of people is "entitled" to support.

This kind of assumption removes the idea of personal responsibility and replaces it with a sense of powerlessness and incompetence. Under the guise of "not humiliating the poor by making them feel like they're responsible for their misfortune," we've treated them like children — children too stupid and incompetent to participate in their own well-being. Ironically, we disdain parents who make things too easy for their children, and rob them of the opportunity to learn to be responsible for themselves.

We've been paying for programs that foster dependency and create resentment among those who support them. During a few of the trial "workfare" programs of the late '70s and early '80s, critics argued that these "professionals" created nothing but "makework" for the poor that did nothing but penalize them for their benefits.

If these professionals can't come up with work opportunities that enhance their communities and give the workers a sense of worth, then that's the first place we can save money, by firing the program administrators.

We can get people off welfare rolls and into jobs. If our first plans don't work, we can modify them until they do. What can't work is what we've been doing for the last 25 years: virtu-

BARROW, Alaska (AP) - One of three gray whales trapped nearly two weeks by Arctic Sea ice has pneumonia, but biologists say the bleeding and battered behemoths should survive at least until a risky attempt at freeing

An Alaska Army National Guard Skycrane helicopter was to lift off today from Prudhoe Bay to tow a 185-ton Hovercraft-type ice-breaking barge 200 miles northwest to the whales.

The trip, expected to take from 25 to 40 hours, was delayed Monday while the company that owns the barge made final checks for repairs, said Mike Haller, a National Guard spokesman.

The endangered California gray whales became trapped while migrating south to warmer waters.

The 24-30-foot-long mammals were bleeding and battered from continually bashing into the jagged ice and were exhausted from swimming against the ocean current to remain in place.

The whales were trapped 18 miles northeast of this Inupiat Eskimo village.

They were only a few hundred feet offshore in 45 feet of water, with their largest ice hole about 10-by-20 feet.

Villagers and biologists used ice picks Monday to keep the breathing holes open in the 6-inch thick ice, but sub-zero temperatures threatened to seal them. Ron Morris, with the National

Marine Fisheries Service, said he and several veterinarians went onto the ice Monday to study the whales, and noticed that one had symptoms of pneumonia. "Their condition has worsened since they were first spotted," Morris said. "One has a little pneumonia but the others are all

Rescuers raced against onshore winds that threatened to close breaks in the ice that would serve as an escape route if the ice-breaking barge is able to free them.

"It was 17 below last night," Carroll said. "The thickness of the ice is increasing rapidly. It's growing a matter of inches every Environmentalists, federal authorities and the oil industry have joined in the unusual alliance to rush the icebreaking barge to the whales so it can crush a narrow path to open water a half-dozen miles away.

Crews labored around the clock during the weekend and into the Arctic darkness Monday to get the barge and the Skycrane

'We're not going to move that thing until we can make sure we'll have a clean run to Barrow," said Pete Leathard, a spokesman for Veco Inc., an oil field servicing company that owns the barge. "The Arctic is not a good place to break down in

Plans called for the helicopter to pull the 85-by-60-foot barge with an 800-foot cable, Haller

"The plan has great potential for danger because of the altitude of the helicopter in the towing position. The nose is down," he said. "The danger is that if a line snaps and comes back up and gets in the rotors, we've got real trouble.

The helicopter, which costs $1,500 to $3,000 an hour to operate, will trade off with a second Skycrane, which has been flown to Prudhoe Bay.

The barge is to carry 20,000 gallons of fuel for the helicopters and the barge, Haller said. The fuel was provided by Arco Alaska Inc.

Oil company officials have estimated that that portion of the rescue effort could cost as much as

Thousands of honey bees swarm over wreckage of truck. Bee swarm snarls traffic after wreck

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) - A tractor-trailer carrying 200 beehives ran off a busy highway and flipped over, releasing up to 250,000 honeybees into rush-hour traffic, authorities said.

The spill snarled traffic Monday afternoon as drivers nearing the intersection of Interstates 75 and 285 northwest of Atlanta were warned in radio newscasts to roll up windows to avoid being stung.

A thick cloud of bees swarmed over the highways as they were unable to return to their demolished hives. Wooden cartons containing the hives were strewn over a 250-yard stretch near the accident on Private beekeepers were called in to coax the bees back into what few intact hives remained.

"I was on my way home and heard this on the radio and went home to suit up," Cherokee County beekeeper Mace McGill said as bees crawled over his netted helmet.

Most of the swarm had dissipated by late Monday and there were no reports of serious sting injuries.

The driver of the truck, Luke Pugh, was listed in stable condition in a hospital for accident injuries and a passenger, Crystal Bosley, was treated and released, officials said.

"We were on the ground and we started to run and we got the bees in our hair but they didn't sting Ms. Bosley said.

The bees were being shipped by West Virginiabased JimCo from Dodgeville, Wis., to De Land, Fla., said JimCo dispatcher John Holbrook in De Land. He said the truck contained about 250,000 bees and 200 hives, and that JimCo trucks from Kentucky and Florida were driving to the scene Monday night to retrieve what they could.

Indicted congressman faces trial in federal perjury case

ATLANTA (AP) — U.S. Rep. Pat Swindall, likely heading to trial next week on federal perjury charges, said he will resign from office if he is convicted but expressed confidence he would be

A federal grand jury on Monday indicted the two-term Republican on 10 counts of perjury, saying he lied during a money laundering investigation.

He pleaded innocent and was freed on his recognizance.

Swindall, who will represent himself, moved quickly to schedule his trial next week so the case could be resolved before the Nov. 8 election.

U.S. District Judge Robert L. Vining said he would reschedule another trial to hear the Swindall case Monday if the congressman filed the appropriate motion.

Swindall is seeking his third term representing a suburban Atlanta district, and he vowed to clear himself before the election.

But he said he would resign if convicted "because under the circumstances, I don't think it would be fair to the voters of the 4th District" to remain in office.

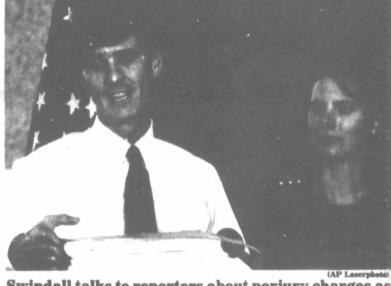

His Democratic opponent, former Dukes of Hazzard television actor Ben Jones, said, "I feel concern for the congressman and for his family at this point. ... It is a matter for the courts to decide."

The indictment accused Swindall of lying to the grand jury Feb. 2 during its investigation of a proposed $850,000 home mortgage loan the congressman had discussed with businessman Charles LeChasney and an undercover agent posing as a financier.

LeChasney and four others have been charged with money laundering.

The indictment charged that Swindall lied when he told the panel he did not go to authorities to report the loan negotiations because, "I never satisfied myself of anything with respect to criminality.

It also said he lied when he said there had never been discussions about trying to conceal the trail of the money, and when he denied having been specifically informed by the undercover agent that the source of the loan could be illicit drug money.

If convicted, Swindall could be sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000 on each count,

U.S. Attorney Robert Barr said. Swindall has acknowledged an error in judgment in dealing with LeChasney, but denied criminal any questionable statements to the jury as a memory lapse.

The congressman, who is an attorney, decried what he claimed were political overtones to the case.

'This is a political lunch, this is a political case, it will be a political trial, it'll be a political exoneration," he said.

Barr, also a Republican, said the case wasn't politically motiwrongdoing and characterized vated.

AT&T plans to cut long-distance rates services designed for large users.

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. wants to cut its basic interstate long-distance rates by an average of 3.8 percent and its business service prices by up to 6.2 percent to reflect savings in local network

The cuts, totaling $697 million annually, would take effect Dec. 1, the day that residential and small business customers begin paying an additional 60 cents per month to pay the costs of maintaining the local phone network.

As subscribers pay more of the costs to maintain the local network, long-distance companies pay less. The Federal Communications Commission requires AT&T, the nation's largest long-distance company, to send these savings back to consumers by lowering rates.

AT&T's competitors are not required to return these savings to customers, but the companies have tended to lower their rates in response to AT&T price cuts.

The two largest competitors, MCI Communications Corp. and US Sprint Communications Co., said Monday they would review AT&T's plans.

MCI spokesman John Houser said the company "will maintain a competitive rate structure" and "will be passing the access line savings along to our customers." But he said MCI could not be specific until it has fully reviewed AT&T's proposal. Sprint spokesman Syd Courson said the company wanted to review AT&T's proposed cuts before commenting on its own plans. "We don't know what we will do right now," he said.

The price cut, if approved by the FCC, would be AT&T's seventh since 1984, when the company was stripped of its local operating companies by an antitrust decree. Since then, AT&T's rates have fallen 38 percent. Subscribers, however, pay $2.60 per month for local network

Crashed jet was aiming for seldom-used runway

ROME (AP) - The Uganda Airlines jet that crashed near Rome's main airport killing 31 people was aiming for a seldomused runway that lacks sophisticated landing equipment, an Italian union official said.

The choice of the runway meant that the pilot had to calculate how to land the Boeing 707 at the fog-shrouded airport, instead of having electronic equipment guide him, said Andrea Gariup, president of the main Italian pilots' union.

The red, yellow and white jet plowed through three houses and a rental-car parking lot before coming to rest in a field and bursting into flames early Monday. Thirty-one people were killed, including six of the seven crew members; 21 were injured.

Most of those on board Flight QU775 were Ugandans traveling from London to Ug nda's Entebbe Airport via Leonardo da Vinci Airport. Two Nigerians were listed among the injured, while the British Embassy in Rome said seven or eight passengers were Britons.

The airport said it did not yet have a complete 1 st of passenger identities

Gariup said the pilot apparently chose runway "34 Left" because visibility was slightly better there than on two other runways he had previously approached

However, the strip lacked the Instrument Landing System installed at other runways to provide information to pilots about their altitude, said Gariup, head of the National Association of Commercial Airline Pilots.

The pilot therefore had to target his descent using information from the control tower and his view of the runway, Gariup

The pilot "had to calculate every minute, based on the distance to the airport, how he had to approach," Gariup said in a telephone interview Monday night with The Associated Press. "With the other system, the instruments would tell him if he was too low."

There was no answer at the airport director's office or the press office Monday evening, but an air traffic controller in the flight tower confirmed that the runway was not frequently used and lacked the landing equipment other strips had. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Government and airport authorities emphasized that they had not yet established the cause of the crash. The Italian government announced Monday evening that a nine-man commission would investigate, in addition to a judicial board. The commander of the Rome province's fire department, Guido Chiucini, who helped coordinate the rescue, speculated in a telephone interview that there was a "misunderstanding" between the control tower and the pilot since the plane approached at such a low altitude.

Frenchman wins Nobel economic prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) -Maurice Allais of France won the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science today, the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences announced.

Allais won the award "for his pioneering contributions to the theory of markets and efficient utilization of resources," the academy said in its citation.

He was the first French economist to win the coveted award since it was created in 1968.

Allais, who was born in 1911, did his economic research at the Ecole Nationale Superieure des Mines de Paris, the academy said.

Though his work is little known outside France, Allais "is the most prominent figure in modern economic research in France as regards basic theory and applications to public-sector planning," said the 300-member academy in a statement.

His greatest contributions came in the 1940s with his work on market equilibrium and efficiency, it said.

He published massive works in 1943 and 1952 detailing his theories. This work "has had a far-reaching indirect impact through younger French econom-

The Nobel Foundation, which administers the estate, says there will be no more additions to avoid degrading the prestige of a Nobel prize.

On Wednesday the prizes in physics and chemistry will be announced, closing the list of laureates for this year.

The United Nations peacekeeping forces were awarded the peace prize on Sept. 29 by the Norwegian Nobel Committee in Oslo. The literature prize was won by Egyptian novelist Naguib Mahfouz, the first Arabiclanguage writer to win in the 87year history of the Nobels.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Supreme Court today barred the anti-Arab Kach movement of American-born Rabbi Meir Kahane from running in the Nov. 1 election, saying it was racist and undemocratic.

Police ordered silence among 50 singing supporters of the Kach Party. Judge Menachem Eilon then read out the terse decision, 'the appeal is rejected.''

The panel of five judges later released a 27-page judgment on the appeal in which they wrote that "the aims of Kach and its actions are racist and that it seeks to violently deny the rights. .. of segments of the population."

In other developments, Arab assailants on Monday wounded two Israeli soldiers in the occupied West Bank. A homemade bomb was hurled at guards near the house of former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon inside Jerusalem's walled Old City.

It was the second unsuccessful attack on the house in less than a month. Sharon, now industry bloc, was away, on a private visit to Hungary.

Sixteen Palestinians were reported shot in clashes with soldiers in the occupied lands. The army confirmed 10 casualties.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir warned "nothing will remain" of Palestinian protesters if they use weapons in their struggle against Israeli occupation.

Shamir's left-leaning rival, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, said that if he is elected prime minister, Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip will elect candidates for peace talks with Israel. Monday marked two weeks before Nov. 1 elections.

Polls say the two principal parties are in a close race in the campaign focusing on the Palestinian uprising, which has claimed the lives of 299 Arabs and six Israelis since Dec. 8.

As Kahane left the courtroom, he was swamped by about 100 supporters who sang the traditional song "The Israeli Nation minister for the hardline Likud Lives." Kahane's backers carried him on their shoulders and one supporter shouted "Israel is a Nazi state!"

During a later news conference, the Brooklyn-born Kahane, 56, called the court decision antidemocratic and harshly criticized the judges. "In Judaism, there is no democracy," said Kahane, who was thronged by dozens of supporters, some wearing yellow Tshirts with the party emblem, a clenched fist inside a Star of

He also said there was a "contradiction between Zionism and democracy," noting that Israel's Law of Return discriminated against non-Jews by granting automatic citizenship only to .

Kahane urged his supporters to boycott the elections, mainly to punish the right-wing Likud bloc which stood to gain from Kahane's ouster. Both Likud and its main rival, the left-of-center Labor Party, had called for the barring of Kach.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. -Prime time was the right time for the Buffalo Bills.

The Bills had one terrific time Monday night, routing the New York Jets 37-14 before a national television audience. It was the first appearance in the NFL's spotlight game in four years for Buffalo, which leads the AFC East by two games with a 6-1 re-

"This quiets a lot of people down, the people who were wondering about the Buffalo Bills," said Jim Kelly, who threw for 302 yards and three touchdowns. "The whole nation knows what we can do."

What the Bills did was jump to a 17-0 lead through 15 minutes and 31-7 at halftime. Kelly hit Andre Reed, the AFC's leading receiver, for 65 and 16-yard touchdowns and Flip Johnson made his first NFL reception a 66-yard score off a deflected ball.

"It was the hottest half I've had, by far," said Kelly, who also threw for more than 300 yards and three TDs last week. "What a time to do it!

The Bills did it all over the field. When they weren't marching through the Jets' sieve-like defense, the Bills were pressuring Ken O'Brien. They sacked O'Brien five times and allowed the Jets just 14 yards total offense in the first quarter.

"It would be an understatement to say we were pumped up," said Bruce Smith, the All-Pro defensive end who had 21/2 sacks. It was his best effort since returning earlier this month from a 30-day substance abuse suspen-

"We had guys ready and dresv sed at seven o'clock," Smith said. "This was a chance to show what the Buffalo Bills can do and we

The Jets showed nothing. They were missing three starters tight end Mickey Shuler, offensive tackle Dave Cadigan and linebacker Alex Gordon. They lost another, guard Ted Banker, with a foot injury, and reserve running back Nuu Faaola was carried off the field on a stretcher in the fourth period when injured on a kickoff. He was to spend the night in a hospital for observation of a bruised neck

"The team is kind of in a daze right now," safety Erik McMillan said. The rookie was one of the few bright spots for New York, picking off a Kelly pass and running it from 40 yards for his first NFL touchdown. "When the team comes back to practice, we have to do some more soul searching and find out who really wants to play the game."

Kelly and Reed seemed to be playing their own game of catch in the first half. Reed, who tops the conference with 42 receptions, had all seven of his catches for 132 yards in the first half.

"I was one of the guys who was ready two hours before the game," he said. "I was a lot more excited and a lot more hyped than normal. We displayed we have the talent and we're ready for prime time."

After Scott Norwood capped a 59-yard drive with a 30-yard field goal, Kelly connected with Reed and Johnson for the long TD passes. Reed beat a bump at the line by Bobby Humphery, sped down the right sideline and took Kelly's perfect pass in stride. It was the only play of the drive.

Buffalo got lucky on its next score. Kelly's third-and-10 pass toward Robb Riddick was tipped into the air by safety Carl Howard. The ball went directly to Johnson, who eluded a tackle and

"I've always said that I'll take them any way we can get them,,' Kelly said.

"I should have had it," Howard said. "I've never felt so down in my life.

Just 44 seconds into the second period, the Bills made it 24-0 on Riddick's 1-yard dive. Reed caught his other touchdown after Johnny Hector's 1-yard run gave New York its first TD.

Veteran hurlers get mound call

By JIM DONAGHY AP Baseball Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. - John Tudor isn't sure how long he will pitch in Game 3 of the World Series after nearly three weeks of inactivity.

Bob Welch would just like to make it past the third inning. In four previous postseason starts, he has averaged 1 1-3 innings.

Tudor pitches for Los Angeles tonight as the Dodgers go for a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven series against Oakland. No team has ever rallied to win from a 3-0 de-

The Dodgers and A's traveled north after Sunday's game and worked out briefly at the Oakland Coliseum on Monday

Since Sept. 30, Tudor's work has been brief, too. In his last start of the season, the 34-year-old left-hander had spasms in his right hip in the second inning and was scratched from his scheduled start in Game 2 of the playoffs against New York. He pitched Game 4 and allowed eight hits and four runs in five innings "I'm working on nine days rest and it presents some problems," Tudor said. "I'm not hurt right now and that played no role in their decision (to start him in Game 3 instead of earlier)."

Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said when making the pitching plans for the Series, he decided to pitch Tudor in a game that figured to have more pressure. I made the decision that it would be easier for a veteran like John to have so much time between starts," Lasorda said. "I thought he could adjust to it better than (Tim) Belcher. Johns has been in the Series before and we felt it would be easy for him to pitch in the opponent's park."

Tudor came to the Dodgers on Aug. 16 from St. Louis for slugger Pedro Guerrero and was 4-3 with two no decisions and a 2.41 ERA in nine starts with Los Angeles.

The Dodgers made the trade after it became apparent lefthander Fernando Valenzuela would not make it back from a shoulder injury.

"The only experienced starter we had was Orel Hershiser and I told (general manager) Fred Claire we needed an experienced pitcher," Lasorda said.

Tudor is making his sixth world Series start with a 3-2 re cord and a 4.03 ERA. He made three starts in the 1985 Series against Kansas City and two more last year against Minne-

He won Games 1 and 4 against the Royals but was blown out in Game 7, allowing three hits and five runs in 2 1-3 innings as Kansas City won 11-0 behind Bret Saberhagen's five-hitter.

Last season, Tudor beat the Twins in Game 3 but lost Game 6 in the Metrodome, 11-5, and missed another chance to win a Series clincher.

"The big game expression is a media word," Tudor said. "It's an important game, but no bigger than opening days or some games in the middle of the season.

Tudor likes to paint the corners and can be sneaky fast. He must have pinpoint control because he's not fast enough to make a mistake around the plate against the A's power-packed lineup.

Oakland manager Tony La Russa said the A's have had mixed results against pitchers with Tudor's style.

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston Oiler quarterback Warren Moon thanked his offensive line for their support in his victorious return to the helm of his NFL team.

"It's not time for Christmas yet, but if we win the rest of our games, we'll win the national championship, and that's a nice feeling." That was UCLA coach Terry Donahue's reaction Monday when he learned that the Bruins were ranked No. 1 in this week's Associated Press college poll for the first time in 21 years. Not so fast, Terry. True, UCLA lays third-ranked Southern California on Nov. 19, but so does

Nov. 26, and the Irish have been known to do some nearimpossible things in past polls.

If UCLA and Notre Dame keep winning, there's no way they can meet in a bowl game — unless Notre Dame suddenly joins the Big Ten. They've already beaten Big Ten teams Michigan, Michigan State and Purdue.

Notre Dame's 31-30 victory over Miami knocked the defending national champion Hurricanes from the top spot after a six-week stay. The Fighting Irish, meanwhile, moved up from second-ranked Notre Dame on fourth place last week to No. 2, their highest ranking since they were No. 1 on Sept. 14, 1981.

UCLA, 6-0 after a 38-21 victory over California, received 33 of 60 first-place votes and 1,169 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The Bruins were second last week.

The last time they were ranked No. 1 was on Nov. 13, 1967, when they had a 7-0-1 record. But they lost their next two games and finished the regular season 7-2-1. "I actually feel it's too early to national championship because determine who the best team in

Murdock takes over as Longhorns' quarterback

AUSTIN (AP) - Redshirt freshman Mark Murdock passed his way into the starting quarterback job for the Texas Longhorns, who have passed up Shannon Kelley, the team's senior starter since the beginning of the season.

Texas head football coach David McWilliams announced his decision Monday, saying that Murdock deserved a shot at the top job for his role in Texas' rally that fell short against Southwest Conference-leading Arkansas.

On Saturday, Murdock rallied Texas from a 24-3 third quarter deficit to within striking range, but the Razorbacks intercepted him with 2:10 remaining to preserve a 27-24 win.

"I don't think there's any question that Mark deserves to be the first team quarterback," said McWilliams at his weekly news conference.

Also Saturday, the Longhorns lost junior defensive tackles Ken Hackemack and Rocky Allen for the season with knee injuries.

Hackemack and Allen underwent arthroscopic surgery Monday and McWilliams said it appears they both suffered ligament and cartilage damage. Both will take at least three months to recover, he said.

McWilliams said he made his quarterback decision after watching films of the game and talking with his assistant coaches. He wanted to announce Murdock's promotion as soon as possible to avoid any guessing on who would start,

On Saturday, Kelley was benched after completing four of 10 passes for 19 yards. Murdock completed 20 for 28 for 215 yards and two touchdowns and was named the Longhorns' most valuable offensive player in the game.

The loss dropped Texas to 1-1 and 3-3 overall, while Arkansas improved its record to 3-0 and 6-0.

Murdock, 6-2, 189 pounds, will start Oct. 29 when Texas visits Texas Tech in SWC action, McWilliams said. The Longhorns are idle this weekend.

McWilliams said if Murdock is not able to perform well against Texas Tech, he will put Kelley back in. He said both quarterbacks will share time working with the first team during practice.

Kelley, 6-1, 170 pounds, was a backup to Bret Stafford last year and saw action in seven games in which he completed 47 of 74 passes. Through six games this season, Kelley connected on 70 of 129 passes for 862 yards, three touchdowns and seven interceptions.

McWilliams said he was thankful for the open date, as the Longhorns try to recover from a string of injuries that has devastated the defense.

Reserve Longhorn tackle Roger Fritcher has a swollen knee and is questionable for the Tech game. Steve Llewellyn, the starter at left tackle, has been playing with a bad shoulder and also is questionable for the game.

Students fashion primitive tools for 'pre-tech' vs. 'high-tech

Editor's Note - The first thing Curtis Runnels tells his archaeology students is that if they were stranded on a desert island they probably wouldn't last a day. The students then proceed to fashion the primitive tools and weapons used by prehistoric man. The premise is to show how modern technology is derived from ancient technology, the connection between "pre-tech" and "high-

BOSTON (AP) — In a Boston University science laboratory, a student trims the top of a clay pot with a razor-sharp chip of volca-nic glass obtained by striking a rock with a deer antler.

At the other end of a long table, another undergraduate struggles with a length of sinew to reinforce his beer can holder made of rafea, a kind of vine.

Another student is making a spear-throwing device called an atlatl which was used by prehistoric man to obtain dinner.

It's all part of Curtis Runnels' archaeology class, "Prehistoric Technology and Culture," where few concessions to modern man are permitted.

The general idea is to make today's high-tech students understand that the evolution from flint

Court to view conviction for flag's burning

By JAMES H. RUBIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to consider reinstating a criminal conviction against a man who burned an American flag at a demonstration during the 1984 Republican National Convention in

The court said it will review a ruling that the flag burning was a form of symbolic expression protected by the Constitution.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals last April threw out the conviction of Gregory Lee Johnson, who had been sentenced to one year in jail and fined $2,000.

Johnson was arrested on Aug. 22, 1984, while participating in a demonstration against the Reagan administration and the Republicans.

The protest had culminated with a rally in front of Dallas City Hall that included political chants and the flag burning.

Johnson was convicted by a jury of violating a state law banning the desecration of a venerated object.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said, "Given the context of an organized demonstration, speeches, slogans and the distribution of literature, anyone who observed (Johnson's) act would have understood the message that (he) intended to convey. The act for which (he) was convicted was clearly 'speech' contemplated by the First Amendment.

The state court said the Texas law against flag desecration is too broad because it seeks to curb expression likely to cause "serious offense.

'One cannot equate 'serious offense' with incitement to breach the peace.

Police officers who arrested Johnson said they were seriously offended by the flag burning.

There also was testimony that the charred fragments of the flag were collected by an employee of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers who was so upset that he later buried the flag's remains in his backyard.

But the state court said seriously offending someone is not the same as inciting to riot - an activity that permits restraints on free speech.

"One cannot equate 'serious offense' with incitement to breach the peace," the state court said.

The state court also rejected arguments by law enforcement officials that the anti-desecration statute legitimately preserves the flag "as a symbol of unity." "Recognizing that the right to differ is the centerpiece of our First Amendment freedoms, a government cannot mandate by fiat a feeling of unity in its citizens," the state court said. "Therefore that very same government cannot carve out a symbol of unity and prescribe a set of approved messages to be associated with that symbol when it cannot mandate the status or feeling the symbol purports to present.

The state court did not declare the law itself unconstitutional. It declined to decide whether there might be situations where flag burning does not represent symbolic speech and may be prosecuted.

knapping to computer processing wasn't as simple as it may seem. "We're more or less learning how it started," says David Cowan, a 19-year-old psychology major from Los Angeles.

'It takes a lot more thinking to understand the basic stuff than it takes to understand the modern technology," he says.

'It takes a lot more thinking to understand the basic stuff than it takes to understand the modern technology.'

Runnels, an assistant professor of archaeology, developed the class four years ago when he was at Stanford University. Students fashion arrowheads and clay pots, start fires and speculate on how three million years ago primitive man figured out how to the volcanic glass to make the cutting tool.

On the first day of class, Runnels tells his charges something they probably already know but never really dwelled on: that they are slaves to technology.

"If you were to be thrust down on some desert island somewhere," he says, with considerable exaggeration, "you guys would be dead in a day."

"We're so dependent on this division of labor and other people doing our technology for us that most of us cannot manipulate our technology," he adds. "You can use a computer but you can't make one. In fact, you can't even make your dinnerware. Metal or ing skills developed millions of years ago in Africa. Metallurgy is studied next, followed by pottery, basketry and monumental architecture, such as Stonehenge and the pyramids.

'If you were to be thrust down on some desert island somewhere, you guys would be dead in a day.'

"There's a logic to this progression because what happens is, as technology changes, society changes," Runnels says. 'There's a complex feedback relationship between these two things.'

As an example, Runnels cites what he calls the "prehistoric arms race" some historians believe developed about 5,000 years ago when someone discovered more effective than ones of wood and stone.

"All of a sudden there are new offensive and defensive weapons. in the world," Runnels says, sitting in an office decorated with a bronze sword, a basket filled with spears and sticks, and a tray holding fossilized acorns from 2800 B.C. Greece.

"Now new fortifications walls are necessary. Now you've got to have those weapons if those guys have got them," Runnels says.

Runnels approaches technological advances such as metallurgy, which was developed between 8,000 and 9,000 years ago, by comparing the techniques of prehis-
