Hostage release prompts report of U.S.-Iran talks

By DONNA ABU-NASR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The release of an Indian hostage prompted a flurry of reports today about a secret U.S.-Iran deal to free more captives and about the imminent release of a British hostage.

But Secretary of State George P. Shultz has denied reports that Washington is negotiating with Iran to release hostages and said that "anyone who tries to cut across our policies should butt out."

Lebanese kidnappers warned on Thursday that two American hostages may be in danger if U.N. troops are sent to Lebanon to oversee presidential elections.

Sixteen foreigners, including nine Americans, are missing in Lebanon. Most are believed held by Shiite Moslem extremists backed by Iran.

On Monday, the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine freed Indian hostage Mithileshwar Singh after 20 months of captivity. Singh, a professor of finance at Beirut University College, is a legal resident of the United States.

In Jerusalem, the new English-language weekly The Nation reported today the United States struck a deal with Iran to free U.S. hostages in Lebanon, including the supply of arms and spare parts to Tehran through South Korea.

The unattributed report said the U.S. government agreed to pay $7 million in ransom to the militants holding the hostages but refused the group's demands for immunity from prosecution.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the report was "not true."

The report said the U.S. refusal to guarantee immunity angered the kidnappers and prompted them to release Singh instead of Alann Steen, a U.S. citizen whose release had been expected.

In addition to Steen, 49, of Boston, the group holds Jesse Turner, 41, a native of Boise, Idaho; and Robert Polhill, 54, of New York City. All four taught at Beirut University College.

Shultz said at the United Nations on Thursday that anyone who claims to be a U.S. envoy to secret U.S.-Iran negotiations is lying.

"There is not going to be any deal," Shultz said. "The hostages should be released."

Shultz responded to questions about statements in Paris by former President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr of Iran. Bani-Sadr said an agent of Vice President George Bush, Richard Lawless, negotiated Singh's release.

Two Beirut publications reported today that Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, missing in Lebanon for more than 20 months, will be freed in 72 hours.

One report was carried by the conservative daily Al-Anwar, based in Christian east Beirut. It has no record of authoritative reports on the hostage issue, and there was no way to confirm the report.

Ash-Shiraa, based in Moslem west Beirut, said Waite and two other British hostages will be released "very soon." Both publications cited unidentified informed sources for their reports.

Ash-Shiraa gained international fame when it broke the story of secret U.S. arms sales to Iran in November, 1986. But its recent reports on the hostages have not been accurate.

Waite disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, after leaving his west Beirut hotel for a rendezvous with Islamic Jihad, or Holy War, which holds American hostages Terry Anderson, 40, and Thomas Sutherland, 56.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, is the longest-held captive. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

On Thursday, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, which claims to hold Joseph James Cicippio of Norristown, Pa., and Edward Austin Tracy, of Burlington, Vt., said the hostages may be in danger if U.N. troops are sent to Lebanon.

"We shall use all the cards to thwart these conspiracies, including the card of the safety of the hostages," said a statement typewritten in Arabic and delivered to the independent newspaper An-Nahar.

In an accompanying photo, the 58-year-old Cicippio was sitting on a blanket-covered bed with his hands clasped in his lap, dressed in a navy blue track suit with red stripes. He was smiling as he faced the camera, but looked considerably thinner than in previous pictures released by his captors.

Cicippio was acting comptroller at the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped on the school's campus on Sept. 12, 1986. Tracy, 57, an author, was kidnapped Oct. 21, 1986 in Moslem west Beirut.

U.S. unemployment rate drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment fell 0.2 percentage point to 5.4 percent last month as payrolls grew by 255,000 jobs, 100,000 of them in education with the opening of the fall school term, the government said today.

The decline erased an August gain and returned joblessness to July's level.

Across private industry, the job gain was just 142,000. It was the second straight month of little expansion after average monthly increases of 300,000 over the first seven months of 1988, the Labor Department said.

Assembly-line manufacturing jobs fell by 19,000 atop a loss of 18,000 jobs in August. That reversed an upward trend that had persisted for 1½ years. Oil and gas industry employment also fell for the second month in a row after edging up gradually across the previous 12 months.

Together, those industries had averaged a monthly job gain of 65,000 from January through July.

Adult men accounted for nearly all of the decline in the overall rate last month, with joblessness falling from 4.9 percent in August to 4.5 percent last month.

Except for Hispanics, whose rate fell from 8.4 percent to 7.4 percent, there was little change among the various population groups tracked.

The September figures show that the number of unemployed Americans fell by 255,000 to 6.6 million.

The number of "discouraged workers," those who have given up the hunt for a job in the belief that they could not find one, rose from 910,000 to 930,000 in the third quarter of 1988. More than half of the discouraged workers were women and one-third were blacks.

"Monthly increases in total payroll employment have slowed in the third quarter, averaging only a little more than 200,000 per month compared with 340,000 in the first half of the year," said See RATE, Page 2

Coker, wife to face child murder charge trial in San Antonio

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

SAN ANTONIO — A San Antonio judge has set Oct. 24 as date for a trial by jury of Eric Lee Coker and his wife Theresa Campos, accused of murdering their infant son and burying him in a San Antonio park.

Coker and Campos also face injury to a child charges by Pampa authorities in connection with the near-fatal beating of their two-month-old daughter, Terry Ann Wilson, in February.

Prosecuting attorney Mary Roman of San Antonio said 226th District Judge Sid Harle has given the case a "special setting" or top priority.

Coker and Campos were jointly indicted on the San Antonio murder charge. However, Roman said Campos' attorney will file a motion of severance so that Campos will be tried separately.

"It's my opinion that the judge will grant the motion," Roman said, "because Coker was out on probation at the time (the murder was committed)."

Subpoenas in the murder trial have been issued for some local residents, the prosecuting attorney confirmed. Roman said not all the subpoenas have been served and she did not have a list of names of those who had been served.

A trial date had first been set for July 11. However, a local judge filling the 226th District judicial vacancy granted a continuance and ordered psychiatric exams by Bexar County psychiatrist Dr. John C. Sparks for both Coker, 21, and Campos, 19.

The couple faced a June 27 trial date on the Pampa charges, but local authorities agreed informally to allow them to be tried for the San Antonio murder charge.

If Gray County officials are not satisfied with the results of the murder trial, the couple will be brought to Pampa to stand trial on the injury to a child complaint.

Coker and Campos, also known as Mike and Tina Wilson, were indicted by a San Antonio grand jury after Coker led authorities to the body of their 5-month-old son, Eric Jr., buried in San Antonio's Kallison Park.

Coker confessed the murder to Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan after his arrest in April on the unrelated injury to a child charge.

On April 8, Coker led San Antonio police to Kallison Park, where they searched for approximately four hours. Changes in the park's landscaping had apparently confused him, park officials said.

After several digging attempts, an infant's skeletal remains, later identified as those of Eric Coker Jr., were located in a brushy area south of the park entrance. Cause of death was ruled to be a blow to the head with a blunt object.

The murder indictment alleges Coker beat Eric Jr. to death, then buried the boy in January 1987 while still on probation in Bexar County for an earlier beating of the child.

Authorities believe Coker and Campos fled to Pampa after the incident last year, renting an apartment on South Cuyler Street and changing their names to Mike and Tina Wilson.

Pampa authorities became involved when they investigated a child injury report Feb. 13. Terry Ann Wilson, 2 months old at the time, suffered fractured arms, ribs and a broken ankle, and had lacerations all over her body, police said. The roof of her mouth was also reportedly split open, according to police reports.

Local authorities say some of the infant's injuries were as much as three weeks old at the time she was first seen by a physician.

Terry Ann has since recovered from her injuries and has been placed in foster care, said Assistant District Attorney Harold Comer.

Young girl on bicycle struck by car, not injured seriously

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A nine-year-old Pampa girl was struck by a car late Thursday morning as she attempted to ride her bicycle across North Hobart Street.

The child, Kristy Mojica, 520 N. Faulkner, was crossing at the intersection of North Hobart and Montague and, according to witnesses, apparently failed to look both ways. The child's bike was struck by a 1981 Oldsmobile driven by Ann Marie Brown, 1827 Williston. Police said Brown was not speeding and tried to avoid striking the child.

The child was transported to Coronado Hospital for treatment of cuts and lacerations. Police officials said it was amazing that she was not hurt seriously.

This morning she was listed in stable condition and hospital officials said she might possibly be released today.

Officials at Horace Mann Elementary, where the girl is a student, said she had been sent home by the school nurse to get her mother. They said the child, who lives four houses from the school, was given specific instructions to bring the parent back to the school to discuss a matter.

The family does not have a phone, according to the school officials. Apparently when the child did not find her mother home, she got on her bike and began to search the area for her.

Tom Lindsey, Horace Mann principal, said the child was told to come back to the school right away, but did not.

"Normally the school nurse would walk her there and back, but it was one of those days where you have a bunch of parents in the hall. The nurse verbally went over what the child was to do and had her repeat it back," Lindsey said.

He said it was the first time a child had been allowed to go home unattended and that it would not be allowed to happen again.

Police reports indicate the third-grader, after being struck, was thrown into the windshield of the car, causing it to smash. When the car stopped, the child was then thrown more than 20 feet onto the pavement.

Parts of the bicycle were found 58 feet from the accident scene.

Rate

Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, in congressional testimony.

Excluding teachers and other government workers, health services was the biggest source of new jobs last month, with such payrolls growing by 62,000. In contrast, the government said, business services, one of the strongest job sources across the six-year expansion, showed little growth.

United Way near 20 percent

Pampa's United Way fundraising campaign neared 20 percent of its goal of $338,455 following the third volunteer check-in Thursday at the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building.

A total of $11,689 in donations was announced at the meeting, putting total collections to date at 19.2 percent of its goal, reported Katrina Bigham, Pampa United Way director. Bigham said she had received an additional $2,410 in donations early today that will be included in the fourth check-in total.

Top division awards, donated by Pampa Family Services, were presented to Commercial Division with a week's total of $2,635, Wholesale trade added 25,000 jobs in September, continuing a pattern of consistent growth brought about largely through rising exports caused by the fallen value of the dollar.

On the eve of today's report, economists said they had expected the rate to decline last month.

"Even if the unemployment rate went up, Dukakis would not get any help because the financial markets would react positively," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Co., a private consulting house. Lawrence Chimere, chairman of the WEFA Group, a consulting firm based in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., predicted that employment, inflation and trade figures between now and the election all will paint a rosy economy.

Vice President and Republican presidential nominee George Bush has repeatedly focused on the creation of some 15 million new jobs under the Reagan administration since the end of the 1981-82 recession, which had sent the jobless rate to double digits.

Dukakis has countered that the issue is not the number of new jobs being created, but the quality of those jobs, saying hourly wages after adjustments for inflation have fallen since President Reagan assumed office in 1981.

August figures on inflation and average wage, bolstered that argument. The Labor Department reported that real hourly earnings in terms of purchasing power dropped 1.3 percent during the month, the worst decline since the government began collecting figures on them in 1964.

The Labor Department said today that average hourly wages rose 0.5 percentage point last month to $9.37 after declining by two cents an hour from May through August.

Senate OKs bill excluding interest from college-bound Savings Bonds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled Senate is eagerly lending its support to a plan, already endorsed by Vice President George Bush, that would help lower- and middle-income families use U.S. savings bonds to finance higher education.

The proposal would provide a tax exclusion for interest earned on a bond that is redeemed to pay for college or vocational education. Its sponsor, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said the plan is simple and risk-free, giving "children security in their future without creating a new bureaucracy or spending program."

Even though it was recommended by President Reagan in his budget, endorsed by Bush in his presidential campaign and passed by the Senate on Thursday on a 94-0 vote, there is no assurance it will become law.

That is because the Senate attached it to a catchall bill whose main purpose is to correct mistakes and clear up ambiguities in the far-reaching tax overhaul package enacted in 1986.

The Senate bill also includes a variety of special tax cuts costing about $2.7 billion over three years, plus the tax increases to pay for them. By comparison, the version approved by the House has about $7.5 billion worth of tax cuts and increases.

The Reagan administration opposes several parts of the House bill, and House leaders are reluctant to give in to the Senate on some of those provisions. With Congress pressing to adjourn next week for the year, it may be difficult for House and Senate negotiators to agree on a compromise.

Senate leaders hoped to wrap up work on the bill today.

Senators spent most of Thursday debating an amendment that would have raised taxes on cigarettes, liquor, wine and beer to pay for part of a big anti-drug bill. The tax increase is likely to be considered again next week when the Senate considers the drug legislation.

The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., was defeated on a 60-33 vote. A substitute by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, that would have cut a handful of spending programs, including legal-services aid and low-income energy assistance, to fight drug abuse, failed 72-22.

Earlier, the Senate wasted little time approving Kennedy's amendment to help families pay for education. The provision is not in the House-passed tax bill.

Under the proposal, which Kennedy first introduced a year ago, a family could avoid paying taxes on the interest earned on bonds that are redeemed to pay for college or vocational schooling. The full exclusion would be available to families with incomes under $60,000 and would be reduced gradually as income rises, disappearing for those whose earnings reach $80,000.

Dukakis, Bentsen campaign at steel plant

By TIM LOTT
Associated Press Writer

LONE STAR (AP) — O.J. Morrow was standing in the dry grass with a few friends, waiting for the Democratic nominee for president to arrive and tell him something good.

Not that Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and his running mate, Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, had to convince him of anything. But the past few years have been filled with bad times that Morrow hopes can be changed.

Morrow was one of many at the political rally laid off from the Lone Star Steel Co. plant through the years.

"I'm a hundred percent for them," Morrow said. "We've had enough of the Republicans."

With that as the dominant sentiment on the grounds of the plant in northeast Texas Thursday, Dukakis and Bentsen had to do little persuading.

"I don't have to tell you what's happened to jobs and industry, to your jobs and your future in the past eight years," Dukakis said to hundreds of supporters, many who are unemployed.

The company had 4,500 hourly workers in 1981, but that number has been whittled down to 700.

"I've seen a lot of my friends leave here," because of layoffs, said Bob Hampton, president of United Steelworkers of American Local 4134.

"If I wasn't union president, I wouldn't have a job," he said.

The plant makes flat rolled steel and oil field pipe products, but like a lot of other state industry it was crippled when the price per barrel for Texas crude plummeted.

The local economic conditions became the theme of Dukakis' stumping and played well with the crowd. Dukakis blamed the layoff of many workers from the plant and other industries on international trade practices.

"Foreign companies are buying up real estate, buying up companies, buying up plants in the country. Pretty soon, we're going to be tenants in our own country," Dukakis said.

"We're going to give you a national energy policy that makes sense for America and helps to bring jobs back to this plant in the east part of Texas," Dukakis said.

Dukakis and Bentsen were campaigning in Texas the day after Bentsen's 90-minute debate with Indiana Senator Dan Quayle.

Dukakis praised Bentsen's performance in the debate, saying, "Last night, the eyes of Texas and the whole nation were on you, and they liked what they saw."

After being presented with a plaque bearing a star representing Lone Star Steel, Bentsen took the podium.

"After listening to Dan Quayle for 90 minutes last night, I can understand why he kept talking about job training," Bentsen said.

"We're going to stand up for the working people of this country," Bentsen said.

Hundreds of sign-waving Democrats — some dressed in suits and ties, others in overalls and seed-company hats — yelled for the two Democrats and chanted, "Where was George?"

"Like God Made Agent Orange, Bush Is A Texan," said a hand-painted sign held by one man.

The rally included barbecue lines, a rap song from local elementary school children and the Ore City High School band.

After the rally, Dukakis and Bentsen met for about 30 minutes at the Gregg County Airport with nearly a dozen newspaper editors and reporters, most from East Texas.

At one point during the meeting, Dukakis was asked to explain his views on gun control.

"I've always supported the rights of hunters and sportsmen to own and use weapons," and, "the right of homeowners, subject to state law, to protect themselves," he said. "My concern is with teenagers in some of the major cities in this country that are running around with AK47s and Uzis," both high-powered weapons.

Following the meeting, Dukakis was asked about speculation that he intended to scale back campaign efforts in Texas if recent advertisements in the state don't produce higher ratings.

"We're going to win in Texas," Dukakis said. "That's why we're here."

Bush unveils energy policy to assist gas, oil producers in U.S.

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

MIDLAND (AP) — On a campaign stop in the town where he started in the oil business 37 years ago, Republican presidential nominee George Bush unveiled an energy policy aimed at helping domestic oil and gas producers.

Vice President Bush, who moved to Midland in 1951 and started the independent Zapata Offshore Co., said Thursday that he favors tax incentives to stimulate oil production, exploration and research and development.

"The American oil industry is too important to our national security to have its economic underpinnings totally dependent on the political climate in the Middle East," Bush told about 1,000 people at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. Most in the crowd were Texans in the oil business.

The Republican nominee seemed well at ease with his audience, many of whom he counted as old friends.

The deregulation of natural gas is necessary because "that's what would be best for both the industry and the American people," Bush said, adding that he would encourage the use of alternative fuels such as methanol.

Standing before an array of motionless pumpjacks at a museum display, Bush told the crowd he understood the consequences of falling oil prices.

On Thursday, the November delivery price of the benchmark West Texas intermediate crude closed at $12.66 a barrel, up six cents from a three-year low recorded Wednesday.

To make oil exploration and production more profitable in the light of such low prices, Bush said he favored tax incentives for low-output wells and tax credits designed to encourage drilling of new wells and and more production from existing wells.

"It sounded encouraging," said independent oilman Kevin Butler of Midland. "It'll be hard to get through Congress, but it gives us a little hope."

Butler had said before the speech that he hoped Bush would recommend tax incentives to give producers a break.

John Dorr of Pecos, another independent oilman, agreed with Butler. "It's been three years since I've sunk a bit into the ground," he said.

In Fort Worth earlier Thursday, Bush delivered an anti-crime speech in which he told an audience of law-enforcement officials that he advocates the resumption of a federal death penalty in some cases.

"Some crimes are so brutal, so heinous, that those who commit them should pay the ultimate sanction," Bush said at an appearance sponsored by the Dallas-Fort Worth Crime Commission.

The vice president proposed doubling the national budget for prison construction and developing a Cabinet-level program to combat street gangs. He attacked Democrat Michael Dukakis as being a soft on crime as governor of Massachusetts.

Protestors object to North's appearance

AUSTIN (AP) — Former U.S. Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North touted Ronald Reagan, George Bush and the values of an "unashamed conservative" to about 400 people at a dinner designed to help him raise money for legal expenses.

But outside the hotel where North spoke Thursday night, about 60 demonstrators protested his visit and one man was arrested.

The man, wearing a sign saying "Don't do the crime if you can't do the time," apparently damaged a part of the hotel's sprinkler, sending a stream of water into the air, police said.

Other demonstrators, organized by Chicanos Against Military Intervention in Latin America, dispersed after several hours when police said they would be arrested for criminal trespass if they did not leave.

North is charged with conspiring to defraud the U.S. government by secretly using funds from Iranian arms purchases to provide supplies for the Nicaraguan rebel forces.

Money for North's defense at his trial is being collected by the North Legal Defense and Family Safety Trust in Washington. About 400 people attended a $50-a-plate dinner at the hotel, and an estimated 30 attended an earlier $250-a-person reception.

Earlier Thursday, North cancelled an El Paso appearance scheduled for today.

Jack O'Brien, who was organizing North's El Paso luncheon appearance, said North cited the possibility of violence by demonstrators as a reason for canceling. But Charles Haddox, who led a group planning to protest in El Paso, said North supporters may have raised the specter of violence "as a face-saving tactic" because reservations were not as high as expected.

North was appearing at a breakfast fund-raising event this morning in Amarillo.

In Austin, demonstrators carried signs, held banners and chanted as North supporters entered and left the hotel.

"Feed the children, not the war," and "Ollie North is not a hero — he's a big fat zero," were among the slogans chanted.

One man entering the hotel said, "I'm sorry I forgot my roach spray."

The local organizer of the fund-raising dinner, Adrian Van Zelfden, introduced North to the diners, who included former Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton at the head table.

Van Zelfden noted that North was born in San Antonio and said, "I really think that Oliver North is a good guy and deserves our help."

The audience cheered, applauded and gave a standing ovation to North.

Police arrest 'dead' woman after reading obituary notice

BEAUMONT (AP) — When they saw an obituary memorial notice for the 24-year-old woman in an area newspaper, Groves police officers were caught by surprise.

But they ended up bringing her back from the dead — by arresting her.

Police officers, who had arrest warrants for Irias "Irita" Lopez, saw the paid obituary notice in Wednesday's Beaumont Enterprise.

City Marshal Mark Domingue said he thought it odd that the memorial did not list a funeral home.

"I then called the church listed, and they said it was the first they had heard of it," he said.

That's when he began to think it was a ploy, Domingue said, so he decided to go to Lopez's workplace.

"I saw her run and hide from me," Domingue said.

Lopez was arrested on a charge of delivery of a controlled substance and two charges of bond forfeiture. She was booked into Jefferson County Jail, and bond was set at $1,000 for each warrant.

Then Domingue telephoned the newspaper and explained that he knew Lopez was not dead because she had just been arrested.

But Domingue said Lopez told police she did not place the memorial notice.

"She said someone was playing a trick on her and had done so before," he said.

An Enterprise employee said the woman came to the newspaper office and paid to place the advertisement in Wednesday's edition.

House OKs benefits for young hero

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four decades after Calvin Graham became a wounded World War II hero, the House has voted to give him back pay and disability benefits the Navy decided he didn't deserve because he lied about his age to enlist.

Backers of the bill say it is long overdue for Graham, a Fort Worth man who enlisted when he was 12 and was injured during the battle of Guadalcanal aboard the deck of the USS South Dakota, when shrapnel tore through his mouth.

While the military has given Graham disability benefits for the loss of one tooth, he says he lost all of his teeth from the injury.

And the military has steadfastly refused to give Graham his mustering-out pay; in 1980 it offered to compensate him in 1934 dollars for a total of $337.

Rep. Martin Frost, a Dallas Democrat who sponsored the bill passed on a unanimous voice vote in the House Tuesday, and House Speaker Jim Wright, Graham's congressman, said paying someone today in 1934 dollars is a scandal.

"This bill gives Mr. Graham his readjustments in 1988 dollars. This is only fair considering that it is 45 years late in coming," the two Democrats said in a joint statement.

"Calvin Graham has been denied recognition and respect for 45 years. We're glad to have played a role in bringing simple justice to this hero."

Frost sponsored the bill for Wright, who as speaker does not introduce such legislation.

Graham said Thursday the bill's passage in the House "just took a weight off my heart," but that he's worried the Senate, in its rush to adjourn for the year, might not take time to consider the legislation.

"I'm still here with my fingers crossed," he said. "It's not that much money, it's the pride of the thing to me — that would be worth a lot to me."

The legislation would compensate Graham with $18,000 for his mouth injury and give him mustering-out benefits of $4,917 — the 1988 total, with interest.

Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is attempting to get the Senate to act quickly on Graham's behalf and has asked Sen. Howell T. Heflin, D-Ala., to help move the bill out of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee, which Heflin chairs.

Opinion

Duke gets NEA's support. So what?

Michael Dukakis recently copped an endorsement from yet another special-interest group, the National Education Association. Union boss Mary Hatwood Futrell noted that Dukakis was endorsed by 86 percent of the 8,479 NEA Representative Assembly delegates who received endorsement ballots in the mail. "No other candidate running for president has ever received more support in an NEA mail ballot endorsement process," Futrell said. "This vote tells us that our members see Michael Dukakis as the most pro-education president in our history."

Really, the vote tells us only what the 8,479 local union bosses think, not what the NEA's 1.9 million members think. Futrell inaccurately portrays the union's leadership as identical with its membership. The NEA talks about democracy and the teaching of democratic values in the classroom, but when it comes to acting on such values, the union didn't ask the opinions of its full membership on such an important issue. Why? Because Dukakis either would have received an endorsement amounting to a much smaller percentage, or rank-and-file NEA members might even have endorsed George Bush.

Why do so many teachers remain NEA members, despite its opposition to their own politics? Because federal and state laws often coerce them, overtly or covertly, into belonging and paying dues. Most teachers are ordinary folk, not given to radical politics. How many teachers, for example, back the actions taken at the NEA's 1987 convention in Los Angeles, where NEA bosses:

- opposed voucher systems that would give parents some choice in which schools their children attend, thereby rewarding good teachers and schools while reprimanding bad ones;
- pledged to work for a federal "peace academy" as a counter to military academies;
- endorsed the distribution of contraceptives in public schools, which many parents disapprove?

Futrell has called Dukakis a man who would work "side by side with the American education community to improve American education." Translation: The NEA would run the Education Department of a Dukakis administration as its own fiefdom, just as it did when Education was made a separate department under Jimmy Carter.

Even though Ronald Reagan has reneged on his promise to eliminate the department, he has at least shut the NEA out of the corridors of federal power. This may account for the tiny increase in education standards in recent years. After all, the decline of American education over the past 30 years coincided with the rise in federal control over the schools and the rise in power of the NEA. Only when the schools have been returned to the control of parents and local teachers, preferably in a privatized system, will standards arch upward again.

'Last Temptation' is a stinkeroo

WASHINGTON—Out of sheer curiosity I took an afternoon off last week and went to see The Last Temptation of Christ. I have been going to movies since the days of Clara Bow, and I am now prepared to render an expert opinion.

Setting aside all the theological issues, and viewing the film as simply a movie, I pronounce this consumer's view: The Last Temptation is the worst movie I ever watched. What a stinkeroo!

It is not only the worst movie in my experience, it is also the longest. The first hour consumes 224 minutes. The second hour is twice as long. The concluding 40 minutes last until next Tuesday. In the time it takes to watch this turkey, you could take in two double-headers at Fenway Park and have a far better return on a six-buck investment.

Why did I buy a ticket? Jerry Falwell made me do it. He and other fundamentalists kicked up such a storm that I had to see what all the shouting was about. Now I know: It was the customers shouting to get their money back.

Professional critics have heaped praise on director Martin Scorsese. They have gushed girlishly over the performance of Willem Dafoe as Christ. "Prodigious," says one. "Stunningly brilliant," says another. "Masterpiece," says Time's Richard Corliss.

What hokum! Let me offer examples. During the prolonged crucifixion sequence, about 20 spectators gather near the cross. It is not clear why they are there. Perhaps they too had the afternoon off. From time to time they lunge and surge; they do something with their hands.

But these extras constitute a studio audience, reacting on cue. They surge when the sign says

James J. Kilpatrick

"surge" and they lunge when the sign says "lunge." What is meant by the gestures? Are they waving fists or waving bye-bye? These docile demonstrators are held at bay by a cordon of Keystone legionnaires. "Look tough!" says the cue board. Tough you want, tough you get.

At the moment when Christ is betrayed and captured, following Luke 22:50, one of Christ's followers smites the servant of the high priest and cuts off his right ear. Sure enough, the ear falls to the pavement. Clunk! But this is a most remarkable ear. It is a snap-on ear. Dafoe, as Christ, picks up the ear and neatly snaps it back in place. This was direction of the Lego school.

You will recall the wedding at Cana, at which Jesus changes water to wine. Scorsese undertakes to improve upon John 2:1-10. This prodigious and brilliant director turns Dafoe, as Christ, into a smirking amateur magician playing a Rotarians' luncheon.

"It's water," says a stooge.
"Nah," says the prestidigitator, "it's wine. G'wan. Taste it! I tell yuh, it's wine! It's the real juice."
Sure enough it is wine. Whaddya know? The stooge can't believe it. How did he DO that?

Let us go to the wilderness. There we are first tempted by a snake who speaks to Jesus. The serpent speaks as if the serpent were Lily Tomlin imitating Goldie Hawn imitating Mae West. This is direction?

The serpent is followed by a toothless lion. The lion scarcely can keep awake. Neither can the audience. The lion is followed by a fig tree sent from the prop room. And all this is followed by a jet of fire as if an oil well were burning off gas.

Scorsese's actors do not speak. They declaim. They do not act. They gesture. Saul, having become Paul, might be signing wildly to the deaf. It is hard to place the apostles' accents. Were they brought up in Brooklyn? The Bronx? The lower East Side? New Joisey? The devil-angel speaks British, thus placing hell somewhere between Oxford and Cambridge, a disconcerting thought.

The penultimate sequence, the one that set off the uproar, is a dream sequence. On the cross, Jesus faces the last temptation that gives the film its name. He dreams of renouncing his divinity; he dreams of marrying Mary Magdalene. In the dream they literally tumble in the hay.

The scene is about as pornographic as the embrace of Dagwood and Blondie, but it sufficed to give The Last Temptation an R rating, thus tempting the sucker customers to see a little hot stuff.

We are told that movie criticism should be balanced. No movie is wholly bad. Very well, I wish to be fair. In the scene with Pontius Pilate, a horse is standing stage right. For the Pilate, let me say that the horse is well cast.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Oct. 7, the 281st day of 1988. There are 85 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Oct. 7, 1777, the second Battle of Saratoga began during the American Revolution. The British forces, under Gen. John Burgoyne, would surrender 10 days later.

On this date:
In 1765, the Stamp Act Congress convened in New York to draw up colonial grievances against England.

In 1849, author Edgar Allan Poe died in Baltimore, Md., at the age of 40.

In 1868, Cornell University was inaugurated in Ithaca, N.Y.

In 1916, in a lopsided college football victory, Georgia Tech defeated Cumberland University 222-0 in Atlanta.

In 1949, the Republic of East Germany was formed.

In 1950, the United Nations General Assembly approved an advance by UN forces north of the 38th Parallel in the Korean Conflict.

In 1954, Marian Anderson became the first black singer hired by the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York.

Advertising's made us great

I love advertising! I'm out of bed every morning at 3:30 and off to the Teletypes, telephones and typewriter with all the persistent excitement of a prospector panning for gold.

But so much of what the world calls "news" is written in either mud or blood.

So — I love advertising!
However menacing the world's trucebreakers and troublemakers and terrorists, the commercial portion of every program is certain to include some good news: "There really is a work glove that does not fall apart." "There is an instant glue that keeps its promises, a battery that will outlast your car."

I love advertising.
I have learned that I cannot advertise anything which I do not use. I cannot imagine selling with conviction any product which has not first sold itself to me.

Yet, some days the greatest challenge is to distinguish which really is of most lasting significance — a Thermos that miraculously keeps hot things hot and cold things cold — or political campaign rhetoric that is neither.

Paul Harvey

Advertisers in the United States spent $107.2 billion last year. They will spend 7.5 percent more this year — a projected $110.4 billion — telling us all the good things, real and imagined, about their respective products.

Yet with noisy, distressing, depressing news ... hour after hour, day in and day out ...

By our emphasis on all the bad things — crime, inflation, pollution, floods and fires, discord and discontent — by our persistent preoccupation with negatives — we tend to sell ourselves and our children on a way of life which, in fact, is the envy of the rest of the world.

And repetition is effective. Repetition is effective.

Bob Barker asked a game show contestant: "For $500 name two famous brothers who made it possible for men to fly."

Without a moment's hesitation, the contestant replied, "Ernest and Julio!"

I love advertising.

Advertising, by our nation's level of longing, has raised our nation's standard of living. Without advertising we'd still be what Soviet Russia mostly still is: A nation of bearded bicyclists with B.O.

Once Phil Wrigley, on a cross-country plane flight, was asked by his seat companion, "Your chewing gum is already No. 1 in the world; why do you continue to spend so much on advertising?"

Mr. Wrigley asked, "How fast is this plane flying?"

His seat companion said, "About 500 miles an hour."

Mr. Wrigley said, "That's fast enough; I wonder why the pilot doesn't shut the engines off."

I love advertising. I wish we could hear more good things about our country before we sell out too cheap.

Conservatives face four gloomy years

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

With Election Day fast approaching, conservatives find themselves on the horns of a particularly painful dilemma. Whichever way the election goes, they are likely to spend the next four years sunk in gloom of one sort or another.

First, assume Dukakis wins. Having sneaked into the White House under the false pretense of being some sort of non-ideological technocrat, Dukakis (who is, of course, a wholehearted liberal) would nevertheless have to try to govern with the help of the Harvard faculty and the Boston gorillas like John Sasso, whose front man he has always been. Conservatives would oppose him — and rightly — with every fiber of their beings.

Alternatively, suppose Bush wins. Having listened to the interminable complaints of many conservatives about how Ronald Reagan has disappointed (even "betrayed") them, can anyone believe that such world-class malcontents would be able to find happiness with George Bush?

Of course not. A Bush administration would be played out to the accompaniment of a loud Greek chorus of conservative complaints — some quite possibly justified, others merely the residue of hopes that were preposterous from the start. The usual incoherents would be interviewed on Page One of The Washington Post every week, and quoted by the yard on Bush's numerous shortcomings.

I am not suggesting, however, that conservatives are simply difficult to please (though they certainly are). I am pointing out that neither possible outcome of this election can conceivably satisfy what many conservatives consider their minimum demands.

That is the penalty every political movement must pay for having had things as much its own way as conservatism has had them in the administration of Ronald Reagan. I realize that many conservatives refuse to consider Reagan's record as even a down-payment on their agenda, and would therefore like to argue that it now is, or at least ought to be, "their turn." But such an attitude merely testifies to its holder's ignorance of the true nature of politics.

You don't get two Ronald Reagans in a row, much less Reagan and then some sort of Super-Reagan. Really strong leaders are almost always followed by somebody devoted to their "legacy" and pledged to carry it on, but not designed to make a comparable splash. Meaning no disrespect whatever to George Bush, Lincoln was succeeded by Andrew Johnson and then Ulysses Grant; FDR was succeeded by Harry Truman: all estimable men, but inevitably overshadowed by their great predecessors.

On the other hand, looking at the bright side, there will be something for conservatives in this election no matter how it turns out.

If Bush wins, conservatives will enjoy the gratification of seeing their ancient enemies, the liberals, further down and out than they have ever been. In 1984 the Democrats at least nominated an avowed liberal — Walter Mondale — and ran on a platform that was defiantly liberal, right down to the candidate's blunt pledge to raise taxes. In 1988 the Democrats shrank their platform to 3,500 meaningless words and nominated a so-called "technocrat" who is doing his best to conceal his liberalism. If not even that works, what next?

On the other hand, if Dukakis wins, it is not too much to say that American conservatism will come into its own again. Defending an administration is a lot harder than attacking one, as conservatives have ruefully come to realize. The conservative movement is superbly equipped to analyze a Dukakis administration's defects and flay it mercilessly. Even the tired mailing lists would revive in the backlash of conservative outrage. Best of all, a whole new generation of conservative leaders — Armstrong, Bennett, du Pont, Hodel, McCain, Quayle and many others — would step forward to lead the attack.

If we didn't have to put the country's interests first, it would almost be worth it!

Massachusetts bans smoking for new police, firefighters

BOSTON (AP) — At Massachusetts fire stations, they're talking about smoking, not smoke.

A new state law, the first of its kind in the nation, forbids all newly hired police officers and firefighters from smoking cigars or cigarettes, on or off the job.

The statute, enacted last year, took effect Thursday and met with huffs and puffs of resentment across the state.

"This is going to get jammed up in the courts, probably the very first time they try to enforce it," said Lt. Edward M. Merrick Jr., a lobbyist for the 15,000-member Massachusetts Police Association.

The association and other unions contend the law — intended to cut disability pension costs — infringes on their members' private lives and may be unconstitutional.

State legislators agree that the law is virtually certain to be challenged, but they maintain it can withstand constitutional scrutiny because it affects only new recruits.

All of the 21,300 policemen and 23,500 firefighters in Massachusetts are exempt. They can go on smoking as long as they like.

But new state and municipal officers will be told that abstaining from smoking is a condition of their employment. If they violate the ban at any time in their careers, they could be fired.

Rank-and-file officers in several communities said they did not object to the purpose of the law, but felt it went too far.

"It's like the seat belt thing," said Patrolman Paul Goyette of the Lowell Police Department, referring to the state's mandatory seat belt law, which was repealed by voters two years ago. "It's good for you, but I believe in free choice. I think you should be free to kill yourself if you want."

The answer from legislators, in effect, was that killing yourself is one thing, but asking the taxpayers to pay for it is another.

The law's primary author, Rep. Kevin P. Blanche, D-Lawrence, defended it as a compromise with unions to help shore up the Massachusetts' pension system.

Under the state's so-called heart law, any heart ailment a policeman or firefighter develops automatically is presumed to have resulted from job-related stress.

Firefighters enjoy an additional presumption for lung disease because they frequently inhale smoke and dangerous fumes.

The presumption makes it relatively easy for a policeman or firefighter to obtain a disability pension, which provides 72 percent of the officer's final salary, plus an annuity and an allowance for dependents, all tax-free.

Other public employees who retire with heart or lung ailments receive far smaller pensions, unless they can prove that the ailments are job-related.

Blanchette said he supports the heart and lung presumptions, because "our public safety officers are our first line of defense, and they do have hazardous occupations."

But, he said, the law needed to take the risks of tobacco use into account.

"If a firefighter comes down with emphysema, it's presumed to be job-related, even if he has been smoking two packs a day for 20 years," Blanchette said. "That doesn't make a lot of sense."

Only a few hundred officers will be affected by the law this year. But starting in 1989, about 1,100 police recruits and 600 new firefighters are expected to come under the law each year, according to the state Department of Personnel Administration.

Robert B. McCarthy, president of the 12,000-member Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts, said his union is unhappy with the smoking ban, but predicted the issue will fade.

"The generation coming on now is pretty much non-smokers anyway," he said. "They want to be healthy."

Dukakis criticizes Bush's judgment; Bush defends Quayle's performance

By The Associated Press

Democrat Michael Dukakis added a new twist to his claim that Republican George Bush's selection of running mate Dan Quayle reflects poor judgment, questioning whether the GOP nominee should make future Supreme Court appointments. Bush reiterated his praise for the embattled Quayle.

"There are, as we know, going to be major changes in the Supreme Court," the Democratic presidential nominee told a Memphis, Tenn., audience Thursday night. "Do you want the man who selected Dan Quayle to be making those appointments?"

When the 41st president takes office in January, three of the justices will be over 80 — William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun. Bush has said the next president "will very possibly appoint two or three justices to the Supreme Court, where they'll sit well into the next century."

Dukakis pressed his direct attack on Quayle — an indirect criticism of Bush's decision-making ability — with new television commercials portraying the Indiana senator as unfit for the vice presidency.

Bush, who barely mentioned

Quayle during campaign appearances earlier in the day Thursday, told an evening rally in Little Rock, Ark., that Quayle proved himself in his Wednesday night debate with Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen.

"He did an outstanding job and he has been unfairly pounded by my opponents," Bush said. "And last night, last night, the country saw what I have seen all along — a young, knowledgeable, experienced American and I am proud to have put my trust in a whole generation of young people."

Bush's best known surrogate — President Reagan — repeated his contention that Quayle turned in a strong debate performance.

"I think he handled himself very well," Reagan told reporters who questioned him at a state dinner for President Mousa Traore of Mali. "I really think that Quayle actually, just by the whole nature of the event, headed off, or should have headed off, all this picking on him that has been going on."

The Bush campaign was emphasizing its efforts to solidify Electoral College strength — and downplaying the debate — as the vice president was campaigning in Xenia and Medina, Ohio, and Lee Summit, Mo. Ohio, with its 23 electoral votes, and Missouri, with 11, are two tightly-contested states Republicans hope to add to their win column.

Quayle was touring schools in Chattanooga, Tenn.; Cherokee County, Ga., and Raleigh, N.C.

Dukakis was traveling to Wellston, Mo., and Asheville, N.C., while Bentsen sought to capitalize on his debate success in his home state of Texas. The Democrats are trailing in the Lone Star state, which holds one of the biggest electoral prizes with 29 votes.

A second poll released Thursday supported the Democrats' contention that Bentsen outshone Quayle in their debate. A CBS News survey of 412 debate watchers found 50 percent believe Bentsen won the debate to 27 percent for Quayle.

The result was almost precisely the 51-27 percent split in an ABC News poll taken immediately after the debate ended.

The CBS poll also found that half the voters still doubt Quayle's qualifications to serve as president, if the need arose. Quayle was rated as qualified to be president by 47 percent while Bentsen was rated as qualified by 78 percent.

AIDS 'bigger problem' than thought

CHICAGO (AP) — AIDS is not sweeping through the heterosexual population, says a report released today, but a researcher cautioned that spread of the deadly disease among heterosexuals will be a bigger problem than many suspect.

The number of reported heterosexual AIDS cases is doubling every 14 to 16 months, according to the report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Although AIDS is not 'exploding' into the heterosexual population relative to other risk groups, the increase in the number of heterosexual cases is proportional to increases in other risk groups," the report said.

But "heterosexual spread of AIDS is going to be a bigger problem than many people in this country up until now have suggested," said the report's co-author, Dr. Harry W. Haverkos, of the National Institute on Drug Abuse in Bethesda, Md.

"The medical community and the public should be aware of this and start developing ways to minimize transmission," Haverkos said in a telephone interview.

The report sums up the results of various studies on heterosexual AIDS cases. About 4 percent of the 59,287 cases of AIDS reported in the United States between June 1981 and April 11, 1988, are listed as heterosexually transmitted, according to the report.

Heterosexual AIDS cases appear to be more of a problem among blacks than whites, possibly because of wider use of intravenous drugs by blacks, the study says.

Blacks accounted for 69 percent of the 2,392 AIDS cases attributed to heterosexual contacts, while whites accounted for 17 percent and Hispanics 14 percent, the report said.

Dr. H. Hunter Handsfield, director of the Sexually Transmitted Disease Control Program for the Seattle-King County Department of Public Health in Washington state, said the report's authors overstated the potential of heterosexual AIDS transmission.

"We clearly should prepare for the worst, but at the same time the average heterosexual who is not being sexually active in an environment of drug abuse is currently at a very low risk," Handsfield said.

In an editorial in the journal, Handsfield said the rate of heterosexual transmission of the AIDS virus may be limited because women are less efficient transmitters than men.

The report reiterated that condoms offer the best means outside of sexual abstinence to prevent the spread of the AIDS virus.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, destroys the body's defenses against disease.

Abortion protest attendance drops

ATLANTA (AP) — Leaders of this week's "Siege of Atlanta" begged for more people to attend today's demonstrations during the final day of anti-abortion protests after a dramatic drop in attendance.

The Rev. Joseph Foreman, regional director of the New York-based anti-abortion group Operation Rescue, told about 40 people at a rally Thursday night to gather early today for a private strategy session.

"We've gotten predictable," Foreman said earlier at a rally at St. Jude the Apostle Roman Catholic Church.

The demonstrations, part of a week of protests dubbed "The Siege of Atlanta," began Tuesday, when 343 of an estimated 800 protesters were arrested. Since then, participation both in the daytime demonstrations outside abortion clinics and nighttime rallies has fallen steadily.

Only 14 people were arrested Wednesday and 11 Thursday. The rallies have dwindled from 1,000 people Monday to less than 250 Thursday.

Speakers at Thursday's rally repeatedly begged for more people to attend the demonstrations, either to risk arrest or provide "prayer support."

"I'm pleading with you before the Lord to come with us tomorrow whether you plan to 'rescue' or not," Operation Rescue head Randall Terry said Thursday. Terry and other leaders say they are not demonstrating, but are "rescuing" fetuses from being killed before they are born.

Despite the shrinking numbers, protest leaders maintain they are shutting down clinics temporarily and preventing abortions from being performed.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

THE SANDS OF TIME

Wise Dr. Benjamin Franklin knew well the value of time. His brilliant career varied from inventor and writer to publisher and statesman. And he devoted the time to become proficient and highly successful in each. "Treasure each moment, guard it well and spend it wisely," he said.

Next to God's promise of Eternal Life, His gift of time is possibly man's greatest possession. In return for this priceless blessing He asked that man honor Him on the Sabbath. To spend a part of man's time in God's House. Begin tomorrow to repay Him for your life, for your Sands of Time. Go to the church of your choice and take your family.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond in that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Spirit of Truth women to have first confence

Spirit of Truth Church, 1200 S. Sumner, will be having its first Women's Conference, "Queen, Take Your Throne," on Friday and Saturday in the church facilities.

Activities will begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday with registration at the door. Barbara Veach, in the ministry for more than 27 years, will bring the evening's message, entitled "Women of Dignity and Destiny."

Saturday will begin with a time of praise and worship at 9 a.m., followed by a fashion workshop by Gail Winter, image consultant. The workshop is entitled, "Reflecting God's Glory."

Topics to be discussed include: "Fashion for YOUR Figure: How to Look Your Best," "Face Design" and "Determining Your Fashion Type." The fashion workshop will conclude with fashions provided by Bette's of Pampa.

Following a lunch break, activities will resume at 2 p.m. with ministry by Praise Drama Team, Shira Simcha Dance Troupe and ministry of the word by Brenda Zedlitz, who will speak on "Holiness Unto the Lord."

Pastors Mark and Brenda Zedlitz invite all women to attend. Cost of registration is $5, payable at the door. A nursery will be provided.

For more information, contact the church office at 665-2828.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: All over the world this gospel is producing fruit and growing, just as it has been doing among you since the day you heard it and understood God's grace in all its truth. (Colossians 1:6 NIV)

When my family first moved to Pampa, our house was new and the yard was just dirt and goatheads.

After we finally got grass to grow, I made the comment to my mother-in-law that I'd like to eventually plant a wisteria vine in the back yard. My next birthday, she presented me with a wisteria vine.

It thrived beyond my wildest hopes and flowered beautifully. In time it grew over the fence and now adorns the alley where very little beauty is evident.

A couple of years later my husband dug up part of the vine, separated the part into three pieces and planted them along a patio arbor we had built. We didn't think the traumatized pieces would take root, but they did. Now our west-facing patio is deeply shaded, even during the worst of the afternoon heat.

When I find volunteer shoots of wisteria in the yard, I pull them up and pass them along to neighbors and friends.

One neighbor planted some of the twigs on her side of a fence which our two yards share. Her vine has grown so much it has spilled over onto our side of the fence, heavily draping another corner of our yard.

Another neighbor's patio is shaded by wisteria started from sprigs. My sister's front porch boasts a beautiful lattice and wisteria arbor.

And every May, the world is more beautiful, for each of the vines produces copious cascades of sweet smelling, purple blooms.

Such moves the gospel of Jesus Christ. Once received, His gift of grace far exceeds our expectations. As we grow as Christians, out of spiritual abundance we share our Savior with others.

The Good News takes root when we least expect. It proves an adornment in places where little beauty is evident. It provides shelter from the suffocating heat of worldly distress. It multiplies. It grows fuller and spills back to us in the form of blessings galore.

And Christ's presence unfailingly and generously beautifies every life it touches.

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — A study sponsored by the American Jewish Committee finds no evidence of patterns of discrimination against Jews in the executive suites of American corporations. Tracing careers of 444 men and women who got master of business administration degrees, the study found that five to 10 years after starting out, 83 percent of Jews held administrative positions, as did 69 percent of Protestants and 53 percent of Catholics. Jews had average annual salaries of $111,000, Protestants $83,000 and Catholics, $82,000.

Workers pack boxes for move.

Word moves its headquarters to Dallas

By ALAN NELSON
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO (AP) — A firm that started with a religious mission and became big business has left Waco for good.

Word Inc., the Christian music and publishing giant, opened headquarters in Dallas mid-September, taking the 10th floor and half of the ninth floor of the east tower of Williams Square in Las Colinas. The space totals 38,000 square feet.

"It's gone smoothly, considering the complexity of what we're doing," said company president Gary Ingersoll, as he and other executives scrambled to finish last minute errands in Waco before the move. "This is a big event for us, and we're going to deliver on it."

About 63 of the firm's executives are relocating to Dallas and about 34 or 50 positions that opened up have been filled in Dallas.

The firm leaves behind 100,000 square feet of warehouse and distribution operations in Waco at 7200 Imperial Drive, along with some credit, telemarketing, customer services and order-entry employees. A total of 175 employees will remain in Waco, Ingersoll said. Word employs a total of 350 worldwide, including its United Kingdom subsidiary, Word U.K.

Word's 31,000-square-foot headquarters at 4200 W. Waco Drive, with the distinctive Word logo built into its entrance, is listed at $1.25 million by Brad Davis of Jim Stewart Realtors Inc.

Ingersoll said the new headquarters building will relieve some of the space and design problems the firm has encountered in Waco. The Waco headquarters was referred to as a "rat maze" by many of the firm's employees. "We actually have windows in our offices," Ingersoll said. "And it was designed by professionals."

Ingersoll said he believes Word Inc. will shed a somewhat provincial image by locating in Las Colinas near the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. He also expects that will help in signing new talent, although Word Inc. has been successful in signing the majority of hit artists and authors in Christian music and publishing. In addition, Word's management hopes to take advantage of the resources in Dallas-Fort Worth, considered a major world communications center.

However, Word Inc. will continue to use several Waco vendors, Ingersoll said. A major reason for the relocation was time efficiency to be gained for "travel-intensive" executives by locating near a major hub airport.

Ingersoll's announcement in April that Word would leave Waco sent shock waves across the business community, which considers Waco the emotional and intellectual root of the Christian communications giant.

While the main impact has been the loss of 100 executive and support jobs, Word's departure hit other areas of the Waco economy. More homes were placed on an already soft housing market and several print and advertising firms stand to lose major accounts.

In addition, Word has phased out its art and film production departments as its plans to contract with free-lancers in the Dallas-Fort Worth market.

Jarrell F. McCracken founded Word Inc. in 1950 on a single record, "The Game of Life," a fictional football game between good and evil. From that record, McCracken built Word into the world's dominant Christian communications company. In 1974, McCracken sold the firm to the American Broadcasting Co. which in 1986 became Capital Cities-ABC Inc. McCracken resigned in September 1986.

The firm's management estimates that it controls an estimated 60 percent of the Christian music industry with singers such as Amy Grant and Sandi Patti. Its book division has become a major player in the religious publishing industry since the 1960s with authors such as Billy Graham, Robert Schuller and James Dobson.

Word Inc. owns more than 40,000 copyrights and more than 40 songwriters contribute to Word Inc.'s creative development department. Songs are written, developed and submitted to key Word artists for use on upcoming recording projects as well as to other Word divisions for use in print and recording. Word owns Myrrh Records, New Canaan Records, the Rejoice label, DaySpring label and WordSong label.

Word's impact on Christian communications also has come through ex-executives and employees, which include Billy Ray Hearn, president of Sparrow Music of Los Angeles, John Purifoy of Purifoy Music, a major music publisher in Knoxville, and Gary Whitlock, who owns Modern Art record label in Los Angeles.

Priest puts more drama into worship

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Rev. Clarence Rivers wants to pump life and music into Roman Catholic services, which he says have become boring rituals that parishioners endure rather than enjoy.

"What's wrong with enjoy? It's a perfectly good word," he said. One of two blacks among about 250 priests in the Archdiocese of Cincinnati, Rivers said he seeks to inject some of the livelier feeling and music of black churches into the celebration of Mass.

A liturgist, musician, dramatist, lecturer and teacher of English literature, he emphasized that he is not advocating doing away with traditional Catholic rituals.

"I'm not an anti-traditionalist," Rivers said in an interview. "I'd keep everything." A demonstrative man with an easy laugh, he added: "I try to explain to people, if you're not entertained, you're bored. To entertain them doesn't mean you're standing on your head, spitting nickels."

"When I was first ordained, I noticed that ushers were the greatest watch-walkers in the world. If the service was longer than it was supposed to be, the ushers were the first in the congregation to go (look at their wristwatches)."

"They don't do that at a ballgame. If it goes 14 innings, they don't get up and say, 'It was only supposed to go nine innings.'"

The bearded priest, clad on a hot day in shorts, unbuttoned shirt and high-top sneakers, has founded a non-profit organization called Stimuli, based in his home, to push his efforts to enliven church services.

Rivers, 56, who also has pursued studies in Europe, said the black community has something to contribute to worship services in what he refers to as "the European church." In a 1987 interview, he told The Community News, an inner-city neighborhood newspaper in Washington, D.C.:

"I am interested in transporting to the Catholic Church some small part of the black spirit. The Catholic Church has good rituals and ceremonies, but they are done without style, without beauty and without grace...."

"In the Western world the word 'churchy' means dead, but if blacks say 'we had church' it means they could have partied all night long."

He said the clergy needs to learn techniques of acting to convey messages to the congregation while entertaining them and holding their attention. He said that message wasn't lost on the ancient Greeks, whose dramas that formed a foundation for today's theater took on the fervor of religion.

Unfortunately, the clergy is not often trained in the performing arts, Rivers said.

"You'd probably do much better if you got a Hollywood producer who knew about worship," he said. "People don't realize that worship is drama. It's very difficult for people to accept that."

Rivers proposes to instruct the clergy in acting and drama as well as enlivening worship music.

Yugoslav Communist party leaders quit

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Communist party leaders in a troubled province were ousted after thousands of rock-hurling protesters stormed their headquarters, the worst violence in three months of ethnic unrest and a boost to Serbia's drive for tighter control over two provinces.

At least 41 people were injured Thursday when about 30,000 people in Novi Sad, capital of Vojvodina province, surged toward riot police guarding party headquarters, state-run media said.

The demonstrators threw rocks and broke about 20 windows during the 30-hour siege. Fourteen policemen were among the injured, two seriously, it said. Six people were hospitalized and four were reported arrested before the crowds were dispersed.

The 15 members of the Communist party's Politburo in Vojvodina province fled to step down after the demonstration.

Tanjug, the official news agency, reported later Thursday that the party's Central Committee in the province voted 87-10 to dismiss the Politburo, the region's highest political body.

The mass resignation in Vojvodina is a major victory for Serbian Communist party leader Slobodan Milosevic, who has led his republic's Serbian drive for more control over Vojvodina and a second province, ethnically troubled Kosovo.

The Communist party leadership in both provinces had resisted the Serbian drive for more control. The Kosovo leadership is now expected to come under pressure to step down.

The shake-up came two days after national Communist party chief Stipe Suvar, faced with the mounting unrest, promised sweeping personnel changes in the ruling national Politburo and policy-setting Central Committee at or before a Central Committee meeting scheduled for Oct. 17.

Vojvodina provincial leaders had promised to resign after meeting with Serbian party leaders in Belgrade, the nation's capital 40 miles to the south.

Tanjug quoted the Serbian party as saying: "The Vojvodina leadership has been deaf to the demands of the working class and other citizens. A serious split has occurred between the Vojvodina leadership and the people."

Provincial party leader Milovan Sogorov said a 10-member provisional group would be established while new leaders were chosen for Vojvodina, a flat region that produces most of the nation's grain.

Tens of thousands of Serbs have rallied almost daily for three months in support of Milosevic's effort to assert more authority in the provinces.

Most demonstrations have supported the cause of Serbs in Kosovo. A largely Christian minority, they claim harassment by predominantly Moslem ethnic Albanians, who make up 90 percent of Kosovo's 2 million people. The southern province borders on Albania.

The latest protesters sang Serbian nationalist songs but also shouted complaints about low wages and declining standards of living. State television said an informal poll it conducted of demonstrators in Novi Sad showed that most cited the bad economic situation as the main reason for demanding change.

Milosevic rejected a call Thursday from former Defense Minister Nikola Ljubicic, who is a member of the nation's collective presidency, for unspecified emergency measures to quell the street protests.

The Serbian leader's opponents suspect he is using the mass rallies to gain more national power for himself and for Serbia, the largest of Yugoslavia's six republics.

Many Serbs see Milosevic as political heir to the late President Josip Broz Tito, who died in 1980 and left the nation with a complex system of annual rotation in the occupants of top political offices.

The arrangement has prevented any one republic from gaining dominance.

Algeria declares emergency as protestors riot in streets in anger over rising prices

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The government proclaimed a state of emergency Thursday as police fought demonstrators who have rioted in the streets for three days to protest rising prices.

President Chadli Bendjedid said all civil administrative and security services were placed under military command, but the measures did not bring an immediate halt to the rioting. Arsonists set fire to several government buildings.

The decision was required by "grave developments in the situation in Algiers," Bendjedid said in a statement. He said the state of emergency was invoked under the constitution.

On Wednesday evening, fire destroyed the Ministry of Youth and Sports, the government-sponsored soccer betting agency, the town hall and numerous shops. Protesters set several more fires Thursday, including one at a Ministry of Education building. Looters were seen leaving the building, and official files were blowing around in the wind outside.

Police anti-riot squads used force against groups of youths that rioted in the streets of the capital Thursday morning to protest the 15 percent annual inflation rate.

The decision was required by 'grave developments in the situation in Algiers.'

One police unit armed with shields and riot sticks launched tear gas grenades at a group of youngsters gathered near Algiers University. Previously, the anti-riot squads remained in the background during two days of unprecedented rioting in the city.

Pinochet rejects demands to resign early

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Gen. Augusto Pinochet has rejected demands that he step down before his term expires in 1990 and says the military will continue to play a key role in Chile's future.

The 72-year-old ruler spoke to the nation just hours after club-swinging police fired water cannons and tear gas at mobs who swarmed the streets Thursday to celebrate Pinochet's defeat in a national referendum.

At least 40 people were injured and 40 arrested, police said.

In his first public statement since the Wednesday ballot, which he lost by a margin of more than 11 percent, Pinochet declared Thursday night: "I recognize and accept the majority verdict expressed yesterday by the citizenry."

According to the terms of an 8-year-old constitution, Pinochet remains in power until March 1990, when he will be succeeded by the winner of open elections planned for late next year.

Reading from a text, the 72-year-old Pinochet warned the opposition that its plans to amend the existing constitution to speed up his departure would be in vain.

"No one can feel they have the mandate of the people to twist what the people decided," he said, in reference to the constitution, which was approved by voters in 1980 in a loosely staged vote that critics complain was rife with fraud.

Wednesday's vote was well-organized, massively attended and free of charges of fraud or violence. Pinochet expressed "the deep pride I feel at the civic maturity with which each one of you faced this act of singular importance."

Pinochet was dressed in his white dress general's uniform for the taped speech, which was broadcast nationwide on all television and radio stations.

Triumphant opposition leaders Thursday vowed to press their demands for Pinochet to allow quick elections and step down soon. Pinochet seized power in the 1973 coup that toppled elected President Salvador Allende, a Marxist.

"An authoritarian system has been overthrown," said Socialist Ricardo Lagos, a director of a 16-party coalition that led the campaign for Pinochet's defeat. "It is indispensable now to elect, within a short period of time, a president and a congress with powers to modify the constitution."

The constitution, drawn up by the Pinochet administration, also calls for electing a congress in a year. But its provisions leave the legislature virtually powerless to pass amendments. It also gives the armed forces autonomy and an influential role in national policy-making.

Pinochet, leader of the army, said the military "will be the guide in building the future Chile."

Early Thursday, small groups of government opponents descended on downtown to celebrate the referendum result. They were quickly joined by tens of thousands of others, mostly youths, who virtually took control of many streets and some avenues in the city's center, marching and chanting "Pinochet, go away" and "He has fallen."

Police only occasionally broke up the early demonstrations, but as the day wore on the protesters became more strident and police began using more force. When the demonstrators began throwing rocks, bottles and sticks at officers, riot-control squads responded with water cannons and tear gas in running street battles.

Lebanese kidnappers threaten U.S. hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two American hostages may be in danger if proposals to send U.N. troops into Lebanon to oversee presidential elections are carried out, Lebanese kidnappers warned.

"We shall use all the cards to thwart these conspiracies, including the card of the safety of the hostages," said a statement issued Thursday by the Revolutionary Justice Organization, which claims to hold Joseph James Cicippio of Norristown, Pa., and Edward Austin Tracy of Burlington, Vt.

The statement, typewritten in Arabic and delivered to the independent newspaper An-Nahar, was accompanied by a Polaroid photograph of Cicippio.

Cicippio was sitting on a blanket-covered bed with his hands clasped in his lap, dressed in a navy blue track suit with red stripes. He was smiling as he faced the camera, but looked considerably thinner than in previous pictures released by his captors.

Cicippio was acting comptroller at the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped on the school's campus on Sept. 12, 1986. Tracy, 57, an author, was kidnapped Oct. 21, 1986 in Moslem west Beirut.

The warning came three days after the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine freed Indian hostage Mithileshwar Singh after 20 months of captivity. Singh, a professor of finance at Beirut University College, is a legal resident of the United States.

Sixteen foreigners, including nine Americans, are missing in Lebanon and believed held hostage. The longest held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Singh was kidnapped in Beirut with three American colleagues, who are still captives. They are Jesse Turner, 41, a native of Boise, Idaho; Alann Steen, 49, of Boston; and Robert Polhill, 54, of

New York City.

Singh's release Monday fueled hopes that the U.S. hostages would soon be freed. But the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said no sign emerged from Singh's comments that other hostages would be released.

"We had no indications anybody else will be released soon or at all," the official said.

In its statement Thursday Revolutionary Justice, believed linked to Iran, said it would make the hostages "the backbone of our confrontation."

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Woman's lover wants to be 'just friends'

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a very charming gentleman, and we hit it off immediately. I'm 34, divorced, considered great-looking and I'm unattached. He's 42 (also divorced) and great-looking. I am not accustomed to jumping into bed on the first date, but with him, it was the second date. It was a mutually satisfying experience, and we are dating regularly. However, he keeps stressing a point that I find puzzling. He says, "I believe a man and woman can be 'just friends' as well as lovers."

Abby, what makes a man think he can be physically intimate with a woman, and be "just friends"? I do not have sex with my friends.

I keep telling him that if a person is "just a friend," then sex is not even in the picture.

Am I old-fashioned, crazy or correct in my thinking?

'JUST FRIENDS'

DEAR JUST: You are neither old-fashioned nor crazy. In a love relationship, lovers can be friends as well as lovers — which is ideal. But a man who has sex with a woman, and keeps reminding her that they are "just friends" is saying, "I enjoy sex with you, but don't expect this relationship to grow into something more meaningful or permanent — like marriage."

Give him high marks for honesty, but don't say you weren't forewarned.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe it's a little early to be mentioning Christmas shopping, but maybe not. I am a widow in my 70s, and I have enough scarves, sweaters, colognes and dusting powders to last me a lifetime, but let me tell you what most people my age would really appreciate for Christmas. Cash!

Please don't think me greedy, but I enjoy going out for a nice lunch once a week, and it would be nice to be able to treat a friend. Also, if I had a few extra dollars, I would be able to buy something I really need. It would also come in handy when I want to send someone a nice card.

Perhaps your readers will appreciate this suggestion. It would save them racking their brains, wondering what to give an older person for Christmas. And they need not be concerned that a cash gift of $4 or $5 would seem small. It would please me more than a $10 gift for which I had no use.

ARKANSAS GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Thank you for a suggestion that will be appreciated by gift-givers as well as recipients.

P.S. How about a gift certificate to a nice restaurant?

DEAR ABBY: I am 65 and so is my husband. While I am still working outside the home to make ends meet, my husband is gambling away a big part of our income in state, national and international lotteries. He doesn't buy just one lottery ticket; he buys 100 to increase his chances of winning.

He enters "contests" that require sending money and more money every time he "wins" a round. He orders merchandise and magazines we don't need in order to win something. He subscribes to cheap-looking newsletters that promise to send him the "secrets" of how to pick winning numbers.

Abby, we could get along very well with our combined incomes if he didn't gamble, but he denies that he is gambling! He says gambling is going to the races or playing the numbers.

Please check with Gamblers Anonymous and ask them if what my husband is doing is gambling. Answer soon. I fear for our future.

TIERED WIFE

DEAR TIERED: Regardless of how your husband tries to justify his spending money in order to "win" money, the name of this game is "gambling." You don't indicate where you live, but if there is a Gamblers Anonymous near you, urge him to go. It would be well worth the investment in time. He would soon learn what "gambling" is, and how to control it.

***

The facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy are all in Abby's new, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage is included.

Easy Street paves way for coping with handicaps

WALLINGFORD, Conn. (AP) — Easy Street isn't on the map, but it's one of the most popular places in Wallingford for some people.

Easy Street is the name of a 1-year-old, 5,000-square-foot "town" that has a grocery, bank, theater, restaurant, beauty shop, garage, telephone and newspaper vending machine.

Located in Gaylord Hospital, Easy Street is designed to train people who have suffered debilitating accidents how to deal with their new handicaps.

Gaylord, a 121-bed rehabilitation hospital that opened in 1903, treats patients for stabilization after spinal cord injuries, traumatic brain injuries and stroke, and for general rehabilitation, says Jerry Main, director of marketing.

"Look at these stupid plastic bags," said Carolyn Morrone, director of occupational therapy, pointing to bags that hang over fruit and vegetables in grocery stores. "Can you imagine getting these from a wheelchair?"

"We teach them to go to the front of the store and ask for bags. It gives them a preview so they're not sitting in the wheelchair wondering what to do." Gaylord Hospital is one of 16 hospitals around the country that have Easy Streets, designed by Guynes Design Inc. of Phoenix, Ariz.

Visitors to Easy Street in Gaylord Hospital can order meals in a restaurant, practice getting in and out of a car and get their hair styled at a beauty salon.

At the grocery, when a patient reaches into the freezer to pick up a gallon of ice cream, the package is wooden, but it is the true weight.

"If you're sitting in a wheelchair, you'd be surprised how hard it is to reach into the bottom of a freezer," Morrone says.

The Easy Street's bank doubles as the post office because the counter is the same height.

"We suggest to patients that they make eye contact when they're further back from the counter, so it's not just a little hand coming over the counter," Morrone says. "We're trying to take the edge off the first experience."

David Guynes, president of the design company, says the Easy Street program has proven quite successful around the country.

"It increases the local awareness of the plight of the handicapped and the problems associated with becoming functional again," he says.

"It also produces a great amount of well-being for the staff and patients," he adds. "What it does is promote healing."

Guynes says 10 Easy Streets were produced this year and predicts that number will double next year. He says they range in cost from $185,000 to $250,000.

For William Williams, Easy Street at Gaylord Hospital is the last road he faces before he goes home to Iliion, N.Y.

Williams, 71, a gun dealer, was driving to Utica, N.Y., last October when he was hit head-on by a car he says was traveling about 90 miles per hour. The accident broke his pelvis, ribs and hip.

MARLIN ADAMS

Artist to demonstrate portraiture

Marlin Adams, art instructor at Frank Phillips College in Borger, will give a free demonstration of portraiture at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown Auditorium during Pampa Fine Arts Association's Arts and Crafts Festival.

Adams was born in Mesa, Ariz. and spent most of his youth in Los Angeles. He earned a master's degree in fine arts in 1977 from Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

He earned many honors and spent a semester in Spain during his enrollment at BYU. Upon graduation, he came to Amarillo, where he worked for one year under a federal grant as an artist for the Square House Museum in Panhandle. His portraits executed during that time included Cornelia Adair, Charles Goodnight and Samuel Burk Burnett.

He set up a studio in Amarillo in May 1978 and began painting portraits of area personalities, still and landscapes. He entered a regional competition of the National Portrait Institute in 1981 in Dallas and won a scholarship to the institute's annual seminar held in New York the following summer.

He has been art instructor at Frank Phillips College since August 1984, and has continued to participate regularly in national invitational shows, including all five years of the Amarillo Rotary Club art show.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be especially prudent where finances are concerned today. Carefully analyze your expenditures so that you don't put good money in bad situations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually you are a rather resilient person who bounces back quickly after setbacks. However, today you might retreat if things don't come your way after the first try.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today it's best not to do anything against your better judgment. If you feel something isn't going to work out well, chances are you'll be right.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try not to poke your nose in the confidential affairs of friends today and, by the same token, don't let them pry into yours. Complications could result in either instance.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your usually reliable allies may be the ones who disappoint you the most today. To be on the safe side, count only on yourself and not upon others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Rather than work on a task you resent today, you might be better off temporarily setting it aside. You won't perform well if your heart isn't in it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Guard against tendencies today to be possessive and demanding of those you love. You wouldn't like it if someone told you what you could or could not do.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Usually you're optimistic regarding the outcome of events that you personally direct. But today you might be unreasonably unsure of yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Carefully guard what you say today, especially in dealings with co-workers. Criticism or caustic comments will not be taken lightly nor will they be readily forgiven.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although you'll try to be reasonably generous in your involvements with friends today, it is likely that you might be more of a taker than a giver.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Guard against inclinations to put your self-interest above others today. Being overly concerned about No. 1 will turn off people and give your detractors ammunition for gossip.

Sooners favored over UT by wide margin

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Oklahoma and Texas each have 3-1 records but that's where the similarity ends when the Red River collegiate football rivalry between the two schools resumes for the 58th time at 1:40 p.m. on Saturday.

The Sooners of the Big Eight Conference rated a 15-point favorite over the Longhorns of the Southwest Conference, one of the biggest point spreads in the history of the series.

The 10th-ranked Sooners' only loss was 23-7 to Southern California while they posted victories over North Carolina, Arizona and Iowa State.

Texas was slaughtered 47-6 on national television by Brigham Young when running back Eric Metcalf did not play because of a one-game NCAA suspension. The Longhorns bounced back with a win over New Mexico, and last-minute beatings of North Texas and Rice.

The Sooners' wishbone offense will go against a tough Texas run defense which has allowed a nation-leading 37 yards per game.

Oklahoma averages 264.5 yards rushing per game.

"Our defensive line will find out how good they really are," said Texas coach David McWilliams. "I think we will hold up all right."

However, Texas' green secondary has permitted 306 overhead yards per game.

Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer said he's concerned about Texas' ability to stop the run.

"We're not Brigham Young or North Texas or a Rice," Switzer said. "We don't have the capability of throwing 300 yards in the game. We're more of what Texas has an opportunity to control.

"I just hope our football team can accept the challenge they're fixing to give us."

The Longhorns lost 44-9 to the Sooners last year. McWilliams does believe the series has lost some significance because Oklahoma has dominated it in the 1980s, winning three consecutive games.

"What it has lost is Texas not being up there in the rankings that makes it a game of national significance," McWilliams said. "Only OU has been up there. You need that number value (ranking). That's the exciting thing. If you don't have that number next to your team, good night."

The series is tied 5-1 over the past 11 years.

Switzer, who is 8-5-1 in meetings with the Longhorns, said "It's still the great classic it will always be."

Oklahoma's main priority will be to stop Metcalf, who was held to only 57 yards by Rice.

"It's an important game for Eric to show what he can do on national television (CBS)," McWilliams said.

Metcalf, who averages 187 all-purpose yards per game, said "it's definitely an important game. If you have a big game against Oklahoma other people take notice."

Texas wide receiver Keith Cash, who beat North Texas with a late touchdown reception, may not play because of a separated shoulder.

Longhorns' defensive tackle Steve Llewellyn also has a shoulder injury but may play.

Metcalf has been bothered by the flu but also is expected to start.

Workers needed

The Pampa Public Golf Association is hosting a work party at 9 a.m. Saturday at the new public golf course north of town and volunteers are needed to help sort and stack lumber.

"We're asking that workers bring a hammer and nail bar with them. If they don't have those two things, we'll still find something for them to do," said PPGA president Buddy Epperson.

The lumber, which was donated by Celanese, will be used to build the pro shop and cart barn at the golf course site, Epperson said.

Several carpenters will also be needed to construct the two buildings and interested persons can contact Epperson at 669-6291 for more details.

A's bounce back to take 2-0 lead

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — Trailing 0-2 in the count or 0-2 on the scoreboard didn't stop the Oakland Athletics. The Boston Red Sox hope a similar deficit doesn't mean their days are numbered.

The A's took a commanding 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven American League playoffs with a 4-3 comeback victory Thursday night, their second straight win at Fenway Park.

After winning games started by Boston aces Bruce Hurst and Roger Clemens, the A's return home where they were 6-0 against the Red Sox this season. Games 3 and 4 are set for Saturday and Sunday. If the A's don't win both, they'll have another shot in Oakland on Monday.

"They play just really tough there," Boston first baseman Todd Benzinger said. "We go down 3-0 (and) we're in deep, deep trouble."

The A's play tough baseball anywhere. They were 54-27 in Oakland, the best home record in the American League. Their 50-31 road record was the best in the majors.

They also may have lead the majors in determination. They needed it Wednesday, when they broke a 1-1 tie in the eighth inning for a 2-1 victory, and again on a chilly Thursday night.

Boston scored the game's first two runs in the bottom of the sixth. Oakland had just two hits and eight strikeouts at that point.

"It's easy to give up with Roger Clemens on the mound," said Oakland reliever Dennis Eckersley, who saved both games. "It just shows a lot for our team, coming back like that."

In the top of the seventh, Jose Canseco followed Dave Henderson's leadoff single with his second homer of the series. It came on an 0-2 pitch and tied the score 2-2.

In the top of the ninth, with the score 3-3 and two outs, rookie shortstop Walt Weiss delivered the game-winning single against Lee Smith, 0-1 in the playoffs. It also came on an 0-2 pitch and made reliever Gene Nelson a winner in his first series appearance.

"When one guy hits a home run and another guy gets a hit (with 0-and-2 counts), it's tough to justify that they were good pitches," Boston catcher Rich Gedman said.

Four A's looked at third strikes from the fireballing Clemens in the first six innings as he dueling with Oakland starter Storm Davis. Each team had just one hit through five innings.

Oakland ended up using four pitchers and Boston three. The Red Sox would like to use only Mike Boddicker on Saturday in a ball-park better suited to pitchers than Fenway Park.

"I don't change anything according to the park," said Boddicker, who will face Bob Welch.

A little guy hitting the ball out of the infield won Thursday night's game.

Ron Hassey hit a one-out single and took third on Tony Phillips' single after Mark McGwire flied out. Smith then faced the 175-pound Weiss.

With the 0-and-2 count, Weiss hit a low liner to center field. Ellis Burks charged in, dived, but couldn't come up with the ball as Hassey scored. Eckersley then retired the Red Sox in order in the ninth.

"I gave it my best shot and that's all you can do," said Smith, who got out of a two-on, one-out jam in the eighth in relief of Bob Stanley.

Boston's hitters haven't gotten in their best shots. They led the American League with a .283 batting average but have just 10 hits in the two games against Oakland.

"It's easy to criticize and say we haven't come up with the big hit when we had to," said Boston cleanup hitter Mike Greenwell, hitless in five official at bats.

Rangers' hitters had a long, summer snooze

Ah, those Texas Rangers! Yep, no doubt about it, this was gonna be their year.

And why not? This spring the Rangers returned virtually the same offense that had scored a club-record 823 runs in 1987. The bats would take care of themselves.

As the season opened, the only nagging question was the stability of the starting rotation. But with a little improvement by youngsters Bobby Witt and Jose Guzman, the youth movement instituted by Bobby Valentine and Tom Grieve would at last bear fruit.

Funny how things work out. Or possibly not so funny if you happen to be one of those long-suffering Rangers fans.

On the bright side, the pitching staff did come around. For the first time since 1977, four starters for the Rangers won at least 10 games apiece. And even though Bobby Witt was not among them, his two-month banishment to the minors miraculously turned his arm around. After returning from Class AAA Oklahoma City, Witt compiled an 8-5 record and led the team in complete games, going the distance in 12 of his last 16 starts.

Charlie Hough, who finished 15-16, topped the Rangers' win chart for the seventh straight year. Texas pitchers combined for 40 complete games, compared to 20 in 1987 and 15 in 1986, to lead the major leagues. They led the American League with fewest hits allowed.

Which leads us to the Burning Question: Why did the Rangers suffer a dismal 70-91 season, their seventh losing record in eight years?

The one thing the Rangers never expected happened. The bats that would take care of themselves didn't.

As a team, the Rangers batted only .252 for the season, 11th out of 14 American League clubs. Rangers' batters practically snoozed through September,

In Stride

By Sonny Bohanan

Compiling a .217 team average during the last month.

The Rangers scored two or fewer runs in 56 games. They averaged 1.12 runs per game less in 1988 than in 1987 and scored five or more runs only 62 times last year, compared to 81 times last year.

This was to be the season when Ruben Sierra and Pete Incaviglia proved they were for real. Sierra had a decent season, batting .254, but even a decent season is a disappointment coming from this guy.

Incaviglia's numbers slipped from .271 in 1987 to .249 this season, and he hit five fewer homers and 26 fewer RBI. The only thing he improved was his dismal fielding, which alone is far from enough to preserve his job.

The only consistency the Rangers could count upon this year came from shortstop Scott Fletcher and pitcher Charlie Hough. Fletcher, who led the team with a .279 average, is eligible for free agency this year, which should keep Valentine busy trying to re-sign him during this winter of discontent.

Perhaps the real Burning Question is: Why would anyone become a Rangers fan in the first place?

Since moving to Texas in 1972, the Rangers have never won their division. The past three years have seen hopes soar for Texas, but only 1986 produced any sort of success.

As an employee of Arlington Stadium during that giddy season, in which the Rangers finished second in the AL West and set a club record with 87 wins, I got hooked for good. For sports fans, it's always a thrill to be part of a Cinderella story, which the Rangers undoubtedly were, boasting a rosterful of young, untiered talent and a brand-new manager in the person of Bobby Valentine.

That summer, baseball was truly the national pastime in D-FW for possibly the first time. Fans flocked to Arlington in record numbers, fully prepared for a retreat back to the cellar, but still harboring the underlying hope that the Rangers might somehow pull it off.

They were pleasantly surprised, and as a result, the Rangers became the golden boys for a short while.

Two years later, the enchantment of 1986 has faded, probably for good. The youngsters who filled out that squad are no longer simply glad for a chance to play in the Bigs. Contract disputes and paycheck totals are the order of the day.

Valentine and Grieve have a full slate of chores for the winter ahead, chief among them acquiring a proven hitter to buy the middle of the lineup. After the frustration of 1988, a few cosmetic changes should be evident next spring.

In answer to the second Burning Question: I have no idea why anyone bothers with the Rangers anymore — born underdogs, I guess. I just thought they deserved a decent burial this year. Maybe they'll arise from the ashes again.

Joe Walton laughed Monday. That's Joe Walton, coach of the New York Jets, who almost never laughs; Joe Walton, whose team is now 3-1-1 at a point where a lot of people thought it might be 0-5.

So when when Walton was asked for the 100th time why he let Freeman McNeil run the ball in overtime when he might have kicked a game-winning field goal, he laughed. Even though McNeil fumbled and the game ended in a tie.

The Jets go into Cincinnati as 6½-point underdogs Sunday to play the NFL's only unbeaten team. The last time they were there, the final week of the 1986 season, they lost 52-21.

It won't be that bad. But the Jets' young secondary faced its first honest-to-goodness NFL quarterback last week and was burned by Steve DeBerg for two fourth-quarter touchdowns to erase a 17-3 deficit. This could be a shootout — Boomer Esiason is the AFC's top-ranked quarterback and Ken O'Brien is No. 2.

The difference? The Bengals actually seem to have a defense this year.

Patriots drop match

The Pampa Patriots lost 3-1 to the Amarillo Knights in a Boys Under 14 soccer match last weekend.

The score was tied 1-all at half-time.

Pampa's goal was scored by Tim McCavit. David Urbanczyk played outstanding defense.

The Knights are a predominantly Asian team.

Remaining matches will be played on field three at Amarillo's Southwest Park, beginning at 1:30 p.m. Saturdays through Nov. 5.

Super Bowl losers

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

"A year ago," said Harry Carson of the New York Giants, who knows how quickly Super Bowl winners can turn into losers, "that kick would have been good."

The kick in question was by Chip Lohmiller, the rookie drafted to solve the Washington Redskins' kicking problems. It was a shanked 36-yard field goal attempt that allowed the Giants to beat the Redskins Sunday and left Washingtonians convinced that for the ninth straight season, there will be a new NFL champion this year.

Why? Well, there's Coach Joe Gibbs, who said after Sunday's loss "we've dug ourselves a huge hole that we'll have trouble getting out of."

There's some CoachSpeak in that. There's also some truth.

Granted, Washington is 2-3 after five games, but the Redskins are only a game out of first in the watered-down NFC East—the Giants and Cardinals are 3-2.

But that's nothing new. In Gibbs' previous seven seasons, the Skins are 22-13 in the first five regular-season games; 29-6 in the last five.

Granted, they've now lost twice to the Giants, whom they view as their principal rival in the NFC East, giving New York the edge in any tiebreaker and are just 1-3 in a division that they may have to win to make the playoffs—the wild-cards could well come from the Central and West.

Granted, that after next Monday night's game in Philadelphia, New York embarks on a schedule far easier than anyone else in the division — its next three opponents are Detroit twice and Atlanta. But the Giants are banged up; their offensive line is questionable; their defense has yet to play anywhere near its potential and there's no guarantee in this year of parity that they'll steamroller the Lions, Falcons, Chiefs or Jets.

Granted, Doug Williams, the Redskins' Super Bowl MVP, may be out another four weeks recovering from an appendectomy. But Mark Rypien, who had never taken a regular-season NFL snap until 10 days ago, isn't the reason the Redskins have lost the two games he's started. He's thrown for 584 yards and five touchdowns.

On the other hand, there are the little things that hurt so much — missed field goals, turnovers, breaks that somehow always seem to go against the Super Bowl winner.

"It may be just the smallest lack of concentration," Carson suggests.

"We just seem to make the key mistake at the key time," says Gibbs, echoing Bill Walsh, Mike Ditka, Bill Parcells and others before him.

In fact, the Redskins could be 5-0. They lost their opener to the Giants because they couldn't hold a 13-0 lead that probably should have been 21-0. New York's winning points came on a blocked kick and a fumble return.

They had four turnovers that cost them a 30-21 loss to Phoenix.

Then came Sunday's game, when Lohmiller missed an extra point, Kelvin Bryant fumbled on the New York 14 to kill another drive, then Lohmiller shanked the 36-yarder after Dexter Manley's four sacks and Rypien's two touchdown passes brought them back from a 24-9 deficit.

Ninth-graders defeated by Dumas

Pampa ninth-graders were defeated by Dumas 36-14 in football action Thursday night.

Phillip Sexton and Andy Cavalier scored touchdowns for Pampa. "We gave up 23 points in the first half, but we actually outplayed them the second half. That was indicated by the scoreboard," said Pampa coach Ernie Manning.

8th-grade Blue wins

A safety and Jason Brantley's 11-yard run gave the Pampa Blue an 8-0 win over Dumas in eighth-grade football action earlier this week.

Dumas defeated Pampa Red 20-0 in the other eighth-grade game.

Pampa seventh-graders dropped both games to Dumas.

Dumas posted a 38-14 decision over Pampa Blue. An 80-yard run by Greg McDaniel and a 3-yard run by Will Green accounted for Pampa's touchdowns. Tony Cavalier scored the two-point conversion.

Dumas defeated Pampa Red 14-8. Greg Moore scored on a 28-yard run for Pampa and he also scored the two-point conversion.

Both Pampa seventh and eighth graders will play Hereford Tuesday. In the seventh-grade game will be played in Pampa, starting at 5 p.m.

Estacado vs. Dunbar tomorrow pits the two most prolific scoring teams in the district head to head... "I'll be back in two weeks for homecoming, using my frequent flyer miles," said West Texas State grid great PETE PEDRO, who lives in Lynn, Mass. Pete was married in Pampa at the end of his senior season... Surprisingly, the dust jacket for his book, "Duane Thomas and the Fall of America's Team", is in red and white rather than Cowboy blue. Thomas will be in Amarillo Oct. 22 for an autograph session... Closing of the Berger hospital emergency room creates problems for visiting athletes. A Canyon footballer, injured last Friday night, reportedly was kept on the sideline for nearly 45 minutes before plans were worked out to arrange treatment... Former Amarillo baseball owner JOHN DITTRICH invited an Amarillo businessman interested in returning a minor league franchise to that city to attend a minor league meeting in El Paso last weekend, at which Dittich was the key speaker.

"Twenty-eight of the state's school districts are under some sort of penalty... probation, suspension, reprimand... for violation of University Interscholastic League rules. Great examples for our youth... The lady justifiably asked why baseball calls it a balk when a pitcher fails to come to a one-second pause in his delivery, when a balk is defined as a short stop or pause. Baseball's definition of balk is "an illegal motion made by the pitcher when one or more runners are on base." Helpful?

Remember when BOBBY KNIGHT took his team off the floor rather than continue to help the Russian National basketball team prepare for the Olympics. I wonder how many side with The General now... The better schoolboy baseball teams in the state are working out legally the players providing all their own equipment except the high school diamond. "It's how we build our great teams," a 5A senior baseballer tells me. And why not, football and basketball work out the year round. Other sports athletes deserve the same opportunity at success and scholarships... Cleveland shook up all of its minor league team managers except MIKE HARGROVE... "How about our shot putter," glowed 1968 gold medal winner in that event, RANDY MATSON. He was speaking of Texas Aggie Randy BARNES, who grabbed a silver with a 73-5/4 flip at Seoul. Asked where his medal was, the former Pampa great opened his desk drawer and pulled it out. "I keep it here because visitors always want to see it. It's dirty (the ribbon) because I take it along when I speak to school groups as I did at a fifth grade class this week." The silver from 1964 was in the drawer, too.

A friend says he doesn't really believe those beer commercials showing Spuds participating in Olympic events. In Korea he would be the evening meal of some family after 24 hours in the country... Pampa city manager BOB HART has framed displays of Olympic pins from the '84 games in LA hanging on his office wall... "We (Texas Association of Basketball Coaches) expect to pass Indiana in total membership this year to achieve our goal of being the largest basketball organization in the U.S.A.," says Berger Coach DUANE HUNT, a past president of that dedicated body... The average major leaguers salary this just-ended season was $433,000. Despite those numbers, the Players Association contemplates a strike in 1990 when the Agreement ends. But one agent says there will be no strike, "there will be a lockout"... "I'm looking forward to the state playoffs," GORDON WOOD, the state winningest high school football coach tells me. "When you get my age you're not very busy." Retired a few seasons ago, he lives in Brownwood.

If a sportswriter and a snake are both run over on the highway how do you tell which is which? There will be skid marks in front of the snake.
