Late-night pickup rollover ruptures gas lines

By BEAR MILLS

A man who is in Pampa working for Fluor Daniels on the rebuild of Hoechst Celanese was involved in a one-vehicle accident that ruptured a gas meter and cut off gas service to six homes on the Bowers City Road late Friday night.

The accident, which occurred at 11:45 p.m. approximately 3 1/2 miles east of Pampa, happened after a small late-model Ford Courier pickup driven by Thomas Ray Abrams, 41, left the highway and slid several hundred feet, according to Gray County sheriff's deputies.

The truck then rolled over at least once, jumping a barbed wire fence and destroying the large gas meter which is owned cooperatively by Energas and Cabot Corp.

Trooper Lynn Holland of the Texas Department of Public Safety said the pickup was traveling at least 80 mph when the driver lost control.

The broken meter was spewing gas into the area, making a search of the vehicle for other victims dangerous and creating the danger of an explosion.

Cabot employees Jim Crossman and Kris Gamblin were called to shut off the leak. No other passengers were found near the wreck, although Abrams reportedly told sheriff's deputies that he did have a passenger. Authorities later attributed Abrams' claim to confusion over the accident and his allegedly inebriated state.

Abrams, who was alone in the pickup, was taken to Coronado Hospital for observation. Doctors determined that he was uninjured.

The accident totaled the pickup and may have thrown Abrams from the vehicle, according to law enforcement authorities. Abrams was outside the pickup when authorities showed up at the scene.

Abrams was released within an hour from the hospital into the custody of DPS troopers, who arrested him for driving while intoxicated.

The pickup had Abrams Appliance/Refrigeration written on the side and bore California license plates.

Among the wreckage, sheriff's deputies and DPS troopers found a ticket citing Abrams for driving while intoxicated in El Dorado, Ark. They also found an identification card listing Abrams' residence as Spearsville, La.

Holland said no driver's license was found in Abrams' possession.

Abrams remained in the Gray County jail Saturday afternoon on charges of driving while intoxicated and multiple traffic tickets.

Fred Kindle, a spokesman for Energas, said the company had repaired the gas line by 3 a.m. Saturday morning and customer service was restored by 8 a.m.

Sheriff's deputies applauded the quick work of officials with Energas and Cabot for shutting off the broken gas valve, which was spitting a large quantity of dangerous gas into the air.

One man dead after shootout at State Fair

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — An off-duty Dallas police officer fired two shots at an 18-year-old man who died of multiple gunshot wounds after a struggle with another man and an on-duty policeman at the Texas State Fair, officials said Saturday.

The dead man, Bobby Joe Nabors, suffered five gunshot wounds, although police said it was not known how many bullets hit his body or who fired which shots. Officials said Nabors was armed with a pistol.

One man, a witness to the shootings who police would not identify, was arrested on a weapon possession charge later at the Dallas Police Department after police found he had a pistol during an interview.

Capt. John Holt declined to say whether the man was involved in the shootings.

"It's an extremely complicated case," he said. "We have four people that have received gunshot wounds. We have a crime scene that covers a good hundred yards."

Holt said in a news conference Saturday that Officer J.T. Dailey, who was working off-duty security at the Flying Carpet Funhouse after his regular fair shift, ran toward a scuffle after hearing gunshots.

Holt said Richard Vasquez was shot on the east side of the fair midway near a restroom, and two people chased Nabors from there to where he was fatally shot.

Dailey saw a movement in the crowd and began to run toward the altercation, Holt said. "He senses that someone is being chased towards the games area on the midway," Holt said, recounting the sequence of events.

At that point, Sgt. Manuel Vasquez, 37, who was north of there, also heard a gunshot and started moving south, Holt said. Then he heard another shot from the direction of the games area, he said.

As Vasquez arrived at the games tents, Holt said, he saw people running toward him. Then he said he saw Nabors and Joey Henry involved in a fight.

"Nabors shoots Henry in front of Vasquez," Holt said, adding that Vasquez then ran and tried to grab Nabors' pistol.

As the two were struggling, Dailey arrived and saw Nabors point his pistol in the officer's direction, Holt said. Then, the captain said, Dailey fired a shot at Nabors and believed that Nabors fired another round. At that point, Holt said, Dailey returned fire.

Henry, 23, of Dallas, suffered a gunshot wound to the back and was in serious condition Saturday at Parkland Memorial Hospital, said an emergency room nurse who declined to give her name.

Sgt. Manuel Vasquez, who is not related to Richard Vasquez, remained in stable condition Saturday at Baylor University Medical Center, where he underwent surgery. Police said Vasquez, whose gun remained in his holster, suffered a gunshot wound to his left hand.

Richard Vasquez, 35, of Dallas was in serious condition at Parkland with a wound in the left chest.

Holt said police had three guns in custody in the shooting investigation. One belonged to Nabors, one to Dailey and the other to the unidentified witness, he said.

Holt said police do not know whether reports of further gunfire at the fair were related to the shooting of Nabors.

He said police do not know what sparked the initial shooting of Vasquez. He said initial reports indicate Nabors and Vasquez did not know each other.

Thousands of fairgoers fled in panic after the shootings, authorities said Saturday.

"I heard two or three shots and people in the center — in the middle — started running in every direction," said Juan Salazar, 37.

100th Congress ends productive 2-year run

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 100th Congress, ending a productive two-year run Saturday with an early morning flurry of legislative action, sent President Reagan a compromise bill providing new weapons to fight the war on drugs.

Congress also approved tax adjustment legislation with a three-year price tag of $4.1 billion.

It upped the ante for Wall Street inside traders, passing legislation to increase fines and prison terms for individual offenders and to penalize investment firms that permit the practice.

But efforts to impose economic sanctions against Iraq for poison gas attacks against Kurdish villagers were blocked in the House.

Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said the sanctions bill was bottled up by House members beholden to "special interests," including the U.S. oil and agricultural industries. He vowed to try again on sanctions legislation early next year.

A struggle to reconcile differences between the House and Senate versions of the anti-drug bill caused Congress to abandon plans to adjourn for the year in early October.

Many senators, including virtually all of those up for reelection on Nov. 8, had left town and a handful of senators remained to guide the Senate through the final hours of the 100th Congress. All bills were adopted by voice votes.

In the House, the anti-drug bill was adopted 346 to 11. The tax adjustment bill passed, 358-1.

The Senate finally adjourned at 3:16 a.m., about 20 minutes after the House closed down.

"The 100th Congress came in like a lion and it is about to go out like a lion," said Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., moments before the final gavel cracked.

Hours before adjournment, House and Senate leaders called President Reagan to announce the end was near.

"The 100th Congress is coming to a star-spangled close," the president was told by Byrd, who wore a star-spangled tie for the occasion.

Byrd and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas told reporters they believe the 100th Congress has compiled the most productive record of any Congress in 20 years.

The drug package would fight illegal drugs through law enforcement, stiffer penalties, treatment, rehabilitation, education and aid for authorities in drug-producing countries.

It would make it possible for those possessing small amounts of drugs for "recreational" use to be hit with up to $10,000 in civil fines and, beginning next September, to face loss of student loans and other federal benefits for even a possession conviction.

Murders committed or ordered during drug-related felonies could result in imposition of the death penalty. Serious drug offenses would carry stiffer minimum prison terms.

The original purpose of the tax bill was to correct errors in the 1986 tax overhaul. But in its final form the bill does more than that.

More than two years in the making, the legislation now includes tax relief for farmers, free-lance writers, owners of mutual funds, recipients of employer-financed tuition and a variety of other interests. It also includes selected tax increases to pay for those benefits.

NASA officials to teach students about space

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Fifth-graders from around the Top of Texas area will get to find out firsthand if a career in space sciences would be for them when the National Aeronautics Space Administration (NASA) comes to Pampa this Wednesday.

Over 900 hundred students from 19 public school districts, including Pampa, will converge on the M.K. Brown Civic Center for an entire day of presentations, according to Jane Steele, an assistant superintendent for the PISD.

A group of NASA officials will present programs on Life in Space, Chronology of the Space Program, and Careers, Training and Working in Space.

NASA

"We're really excited. We've never had NASA here before. Our only disappointment is that we don't have the space to have all the children in the district attend," Steele said.

The NASA visit was arranged by the Region 16 Service Center in Amarillo, a state office connected with the Texas Education Agency.

Steele said fifth-graders were probably chosen because of their curiosity level.

"They are just old enough to make some choices about a career in science," Steele said.

NASA has previously made regional presentations in Dumas, Hereford, Spearman, Memphis and the Amarillo area.

Leading the students will be representatives from NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, including Marc Horn, an adjunct assistant professor at Oklahoma State University and an education specialist for the space agency.

Horn has taught astronomy and science education and conducts numerous workshops on space for grade school children.

Other speakers will include

Clarice Lotich, a former director of education for the California Museum of Science and Industry, who has led several education groups to Florida to witness space launches, and Jim McMurray, education specialist for the John C. Stennis Space Center in Mississippi.

Fifth-graders from public schools in Pampa, Alanreed, White Deer, Allison, Wheeler, Briscoe, Spring Creek, Canadian, Panhandle, Fritch, Mobeetie, Grandview-Hopkins, Miami, Groom, McLean, Higgins, Lela, Kelton and Lefors will be in Pampa for the presentation.

Staffer who testified for sheriff is fired

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — An Orange County Sheriff's Department lieutenant who testified for suspended Sheriff James Wade during the sheriff's federal drug trial says he was fired because of his involvement in the case.
But Newton Johnson, who was named sheriff in July after a state district judge removed Wade from office, said his dismissal Thursday of Lt. Larry Franklin was prompted by Franklin disobeying a direct order.

"It had nothing to do with Wade," Johnson said. "There were no political overtones. I am a law enforcement officer. I don't intend to play politics."

However, Franklin, 44, of Vidor, said Johnson was "just looking for an excuse."
"I did my duty. He's been harassing me for a long time. He's been trying to get me to quit," Franklin said.

Clarification

In an Oct. 20 article concerning Hospice of Pampa receiving Medicare certification, a statement about patient responsibility for drug and equipment costs was unclear. Private pay or insurance patients are responsible for drug and equipment costs, but these costs are covered by Hospice Medicare, explained Sammie Pohnert, nursing coordinator.

One of trapped whales missing; biologist fearful it may be dead

By BRUCE BARTLEY
Associated Press Writer

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — One of three trapped whales disappeared under the ice and was presumed dead Saturday, a biologist said only hours after rescuers scored their greatest success in moving the animals closer to open water.

The whale named Bone was last seen late Friday afternoon, said Geoff Carroll, a North Slope Borough biologist helping lead the effort to rescue the three California gray whales.

By midnight Friday, Carroll and others on the ice near this small town on the Arctic Ocean had given up hope that Bone might rejoin the others.

Bone, Crossbeak and Bonnet have stuck together since becoming trapped in unseasonably heavy ice more than two weeks ago during their annual, migration southward.

The missing whale got its name because skin on its snout had been rubbed down to the bone by the rough ice surrounding a breathing hole that kept the mammals alive. That condition may have led to Bone's death, said biologist Craig George.

"Once they get a bone infection, they go pretty quick," George said.

Eskimos led the whales almost a half mile closer to open water earlier Friday by carving a string of 24 breathing holes in the ice away from the main hole the animals had been using.

Meanwhile, a helicopter-dropped concrete "bullet" continued Saturday to bash a trail from the direction of the open water.

About two dozen Eskimo volunteers, many of them bowhead whale hunters, worked about eight hours to cut the 10-by-30-foot holes with chain saws.

"The whales have moved all the way to the 24th hole," said Col. Tom Carroll, commander of the Alaska Army National Guard's portion of the rescue effort, early Saturday. "I'm not sure how they did it, but leave it up to Eskimo ingenuity."

De-icers, which keep the holes open by agitating the water, freed the Eskimos to work on new holes. Until two Minnesota men brought the devices earlier this week, rescuers had spent all their time keeping the original breathing holes from freezing up.

Another dozen de-icing devices and a dozen more chain saws were on the way to Barrow.

A huge CH-54 Skycrane helicopter loaned by the Guard began working toward the whales from about four miles away, so as not to scare the mammals. It used a 5-ton, steel-tipped concrete block suspended from its belly to punch four 15-to-20-foot holes in the ice at 75-yard intervals.

"They hover the helicopter 20 feet over the ice, and drop the 'bullet'," said Spec. 4 Wade Palmer, a Guard spokesman. "It drops through the ice on the second or third try. Then they pull it back out."

A second Skycrane abandoned the repeatedly frustrated effort to tow a 185-ton icebreaking "hover-berge" 230 miles from Prudhoe Bay, and was to fly to Barrow Saturday to help bash more holes in the ice.

The first helicopter began working just inside a trouble: some ice ridge that blocks the path to freedom and lies about a quarter-mile from an area of open water leading to the sea.

Fair

of Dallas, who was high above the midway on a ferris wheel. "After that, you could see people in different spots just running like crazy — just getting away from this area."

Many bystanders were knocked down or trampled in Friday night's panic, and several pregnant women went into labor, officials said. Two other police officers were injured in related scuffles, officials said.

"All I know is it got wild out there real fast," said police Cpl. D.H. Boy, who was treated for bruises suffered while arresting a young man with a gun in his waistband.

Nancy Wiley, director of communication for the fair, said the shooting probably would have little effect on the fair, in its last weekend.

"This isn't the first time" someone has been shot at a State Fair of Texas, she said. "I've been at the fair more than 15 years. This is not the first time there's been an incident, and I've never seen it affect attendance before."

She also said the fair's directors would discuss handling of the shooting and the panic on the midway as part of their general review of the fair.

The police presence at the fair was boosted this year and as of Thursday, crime at the fair was down by 26 percent over last year, police officials said. During the 1985 fair, 230 offenses were reported including 57 rapes, murders, assaults and robberies.

The shooting followed a brawl between black and Hispanic fair-goers, one corporal said, but investigators were unsure whether gang fights were involved or if the brawl and shootings were connected.

A witness to the shooting said Vasquez saved his life.

"If it hadn't been for that cop, I would have got shot. He got hold of his (the gunman's) hand," Lee Rodriguez said. He and his family were leaving the fair when the shooting broke out and the combatants fell on top of Rodriguez's pregnant daughter.

She was one of seven pregnant women treated at Parkland and Baylor hospitals for injuries or premature labor caused by the fair-goers' stampede.

Aquino welcomes grand jury indictments against Marcoses

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos amassed $103 million through embezzlement, theft, bribes and kickbacks, funneled it through secret bank accounts and used it to buy valuable real estate, says the grand jury that indicted him.

Marcos, 71, and his 59-year-old wife, Imelda, also defrauded three U.S. lending institutions of $165 million in order to buy and finance the properties, according to the racketeering indictment returned Friday.

"This is a plan hatched and begun in the Philippines to move massive amounts of money illegally into the United States," said U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani. "Then the Marcoses came to the United States and continued their illegal activities."

Saudi Arabian financier Adnan Khashoggi, a central figure in the secret sale of arms to Iran by the Reagan administration, also was indicted.

A Washington-based lawyer for the Marcoses, Richard Hibe, told a Honolulu news conference that the couple would plead innocent when arraigned in Manhattan on Oct. 31.

"The charges are false," Hibe said. Philippine President Corason Aquino, who rode to power on a civilian-military revolt that forced Marcos to flee the country in 1986, welcomed the indictment Saturday and said it would deter other dictators from plundering their countries.

"I hope that this and other similar efforts undertaken in other countries to investigate the crimes of the Marcoses will lead to the early recovery of the stolen assets that rightfully belong to the Filipino people," she said in a statement.

Hibe charged that Marcos had been given until Thursday to accept or reject a "drop-dead deal," which would have required him and his wife to plead guilty to felony racketeering charges and testify against others—including family members—with no assurances they would avoid jail.

Giuliani refused to comment on any plea bargain negotiations.

Marcos did not attend the news conference.

Another Marcos lawyer, John J. Tighe, said the Marcoses were "deeply disappointed" that President Reagan did not prevent the indictment.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan was saddened by the indictment because Marcos "is an old friend and a friend of the country."

"But it's clear that the Justice Department has a very strong case," Fitzwater added.

The indictment alleges that the Marcoses illegally amassed $103 million through theft, embezzlement, bribes and kickbacks between September 1972, when Marcos declared martial law, and his departure in 1986.

They allegedly funneled the money illegally through secret bank accounts in Switzerland, Hong Kong and the United States, then used it to buy four commercial buildings at choice Manhattan locations.

Charged with racketeering with the Marcoses were Khashoggi; Bienvenido Tantoco Sr., former Philippine ambassador to the Vatican; his wife, Gliceria, once the president of a Filipino department store; the Los Angeles-based California Overseas Bank and its chairman, Roberto S. Benedicto; and the bank's former president, Rodolfo T. Aranbulo.

The Marcoses, the Tantocos and Khashoggi plotted to conceal the true ownership of the four Manhattan buildings through false documents, the indictment said.

Robert J. Morvillo, Khashoggi's attorney, said Khashoggi "vehemently denies that he knowingly violated any U.S. law in connection with any dealings he had with Mr. and Mrs. Marcos."

The six-count indictment also accused the Marcoses of scheming to buy $5.9 million in art objects and of transporting money and certain works of art they knew to be stolen.

The indictment also charged that the Marcoses and Tantocos defrauded Citibank, Security Pacific National Bank and the Security Pacific Mortgage Corp. of more than $165 million to buy one building and refinance others.

Each racketeering charge carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and $250,000 in fines. Three others were indicted on lesser charges.

raffle that netted more than $400 for the Pampa Optimist Boys Club. Optimist representatives said they wanted to give a big "Thank You" for everyone who purchased a ticket to help with funding activities for the club's youth programs.

'Dapper Bandit' gets 10 life terms

DALLAS (AP) — The bank robber once known as the "Dapper Bandit," who squandered every penny of the $757,314 he stole, has been sentenced to 10 life terms in prison after admitting he robbed 19 thrifths.

Mark Ervin Reeves, who shot himself in the mouth as police closed in on him after a North Dallas robbery May 4, later suffered a stroke that left him partially paralyzed. He will go to prison in a wheelchair.

State District Judge Richard Mays sentenced Reeves to the 10 concurrent life sentences in connection with nine Dallas County robberies.

As part of the plea agreement negotiated with state and federal prosecutors, Reeves also admitted 10 other robberies in Tarrant, Travis, Harris and Bexar counties.

Police have linked 25 robberies over the last decade to the Dapper Bandit, who wore dark suits, fake mustaches and sunglasses and carried a briefcase in each heist. His trademark business suit and briefcase and dashing counter-hopping antics earned him his legendary nickname.

On Thursday, U.S. District Judge Robert B. Maloney sentenced Reeves to nearly 21 years in federal prison, fined him $1.75 million and ordered him to pay $757,314 in restitution when he is released from prison.

Defense attorney Brad Lollar said Reeves will do his time in federal prison, which has superior health facilities.

Lollar said Reeves began robbing banks because he could not find a job after his release from prison on an auto-theft conviction.

He spent every penny of the $757,314 he stole, in part to support a cocaine habit, Lollar said.

Although Maloney sentenced Reeves to 20 years and 11 months without parole, the 35-year-old man could earn 50 years of good time per year after the first year served. Lollar said that with completely good behavior his client could be out of prison in 18 years.

Assistant District Attorney Mike Gillett said Reeves would then be transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections, "where he will spend the rest of his natural life."

While Gillett predicted Reeves would have trouble obtaining parole from state prison, Lollar disputed that contention and said "we're talking about 15 or 20 years down the road."

2 dead, 1 missing in ship collision

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP) — A 14-year-old girl was missing Saturday after an Italian freighter rammed a Greek cruise ship carrying 475 British students and teachers, causing the vessel to sink, officials said.

Two seamen were killed. At least 64 people, including 30 students, were injured Friday evening when the Adige tore a gaping hole in the 6,300-ton Jupiter, which was steaming out of Piraeus harbor. Two remained hospitalized Saturday.

Screaming children jumped from the listing ship into oil-covered waters before the vessel sank less than an hour after the collision.

A British Embassy official said the girl, Vivienne Barley, was the only person still unaccounted for. A Merchant Marine Ministry official said radio appeals were broadcast "for anyone who may have seen her or picked her up to contact us." Frogmen and Coast Guard officials searched the area where the Epirotiki Lines cruise ship sank less than a mile from Piraeus harbor on the start of an eight-day educational cruise.

"The Italian ship tore a huge hole below the waterline, almost splitting the Jupiter in two ... no wonder it sank in less than an hour," said Spyros Mavrikis, an Epirotiki spokesman.

At the time of the accident, the 415 teen-agers and their 60 teachers and helpers were on a trip to Greek islands and ports in Egypt, Israel and Turkey. "I was sitting with my friends in the lounge when we looked out of the window and saw this ship coming straight towards us," said 14-year-old Kirsty Spurling, a pupil at the Sacred Heart of Mary convent school at Havering in Essex County, England.

"We all screamed, there was a bang and the boat began to tilt ... I said a prayer," she said.

Coronado to offer ValuCare

Coronado Hospital introduces a new concept in health care—ValuCare—beginning Monday.

ValuCare is a program of discounts and special benefits for persons age 65 and older, announced Norman Knox, administrator.

Coronado joins a network of hospitals offering the program to meet the needs of the growing numbers of older hospital patrons. Other area hospitals participating in ValuCare include High Plains Baptist Hospital of Amarillo and Methodist Hospital of Lubbock.

Ida Hess has been named ValuCare coordinator for Coronado Hospital and will personally assist patients during their stay. She will also conduct follow-up visits with ValuCare members.

A $30 annual fee is required to join ValuCare, Hess said. Couples can join for $50. Members will receive a variety of discounts and services to lower health care costs and ease their hospital stay.

One of ValuCare's main features is an inpatient billing discount. With that discount, patients who have approved supplemental insurance in addition to Medicare will not have to put down a deposit at the hospital and their bills will be considered paid in full.

For those without an approved supplement, the hospital will discount 50 percent of their deductible and co-insurance.

"The discounts do not apply to the emergency room and to outpatient services," Hess emphasized. "Those services and the Extended Care Unit are billed differently under Medicare and so cannot be discounted under the ValuCare program."

Patients will also receive discounts on prescriptions through participating pharmacies. These pharmacies, located throughout the area, are registered with the hospital and display a ValuCare sticker.

Discounts for members are also offered at the hospital cafeteria and gift shop. In addition, ValuCare members will be issued a unique card that not only identifies them but also contains their medical history on microfilm.

Coronado Hospital will conduct periodic health screenings, including checks on blood pressure, diabetes, lung capacity and other health risks.

Also, members of the ValuCare program at Coronado are eligible for similar savings and discounts at other hospitals in the ValuCare network.

Persons wanting more information on ValuCare may call 669-0208.

Good reason for doing something

I've been wanting to devote a few inches to some of the bumper stickers I've seen around town lately. I've wanted to, but if I'm not careful, I may end up getting fired over it.

The reason: If I were to put into print what a lot of people put on their bumpers, I'd be considered unfit for a family newspaper.

The one you see most often is ... well, here I go, shooting for unemployment. A rough translation would be DEFECATION OCCURS.

Now to most of us, this seems obvious. But some brain surgeons out there feel obliged to remind us daily of this biological fact. You're driving the kids to Cub Scouts and there it is on the pickup in front of you. You're taking your elderly Aunt Bessie to Mass and it's on the car in the next lane.

Aunt Bessie, who never gets out much, sees it and nearly has a stroke on the spot. In Aunt Bessie's day, sailors got several miles out to sea before they unleashed such language.

I've seen another one in the area that has to do with defecation occurring when you party naked. If that's true, the last place on earth I want to be is at a party with that guy. I bet he's a real favorite at the company Christmas social. The whole gang chips in to buy him a diaper.

There are worse ones too. The kind of bumper sticker you buy at those cheesy little gift stores that specialize in plastic dung and black light posters. Real classy stuff.

It certainly speaks highly of a person that they would put such muck on their car for public consumption. What? You say you have one of these stupid bumper stickers? You say you are offended at being singled out? You say it's none of my business what you put on your private vehicle?

You want to know what I say? There are 6-year-olds out there whose parents are trying to bring them up right. Just because you have a warped sense of humor and the decency of a chimpanzee doesn't mean you have the right to inflict your crudeness on others. That's what I say.

While saying all of this, understand that I will fight to the last ounce of ink in my pen against legal censorship. But being against censorship does not mean I'm against good taste. If a few more pinheads practiced a little more self-restraint, there would be a lot fewer laws that impose on all of our personal freedoms.

Off Beat

By Bear Mills

And sure, there are some funny bumper stickers out there. My favorite is, "You Can Lead a Child to College, But You Can't Make Him Think."

The very religious bumper stickers have been known to worry me almost as much as the filthy ones. How about, "In Case of Rapture, This Car Will Not Have a Driver." I give a car like that a lot of room!

Some would argue that their cars would be empty too, so why worry? Having ridden several subways at rush-hour, I know about crowds. If I'm on the second shuttle to the Mansion on the Hill, I don't want to spend my last moments on Earth in an 89-car pile-up.

So what good will any of this do? Will every Tom, Dick and Dopey rush out to peel off their DEFECATION OCCURS bumper sticker just 'cause I don't like them? I wouldn't even want them to.

I'd want them to do it because they realize they are offending people and they are embarrassed by that. I'd want them to do it so our legislature doesn't end up passing laws against those stickers like they have in Louisiana and Florida.

Most of all, I'd want them to do it because it's the right thing to do. I'd like to believe that's still a good reason for doing something ... even in 1988, a year when you have a lot of defecation occurring.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

It's a good idea, but will he fight for it?

Did U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yetter really say "no restrictions"? Yes, he probably did. Did he really mean it? That may be a different story.

According to Pakistani Foreign Minister Mahbubul Haq, Yetter made an unexpected proposal toward the end of an informal trade ministers meeting in Islamabad: "For least-developed countries and the poorest nations," as Haq put it, "all developed countries should be willing to agree that they will totally open their markets to them, no restrictions."

That would be remarkably constructive. Opening the markets of developed countries to poorer countries would do much more than foreign aid to help those countries become economically self-sufficient, and consumers in developed countries would benefit too. Tearing down trade barriers also would be strategically beneficial, building ties between developing countries and the democracies of the West and virtually eliminating any residual attraction that the shopworn ideology of Communism might still muster.

Did Yetter really mean it? Maybe. A spokesman says he plans to put the idea before trade ministers at a meeting in Montreal. If the developed countries agree, more than 30 percent of the poorest countries in the world, including Bangladesh, Afghanistan and many African nations, would gain unrestricted access to Western markets.

But there may lie the rub, and Yetter probably knows it. A British trade official said it might be a good idea but there would probably have to be some exceptions. Yetter himself said that acceptance of his proposal would probably depend on progress in issues like farm trade, which is sure to be a sticking point between the United States and the European Economic Community for years to come.

If Yetter is saying that this would be a good idea, but we'll only do it when all the developed countries agree to do it and implement it, one must wonder if he's serious. It may just be a rhetorical proposal designed to give him leverage on other issues.

If it's really a good idea — and it is — the United States should implement it unilaterally, and invite other industrialized nations to follow our good example. If Yetter is prepared to make that proposal and fight for it, he could refurbish his tarnished credentials as a free trader with the long-term interests of U.S. consumers at heart.

New day's close to dawning

Like the British at Dunkirk in 1940 — with their backs to the sea awaiting evacuation, rescue and the possibility of a major calamity — black political leaders have guided black Americans into the political equivalent of a Dunkirk.

In an April 1988 column, I predicted that unless the Democrats wanted to look at another 1984-style 49-1 sweep, they would have to disavow Jesse Jackson and politely tell him to go play in traffic. They simply could not afford to have the rhyming minister either on the ticket or playing a major role in the campaign. To do so might mean kissing off the Jewish vote along with the South and West.

I also predicted that if the Democrats had to kiss anybody bye-bye, it would be the blacks. This doesn't mean the Democrats are racist, or anything like that; it's simply the reality of numbers and the high cost of kissing. Numerically, the Jewish vote isn't that important, but their money is. And kissing the South and West goodbye would mean more votes and money for the Republicans.

The big brass of the Democratic Party can take chances with the black vote. They know blacks are a one-party people. Estranging the black vote, by slyly treating of Jackson, at worse means the loss of black votes. However, alienating other voting blocs not only means lost votes, but since they are a one-party people, it also means piling up votes for Republicans.

We see this in the Democrats' Southern strategy. Registered Democrats dominate the South, but the party has learned not to take the votes for granted. Southerners may be historically Democrats, but they have been known to defect en masse to the Republican ticket in presidential contests.

Dukakis' people try to court them by concealing their social agenda, choosing Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and ordering Jesse to keep out of parts of the South.

Jesse Jackson and like-minded black politicians know the party's big brass view black votes as expendable. However, they can't make any credible threats; besides, their personal political stakes aren't being threatened. Black voters, out of a sense of misguided loyalty, may very well continue to support these men who've led them into a political Dunkirk.

During the 1920s and '30s, black churches and civic organizations talked about the "double-duty" dollar, wherein blacks were urged to patronize black-owned businesses. The idea was: If blacks spent their dollars in black-owned stores, it would not only generate income for the owners, it would also stimulate employment in black neighborhoods.

Now it's about time for talk about a double-party vote. Black Democrats ought to send their party the same message Southern Democrats send: You can't take us for granted; if you do, you'll pay dearly.

In other words, instead of simply sitting home on Nov. 8, blacks can send a real message by showing up and voting Republican. You can bet the real money that both parties would get the message — loud and clear.

It will take young black leadership to rescue blacks from their political Dunkirk. Those currently at the helm have remained committed to allegiances important in the past but irrelevant and detrimental to the welfare of today's blacks.

It will take those blacks born under the civil rights victories to tell the NAACP, Urban League and Congressional Black Caucus, "Thank you for helping to get us this far, but we have to pension you out because you're now irrelevant. You can no longer evoke the name of the poor black folks to protect your personal political turf."

From what I see that day is close to dawning.

'Cute' can get him her vote

A lady person joined me in watching the vice presidential debate. She thinks she is quite the political expert, having seen The Candidate and Mr. Smith Goes to Washington on cable.

How silly. I, of course, am known far and wide for my political acumen. I've seen both those movies, as well as Advise and Consent, and the one where Ronald Reagan gets run over by a train.

The debate wasn't 10 minutes old when my lady friend said, "Bentsen is smirking at Quayle."

"He's not smirking," I said.

"He is too smirking."

I tried the best I could to explain that Mr. Bentsen wasn't smirking when he looked at Mr. Quayle. He was simply exhibiting his vast superiority over the Republican in such areas as maturity and experience.

"I'll tell you something else I don't like about Jensen ...," she began.

"It's Bentsen," I corrected her.

"Whatever. He blinks his eyes too much when he talks. I don't trust a man who blinks too much when he talks."

"Of all the nonsense," I said. "We're supposed to be listening to the issues here, and all you notice is Bentsen blinking his eyes. He doesn't blink anymore than Quayle does."

Lewis Grizzard

"Yes, he does," she said.

"No, he doesn't," I insisted.

We decided to count. I took Quayle on his next question and counted exactly 78 blinks during his answer.

"My turn," she said when Bentsen came on the screen again.

"A hundred and sixteen blinks," she said, smirkingly, after Bentsen's answer.

We watched more of the debate and then came to the part where Mr. Bentsen chastised Mr. Quayle for comparing himself with John Kennedy.

"That was uncalled for," she said.

"That was uncalled for," said Sen. Quayle.

When the debate was over, she said, "I was very impressed with Quayle."

Naturally, I tried to speak some sense into her and explain why she was wrong.

"You just like him because you think he's good-looking," I said.

"I do not," she argued. "I admit he has great hair and nice eyes and a strong chin and classic cheekbones, but I don't think he's all that good-looking."

"You think he's a lot better-looking than me," I said.

"No I don't," she said. "I think you're cute."

"Cute, is it?" I replied. "You think he's got great cheekbones and I'm cute. He's Adonis and I'm a speckled puppy."

"Look," she said, "if it makes you feel any better, I think you're quite handsome, and if you were running for vice president, I'd vote for you."

I knew it was just a matter of time until my vast superiority in political knowledge and savvy would win out.

Quayle's Agent Orange vote was right

Speaking of Sen. Dan Quayle's sins — and who isn't these days? — have you heard how he voted against compensating Vietnam veterans for cancers supposedly caused by Agent Orange?

His critics report this vote as another example of callousness from a man who never served in Vietnam. They get away with this claim, however, only because few politicians or journalists dare stand up for scientific integrity and sound public policy where veterans are concerned.

To his credit, Quayle did. He opposed a bill forcing the Veterans Administration to assume that Agent Orange — a defoliant widely used in Vietnam and containing the toxic chemical dioxin — is the cause of several types of cancer sure to afflict a number of veterans later in life. Those same cancers will strike non-Vietnam veterans at roughly the same rates, but who bothers with facts when political security is at stake?

Certainly not most of Quayle's Senate colleagues.

By now, Americans have heard so many horror stories about Agent Orange and dioxin that they assume an airtight case exists for damage to Vietnam veterans. A judge in 1984 even awarded $180 million to veterans in settling a class-action lawsuit over Agent Orange.

Vincent Carroll

Ironically, though, the scientific case against Agent Orange has yet to crystallize. It's simply astonishing to review newspaper files on dioxin and chart the difference between public perceptions of its danger and the scientific evidence.

December 1985: A report concludes that servicemen exposed to Agent Orange are dying "at about the same rate as the general population."

"We find no reason for anxiety (about Agent Orange)," says Dr. William Wolfe, head of epidemiology at the School of Aerospace Medicine.

July 1987: Another study indicates that few veterans suffer elevated levels of dioxin in their blood. Among Vietnam veterans, the median level of dioxin in their systems was 3.8 parts per trillion, compared with 3.9 parts per trillion for a group of contemporaries who did not go to Vietnam.

October '87: According to the congressional Office of Technology Assessment, so few veterans have significant amounts of dioxin in their blood that large-scale research on the effects of Agent Orange will be impossible.

June '88: A jury fails to find medical evidence that former residents of Times Beach, Mo., had been harmed by exposure to dioxin. Times Beach is one of two highly publicized sites (the other is in Italy) at which residents were accidentally exposed to dioxin. Such was the furor at Times Beach that the federal government purchased the town in 1983 so residents could leave.

September '88: A study by researchers at the federal Centers for Disease Control concludes that dioxin levels "were nearly identical in Vietnam and non-Vietnam veterans," based on blood tests of 646 veterans and 97 non-veterans.

According to Michael Gough, senior fellow in the Center for Risk Management at Resources for the Future, the federal government has spent $1 billion studying the effects of dioxin. The result: "No convincing evidence for cancer in populations occupationally exposed to dioxin has been found," he writes, "and studies of environmentally exposed people can reveal neither whether those exposures have caused cancer nor whether decreased exposures are reducing cancers."

Dioxin does cause cancer when tested on animals. It also produces the skin disease chloracne in chemical workers heavily exposed to it. It is not a pleasant substance. But the evidence for widespread damage to Vietnam veterans exists largely in the political imagination. Dan Quayle was right to vote as he did.

Letters to the Editor

Griffith is asset to the community

To the editor:

Dr. Harry Griffith is an asset to our school system and to our community. He has not cost us money but instead has brought thousands into this district. We are only beginning to bring our spending up to a level where we can operate our schools in a progressive, positive way.

Dr. Griffith is an upbeat person who is complimentary of the good things he sees. In this community — that, in itself, is very refreshing!

Bob Hart, et al., came to Pampa with many new, progressive ideas. We have slandered him since his arrival. In order to attract industry to Pampa and keep our city alive, we MUST spend some money on research, travel and maintenance so that we can be competitive with other communities that are also trying to attract businesses. ALL businesses who are planning to invest millions in a community carefully look at the schools.

Please get behind our community leaders with praise and support. You'll be happier, and you may wake up some morning and find all our now empty buildings full of thriving businesses and our city once again booming.

Betty and Doug Beyer
Pampa

To the editor:

I appeal to you to cease printing letters that are not signed by the person or persons who pen them. It is far too easy to slander our fellowmen when it can be done anonymously. Thanks for your consideration.

Editor's Note: The running of "Name Withheld" letters was designed to protect those who might be employed, for example, in a school or city position and yet wanted to speak out against some policy or alleged misconduct without fear of reprisal or loss of jobs by making public statements. Or there are cases in which the person's name might bring personal embarrassment upon them or perhaps other family members. (The letters ARE signed, but the writers have requested that their names not be published.)

However, we admit that the policy has been overused by others. Apparently some people are unwilling to let others know that they can hold and voice an opinion. Personally, I feel that in this land of free speech everyone ought to be willing to express viewpoints publicly instead of hiding behind an anonymous cover. But it has been hard to tell one group they can write anonymously and then tell others that they HAVE to use their names.

The policy is being evaluated, perhaps by setting up definite criteria under which a name might justifiably be withheld, instead of allowing the blanket policy as it now exists. We would be interested in how our readers feel about the policy: Should there be a general policy for allowing names to be withheld or should it be strictly limited?

TI's earnings up 11 percent

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments reported earnings were up 11 percent, partly because the high technology company's sales in the semiconductor industry were at a record level.

"This represents a substantial increase from the third quarter of 1987 and a slight increase from the second quarter of 1988," in semiconductor sales, said Jerry R. Junkins, chairman, president and chief executive officer of TI.

Net sales for the third quarter were $1.57 billion, up from $1.41 billion a year ago. TI's profits were $107 million, up from $73 million during the same period last year.

Meanwhile, earnings per common share were $1.03, compared with $0.85 for last year's third quarter.

Americans' blood is red, red, red!!

To the editor:

Red is best, if you are alive. Alas, poor Yorick, the bubble has burst. I was descended from royalty when I first came to America. I knew I was of royal blood because my blood inside my body was B L U E. What has happened?

Someone tells me that I am no longer an alien because my blood is R E D. How can this be?! Surely not because the hemoglobin in my circulatory system picks up oxygen in the lungs and holds the red coloring; something must be amiss.

Let's get educated, America. The blood in the body is red. The venous system is much darker because of wastes and carbon dioxide, but it is still red. (Perhaps the color of coffee grounds.) The arterial system is bright red because it is oxygenated from the lungs, but it still has carbon dioxide in it. But it is still red.

The blood does not change color from the inside of the body to the outside, let alone as it contacts the air. It is red, red, red. A hypodermic needle draws red blood from inside the body, the heart-lung machine circulates red blood from inside the body, the dialysis machine transports red blood through the cleansing process to filter wastes and it is still red.

Let's wise up people, and if we are to be called red-blooded Americans, let's all have red blood.

P.S. There was a case in Kentucky or Tennessee where the population of a small town had a blue coloring in their blood, because of an environmental problem. But medical science corrected it and their blood returned to a NORMAL red coloring.

Wants pay raise to pay his taxes!

To the editor:

The next time the school board members and city commissioners have a meeting and raise my taxes, I sure wish they would vote me in a pay raise so I can pay these taxes. If they do raise taxes again, I don't know how I will be able to pay them.

Twelve years ago when we bought our home, the tax payments were $86. Since our taxes keep going up every year and insurance keeps on going up (no thanks to them at all), the payments have gone up to $216 a year, and with this latest tax increase, they will go up again.

Two years ago my wages were cut 30 percent. That adds up to $112 and 80 cents a week, or $5,414 and 40 cents a year.

So I hope these taxes and insurance raises come to a halt. We are having some very difficult times now. I sure hope things get better in the future, because surely it can get no worse.

Dukakis use scare tactics to get votes

To the editor:

The national debt seems to be the liberals' favorite presidential campaign issue. It is probably the least understood of any branch of government.

The deficit automatically increases billions of dollars every year, over which the president has no control. Seventy-six percent of the annual budget is built in: millions of dollars interest on the debt, government officials salaries and lifetime pensions, lifetime Secret Service protection for officials and their families, election campaign funding and many others too numerous to itemize.

Congress makes and passes all appropriations, much of the money going to enrich their home states. Massachusetts is a good example; it is no wonder it attracts prime industries.

Dukakis uses Social Security scare tactics, telling recipients of Social Security benefits that the Republicans didn't do anything for them the last eight years and that Republicans will take away their checks if they are elected. This is an insult to their intelligence.

Since President Reagan was elected in 1980, recipients' checks were raised 26.5 percent the first four years and 13.9 percent the last four years. The Carter-Mondale 1977 Social Security amendment, to become effective in 1980, reduced retirement benefits for some people born after 1916. Dukakis says when he is elected, he will raise taxes. That would please Bentsen; he voted to raise taxes 61 times in the last 10 years.

What about Bush and Quayle?

According to Sen. Barry Goldwater (Larry King Show and Crossfire, CNN TV, Oct. 14 and 17): "George Bush is the best candidate the Republicans could have picked. He is the best informed, the best trained, more experienced and best known worldwide of any of the candidates. He will make a good president. Dan Quayle is a good man. I have known him all his life. He went to school with my children. He is smart, a good worker, honest and very capable. He sponsored several bills in the Senate. He served on my Foreign Affairs Committee. He knows more about foreign affairs and military affairs than any senator I can think of. He has more experience than either Kennedy or Truman when they were elected president."

Christian service could help others

To the editor:

My family and I have some financial "needs" that are not being met, including food and health care. I have been to several local churches (five, to be exact) and have been treated in a very condescending and humiliating manner ... and declined to help me "to boot."

If you have any Christian readers who might feel led by God to help my children and myself — please ask them to send a donation to Community Action, 322 S. Cuyler, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Better education is not an expense

To the editor:

The letters to the editor page in your paper is one of the first things I turn to in the paper. It shows what some of the true sentiments of the community are, or at least of those who feel they have something to say. About half the time, I don't agree with things that either Mr. Velasquez or Mr. Morgan have to write, but I never doubt where they stand or what their motives are.

On the other hand, for two Sundays in a row, there have been anonymous letters attacking one of the better things to have happened to our school system, Harry Griffith. He is making things happen. Things that need doing. For too many years the boards put off maintenance and played accountants' tricks to avoid a tax increase.

Education is expensive, but it is not an expense ... it is an investment in the future of Pampa and Gray County. My folks and the people of my hometown paid taxes for my education, and I expect to pay taxes for my child's. She'll grow up, go to work and pay taxes for her child's education. The better her education, the better her job, and the more taxes she'll pay. A poor education leads to a downward spiral.

We hear about bringing businesses to Pampa. The education system says more about the state of a community to incoming business than any set of slogans or tax incentives or Main Street program. They want well-educated workers and good schools for the children of any employees they bring in.

No one likes taxes, but there is no free lunch. What I don't understand is the personal angle to the letters. It's hard to know from an anonymous letter.

Trustees deserve some appreciation

To the editor:

I believe it is time to express appreciation to the members of the Pampa school board. They give of their time and talent to serve our children. Often they are required to make difficult decisions because those who came before them lacked vision.

Dr. Harry Griffith is a fine superintendent who is bringing sound fiscal and educational processes to Pampa. His leadership will enable our students to excel because he plans for the future. His experience in other systems, his academic background and his skill with leaders in Texas' education system offer great advantages.

Theodore Roosevelt once said, "It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled or where the doer of deeds could have done better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena ... who does actually try to do the deed; who knows the great enthusiasm, the great devotion and spends himself in a worthy cause."

Passing This Test
Could Mean Failure.

Kids who pass the conventional school eye test may see the blackboard fine from the back of the room, but how about up close?

Is your child giving you any of these early warning signs?
• Book held 7-8 inches from the eyes
• Makes errors when copying

• Uses fingers to trace lines in the book
• Writes or prints poorly
• Short attention span while reading

Don't take chances with your child's sight. It's just too important to risk a failing grade.

Workers' compensation rally scheduled

LUBBOCK - A workers' compensation business rally will be held Wednesday in Lubbock.

Former State Sen. Johnnie B. Rogers and a local steering committee will lead the "town hall" rally aimed at mobilizing business owners to demand legislative reform for the state's skyrocketing workers' compensation insurance.

Keynote speaker will be Sen. John Montford, member of the State Joint Select Committee on Workers' Compensation.

The Lubbock event follows successful rallies in Fort Worth, Dallas and Houston.

According to Rogers, the success of this and other grassroots rallies scheduled throughout the state depends upon "the personal involvement of virtually every employer in Texas."

The rally will begin at 6 p.m. Wednesday at the Holiday Inn Civic Center, 801 Avenue Q.

To illustrate the magnitude of the crisis, Rogers notes that insurance premiums for Texas employers have increased as much as 100 percent in just the past two years, but the injured worker only gets approximately 50 percent of the paid benefits.

The rates paid by Texas employers are among the highest in the nation, while benefits paid to the injured employee are among the lowest. Also, Texas insurance carriers have requested an additional 36.7 percent increase in workers' compensation insurance premiums.

Rogers claims these high premium rates have had a negative impact on corporate relocations and expansions in Texas.

Workers' compensation laws are designed to provide a prompt and uncomplicated means of handling on-the-job injuries and occupational diseases. First enacted in 1913 to establish the employer's liability for workplace injuries without regard to fault, the law has been continually amended since that time, becoming complex and unwieldy.

The law also sets maximum duration payment periods and maximum payments, often without realistic assessment of the actual damages and length of injury, business experts note.

For example, for permanent total disability, Texas' maximum payments last 401 weeks. Forty-eight states have longer duration payment periods. Also, Texas' maximum total benefits are $89,824. Forty-seven states have higher benefit totals.

The Texas workers' compensation law provides for medical benefits, cash benefits and physical rehabilitation. Compensation systems cost more than $2.5 billion per year and involves more than 400,000 Texans.

And yet employers are paying higher premiums than employees use in benefits under the strict limitations contained in the law, business experts say.

These discrepancies have led to a growing voice across the state for reforms in the workers' compensation laws, an issue expected to surface in the upcoming session of the Legislature.

Taylor

Hospital appoints financial officer

AMARILLO - James Taylor, a former Lefors resident, was recently named chief financial officer at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

The son of Maudie Alexander of Lefors, Taylor filled the position vacated in June by Rick Karr.

A Lefors High School graduate, Taylor had been acting as chief financial officer since Karr's resignation.

Taylor has worked at Northwest since 1974 as assistant controller, director of accounting, director of grant accounting and financial assistant.

He is a graduate of Wayland Baptist University, where he majored in business and health care administration.

Congress names October to honor disabled workers

The U.S. Congress has declared October as National Disability Employment Awareness Month (NDEAM).

For the first time since 1945, the accomplishments of people with disabilities and recognition of employers providing job opportunities for workers with disabilities has been expanded from a week to include the whole month.

Approximately two-thirds of working-age Americans with disabilities are out of the job market, although many of them desperately want to work, notes Randy Jennings, public information director for the Texas Rehabilitation Commission.

Job discrimination, inadequate transportation systems, physical and communications barriers, a shortage of opportunities to gain job skills, and insufficient awareness of their abilities still prevent people with disabilities from getting jobs in far too many instances, Jennings said.

NDEAM (formerly National Employ the Handicapped Week) was recently created by the U.S. Congress to allow more time to evaluate the past year's efforts in the disability field and to spotlight important accomplishments.

NACE to meet in Amarillo

AMARILLO - The monthly meeting of the Panhandle Section of the National Association of Corrosion Engineers (NACE) will be held Tuesday night in Amarillo.

The meeting will be at Stephen's, 15th and Madison. Social hour begins at 6:30 p.m., followed by the meal and program at 7 p.m.

Bob D. Griffin of Griffin Resources at Breckenridge will discuss "How to Reduce Sucker Rod Failures."

Griffin is an independent oil operator and owner of Griffin Resources. A native of Hooker, Okla., he has 30 years in the oil and gas industry, including 20 years with Anadarko Petroleum in Liberal, Kan.

He is a past chairman of the Panhandle Section NACE and completed the Corrosion Control Course for the University of Oklahoma.

Griffin says the program will be of interest and benefit not only to those in corrosion control but to all personnel involved in rod pumping systems.

Brown

First National names cashier

The board of directors of the First National Bank in Pampa has announced the election of Greg Brown as cashier.

Brown assumed his duties Oct. 1. He has seven years banking experience with Texas Commerce Bank in Amarillo, where he most recently served as cashier.

A native of Amarillo, Brown is a graduate of Texas A&M University.

His civic duties have included two years as a loaned executive in the Amarillo United Way campaign and as a participant in Leadership Amarillo. As a member of Trinity Baptist Church in Amarillo, he served as a Sunday School teacher.

Greg and his wife, Renee, have two boys, Tristan, 4, and Shea, 2. They reside at 2718 Comanche in Pampa.

Pinochet changes cabinet, rejects early departure in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Military President Augusto Pinochet changed half of his Cabinet and flatly ruled out an early departure from power, rejecting a demand by the opposition parties that defeated him in the Oct. 5 referendum.

Speaking at a ceremony in which he swore in the new ministers Friday, Pinochet also, for the first time, appeared to rule out his candidacy in a competitive presidential election next year.

"I will hand over my post to the person that citizens elect freely, secretly and in an informed fashion on Dec. 14, 1989," the election date, the 72-year-old president and army commander said.

Although most legal experts say the constitution bars him from running in the election and succeeding himself, there has been open speculation, including by high-ranking government officials, that he might seek a legal loophole.

The constitution calls for his term to end in March 1990, when he will be succeeded by the winner of the December 1989 election.

Pinochet brought in eight new ministers, all civilians, to his 16-man Cabinet, and shifted one to a different ministry. He kept seven others, including some military officers.

In the most important change, he named Carlos Caceres, a 48-year-old U.S.-educated economist, to replace Sergio Fernandez as interior minister, by far the most potentially politically powerful post in the Cabinet.

The opposition and even some pro-government politicians had called for the removal of Fernandez, who had firmly rejected opposition demands for negotiations on democratic reforms of the 8-year-old constitution drawn up under Pinochet.

In his speech, Pinochet flatly rejected the opposition demands, saying: "Sirs, the constitution will not be modified. This issue is not at stake."

The opposition claims its victory in the referendum, in which Pinochet sought to extend his rule until 1997, showed that voters want to speed up transition to democracy and the president's departure from power.

In the referendum, a simple yes or no ballot, 3.9 million people voted against Pinochet's continued rule and 3.1 million voted in favor. Pinochet took power in a 1973 coup that deposed the elected government of Salvador Allende, a Marxist who died in the coup.

Opposition leaders seemed unworried by Pinochet's firm rejection of their demands. Jorge Burgos, assistant secretary-general of the Christian Democratic Party, the country's largest, said of Pinochet's speech: "Sometimes words can be changed by deeds."

Caceres did not rule out a dialogue with the opposition. "Let me analyze, think about and study this issue, and then we'll talk," he told reporters.

Should the government finally agree to negotiating with the opposition, Caceres would be the key man in the talks.

Caceres, a technocrat who served briefly as finance minister in the early 1980s, is widely considered more moderate than his predecessor, Fernandez. He is also considered to be especially close to Pinochet. He handled the finances of the president's campaign in the referendum.

Israeli warplanes buzz east Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes flew thunderous supersonic runs over the ancient city of Baalbek in east Lebanon, fueling fears of an imminent attack on the main stronghold of pro-Iranian extremists, police said Saturday.

The rare nighttime overflights came hours after Israeli fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships blasted Palestinian and pro-Iranian guerrilla bases, apparently to avenge the killing Wednesday of seven Israeli soldiers in a suicide car bombing.

Shiite Moslem kidnappers holding at least two American hostages threatened to punish them, charging that the United States gave advance approval to Israel to strike at the guerrilla strongholds.

Police said Saturday the death toll from the air raids climbed to 16 when one of the wounded died. Thirty-four were injured. Police said sonic booms jolted the population of Baalbek out of their beds as Israeli jets crashed the sound barrier in several low-altitude runs after midnight.

"They've seldom done such a thing since the 1982 invasion," said a police spokesman. "People are afraid their city will be the next target for Israel's retaliation to the suicide bombing."

Baalbek is controlled by the Iranian-backed fundamentalist group that is believed to be the umbrella for kidnappers of the 14 foreigners in Lebanon.

An estimated 3,000 Iranian Revolutionary Guards are based at the Sheik Abdullah barracks on a hilltop overlooking the city that harbors ancient Roman ruins.

Hezbollah said victims of Israel's retaliatory raid were buried Saturday in a mass funeral in the Bekaa valley town of Mashgara.

The air raids hit positions near Mashgara and the port city of Sidon. Israeli officials often charge that Hezbollah and the PLO cooperate in guerrilla warfare against Israeli troops and allied militiamen in south Lebanon.

Israel had vowed to retaliate for Wednesday's bombing, the deadliest attack against Israelis in south Lebanon in 2½ years.

"Committing this stupidity and this attack shall not pass without a punishment," said a typewritten statement in Arabic signed Friday by Islamic Jihad, the pro-Iranian faction holding American journalist Terry Anderson and educator Thomas Sutherland.

The statement, delivered to the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar hours after the attack, praised the Shiite Moslem suicide car bomber.

Anderson, 40, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was abducted in Moslem West Beirut March 16, 1985.

Sutherland, 56, of Fort Collins, Colo., was acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut when he was abducted June 9, 1985.

Dodger fans celebrate!

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — About 1,000 boisterous fans greeted the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers after their improbable but inspired World Series victory over the Oakland Athletics.

"What a fantastic day! What a great team — the Cinderella team of the 1988 Series, the World Champion Los Angeles Dodgers!" Mayor Tom Bradley told an early-morning rally Friday in the parking lot of a local radio station.

The Dodgers, playing with a makeshift lineup of second-stringers calling themselves the stuntmen, beat the Athletics 5-2 Thursday behind the MVP pitching of Orel Hershiser to win the Series four-games-to-one.

The victory gave Los Angeles its second sports championship this year, an encore to the 1988 NBA title captured by Magic Johnson and the Lakers.

The Dodgers will show up for a victory rally Monday on the same south lawn of City Hall where fans cheered the Lakers.

The series also raised the already high hopes of the city's born-again hockey fans, who are optimistic the Kings' acquisition of Wayne Gretzky will earn Los Angeles a Stanley Cup.

Add to this the current No. 1 college football ranking for UCLA and the No. 3 ranking for its rival Southern California, area sports fans are sitting on a cloud next to Tommy Lasorda's Big Dodger in the Sky.

"Los Angeles is hot right now," said Lakers General Manager Jerry West.

So hot that stores could hardly wait to fill their racks with Dodger victory wear, said Janet Wells, marketing director of Insta Graphics Systems of Cerritos, one of about five clothing manufacturers licensed by professional baseball.

As soon as the Dodgers clinched the game Thursday night, Insta Graphic machines — pre-set with a Dodger logo — started cranking out sweatshirts at the rate of about one a second, she said.

Los Angeles sports writers, many of whom wrote off the Dodgers, almost choked on their cigars when Los Angeles upset a team that won 104 regular season games to win its second World Series this decade.

Scott Ostler of the Los Angeles Times saw the Series as something out of Walt Disney cartoon and guessed that Mickey Hatcher, who hit two home runs as a fill-in for star Kirk Gibson, must have filled his bat with Tinkerbell's fairy dust.

"With a lineup that looked and sounded more like a Mousketeer roll call, the Dodgers cruelly mugged the A's," Ostler wrote.

Herald Examiner columnist Gordon Dillow found the whole affair a religious experience and even said the Bible predicted a Dodger victory in Ecclesiastes 9:11: "The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong."

"That settles it. No doubt about it," Dillow writes. "God really is a Dodger fan."

Pampa snaps losing streak against Dunbar

LUBBOCK — Pampa had never got the best of Lubbock Dunbar in six football meetings. But that situation changed Saturday afternoon as the Harvesters posted a 31-21 District 1-A win over the Panthers.

It was the second win of the season for Pampa, now 2-3 in district play and 2-5 overall. Dunbar dropped to 2-4 in district and 3-5 overall.

Trailing 21-17, the Harvesters scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns to end the victory drought against Dunbar.

Pampa fullback David Fields, who rushed for 120 yards, gave Pampa the lead for good on a three-yard plunge with 9:02 to go. The scoring drive was highlighted by Brandon McDonald's 50-yard run which gave a Pampa a first down on the Dunbar 19.

Pampa's insurance TD was set up when Kerry Brown recovered a Patrick Lewis fumble on the Dunbar 34. The 233-pound Fields was the workhorse on the drive, carrying the ball five consecutive times and carrying would-be tacklers along the way. Quarterback James Bybee put on the finishing touches with a two-yard keeper into the end zone with 3:43 to play.

Despite 125 yards in penalties, the Harvesters were able to dominate the Panthers this time around. Pampa rolled up 434 yards in total offense while holding Dunbar to 230.

Perhaps more importantly, the Harvester had the clock on their side for most of the game. Time of possession for Pampa was 29:22 compared to 18:38 for Dunbar.

Dunbar did strike first. Lewis, who accounted for all three Panther TDs, scored on Dunbar's first possession when he dived over from the four with 6:38 remaining in the first quarter.

The Harvesters closed the gap to 7-3 just before the quarter ended on a 21-yard field goal by Shannon Cook.

The second quarter was a big one for the Harvesters, taking a 17-7 lead at halftime.

After Heath Parker had recovered a Dunbar fumble on the Harvester 29, Pampa went on an eight-play scoring drive with Bybee breaking loose for a 23-yard TD scamper.

Again, the Harvesters used a big play to get them started. Bybee hooked up with Brandon Knutson on a 40-yard pass play that gave the Harvesters a first down on the Dunbar 41.

Pampa's defense forced Dunbar to punt on the next possession and five plays later, Quincy Williams broke up the middle on a 36-yard scoring run at the 2:33 mark of the second quarter.

A pair of touchdowns by Lewis plus a safety gave Dunbar the lead with 10:22 left in the game.

After that Dunbar surge, it was all Pampa the rest of the way.

Standouts were plentiful for the Harvesters on both sides of the line. Defensive end Jason Cameron had two quarterback sacks and Williams, only a sophomore, ambled for 93 yards on just five carries. Hinkle, Brown, and Heath Parker made recoveries on a fumble-prone Dunbar team while Chris Ickles, Mike Cagle, Terry Stroud and Heath Summers made key tackles. McDonald, at running back, chipped in 77 yards on eight carries.

Pampa's football homecoming is next Friday night against Randall with the game starting at 7:30 p.m.

Hogs hold off Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks didn't allow injury or a late Houston rally to deter them Saturday from taking another step toward their first Cotton Bowl trip in 13 years.

Kendall Trainor kicked four field goals, extending his string to 15 in a row, and John Bland subbed for injured starting quarterback Quinn Grovey, leading the 13th-ranked Hogs to a 26-21 victory.

"We don't have anything wrapped up, but we're one step closer to where we want to be," Hatfield said. "It so happens, we know we can get there now."

The Razorbacks, 7-0 for the season and 4-0 in the SWC, have SWC games remaining against Rice, Baylor and Texas A&M in a bid for their first Cotton Bowl berth since they beat Georgia 31-10 in the 1976 game.

The victory gave Arkansas its first 7-0 start since 1982.

Bland played all but one series for Grovey, who had a bruised shoulder. Grovey returned for one drive in the fourth quarter, leading the Hogs to the clinching touchdown.

Bland directed the Hogs to a touchdown on the first series of the game, setting the tone for his performance.

"It helped the whole team's confidence," Bland said. "I've been with this team three years and they know I can play. I felt good and was confident. As a sophomore I played a whole second half."

Top-ranked Bruins blast Arizona 24-3

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Troy Aikman passed for 283 yards and three touchdowns Saturday, leading the No. 1-ranked UCLA Bruins to a 24-3 victory over Arizona, a tie for the Pacific-10 Conference lead and their best start in 22 years.

Aikman, who threw for 115 yards in the first quarter, tossed scoring passes of two yards to fourth-string tailback Danny Thompson late in the opening period, five yards to split end David Keating early in the second quarter and 55 yards to tight end Corwin

Anthony with 8:32 left in the game.

Aikman's 20-of-29 performance, with one interception, helped the Bruins extend their record NCAA scoring streak to 200 games. UCLA was last shut out by an opponent on Oct. 2, 1971, when Michigan beat the Bruins 38-0.

The victory gave UCLA a 7-0 mark and enabled the Bruins to tie idle third-ranked Southern Cal atop the Pac-10 with 4-0 records. The teams meet on Nov. 19.

Arizona is 4-3 overall and 2-2 in the conference.

Aggies defeat Rice

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Darren Lewis scored on a 47-yard run and posted his fifth consecutive 100-yard rushing day on Saturday as Texas A&M University inflicted a 24-10 Southwest Conference defeat on the Rice Owls.

The Aggies won their fourth consecutive SWC game to increase their record to 4-3 while Rice suffered its 13th consecutive loss, the longest losing streak in the nation. Rice is 0-6 for the season and 0-4 in league play.

A&M's eighth consecutive victory over Rice was fashioned behind Lewis' 170 yards rushing on 17 carries.

The 24-point underdog Owls offered stiff resistance to the defending SWC champion Aggies, who are on NCAA probation and can't go to a bowl this year.

Rice kept the ball 10:06 on its opening drive only to see Clint Parsons miss a 37-yard field goal attempt.

A 47-yard pass from Bucky Richardson to Rod Harris set up Robert Wilson's 1-yard scoring run for A&M.

The Aggies led only 10-3 at halftime on an exchange of field goals, 31 yards by A&M's Scott Slater and 29 yards by Parsons.

Lewis' 47-yard scoring run broke the game open in the third period, giving A&M a 17-3 lead.

On the Aggies' next possession, Lewis dashed 38 yards on a drive climaxed by Richardson's 2-yard scoring run.

Wildcats upset Memphis to stay in league race

CANADIAN — The Canadian Wildcats kept their District 2-2A playoff hopes alive with a 27-12 upset of the Memphis Cyclones at Wildcat Stadium Friday night.

With the win, Canadian improved to 2-1 in conference play and 5-3 overall to remain tied with Wellington and Memphis for second place.

The heavily-favored Cyclones, 2-1 and 6-2, dropped out of a first-place tie with Quannah, the only remaining undefeated District 2-2A team.

The young Wildcat defense filled a tall order in limiting Memphis to only 168 yards rushing and two touchdowns, especially with the likes of running backs Jeff Richardson and Johnny Scott in the driver's seat.

"We really hooked up defensively and played as well as we could have played," Canadian coach Paul Wilson said. "Richardson and Scott are two of the best backs you'll find in high school, and we chased them all over the field. It was in doubt right up to the end and we clawed and scratched for four quarters."

The Canadian offensive line also rose to the occasion, clearing the way for Wildcat rushers to gain 285 yards. Colby Butcher pounded out 109 yards and a pair of touchdowns on 18 carries to pace the ground game, followed by Larry Smith, who collected 95 yards and scored once on 11 totes. In all, Canadian rolled up 340 yards offensively.

"I'm surprised at the intensity we played with," Wilson said. "We were pretty low at this time last week, and we've just been groping around for the last three weeks. We needed to come out and have that 100 percent effort."

Larry Smith bolted into the end zone from 57 yards out to give the Wildcats an early lead. Memphis' Jeff Richardson knotted the score at 6 on a two-yard dash with 53 seconds remaining in the opening period.

The Cyclones went ahead for the first and only time in the game when Richardson tallied from the seven-yard line. A failed kick left Canadian trailing by six.

Butcher scored his first touchdown of the night on a two-yard run four minutes before halftime. Brandon Wheeler kicked the PAT that proved to be the winning point and the Wildcats carried a 13-12 lead into the locker room at intermission.

Canadian added a seven-point cushion early in the third quarter on a 2-yard toss from Shane Lloyd to Scott Walker. Butcher returned an interception 65 yards for a touchdown to finalize the scoring with 4:17 left in the game.

"Our offensive line blocked better than it has been and we ran the ball excellent against a pretty good defensive ball club," Wilson said. "We're really tickled."

The Wildcats travel to Wellington to continue district play next Friday night. "If we can win our last two games, it looks like we can be in it," Wilson said.

TCU victorious

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — "Six interceptions! Unbelievable."

So chortled Texas Christian coach Jim Wacker Saturday after his Horned Frogs stole six passes while waltzing to a 24-14 Southwest Conference victory over Baylor's wounded Bears.

"Today was our day. I was happy to see our secondary bounce back after getting shell-shocked last week at BYU."

The Frogs were burned for 490 yards passing in the loss to Brigham Young but rebounded Saturday by converting the first four interceptions into three touchdowns and a field goal.

"It was a frustrating day," sighed Baylor coach Grant Teaff, who saw his Bears score late to pull within 10 points and then misfire on a cinch touchdown pass.

Bear split end Greg Anderson was all alone on the receiving end of a long pass but simply bobbled the ball.

"We had a pass wide open go right through a receiver's hands and hit him in the stomach and fall to the ground," Teaff said. "I thought I was going to have a cardiac arrest at that point."

"I think I fell over on the ground. I reacted like a 3-year-old. I hope they didn't get it on TV."

Bucks race to easy win over Wheeler

By SONNY BOHANAN

WHITE DEER — Early fumbles, combined with some talented running and passing by White Deer quarterback Bart Thomas, took their toll on Wheeler as the Bucks raced to a 34-6 District 1-A victory over the Mustangs here Friday night.

Less than 13 minutes into the game, both teams had turned the ball over twice. What they did with those fumble recoveries made all the difference.

The Bucks converted each into Bart Thomas touchdown sweeps. The Mustangs were unable to move the ball on either occasion.

"These guys have got more heart than a dadgum organ bank," White Deer coach Windy Williams said of his Bucks. "Even when we fumbled the ball, we came back and made up for it. That's the sign of a great team."

Thomas was directly involved in every White Deer scoring strike, including two touchdowns rushing and three more passing. For the season, he has tallied nine times on the ground and eight through the air.

"We played a good, experienced football team," Wheeler coach Ronnie Karcher said. "We would have liked to get it together a little better, but we're young and inexperienced. And Thomas is a good quarterback — he killed us."

White Deer's Bryan Waitman topped both the rushing and receiving charts, covering 95 yards on 18 carries while hauling in three tosses for two touchdowns and 69 yards.

Jason Marlar found 75 yards on 11 totes, while Thomas totaled 71 yards on 13 attempts and completed eight of 14 aeriels for 139 yards. The Bucks finished with 422 total yards on the night.

Shane Guest, Wheeler's leading rusher, was limited to 39 yards on 13 carries. Quarterback Jason Wood hit on 6 of 12 passes for 66 yards, including the Mustangs' only score of the night, a 5-yarder to Kyle Sword.

The Bucks managed only three plays on the opening drive before losing a fumble to Wheeler on the White Deer 37. On the Mustangs' first play from scrimmage, Wood dropped back to pass. The ball was jarred loose just as he was releasing it and White Deer took charge on its own 44.

The Bucks second possession began in earnest when Thomas completed a 15-yard pass to T.W. Lowe and then sprinted 13 yards on the following play. Troy Cummins kept the drive alive with an eight-yard jaunt to the three-yard line on fourth-and-two.

The Bucks were pushed back to the 9 when Michael Kenney dropped Thomas for a six-yard loss. The White Deer quarterback responded on the next play with a sweep around right end and into the end zone. A failed kick left the Bucks with a 6-0 lead midway through the first period.

Wheeler's Travis Hughes dashed for 10 yards following the kickoff, but the Mustangs couldn't convert again and punted away. Four plays later a Wheeler helmet popped the ball out of Thomas' arms and the Mustangs again recovered on the White Deer 37.

Three incomplete passes forced a Kyle Sword punt that left White Deer deep in a hole at its own one-yard line. The Bucks couldn't dig themselves out and punted to the 42, where Wheeler took over with good field position. But on fourth-and-two, the Mustangs fumbled and White Deer recovered at the 35.

Jason Marlar busted for 40 yards before being knocked out of bounds by Shane Guest at the 6. In an exact replay of the first touchdown, Thomas rolled right and took it six yards across the goal line. Brady Burns' kick put the Bucks up 13-0 with 7:38 remaining in the half.

the ball on downs at the White Deer 34. From there, the Bucks turned the tide of the game for good as they marched 66 yards downfield on the strength of 9- and 18-yard runs by Marlar and 21- and 8-yard totes by Thomas.

Then from the two-yard line, Thomas rolled right again, but this time he caught everyone by surprise by throwing all the way across the field and hitting Daniel Gillespie, who was wide open in the left corner of the end zone. Burns' kick 19 seconds before intermission left Wheeler trailing 20-0.

"I was surprised that it got out of hand early like it did," Williams said. "But at the same time, I knew we were capable of that."

Wheeler managed only 45 yards and three first downs in the first half. During the same period, White Deer had gained almost 200 yards.

The Pampa High girls' golf team shot a 387 to win a triangular Saturday in Amarillo.

Borger was second with a 423 followed by Amarillo High at 442.

Laura Eberz and Kelley Harris each shot a 95 to lead the Lady Harvesters. Other scores were Stephanie Stout 98, Brandy Chase 99, and Tracy Webb 109.

The Pampa boys team closed out the fall season in a triangular Saturday at Plainview.

Plainview Red shot a 325, followed by Plainview Blue 337 and Pampa 342.

Ryan Teague led the Harvest-coach Frank McCullough.

Borger shot a 332, followed by Tascosa 336, and Plainview Blue 368. Palo Duro had a 346, followed by Hereford 350 and Randall 361 in other triangulars.

Caprock downed Plainview White in a dual 373-378.

Wheeler lost a fumble on the first play following the kickoff.

Each team managed one first down apiece on the next four possessions.

Midway through the fourth quarter, White Deer mounted its final scoring drive, which lasted 11 plays and covered 64 yards, culminating in a 30-yard pass from Thomas to Bryan Waitman.

In the closing moments of the game, Wheeler went to work to prevent a shutout. Wood scrambled for a 27-yard gain, then completed three consecutive passes, the final one a 4-yard TD toss to Kyle Sword. The run failed, ending the scoring for the night at 34-6 with 1:18 to go.

White Deer improved to 8-0 overall and 4-0 in conference play to remain atop District 1-A. Wheeler stands at 3-4 and 1-2 and fell to third place in the district standings.

Miami wins homecoming tilt

MIAMI — Just as Miami coach Bob Loy had predicted, the Warriors were due to explode this week.

And when the dust finally settled, the Warriors had secured a 42-14 homecoming victory over the Lefors Pirates in District 2A Six-Man action here Friday night.

Running back Shane Fields scored an astonishing 36 of Miami's 42 points as the Warriors improved to 1-2 in conference play and 3-5 overall. Lefors fell to 0-3 and 3-5.

"Our defense played an outstanding game," Miami coach Bob Loy said. "We had to get the momentum back on our side, and we finally put it all together. We needed it."

Although Miami completed only one pass, a 55-yarder, the Warriors found 402 yards on the ground for a 457-yard total offensive effort. Fields rushed for three touchdowns, kicked three field goals and two PATs, and recovered a fumble in the end zone for a safety.

"I can handle it when Miami beats us," Lefors coach Dale Means said, "but I can't handle it when Lefors beats us. I think it's just the fact of us being young and not really knowing how to win."

Fields opened the scoring on a 35-yard run followed by a point-after kick, giving the Warriors an early 8-0 lead. Lefors tied it up on a dash from the 20-yard line.

Miami again went ahead when Fields recovered a fumble for a safety. In the second period, he booted a 37-yard field goal to increase the margin to six points.

Lefors responded with a TD to knot the score at 14, where it remained until intermission.

But in the second half, Miami went on a scoring frenzy that saw them tally 28 unanswered points.

Fields kicked a 30-yard field goal and then struck again during the Warriors' next possession on a long sweep around the end.

"In the middle of the third quarter, they hit a field goal and then scored a touchdown on that long run," Means said. "After they got up by ten points, we just fell apart."

Quarterback Billy Russell, who replaced Cleve Wheeler in the second half, launched a 55-yard touchdown aerial to Clay Mercer to put the Warriors up 32-14.

Fields kicked a 40-yard field goal and sprinted eight yards for a touchdown to close out the scoring.

Lefors travels to Silverton next Friday to take on the Owls, currently in sole possession of second place with a 2-1 district record.

Groom, 0-3 in conference play, will host the Warriors.

Wellington posts win over Shamrock team

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

WELLINGTON — The Wellington Skyrockets remained tied for second place in District 2-2A with a 39-0 win over the Shamrock Irish in conference action Friday night.

Wellington, now 2-1 in league play and 5-3 overall, is clinched in a three-way race with Canadian and Memphis for the runner-up spot in the conference. Shamrock stands at 2-6 and 0-3.

The Skyrockets gained 239 yards rushing and 13 passing for a total of 252 on the night. The Wellington defense limited Shamrock to 46 total yards, 23 on the ground and 23 through the air.

"They're a good football team," Shamrock coach Ed Johnson said. "Carter Nash is awfully hard to handle for us."

Nash, Wellington's top running back, rushed for 71 yards, and teammate Wesley McKnight gained 69 more, including a 50-yard run in the second quarter.

The Skyrockets posted their first score on a one-yard run by Nash. Shane Black increased that lead to 13 with a dash across the goal line from three yards out.

Wellington scored 20 more points in the second period when Davy Mithlo fell on a fumble in the end zone, McKnight made his 50-yard jaunt and Robert Watts returned an interception 35 yards for a touchdown.

The Skyrockets led 33-0 at intermission.

James McIntosh's 10-yard TD run was the lone score in the second half.

"Wellington's a class program," Johnson said, "and coach Williams helped my program by letting us play. He put in some of his younger kids and we did, too, so both teams got a lot of experience on Friday."

"I was real pleased with the kids' effort—they played awfully hard. It was a good ball game from that standpoint."

Shamrock hosts Clarendon, 0-3 and 0-8, next Friday night.

McLean rolls past Groom

By SONNY BOHANAN

MCLEAN — The McLean Tigers continued their bid for the District 2A Six-Man crown with a 64-24 victory over Groom here Friday night.

McLean remained tied with Higgins for first place and improved to 3-0 in conference, 5-2 overall, while Groom fell to 0-3 and 1-7.

The high-scoring contest was epitomized by the 32-point first period, 20 by McLean and 12 by Groom. "That first quarter was kind of like a track meet," McLean coach Jerry Miller said. "They moved the ball well on us, but we stayed in there and outscored them."

Indeed, both teams scored on each of their first two possessions, and Groom may have surprised McLean by getting on the scoreboard first when Jay Britten broke for a 40-yard touchdown run.

But McLean struck back immediately with a 13-yard scoring pass to Donald Harris from Quinton Brown, whom Miller moved to quarterback in hopes of improving the passing game.

"Our passing game was a little better," Miller said. "We've been working on it because we'll have to pass against Higgins."

The score remained tied at six until Sid Brass, who rushed for 88 yards on 14 carries and scored four touchdowns, dove across the goal line from the one. Tuffy Sanders' kick moved McLean ahead by eight points.

A 51-yard TD pass from Michael Rose to Kevin Kerlee brought Groom back within two. But Brass got the call again just before the end of the first quarter as he booted into the end zone from the 33-yard line.

Brass scored his third touchdown of the night on a one-yard dash, and Brown ended the scoring for the first half when he returned an interception 50 yards for six points. McLean led 36-12 at intermission.

"We probably made a better run at them than the score indicated," Groom coach Jimmy Branch said. "Early in the game we had first-and-goal inside their ten a couple of times, and we couldn't punch it in."

"We knew we had to score on them every time we could, but we passed up three chances, and those are opportunities you can't go back and get."

Jay Britten scored his second touchdown on an 11-yard pass from Rose, who completed seven of 16 tosses for 124 yards and three TDs. Groom trailed 36 to 18.

Tres Hess, the game's leading rusher with 126 yards and two TDs on 13 carries, tallied from the 37-yard line for McLean. Brass then hauled in a four-yard pass from Brown and Calle Holwick slashed 58 yards for a touchdown to give McLean a 56-18 edge.

Kevin Kerlee caught his second TD pass on a 15-yarder from Rose. Hess' eight-yard run closed the scoring at 64-24.

"With things going like they have," Branch said, "we've lost some of our desire and it's hard to get motivated. We've been real emotional, and I think that hurts us."

Groom will host Miami, 1-2 in conference play, next Friday night. McLean travels to Higgins, 3-0, for what may well be the game that decides the district championship.

United States Navy made the right call

● It's hard to believe the Navy isn't going to release 7-1 center David Robinson from his military obligation so he can play for the San Antonio Spurs.

In this day and age, what pro sports wants, pro sports usually gets, and right or wrong doesn't play a part in the decision. The Navy made the right call. Pampa hires greenskeeper Gene Griggs likes what he sees. Griggs, recently-hired greenskeeper for the new Pampa public golf course, envisions the 18-hole layout as one of the best in the panhandle when all the work is finished.

"It's going to be a nice one because it's going to have a little bit of everything. There's going to be some flat fairways, there's going to be some rolling hills, plus a lake to shot over three times," Griggs said.

A Garden City, Kans. native, Griggs is currently working right alongside volunteer laborers and waterline employees installing an irrigation system around the 6,723-yard course.

"After we get through with laying the pipe, we'll get to work at shaping the greens and tee boxes," Griggs said. "Around mid-April we'll start seeding the fairways and bringing some trees in." Griggs, who spent the past 13 months as greenskeeper at Perryton, would like to see the course completed around Labor Day, 1989.

"A lot depends on the weather and getting the seed in the ground," he added.

Griggs, 34, has been involved in the caring of greens for the past five years.

"My brother-in-law was the PGA pro at Booker and he needed a greenskeeper. That's how I got started."

Griggs, admits however, that this is the first time he's been in on the initial phases of golf course construction.

"I was employed as the greenskeeper at Santa Fe right after they got through with laying the waterlines and constructing the course," Griggs said.

Greyhounds toppled by East Texas State

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Senior quarterback Mike Trigg threw two touchdown passes to lead the East Texas State University Lions to a 28-13 victory against the Eastern New Mexico Greyhounds.

ETSU improves to 7-1 with the victory and takes sole possession of first place in the Lone Star Conference as Angelo State lost to Central State, 19-11.

ETSU is 4-0 in conference play. The loss drops Eastern New Mexico to 2-5 overall and 0-4 in league play.

The Greyhounds opened the scoring with a two-play, 53-yard drive that ended with quarterback Mike Scott passing 47 yards to Mario Smalls. Bob Gilbreath made the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

The Lions tied the score when senior tailback Jarrod Owens scored from 32 yards out and Shane Schulz kicked the conversion.

With 25 seconds to go in the half the Lions scored the go-ahead points when Trigg passed to Gary Compton for a 22-yard touchdown. On the next play, free safety Craig Marshall intercepted Scott and went 72 yards for the score. The ensuing extra-point attempt failed and ETSU led, 20-7.

The Lions scored once in the third when Trigg passed to Compton for a 38-yard touchdown. Owens, going to his right, took the pitch from Trigg and passed it back to Trigg on the left for the two-point conversion.

The Greyhounds got a late touchdown when Eric Craig scored from one yard out with 2:47 to go in the game. The two-point conversion failed.

Phillies' slugger applies for free agent status

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Mike Schmidt would rather be in Philadelphia. All the same, he's willing to leave.

Schmidt, catcher Ozzie Virgil of Atlanta and infielder Harry Spilman of Houston filed for free agency Friday, the first day players were eligible.

Schmidt, seventh of the all-time list with 542 homers, made $2.15 million this year and the Phillies contributed an additional $100,000 in his name to charity. His contract would have extended to 1989 at the same salary but did not because he finished the season on the disabled list.

"We have filed for free agency and are looking elsewhere," said Arthur Rosenberg, Schmidt's agent. "We feel there is a list of teams that could certainly use Mike's help and they are the ones we will contact first."

Schmidt batted .249 this season with 12 homers and 62 runs batted in, his lowest totals since 1973, his first full season in the big leagues. He had surgery for a torn right rotator cuff Sept. 7 and did not play after Aug. 12.

"I am disappointed but certainly understand his right to become a free agent," Phillies owner Bill Giles said. "We will continue to make every effort to sign Mike and are still hopeful he will end his career in a Phillies uniform. We feel we made Mike a very fair and reasonable offer and will continue to keep the lines of communication open."

Rosenberg said Schmidt was willing to accept a contract in which part of the money would be paid only if he is able to play.

"I'm sure we could structure something that would protect a club from the slight chance, although the chance certainly exists, that Mike cannot recover from the surgery," Rosenberg said.

Virgil batted .256 last season with nine homers and 31 RBI and made $900,000. Atlanta probably will not want him back next year, especially after the late-season acquisition of Jody Davis from the Chicago Cubs.

Spilman batted .146 in 45 at-bats and made $225,000.

A total of 105 players are eligible for free agency. The most notable free agents this year are pitchers Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles, Bruce Hurst of Boston, Dave Stieb of Toronto, Nolan Ryan of Houston, Steve Bedrosian of Philadelphia and Mike Moore of Seattle.

Two players who could have been free agents agreed to new contracts Friday — outfielder Bob Dernier with the Phillies and pitcher Dan Quisenberry with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Los Angeles exercised options for 1989 in the contracts of catcher Mike Scioscia and outfielder John Shelby. Toronto also exercised the option for 1989 in the contract of designated hitter Rance Mulliniks, who was eligible for free agency. The Blue Jays exercised the option for 1989 on catcher Ernie Whitt, who was not eligible.

Jets viewing options after Gastineau's retirement

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — The teammates Mark Gastineau left behind might have the final word on his controversial career.

The New York Jets defensive end ended his nine-year career when he abruptly retired Thursday after learning fiancée Brigitte Nielsen had uterine cancer. The couple is in Phoenix where she will enter a hospital within five days, said Joel Brokaw, her Los Angeles-based publicist.

The Jets are entertaining three options before they submit their 45-man active roster by 4 p.m. Saturday to the league office. They can either place Gastineau on the reserve/retired list or the reserve-left squad list, or do nothing at all.

The most likely option — and one the team probably will exercise — is place him on the reserve retired list. On this list, Gastineau has until Nov. 19 to reconsider his decision. If he does, he must pass procedural waivers to rejoin the Jets, which is highly unlikely. He would become available to any team and cannot be recalled. After Nov. 20, Gastineau can't return until next season.

Should Gastineau report before the Jets place him on the reserve retired list, or if he wants to return next season, coach Joe Walton said it won't be as easy as showing up at the front door.

"He can't come back unless the team says so," Walton said. "I said that yesterday, and it still stands. This is a team matter. The players themselves will make that decision."

Considering Gastineau's frosty history with his teammates, and his crossing the line during last season's NFL Players Association strike, the odds are against him.

Most of the Jets expressed a concern for Nielsen's health and an understanding of Gastineau's reaction. However, all would've preferred Gastineau address the team.

"I'm not saying he doesn't care about us, but that's the way he is. That's just Mark," center Jim Sweeney said. "If I had a wife dying of cancer, I might do the same. I just wish he would've talked to us. This is supposed to be a team."

Defensive end Marty Lyons said Gastineau would have received the same understanding from the Jets as Lyons did last November, when he left the team after his wife Kelley was injured in a car accident.

"If he can't count on the people he works with, lives with, and dies with, who can he count on?" asked Lyons. "If he had explained it to us, I think we all would've understood."

"But he put us on the spot because he's a big part of our defense. What Mark did was what he has always done — he did what was best for himself."

Linebacker Kyle Clifton was in the minority. He had no problem with Gastineau returning, no questions asked.

"He's a great football player. If he wanted to come back, I wouldn't have a problem with it," Clifton said. "It's pretty obvious that he has some problems."

Nose tackle Gerald Nichols was far less generous.

"That would be up to the coaching staff, but my opinion would be no," Nichols said. "This is a business. You can't come and go as you please."

If there was a common opinion, quarterback Pat Ryan phrased it best when he said, "Mark is just Mark."

Bengals may try no-huddle offense

CINCINNATI (AP) — Look for the Cincinnati Bengals to brush the cobwebs off their no-huddle offense this week.

The Bengals like to go with the no-huddle attack against teams that do a lot of defensive substituting in hopes of forcing those teams to stay with the same players. Although Bengals coach Sam Wyche has used the no-huddle offense sparingly this season, he might dust it off for Sunday's NFL game at Riverfront Stadium against the Houston Oilers.

That's what Oilers coach Jerry Glanville expects, anyway.

"We think they'll probably play us a little differently than what they play other people," Glanville said. "We're a multiple-substitution defensive scheme, that we can put all different types of combinations in there. And I think they try to do those things (no-huddle) so we don't get all of our different multiple fronts."

The Bengals have used the no-huddle attack frequently in previous games against the Oilers. Cincinnati will line up quickly to prevent the defense from making substitutions, with quarterback Boomer Esiason calling the play at the line of scrimmage.

The no-huddle offense was one of Wyche's favorite coaching innovations. He's toned down on the non-traditional trimmings this season, but has gone to the no-huddle attack in certain situations.

The Bengals went without a huddle at times against the New York Jets earlier this year, and three times, the Jets were caught with too many men on the field as they failed to make substitutions quickly enough.

The no-huddle offense could come in handy against the Oilers' defense, which has helped keep Houston in the AFC Central Division race while quarterback Warren Moon was out with a fractured shoulder.

"Their defense is keeping them in all the games," Wyche said. "When their quarterbacks were out, their defense was winning games, kept them in there. It's the same with Cleveland, doing the same thing with their quarterback (Bernie Kosar) out."

The Oilers are practicing to face the no-huddle attack this week. Glanville said he enjoys the challenge of preparing for an unusual offensive strategy.

The Battle of McClellan Creek

By MARILYN POWERS
Lifestyles Editor

Almost 114 years ago, when Eastern cities were growing, the West was being tamed and the South was trying to recover from the devastations of the Civil War, the Texas Panhandle was still an unsettled land of treeless plains unbroken by fences or towns, with here and there a grove of cottonwoods and scrub brush growing along a stream.

Reminders of that time can still be found today. One significant discovery has been the recovery of artifacts from the site of the Battle of McClellan Creek, which took place in 1874 between a band of Cheyenne Indians, led by Chief Grey Beard, and U.S. infantry and cavalry troops who were moving through the Panhandle.

Lieutenant Frank D. Baldwin, commanding 88 soldiers, had camped along McClellan Creek in November of 1874. Included in his group were 40 men in Company D 5th Infantry, commanded by a Lt. Bailey, and 26 men in D 6th Cavalry, commanded by Lt. Overton, plus 12 scouts, a mountain howitzer drawn by two mules, 23 six-mule teams, 26 civilians and their wagonmaster, named Curley.

After leaving his camp along McClellan Creek on Nov. 8, 1874, one of Baldwin's scouts, Metal detectors were used at the battle site to find metal artifacts such as shell casings and canister balls.

William F. Schmalsle, returned to the troop with the news that Indians were camped in the outfit's line of march. This was the camp of Grey Beard, who held captive two girls who had survived an earlier Indian attack on their family in Kansas. The sisters were Julia and Addie German.

John German and his family had left Fannin County, Ga., in 1870 en route to Colorado, where a friend of German's had settled and written to him of the area. German's health had been bad ever since he had served as a Confederate volunteer during the Civil War.

The family had reached Kansas by August of 1874. After four years on the trail and only a few days from their destination, the German family was attacked by a band of 19 Indians. German and his wife Liddie were killed, as were their son, Stephen, 14, and oldest daughter Jane.

The four surviving daughters, Catherine, Sophia, Julia and Addie, were taken captive. Joanna, another daughter, had been captured but was later killed on the trail as the Indians moved south.

Later in the winter, the two older surviving sisters, Catherine and Sophia, were released at the Indian agency at Fort Sill, Okla., by Stone Calf's band after the Indians had been starved and forced by circumstances to return to the reservation.

The Cheyennes apparently had decided that the two youngest girls, Julia and Addie, were too much trouble to keep, but instead of killing them, the Indians turned them loose to fend for themselves.

After five weeks of wandering on their own in the area, the two girls were recaptured only one day before Baldwin found Grey Beard's band.

Baldwin, upon hearing of the encampment ahead, rode to a vantage point and, with the aid of a telescope, estimated that between 100 and 200 Indians and their families were situated in the path of the troops. The lieutenant ordered his men to move forward rapidly. When they came to within a mile of the camp, Baldwin sent 10 cavalymen ahead as skirmishers. The remainder of the soldiers were formed into a line after approaching to within 500 yards of the Indians. The infantry was on the right, the cavalry was on the left, and the howitzer was in the center, in front of the wagon train which formed four columns in the middle.

THE ARTIFACTS

Stone against steel — Indian arrowheads made of flint were pitted against steel canister balls and shells.

A number of shells, both exploded and unexploded, were found at the site. The calipers show the size of the ammunition.

A crumbling, rusty knife blade that had been used by an Indian warrior was found along with the other weapons and ammunition.

THE INTERPRETATION

Gerald Wright, left, and Clotille Thompson, curator of White Deer Land Museum, unveil a painting of the Battle of McClellan Creek, done by Lora

Baggerman of Pampa. The painting and artifacts from the battle site were formally presented to the museum at a reception Oct. 17.

The Bynums are making their home in Pampa, where the bridegroom is employed by Phillips Petroleum Company.

The Cheyennes tried to occupy and hold the ravines to Baldwin's right. He ordered the howitzer to be fired on the warriors in order to clear the ravines and thus keep the Indians from attacking his exposed flank and rear.

Faced with the big gun's shells, the Indians retreated back onto level ground and tried a head-on charge, only to face the howitzer again, along with a hail of small-arms ammunition. After losing two warriors, the braves retreated again, having accomplished their purpose of stalling for time to give their women and children an opportunity to escape.

In the rush to retreat from Baldwin's attack, the Indians abandoned most of their supplies and teepees, although they twice tried to charge the camp as the infantry marched through it.

Upon searching the camp, the soldiers found Julia and Addie German, half-starved and naked but still alive.

The cavalry pursued the fleeing Indians across the plains, but managed to get close enough to shoot just once. One Indian was shot from his saddle by a cavalry pistol before the pursuit was abandoned after 12 miles due to the condition of the cavalry mounts.

Evidence of this battle has been found by Gerald Wright and Stan and Margie Anthony, all of Pampa. Wright, a county commissioner, had been interested in the area's history for a number of years, and had been asked to take on the task of searching for artifacts from the battle for White Deer Land Museum.

He began the project two years ago by researching information at Lovett Library, West Texas State University's research center, area museums and research centers, and The Pampa News. From his findings, he was able to locate the battle site and recover artifacts from the area with the help of the Anthonys and some metal detectors.

Most of the items recovered were shells and slugs from the soldiers' guns, canister balls and arrowheads. Some of the shells had not been fired. The steel canister balls were used in canisters fired from large guns; when the canister fired, the balls sprayed a fairly wide area, like buckshot from a rifle.

Other finds included a rusty, disintegrating metal knife blade that had probably belonged to an Indian; a chain from a soldier's canteen, which had attached the stopper to the canteen; horseshoes and nails; and primer bits.

The artifacts were formally presented to White Deer Land Museum at a reception Monday evening, Oct. 17, along with a painting of the battle done by Lora Baggerman of Pampa. A book on the battle is being written by Kelly Ebel of Pampa, and is expected to be published next spring or summer.

The battle site is on privately owned land and is not accessible to the public, Wright said. Efforts are being made to have the area declared a historical site.

Meanwhile, there are still stretches of the Panhandle where things look much as they did over 100 years ago, and if you listen closely, you might hear the voices of the past, sighing in the ever-present Panhandle winds.

FULL DANCE AT YOUR WEDDING

If you're planning a wedding reception with dancing, there's certain protocol involved. Keeping it in mind won't interfere with your fun, but will make sure that everyone gets their expected dance — and also a good "photo opportunity" for the wedding album.

The first dance traditionally belongs to the bride and groom. No matter what you're doing, be sure to make yourself available for the dance at the right time — your guests won't feel free to dance until you do.

Traditionally there are two couples on the floor for the next dance — you and your father (or, if deceased, the relative who gave you away), plus the bridegroom and his mother. Then you dance with your new father-in-law, your new husband dances with your mother, while your father dances with your bridegroom's mother. Next, as you dance with the best man and your bridegroom dances with the maid of honor, all the guests join in.

Make sure you try to dance with your elder male relatives while your husband dances with the women in both families. It's also up to the members of the wedding party to see dance all the relatives and single friends get to dance.

NEW FAMILY NIGHT
 Gray County 4-H Council will host its annual New Family Night at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 25 in the Pampa Optimist Club building. The purpose of New Family Night is to inform new 4-H members and their families about the Gray County program.

This is an excellent chance for anyone interested in 4-H to see what it is all about. A meal will be served at 6:30 p.m. by Gold Star 4-H Club, so come on out and see what Gray County 4-H has to offer at Family Night.

VOLUNTEER ROLE IN 4-H PROGRAM IS REWARDING

One of the most rewarding things an individual can do for tomorrow's leaders is to serve as a 4-H adult volunteer today.

Joe Vann

Volunteers not only give leadership to 4-H experiences for youth, they keep the program relevant to local community needs and interest.

Today, 61 4-H adult volunteer in Gray County work with over 300 members from the third grade to 19 years old. These volunteers share their skills and experiences by assisting young people in a variety of 4-H projects and activities.

The Gray County 4-H Banquet last weekend served as a special time to recognize and applaud those volunteer leaders who give so much to the Gray County 4-H program.

Volunteers do not have to be experts in specialized subject matter areas. They can rely on the local Extension Service staff in the county and at Texas A&M University, the state's land-grant university, to provide them with training, educational materials and resources to use in the 4-H program. The land-grant system makes 4-H uniquely qualified to meet both the constant and ever-changing needs of young and older people alike.

The 4-H volunteer corps is almost 620,000 strong nationwide; more than 30,000 volunteers support the 4-H program in Texas. Volunteers are the backbone of a basic and cost-effective system which delivers practical educational experiences to some 4.5 million 4-H members in the United States. The time, travel and support volunteers contribute is valued at $1 billion annually.

The 4-H program provides many opportunities for growth and stimulation for adults and helps them attain enjoyment and self-fulfillment. So prepare the young people in our communities for tomorrow by joining the ranks of 4-H volunteers.

For more information about the 4-H program and its many opportunities, contact the county Extension Office at 669-8033.

Minister neglects his wife for radio, TV 'mistresses'

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Like many other women who write to you, I have a husband who has a mistress. Her name is Television. If it isn't Television, it's her sister, Radio.

Television entertains him every night during our evening meal when our family should be sharing the day's events together. Don't suggest rescheduling dinner, because the news is on for an hour and a half, and my husband watches all of it.

He's a minister and prides himself on "saving people." He keeps the TV tuned to a religious channel when he's not watching the news. I hear preaching morning, noon and night. Many evenings I go to bed while he's embracing his other mistress, Radio. When I get into his car, the radio is always tuned to gospel music. We can't carry on a conversation in the car because he listens with one ear. He never inquires about my day, my feelings, or anything concerning me or the children. I realize that he is serving the Lord and saving souls, but what about his family? When I complain, he says, "Wives, submit yourselves unto your husbands." (Colossians 3:18.) What can I do?

SUBMISSIVE WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You can also quote Scripture: "Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them." (Colossians 3:19.) Doctors sometimes need a doctor, and ministers sometimes need to be reminded to practice what they preach. You both would benefit from counseling. If he balks, go alone. What doth it profit a man if he saves souls and loses his wife?

DEAR ABBY: How does one break a child (now 6 years old) of lying? This child started to "fib" as soon as she could talk. We know that all children exaggerate and make up stories, but this child has become a very accomplished liar, and we are concerned.

Do you (or others who have had to deal with this) have any suggestions on how to break a child's habit of lying?

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: First, focus on why the child lies. To attract attention? To avoid being punished? ("Who broke the vase?") Then never allow the child to get away with lying. Say, "That story you told was just 'make-believe' or 'pretend,' wasn't it?" Explain, without being critical or hostile, that one should not "make up" stories and say that it actually happened.

If the child persists in lying, discuss it with your pediatrician. Perhaps an evaluation by someone who specializes in child behavior should be considered.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your definition of success. Let me add another, by Martin Buxbaum:

SUCCESS

You can use most any measure When you're speaking of success. You can measure it in fancy home, Expensive car or dress. But the measure of your real success

Is the one you cannot spend. It's the way your kids describe you

When they're talking to a friend.

CHRISTY H. RICHARDS, FIELDING, UTAH

DEAR ABBY: Every time my wife and I go to pick out wallpaper, we end up in a big argument. This time, I told her to go to the store and pick out the three patterns she liked the best, and I would make the final decision from one of the three.

Well, she picked out three patterns from which I selected one. We hired a professional wallpaper hanger because my wife says I don't know how to hang wallpaper. After spending a lot of money for wallpaper and having it installed, my wife decided she hated the wallpaper.

I have to agree, it doesn't look as good on the wall as I thought it would, and now my wife says wallpaper should be the wife's choice entirely because the wife has to look at it all day.

What do you say? We agreed to abide by your decision because we are going to replace it, although it's only been up for two weeks.

WONDERING IN CAPE CORAL, FLA.

DEAR WONDERING: Wallpaper should be a joint decision, but since your wife selected the three patterns she preferred, and agreed to let you make the final decision, she should have no complaints.

P.S. Next time, consult a decorator, and let him or her take the heat.

THE ONE TRUE FOUNDATION

"Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone of sure foundation: he that believeth shall not be in haste" (Isaiah 28:16.) Some seven hundred years before Jesus was born, the prophet Isaiah predicted His birth, suffering, death, authority and as the sure and true foundation (Isaiah 7:14; 8:9-17; 11:1; 28:16.) That Jesus is the precious corner-stone is further verified by the apostle Paul: "For other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (I Corinthians 3:11.) The apostle Peter quotes Isaiah 28 and applies it to Jesus Christ (I Peter 2:1-4.) That which Jesus promised to build was His church (Matthew 16:18.) The church is the building and Jesus Christ is the foundation. It is not a material building of brick and stone but a spiritual structure made up of saved people (Acts 2:47.) Some have suggested that the church was built upon the apostle Peter because Jesus called him "Peter" which means "a stone."

But the "rock" upon which the church was to be built comes from a different Greek word which means a "rock ledge" or "bed-rock". But if Peter was the foundation of the church he didn't know it because he writes of Jesus being the foundation. Further, Paul affirmed that no other foundation could be laid than Jesus Christ. The truth that Jesus Christ is the Son of God is the basis of the gospel of Christ. Paul said He was declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead (Romans 1:4.) During His life upon this earth Jesus' claims to deity were constantly in question. His being the Son of God determines His authority. "but of the Son He saith, Thy throne, O God is forever and ever; and sceptre of uprightness is the sceptre of thy kingdom." (Psalms 45:6; Hebrews 1:8.) Also, the Father said of Jesus, "Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies the footstool of thy feet" (Psalms 110:1; Hebrews 1:13.) Jesus Christ is, most assuredly, the only foundation of the only true church, His church.

Theatre ballet company to open concert season

Pampa's Community Concert Association will kick off its 1988-89 season when the New York Theatre Ballet performs at 8 p.m. Oct. 27 in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

New York Theatre Ballet is a dance company that rivals many larger ballet companies in performance of 19th-century and contemporary choreographers with an accent on emotion, style and precision. The well-disciplined dancers have been acclaimed for their remarkable delicacy and charm, and the artistic director and founder of New York Theatre Ballet, Diana Byer, received this year's Helen Weisberg Award from the National Arts Club.

Along with former Ballet Russe dancer Margaret Craske, who acts as advisor and director of ballet instruction, Miss Byer recreates the masterworks by Fokine, Tudor, Dolin and others. During their New York engagements, the company has performed such renowned works as Fokine's Le Carnaval, Les Sylphides, Firebird and Le Spectre de la Rose, Dolin's Pas De Quatre and the Nutcracker. Contemporary ballets such as An Eccentric Beauty and Phantom of the Opera by James Waring are also in their repertoire.

Through research, Miss Byer assures that all aspects of New York Theatre Ballet's productions of classic works are accurate, with costumes and staging strictly adhering to their original designs. Craske has imbued the dancers with qualities and style inherent in the ballets of renowned choreographers such as Fokine.

Before founding New York Theatre Ballet, Miss Byer performed as soloist with Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, Manhattan Festival Ballet, New York City Opera Ballet, James Waring Dance Company, New York City Ballet Touring Company and the Juilliard Ensemble. She teaches ballet, currently at Ballet School N.Y. and formerly at Manhattan School of Dance, Compagnie de Michel Hallet (Lyon, France) and Cascina Bella (Milan, Italy).

Craske has been responsible for significant formative instruction of major dancers such as Twyla Tharp, Margot Fonteyn, Paul Taylor and Alicia Alonso. After dancing with Diaghilev's Ballet Russe and the Royal Italian Ballet of London, she was the choreographer of the Carl Rosa Opera Company. She directed her own school in London, and was ballet mistress for American Ballet Theatre and for the Sadler's Wells Ballet, now the Royal Ballet. In 1947, Craske came to the United States as guest teacher to the American Ballet Theatre. Later, with Anthony Tudor, she directed the ballet school at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Sylvia Taalsohn, costume designer for New York Theatre Ballet, works in ballet, opera and theater. Dancemagazine wrote, "Sylvia Taalsohn's brilliant costumes deserve to go into the Metropolitan Museum's costume institute." Apart from New York Theatre Ballet, she has designed for Jacob's Pillow, New World Festival of the Arts and Metropolitan Opera.

In addition to the company's cross-country tour, highlights of its 1988-89 season include an engagement in Guatemala City, at the National Theater.

Through its innovative staging, New York Theatre Ballet creates an atmosphere of intimacy with the audience. Focusing on the classics and ballet fundamentals, this ensemble is acclaimed as one of the best in its category.

Dead needles on pines are normal occurrence

PINE TREES

During the last 10 days, I have started to notice that some of our pine trees are dropping their old, inner needles. This is an annual natural occurrence as pine trees do not retain all of their needles for the life of the tree. Pine trees retain their needles for about three growing seasons.

As newer growth occurs, the older needles receive less sunshine and are less functional to the tree, so these inner needles drop.

This process is starting on pine trees, so don't get alarmed when you see some dead inner needles on your tree. It is just part of the natural growth process of pines.

PEACH TREE BORER TREATMENT

If you did not use an insecticide spray treatment for peach tree borers on the trunk of your fruit trees either during the summer or early fall, it is now time to forget those methods for this year.

However, these borers can be controlled by an application of paradichloro-benzene crystals applied around the base of the tree during the period of Oct. 20 to Nov. 15. The use of these crystals in the proper manner will, in most cases, eliminate the infestations.

The crystals should be applied when the soil is dry and the temperature is 55°F. or above. Weeds should be removed from around the base of the tree and the soil leveled 1 foot from the tree trunk.

Place the crystals in a narrow groove encircling the tree about 2 inches from the tree trunk. Care should be taken to keep any of the crystals from coming in direct contact with the tree. Clean soil should be placed over the crystals so as to form a cone-shaped pile about 6 inches high around the base of the tree.

When putting and compacting the soil around the base of the tree, care should be taken not to put any of the crystals against the tree. During the winter, the peach tree borers that are at the base of the tree will be killed. In late March or early April, the cone-shaped pile of dirt should be removed from the base of the tree.

The amount of paradichloro-benzene crystals to be used is determined by the age and size of the tree. In general, one-half 1/2 ounce of crystals should be used for 2- to 3-year-old trees, three-fourths ounce for 4- or 5-year-old trees and one ounce for mature trees.

When peach tree borers are a problem, the use of this control measure for this pest will greatly lengthen the life of the peach tree. Further information on control of the peach tree borer is available through your Gray County Extension Service.

VEGETABLE GROWERS MEET

The 12th Annual Conference of the Texas Vegetable Association will be held Nov. 2-4 at the College Station Hilton. More than 200 association members from across the state are expected to attend.

Educational activities will kick off at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 2 with a special pre-conference session covering some of the basic principles for profitable vegetable production in Texas. Topics will include variety selection, selecting and using fertilizers, mulches and irrigation, pest control, preparation for sale and choosing a market. A specially-prepared information packet covering basic vegetable production will be available.

Registration for the remaining portion of the TVA conference will be from 3 to 6:30 p.m. that day, followed by a social at the Hilton Inn.

This year's TVA conference will cover such topics as plastic culture and drip irrigation, nationwide onion marketing, food safety and nutrition, applied vegetable research from the Texas High Plains, and breeding cold hardness into onions.

A panel of industry leaders in production, shipping and marketing of vegetable will discuss trends and expected changes predicted by the year 2001.

During the banquet on Thursday night, the prestigious TVA Award of Merit will be presented to a deserving member of the vegetable industry. Dr. Charles Arntzen, deputy chancellor and dean of agriculture at Texas A&M University, will be the keynote speaker.

Tours for spouses will be conducted to Messina Hof Winery and the Bryan Garden District for shopping and lunch on Thursday. On Friday, a tour of the Heritage Society in Washington County and the Blue Bell Ice Cream plant in Brenham has been scheduled.

For additional information on the conference, contact Tom Longrake, Extension Vegetable Specialist, 225 Horticulture and Forestry Building, Texas A&M University, College Station 77843; telephone (409) 845-7341. Hotel reservations should be made directly to the Hilton, TVA Conference, telephone (409) 693-7500.

Those interested in attending the Louisiana Tech vs. Texas A&M football game at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 5 with the TVA group should contact Ray Prewett at (512) 687-7158 or the A&M Ticket Office, (409) 845-2311.

Good Samaritan requests expected to rise in winter

Good Samaritan Christian Services, Inc., has received over $6,000 this year from the food and shelter funds of United Way of America.

These funds are made available nationwide to be used at the local level by agencies such as the Red Cross, Salvation Army and Good Samaritan, as an aid in their work of supplying food and shelter to those in need, according to Bill Ragsdale, executive director of Good Samaritan.

The amount is about the same as that received last year by the interfaith mission from United Way, he said.

Funds are granted to be used during a specified time period, and unused funds at the end of that time revert to the grantor.

"The last grant period ended Sept. 30, so we have spent all available funds and interest, and have returned our excess ($3.72) to the grantor. We have been notified that a new round of funding is in the works, and although the Good Samaritan is not a member of the local United Way, we are eligible to apply for funds," Ragsdale said.

"This program has been most helpful, and it has made the difference in having or not having food available many times in the last two years. Some food costs are double the costs of five years ago, and our member churches can supply only a portion of the present food needs," he said. Requests for aid at the mission were down 17 percent in September. Past records indicate that requests will increase with colder weather and higher winter utility bills, Ragsdale said.

The mission is currently conducting a blanket drive to collect blankets for those in need.

Food requests were down 20 percent, clothing requests were down 32 percent and utility aid requests were up 7 percent for September, as compared to August figures. The average utility payment was $35.04, up from $33.40 in August.

Of 246 families requesting aid, 234 were helped, or 707 individuals. Twelve families were not assisted due to making requests too soon following previous help, and also because several had requested help too often, Ragsdale said.

Food was distributed to 180 families; clothing, 65; rent, seven; utilities, 31; transportation, 18; lodging, four; medical, 17; and other, 10.

Gray County families numbered 215; newcomers, 28; those outside Gray County but within 25 miles of Pampa, one; and transients, two. One family was referred by a church; friends, 21; other organizations or agencies, 18; and returns, 206. There were six emergency after-hours calls.

Total expenses for September were $2,272.34; August expenses had been $3,165.89. Of the total for September, $338.87 went to administrative costs. Program costs included food, $1,550.92; clothing, $309.84; rent, $25; utilities, $1,086.11; transportation, $87; and medical, $107.24.

Clothing needed by the mission includes children's clothing, jeans and tennis shoes for all age groups, work clothing for men and women, shoes and socks, underwear for all ages, and blankets, quilts and other linens.

The mission's next board of directors meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Nov. 17 at the Good Samaritan, 309 N. Ward. New officers will be chosen at this meeting.

Travel film series to begin

Pampa Rotary Club's "Wonderful World of Travel" film series begins Tuesday, Oct. 25 with Underwater Adventures, the first in a series of five films the club will present this season.

"Dick Massey, an internationally known photojournalist, will narrate this film of beauty and adventure," said Charles Buzzard, travel film chairman. "His outgoing personality and exceptional talent with a movie camera have made him popular with travelogue audiences."

Underwater Adventures will feature two of the richest marine environments on earth — the Red Sea and New Zealand. Although the underwater world is the main focus of the film, it is also an "experience in human geography — a travel adventure film in the finest tradition," Buzzard said.

The film will begin at 7:30 p.m. at M.K. Brown Auditorium. For ticket information, call 665-5510.

Traveling, celebrations fill Pampans' October calendars

Not a word until we think for a moment about the leaves in their glorious shades of yellow, orange, bronze and red; never-more-beautiful mums in matching shades; and more. Come to think of it, events of mid-October seem as varied as the leaves and mums.

A group from Pampa, Amarillo and Borger boarded a motor coach early last Friday morning for a long weekend of fun and sight-seeing in San Antonio. The first event was a Vanishing River cruise at Burnett near Austin, where they saw wild pigs, deer, goats, waterfalls.

San Antonio highlights included a shopping spree at the Mercado Market, dinner at the original Mexican Food Restaurant, dinner at the Tower of the Americas, a stop at a Spanish mission, sing-song at Durty Nelly's, an Irish pub, a river cruise and Sea World. The big bonus was seeing our space shuttle, piggy-backed across country, land at Kelly Field.

Participating Pampans were Freda and Guy LeMond, Lois and Melvin Watkins, Rachel and Parks Brumley, Sharon and Tom Black, Lil Esson, Lucille Foster, Pat Ward, Marie Lander, Lois Thrasher, Berta Johnson, Nina Underwood, Capitola Wilson, Willie Houser and Maureen Curtis.

Lora Barber and a group of friends celebrated Lora's birthday last Thursday at the Plaza Club: Mexican dinner with Marie Howard entertaining. Ole! Belated birthday wishes, Lora!

Patty and Robert Wilson attended the first edition of HOPE to benefit the American Cancer Society. Robert, a former Borger-ite, served as master of ceremonies. Items of interest were a silent auction of donated items, entertainment by the country/Western singer Janie Frickie, followed by a dance. Fancy food was catered early in the evening. Nearly 500 attended.

Vaita and James Trusty returned last week from an extended stay in Lake City, Colo. Their son Phillip of Dallas spent a week with them.

Nelda and Bill Stockstill spent a few days of rest and recreation in Dallas recently.

Joyce and L.G. Clifton attended the Country Music Awards AND the cast party afterwards in Nashville, Tenn. with friends from Abilene.

Gwen Gravitt of Casper, Wyo., recently visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Glass, and her sister and husband, Freda and Guy LeMond.

A "Welcome home!!!" to Melba Marcum, who was recently named administrator of Pampa Nursing Center, a position she held before being transferred to Lubbock.

"Just want you to know, lest there was any misunderstanding, that Dr. Raymond Hampton's long-standing offer of $100 to a person losing 100 pounds was intended for any local hospital nurse with a loss of 100 pounds.

Congratulations to Aletha and Billy Davis of White Deer on their weekly newspaper, Tri-County Sentinel, covering news of rural areas of Carson, Hutchinson and Gray counties.

The Point Is Pets

by Ron Hendrick, D.V.M.

QUESTION: I have a 7 yr. old mixed-breed dog who has developed a drainage below one eye. She also seems to have trouble chewing on that side. Do you think it could be her teeth?

ANSWER: You have described what is commonly called a draining "fistula", which often develops as a result of an abscessed jaw tooth. This infection usually spreads until it breaks out under the eye, but it can also spread into the eye socket, causing damage to the eyeball. This is definitely a serious problem. Frequently, this infection becomes established in the sinus cavity and is very difficult to bring under control. I suggest you get your dog to your veterinarian as soon as possible. He may want to do some blood-work to make sure your dog is not undergoing other medical problems. I'm sure he will administer antibiotics and have you give them to your pet. During this time, he may want to X-Ray your dog's mouth and check for other abscessed teeth. Finally, the infected tooth will probably need to be pulled. In this day of root canals, "caps", tooth implants, and more people wanting to save their dog's teeth, there may be a need to explore these options. Your veterinarian can advise you concerning this. Due to a death in my family, I did not go to the Dental Seminar I had planned to attend, but we are still having our "Dentals" at 25% off the remainder of October, by appointment.

Humidifiers can worsen colds

DENVER (AP) — Drink lots of water to hydrate yourself this winter rather than relying on a humidifier to do the job, says Margie Kessler of the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine.

Kessler says humidifiers that are not properly cleaned can cause bacteria and fungi to spread through the home or office. The result is a more severe winter cold or increased problems with allergies.

Those who wish to use humidifiers should clean them every week with a solution of vinegar and water, advises Kessler. The windows should be opened during this time to clear the air and as protection against strong vapors.

Big Sisters, was a BIG success. Altrusa chairman Louise Bailey reported 72 golfers participated for a full house.

Big winners were Joyce and Gerald Rasco, Alma and Buddy Lamberson with a three-way tie (of 12?) for second place. Charles Tindall won a TV set for hitting closest to the pin. Ron Hurst made the longest drive. Joyce, Alma and Gail Curtis didn't mind at all being the only female golfers.

Did you know Rob Martin has been named director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Pampa? Look for new "matches" son of BB/BS and little brothers and little sisters. A special word to Lee Cornelison for his efforts that made the service possible.

How about a round of applause for the group of 45 elementary and middle school students and adults who last Saturday morning gathered 23,000 pounds of canned food for the local Hi-Plains Food Drive — or 511 pounds per person! What a wonderful experience for the youth volunteers in voluntary community service! Willie Rapstine cooked hot dogs and chili, served with soft drinks by Dan McGrath and crew from the Knights of Columbus.

Development, environment influence kids' diets

Homemakers' News

weight, resulting in a change from the chubby toddler to a more lean preschooler. You should expect this normal body change and not be concerned that your child is undernourished.

Each child will grow at his own individual rate as determined by heredity, state of health and the nutritional adequacy of his diet. You should monitor your child's physical growth and be on the alert for pronounced increase or decrease in your child's weight, which might indicate a trend toward overweight or underweight.

Studies have shown that children and parents tend to eat the same types of foods and have the same types of nutritional strengths and weakness. Further, it has been found that the mother's nutritional knowledge is related to the children's nutritional health.

Young children are highly impressionable and easily pick up food likes, dislikes and snacking habits of parents and older siblings. In fact, perhaps in no other area are family influences stronger than in food preparation.

Parents' actions are guided by their values, although they are not always aware of them. Confusion can arise when actions and words conflict with each other. For example, the parent who frequently buys soft drinks and potato chips as snack foods for adult family members will be on very shaky ground in defending these foods as good snack choices.

Parents may have to revise some of their own eating habits to become better role models for their children. Adopting a single standard of good nutrition for the entire family will help avoid problems in teaching positive eating behavior in children.

Here are some additional hints for building good eating habits:

- Make meals a time for relaxed family interaction. Turn off the TV and radio and try to avoid topics of discussion that will lead to arguments.

- Offer nutritious snacks between meals.

- Desserts are not needed at every meal, but if they are served, offer those high in nutrients such as fruit, pudding or custard.

- Desserts should not be used as a reward for "cleaning our plate."

- Give your child some finger foods as well as some that need to be eaten with a fork or spoon. Children need to learn to feed themselves. Mash, grind, chop or slice foods so that they can be eaten with more ease. As the child develops teeth, serve foods that require chewing.

- Serve new foods as single foods rather than in mixed dishes.
- Give your child some choices in foods to eat.

- Allow for quiet periods before meals.

- Praise your child for good eating behavior.

- Avoid making too many rules for mealtime.

- Strict rules about the amount of food to be eaten do not help your child develop a good feeling about food. Threats, bribes or coaxing your child to eat should not be used.

- Give your children attention when they are behaving well at the table so they do not need to misbehave in order to get attention.

- Give everyone at the table a chance to share thoughts without being interrupted.

- Remember that all children and adults have times when they are not very hungry. A child will not starve from missing one meal.

- If adults demonstrate good eating habits, manners and social skills at the table, children will have an easier time learning those habits as well.

For more information on childhood nutrition, contact your Gray County Extension Office.

Stolen credit cards are like money for crooks

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A stolen credit card is as good as cash to the skilled pickpocket, who often has access to excellent forgers, crooked merchants and the mob.

But the victim is rarely held liable for the bloated bill. The card companies pick up the tab, and they're eager to thwart fraud.

Fraudulent use of lost or stolen credit cards is a multimillion-dollar-a-year criminal enterprise, often a means of financing other illegal activities.

"We're not talking nickel and dime," said Richard Collier, head of security for Master Card, which reported fraud losses of $100 million last year. "It's stealing, just as effectively as a person with a gun."

While no one is really sure how many credit cards are stolen by pickpockets, lost and stolen cards account for 70 percent of all fraudulent activity.

The other 30 percent is attributed to counterfeit and altered cards, misuse of card numbers on mail order items, cards obtained by falsifying applications and new cards stolen before delivery.

Pickpockets generally use the card quickly, practicing the signature and backing it up with other identification found in the wallet.

"Most of the losses occur in the first three days," said Dan Brigham, a spokesman for Visa, which reported losses of $165 million last year because of lost or stolen cards.

A card that is used immediately after it is stolen will not yet be on the "hot list" that merchants are supposed to check before accepting a card.

Thieves also are aware that authorization calls are not required for purchases under $50 or $75, and they can run up a big bill with a lot of $49 charges, especially in department stores.

Bank machines that provide cash advances on credit cards are another quick-money option for pickpockets. Even though the machines require a personal identification number, many people keep the number in their wallets despite warnings to the contrary.

"There are other uses for stolen cards," Brigham noted. "Instead of racing around charging things, they can always sell your account number to a corrupt telemarketer."

"But most of them use them and then drop them in an alley."

No matter how big a bill thieves run up, under federal law, cardholders are responsible for only up to $50 in charges per lost or stolen card. But that liability is at the issuing bank's discretion and is rarely assessed.

Credit card companies have made progress in thwarting counterfeiting and alteration by using sophisticated technologies, such as magnetic strips, holograms and microchips.

Now the bulk of the credit card fraud arises from telemarketing frauds, fraudulent card applications and sales draft laundering, Brigham said.

"It's not really the pickpockets of the world that we are so concerned about," Brigham said.

Smoking linked with alcoholism

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — Researchers are finding that a consistent range of 70 to 80 percent of alcohol abusers also are smokers, reports Internal Medicine News.

If representative of America's general population, the link reported in the studies suggests that up to 20 percent of the smoking population has a drinking problem, compared with only about 5 percent of the non-smoking population, notes the medical journal.

The studies — conducted at the University of Vermont and the Addiction Research Foundation in Toronto — are reinforcing the perception that prolonged tobacco use is an addiction rather than a mere bad habit, says Internal Medicine News, adding that the alcohol-smoking correlation may be useful in screening populations for alcohol abuse.

Snacks equal fourth meal for Americans

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans nibble the equivalent of a fourth meal a day, according to Nutri-System.

It says a survey by MRCA Information Services showed that 80 billion snacks were consumed in 1986. Other findings showed beverages comprise 36 percent of between-meal indulgences, and sweets make up another 30 percent.

"Healthy" snacks account for only 16 percent and are favored by adults over 55. Oddly, singles between 18 and 24 snack the least, while three- or four-member households snack the most.

Checking the charts

By BEAR MILLS

The continuing success of pop singer-turned country star Billy Joe Royal has got some Music City moguls seeking permission to re-edit and re-release his '60s hits to country music radio.

Songs like "Cherry Hill Park" and "Down in the Boondocks" carried a certain nighttime sound. Royal has said the slight echo effect was created by recording the songs in an abandoned school septic tank. So much for state-of-the-art technology.

Royal's more recent hits like "I'll Pin a Note to Your Pillow" and "Out of Sight and On My Mind" have more of a doo-wop quality than his original hits. However, his following is more substantial and his success more clear than it ever was during his "hey days."

Randy Travis is apparently starting to like being a cameo star on stage, screen and little box in the corner of the living room. After making a quick appearance in the movie Young Guns, which starred Emilio Estevez and William Bonney, he is now set to duet with Beverly Sills.

The opera star is doing a pilot for a new TV show. Travis will join her for a rendition of "Hey, Good Lookin'." Since when is Hank Williams Sr. considered operatic?

Occasionally we get calls of the "Whatever happened to...?" nature. One of those had to do with La Costa, a female singer who had a brief bit of success in the late '70s. She can be seen these days on a country video with her sister Tanya Tucker (that's right, they are blood-kin) for "Strong Enough to Bend." The song is a great follow-up to her trio work with Paul Overstreet and Paul Davis.

In other music notes, Ricky Skaggs is a busy boy these days. He is appearing in a public service spot encouraging people to vote absentee if they can't make the general election. Music City News has called the spots "Uncle Pen Wants You."

Skaggs is also producing the new Dolly Parton album. After trying to do pop (again) via duets with Smokey Robinson on her Rainbow album, she is heading back to more traditional roads of travel. Nobody could get her back to basics better than "I'm Just a Country Boy" Skaggs.

If Beverly Sills can do country, surely a country star can do opera—or at least a good musical. Gary Morris is off to London to cut the CD version of the Les Miserables soundtrack.

Morris has also incorporated a co-star from the Broadway production of the opera to travel with him on his country concerts. Kelli James is doing the duet parts of songs that Morris has cut with Lynn Anderson and Crystal Gayle.

The new Willie Nelson autobiography is in the bookstores and quite the topic of conversation. How much the rednecks will enjoy reading Willie discuss his karma, though, is questionable. As proud owner of every Willie album, I can justifiably call myself a big fan. Around my house, we just call him THE LEGEND.

But, The Legend has tarnished himself a little with dissertations on drugs being a good way to free your mind to get to God. And you thought that kind of dribble ended with the hippie movement.

Give him credit for honesty. He never pulls punches or glorifies his drug use. Once you've read this book and the one his daughter wrote, Heart Worn Memories, any thoughts of glorifying stars to sainthood should be pretty well gone.

Sometimes they are just troubled souls who have talent, but not a whole lot of common sense.

Speaking of troubled, Anne Murray is having to get police and lawyers to protect her from a would-be suitor. A 52-year-old Saskatchewan man has made over 250 phone calls to her office in six months. He is in love and wants to marry her. Canadian courts have convicted him of harassment 11 times in the last eight years.

College hasn't stopped her film career

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If a four-year interlude at college hampered Jodie Foster's film career, it isn't noticeable. She has already made three impressive screen appearances this year and has another movie on the way.

The movies are Five Corners, in which she plays a young New Yorker preyed upon by a demented ex-convict; Stealing Home, with Foster as a free spirit who ends her life in suicide; and The Accused, which casts her as a swinging waitress who becomes the victim of a gang rape in the game room of a bar.

Next year will bring Back Track, directed by and starring Dennis Hopper.

All this activity has come since her 1985 graduation from Yale University, where she received a bachelor's degree in literature. She has no regrets about taking four years off for higher education.

Jodie Foster

"I loved every minute of it—I can't imagine where I'd be without it," she said. "I grew up on the West Coast. I'd never spent any time on the East Coast, except for working. That was different. And the kinds of people there were very different. ...

"I feel there is an intellectual strength that I didn't have before. Maybe it's just a confidence, or the ability to say that my perspective on this or that is not enough; you have to go deeper. I think it's helped in my work."

Foster's beleaguered Sarah Tobias in The Accused seems certain to attract Academy attention.

The character is not far removed from the role that catapulted Jodie Foster to fame at 14, as the child prostitute in Taxi Driver. Sarah Tobias is no hooker, but she is a foul-mouthed, hard-living urban survivor whose only friend appears to be a city prosecutor, played by Kelly McGillis.

"I like her," Foster remarked about her role. "I think the audience likes her. There are probably moments when they don't like her, but she's human. She has flaws, she says the wrong thing, she can be too loud, and she repeats herself."

The rape scene depicted toward the end of the movie is certain to arouse controversy. Some may complain that director Jonathan Kaplan's depiction of the rape is overlong and exploitive.

"I don't think it's too much," the actress said. "It's rape. I don't think it's titillating or exploitive. (The scene) pretty much explains things in a lot of ways. I don't think it would be fair to have this film talk about (the rape) the way it does, and not see it."

Born in Los Angeles in 1962, Jodie Foster started performing at age 3 in suntan commercials. She began acting a year later in Mayberry, R.F.D. Taxi Driver established her fame and attracted the unwanted attention of John Hinckley Jr., who tried to assassinate President Reagan in 1981 to impress the young actress.

Foster no longer wants to talk about Hinckley. She said she wants to put the tragedy and terror behind her and concentrate on work.

Yoko Ono talks about her life with John

Yoko Ono, 55, grew up in Tokyo, where she lived through the bombing of that city during World War II. She moved to the United States at the age of 18 to study music at Sarah Lawrence College.

Working as an avant-garde musician and filmmaker, she met Beatle John Lennon in 1968 at a gallery exhibit of her artwork. They soon began a professional and personal collaboration that led to record albums, Vietnam War protests and a son, Sean.

Their life together was shattered on Dec. 8, 1980, when Mark David Chapman gunned down Lennon outside his apartment building in New York.

Eight years later, Ono decided to put together a documentary on her husband's life. Calling on the services of producer David Wolper, she turned over thousands of hours of private film and tape she and Lennon made of their lives.

The documentary, "Imagine: John Lennon," is narrated by Lennon himself and contains many never-seen-before glimpses of the musician's life.

Here, Ono talks about life with John, their arrest for marijuana possession and her current life.

'I am not the one who broke up the Beatles. It was simply that four boys were growing up.'

— Yoko Ono

pens to every successful group. It was simply that four boys were growing up.

Q: Why do you think the media blamed you?

A: I was the ideal scapegoat because I'm a woman and an Oriental. It was a good combination.

Q: What is your favorite John Lennon song?

A: "Strawberry Fields." It was the only Beatles song I'd heard before I met John. I didn't know it was a Beatles song.

Q: "Imagine" is filled with so many of your home movies. Why did you film so much of your private life?

A: Maybe I'm responsible for that because I'm an avant-garde artist, and there's this avant-garde tradition of not creating a barrier between your private and public life. I was always filming and painting myself. Wherever I went, I was filming or taping. That's just part of my artistic activity.

Q: "Imagine" shows that John Lennon was protesting the Vietnam War in 1965 — long before most Americans turned against the conflict. Why do you think he became involved so early?

A: Foreigners first realized the injustice of the war. It was easier for foreigners because Americans were right in the middle of it. John wanted to speak out against the war even earlier, but his manager advised him not to confront the issue.

Q: Do you know how John came to make his notorious statement that the Beatles were more popular than Jesus?

A: I think it was just an offhand remark he made with black humor to a very close friend of his who also happened to be a reporter. That's the danger zone you get into. When you're being interviewed by somebody you don't know, you're rather careful. But if you know the interviewer well, maybe after five interviews you relax and start saying things that are just private remarks without bad intentions.

Q: How did you and John come to be arrested for marijuana possession in London in 1968?

A: A policeman who was later arrested for setting somebody else up went into another room (in our apartment) and came out with marijuana. We had been warned that this might happen so we had the apartment totally cleaned. We paid a fine. We still stand convicted of marijuana possession.

Q: Why did John become a "househusband" for two years in the late '70s and stay home and take care of your son while you managed his business affairs?

A: First John was a very macho person. Then he woke up to the fact that women were subjected to incredible oppression and injustice. John felt very guilty as a man, and he wanted to see what it was like to be a houseperson.

Frank Sanello

Q: How many times have you been asked what broke up the Beatles?

A: Thousands and thousands of times.

Q: For the record, would you mind answering once more?

A: The temptation is to say something different, but I should tell you the same thing, the truth. I am not the one who broke up the Beatles. It was just a natural outcome of what hap-

Former policeman explains fact, fantasy of latest novel

By HELEN MILES
Associated Press Writer

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Author Robert Daley knows that the quick grip of fear and split-second decisions that can make or break a cop's career are not just the stuff of police fiction.

A former Deputy Commissioner of the New York City police, Daley has grabbed the attention of readers on subjects ranging from treasure diving in Florida to bullfighting in Spain, but is best known for his insider's tales of street crime and police bureaucracy.

During an interview at the converted cottage on his Ridgefield estate where he does his writing, the best-selling author of Year of a Dragon, Hands of a Stranger and Prince of the City, explained how fact and fantasy merge in his latest novel, Man With a Gun.

"Most of the incidents happened to me one way or the other, but they didn't happen just that way," said Daley. "All of them have been extracted from the way they actually happened and moved together to make a story."

The story of Man With a Gun is loosely based on events surrounding the Harlem Mosque murder of 1972, when a police officer was killed during a confrontation between black Muslims and authorities. The book deals with the power and politics behind the police handling of a situation where every decision has long-term consequences.

"In moments of terror you do what it seems like you have to do and no one is responsible for that," Daley said. Of his own involvement in the Mosque Riots, he said, "I made some mistakes which didn't seem like mistakes at the time."

Daley and the central character in Man With a Gun, Phillip Keefe, are alike in many ways. Keefe is a deputy police commissioner and, like Daley, resigns after the incident. Keefe is a former journalist. Daley worked for five years as a foreign correspondent for The New York Times. Keefe drives a Porsche, so does Daley.

But "Keefe is not me," said Daley. "I have no ghosts to exorcise."

For one thing, Keefe is not a successful author. Daley has 20 books to his credit, five novels made into films.

In his novels, the 57-year-old Daley aims to provide more than a mirror image of life. Literature should provide "new insights into your own life, into everybody's life, a new understanding of what we are all up against," he said.

Novels about the police, however, tend to be grouped together as thrillers, said Daley, who considers thrillers to be books with "preposterous characters doing preposterous acts all the time."

"Thriller means discardable, thriller means light entertainment, thriller means not important," he said. "The word (thriller) denigrates what I am trying to do. I think I am writing something else and keep getting accused of writing thrillers."

As an undergraduate studying literature at Fordham University, Daley said he wanted "to be the greatest writer that ever lived." He has since lowered his goal to writing books that will stand the test of time.

Translations of Daley's books cram his closets—"I can't throw them away because they are books and books are icons"—and samples of his photographic work decorate his walls.

Daley bought a camera when The New York Times offered to pay him $15 extra for every photograph used in the newspaper. His photographs have since been exhibited at the Baltimore Museum, the Art Institute in Chicago and the New York Gallery of Modern Art.

Yet, Daley prefers writing. "To me literature is the greatest of the arts because it takes you further outside yourself than any other," he said, adding that there is also a practical side to his work.

What's new in books ...

TRUST ME ON THIS. By Donald E. Westlake. Mysterious Press. 293 Pages. $16.95.

"Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright. The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light, and somewhere men are laughing and little children shout. But there is no joy in the Oak Bluffs command center on Monday morning; the Weekly Galaxy has struck out."

One sure thing about Donald E. Westlake, the reader can always trust him to come up with good, clever lines that provoke plenty of laughs. He's done so in his many previous crime caper novels, and now he reaches the height of lunacy in Trust Me on This.

While the novel does contain murder and assorted criminal hanky-panky, Westlake is more interested this time out in describing the workings of a sensational tabloid newspaper called the Weekly Galaxy.

Actually, calling the Galaxy, whose motto is "The People, Yes!", a newspaper is going a bit far. It's not interested in real news but in "news" it thinks will get those people standing in the supermarket checkout lines to buy it. Thus, its very highly paid staff, ruled by a benevolent dictator called "Massa," dedicates its efforts to stories such as "Does Sex Cure Gallstones?" and "The Argentine Navy Caused the Bermuda Triangle."

Cruise ship passengers stop to buy garnets from 7-year-old Jake Jabusch.

Kids sell bits of 'mountain of garnets'

Editor's Note — They may be the luckiest kids in Alaska, or all of the United States for that matter. They have a mountain of garnet they can mine as they wish, but it's often the parents stuck with the dirty work. The children are mostly the peddlers and, like in the modeling profession, theirs is a trade where youth is all-important.

By SUE CROSS
Associated Press Writer

WRANGELL, Alaska (AP) — A mayor's gift of a mountainside of garnets to the children of this remote island town has turned two generations of its youngsters into industrious gem dealers.

Paper routes and lawn mowing provide small change compared to the $1,000 or so a Wrangell child can earn each summer by hawking garnets to cruise ship passengers and other tourists.

Crowds of children meet almost every ship at the Wrangell waterfront, carrying their gems in everything from muffin tins to Tupperware.

more for a golf ball-size garnet embedded in a chunk of the silvery schist from which it was chiseled.

'I don't know what's more work, the kids' homework or selling garnets.'

The property was deeded to the Boy Scouts of America in 1962 by the late Fred Hanford, a former mayor of Wrangell, a town of about 2,100 in southeastern Alaska.

Under the terms of the gift, only Boy Scouts and the children of Wrangell have rights to mine and sell the garnets.

In reality, garnet collecting is a back-kinking, knee-scrapping, thumb-smashing chore that falls to the gem sellers' parents.

"I don't know what's more work, the kids' homework or selling garnets," says Kay Jabusch, one of the self-described "garnet moms" who accompany their children to the docks.

About every six weeks, Mrs. Jabusch and her husband, Jeff, pilot their river skiff through the shifting channels of the Stikine to reach the garnet ledge and replenish their sons' supplies.

They lug pails, chisels and hammers up the quarter-mile trail that climbs to the garnet ledge.

A few stones can be screened from loose soil and rock next to a nearby stream. But most must be chiseled out of huge faces of rock.

Power tools and blasting are forbidden.

Adults who want to go to the ledge are asked to buy a $10 permit at the Wrangell Museum and turn over a portion of their take to the Boy Scouts. The Scouts also ask people to sign a liability-release form.

'They want new bikes. They've always had secondhand, put-together bikes.'

Old Wrangell newspapers say the ledge was mined from 1907 to 1923 by the Alaska Garnet Mining and Manufacturing Co. of Minneapolis, Minn., a company run by two sisters.

A geological study done in the 1940s says Wrangell garnets are superb for industrial uses such as sandpaper, but that few become jewels. The garnets have quartz inclusions that cause them to fracture when cut.

Most buyers want them as curiosity pieces, though some say they will try to set the stones.

Watching her sons work the state ferry dock, Rynda Hayes explains why it's worthwhile for Raymond, 7, and Ryan, 9.

The Jabusch boys bought their own tickets to Hawaii for this year's family vacation.

Garnet moms also say their children don't ask for allowances and get better grades in math class after a summer of making change.

The boys talk business over cups of hot cocoa at a dockside restaurant. One proposes lowering prices to boost everyone's sales, launching an earnest debate over whether the discount should be 50 cents or a quarter.

Earnings are secret. The only boy who will say what he makes is the undisputed sales champ: 7-year-old Jake Jabusch.

In less than an hour on the dock, Jake collected $33.20. He quickly added it up and figured his three-day take — $98.

Community foundations providing funds for serious projects

Editor's Note — Community foundations, for a long time the quiet arms of philanthropy, are coming of age and providing funds for more serious projects than ever before. The Hartford Foundation is a prime example of the change in size and activity.

By DEAN GOLEMBESKI
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — When the Ford Foundation decided to lend a helping hand to AIDS patients and their families, it found that even with its billions of dollars, it couldn't handle the project alone.

It sought the help of much smaller community foundations, non-profit organizations that are emerging as key players in philanthropic work in this country.

"In the last five years, community foundations have come of age and are being recognized for their potential and what they're doing," said R. Malcolm Salter, director of the Hartford Foundation for Public Giving.

Since the first community foundation was founded by bankers in Cleveland in 1914, many of the organizations have been content to fund such activities as planting flowers or supporting the local symphony.

But, increasingly, community foundations are being called on to tackle more serious issues, such as AIDS, a trend their leaders attribute in part to the Reagan administration's eight years promoting volunteerism and reducing federal spending on social services.

The result is that community foundations now make up the smallest, but fastest growing faction of the Council on Foundations, a Washington, D.C.-based group that represents most of the nation's foundations.

There are now about 325 community foundations, and another 20 have been proposed and are in various stages of organization, according to council officials.

The combined assets of those groups are estimated at about $4 billion, and they made grants totaling about $300 million last year.

Ford, meanwhile, has assets of about $5.5 billion, and made grants totaling $204 million in 1987, said Joanne B. Scanlan, who directs the council's effort to bolster community foundations.

"For a long time, community foundations have been kind of a quiet type of philanthropy," Scanlan said. "Over time, partly because assets have built up and partly because community foundations have started working together and promoting themselves, a lot more private foundations have started working with them."

The Hartford Foundation is recognized as a leader among community foundations in both its size and activity. Its assets of roughly $125 million make it the sixth largest in the nation, while it does out about $6 million annually to various Hartford-area projects.

The wealthiest of the community foundations in the country is in New York, followed by foundations in Cleveland, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Hartford.

New York's community foundation has assets of about $500 million, while Cleveland's has about $450 million in assets, Scanlan said.

Every foundation is organized under federal tax guidelines as a non-profit organization.

Unlike the United Way, which must solicit funds each year to give money to specific groups, community foundations have endowments from which they draw earnings to fund their grant programs.

The foundations rely on donations from individuals and corporations to continue expanding their endowments.

A donor can have a long-term impact, since it is the interest on a gift and not the donation itself that is spent from year to year, said Tom Smith, the Council on Foundation's public affairs director.

"It's more than a one-time gift, because what a community foundation does is it pools those funds, and your money can go farther," Smith said.

Connecticut has 19 community foundations, most of them very small in comparison to Hartford's, which is the state's largest. Waterbury established the state's first community foundation in 1923, followed by Hartford in 1925.

The Hartford Foundation's recent experience exemplifies what is happening to community foundations around the country, particularly in terms of demand.

Applications to the foundation were up 28 percent this year compared to last, and the amount of money requested was up 70 percent. In the past eight years, the foundation has given out $34 million compared to just $25 million in its first four decades.

Texas coastal areas battle beach erosion

By TAMARA S. WALL
Bay City Daily Tribune

SARGENT (AP) — A paved road that once served as the path to beach homes now drops into the Gulf where waves ferociously pound against the rapidly eroding land of Sargent Beach.

"The rate of erosion at Sargent Beach is probably the worst in the state of Texas and it's going real fast," said Ed White of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' Galveston district. "It's eroding at about 60 to 100 feet per year. The saddest part is the people being displaced," he said.

The Texas coast is eroding at an average rate of about 10 feet per year but Sargent will probably lose more than 100 feet of beach this year, according to Matagorda County Marine Extension Agent Willie Younger.

Erosion has stolen more than one-half mile of the Matagorda County beach since 1852.

Sargent resident D.W. Benthall said he has watched the erosion slowly eat away at beachfront homes.

"You should have been here to see the houses go row by row," Benthall said, naming former residents and pointing into the Gulf where beach homes once sat.

One Sargent Beach owner, Pat Ratliff, said Hurricane Gilbert's stirring in the Gulf washed away 27 feet of land in front of her property.

"We know what the problem is.

Employees' home sales unprofitable

ROCHESTER, Wis. (AP) — Companies that buy their transferred employees' homes at market value rarely sell them at a profit, according to an industry survey.

There are several reasons, says Kenneth Groh, executive editor of Ranzheimer Reports on Relocation.

"In strong real estate markets, employees tend to sell their own homes," he reports. "Corporations, therefore, generally are selling distressed, problem properties. Also, companies are increasingly willing to accept a loss to make a quick sale and minimize their carrying costs such as mortgage, insurance, taxes, etc."

Of the companies surveyed, an average of 58.7 percent of the homes sold at a loss in 1987 while 16 percent were profitable. The rest sold at the purchase price.

Erosion is the problem," Ratliff said. White said the corps of engineers has not studied Sargent's complex problem.

"What we're primarily concerned with is what we need to do to keep the intracoastal waterway open and problems with navigation," White said.

McCabe's Cut, which connects the Gulf to the intracoastal canal, is known to have dangerous currents causing navigation problems. The waterway extends from Brownsville to Florida and is used by many companies to transport everything from gravel to petrochemicals.

"The waterways are like highways, only you use barges and it's not as expensive," Younger said.

The problems of erosion could have a devastating impact on the state's economy.

"The Texas portion of travel (represents) 70 percent of the total tonnage (barged)," White said.

He said 20 percent of the state's gross national product is generated by the waterway and 145,000 Texas jobs are directly or indirectly affected by it.

Sargent's erosion has had an impact on Matagorda County over the years.

"That land's gone," Ratliff said. "That's tax money just shot to the dickens because nobody's going to pay for the ocean."

Matagorda County Chief Appraiser Vince Maloney said he has not calculated how much money the county has lost in taxes over the years because beachfront property tax values have been slowly dwindling over the years.

"The decline is kind of gradual," Maloney said. "If erosion ate a whole acre away, you would only lose 50 cents in taxes," he said.

Although value of the eroding property is quickly dropping, some Sargent Beach property owners said they will not bail out.

"I'll enjoy it while I've got it," Ratliff said. "If I have to take a boat to get there then I'll buy a boat."

"This is going to affect everybody," Benthall said. "Whenever the tax structure is depreciating in one place, someone's got to make up the difference."

"Something has to be done," said Precinct 2 County Commissioner George Deshotels. "We've got great help in Matagorda County; the problem is getting people outside of this county to notice us."

"The beach erosion is costing the county money right now and it endangers the intracoastal waterway," Deshotels said.

Allison Biggs, press secretary for Rep. Mac Sweeney, R-Wharton, said the National U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is donating $95,000 specifically to study the the devastating Sargent Beach erosion and its effects in the intracoastal canal.

"Works on the study will begin as soon as the corps has officials available (which) should begin within the next month," Biggs said.

Younger is presently accepting pledges for the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway Economic Impact Assessment Project. Younger said the study will explain more about the economic impact of erosion while documenting the economic benefits of the intracoastal waterway.

A MESA MESSAGE

Mesa's Team - 16,000 Strong and Growing

Perhaps you read last week that Mesa has entered into an agreement to purchase Tenneco's Mid-Continent oil and gas subsidiary. Perhaps you even said to yourself, "So what?" or "What does that mean to me?"

It means a great deal to everyone living in the Texas Panhandle. This acquisition will have a direct impact on your daily lives. Mesa operates as a publicly-traded limited partnership. Our shares trade every day on the New York Stock Exchange (MLP and MLPprA), which means that individuals, our owners, share in the Partnership's profits.

There are 6,000 Panhandle residents involved in Mesa's partnership. In other words, there are 6,000 Mesa limited partners in our area, or, to use a more familiar term, shareholders.

Mesa Limited Partnership was formed in 1985 and, by doubling our reserves in less than three years, has grown to become the largest independent operator of long-lived, shallow natural gas reserves in the United States.

Because of this outstanding performance, Mesa has returned $107 million to its Panhandle shareholders since 1985. That's an average of more than $18,000 per individual Mesa Panhandle shareholder.

This means more spendable income, which means more jobs for our area. And more jobs mean a larger tax base, resulting in lower tax rates for all of us. So Mesa's local distributions have touched every man, woman and child in the Panhandle. Furthermore, this $107 million is multiplied as it circulates through the local economy. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce shows there is a multiplier effect that boosts the $107 million infusion to a $428 million impact. Now, that is real help to the Panhandle economy.

Mesa is more than a company with 574 employees. It includes 6,000 Panhandle residents who have received $107 million in the last three years. Including our shareholders and their families, that's more than 16,000 area residents who are directly affected by the hard-working people at Mesa.

When we say "Mesa In Partnership With The Panhandle," we mean it.

HERBICIDE RESEARCH REPORT

Selecting the proper herbicide for the weed problem in a fallow field, and applying the herbicide properly, are the secrets of success in conservation tillage systems, according to Dr. Allen Wiese, weed scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Bushland.

These conclusions, based on 10 years of research, were presented at the West Texas Agricultural Chemicals Conference in Lubbock on Oct. 5.

Sprayer calibration, available herbicides, spray gallonage, spray additives and mixtures, weed size, and combining herbicides with tillage all affect success of conservation tillage practices.

The best system of calibrating sprayers is determining the number of seconds it takes a sprayer to travel 100 feet. Then measure the spray in ounces from the nozzles used to cover 40 inches for the number of second it took to travel 100 feet. The number of ounces is equivalent to the number of gallons per acre.

Wiese discussed the role of residual and non-residual herbicides for controlling weeds in fallow fields. He said residual herbicides were usually more economical than non-residual because residual herbicides persist in soil and kill several flushes of weeds.

Atrazine, Cotoran, Dual, Lasso, Caparol and Karmex will be available in 1989. However, the old standby herbicides — propazine, Igran and Sandcap — that have been used on the High Plains will not be reregistered. Only existing supplies will be available in 1989.

Glean and Ally will no longer be labeled for use on fallow fields because weeds that are resistant to the herbicides have developed. This will set conservation tillage back many years, according to the scientist.

"On the other hand, more non-residual herbicides will be available soon," Wiese said. He expects Ignite and Touchdown to be on the market in the next two years. Ignite is a contact herbicide that kills most weeds and translocates more than paraquat but not as much as Roundup.

"We determined that one to seven gallons per acre is the best amount of spray carrier for applying Roundup, Landmaster and Cyclone," Wiese said.

Fan tips or controlled droplet applicators gave better control than flood tips for post-emergence sprays. Several years of experience with spray additives has proven that ammonium sulfate is the best spray additive and is essential for controlling stressed weeds and crop volunteer with Roundup and Landmaster.

Other research has shown that atrazine or propazine can be tank mixed with Cyclone and Landmaster, but not Roundup.

"I never like to see a weed taller than two inches in a fallow field that is being no-tilled," Wiese said.

Big weeds take more herbicide, consequently, and are expensive to kill. He gave an example in which one pint per acre of Cyclone gave 99 percent control of pigweed that were either 0.5 or 1.5 inch tall, but gave only 23 percent control of 6-inch pigweed that were stressed for lack of water.

Sweep plows are still an important part of conservation tillage systems. They are cheaper to use than herbicides if weeds get large or stressed, if effective herbicides do not fit in a particular cropping sequence, or if there are no crop residues on the soil surface to control erosion.

Wiese said that herbicides are essential for no-tillage and play a big part in most conservation tillage systems.

"In the future, as more herbicides become available, they will play an interesting role in conservation tillage," he concluded.

CULL OPEN, LATE-CALVING COWS

Farmers and ranchers who haven't already culled open, late-calving and poor performing cows should do so soon.

There's no need to put expensive winter feed into cows that are unproductive and inefficient. Culling the cow herd now will also help you more effectively plan on feed supplies for the winter months.

The culling process should also "weed out" unsound cows with bad eyes, udders or feet and legs.

Also, pregnancy testing cows this fall may be a more profitable management tool than ever before.

Since it's difficult for a cow to produce a calf large enough to pay her annual maintenance bill and leave some profit for the producer, an open cow is surely losing money.

In addition, cows calving late and during the summer months wean calves 30 to 90 pounds lighter than their herd mates which calve at earlier times. For this reason, it's advisable to cull cows which will calve late next year and purchase pregnant replacements which calve early.

Whoever does the pregnancy diagnosis (usually your veterinarian) will be able to estimate the calving date on each animal and make it easy to identify next year's late-calving cows.

Work toward a 60-day calving session or one that's certainly no longer than 90 days.

Removing barren and late-calving cows from the herd will increase both the herd's reproductive potential and pounds of calf weaned.

Red grapefruits bounce back to market

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

McAlLEN (AP) — Grapefruit gourmards, relax.

"Ruby Red" hasn't disappeared from the market. It just has a new name: "Texas Ruby-Sweet."

So has the much-heralded, redder "Rio Red" variety, which first hit the market last year. It is now promoted along with its older crimson cousin, the "Star Ruby," under the new name of "Rio Star."

The name changes are part of an aggressive new campaign from the Texas citrus industry, bouncing back five years after a rare, hard freeze that wiped out groves and scared many growers out of the grapefruit and orange business.

The new crop is just beginning to hit the market, but the quality tends to improve after cooler weather raises the sugar content of the fruit, industry officials said.

This year, industry officials said, they finally have enough fruit again to make respectable shipments to other parts of the United States, Japan and Europe. The Texas strategy rests on promoters' belief that grapefruit varieties from the Rio Grande Valley represent the upscale, state of the art of the citrus world.

"We are very interested in presenting Texas citrus as a very premium grapefruit, getting it out of the generic category of grapefruit," said Mary Bentley McKeever, marketing manager for TexaSweets Citrus Advertising Inc., the McAllen-based promotional arm of the Texas citrus industry.

"By establishing the new categories that we have for our red grapefruit that's produced exclusively in Texas, we really feel like we can have some distinction for Texas," McKeever said.

Texas' citrus industry is concentrated in the state's three southernmost counties in the Rio Grande Valley.

Rio Star will represent the two redder varieties grown there, while Ruby-Sweet will refer to the lighter Ruby Red, Henderson Ruby and Ray Ruby.

The Texas industry is trying to make up ground lost to its Florida competition since the 1983 freeze, particularly in the Midwest. Florida produces more than 10 times more grapefruit than Texas and 100 times the Texas orange crop.

But Texas contributed 20 percent of the nation's total fresh grapefruit shipments last year because of the state's emphasis on fresh fruit, said Leslie Whitlock, manager of the McAllen-based Texas Valley Citrus Committee.

TexaSweets began the comeback last year with promotions in the Midwest, particularly Cincinnati, where it shipped nearly all of the limited quantity of the new Rio Red variety.

Some Texans, in fact, were annoyed that they could not buy the new, improved fruit with red meat, developed in Weslaco by Dr. Richard Hensz of Texas A&I University. Kroger Co. had shipped it all to Ohio.

Whitlock said the young Rio Red trees will produce more this year, but still have not matured enough to make the fruit easy to find in local stores.

Also contributing to the local shortage are overseas sales of the largest, most expensive grapefruit.

"We're selling the large-size fruit in Japan," said Ken Martin, president and general manager of Warehouse Farms Inc. in Mission, the Valley's largest citrus packing company. In Japanese gift stores, Martin said, people have been known to pay as much as $25 for one grapefruit.

"In the market itself it would not be that high" in Japan, Martin said. "It might be as much as $2, $2.50 per grapefruit, I'm sure."

Shipping costs and tariffs make the fruit expensive in Japan.

"Japan loves a sweet, red grapefruit, and Texas has it," Martin said.

Producers said they have enough of a crop this year to promote the fruit in Europe, and TexaSweets representatives have started hitting the top grapefruit markets around the United States.

"We're trying to reach people who really like to eat grapefruit," McKeever said, adding that there is a touch of snob appeal: "Do you want to say the connoisseurs?"

A survey by the Florida Department of Citrus earlier this year found that consumers believe white grapefruit is the most tart and pink is sweeter, but not as sweet as red, according to an article in the Oct. 8 edition of The Packer, a national weekly publication of the fruit and vegetable industry.

The Packer reported the survey's finding that "red is considered sweetest, although it doesn't appear to be widely available. The researchers found a low awareness of Texas grapefruit relative to Florida and California. There is some awareness of red grapefruit, but only among heavy users."

The Texas industry's new campaign features a poster with a stop light and a red grapefruit half where the red light should be. "Stop and REDiscover the sweeter, juicier grapefruit from Texas," the poster promoting Ruby-Sweet reads.

It has taken Texas citrus growers a few years to recover from the trauma of the 1983 freeze, which struck a $110 million industry and reduced it to almost nothing the next year.

Of a total of 69,200 acres in production before the freeze, only 21,800 acres survived.

By the early spring of 1987, when the last official tree count was conducted, there were 30,400 acres, including some still too young to produce fruit. It takes four to eight years for the trees to start producing.

"This will be the first year of significant production of young trees that were planted since the freeze," Whitlock said.

Local couple among finalists for outstanding farmer spot

WACO — Three young couples from West Texas have been selected as finalists in the 1988 Texas Farm Bureau Outstanding Young Farmer and Rancher Award competition.

The finalists, selected from nine district winners, include Charles W. Bowers and his wife Janyth of Pampa (Gray County); Carl F. Guelker and his wife Sue of Colorado City (Mitchell County); and John Synatschik and his wife Carla of Olton (Lamb County).

The finalists and their spouses will attend the 1988 TFB Convention at Corpus Christi on Dec. 4-7, where the state winner will be announced.

The winner will receive a year's free use of a 1989 Ford half-ton pickup, compliments of Bird-Kultgen Ford Co. of Waco.

All three finalists also will attend the April 1989 Legislative Development Seminar in Washington, D.C., joining approximately ten other YF&R couples.

The winner and his wife will attend the American Farm Bureau Federation annual meeting Jan. 8-12 at San Antonio.

Bowers, 33, is president and half-owner of a farming operation near Pampa which includes wheat, milo and corn. The corporation presently works some 5,700 acres of combination farmland, grassland and custom farming. He owns 960 acres.

Bowers serves on the Gray County Farm Bureau Board of Directors. He has been farming 16 years.

Guelker, 34, raises cotton, wheat, oats and grain sorghum on 1,106 acres near Colorado City. He is an independent operator and has been farming for 12 years. He also has a cow-calf operation.

He serves on the Mitchell County Farm Bureau Board of Directors, most recently as secretary-treasurer.

Synatschik, 32, raises irrigated cotton, corn and wheat, and also dryland wheat on a combined land of 1,295 acres near Olton. He is an independent operator who has a cow-calf operation.

He serves as secretary-treasurer for the Lamb County Farm Bureau Board of Directors.

Stocker cattle meeting today

PANHANDLE - A meeting to discuss stocker cattle management is scheduled for today starting at 8 p.m. in the War Memorial Building in Panhandle.

Speakers for the program will be Extension beef cattle specialist Dr. John McNeill; Carson County veterinarian Dr. Joe Hillhouse; and Panhandle First National Bank representative Gerald Berry.

Dr. McNeill will discuss general management of stocker cattle operations and the changes seen from year to year. Dr. Hillhouse will discuss health programs in general and talk specifically on situations peculiar to Carson County that need evaluation and possibly change.

Berry will provide information on financing stocker cattle enterprises and offer suggestions on management of marketing alternatives such as futures, options, hedging and contracting. Time will be allowed for individual questions from the floor.

This program should be of interest to all cattle producers and agri-businesses and perhaps to the general public. The meeting, which should last from 1 1/2 to 2 hours, is open to the public.

Ducks damage fish farms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fish farmers don't believe their crops are for the birds, but try telling that to a hungry duck, blackbird or heron.

"Birds are a costly problem where fish are cultured," says researcher Vickie D. Martin in a new Agriculture Department report. "Waterfowl frequently blamed for heavy losses of fish at aquacultural facilities include diving ducks, herons, egrets, terns, gulls, kingfishers, blackbirds, ospreys and anhingas."

These birds were described as "voracious fish eaters" that not only cause property loss and damage but can transmit diseases to fish stock.

Moreover, when fish farmers attempt to guard against the airborne marauders, they can be frustrated because a majority of the birds are legally categorized as migratory and are protected under federal and state laws.

Fish ponds can be protected somewhat by barriers such as perimeter fencing, netting, overhead wires and other devices, including fireworks, exploders and similar items used to frighten birds.

American home computers about to enter into their teens

By LARRY BLASKO
Associated Press Writer

Hang on to your seatbelts, home computing is about to enter its teens.

And if the rush of oncoming technology is anything like the rush of hormones, home computing is going to see changes at least as dramatic as puberty and maybe as painful.

Figure the beginnings of personal computing from 1975, with the introduction of the Altair 8800 to 1977 with Apple and Radio Shack.

Since the introduction of the IBM PC in 1981, the notion of a personal computer has become commonplace and the very idea of having one no longer draws much attention. Now the focus is what the machines will do.

For all the talk from hobbyists who have figured out ways to computerize everything from sundials to switches, personal computers for most of us do four things: They process words, they count money, they play games, they file things.

Word processing, financial spreadsheets, games and data bases all existed before personal computers. They were called typewriters, calculators and pencils, board games and filing cabinets.

Putting a computer to work on those tasks enhanced them in some ways and made them easier to perform, but didn't basically change them. A hand-calculated spreadsheet is exactly like a computer-calculated spreadsheet, the difference being drudgery.

The next few years of personal computing may see something different springing from three major and interrelated developments. The tremendous growth of processing power, data storage and handling techniques and "interconnectivity" may contribute to fundamental changes in many areas of ordinary life.

Take processing power, the raw ability of a computer to handle information. It has two ordinary measurements, the speed at which the computer performs instructions and the number of bits (binary digits) the machine is able to handle at once.

The last 10 years or so have seen a change from machines that could process around 800,000 instructions per second and handle 8 bits at a time to machines that rip through 20 million instructions per second and handle 32 bits at a time.

A machine with that power can handle multi-tasking (doing more than one job at the same time) and can be equipped with very sophisticated software.

It isn't stretching things to say that the individual can have more raw computing power sitting on a desktop than was available in entire rooms of computer gear not many years ago.

A computer on that level is perfectly capable of running a small home business in the basement, a terminal for word processing and doing a search in a data base — all at once.

Even with the power of a single chip, more power and production may be had by grouping the chips and having each of them work on a different part of a given task at the same time. That's called parallel processing and it's a computer version of "many hands make light work."

Since it's unreasonable to expect that the growth of computing power is going to stop, it isn't outlandish to begin to wonder whether our homes will replace individual computers for family members with a central computer just as central heating replaced the individual room fireplaces of an earlier time.

That processing power increase is matched by new developments in the technology of storing and retrieving information.

CD-ROMS (compact disk-read only memory) use lasers to encode and read millions of characters of information in tiny pits on the surface of a disk easily able to fit into a coat pocket.

First popularized as digital recording of music that wouldn't deteriorate with multiple plays, CD-ROM technology can bring in-the-home access to billions of characters of information. A single disk can hold more than 500 million characters and reference-work disks are already being published, including Grolier's Encyclopedia.

A system that would allow you to store that many characters of information and change any of it at will (read-write) has yet to hit the marketplace, although at least one manufacturer, Tandy, has announced plans.

But even at the read-only level, the ability to pack so much information in such a small space holds spectacular promise.

Teaching and entertainment programs that package realistic video, sound and computer-aided interaction are possible on a level formerly reserved for science fiction when the information that would require a hand-truck load of bound books may fit comfortably in pocket or purse.

With the ability to store information escalating, the ability to search it must keep pace and the developments in hypertext software may do that.

As an idea, hypertext dates back to World War II and the term itself was coined more than 20 years ago. But this is data base software with a difference: it allows you to search for things in the same way scientists think you think, by association.

Most data bases are sequential and organized according to some artificial and fixed hierarchy, perhaps the alphabet or a number system.

A hypertext data base is different. Topics are linked by association so that an examination of the topic "apple" could flow into an examination of either "tree" or "fruit" or "computer" or "orchards" or "cider," depending upon what you wanted to know and what questions that prompted.

A hypertext system, Hypercard, is already included with Mac Plus, II and SE computers from Apple and other software is available for MS-DOS machines.

Finally, there is the beginning of something dubbed "interconnectivity," defined as the ability to get different machines from different mediums to work together and exchange information.

When you receive a facsimile transmission via the telephone network on the facsimile board of your personal computer and use OCR (optical character recognition) software and/or a scanner to convert it into a digital form and then print the result out on either a printer or a plotter while storing the information on a magnetic disk, that's interconnectivity.

Interconnectivity is also cellular telephones, and MIDI (musical instrument digital interface) and the smart photocopy machines called laser printers being used for desktop publishing.

Interconnectivity is also the beginning of order from the often-chaotic marketplace, with the emergence of "standards" that cut across more than one manufacturer's product line.

Although still in its infancy, interconnectivity should bring to gadgetry what the interstate highway network brought to personal travel — ease, speed and convenience in moving people, things and ideas across borders.

Researchers sue Zapruder's son over JFK movie

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two researchers of the John F. Kennedy assassination are urging a federal court to stop the son of the late Abraham Zapruder from selling the right to show his father's famous film footage of the slaying.

A suit filed last week in U.S. District Court argues that Henry G. Zapruder, a Washington tax lawyer, should not have a copyright claim to the 8mm film that captured for history the shooting of Kennedy 25 years ago next month in Dallas' Dealey Plaza.

"It's a historical event and it's far too important to American history to allow its use to be dictated by a copyright owner who has shown no sensitivity for its importance and for the uses which scholars and writers want to make of it," said James H. Lesar, an attorney and vice president of the Assassination Archives, a private research group.

Zapruder, reached by telephone, declined to answer specific questions about the suit, but said the family only charges people who use the film for commercial purposes.

"We make the film available free of charge to anyone who is not going to use it for commercial purposes, and we've been doing that for years," he said. "We do that because we think it's the right thing to do. People who are going to charge, we charge."

The elder Zapruder, a dress manufacturer who died in 1970, had sold the film to Life magazine for $150,000 shortly after the assassination. Life featured dramatic frames from the footage in a special issue following the slaying.

In 1975, Time Inc. sold the film back to the Zapruder family for $1.

The original 8mm film is in storage at the National Archives, but the Zapruder family retains exclusive rights to the film's use and copies.

Judge temporarily halts shipment for PCB dirt

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A federal judge has temporarily halted the shipment of 47,000 tons of PCB-contaminated dirt from Texas to an Alabama landfill, saying federal environmental officials broke their own rules in approving the transfer.

U.S. District Judge Robert Varner, talking in football metaphors of forward passes and wide receivers, said the Environmental Protection Agency failed to notify Alabama officials of the impending shipment from the Houston area.

Varner, in granting the state of Alabama's request for a temporary ban, said he would hold another hearing soon on whether to extend the prohibition.

The truck shipments from Texas to Chemical Waste Management Inc. in Emelle in west Alabama were set to begin Saturday, attorneys said.

Justice Department attorney Bradley Bridgewater argued Alabama was not an "affected state" under EPA guidelines governing the shipment and, because of that, no notice was needed.

But Varner dismissed the claim.

"Do you think that the split end who catches a forward pass is an affected party? Certainly he is," Varner told Bridgewater. "It seems to me that Alabama ... is a receiving state to the toxic waste."

Jack Carter, an assistant attorney general from Texas, said official in Alabama were responsible for their predicament.

"If Alabama is the wide receiver in this play, Texas is the quarterback, EPA is the coach," Carter said. "You don't get a notice on every play. Alabama lined up as a wide receiver when they allowed Chemical Waste Management to operate that landfill."

Fournier J. Gale III, a Birmingham attorney representing Chemical Waste, said Alabama received enough notice of the shipment when EPA Administrator Lee Thomas met over the summer with U.S. Sen. Richard Shelby, D-Ala., and state officials to discuss the disposal plans.

The Texas site, contaminated with cancer-causing polychlorinated biphenyls, is to be cleaned up under federal Superfund guidelines.

Gale said the Texas shipment was handled like any other project paid for with federal money under the Superfund statutes.

"It's the same lack of notice that this state has received on every other Superfund shipment from out of state," Gale said.

Varner did not rule on whether the PCB shipments posed an environmental hazard. But, he said, "With an EPA director who did not follow the law (in approving the shipment), I'm afraid there may be."

PCBs once were commonly used in electrical transformers as a coolant. They since have been banned.

Girl's death deepens mystery about Ecclesia founder

By SALLY CARPENTER HALE
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Fame followed Eldridge Broussard Jr. out of Watts and back, from basketball stardom to his once-praised program to lift children out of the drugs and poverty of the Los Angeles ghetto.

Now his 8-year-old daughter is dead, allegedly at the hands of staff members of Broussard's ultra-disciplinary program, and 55 other children are in protective custody.

Oregon authorities say the children, who were kept in a sparsely furnished four-bedroom farmhouse, were subjected to ritualistic beatings of up to 800 strokes with a paddle or electrical cord.

The others were forced to watch and keep count, authorities also said.

Yet such is Broussard's popularity that parents have made no attempt to reclaim their children, even though the youngsters were removed from the house more than a week ago, according to Children's Service Division spokeswoman Alice Galloway.

The parents display "no lack of confidence in Eldridge Broussard," she says. "They trust him implicitly."

Broussard blames the media for his daughter's death and for the downfall of his Ecclesia Athletic Association.

He said negative publicity when Ecclesia arrived in Oregon last year cost his group financial backing and led to suspension of its activities a year ago. As a result, Broussard said, there were fewer staff members, and some were performing duties they weren't qualified for.

The children, mostly from the Watts area of Los Angeles, were kept in the farmhouse near Sandy, about 30 miles southeast of Portland.

On Oct. 14, four staff members took the body of Dayna Broussard to a nearby fire station. She had been beaten and whipped, and died of multiple blunt-force injuries, Medical Examiner Larry Lewman said.

That night, 53 children were taken from the house, where they were sharing sleeping bags on the floor. Investigators said the children, ranging in age from 1½ months to 16 years, had eaten only a tomato apiece that day.

Two other children involved with the group were taken into custody in Los Angeles.

The beatings were an integral part of the group's program to heighten athletic performance, much like harassment used in military training, said Donald Welch, director of the Clackamas County Juvenile Court.

In an appearance on Oprah Winfrey's syndicated television talk show Thursday, Broussard denied that the children were beaten or abused, saying they were only "spanked." He said standards of discipline in Oregon differ greatly from those in Watts.

"In Watts, parents have seen brutality that would trip the mind of the average American," he said. "The people that are a part of my school, when they see brutal, they see ears coming off, they see giant huge lacerations."

Broussard, 35, was a basketball star at Pacific University in Forest Grove, Ore., and was signed by the Portland Trail Blazers, where he did not make the final cut.

In 1975, he formed Ecclesia at his father's Watts

Christian Center in an effort to steer children away from drugs and crime and to motivate them through tough discipline and athletics. Ecclesia's members, about 80 adults and 80 children, renovated a rundown gymnasium and formed a 32-team basketball league.

The well-mannered children of Ecclesia won praise for their discipline and sportsmanship.

In a statement filed with the Oregon children's agency shortly after his daughter's death, Broussard claimed children as young as 4 in his organization could run seven to 10 miles, do 5,000 jumping jacks and 300 push-ups in just three hours.

Soviets have new problem: How to measure inflation

By ANN IMSE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The economic reforms enacted under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev have produced a new problem — how do Soviet statisticians measure inflation?

Nikolai G. Belov, deputy director of the state committee on statistics, said that his department hasn't figured out how to measure the rise in the cost of living and therefore doesn't know how serious inflation is in the Soviet Union.

Belov, however, acknowledged that wages rose nearly twice as fast as real income, indicating inflationary forces were at play in the economy.

Soviet officials traditionally have contended that inflation did not exist in the Soviet Union, where wages and prices are controlled by central planners.

In other communist countries, including Yugoslavia, Poland and China, attempts to ease central controls on the economy and permit the establishment of a market pricing system have led to runaway inflation.

Fears of similar problems in the Soviet system may explain Gorbachev's hesitation in implementing price reform, which he has said is a critical element of his modernization program.

Belov, speaking to reporters at a briefing, said his department would begin calculating inflation next year.

The closest he would come to offering a figure was to say that while wages rose 6.7 percent in the first nine months of the year, "real income, including hidden price hikes," rose 3.5 percent.

Prices are rising because some of the state enterprises suddenly ordered to make a profit have simply substituted expensive products for cheap ones, Belov said.

Economic reform has also brought 1 million layoffs in the first nine months of 1988, although he insisted all those who lost their jobs received new ones or were retired on pension. The government says it does not permit unemployment.

Cooperatives were the lone item of unqualified success in the reform that some Western economists have predicted will bring the problems of capitalism long before bringing its benefits.

The private co-ops, where wages consist of shared profits, have created 700,000 new jobs in the 18 months since they were legalized.

Group begins recall petition against mayor of Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Mayor Annette Strauss is the target of recall petitions being circulated by a group upset over the city's contract with managers of the Starplex Amphitheater in Fair Park.

The Committee for Better Government filed papers for the recall election last week, officials said.

Tax protestor Frank Bodzin, committee leader, said he realizes it is impossible to force such an election before May 6, when Mrs. Strauss and other City Council members are up for election.

Bodzin, along with other committee members, are upset by the contract the city negotiated with PACE Entertainment for operation of the $10 million amphitheatre. †

"The PACE contract, like many others that have financially raped the Dallas taxpayer, are the result of poor and incompetent management or outright fraud," Bodzin said.

Bodzin said he holds Mrs. Strauss accountable for the 40-year contract with PACE Entertainment of Houston.

He added City Manager Richard Knight and City Attorney Analesie Muncy should be fired for negotiating such a bad deal.

PACE officials at first said they were unwilling to renegotiate terms of the contract. Controversy surrounded the city's construction of a $3.5 million parking lot for the amphitheatre.

PACE gets all the revenue from the parking lot and the city must maintain the lot while the Houston company was exempted from property taxes on the amphitheatre.

"I can't comment on it," Mrs. Strauss said of the recall move. "I just have to live with it."

Bodzin said he and five other committee members will seek to collect the required 69,317 signatures needed for the recall by contacting city residents at polling places on election day.

The group has 60 days to obtain the signatures of 15 percent of the 462,119 registered voters in the city at the time of the last municipal election.

The city secretary will have 30 days to verify the petition and there is a 60-day waiting period before an election could be called if the group can get the signatures.

That would mean that there is no time to call a recall election for Jan. 21.

San Antonio firm to open branch in institution building

HARLINGEN (AP) — Depositors of the state's only uninsured thrift institution have moved a little closer to seeing some of the money they have not seen since Rio Grande Savings and Loan failed 17 months ago, officials said.

San Antonio-based CitySavings and Loan Association announced it will open a branch in the building that used to house Rio Grande, whose assets it is trying to acquire.

The branch, to open Monday, is seen as a show of confidence that CitySavings will obtain regulatory approval for the $38 million acquisition of Rio Grande.

Some $74 million in deposits have been frozen since the state took over the failed Harlingen thrift in May 1987.

Rio Grande was the state's only savings and loan not insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

"This is a very visible step that we're making progress," said Jorge Gutierrez, whom the Texas Savings and Loan Department named to liquidate Rio Grande.

CitySavings' acquisition of Rio Grande has been approved by the Texas Savings and Loan Department, but still must obtain approval from the Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board before the assets transfer to the San Antonio firm.

"I am convinced that we are going to get the other two regulatory approvals," said Paul Tillman, president and chairman of CitySavings.

Andy Anderson, deputy commissioner with the Texas S&L Department, said the announcement of CitySavings branch opening date was a much happier occasion than the day he took part in shutting down Rio Grande.

"It has been a long time that the depositors' money has been tied up and we all recognize that," Anderson said.

Under a three-part plan, the 6,249 Rio Grande depositors could get as much as 86 percent of their money back, Gutierrez said.

Under the first part of the plan CitySavings would pay $20.7 million. Depositors would receive 27 percent of the money they had in Rio Grande, including 23 percent cash and 4 percent CitySavings preferred stock convertible to cash over a period of 12 years.

The second part of the plan involves a lawsuit Gutierrez filed against Houston-based Champion Savings Association, in which he alleged that Champion defrauded Rio Grande in a complicated loan scheme. That would bring another 24 percent back to depositors, including 18 percent cash and 6 percent in preferred CitySavings stock.

The lawsuit, set for trial in Brownsville Jan. 9 has been complicated however, by the insolvency last month of Champion, for which the FSLIC is the liquidator. It created a situation Gutierrez described as unprecedented.

"We've never had two liquidators for two different S&L's litigate against each other," Gutierrez said.

A third part of the plan to regain the Rio Grande depositors' money involves $26 million in second-lien notes, including $11 million related to 10,000 acres of land for the ambitious Playa del Rio real estate development near the mouth of the Rio Grande.

"This is your money that we are attempting to recover," Gutierrez said in a statement directed at Rio Grande's stranded depositors, many of whom are retired, on fixed incomes and trusted the failed thrift with their life savings.

Workers rushed last week to redecorate the building before Monday's opening under the new name.

Rio Grande was a highly respected community institution since the time it was established in 1927 until it failed from mismanagement and the depressed Texas real estate industry.

Texas man rises to top rank of National Weather Service

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The clouds hugged the Texas Hill Country on that gray day 27 years ago, as Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson waited impatiently for word he could fly out of his ranch on the Pedernales River.

The flight hinged on a National Weather Service forecast — left to a 22-year-old weatherman with one year's experience and more than a little awe of the vice president.

Ron McPherson says it was one of his toughest calls in three decades of forecasting, but he did what he had to and warned against flying out of the LBJ Ranch. The ceiling of clouds was just too close to the hills.

"I was a 22-year-old kid with a year's service and here's a vice president who wants to get out of his ranch. When he wanted to go somewhere, he wanted to go. He didn't take too kindly to the clouds covering the hills," McPherson says. "That was close but I had no choice, I had to (issue the warning)."

Johnson made it to the Austin airport by car, "and I understand by his pilot that he was not too happy about it," McPherson says.

Will Americans guzzle czar of Soviet brewski?

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Glasnost could come to this: American television ads proclaiming, "Zhguli, the czar of beers — when you're out of Zhguli, you're out of beer."

It's pronounced zee-GUH-lee, as in the best-selling beer in the Soviet Union.

And if a new joint venture between the Soviet government and American investors is successful, Zhguli will be just one of a number of Soviet products trying to make a dent in the giant American market.

The group also has high hopes for Laggidze Waters, a fruit-flavored soft drink made from mineral waters from the Georgian region of the Soviet Union.

The new joint venture, called Torg International, the Russian word for trade, was launched last week with toasts of Soviet champagne at the Soviet embassy.

The participants credited Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's campaign of perestroika, the economic restructuring designed to overhaul the stagnant Soviet economy, as the guiding force behind the new effort.

"This is a joint venture with the aim of selling in the United States some Soviet goods, Soviet soft drinks, Soviet beer, Soviet candies, Soviet chocolates, perhaps some other goods of high quality," said Soviet Ambassador Yuriy Dubinin. "It is one more step in the development of Soviet-American relations."

The new company, which is 51 percent owned by American investors and 49 percent owned by the Soviet government, will have exclusive marketing rights in the United States for a range of products including beer, soft drinks, wine, brandies, vegetables, nuts, fruits and other types of food.

While American companies have often formed joint ventures in order to do business in the Soviet Union, this will be the first between a U.S. company and the Soviet government in this country. Any profits will be split between the American investors and the Soviet government.

Plans call for Laggidze (lah-GEED-zee) Waters to begin appearing on store shelves by next May, followed shortly thereafter by Zhguli beer.

Officials in the new enterprise said they were undaunted by the huge advertising budgets or market shares now held by American soft-drink giants.

"These are not your traditional American soft drinks," said George Carroll, who will serve as president of Torg International. "These soft drinks are 100 percent natural products. There is no caffeine, no additives of any kind. There is no sugar."

As an added selling feature, the mineral water comes from the mountains of Georgia, the region of the Soviet Union famous for the longevity of its residents, Carroll said.

He said his company, the Cleveland Export Import Trade Co., was prepared to spend $10 million initially in starting the new enterprise.

While the company that produces Laggidze Waters has been around for 100 years, the Soviets' bottling process is so antiquated that all of the labels are still put on by hand.

Carroll said the American investors would be sending label-pasting machines to the Soviet Union along with filtration systems to increase the shelf-life of the soft drinks.

Carroll said the Soviet products will be aimed at the same upscale market that buys Stolichnaya, the Soviet vodka.

"We are not upgrading the quality of their goods. The quality of their goods is excellent," Carroll said. "What we are doing is helping them with the logistics of marketing."

The memory has stayed with McPherson through a long career with the National Weather Service — one he began as an undergraduate intern in 1969 while at the University of Texas in Austin; one that has now taken him to the agency's second-highest post.

He was named deputy director of the weather service in September and started work in mid-October, in charge of day-to-day operations at an organization attempting to move into the 21st century.

The weather service is replacing antiquated equipment with its largest buy of new technology — equipment, McPherson and others say, that will let forecasters look inside a major storm system and maybe even predict a tornado in the embryonic stage, or the kinds of storms and squalls that spark killer flash floods.

"But what better person is there than a guy who worked his way up in the system?" asks Don Witten, a spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, parent agency of the weather service.

Witten says it's not unusual to find weather service employees who have spent entire careers with the grassroots organization.

The weather service has 299 offices nationwide responsible for developing or issuing warnings for storms, tornadoes, hurricanes and flash floods.

It plays a key role in space and air travel and is at the edge of research into understanding such phenomena as drought, windshear and turbulent storms that die almost as quickly as they erupt. McPherson's most recent job was as chief of the meteorological operations division at the National Meteorological Center, a weather service branch outside Washington. He moved there from San Antonio 20 years ago.

"You can get hooked on weather," Witten says. "What is it that touches every human life on earth? One of the answers is weather. It can make you an orphan, it can bring you a fresh crop. It can cause you a lot of trouble getting to work; yet there's nothing like a beautiful day."

Growing up in Port Arthur, McPherson says he was bitten by the weather bug as a 12-year-old Boy Scout working on a weather badge. As part of the assignment, McPherson says he read a passage from the book, Storm, by George R. Stewart.

"The story is about a forecast office on the West Coast tracking a major Pacific storm and its impact on land and on people. It was very impressive for a 12-year-old kid," he says.

"As it turns out, I've run into at least eight or 10 people who have read the same novel and gotten into meteorology through the influence of that novel. It's a little dated now, but it's still a good story."

What attracts McPherson to weather, he says, is its uncertainty.

"It's knowing that you're dealing with something slippery. You're trained to deal with uncertainty, fragments of evidence, more than any other profession than maybe law," he says.

Those fragments come from scores of sources around the country and the world — from forecasters in the field and thousands of volunteer storm spotters, weather balloons and river forecasting centers at the headwaters of the nation's major waterways, ships at sea and satellites hovering above the equator and circling the poles.

The weather service, which traces its roots to the Army's Signal Corps in the late 1800s, has sometimes been on the cutting edge of technology and other times lagged behind, McPherson says.

He hopes the latest equipment will give the agency a new understanding of weather, especially the kind that threatens life, livestock and property.

"You can't forecast what you don't understand, and you have to be able to observe what you're going to forecast."
