Soldier arrested in spy ring

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Authorities said today they have arrested a former U.S. soldier and charged him with espionage for leading an international spy ring that sold military secrets to the Soviet Union over the past 10 years.

Chief Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann said the charges against former Army Sgt. Clyde Lee Conrad involved an "especially grave case" of supplying American and NATO defense secrets to the Soviets through the spy ring.

The most recent delivery took place last month in Vienna, Rebmann said.

The U.S. State Department said in a statement in Washington: "We understand that there has been an apprehension by West German authorities, but do not consider it appropriate to comment at this time."

In Stockholm, Swedish authorities said three East Bloc immigrants were detained this week on suspicion of spying.

The suspects — a married couple and a man — faced arraignment today on charges of illegal intelligence activity, the Afton- ladet daily said. Swedish radio, however, said the woman was released after questioning.

Rebmann's spokesman said the spy ring was based in West Germany and used couriers from Sweden. He confirmed that the arrested Swedes were suspected of being part of the spy ring.

The spokesman, Alexander Prechtel, said in a telephone interview that he couldn't rule out the possibility the charge of espionage against Conrad might be raised to treason. The spokesman said Conrad was "the head" of the ring.

The statement came after The New York Times reported today that Swedish and West German authorities had arrested eight people involved in a spy ring that supplied secret military documents to the Soviets for at least 10 years.

Prechtel, speaking from his office in the city of Karlsruhe, confirmed virtually all of the Times report on the case.

He confirmed that documents concerning North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense plans for Europe were believed stolen as well as the U.S. Army contingency plans for a ground war in Europe against the Soviet Union.

But he emphasized that officials were still conducting in-depth investigations to determine exactly what was missing.

Prechtel said that while "several" people had been taken into custody or arrested, he could not confirm that the number was eight.

The ring was based in West Germany, while couriers were based in neutral Sweden, the spokesman also confirmed.

Rebmann said Conrad sold secret documents to "a Soviet bloc secret service."

Conrad has been sent to investigative detention following his appearance before a special panel of the West German Supreme Court, Rebmann's office said.

Rebmann's statement said that Conrad had worked for the U.S. military for 20 years before his discharge in 1965. It said he was born in 1947, but did not give his hometown in the United States.

Principals in the newly uncovered ring, which operated through a German-Hungarian connection, caused a major security loss to the United States, according to the Times report, later confirmed by Rebmann.

Gramm, right, raises Milner's hand in show of support.

Gramm stops at Pampa to endorse Larry Milner

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A crowd of Republican faithful were on hand this morning at the Perry Lefors Air Field to greet Sen. Phil Gramm and congressional hopeful Larry Milner.

The Pampa stop is part of a "whistlestop" tour of the region.

"First, I want to thank Celanese for rebuilding here in Pampa," Gramm said.

He went on to say he normally does not endorse candidates in other races, but that in this instance, he considered the Milner race "crucial to the future of America."

Milner is facing Democrat Bill Sarpalus in the November elections.

"You can either elect someone who will be working with (Speaker of the House) Jim Wright, or someone who will be working with me. What we need in Congress is a man who understands how to create jobs."

"If there is a problem in America today, it is creating jobs, not in government, but in the private sector," the senator said.

Gramm accused Wright of raising taxes to "buy more votes."

He was also critical of the Democrats in the area of drug enforcement: "(Michael) Dukakis opposes the death penalty ... then there is his famous furlough program that lets first degree murderers have the weekend off. So far, only 62 have escaped."

Gramm said the Republicans are "the party" that is serious about drug enforcement.

"I've introduced a tough new drug bill. If someone sells drugs to a minor, let's give them at least 10 years in prison, with no hope for parole. If they do it a second time, life in prison; let's throw away the key. If someone kills a policeman, the death penalty — no buts about it."

The comment drew an enthusiastic response from the audience.

In introducing Milner, Gramm termed him "an exceptional man that I'm proud to support."

Milner said that he did not approach Gramm for help. He said the senator had called his office and volunteered to help in the campaign.

"Since World War II, we've rebuilt Germany and Japan. Now it's time we rebuild rural America," Milner said.

In referring to Sen. Gramm, Milner said, "One of these days he's going to be standing before us accepting the nomination for the highest office in the land."

Gramm responded to questions about vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle, saying that since his addition to the ticket George Bush has gone from 17 points down in the polls to as high as nine points on top of Dukakis.

"If the worst thing Dan Quayle ever did was serve in the National Guard, he's on his way to the White House," he said.

Handicapped speaker inspires teachers

By BEAR MILLS

When he finished there was hardly a dry eye in the place. Some were hugging. All were smiling. One said he was the best speaker they had ever heard.

The "he" was Roger W. Crawford II. He was born with only one leg and two mangled stubs for hands. As a child he could only watch while other children ran and played.

It took him 16 years to finally learn to tie his own shoes.

For Crawford, this beginning was a challenge to achieve greatness.

Crawford spoke Wednesday during a city-wide orientation for Pampa Independent School District teachers, staff and administrators. "When we think about handicaps we normally think of physical ones. But the biggest handicap any of us have is of our attitude," Crawford said.

"I would rather have one leg and a positive attitude than have both legs and a negative one."

Crawford told the capacity crowd at the M.K. Brown Heritage Room that a good attitude is the single most important ingredient in life.

"One time I was traveling by plane and I heard the pilot radio in to the control tower. He was talking about the attitude of the plane. I figured he must mean the attitude."

"So when we landed I told him who I was and that I speak a lot about attitudes. He told me the attitude of a plane is the direction it's leaning in relation to the horizontion. My question to you is, 'What direction are you leaning in?'

"Some people look out the window and see bright sunshine. Other people look out and see a dirty window. What is your attitude?"

Crawford told the group that the difference between a stumbling block and a stepping stone was only six inches: "The six inches between your ears."

If anyone has reason for a bad attitude, it is Crawford. The son of a professional baseball player, he was born premature and with multiple physical problems. However, he said his parents always taught him he could succeed.

He did. Crawford played Division I-A college tennis for Loyola-Marymount University in Los Angeles and finished with a record of 47-6. He lettered in the sport all four years.

He has been featured on The Tonight Show, Good Morning America and Real People and carried the Olympic torch in 1984.

"When I was born, the doctors told my parents I would never walk. But I not only walked, I ran with the Olympic torch," Crawford said.

Wife campaigns for candidate/husband

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

Suzanne Milner feels she has something unique to offer to her husband's campaign for U.S. House of Representatives, 13th District ... 25 years of watching him handle all kinds of situations.

"It occurred to me that many of the things I admired in him as a husband and a father would also make him a great congressman," she explained.

"Larry has three qualities that would be especially good," she said. "He's super-organized. He can take a great big project and break it into small pieces that are manageable."

"He's great at explaining things. He would help the girls with their school work. He can explain complicated subjects in ways that people understand. He uses examples and draws sketches," she said.

And Suzanne Milner says her husband is inspiring.

"This is one of Larry's greatest qualities," she said. "As an employer, Larry would often fill his job openings with young, enthusiastic men and women who didn't know it couldn't be done. He trained his employees to be creative and daring by example."

"I thought these qualities would be wonderful for both ends, both at Washington and at home," she said.

Mrs. Milner has taken her convictions, had them printed in pamphlet form and is now knocking on doors in the many towns of the 13th District to tell people what Larry Milner, the man, is like.

"I had a lot of fun going through the attic to find those pictures," she said.

The pamphlet is illustrated with family photos featuring the Milners from childhood to the marriage of their daughter in July.

Despite her scuffed white tennis shoes and casual attire, Mrs. Milner says she has been graciously received in Pampa. "People are terrific," she said. "Even when I show up in tennis shoes."

She often goes with friends, with her husband, or members of the campaign staff. They then split up and try to reach as many voters as possible.

"I believe that it is important for voters to get the chance to meet a candidate's family," she said, "because voters are really electing a family to serve them in Washington."

The Milners have three grown daughters: Laura, Pollyanna and Bonnie. Their youngest enrolled at Texas Tech University Monday, Mrs. Milner said.

"This (campaign) has come at the right time in our lives. Our children are grown and our house is almost paid for, so we can close the house and go knocking on doors," she said.

She said she doesn't mind the days that stretch 15 hours long or the fact that she has to wash clothes after church on Sundays, so they can be ready for another six days of hard campaigning.

"I believe so deeply in Larry's qualities," she said, adding it is "absolutely essential that the voters know the man behind the candidate."

Mrs. Milner said she believes voters will respect her husband's Christianity, his high morals and his commitment to his family, community and country.

Milner's background in economic development from his years as a chamber of commerce executive and vice president of Southwestern Public Service Company's area development department is what the 13th District needs right now, she claimed.

'People are terrific. Even when I show up in tennis shoes.'

The Milners have traveled to each of the 37 counties in the district, listening to the voters.

"They're worried about their towns, about their hospitals, about their schools," Mrs. Milner

Speaker

To walk or run, he wears an artificial leg. To play tennis he must brace the racket between both hands at all times, even when he serves.

"The key to teaching is a positive attitude," Crawford said. "A positive attitude is contagious, but a negative attitude is even more so. Everyone can do something incredible in their lives, but first you must visualize something incredible to do."

Crawford's presentation was full of humorous stories.

"I'm used to people staring at me when I go places. I just smile back. But sometimes they don't understand exactly how to take me. Once I was in an airport in Atlanta. I was dog tired, I had my luggage and I just had to sit down."

"I saw this chair with a newspaper in it. I was so tired I just walked up and sat right on top of it. This man was looking and me. He got up and came over."

"I figured he was going to ask me about my handicap. Instead he said, 'Are you reading that paper?' So I told him yes, stood up, turned the page and sat back down."

Crawford named three essentials to success: "Knowing where you have been, how long you have been there and where you are going."

"The problem in life is not people setting their goals too high and missing them. The problem is people setting their goals too low and hitting them."

Crawford credits his parents and dedicated school teacher for his infectious winning attitude. "It took me a long time to be able to take my hands out of my pockets. I couldn't cut paper and I had trouble hanging on to monkey bars. In the seventh grade I had a lot of negative self-talk."

"There were a lot of kids who teased me. It hurt. My parents thought they came up with a solution. They bought me a pair of artificial hands, but they were only cosmetic and I couldn't do anything when I had them on. They were a mask, not the real me."

"This is the real me," Crawford held up his hands. Most of the audience smiled and some fought back tears.

"My mother told me to take my hands out of my pockets and smile. I asked her if anyone would ever love me enough to hold onto this hand like she always had. When I met my wife, she told me I didn't want people to love me for my wrapping, but for the gift inside."

Crawford closed by encouraging the teachers to not only encourage children to succeed, but to be the one teacher that made "the difference" in a child's life. "Show children how to succeed, tell them why they should succeed and ask them what they are willing to pay for that success."

"Maybe you saw the story on the news about the guy in California who walks along the beach picking up starfish and throwing them back into the sea during low tide. They get washed up on the beach and die."

"A news crew did a story on the guy once and asked him how he thought he could make any difference when there were so many starfish on the beach. The man held up the starfish in his hand and told them that to that starfish he was making all the difference in the world."

"You're not going to be able to help every student. But, help the ones you can."

Crawford has spoken all over the world and is currently finishing his autobiography.

No time limit was set for the talks and the specific agenda was not known.

The talks between Velayati and Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz of Iraq are being held under U.N. auspices, and Perez de Cuellar will attend the first sessions. The negotiations are the first step toward implementing a year-old U.N. resolution and eventually concluding a peace treaty.

The Iran-Iraq talks and the Persian Gulf ceasefire are the latest U.N. moves to resolve regional conflicts. In April, a U.N.-mediated Afghan settlement was signed in Geneva.

On Wednesday, the leaders of Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities met in Geneva for the first time in three years under U.N. auspices. The United Nations is also involved in the peace process in southern Africa, Western Sahara and Cambodia.

Iran accepted the U.N. cease-fire resolution July 18 after a string of battlefield defeats. The agenda for the Iran-Iraq talks could include troop withdrawal to international borders, resolution of a border dispute, repatriation of prisoners of war, reparations, freedom of navigation in the disputed Shatt al-Arab waterway and the gulf, and other issues.

A head for Bush

One of the women who showed up this morning for Sen. Phil Gramm's "whistlestop" visit at Perry Lefors Air Field used the sign to show her support for GOP presidential nominee George Bush, holding a sign of support up to her head for Gramm to see while he spoke to endorse GOP congressional candidate Larry Milner.

GNP shows expanded economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy expanded at a brisk annual rate of 3.3 percent from April through June in spite of a severe shock from the drought that seared much of the country, the government reported today. The gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, expanded at essentially the same rate as in the first quarter, when the GNP rose at an annual rate of 3.4 percent.

But inflation in the second quarter, the Commerce Department said, was accelerating at its fastest pace in almost six years.

The robust 3.3 percent growth rate occurred despite the fact that the impact of the drought on farm production shaved a full percentage point from second-quarter growth, the government said today.

Without the drought, the GNP would have shot up at a 4.3 percent annual rate in the April-June period.

The government estimated that the drought will reduce farm output by $14.3 billion in 1988, shaving about 0.4 percentage point from growth for the full year.

Even with the troubles in the farm belt, however, the economy continued to show its resiliency, propelled by a sharp turnaround in the country's trade deficit and strong growth in business investment and consumer spending.

But inflation accelerated as well, with a GNP price index that measures a changing market basket of goods rising at an annual rate of 5.1 percent, the fastest increase since a 5.8 percent rise in the third quarter of 1982.

The big surge in inflation, which followed an increase of 1.7 percent in the first quarter, was blamed on higher consumer prices for clothing, food and gasoline.

The burst of inflation served to emphasize the problems facing the expansion, which has already lasted a peacetime record of 69 months.

With growth so robust, the economy is beginning to see rising inflationary pressures from tight labor markets and demand outstripping production.

The Federal Reserve since March has been pushing interest rates higher to dampen demand, but many economists are worried that unless growth slows in the coming quarters, the central bank will have to clamp down even harder and risk pushing the country into a recession in 1989.

In good news for Republican presidential chances, however, economists see no likelihood that economic growth will slow appreciably before the Nov. 8 election.

Many analysts believe the economy in the current quarter may be expanding at an even faster rate than in the spring.

The trade deficit shrank at an annual rate of $18.9 billion in the second quarter.

County to look at budget again

Gray County commissioners have set a third budget work session for 9:30 a.m. Friday in the second floor courtroom of Gray County Courthouse.

With a difference of more than a half million dollars between estimated revenue of $3.7 million and $4.2 million in proposed expenditures, commissioners plan to spend this session looking for a way to bridge the gap.

In an eight-hour work session Aug. 18, commissioners juggled and cut the proposed 1988 budget by more than $400,000. Salaries and wages for county employees were frozen.

Conference and training expenses were limited to $500 per office holder per year and travel allowance was limited to only the district and county clerks at $300 per year. All but the most essential capital expenditures were also slashed from the budget.

Commissioners now must either find approximately $575,000 or continue to cut away at the budget.

Commissioner Gerald Wright had said earlier that it was possible that the difference could possibly be taken from the money gained in the sale of Highland General Hospital. Another option bandied around by commissioners would be to borrow or to raise taxes enough to cover the amount needed.

On Sept. 1, commissioners will be meeting in regular session and have tentatively agreed to consider the budget and tax rate at that time.

Minister pleads guilty to sexual attacks

DALLAS (AP) — A Southern Baptist minister who said he often watched pornographic films before raping women has been sentenced to 10 life terms after pleading guilty to charges relating to a series of attacks, prosecutors said.

Gregory Charles Goblen, 28, pleaded guilty Wednesday to five charges of burglary of a habitation and sexual assault and five charges of aggravated sexual assault, Dallas County assistant district attorney Mike Gillett said.

The charges were in connection with a series of sexual assaults in and around a north Dallas apartment complexes known as The Village.

State District Judge Ron Chapman in Criminal District Court of Dallas sentenced Goblen to serve the terms concurrently in the Texas Department of Corrections, Gillett said.

Goblen was a pastor of Outreach Baptist Church in suburban Garland. The church is one of 28 mission churches sponsored by First Baptist Church of Dallas, which provides funds to pay the minister's salary and help get the church started.

Between sobs that made his answers inaudible at times, Goblen said that his actions were the result of viewing pornographic material available in the community.

As part of his plea agreement, Goblen agreed to provide authorities with information on other attacks he will not be prosecuted for and agreed to submit to blood tests to determine whether he carries any sexually transmitted diseases that could have been passed on to his victims.

Chapman, who repeatedly asked Goblen whether he understood the consequences of his guilty pleas, told Goblen he would have to serve at least 15 years in prison before being eligible for parole.

Although her testimony was not crucial to Goblen's conviction and sentence, a 46-year-old victim of Goblen's testified and said she chose to do so because she wanted Goblen to "have to sit here and listen to what I have to say about what he did and how I feel."

She said Goblen threatened her with a knife and told her if they were able to do everything portrayed in the video tape, he would not kill her.

The woman said she is a widow who had lived alone for three years before she was assaulted and waited an entire month after the attack to return to her home.

"I decided he was not going to win out over me — he was not going to make me do anything else in my life," she said of her return home.

During his hearing, Goblen testified that he viewed pornographic movies as often as once a week and many times watched one of them before committing an attack, Gillett said.

Kenneth Blassingame, Goblen's attorney, said his client has accepted his fate and "wanted to get it behind him and get some help."

Goblen was jailed in June after he was arrested in connection with an attempted burglary. He was later linked to a series of attacks in which a rapist wore a ski mask and generally tied his victims' hands with a belt or other article of clothing, according to police.

A graduate of Trinity Heights Christian Academy in Shreveport, La., Goblen enrolled in Louisiana Tech University in nearby Ruston. He planned to be a doctor, but turned to the ministry in his senior year.

He left Shreveport about five years ago as a newlywed to attend Dallas Theological Seminary. After graduating in May 1986, Goblen enrolled at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, where he was working toward a Doctor of Ministry degree.

Former governor dead after stroke early today

LIBERTY (AP) — Former Texas Gov. Price Daniel died in this Southeast Texas town early today.

George Christian, a former press secretary to Daniel, said the former governor died at about 1 a.m.

Christian said Daniel suffered what he believes to be a massive stroke at his ranch and was taken to Yettie Kersting Hospital at Liberty.

He was pronounced dead upon arrival, a spokeswoman said.

Daniel, 77, served three terms as governor from 1957-63.

Daniel had been a U.S. Senator for one term before he ran for governor in 1956 against Ralph W. Yarborough. Daniel won the election, but Yarborough won a special election to replace Daniel in the U.S. Senate.

He sought a fourth term as governor in the 1962 election, but didn't even make the runoff. John Connally defeated Don Yarborough in a runoff election for the Democratic nomination and then defeated Jack Cox in the general election.

Daniel served three terms as Texas attorney general from 1947-1953.

Hospital spokeswoman Margie Hagan said Daniel was Daniel brought in at 1:10 a.m. and that he had no vital signs. She said ambulance officials were trying to revive him.

Bill Wainscott, a paramedic who tried to help revive the former governor, said, "We went out there and we did all we could do and that was all there was to it. Unfortunately, we were unable to revive him. We tried."

Wainscott said paramedics were unable to determine the cause of death.

"It could have been a stroke or a heart attack," Wainscott said. He said paramedics received the call at 12:37 a.m. and arrived at the ranch nine minutes later.

Witnesses: Hispanic agent was poor worker

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — The Hispanic FBI agent who filed a class-action discrimination suit against the bureau was demoted three times because he performed his duties badly and not because of his ethnicity, according to several agents.

Bernardo "Matt" Perez, who filed the suit in U.S. District Court in January 1987, was poorly organized and did not delegate authority well, his former boss testified Wednesday.

The witness, Richard Bretzing, said Perez' performance led Bretzing to demote Perez twice when Perez was assistant agent in charge in Los Angeles.

"I came to the conclusion he was insufficiently prepared and was not competent to perform his duties in the Los Angeles office," Bretzing testified Wednesday.

A former FBI inspector testified that Perez was an "absentee landlord" in performing his duties as agent in charge of the San Juan, Puerto Rico, office. The inspector, Terry Dinan, filed a report that eventually led to Perez' first demotion and a transfer to Los Angeles to work under Bretzing.

Dinan, now special agent in charge of the Cincinnati office, was head of an inspection team that found numerous faults with Perez' leadership in San Juan in 1981.

"It was found that Mr. Perez had so delegated his duties to his assistants that they couldn't handle all of the work," Dinan testified. "He was more of an absentee landlord."

The 311 Hispanic agents joined in the class-action suit contend the FBI discriminates against Hispanics in promoting, disciplining and making assignments.

They seek unspecified damages and changes in FBI policies.

About 400 of the FBI's 9,400 agents — or 4.3 percent — are Hispanic; 8 percent of the general U.S. population is Hispanic.

Perez testified last week that he had to delegate much authority while in San Juan because the small FBI contingent there was investigating four major cases — an unusually high number.

Perez and others testified last week that Bretzing discriminated against Hispanics and favored agents who, like him, belonged to the Mormon Church. About 50 of Los Angeles' 450 agents are Mormon.

In Perez' first demotion, Bretzing moved Perez from senior assistant special agent in charge — the No. 2 spot in the office — to assistant special agent in charge of investigations, one step below. Perez switched jobs with Bryce Cristensen, a Mormon.

Bretzing testified he strives to keep his religious life out of the office.

Other agents and a Cuban-American friend of Bretzing's testified that Bretzing is not anti-Hispanic, as Perez and others asserted for the plaintiffs last week.

Principal denies sexual harassment charges

DICKINSON (AP) — A former school principal who quit his post earlier this month amid a sexual harassment investigation says allegations brought against him were motivated by dissatisfaction with faculty evaluations.

Joe Herndon, former Dunbar Middle School principal, said there is absolutely no truth to the allegations that he harassed teachers.

He said the teachers filed fictitious grievances because they were unhappy with evaluations he gave them. Formal grievances cannot be filed against an administrator over an evaluation, he said.

The grievances against Herndon were withdrawn when he resigned, said Susan Wilcox, president of the Dickinson Education Association, which represents teachers.

"We agreed to drop it if he resigned and he resigned," she said. "It's over as far as we are concerned." She added that the employees had no intention of pursuing the grievances or any other legal action.

Wilcox said Herndon's charge that the teachers fabricated their grievances in response to poor evaluations was a "lie." Herndon had given good if not excellent evaluations to all of the teachers who filed grievances, she said.

Herndon said the sexual harassment allegations were not a factor in his leaving Dickinson for a position as an intermediate school principal in the Bryan Independent School District.

He said he took the Bryan position because it was a better job, adding that he had been considering leaving the Dickinson district for "three or four years."

Of the six teachers and one secretary who filed a grievance with the Dickinson district, "three or four" alleged that he had sexually harassed them, Wilcox said.

The others said Herndon harassed them in a demeaning non-sexual manner, she said.

The employees presented a formal grievance June 6 to former Superintendent Jerome Bougeois, Wilcox said. When Bougeois left Dickinson for another job, the investigation was continued by Deputy Superintendent N.K. "Dutch" Ohlendorf.

Ohlendorf said he had finished gathering information on the case but had not made a recommendation to the board of trustees on what action to take when Herndon resigned Aug. 2.

Using the Texas Open Records Act, the Galveston Daily News and the Bryan-College Station Eagle requested Herndon's personnel file and all documents related to the investigation of the grievance.

Part of Herndon's personnel file was released last week but Dickinson school district officials have requested an attorney general's opinion on whether they must release the other documents.

Nuclear power plant gets setback

AUSTIN (AP) — The South Texas Nuclear Project power plant finished a crucial test, but a 15-year-old struggle by the city of Austin to get out of the project was dealt a severe setback.

Utility owners Wednesday declared Unit 1 of the twin-plant to be in full commercial operation after completing a 100-hour test.

If the test results gain approval of a review committee, the plant's four owners — Houston Lighting & Power, Central Power & Light and the cities of Austin and San Antonio — will decide how much energy is needed and at what capacity the plant will run.

But the plant's owners didn't fare as well before the Texas Public Utility Commission.

The PUC decided to withhold its blessing for a deal that would have allowed Austin to swap its 16 percent interest in the plant for a 28 percent share of a lignite-fueled power plant in Limestone County from HL&P, the project's managing partner. In return, Austin would halt its lawsuit against HL&P for alleged mismanagement of the project.

The PUC voted 2-1 to allow the swap, but declined to issue a finding that the deal is in the public interest — a contingency placed on the settlement agreement by HL&P. The commission ruling upholds the recommendation of administrative law judge Mark W. Smith that the swap is a bad deal for Houston ratepayers.

"This means that the agreement between Houston Lighting & Power and Austin is off," said HL&P spokesman Graham Painter. Painter said HL&P would ask for a rehearing but was not optimistic about one being granted.

Without a finding that it is in the public interest, the company might be required to use profits instead of an electric rate increase to pay for the deal.

If the PUC decision stands, HL&P and Austin will probably face each other in court.

PUC Chairman Marta Greytok and Jo Campbell voted for the administrative law judge's recommendation. Bill Cassin voted against it, and indicated he would have supported a finding that the deal was in the public interest, Dunn said.

Barney Knight, city attorney for Austin, said the agreement provides that HL&P give the city a decision within 10 days of final PUC action. If a motion for rehearing is filed, action would not be final until that motion is ruled on, he said.

"They (HL&P officials) have some time for calm reflection and reconsideration," Knight said. But if the agreement falls through, he said, "I can assure you the city of Austin will go to court. There are those who believe going to court is the best option."

HL&P's Painter said, "I would hate to say we wouldn't negotiate, but it would have to be starting from scratch again. It would have to involve going over all of these issues from very beginning."

Tom Smith of Public Citizen said that evidence in this case "proves what Austin's been saying all along. We're better off getting out of the nuke than staying in it."

While HL&P officials praised the testing of Unit 1, opponents of the project said that steps should be taken to prevent rate hikes.

Jerry Goldberg, HL&P group vice president, said Unit 1 will continue to operate at full power until late September, when it will be removed from service for an inspection. Following that, the plant will be returned to service, he said.

Public Notice

TO ALL FORMER AND CURRENT INTRASTATE WIDE AREA TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE (WATS/800) SUBSCRIBERS:

The General Counsel of the Public Utility Commission of Texas has instituted an inquiry into possible overcharges, due to rounding practices, on the bills of intrastate WATS/800 customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and other telephone companies which concur in Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's tariffs. The possible overcharges relate only to those customers who were billed for overtime WATS/800 hours. The inquiry has been assigned Docket No. 7297.

Companies which are named in the inquiry include AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, and all other local exchange carriers within the State of Texas except the following: Brazos Telephone Cooperative; Byers and Petrolia Telephone Company; Caddoan Telephone Company; Cameron Telephone Company; Electra Telephone Company; Ganado Telephone Company; Knippa Telephone Company; LaWard Telephone Company; Lake Livingston Telephone Company; Lipan Telephone Company; Mid-Plains Rural Telephone Company; Panhandle Telephone Cooperative; Romain Telephone Company; San Marcos Telephone Company and West-Tex Telephone Cooperative.

Persons who wish to obtain further information should contact the Public Utility Commission Public Information Division at (512) 458-0100 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Persons who wish to intervene formally to participate actively in this proceeding should notify the Commission as soon as possible, but no later than September 30, 1988. Four copies of formal requests to intervene should be filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, and a copy sent to each other party in the inquiry.

Failure to intervene or seek further information will not preclude any former or current subscriber from receiving a refund if the Commission ultimately finds that overcharges have occurred and refunds are required.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP OF TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Foreign aid sounds kind of good, but ...

Providing food to poor nations sounds like a good idea. But in practice, except for severe cases of starvation (and sometimes not even then), it's proved a disaster. U.S. food aid programs not only waste U.S. taxpayers' dollars on a bad idea, but cause starvation and misery in the Third World.

Why? James Bovard, in a new study for the Heritage Foundation examining the U.S. Food for Peace program, explains: "While sometimes alleviating hunger in the short run, the program usually lowers the price at which Third World farmers can sell their crops, and depresses local food production."

Actually, this is just the latest episode in a recurring horror story. For at least 30 years economist P.T. Bauer has written of the ill effects of foreign aid of any sort: about how it gets foreign countries hooked on the aid and prevents homegrown industries from growing to maturity. The Reagan administration, in particular, is populated by politicians and economists who understand this fact. Yet seven years into the "Reagan Revolution," foreign aid is still flowing out, ruining foreign economies while emptying American taxpayers' wallets.

Why do these programs continue? Bovard writes: "Food for Peace, in fact, is mainly an aid program for U.S. farmers, allowing them to dump their surplus crops in Third World countries, while the U.S. taxpayer foots the bill, and the poor in less-developed countries bear the ultimate high cost."

Bovard notes that the U.S. food surpluses are themselves generated by federal price-guarantee programs. So the U.S. taxpayer subsidizes the Food for Peace fiasco in two ways, by direct payments for the food and by higher prices at U.S. grocery stores.

Bovard calls for restructuring the Food for Peace away from direct exports of American food and toward promoting "market-oriented agriculture in less developed countries. Many less-developed countries could feed themselves if their farmers were free to produce what they want, send their crops to market via private carriers, and sell their crops at a price set by the market, not by a government board and not distorted by U.S.-donated food."

That certainly would be an improvement over the current program. But a better solution would be to cut off all foreign aid. India today accepts no U.S. aid, yet now is self-sufficient in food, and even exports food. No aid of any kind — even for "market-oriented agriculture" — was needed. If you let countries alone, their own "market-oriented agriculture" will spring up, spontaneously.

GOP having second thoughts?

Stephen Chapman

NEW ORLEANS — If a presidential nomination were a marriage and the Republican Party a sensible bride, she might now be throwing out the invitations and sending back the ring.

A decision that a few months ago looked agreeable, if not exciting, now looms as a possible disaster.

It's George Bush's good luck that political parties have less latitude than lovers to change their minds. His choice of Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana as his running mate was obviously — you might say flagrantly — designed to prove his ardor to the GOP's conservatives. It succeeded.

But among other voters, including many Republicans, it may generate uncharitable thoughts, like the one Thomas Dewey had when he dismissed a political opponent as "light as a panama hat."

Even those who concede the doubtful necessity of picking someone who would reassure Phyllis Schlafly may wonder why Bush passed over conservatives who are tolerably qualified to be president (Jack Kemp, Jeane Kirkpatrick) for a conservative who isn't.

The only explanation that comes to mind is one that underlines Bush's own defects: He wanted a running mate who would be every bit as servile as he has been.

Like much of what Bush has done, his vice presidential choice ought to make the party faithful ask themselves a question: Why didn't they give Bob Dole the presidential nomination when they had the chance? As Bush's weaknesses grow more apparent, and Michael Dukakis' strengths more formidable, Dole looks increasingly like the suitor the GOP shouldn't have spurned.

He is almost a photographic negative of Bush: born to poverty instead of wealth, well acquainted with hardship, able to cultivate an empathy for ordinary people without looking like an idiot. Unlike the vice president, whose main achievement in office has been to avoid giving offense, Dole has provided the Reagan administration with criticism as well as help. He would rather be wrong than docile.

In his Monday night convention speech, President Reagan labored strenuously to convince his audience that without his vice president he would be nothing. Why, if not for Bush, he informed a grateful nation, Americans would still have to wait two and a half months for an export license. Who can forget those bleak days?

Reagan's effort had the unmistakable sound of protesting too much. A less polite crowd, hearing the president describe his subordinate as "someone who never runs away from a fight, never backs away from his beliefs and never makes excuses," would have erupted in laughter. This one took the insult to its intelligence stoically.

The description would have been persuasive if Reagan had excised each "never."

Or maybe if he had applied it to Bob Dole. It is the senator's prickly independence of the administration, in fact, that has made him suspect to the party's conservatives. They always doubted — with good reason — that Dole truly believed what they believe.

But it's hard to see why partisans thirsting after ideological purity would see an oasis in George Bush. In 1980, he was the only real obstacle to Ronald Reagan, whose economic proposals he compared to the quaint superstitions of primitive tribes.

His only discernible quarrel with Dole on matters of philosophy was that Bush pledged not to raise taxes under any circumstances, cross his heart and hope to die, and his rival didn't.

Dole's heresy wouldn't be a handicap in the general election. His contrast with Bush would also nullify Dukakis' advantages. Democrats wouldn't be able to portray Dole as a son of privilege, a politician with a list of titles and no achievements, a cipher whose role in the last eight years was that of a boxing fan in a ringside seat — enjoying a great view but staying comfortably out of the action.

Next to Dole, Dukakis would look like the Ivy League aristocrat.

Nor would Dukakis find it easy to blame Dole for Reagan's failure. Unlike Bush, who gets tied to everything that has gone wrong in this administration and nothing that has gone right, Dole could disassociate himself from such embarrassments as Ed Meese, the budget deficit and the arms sale to Iran, while claiming a large share of the credit for lower tax rates, economic prosperity, the INF treaty and the end of the Persian Gulf war.

GOP primary voters were alarmed at the speck in Dole's eye but oblivious to the beam in Bush's. They concluded that they would be better off with Bush's tax policy than with Dole's, forgetting that they would be better off with Dole's than with Dukakis'.

Facing a campaign that threatens the real possibility of defeat, Republicans have reason to regret their infatuation with Bush. The Democrats don't.

He knows his state capitals!

You no doubt heard the bad news that a survey revealed America's youth doesn't know diddly about geography.

I was watching television and there was a follow-up to the survey in which a reporter asked some kid in New York City how many people he thought lived in the United States.

He answered, "Like, you know, about a million and a half."

There were a million and a half people trying to cross the street in front of this brain-dead bozo.

But kids aren't the only ones who don't know anything about geography, and I'm not talking about being able to locate the Caspian Sea.

There are adult human beings in this country who can't name five state capitals outside their own state.

The reason I know this is I am probably the greatest living expert on state capitals, and for years I have been amazed how many otherwise intelligent people think St. Louis is the capital of Missouri.

The reason I am probably the world's greatest living expert on state capitals is because my parents gave me one of those United States map puzzles when I was 6. I didn't get what I wanted — a pony — so all I did all year was mess with this puzzle.

I don't care where you went to school or how much money you've made or how much your wife is involved in the Junior League. If you think St. Louis is the capital of Missouri (unless you're a Missourian, of course), you are a geographic bimbo.

Many have tried and many have failed to stump me on a state capital question. It's like trying to stump Isaac Newton on gravity.

Think you know state capitals? OK, a little test. Grade yourself honestly.

1. The capital of Florida? You thought it was Orlando? It probably would make sense to have the capital of Florida in Orlando, but it's in Tallahassee.
2. The capital of Illinois? Chicago makes sense, but it's Springfield.
3. California? No, it's Sacramento. The paper there is called The Bee.
4. Washington? Not the one on the Potomac, the one where apples come from. Olympia. It's also the name of the local beer.

5. Oregon? Salem.
6. Kentucky? Frankfort, and they don't hold the Derby there.
7. South Dakota. Pierre. I once met a man from Pierre, S.D. He said he bowled a lot to pass the time.
8. North Dakota. Bismarck.
9. Montana. I have an ex-wife who lives there. I got ex-wives living everywhere. Helena is the capital of Montana.
10. Nevada? They don't have time for much of the state's business in Las Vegas. The capital is Carson City.
11. New York? You really didn't say New York City, did you? How embarrassing. It's Albany, where Mario Cuomo lives.
12. Four American state capitals begin with the same letter as their state. Can you name them?
Was your first answer, "Philadelphia, Pa.?" Harrisburg is the capital of Pennsylvania, dummy.
The correct answers are: Oklahoma City, Okla.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Dover, Del.; and Honolulu, Hawaii.
As far as Missouri is concerned, if you don't know the state capital, it's your duty as an American to go somewhere and find out.
I'll expect your answers in a week.

New Ku truck gadgets don't help news

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — From frigid rural winters in Iowa and New Hampshire to steamy city summers in Atlanta and New Orleans, ponderous vehicles known as Ku trucks have become a ubiquitous feature of the nation's presidential selection process.

Owned and operated by local television stations throughout the country, the trucks are named for the large satellite uplink "dish" that folds into their rear cargo bay and transmits signals on the Ku band.

Before Ku technology became widely available in recent years, television stations relied upon smaller equipment vans for "remote," or off-site, live coverage of news events in their communities, but they could operate only within a limited area.

Ku trucks are not similarly constrained. They transmit signals to a communications satellite in geosynchronous orbit more than 22,000 miles above the earth, and those signals then are beamed back to the station. Thus, a Ku truck can provide live television coverage from almost any place on the planet.

But acquiring that capability is an expensive proposition. The basic, no-frills Ku truck sells for about $400,000. However, the more popular, fully equipped models — loaded with electronic bells, whistles and other gadgetry — can cost $800,000 to $1 million.

News departments at stations throughout the country rushed to buy them — but they now are hard pressed to figure out what to do with their new toys.

"The ultimate question in using satellite news gathering technology is whether local audiences can be better informed, not simply impressed," says Jeffrey McCall, a member of the Communications Department faculty to DePauw University in Indiana.

"Showing off satellite capabilities and flashing a 'Newstar' logo on the screen only perpetuates the whiz-bang image of television that many viewers already hold," adds McCall in citing these examples of the "inane uses of the technology:

- A week-long "live via satellite" series on the glorious colors in one state's woodlands.
- An account of a meeting that occurred during the day and concluded hours before the evening newscast. Footage of the meeting was taped (a routine practice), but the reporter and Ku truck crew remained at the deserted site so they could claim a "live via satellite" account.

• A report on South Carolina police routinely dismantling a moonshine still — broadcast on an Indiana station hundreds of miles away.

In this presidential election year, many stations believe they finally have found a means of justifying their extravagant acquisitions — through selective coverage of the campaign.

Thus, "Newstar 8," "Satellite 12," "Skycam 3," "Skycom 7," "Spacelink 22," "Live Star 5," and scores of other Ku trucks converged on Iowa for its precinct caucuses, New Hampshire for its primary, Atlanta for the Democratic National Convention and New Orleans for the Republican National Convention.

But because they restricted their coverage to those venues, and because too many television reporters are not qualified to cover national politics, they generally offered viewers only a caricature of the campaign — not a professional account of it.

At the two parties' conventions, for example, the local television journalists specialized in wafting "softball" questions to members of home state delegations rather than attempting to seriously report upon or analyze news events.

One of television's dirty little secrets is that very few local stations do an adequate job of reporting on government and politics in their own states and communities.

They need to spend more time improving their skills at home while leaving local coverage of the presidential campaign to the networks that were formed, in part, to provide national and international news coverage for their affiliates.

Quayle defends military record at National Guard convention

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Democrat Michael Dukakis kept up his attack on Republican economics with a claim that families are struggling harder than ever under President Reagan, while Dan Quayle countered questions about his military record with assaults on Dukakis' defense policies.

The countercharges occurred Wednesday against the backdrop of wrangling over when Dukakis and Vice President George Bush would debate, and polls showing that Bush's post-convention lead was narrowing.

Quayle fared well in one of those surveys, which showed support for his selection as the Republican vice presidential nominee and his service record during the Vietnam War.

Two polls Wednesday indicated that the surge Bush received during last week's Republican National Convention already was dissipating. An NBC-Wall Street Journal survey put the vice president's margin as 44-39, while a Harris survey pegged it at 49-47. Both leads were within the margin of error of three percentage points, indicating the race is a dead heat.

In the NBC-Journal poll, 64 percent said Quayle's military record should not be an issue and 27 percent said it should. Also, 42 percent of registered voters approved of Quayle as the GOP vice presidential nominee, 27 percent disapproved and 30 percent were not sure.

Quayle, saying "I can take the heat," told an audience of 1,000 current and former National Guard members in St. Louis he was proud of his Guard service. Quayle has been dogged since his nomination last week with allegations that he pulled strings to get into the Guard and avoid duty in Vietnam.

Dukakis, repeatedly criticized by Republicans as being soft on defense, was assaulted on that front Wednesday by Quayle and Reagan.

As part of a Democratic effort to counter such Republican criticism of Dukakis on defense issues, Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen was speaking today to the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in Chicago.

The Texas senator and World War II bomber pilot addresses the group just three days after Bush and Quayle spoke.

Dukakis, touring the industrial states of Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania after picking up the endorsement of the AFL-CIO leadership in Washington, took aim at the Reagan administration's claims to seven years of growth and prosperity.

Conceding that more Americans are working today than at any time in history, he said average family income has remained stagnant.

The AFL-CIO has 14 million members, and President Lane Kirkland said Wednesday the endorsement should be worth a net of 2.5 million votes for Dukakis.

In Los Angeles, Reagan told a rally that Quayle, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, "has more experience dealing with national security affairs than the head of the other ticket."

Bush jumped on Dukakis on Wednesday for vetoing a 1977 Massachusetts bill that would have required teachers to lead children in saying the pledge.

"I would have signed that bill" and let the Supreme Court wrestle with the constitutional question, Bush said in a joint appearance with Reagan.

Courts have ruled such laws to be unconstitutional.

"If the vice president is saying he'd sign an unconstitutional bill, then in my judgment, he's not fit to hold the office," Dukakis said.

The two campaigns sparred over the timing of campaign debates for the fall, with Dukakis aide Paul Brontas saying it was "inexcusable" for Bush to decline dates of Sept. 8 and 14 established by organizations interested in staging the confrontations.

Quayle addresses Guard convention.

Fires threaten Yellowstone campground

By The Associated Press

New wildfires ignited as hundreds of soldiers fanned out along fire lines, while a huge blaze threatened one of Yellowstone National Park's most scenic areas and flames came within a mile of a nuclear missile silo in Montana.

In Oregon, Gov. Neil Goldschmidt declared an emergency Wednesday night, clearing the way for deployment of the National Guard to help fight raging fires. Crews also struggled against blazes in Idaho, Washington and California.

The Boise Intergovernmental Fire Center, which coordinates fire-fighting in the West and Alaska, said 66,000 fires have blackened 3.3 million acres in drought-plagued 1988, 300,000 acres more than in 1986, considered the region's worst year.

"Obviously, we've got a wild year here," said spokeswoman Bernie Pineda.

In Montana, fire broke out Wednesday afternoon a half-mile from a Minuteman II nuclear missile site between Great Falls and Lewistown, the Air Force said.

The out-of-control blaze reached 400 acres early today but winds pushed the flames 3 miles from the unmanned site.

(AP Laserphoto)

Forest fire rages near Cooke City, Mont.

Eleven firefighters and a tanker were dispatched to the site just in case, said Capt. Donald Plana of Malmstrom Air Force Base.

Firefighters in Yellowstone hoped for continued low winds to help keep the 97,600-acre North Fork fire from moving the one mile to an evacuated campground and hotel complex.

About 360 visitors were evacuated Wednesday as flames advanced to within 1 1/2 miles of the Canyon compound.

"It's a hassle," said visitor Pat Bentz of Prineville, Ore. "I just hope I don't have to go through this kind of thing again."

The evacuation left only firefighters and reporters to contend with the heavy smoke that obscured the sun and veiled views of the 308-foot Lower Falls and 109-foot Upper Falls.

Ten fires involving 355,000 acres were burning in Yellowstone, closing five other campgrounds, the Grant Village hotel area and the south entrance.

Firefighters at the 156,500-acre Clover-Mist fire in northeastern Yellowstone received aid from 635 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., who took over mop-up work on the fire's east flank in the Shoshone National Forest.

To the south in Grand Teton

National Park and the Bridger-Teton National Forest, firefighters planned to guide a 16,000-acre fire toward Yellowstone's southern border, where they hoped it would join two other blazes and consume all available fuel.

To the east, Bighorn National Forest officials hoped to contain an 11,000-acre fire by tonight.

In southern Montana, about 600 more firefighters headed for the 28,000-acre Storm Creek fire in the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness. Management of the fire-fighting was handed over Wednesday to a top-level team from Alaska.

Southeast of Helena, crews neared containment of a 16-day-old blaze that destroyed more than a dozen structures. Firefighters on Wednesday began hand-burning the last troublesome area along fire lines surrounding the 37,200-acre blaze.

A raging fire on the steep slopes of Hells Canyon at the Idaho-Oregon line forced crews to move their base camp to escape the flames. The fire mushroomed Wednesday from 1,200 acres to 2,000.

Oregon's state forester, James E. Brown, requested National Guard aircraft to help map the fires.

EPA wants strict dumpsite regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long arm of the Environmental Protection Agency is reaching out to the local town dump — and the huge metropolitan landfill as well.

EPA, in its first major effort to regulate the land disposal of household trash and garbage, is proposing rules that officials say would force nearly every municipal dump to take steps to protect the environment.

Announced Wednesday, the plan would require all of the nation's municipal solid waste landfills to install often-expensive monitoring equipment to detect pollution of groundwater supplies.

The proposal, not expected to be popular with local governments, would require the cleaning up of dumps found to be leaking contaminants into underground aquifers.

The draft regulations would force operators to put waterproof covers over dumps when they are closed and would set restrictions on where a new dump can be located.

Many dumps that open after the rules take effect, probably not before 1991, would have to install bottom liners to prevent leakage and have systems to collect the polluting liquids found in dumps.

"It's a very strong protective rule," said J. Winston Porter, assistant EPA administrator for solid waste and emergency response. "In some cases, people are going to have to spend a lot of (compliance) money."

The plan would leave many compliance details up to states, so long as a dump did not impose any greater danger to humans than a 1-in-10,000 chance of contracting cancer from water contaminated by a dump's leachate.

Porter told a news conference that states would have flexibility to operate their own compliance programs with an underlying proviso: "We don't care what you do, but you cannot leak."

The proposal would apply to an estimated 6,000 solid waste landfills — 78 percent of them owned by local governments — that handle about 80 percent of the 160 million tons of household refuse produced each year, he said.

At least one of every four municipal dumps is believed to be violating one or more state groundwater-protection standards, he said.

Porter said the dangers posed by municipal dumps can be seen in the "Superfund" priority cleanup list, where nearly one of every five facilities awaiting decontamination was once a municipal solid waste landfill.

Around the nation, less than a third of the operating dumps have groundwater monitoring systems, only 15 percent have bottom liners and only 5 percent have leachate collection systems, according to EPA.

Polish police crush strikes; activists claim miners beaten

JASTRZEBIE, Poland (AP) — Riot police crushed strikes at three southern coal mines and beat some men after dragging them from the mines, activists said today. Witnesses said some strikers at one colliery escaped underground.

Despite the police raids in this coal-rich region where miners nine days ago began Poland's most serious strike wave since 1981, activists said strikes continued in the Baltic ports of Szczecin and Gdansk and at the Nowa Huta steel mill outside Krakow.

The Borynia mine in Jastrzebie and the Morcinek mine in nearby Koszyce were cleared of strikers during the night, according to workers from each of the mines. All strikers were evicted from the nearby Moszczenica mine except the 40 who managed to elude police and descended into the mine shaft with bread and lanterns, witnesses said.

The state-run news agency

PAP, in a brief dispatch, said miners "left the mine" at Morcinek and also reported the strike ending at Borynia. It did not mention the Moszczenica mine.

"I was convinced the police would just try to intimidate us and not rush us, but it didn't turn out that way," said Francinek Cichon, a member of the Morcinek strike committee.

He said police detained Andrzej Andrzejczak, leader of the Morcinek strike committee, and beat at least six men at the Borynia mine and an unspecified number at the Morcinek mine. He said none required hospitalization.

The raid at the Borynia mine began shortly after a column of about 100 police vehicles entered Jastrzebie, Cichon said.

One striker said at least 30 vehicles blocked the mine's main gate. The miners then linked arms, sat down and began to sing hymns, said the man, who refused to give his name.

ZOMO riot troops ordered strikers to leave, but the miners did not budge until the troopers began to drag them out by their clothes, the miner said. Police herded men into waiting buses and drove them home, he said. Management told men to return to work Friday.

Government spokesman Ryszard Straus said all but a few strikers had left the Moszczenica mine and that the mine was working. He said about 20 strikers were still inside.

No action was taken at three other mines on strike in Jastrzebie — the July Manifesto, 30 Years of People's Poland and the Jastrzebie Mine, activists said. Before the raids, labor leaders said 10 coal mines — all in the coal-rich Silesian region — in addition to the docks and shipyards, were occupied by strikers demanding legalization of Solidarity, higher wages and better working conditions. PAP said eight mines were affected.

The strikes, which began with a walkout at the July Manifesto mine, evolved into Poland's worst labor unrest since the government crushed Solidarity in 1981. They have idled at least 100,000 workers at more than 20 enterprises.

Strikes in Gdansk closed the last key division of Poland's busiest waterfront. Tons of high-grade export coal sat in rail cars at the bulk-loading terminal, idle since Monday.

Riot police sealed off strikebound enterprises including the Lenin shipyard, where the Solidarity free trade union movement was born eight years ago.

PAP said strikes ended peacefully Wednesday at the Lenin, Victoria and Marcel mines and that strikers gave up at the Andaluja mine a day earlier.

Police invaded a bus depot in Szczecin early Wednesday, and 150 strikers who had been holed up there for a week yielded quietly. A strike at the Mieszko coal mine in Walbrzych ended Tuesday night in similar fashion when police broke down the barricaded gate.

Chile's government ends its emergency measures

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The country's military leaders have lifted all state of emergency measures for the first time since President Augusto Pinochet seized power in 1973, a move the opposition greeted with cautious approval.

Wednesday's decree comes just days before the four-man ruling junta is expected to nominate Pinochet, an army general, as sole candidate in a presidential referendum slated for October.

Interior Minister Sergio Fernandez, in a news conference, told reporters the presidential decrees lifting the emergency "will take effect upon publication in the official bulletin," probably today or Friday.

Opposition leaders said they hoped the move would increase the likelihood of a clean referendum. But they said it should have come sooner and that it remained to be seen if the government would actually allow citizens to fully exercise basic political freedoms.

The two measures are a state of emergency and a state of disturbance to internal peace.

Under the state of emergency, the government is authorized to suspend publication and broadcasts by news media and restrict public gatherings.

The state of disturbance measure permits Pinochet to order the arrest and detention of opponents for up to 20 days; send into exile citizens deemed dangerous to internal security; order internal exile for up to three months, and restrict freedom of information and public gatherings.

Lawyer Gustavo Villalobos of a Roman Catholic human rights organization told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that the lifting of the states of emergency could allow most of Chile's 504 political exiles to return.

In London, an Amnesty International report issued today said clandestine groups linked to Chile's security forces have increased their attacks on government opponents and become a major force of political repression.

More than 100 people have been assaulted or kidnapped in the past 18 months, while hundreds more have received death threats, said the London based international human rights group.

Emergency measures have been in effect since Sept. 11, 1973, when Pinochet led a coup that toppled the government of elected President Salvador Allende, a Marxist. Such measures have been lifted before but never all at once.

Fernandez said the government believed it could do without the emergency powers because authorities had succeeded in establishing order within Chile.

A leading pro-government politician, Hermann Chadwick, said the decision "means that the country can rest assured that the upcoming electoral event will be held with full democratic guarantees."

Cherokee woman separates Indian fact, myth

Editor's Note: This is the last in a series of articles concerning the Battle of Adobe Walls, which took place over 100 years ago in the Texas Panhandle between white buffalo hunters and Plains Indians. Today's story is about an Indian woman living in today's Texas Panhandle.

By MARILYN POWERS
Lifestyles Editor

For many years the mainstays of prime time television were Western movies and series, and a big attraction at movie theaters were shoot-'em-ups that featured cowboys for heroes.

These films may have been entertaining but not wholly accurate, according to Lottie Eller of Panhandle, a member of the Texas Indian Commission.

According to Mrs. Eller, who is a registered Cherokee, the native Americans who were usually portrayed as savages adept at torture and terrorism were not shown in their true light.

"We laugh a lot at Western films. You're going to get more people to go to movies if you make a hero out of a cowboy than out of an Indian.

"In later years, the Indian got a better break. They went to Hollywood and demanded, 'If you have Indians in a movie, you use Indians.' They began using them for advisers," she said.

Among the more truthful films concerning native Americans are Broken Arrow and Windwalker, a fairly recent release that had the courageous and novel idea of using Indian dialogue, with subtitles in English.

Most Indians are shown as being stern and serious, but "Indians are hilarious. We have an enormous capacity for laughter," Mrs. Eller said.

The practice of scalping or otherwise mutilating a victim was not originated by Indians but was the idea of the Spanish and other settlers, or "invaders," as Mrs. Eller called them.

"The whites and Spanish put a bounty on the Indians when they first came here. They collected the bounty by scalping Indians (to prove their kills). The Indians then learned to scalp.

"The U.S. military had orders to cut off Indian heads, put them in boxes and ship them to Washington. They took cranial measurements and studied the brains. The heads are stored in the Smithsonian now," Mrs. Eller said.

Another contrast between Indian and white man was the use of Nature's bounty.

"You must understand the Indian and his relationship to Mother Earth. An Indian would never do anything to hurt Mother Earth. To the Indians, buffalo slaughter by white hunters was sacrilege. It was like hurting your mother," Mrs. Eller said in reference to the influx of buffalo hunters on the Plains. These hunters would kill masses of buffalo for their hides, leaving the carcasses to rot. By contrast, the Indians killed only what they needed, and had a use for all parts of the animal.

"When an Indian killed a buffalo, he knelt on one knee and put a hand on the buffalo and apologized for having killed him. The Indian thought that was the courteous thing to do," she said.

The human body was also sacred to the Indian.

"The Indian was buried very, very carefully. The human body was a very, very sacred thing to them," Mrs. Eller said.

Native Americans' reverence of nature was used as the basis for an anti-pollution commercial aired on television in recent years. An Indian brave was seen canoeing across a placid lake, or standing on unpopulated ground, and when he looked at the ground and saw the litter and debris left by man, he turned toward the camera as a tear rolled down his cheek.

"If we could get the U.S. government to listen to us, I bet we could get a group of Indians together and go about the United States, teaching about Mother Earth. I'll guarantee you, pollution would stop.

"If the white man had never invaded this country, we'd have clean rivers, land and air," Mrs. Eller said.

Indian massacres of settlers are a common theme in American history, and the outrages against Indians took a back seat.

"On the Trail of Tears (when eastern Indians were forced from their homes to go to settlements set aside for them by the U.S. government), 4,000 Cherokee Indians perished by being whipped, beaten, shot and starved to death," Mrs. Eller said.

"The Indians are the most timid, gentle people you've ever met. They're not crazy and barbaric, but they get angry just like white people do," she said.

One common belief about Indians that is true is their sensitivity to alcoholic beverages.

"An Indian's body does not accept alcohol like others do. That's a true fact. Their bodies are more sensitive to it than any others," Mrs. Eller said.

One Indian belief that Mrs. Eller has no trouble reconciling with her own way of life is the medicine or holy man.

"I would never be so impudent as to run a medicine man or holy man down, because I respect them.

"I am a member of the Church of Christ and I believe it 100 percent. The Church of Christ and Indian superstitions don't blend, but I find peace between both of them.

"The powers of the medicine man still exist today," Mrs. Eller said.

Perhaps one reason why so many beliefs about native Americans are incorrect is that their point of view is not written down.

"The Indians did not like to write their languages down. Many tribes do not have a written language. They passed their songs and music from person to person; they're not written down. It's the same with Indian history.

They don't write it down, not because they can't read or write, but because it's not something we do.

"Seventy-five percent of American history is a distortion of the Indian, because all American history is written from the white man's point of view. History as the Indian sees it would be so contrary to the accepted version that no one would accept it," Mrs. Eller said.

American Indians prefer to be called native Americans, although other less respectful terms have been applied to them.

"Red man" is not offensive to Indians, but it is not one we particularly like. One term offensive to the Indian is 'vanishing American.' We are the fastest-growing population in the United States. We do not like to be called a minority.

"If you want to know who the 'vanishing American' is, it's my husband — he's a farmer," she said.

She decided to seek an appointment to the Texas Indian Commission because she wished to do something to help her people, not just the Cherokees, but all tribes represented in Texas. The three main Texas tribes are the Tiwas, Alabama Couthattas and Texas Kickapoos, she said. There are 70,000 American Indians in Texas who are federally registered members of recognized tribes, but over 650,000 Texans claim to be part Indian, according to Mrs. Eller.

She was appointed to the commission in March 1987 by Governor Bill Clements to serve a six-year term. Her duties are to aid members of the three main Texas tribes, promote the American Indian and help create a better understanding between the Indians and the other people of Texas.

The commission is not a welfare agency and does not dispense money. It acts as a liaison between native Americans and resources and services available to them through other agencies.

Included in the commission's Lottie Eller is a registered Cherokee and commissioner for the Texas Indian Commission. Her necklace is from one of the Plains tribes, the Kiowa, who were involved in the Battle of Adobe Walls.

concerns are education, housing, drug and alcohol abuse, prison problems, and child abuse. "We have the same problems everybody else does," Mrs. Eller said.

Since her appointment, Mrs. Eller has learned of hundreds of native Americans residing in the Panhandle, including Pampa. "I had a black woman here about a month ago who said it was better to be black than Indian. She had some Indian in her background. That shook me up, and it hurt.

"My mother was a Cherokee Indian and always taught me to be proud of that. I never thought that it wasn't chic to be an Indian," Mrs. Eller said.

"Since I've been on the commission, I've never felt such peace of mind at helping other people. It's a tremendous feeling to know you're doing something to help somebody," she said.

Although the commission's services are limited to federally registered or enrolled Indians, she agrees with an Indian chief who, when addressing a gathering of part-Indians, said, "You're as much Indian as you are in your heart."

Punishment far exceeds crime for humiliated 7-year-old

DEAR ABBY: I just read a news item in the Palm Beach Post that brought tears to my eyes. A mother dressed up her 7-year-old son like a pig, made him sit on the front porch with his hands tied behind his back, blue fingerprint on his face and a cardboard pig nose taped to his head. She hung a sign around his neck that read, "I am a dumb pig. Ugly is what you become every time you lie and steal. Look at me squeal. My hands are tied because I cannot be trusted. This is a lesson to be learned. Look. Laugh. Stealing. Bad boy!"

The mother was charged with a misdemeanor (child abuse) and freed on her own recognizance. Abby, my blood is boiling! Doesn't the woman realize the humiliation she put upon her little boy, probably for life?

I just had to write to you because I need to express my anger.

FLORIDA CHILD LOVER

DEAR FLORIDA CHILD LOVER: The mother who abused her son in this manner needs to be educated. Humiliating her son publicly will not prevent him from lying or stealing. By branding him a liar, thief and a "bad boy," she is labeling him as a person who cannot be trusted — and that is exactly what he will live up to. This well-intentioned mother is guilty of child abuse.

DEAR ABBY: A little background information: My husband's income is down 35 percent to 40 percent from last year, and down 60 percent from the previous year as a result of the recession in this part of the country. I've had to give up my cleaning lady, make my own clothes instead of buying them, sell my fairly new car to eliminate the high payments and cut corners wherever possible. My family is comfortable as long as we watch our expenditures.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

I have worked in a department of a large company for several years with a dozen or so people. Since the beginning of the year, there have been two marriages and four babies — each requiring gift money. Now, two more are having babies.

I have been approached to contribute $20 to a pool so we can buy something "big" instead of a lot of little things individually. Abby, I generally spend $5 to $10 for a baby shower gift, so I told the collector I hadn't planned on spending quite that much. I received a shocked look in return.

I feel guilty not going along with her request, but I really can't afford it. I need to know how to handle these "donate-so-much" situations that will continue in the future.

Please don't use my name or location. Sign me ...

ECONOMICALLY SQUEEZED

DEAR SQUEEZED: Your initial response to the collector was the very best. Buy a gift in the amount you can afford and present it individually. Your candor is refreshing. To thine own self be true.

...

DEAR ABBY: I need your opinion on something that has been bothering me for a long time. Shouldn't a widow be remembered with an anniversary card on the day of her wedding anniversary even though her husband has died?

My children stopped sending me cards three years ago when their father died. They still expect me to send them cards and gifts on their anniversaries, but they don't do the same for me anymore.

Is that fair?

HURT IN PRESCOTT, ARIZ.

DEAR HURT: Sending a "Happy Anniversary" greeting would be inappropriate, but it would be a very thoughtful gesture if your children remembered that day by inviting you out for a special lunch or dinner.

People are eating them up! To order your copy of Abby's favorite recipes, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something constructive could develop at this time through an old friend. Your pal may be part of an arrangement where you can also fit.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You are now in a cycle where secret ambitions can be fulfilled, providing you are prepared to do something about them. Stop wishing and start working.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you've been contemplating putting a particular plan into action, delay no longer. Your effectiveness is closely linked to your level of enthusiasm.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) All through the day try to keep in your mind's eye the objective that is of most importance. Concentration enhances the possibilities for success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Take ample time in formulating an important decision you may have to make today. You don't want to overlook something obvious.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Have more patience and persistence today to wrap up a nuisance chore that you have thus far left half-finished. Get it off of your agenda now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In a rather unusual way you might learn an object lesson today from someone you don't particularly admire. However, you won't resent receiving it.

Kickoff Classic to open football season

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)—Nebraska linebacker Broderick Thomas remembers the last time he "guaranteed" a victory for his team. It turned out to be a disappointing loss to Oklahoma. He's keeping his mouth shut this time as the second-ranked Cornhuskers prepare for Saturday night's Kickoff Classic with Texas A&M that officially opens the 1988 college football season. "I'm just taking it easy," said the Huskers' outside linebacker. "I'm just happy to be alive. I just want to play football."

Last year, Thomas was more outspoken. He proclaimed the 1987 Cornhuskers "the Hell Raisin' Tour," and made bold predictions. However, two of them didn't pan out—including a bitter 17-7 loss to Oklahoma during a 10-2 season. Thomas has been so outspoken in the past that Coach Tom Osborne has had to defend him on several occasions.

"I don't think I've been around a player who loves football more or wants to win more than Broderick," Osborne said. "Basically, I think people think Broderick is a hothead, out to have fun." Osborne says Thomas is not really the braggart he may seem to be in the news media. "As far as being quieter or not, I don't know," Osborne said of Thomas this season. "Broderick is Broderick. I think maybe he will show a little different tact in how he handles questions."

He has so far, in answering questions about Saturday night's game at Giants Stadium. Asked to defend Nebraska's linebacking corps against claims that Texas A&M has the best linebackers in the country, Thomas said: "You all just watch the game and watch it close. It's going to be a great game. A&M is going to be a great team. I basically don't have anything to say about the game. I'm ready to play."

As for his Nebraska team in general, Osborne isn't quite sure yet of its capabilities, despite its

No. 2 ranking and favorite's role Saturday night. Texas A&M, coming off a similar 10-2 season, is ranked No. 10. "I think number one at this time of year in the rankings doesn't mean much," Osborne said. "In college football, you're losing about half your people every year so I'm not even sure how good we are."

Nebraska has had 26 consecutive winning seasons, which ties Penn State (1939-64) and Alabama (1958-83) for the NCAA record for most winning seasons in a row. Three top Cornhuskers probably will miss the Classic while Texas A&M apparently is healthy. Nebraska's junior center Jake Young suffered a knee strain at practice Tuesday and received treatment at the Nebraska training room Wednesday. Placekicker Chris Drennan, with a thigh pull, and middle guard Lawrence Pete, who returned to practice this week after being out with mononucleosis and strep throat, probably will miss the nationally televised game. "They have seven starters back from a great defense," Osborne said of Texas A&M, which beat Notre Dame 35-10 in last season's Cotton Bowl. "It's going to be very hard to move the football on this team."

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill has chosen sophomore quarterback Bucky Richardson to start the game. But Sherrill said he wouldn't hesitate to revert to last season's triple quarterback system that led the Aggies to their third straight Southwest Conference title. Richardson, the most valuable offensive player in the Cotton Bowl, was glad to hear the decision. "I would hope if I go in and move the team and put points on the board, I'll stay in the game," Richardson said. "But that's a decision for Coach Sherrill to make."

Twins 11-1 against Tigers

By The Associated Press

Even though the Minnesota Twins have been a nightmare for Detroit this season, the Tigers don't plan on losing any sleep over it. Dan Gladden and Kirby Puckett hit home runs to highlight a six-run second inning as Minnesota defeated Detroit 8-2 Wednesday night and finished the season series with 11 consecutive victories over the Tigers.

The Twins had five extra base hits in the second inning off Frank Tanana, 14-8. In winning 11 of 12 from Detroit, the Twins outscored the first-place Tigers 65-18 after dropping the first meeting this season 7-0. "They're a good ball club, but so are we," Tanana said. "I'm not going to lose any sleep over it. You just tip your cap and say good riddance. You're glad the nightmare is over."

Puckett went 4-for-4, adding a double and two singles to his 19th home run. Minnesota added two runs in the fourth on a run-scoring single by Gladden, who scored on Puckett's double. "They're not making errors," Puckett said. "They're just wondering 'what do we have to do to beat them?' We just seem to score runs and play well against them."

Detroit manager Sparky Anderson is wondering what he must do to stop Puckett and Co. "He's killed us all year long," Anderson said. "He must have 16 RBIs or so against us. Really ... Puckett, (Kent) Hrbek and even Gladden have killed us this year."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was California 4, Boston 3; New York 7, Oakland 6; Chicago 6, Toronto 4; Cleveland 7, Milwaukee 2; Texas 7, Kansas City 4 and Baltimore swept Seattle by identical 4-3 scores with the nightcap going 12 innings.

Twins starter Fred Toliver, 5-3, pitched 7 2-3 innings and allowed seven hits. He lost his shutout when Matt Nokes hit his 14th homer with two outs in the sixth. Angels 4, Red Sox 3

Roger Clemens lost his fourth consecutive decision for the first time in his career as California beat Boston at Fenway Park. Mike Witt allowed six hits in eight-plus innings and Tony Armas hit a two-run homer for the Angels.

The Red Sox scored two runs in the ninth, but Bryan Harvey came on and got his 13th save. Yankees 7, Athletics 6

Ken Phelps' three-run homer highlighted a five-run, eight-inning rally in the bottom of the ninth inning as New York beat Oakland 7-6. Trailing 6-2 and facing A's ace reliever Dennis Eckersley, Claudell Washington and Don Mattingly led off the bottom of the ninth with singles and Phelps followed with his 20th homer. Jose Canseco hit his major league-leading 33rd homer, a two-run shot in the ninth that put Oakland ahead 6-2. White Sox 6, Blue Jays 4

Carlton Fisk hit a two-run double as Chicago stopped its six-game losing streak and beat Toronto in a rain-delayed game at Exhibition Stadium. Bill Long, 5-9, ended his five-game losing streak. Fred McGriff hit his 30th homer, a two-run drive in the Blue Jays' eighth that finished Barry Jones. Indians 7, Brewers 2

Joe Carter homered and drove in three runs, leading Cleveland over Milwaukee at County Stadium. Tom Candiotti, 10-8, allowed five hits and won his second straight game since coming off the disabled list Aug. 8. Rangers 7, Royals 4

Robby Witt pitched a three-hitter for his ninth straight complete game and Mike Stanley's two-run double keyed a four-run rally in the eighth inning as Texas beat Kansas City at Arlington.

McKnight medalist in U.S. Amateur tourney

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP)—Not surprisingly, Tom McKnight had only one goal on his 34th birthday. "I just wanted to go out and have fun," McKnight said, and so he celebrated the occasion by capturing the qualifying medal Wednesday in the 88th U.S. Amateur Championship.

McKnight, a fuel oil distributor from Galax, Va., had experienced amateur golfing success mainly in his home state after giving up hopes of a pro career in 1980. That changed Wednesday for McKnight, who beat out 290 other players for the U.S. Amateur medalist honors. "To do well among the best players in the country really means a lot," said McKnight, who was reinstated to amateur status in 1984. McKnight shot a 4-under-par 66 on The Homestead's Cascades Course and, coupled with a 1-under 71 on Tuesday at the mountain resort's Lower Cascades layout a day earlier, was at 5-under 137 for the two days of stroke play qualifying. That left him one shot ahead of Eric Meeks, a former Arizona All-American whose 138 included a 67 over Cascades on Wednesday. "I'm just happy to be in match play," said Meeks.

Pampa scrimmages Tascosa

The Pampa Harvesters scrimmage Tascosa tonight in Harvesters Stadium, starting at 6 p.m. with the junior varsity teams. Tascosa, a 5A school, is considered a playoff contender this season. Their quarterback, Tim Johnson, is touted as District 3-5A's best, all-around athlete.

It will be the final scrimmage for the Harvesters, who open the season Sept. 2 at home against Canyon. Pampa's first District 1-4A game is Sept. 16 at Dumas. The homecoming game this season is Oct. 28 against Randall County.

Players end holdout

By The Associated Press

The holdouts are over for Mark Bavaro and Rueben Mayes, while Tony Eason is hoping that the season isn't over for him. Bavaro, the New York Giants' All-Pro tight end, ended his holdout by agreeing to a new contract and reporting to camp Wednesday. Mayes, an All-Pro tailback with the New Orleans Saints, also came back into the fold of his NFL team, if a bit grudgingly. They were among a handful of players who came to terms as NFL teams prepared for the opening of the season Sept. 4. Among the others were linebacker Matt Millen of the Los Angeles Raiders and guard Tom Newberry of the Los Angeles Rams. Eason, meanwhile, said he was not surprised to learn the New England Patriots intend to place him on the injured reserve list next week, when NFL rosters have to be reduced to the regular-season limit of 47 players. "If you can't control the football, it's pretty tough to play in this league," said the quarterback who suffered nerve damage in his right arm because a splint he was wearing to hold a separated shoulder in place was tied too tightly. "It's pretty odd that the only non-functioning nerve in my entire body controls a specific part of my occupation."

Eason, the Patriots' top draft pick in 1983, has been unable to throw anything but job passes since reporting to training camp in July. Bavaro, who will be entering his fourth season, has been an All-Pro for the last two and has appeared in two Pro Bowls. Bavaro's signing left another All-Pro, outside linebacker Carl Banks, as the Giants' lone holdout. Asked if he was close to signing Banks, general manager George Young replied: "It only takes one phone call."

Mayes, still bitterly convinced he is worth more money, said he will end a week-old walkout and return to the Saints because his only other option was retirement.

Cowboys need to go on shopping spree

For Texans, the 1980's are a time of change. An influx of Northerners has forced us to admit there is a world beyond our borders that we can no longer ignore. Falling oil prices have brought our economy under siege. And the Dallas Cowboys may be on the way to their third consecutive losing season. Some may consider this kind of thinking alarmist. After all, the Cowboys have posted a 2-1 mark in preseason play. Monday's win over Chicago was the first back-to-back exhibition victory since 1985, which was, by the way, the last winning season in Dallas. A good omen for 1988, right? Well...maybe. It's certainly not a bad omen, but don't forget that both victories were the result of some well-placed turnovers (for Dallas that is). Most teams can't be counted upon to cough up the ball six times in a single game. And even before the opening kickoff, the Cowboys are plagued by injuries. Virtually every linebacker has done time on the injured reserve list. Steve Pelluer, pegged as the starting quarterback, suffered a concussion when he took on Chicago's Dante Jones, although he is expected to start in the preseason finale against Houston. Safeties Victor Scott and Bill Bates were also injured Monday night and have been scratched from next week's roster. But even as a healthy squad, the Cowboys have only marginal prospects of seeing any postseason play. Besides having to face the Redskins, Giants and Eagles in the brutal NFC East, Dallas just isn't the team it used to be. When the Cowboys began back in 1960, it took them six years to put together a winning team. At that time, Tom Landry was a new force on the horizon, and he has since led Dallas to 20 straight winning seasons. But that enviable winning streak may be part of the current problem. Over the course of 20 years, during which time the Cowboys became known as "America's Team," Dallas has been content with its football program. That's as it should be. After all, if something's not broken, there's no need to fix it. But for almost three years now, something has been broken, and it is time to fix it. Suggestions on how to remedy the situation could probably run into the thousands, but there seems to be one glaringly obvious problem. The Cowboys, quite frankly, lack talent. Dallas needs a quarterback. It also needs a linebacker. The Cowboys drafted Ken Norton Jr. in the second round, but he's not quite ready for outside linebacker after playing inside in college. It's time for Dallas to start shopping around the league for some quality replacements. While that may sound like sacrilege to Landry, who is not in the habit of making training-camp trades, the alternative is not especially appealing either. The idea of a trade is not a new one, except perhaps in Dallas. Other teams seem to get what they need, one way or another. And for the Cowboys, this is an idea whose time has come. If a lowly sports writer is thinking it, then you can bet that Landry, Gil Brandt and Tex Schramm have thought it, too. The question is, what is keeping the Cowboys' management from wheeling and dealing for better players? A trade is always a risk. You've got to give something of value to get back something of value. And judging from the Cowboys' track record in recent trades, they fear they will come up on the short end of the deal. But if the Cowboys hope to play with the big boys over the next couple of years, it is a concept they need to become comfortable with. They've tried to make the best of a bad deal. Now it's time for Dallas to roll with the changes.

Green demands 'rematch'

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson and Mitch Green agree on one thing: Green, who has risen to instant fame as Tyson's sidewalk sparring partner, was more like the heavyweight champion's punching bag.

Green, a boxer who lost in the ring to Tyson two years ago, met the same fate in a pre-dawn scuffle Tuesday outside a Harlem haberdashery. He met reporters Wednesday to give his version of the hum-dinger on 125th Street.

"Mike Tyson hit me and ran like a sissy," he said.

Tyson's description, issued a few hours later, was equally succinct: "He hit me first, I hit back and the fight was over... faster than Spinks," a reference to Tyson's first-round knockout of Michael Spinks earlier this year.

Green demanded a rematch with Tyson, but said he would not drop criminal charges against Tyson even if he agreed to one. Green also said Tyson hit him after he told the champ he did not fight hard in their 1986 bout because he had been cheated by promoter Don King.

In his statement, Tyson dismissed Green as "a punk and a true coward" who filed a criminal complaint as "a publicity stunt."

"I can beat this guy any time, anywhere, any place," Tyson boasted. "I will teach him a lesson in the ring that he should have learned already."

But first, he said, Green would have to survive "some good tough preliminary fights so that he's ranked again."

Tyson says Green ripped his shirt and shoved into him, "ranting and raving" that Tyson and King owed him money.

ance Wednesday at a Harlem police station where he was to receive a summons charging him with simple assault, a misdemeanor. The boxer's publicist said that Tyson had to see a physician because the broken hand with which he hit Green was hurting.

At his news conference, Green — his left eye puffed closed, a large cut on the bridge of his nose — offered this version of his encounter with Tyson at Dapper Dan's Boutique, where the champ was picking up an $800 jacket around 4:30 a.m.

"When I got there he was there with a lot of his friends. I approached him. I said, 'Mike, what you doin' here? What's up?" "I told him that when I fought him (in 1986) I did not fight him that night because Don King (cheated) me out of my money.

"(Tyson) said he did beat me... He said, 'We can do this now.' I said, 'Do what?'

"We walked outside. He said, 'We can do this now.' To make up for that fight we had back then. I said, 'What?' At that moment, he was fixing his rings on his hands, like brass knuckles... He sucker punched me."

"I tried to get to him and his friends held me. He never knocked me down... He shook his hand like a little sissy and ran."

Cubs edge Astros 3-2

CHICAGO (AP) — If the Houston Astros hope to catch the first-place Los Angeles Dodgers in the NL West, they have to stop being so generous.

They gave away too many runs Wednesday in dropping a 3-2 decision to the Chicago Cubs, said Manager Hal Lanier.

Rafael Palmeiro doubled to open the ninth and scored the tie-breaking run on a single by Vance Law. Both hits came off reliever Juan Agosto, 10-1, who saw his 10-game winning streak end.

"It shouldn't have come down to that," said Lanier. "We gave them the first two runs and that run shouldn't have made any difference.

"You can't give away runs and expect to win ball games."

The two unearned runs in the second and sixth innings came off starter Nolan Ryan, who allowed only four hits and struck out nine before leaving for a pinch batter in the seventh.

The unearned run in the second inning was a baseball oddity.

With two outs and a man on first, Shawon Dunston struck out. But the ball bounced into catcher Alex Trevino's mitt. Trevino flipped it out to the mound as Ryan was walking off the field.

Dunston went to first and Law advanced all the way to third on the play, in which Trevino had to tag Dunston or throw to first for the out. Greg Maddux then singled to score Law.

"I had started to walk off the mound, I didn't realize what happened," Ryan said.

"I just let the ball go, it was reaction," said Trevino. "I was concentrating too much on the runner. It was my fault."

Trevino made amends somewhat when he singled in the third, went to second on a sacrifice by Ryan and scored on a single by Gerald Young to tie the game.

In the sixth, Andre Dawson reached on an error by Bill Doran, went to second on a balk and scored on a single by Palmeiro.

Replay expected in AFC East Division

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — AFC East coaches generally agree the 1988 season could see a replay of 1987, when all five teams challenged for the division title that Indianapolis won in the final game.

Buffalo coach Marv Levy picks Miami, because of quarterback Dan Marino and the Dolphins' winning tradition under Don Shula.

Shula hedges his nod to the Bills by emphasizing every other team's strengths and the tight race a year ago.

But most predictions are nothing more than wild guesses, although if you had to pick a non-contender, it would be the New York Jets.

Otherwise, it could be a replay of last year, when all five teams were tied at 6-6 with three games to go. "You can't afford a mistake or a slip," says Ron Meyer, who took over an 0-13 Colts team with three games to go in 1986 and led them to a 12-6 mark since, including their first division title in a decade, last season.

The Colts gained instant respectability with the acquisition last October of All-Pro running back Eric Dickerson from the Los Angeles Rams. The deal also sent rookie linebacker Cornelius Bennett, the Colts' unsigned top draft pick, to Buffalo, and helped make the Bills contenders, too.

The Dolphins and Patriots finished a game behind Indianapolis. The Bills, who had won just eight of 48 games the previous three years, were 7-8. And the Jets were only one game behind Buffalo, finishing 6-9.

Buffalo's hopes are based on four young, emerging stars at four of the most important positions — quarterback Jim Kelly, defensive end Bruce Smith, Bennett and Shane Conlan, who became more effective when he moved to inside linebacker after the Bennett trade.

If they get the running they expect from rookie Thurman Thomas and second-year man Jamie Mueller, they could win.

The Colts' big edge is Dickerson, who played only nine games last year but still led the AFC with more than 1,000 yards rushing. Indianapolis isn't likely to catch its opponents by surprise this year, though, and Meyer says repeating as champion will be very difficult.

"I think whenever you go after the divisional championship as an opponent, the sense of urgency to prepare and compete is that much greater. You can't sneak up on anybody," he says.

"Quite frankly, in the past, the Colts probably have been considered a win on our opponents' scorecard. That isn't taken for granted anymore." The Colts were 3-3, including two victories with replacements during the players' strike, when General Manager Jim Irsay pulled off one of the biggest trades in NFL history with the acquisition of Dickerson.

The Colts' offense improved drastically with Dickerson and the steady performance of Albert Bentley, first in the AFC and second in the NFL with 1,578 all-purpose yards.

But going into the season, the Colts have problems on the offensive line, where Ron Sol and Kevin Call were holdouts. The oft-injured Gary Hogeboom is the quarterback, with Jack Trudeau behind him.

"We're better right now, but unfortunately that isn't always reflected on the scoreboard," says Meyer.

Turner leads LPGA money winners

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

BUFORD, Ga. — There was little reason to think Sherri Turner would seriously contend for the money title on the LPGA tour this year.

After four seasons on tour, she had never won a tournament and had topped the $100,000 mark in earnings only once — last year, when she finished 20th with just over $118,000.

Turner, helped by victories on consecutive weeks in the LPGA Championship and the Corning Classic, finds herself atop the money rankings with $290,963 going into the $265,000 Women's World Championship, which features the biggest first prize in LPGA history — $81,500.

"I feel like this tournament is pretty much going to determine player of the year," Turner said.

"Whoever wins this tournament will make a big jump, not just in money, but in (player of the year) points," she said.

"This is the first time I've had a shot at player of the year and I really want to finish up strong," Turner added. "But if nothing else happens this year, I can say I've had a great year."

Turner currently ranks third in player of the year points with 34, trailing Nancy Lopez, with 46, and Japan's Ayako Okamoto, with 42.

The winner of the World Championship gets nine points, and the next four finishers receive 4, 3, 2 and 1 points, respectively.

After this week's tournament, only six more official events will figure in the player of the year chase.

The World Championship features a select international field of only 16 players, four more than participated in the first eight of these late-season tournaments featuring the top players of the year.

Steelers' founder dies

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers founder Art Rooney Sr., died today, eight days after being hospitalized for a stroke, officials at Mercy Hospital said.

Rooney, 87, had been in a coma since Monday.

"At 7:45 a.m. this morning The Chief... passed away in his sleep with his family at his bedside," said Dr. Theodore Gelet, Rooney's personal physician.

Rooney was admitted to the hospital Aug. 17 after becoming dizzy at the National Football League team's offices at Three Rivers Stadium.

Although he appeared to improve last weekend, he deteriorated and slipped into a coma Monday.

Rooney was partially paralyzed on his right side. Even before the latest change, doctors gave him little chance of full recovery.

Hockey player sentenced to day in jail

TORONTO (AP) — A judge's "message" about violence in hockey, in the form of an assault conviction for an on-ice incident, is sparking debate among NHL players and coaches over who should police what happens on the rink — the league or the courts.

But for Minnesota North Stars right wing Dino Ciccarelli, convicted Wednesday of assaulting an opposing player with his stick and sentenced to a day in jail and fined $1,000, there's no question.

"I just think the judge wanted to use me as a precedent, but if I'm being made an example, then the NHL is going to have to step in and stop all the fighting and stick swinging," Ciccarelli said.

"I think it's ridiculous," he said. "I don't see where these people are getting involved in the hockey aspect. I think the league office should be taking more charge and taking more control of it. Obviously, they are using me as a scapegoat and the judge wanted to use me as an example."

Ciccarelli, 28, is believed to be the first NHL player given a jail term because of an on-ice incident, league officials said. Assault charges were filed after a Jan. 6 game in which Ciccarelli twice hit the Maple Leafs' Luke Richardson on the head with his stick and punched him in the mouth. Richardson, wearing a helmet, was not injured.

Ciccarelli was released after spending less than two hours in jail Wednesday. His attorney, Don Houston, filed an appeal.

"It's time now (that) a message go out from the courts that violence in a hockey game or in any other circumstances is not acceptable in our society," Toronto provincial court Judge Sidney Harris said after finding Ciccarelli guilty of assault. North Stars general manager Jack Ferreira, and some others in the organization, said the matter never should have gone before a judge.

"It seems that hockey's been able to police its own and deal with these matters instead of going to court," Ferreira said.

Said club president Lou Nanne: "The judge is apparently saying that the courts are going to be involved in anything that's violent. We think Dino already paid a severe enough penalty with the amount of money paid for being suspended."

Ciccarelli was ejected from the game and suspended by the NHL for 10 games, which cost him more than $25,000 in salary.

"It's just ridiculous, one of the stupidest things I've ever heard," North Stars captain Craig Hartsburg said of the judge's ruling. "I don't think there's any reason for the courts to intervene in any sports field. If the league can't monitor itself, then maybe the courts should go after the league rather than the players themselves."

NHL president John Ziegler, while calling the case's outcome disappointing, added, "it has long been our belief that sports are not above the law."

Canada's largest protestant church accepts gays as ministers

TORONTO (AP) — Leaders of Canada's largest Protestant denomination, the United Church of Canada, decided Wednesday that homosexuals can be considered for the ministry.

The vote by the church's general council was 205 to 160 and followed months of heated debate in which one-quarter of the church's 4,000 ministers and 30,000 of its 860,000 members signed a declaration opposing the ordination of homosexuals.

The decision at the council's biannual meeting in Victoria, British Columbia, came after midnight Tuesday and followed a marathon debate. It was expected to lead to resignations and a possible schism in the United Church, which was founded in 1925 as a union of the Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian denominations in Canada.

More than 350 delegates finally adopted this resolution:

"That all persons regardless of their sexual orientation, who profess faith in Jesus Christ and obedience to Him, are welcome to be or become full members of the United Church. All members of the church are eligible to be considered for ordered ministry."

While some argued that "sexual orientation" could mean those with homosexual inclinations, conservative delegates interpreted the phrase as welcoming candidates who actively practice homosexuality.

"If we pass this, we do a far greater injustice to the people who sit in the pews," said the Rev. Jim Somerville of Ottawa. "They will vote with their feet and their dollars if we're not sensitive to their needs."

Ordination candidate Bill Siksay of Ottawa, a member of a national group for gays called Affirm, said: "I'm very happy about what we've done so far. But no one in Affirm is under any illusion that tomorrow our task in the church will be any different."

Opponents of homosexual ordination vowed to continue their fight, saying the recommendation changes the church's constitution and requires a poll of all 4,205 congregations.

Bush's, Bentsen's sons discuss guard service

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sons of George Bush and Lloyd Bentsen say no strings were pulled to ensure their entrance into the National Guard during the Vietnam War.

George W. Bush, son of the GOP presidential candidate, and Lloyd M. Bentsen III, the son of the Democratic vice presidential candidate, discussed their military service in response to the flap over whether family influence helped Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle join the Guard and avoid being drafted for combat in Vietnam.

The younger Bush and Bentsen were Guardsmen together at Ellington Air Force Base in Houston. Both said they applied to enter the Texas Air National Guard in 1968 when it was inevitable they would be called to serve in the military.

But the two, who had known one another in Houston before joining the same Guard unit, said they enlisted on their own without use of their fathers' influence. Their fathers have affirmed that position.

Both men said in interviews that they signed up after personally contacting the commander of the fighter group they wanted to join at Ellington.

Circumstances of joining the National Guard have become an issue in the case of Quayle, a youthful advocate of the Vietnam War who is now a hardliner on defense in the Senate.

During the Vietnam era, entrance into the National Guard was viewed by some as a way to avoid being drafted and sent to Vietnam. Quayle has denied any such motivation.

Quayle's student deferment from the draft was about to expire in 1969 and he had been called for his pre-induction physical, an indication he was about to be drafted. Most of those drafted during the period were sent to Vietnam.

A retired Indiana Guard official acknowledged Tuesday that he told the Guard personnel office to hold open a space for Quayle after receiving a call from a Quayle family employee in 1969.

Both Bush's son and Bentsen's son acknowledged it was inevitable they would have to serve in the military after they graduated from college, so they chose National Guard service.

The younger Bentsen, 43, railed at a claim by New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu that Bentsen's father had rushed to get his son a spot in the National Guard when he learned of an opening.

"He was absolutely, categorically wrong," the son said.

"Shortly after I graduated, I went to a party with some of my friends and one of the people introduced me to Brig. Gen. Walter Staudt, who was the commander of the 147th Fighter Group in the Texas Air Guard." Bentsen said Staudt told him at a later meeting that because of his master's business degree, "he could use someone like me" for an accounting and finance officer.

Bentsen said he went home and discussed the matter with his father, a businessman at the time, and decided to enlist. He became a finance officer "as luck would have it," serving "past my six-year requirement," and achieving the rank of captain, he said.

In the younger Bush's case, the circumstances also involved talking to Staudt.

"It was obvious that somewhere I would have to serve and I was fully prepared to do so," said Bush, whose father was a decorated fighter pilot in World War II. The 42-year-old son said he, too, wanted to be a pilot.

"I heard the National Guard was looking for pilots," he said. He called Staudt, who confirmed the unit did need new pilots. Bush said he could not remember how he learned of the need for pilots or knew to call Staudt, but that ultimately he became the third of six new pilots who were selected in that Texas unit.

He said he passed the pilot training exam, then served 18 months on active duty, six months in Houston and another 12 months of pilot training in Georgia where he flew F102 fighters, then flew on a regular basis until 1973.

Bush said he supported the Vietnam cause and he "jumped at the opportunity" to be a pilot, joining the Guard because he could not be assured a pilot job in the other military branches.

"I was going into the service one way or the other," he said. Some senior pilots from his unit did fly in Vietnam on a voluntary basis, he said.

Bentsen's son said he was motivated to join the Guard partly because he had just finished graduate school.
