Police Department gets mainly positive comments at hearing

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A crowd of over 50 Pampa residents turned out Monday evening to witness the Pampa Police Department public hearing for accreditation.

Three police chiefs from departments around the nation heard a variety of comments, both positive and negative.

Lilly Fuller, a Pampa resident, said that she could find nothing good to say about the PPD.

"They do harass people. They follow people. They haven't been worth 15 cents to me," Fuller said.

She said that police could not solve a burglary at her residence and that they often drove around her house.

"I will not call them anymore, that's for sure. They drive around and around and around my house. Why do they do that? They also spend hours talking on the telephone. Who they talk to is none of my business, though," she said.

After the hearing Chief Robert Eberz said he would investigate all complaints of his department.

Another citizen who complained about the department was James Roy. He said that Pampa "has a good police force with a couple of bad apples."

"When I was arrested I didn't get my rights read to me. These people have provided alcohol to minors and they have harassed and manhandled me," Roy said.

After the meeting Roy said he had witnessed an officer trying to pick up girls and giving the beer to the teenagers.

"I had to leave my job because one of the officers, who was too young to drink, bought a beer at my place of employment. It cost me my job," Roy said.

Larry Hollis, managing editor of The Pampa News, briefly addressed the panel on the improved relations between the local media and the police department.

"I've seen a great change in the police department in the last five years. They've been very cooperative since they've been moving toward accreditation," Hollis said.

The three members of the panel asked Hollis if the media had been allowed to help formulate a media-police department policy.

"We didn't get everything we wanted, but I'm sure they had some things they weren't crazy about," Hollis said, adding that both the newspaper and radio stations had made input into the policy.

Chief Richard Crouch of the Moulton, Ga., Police Department led the panel that also included Chief Timothy Garner, Noblesville, Ind., and Chief Patrick McMahon, West Chicago, Ill.

Crouch said the panel would equally evaluate every comment.

"We shall review them in light of the accreditation standards. If their comments impact standards, we will address those," Crouch said.

The vast majority of testimony about the PPD was overwhelmingly positive.

"I've been in Pampa since World War II. I've found it to be a great town. We have found the department to be extremely helpful. I can't commend our department highly enough," said Fred Neslage.

Neslage, who has been a member of the Pampa Industrial Foundation, said that police had recently inspected his home after he put in a security system.

"When they got through, I felt like I was living in a tent. They were very helpful in pointing out things we still needed to do," Neslage said.

Dr. Harry Griffith, Pampa Independent School District superintendent, and John Kendall, high school vice principal, spoke to the panel on behalf of the schools.

"We've asked them to patrol at lunch time and they have. Of course now all the kids know the unmarked cars," he said.

"Whenever they've questioned the one of our students, it's always been brief and the student was treated fair," Kendall said.

Griffith said the PPD had been very cooperative in establishing the new drug-dog program in the local schools.

"There is no way we can thank the police department for everything they have done, starting with helping us find a second grader who decided to run home this week," he said.

"We have been pleased with their attitude," Griffith said.

The Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education, based in Austin, sent Ed Laine to the hearing to speak on behalf of the state.

"All of you are aware there are only 79 accredited agencies. We have only five in the state. We hope Pampa is number six," Laine said.

He said that Pampa had been very helpful in sharing information with other departments in the state that are going through the accreditation process.

"Your presence here represents three years of work on their part, much of it under the current leadership. As you review this department, I ask you to remember that many of the policies they are using are less than a year old; most of them are less than two years old," Laine said.

He told the panel he drove over 500 miles to make his remarks on behalf of Pampa.

Crouch said the final decision on accreditation would be up to 21-member board that would review the panel's findings and a videotape of the public hearing.

The department will be notified in November on if accreditation has been granted.

In addition to the public hearing, the accreditation panel members are accepting written comments. They also will take phone calls from 2-4 p.m. today and Wednesday at 665-8481, Extension 289, from residents or agency employees wishing to make comments.

Hurricane Gilbert roars toward Cayman Islands

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Hurricane Gilbert, packing winds of up to 130 mph, hit the Cayman Islands today after devastating Jamaica with fierce rains, flash floods and mudslides, weather and radio reports said.

A ham operator in New York City who was monitoring amateur radio communications in Jamaica said "Kingston is devastated, Montego Bay is hit hard and Ocho Rios is flooded."

"According to them, telephones are down and electricity is down," said the operator, Norm Chwat, an officer with the American Red Cross Radio Club. He also said there was an unconfirmed report a tourist hotel on Jamaica's popular north coast had been wrecked by the hurricane.

Another unconfirmed report said 30 people were killed in Jamaica, where the storm Monday tore off rooftops, disrupted communications and poured up to 10 inches of rain on the island. Thousands fled their battered homes and telephone communications were cut off in many areas.

The National Weather Service and amateur radio operators said they received reports of heavy damage in Kingston, the capital of 750,000, on the southeast coast and Montego Bay on the northwest. Twenty-foot waves pounded the northern resort of Ocho Rios and tourists were evacuated from beachside hotels.

At 8 a.m. CDT, the National Weather Service said Gilbert was centered near latitude 19 north, longitude 81.5 west, or about 20 miles south of Grand Cayman, the U.S. National Hurricane Center reported. It was moving west at about 15 mph.

Noel Risnychok at the hurricane center said the strongest part of the storm was buffeting the Cayman Islands, a British dependency about 300 miles northwest of Jamaica. There are three islands in the chain, all low-lying, and its 23,000 residents depend mostly on tourism for a living.

The Caymans, known most for their clear waters and ideal conditions for skin diving, in recent years have become a haven for offshore financial institutions. Columbus discovered the islands in 1503.

Attempts to get on-site information in the Caymans were unsuccessful early today as all telephone lines into the islands were reported busy.

"It's safe to assume the Caymans are getting a pounding," Risnychok said. "Right now, they're bearing the brunt of the hurricane and that's probably going to continue for the next five or six hours."

The hurricane center said Gilbert's maximum sustained winds climbed to 130 mph and the storm was expected to grow stronger as it moved over open water.

City still battling landfill fire; efforts taken to end burning

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Minutes after city officials breathed a sigh of relief, thinking their problems were solved at the city landfill Monday, fire broke out again.

At 3:09 p.m., Pampa firefighters were called to monitor city workers as they worked again to snuff out the smoldering fire that had erupted from the demolition site at the Pampa Landfill.

Shortly before firefighters were called to the landfill, Director of Public Works Nathan Hopson had reported city employees had seen no evidence of the underground fire for almost a week.

Today Hopson said a fire had broken through at the west end of the demolition site. "It was going pretty good," he said.

While firefighters and city workers battled the first fire, smoke started coming from two more places, he said. Then a large crack developed, he said, which could make firefighting efforts even more difficult.

Hopson said city workers stayed at the site until about 7 p.m. Monday and it appeared the fire was under control this morning.

Methane gas, generated by decomposing garbage, could be the cause of Monday's flare-up, Hopson said. When the gas is formed, it migrates through the trash buried at the landfill, he said. "It could be that the gas was migrating and hit the area that was smoldering," he said.

Fire first erupted at the landfill on Aug. 10 in the demolition site where demolished building materials, appliances and other heavy items are dumped, said Larry Simpson, sanitation superintendent.

Following state regulations, city officials contacted the Texas Air Control Board (TACB) when the fire began.

Following up on complaints from local citizens, TACB representatives investigated and found cause to issue to notifications of violation to the city of Pampa, both for having a fire burning at the landfill.

Gerald Hudson of the TACB said today the city had the fire out within three or four days after receiving the notices of violation, which was "fairly prompt," he said. "Anything past 30 days and we would go into enforcement action, no matter what kind of effort or lack of effort is made."

He added, "At this time, based on what we know, we don't anticipate any enforcement action (towards the city)."

TACB was immediately notified of the fire Monday, he said. "They did call in and let us know that another fire had broken out, and they called back this morning to let us know that they had put it out," he said.

"Fires do happen in that kind of situation once in a while," Hudson said. "As long as they put it out quickly, that's normal. But we can't allow burning to go unchecked and unregulated."

Hudson said the TACB has had no problems with the city of Pampa complying with regulations. "They've run the landfill for years with very little problems, so that indicates they must be doing something right."

The underground fire is in an area approximately 20 to 25 feet deep which holds about 2½ years' accumulation. Though dirt has been spread over the site, pockets of air remain, providing oxygen for the fire.

Heat from the fire draws air through the face of the landfill area and is vented through cracks in the earth at the top, creating a furnace.

City officials are battling the fire by covering the site with dirt, as they try to stop any more oxygen from entering the area.

Heat from the initial blaze was so intense, it was two weeks before city workers were able to get close enough to begin trying to smother the fire, officials said. Once the fire died down enough, tons of dirt, left over from renovation of the city waste water plant, was used to cover the area and contain the fire.

EPA officials suggest all residents test for radon levels

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The problem of radon contamination in the home appears to be serious enough to warrant testing for the deadly gas in every residence in the nation, the government's chief environmental and health agencies say.

New surveys show particularly high levels of the invisible, odorless gas in Minnesota, North Dakota and Pennsylvania and the average home in those states contains radon above the Environmental Protection Agency's guidelines, according to figures released Monday at a joint news conference of EPA and the Public Health Service.

EPA has estimated radon-caused lung cancers could be killing 20,000 people out of the nation's annual toll of 130,000 lung cancer deaths.

And though EPA hasn't changed its estimate that 10 percent of some 80 million homes have radon above the guidelines, new surveys in seven states and on Indian lands in two more showed more than 29 percent of all homes above the guidelines.

Combined with the results of 10 states surveyed last year, that means one home in four of the 12 million in the two surveys was above the agency's guideline of 4 picocuries per liter, said Rich Guimond, head of EPA's radiation office.

"We think we've documented the problem enough to recommend that every home be tested," EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas told the news conference.

"Even if we are off by (a factor of 10), the problem is severe enough so that we ought to do something about it," said Vernon Houk, assistant surgeon general attending the news conference to announce a formal public health advisory calling for radon testing.

Houk said the health toll from radon "probably exceeds by 10 times outdoor air pollution," and physicians should learn about it to advise their patients.

Radon is a radioactive gas produced in the decay of uranium found in all soil and rock in at least trace amounts, and present in the outdoor atmosphere normally at a concentration about 0.5 percent of EPA's 4 picocurie "action level." Homes tend to concentrate radon indoors.

Radon kills by leaving its own radioactive decay products in the lung, irradiating the tissues for a lifetime. Smoking, itself the major cause of lung cancer, increases the effectiveness of radon by 15 times, Houk said.

"If you have any detectable radon in your home, don't permit smoking indoors," Houk said.

"We have not characterized 4 picocuries as safe," Thomas noted, and the agency is studying the adoption of using outdoor background levels as a goal for indoor programs.

At 4 picocuries, EPA believes a lifetime resident increases his or her chance of lung cancer by about 1 percent, a risk level larger than any the agency tolerates in its other programs.

EPA has certified that about 1,000 companies are qualified to test for radon, and the test can be done for as little as $10, Thomas said.

The first thing someone confronted with an abnormal result should do is get it confirmed, "not unlike a lot of other things when you go to see your physician," Houk said.

If action is needed, a majority of homes probably can be fixed for less than $1,000, Thomas said.

In Minnesota and North Dakota, the survey identified "an area similar in severity to the Reading Prong," a well-known narrow area of high-uranium soils extending from about Reading, Pa., across northern New Jersey into New York.

Below is a list of the states surveyed. After each state is the percentage of homes above 4 picocuries per liter; Indiana, 26 percent, 3.6; Massachusetts, 24 percent, 3.4; Minnesota, 46 percent, 4.8; Missouri, 18 percent, 2.6; Pennsylvania, 37 percent, 6.2; North Dakota, 63 percent, 7.0; Indian reservations in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, 20 percent, 2.9.

Thomas discusses radon report results.

Coronado's Rick Smith to leave for Arkansas

Rick Smith, assistant administrator at Coronado Hospital for the past five years, has been named administrator of Community Hospital at De Queen, Ark.

His new position was effective Sept. 1.

Smith will continue to spend two days a week at the Pampa hospital until Oct. 1.

Community Hospital, a 122-bed acute care facility, is a part of HealthTrust, an employee-owned corporation, as is Coronado Hospital.

While serving the Pampa hospital, Smith has had direct management responsibilities over professional and support services and Risk Management.

He coordinated development and implementation of the Extended Care Unit, obtained Sole Community Provide designation for the hospital and has assisted in the development of the hospital's management plans and budgets.

Smith compiled two position papers, "Medicare Capital Reimbursement" and "Rural vs. Urban Rate" for the Texas Hospital Association Panhandle division.

Smith sings bass in the gospel quartet, The Harvesters 4, which has won numerous local awards.

With other area administrators, he presented these papers to Congressional representatives in Washington, D.C.

As coordinator of the hospital's United Way drive, he received the Excellence in Community Service Award from Hospital

Smith

Corporation of American in 1984. He is now serving as president of the Pampa United Way.

In other activities in Pampa, Smith served as the chairman and secretary-treasurer of the Panhandle Division of the Texas Hospital Association and is a member of the American College of Healthcare Executives.

He served on the board of the Tralee Crisis Center for Abused Women and is a member and former president of the local Toastmasters International.

Smith sings bass in the gospel quartet, The Harvesters 4, which has won numerous local awards. They have performed in area churches and have recorded two tapes.

The group plans to stay together and continue to perform at the larger events and programs in the future.

Smith, his wife Leesa; daughter Ashley, 4, and Derrick, 1, will be moving to Arkansas in October.

Bob Sheets, director of the center, said hurricane warnings were issued by Mexico for the northeastern portion of the Yucatan Peninsula, including the islands of Cozumel and Cancun.

The government of Cuba issued hurricane warnings for the Isle of Youth and the western city of Pinar del Rio.

"People in the warned areas of Cuba and Mexico should be preparing for the possible onslaught of a severe hurricane," Sheets said.

The weather center said residents of the Florida Keys also will feel the edge of the storm with rain squalls today. Small craft were warned to stay in port from Key Largo, Fla., to the Dry Tortugas off the west coast of Florida.

Forecasters say the hurricane is moving toward the Yucatan Channel and the southern Gulf of Mexico. "After that, it's uncertain what part of the continental U.S. it will affect," Sheets told ABC-TV's Good Morning America.

Doren Miller, general manager of Radio Cayman, said Little Cayman and many areas of Grand Cayman, the largest and most populous island, had been evacuated.

The Miami News reported residents of Grand Cayman were asked Monday to go to one of the 18 shelters.

Cayman police superintendent Neville Smith was quoted as saying more than 1,000 people took refuge at shelters, but that most people apparently had decided to stay at home.

"We expect the telephone and power out tonight for at least two weeks and the telephones possibly longer," said Marjorie Herrick, an American who has lived in the Caymans for four years. Islanders have been stocking up on kerosene and canned food, she told the paper by phone.

Grand Cayman, which is 22 miles long and at the most 8 miles wide, and the other two smaller islands, are very flat so "there's not a lot of places people can go to get refuge," Sheets said.

Miller, in the Caymans, reported that a lawyer in Jamaica called the radio station and said at least 30 people had died across Jamaica as the brunt of the storm lashed the Caribbean island Monday.

Sustained winds of 115 mph and gusts of 140 mph were recorded in Kingston on Monday as the heart of the storm passed directly over the island, said Sheets.

Amateur radio operator Rafael Estevez in Hialeah, Fla., said Monday he was in contact with other operators in the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Cuba and Jamaica.

Billionaire Bass may fail in attempt to take over Macmillan

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Macmillan Inc.'s agreement to a $2.36 billion takeover by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., doesn't rule out a higher offer from British publisher Robert Maxwell, but some securities analysts believe his effort to acquire the U.S. publishing-and-information giant has been doomed.

"Being a rational person, I would think at this point he would withdraw his offer," Bert Boksen, an investment strategist at Raymond James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Fla., said Monday after Macmillan's deal with Kohlberg was announced. "But Maxwell is known to be unpredictable."

Kohlberg Kravis' $85-a-share cash and securities acquisition, if successful, would conclude Macmillan's struggle to thwart unwelcome takeover attempts by Maxwell and Texas investor Robert Bass.

David Bolderman, an official at the Bass group's headquarters in Fort Worth, Texas, declined to comment.

Andrew Turner, a spokesman for Maxwell at his Oxford, England offices, said, "We've received this report and are studying it."

Wall Street reacted skeptically to whether a higher offer would emerge. Macmillan stock rose 87 1/2 cents a share to $84.75 in New York Stock Exchange composite trading on Monday.

The Bass group, which owns about 9.2 percent of Macmillan's shares, had a $75-a-share offer outstanding for the company, but most analysts believed that was Bass's way of raising the stock's value through takeover speculation. If the Bass group sold its shares to Kohlberg it would make about $75 million.

Analysts were divided on Maxwell's next move. While some thought he would abandon his pursuit of the company, others said he could increase the bid, because his $84-a-share offer was so close to Kohlberg's $85.

"I would not be surprised if we would see more from Maxwell," said Bruce Thorp, who follows the publishing industry for Provident National Bank in Philadelphia. "You might be able to make the argument that his all-cash offer of $84 is more attractive. If so, he's still in contention."

But J. Kendrick Noble, a Macmillan analyst at PaineWebber Group Inc. in New York, said: "I think the KKR-Macmillan bid is probably the last bid. Should Maxwell come back a buck higher, there's no assurance KKR and Macmillan management might not stretch their bid."

Macmillan's deal with Kohlberg marks another multibillion-dollar acquisition for the investment firm, a specialist in leveraged buyouts.

These acquisitions—in which a company is bought largely with borrowed funds that are repaid through its earnings, cash flow or asset sales—remain a frenetic area of corporate takeover activity. Kohlberg is one of the leaders, having played crucial roles in four of the biggest leveraged buyouts of the past three years.

Securities analysts said the Macmillan acquisition also might radically alter the structure of the company, a leading publisher of educational materials with other businesses ranging from direct-mail marketing to the Berlitz chain of language training schools.

Some speculated that Kohlberg Kravis would sell either Macmillan's publishing or information division to help finance the acquisition. Others said Gump's, a Macmillan-owned chain of high-quality retail stores and a mail-order business, might be sold.

Neither Kohlberg nor Macmillan officials would speculate on the possible sale of any Macmillan units.

Under terms of the agreement, a Kohlberg subsidiary will begin a tender offer of $85 cash per share for up to 26.1 million shares.

Cisneros decides not to run again for San Antonio mayor

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Saying the time has come for him to move on, Mayor Henry Cisneros voted not to seek a fifth term, but declined to rule out the possibility of running for a higher office in the future.

The 41-year-old mayor's fourth 2-year term will expire next spring, and Cisneros said he will go into private life.

Along with handing over the gavel to the nation's ninth-largest city, Cisneros also will pass along some major civic projects he once said were the reasons he wasn't interested in seeking higher office.

When his term ends, the popular mayor and one of the country's leading Hispanic politicians will have served his native city for 14 years.

"It's been work, and it's been fun. Mostly, it's been the most engrossing and fulfilling thing I've ever done," Cisneros said at a news conference Monday.

"Basically, I've been at it for 14 years — eight years as mayor and six as council member. That's a long time to go at full throttle," he said.

"Our country believes that eight years in a high office should be enough to get a job done. Presidents serve eight years. Governors serve eight years. And eight years is a good round number for a mayor, especially this one," he said.

Cisneros, who has served on several international commissions, was interviewed by Walter Mondale as a potential vice presidential running mate in 1984 and frequently mentioned as a possible Cabinet-level appointee.

Last year, Cisneros said he would not be running for statewide office because he wanted to devote time to San Antonio projects and to his son, John Paul Anthony, who was born with a congenital heart defect and stomach abnormalities.

Earlier this year, the former president of the National League of Cities declined an offer to make a keynote address to the Democratic National Convention. He said he wanted to devote time to the city projects, which include a controversial $160 million domed stadium proposal and a regional water plan.

Earlier this year, Cisneros, who has met Pope John Paul II and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, was approached by several San Antonio businessmen about the prospect of forming a business to handle business investments.

Cisneros said he has since received numerous job offers, but declined to elaborate.

The mayor's salary is less than $5,000. With two daughters nearing college age and an ill infant, Cisneros supplemented that income with columns and speaking engagements, but had to cut back because of the health of his son and the time-consuming city projects.

"Today is a little sad for me. It has to be," Cisneros said. "But I expect to wake up tomorrow morning, ready to make the most of the next eight months, same pace, same energy, same devotion to the city until midnight of the day before the next mayor takes office."

During his tenure, the bilingual, charismatic mayor helped attract numerous conventions and businesses to the city, including Sea World of Texas, the largest marine life theme park in the world.

He also helped bridge gaps between the public and private sectors and among Hispanics and Anglos, political analysts said.

"He's got a number of important causes that he wants to complete and he wants those causes accomplished without the specter of re-election and I think any normal person would request the possibility of a vacation after eight years," said George Shipley, Cisneros' Austin-based political consultant.

Cisneros, who won his last two elections overwhelmingly, helped attract numerous Hispanics to the polls, said Bob Brischetto, executive director of the Southwest Voter Research Institute.

"He certainly has the charisma to turn out the Hispanic vote and I think the city contest without him is going to be a different contest," he said.

Oil prices rebound on warning by King Fahd on OPEC curbs

NEW YORK (AP)—Oil futures prices, which are trading near two-year lows, could stabilize in coming days amid speculation that Saudi Arabia might take the lead in curbing OPEC production, traders say.

On Monday, crude futures prices skidded below $14 a barrel but surged higher in the final hour of trading after Saudi King Fahd called for joint cooperation between OPEC and non-OPEC producers in establishing production limits.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the October contract for delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude, settled up 31 cents a barrel at $14.49. The contract had dropped to $13.75 earlier in the day, the lowest level since oil traded for $13.73 on Oct. 29, 1986.

Contracts for refined oil products traded on the exchange also rallied at day's end. Wholesale unleaded gasoline for October delivery rose 0.56 cent a gallon to settle at 42.62 cents, while the October wholesale heating oil contract rose 0.71 cent a gallon to 41.68 cents.

George Konikowski, an analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., said Fahd's statement could indicate Saudi Arabia — the world's biggest crude exporter — was moving to take a leadership role and lower its own oil production.

Two years ago when oil prices hit similar lows, Saudi production curbs helped reverse the market's decline, traders said.

"If the king says he doesn't want the market to go much lower you would think the Saudis would set some limits," said Peter Beutel, an energy analyst with Elders Futures Inc. "It looks like prices are going to stabilize in this range."

Monday's early selloff was fueled by anxieties about the continuing world oil glut.

Analysts said Fahd's statement came as the market was looking for positive news following a string of negative indicators that had steadily eroded prices.

Fahd's statement, reported by the official Saudi Press Agency following a weekly government Cabinet session, had a strong impact on the market because the king rarely makes public statements related to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, brokers said.

Before the statement was released, analysts had focused on the inability of OPEC's 13 members to keep within their production quotas despite the worldwide oversupply of oil.

After predicting prices could drop below $13 a barrel by week's end, some analysts reversed their position by the end of Monday's session, saying such an assessment was now overly pessimistic.

Analysts said statements from OPEC President Rilwan Lukman and Venezuelan Energy Minister Julio Cesar Gil had little impact on the market.

Lukman warned the cartel's members that prices could fall to $9 a barrel if members continued to ignore production quotas. Meanwhile, Gil reiterated his call of last week for a special meeting of the cartel's five-member price monitoring committee, before the scheduled Nov. 21 gathering of all OPEC members in Vienna, Austria.

The futures market had speculated for several weeks that settlement of the 8-year-old war between Iran and Iraq would lead to higher world oil prices, if the two OPEC nations could agree with other cartel members to establish production limits.

But since the recent ceasefire, OPEC production has increased and last week the United Arab Emirates announced it wanted to exceed its quota as well.

As more oil floods the market, refiners have taken advantage of the bargain rates to pad their inventories before winter, analysts said.

"Everyone thinks prices are probably at the lowest they're going to see through the remainder of the year," said Ken Miller, senior principal and engineer at Purvin & Gertz Inc. petroleum consulting firm in Houston.

Jury selection begins in gang rape trial

SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP)—A judge ruled that only limited discussion will be allowed in the jury's presence about the sexual history of a 19-year-old woman whose complaint of a gang-rape led to the indictment of 10 men on charges ranging from kidnapping to sexual assault.

After lengthy pre-trial motions by defense attorneys, jury selection finally began late Monday in 229th District Court and continued today in the sexual assault trial of Orlando Garza, 23.

The trial is the first of several scheduled as a result of the woman's allegations.

State District Judge Ricardo Garcia granted a prosecution motion to block references to the alleged victim's sexual history in the presence of the jury without first determining whether such discussion would be admissible evidence.

Defense attorney Albert Pena protested that prior sexual behavior "touches on the very basis of the defense of consent."

Pena also cautioned potential jurors to ignore rumors and media reports in deciding Garza's fate.

"He is on trial here today, not anyone else you may have heard of," Pena said.

Pena told the potential jurors they would have to ignore the extensive media coverage the case has attracted since the woman reported that on the night of March 26 she was abducted and gang raped by a total of as many as 20 men over a period of several hours.

Ten men were indicted on various kidnapping or sexual assault charges. A 14-year-old youth also has been charged in the case.

Witnesses will include the alleged victim and a 12-year-old boy, prosecutors said.

Garza, a 23-year-old native of San Diego, a town of 5,000 about 55 miles west of Corpus Christi, also faces a later trial on a charge of aggravated kidnapping.

State District Judge Ricardo Garcia denied motions by the defense to have the sexual assault trials of Garza and 23-year-old Corando Perez Jr. combined.

Pena and attorney Nago Alaniz represent the two along with three other defendants.

Judge Garcia also denied defense motions to quash the jury panel. The defense unsuccessfully tried to make a case that the jury pool somehow had been stacked in favor of the prosecution. Assistant District Attorneys Rodolfo Gutierrez and Rocky Carrillo are the prosecutors in the case.

Delta crash survivor files lawsuit against airline, pilot

DALLAS (AP)—One of 94 people who survived last month's crash of Delta Flight 1141 has filed suit against the airline and the pilot, alleging that she suffered physical injuries, emotional trauma and economic loss.

The suit, filed Monday by Alicia Hayes, 32, seeks unspecified damages for the crash that killed 14 people at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport Aug. 31.

The flight had originated in Jackson, Miss., and was to fly from Dallas to Salt Lake City when it crashed moments after taking off.

The Dallas woman was not hospitalized, but suffered substantial trauma to her neck and lower back, according to her lawyer, Frank Branson.

"The total horror of the impact is still being felt by Miss Hayes," said Branson, who filed the suit on behalf of Hayes in Judge Adolph Canales' 298th State District Court in Dallas.

Delta "failed to exercise ordinary care that a reasonable aviation common carrier would have exercised," particularly in regard to inspection, maintenance and repair of the Boeing 727 aircraft that crashed after takeoff, killing 14 people, the suit alleges.

The suit alleges that pilot Larry Davis of Greenville failed to exercise proper care in inspecting the aircraft before the flight.

The suit does not name Boeing or Pratt & Whitney, maker of the aircraft engines, as defendants, Branson said, but they could be added through the filing of an amended suit.

Any further responsibility for the woman's injuries would be determined through court motions for discovery of evidence, he said.

"We do know that (Delta's) pilot was flying it, and they had a duty to get my client safely from Dallas to Salt Lake City — and that didn't happen," Branson said.

Spokesmen for Delta and its insurance carrier, U.S. Aviation Underwriters Inc. of New York, declined to comment on the suit.

Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S. Gov't. Patent

"Lazy Way" to Lose Weight Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—A revolutionary new weight loss pill formula, recently invented by two prominent cardio-vascular doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles, has just been perfected and approved by the U.S. government for a hard-to-get patent that guarantees "there has never been anything like it before."

Continue to "Eat Normally" Best of all, it's an effortless "lazy way" to lose weight because it enables an overweight person to lose fat and reduce calories by simply taking the tested and proven new pill. Reportedly, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits or exercise to achieve the ideal weight you desire."

Flushes Fat Out of Body The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles and calories from food that you have just eaten. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

With 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug.

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive.

Now Available to the Public If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W992, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) Opinion

Does government have any sense?

Here's an issue Michael Dukakis and George Bush should be discussing but aren't. An agreement exists that is costing thousands of American jobs. It is regarding the advance of America's most advanced industry, giving the Japanese, Koreans and Europeans a chance to catch up. And the agreement contradicts sound economic principles.

The agreement is the 1986 protectionist limit on "dumping" by Japanese manufacturers of computer memory chips - called DRAMs in computer argot. These are the little microcircuits that store information in a computer. Two years ago, the few U.S. makers of these chips complained that the Japanese were selling the chips in America at below-cost prices in order to conquer our market. This was never proved. After all, companies routinely sell "loss leaders" to reduce inventory or introduce new products. But our government worked out a deal with the Japanese to reduce Tokyo's DRAM imports to the U.S. The Japanese must have laughed all the way back to Tokyo.

Two American companies profited from the agreement, Micron Technology and Texas Instruments, both of whom have had soaring profits since the political fix was put in. "But for the rest of the United States the semiconductor agreement has been a bust," writes Alan Murray in the September edition of PC-Computing. "DRAM prices have more than tripled since the pact was signed, and memory chip shortages have forced computer companies to delay production of new models. Any benefits derived from boosting the profits of the two fortunate DRAM makers have been outweighed by the huge costs imposed on consumers and the computer industry nationwide. 'It's a disaster,' concludes trade expert Gary Clyde Hufbauer. 'A sorry mess,' agrees Fred Bergsten, head of the Institute for International Economics."

Nice work, President Reagan, for negotiating the protectionist agreement. And nice work, Sen. Pete Wilson, for pushing the DRAM limits; great way to win votes from all the people who have lost jobs in the computer industry.

Few Americans realize it, but in computers we're still far away from No. 1. Foreign companies make many computer parts and sell "clones" of some IBM computers. But such companies as AST in Irvine produce computers that lead the world in innovation and computing power. The Japanese don't even come close - yet.

Moreover, America has an even greater lead in computer software. Go into any computer store in Orange County. Look at the software on sale. Virtually every title is from American companies; a couple are from Europe; none from Japan.

The way to keep the lead in computers and software is to get government out of the way. Let computer companies make the machines cheaper, so they sell more of them. And more computers sold means more software sold to new computer owners. By doing the opposite, we retard these two industries and give the Japanese and others a chance to catch up and then surpass us.

Does anybody in government have any sense?

Religious liberty wasn't easy

By MORTON BORDEN

A common belief unites the Christian right and appeals to many who otherwise reject fundamentalist positions: the conviction that the vast majority of Americans are Christians and share — or should share — a set of values based on Christian teachings.

The Christian right also believes that the Founders also held these values and embodied them in the Constitution; and that these elements of the Constitution have been eroded by clever lawyers and other "secular humanists," who have built an artificial constitutional wall of separation between church and state never intended by the Founders.

But the view that the United States began as an explicitly Christian nation, only to have that status snatched away, is a misreading of history — and of the Constitution. And this is not the first time that politically active believers have attempted to make America a Christian nation juridically as well as numerically.

By forbidding religious tests for public office, the Constitution declared that the new country was not legally a Christian nation. Unlike state constitutions, most of which contained religious freedom clauses alongside religious tests for public office, the national government would grant equal citizenship to those of any faith — or none.

Certainly, this is how citizens viewed the Constitution at the time. Constitutional convention delegate Luther Martin of Maryland, for example, complained to no avail "that in a Christian country, it would be at least decent to hold out some distinction between the professors of Christianity and downright infidelity or paganism."

As the Enlightenment waned and evangelicalism swept America, the attempt to restore Protestant Christianity to a position of political primacy became a major goal of those who found the Constitution wanting.

By the Civil War, a full-fledged campaign was under way to put Christ in the Constitution. The petition of Cincinnati Presbyterians to Congress that a "Christian nation with an atheistical Constitution is an anomaly" was typical of most others.

The campaign reached its peak during a time of enormous psychological stress. The Civil War, so it seemed to thousands of Americans, was God's punishment, not only because of slavery, but because He was omitted from the Constitution. With peace, the danger receded, and Americans tended to agree with Horace Greeley's dictum: "The name of God on a plow beam would not make the plow run any better."

For most of the 19th century, efforts to Christianize America instead concentrated on establishing Sunday as a national "Lord's Day" when many commercial and leisure activities would be outlawed.

Abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison organized an Anti-Sunday-Law Convention in 1848, which adopted a resolution "that if the Legislature may rightfully determine the day on which people shall abstain from labor for religious purposes, it may also determine the place in which they shall assemble, the rites and ordinances which they shall observe, the doctrines which they shall hear, the teachers which they shall have over them, and the peculiar faith which they shall embrace; and thus entirely subvert civil and religious freedom."

Ultimately, Congress resisted all attempts to enact a national Lord's Day, although religious lobbyists did prevail on more limited issues.

The struggle between two contending images of America has been a constant of our history. From the beginning, many Americans, unhappy with a Constitution that was undeniably secular, defined the United States as a Christian nation.

They believed that the civil order and spiritual order are interrelated and interdependent and that non-Christians should be tolerated but government, to be strong and virtuous, must be allied with the religion of the majority. This is essentially the message of the Christian right today.

Opposed to this vision has been the view associated most notably with Thomas Jefferson: that all religions have merit, but that religion is a private concern; that Christianity has no monopoly on truth; that government should neither favor nor discriminate and must be divorced from religion.

Jefferson's view of religious freedom, some of his contemporaries complained, exalted individual freedom at the expense of majority rights. Indeed it did, and still does, since Jefferson opposed all tyrannies, of monarchs as well as of the majorities.

Religious liberty did not come easily. It had to be fought for in legislative halls, in constitutional conventions and in the courts.

What has been achieved easily can be lost if the near unity of the Christian right in rhetoric is ever matched by unity in political action.

A sure way for fair testing

There has been a great deal of discussion recently concerning the fairness of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), which is used to determine how many smart young people have.

Studies have indicated white males do better on the test than other groups, including blacks. So, what are we going to do about that?

Are we just going to sit back and say, "Well, I guess that just means white males are smarter than everybody else?"

Of course not. That would make us racist, sexist swine who probably go to see movies like The Last Temptation of Christ and aren't offended by it.

What we need to do about all this is quite clear to me. Why somebody doesn't do well on a test is because he or she doesn't know the answers to certain questions.

The way to get around that is to ask each individual only those questions he or she knows the answers to.

That way, everybody — regardless of age, race, sex, religious affiliation or hat size — would make a perfect score every time, thus virtually wiping out racism and sexism as we know it today.

Lewis Grizzard

The new testing system would work like this: Each individual test-taker would meet first with a test-monitor. To assure any further bias, the monitor would be of the same sex, race, etc., of that individual.

Together they would go over the test. The questions the individual didn't know the answer to would be thrown out in the spirit of fairness, equality and keeping hope alive.

After the individual finished his or her (or its) test, the monitor would grade it and then smile and say, "Congratulations, Arlene (Jesse, Juan, Running Buffalo, Chang, Conchita), you have taken the test and you have aced that sucker!"

These individuals could then go on to the college or university of their choice and become rocket scientists.

The only remaining question here is what do we do about the white males who've been hogging all the good grades on the SAT exams.

Although I'm a white male myself, I still think we should be made to pay a price for having the test geared to us all these years.

We should have no pre-test interview. We should not have the questions we don't know the answers to thrown out.

We should still have to struggle and sweat over questions and cosines and logarithms.

We should still be made queasy and unsure about answering such questions as "What is the capital of Denmark?" Is it Copenhagen or Seattle?

And we should have a difficult time getting into the colleges and universities of our choice because everybody else will have perfect grades on their SATs and there we'll be back in the 1200s.

And since all the rocket scientists' jobs will be taken, I guess the only thing left for us to do is join the National Guard.

Here's what Quayle was really saying

By SARAH OVERSTREET

George Bush says the "Quayle Flap" has died down, and in one respect, he's right. Prospective voters can only take so much stimulus, whether it's hard driving of facts and platforms, or daily revelations in the press that smell up a candidate.

We tend to divide into two camps when a candidate comes under the kind of scrutiny Dan Quayle did: The first camp concludes he's a jerk and loses respect for Bush for jailing him early; and the second believes nobody can be that bad, and decides he's being picked on unfairly.

But the basic "flap" is, essentially, over. Bush hopes his gamble paid off and the numbers in the "you're picking on my man" camp will be enough to preserve his reputation and give him a victory. Those of us in the other camp can only hope now that the period of rapid-fire, headline-making revelations is over, a clear picture of the man who could end up president will emerge.

What kind of guy is Dan Quayle? Well, even if he did use his family influence to get into the National Guard and avoid going to Vietnam — and it sure looks like he did — that doesn't make him unfit to lead. It makes him one of thousands of young men faced with losing their lives in an unpopular war a lot of U.S. citizens didn't believe in.

But that decision, as has been pointed out numerous times already, does illustrate a basic inconsistency in Quayle's philosophy: At the time he chose National Guard service, he was a right-wing proponent of the Vietnam War. What his choice says is, "We all need this war, but you guys go fight it." His rationalization 20 years later is just as inconsistent: He said it wasn't that he didn't want to go to Vietnam, he just wanted to go to law school. Which is to say: "I'm not chicken, I'm just busy. But you guys don't have anything as important to do, so you guys go."

Something that didn't get as much media attention as Quayle's war avoidance, but which shows me more about his character, is his Senate voting record on veteran's issues. He voted against the following proposals:

- To allow veterans to challenge decisions of the Veterans Administration in court.

- To elevate the administrator of the Veterans Administration to a Cabinet-level post (he was one of only 11 senators to vote against this bill).

- To appropriate money for job-training for veterans, and to preserve 186 counseling centers for Vietnam veterans.

There were a few other veterans bills he didn't support, but none seem more important to me than these two: His opposition to compensating Vietnam veterans for cancers caused by Agent Orange, a toxic defoliant sprayed on the jungles of Vietnam by our own government; and granting disability payments to American soldiers disabled by radioactive fallout from exposure to atomic bombs and testing during World War II.

This adds another dimension to Dan Quayle, senator and "veteran":

"Hey, you guys go over there because I'm busy and have more important things to do. But don't expect any sympathy from me if you have to crawl around in stuff that will kill you and deform your children. And don't be coming back 40 years later and complaining you were 'nuked.'"

"Couldn't you guys have joined the National Guard and saved your government some money?"

Out-of-control fire destroys 92 homes in California town

By STEVE GEISSINGER
Associated Press Writer

LAKE WILDWOOD, Calif. (AP)—An out-of-control wildfire zeroed in on hundreds of rural dwellings in the rugged Sierra Nevada today after leveling nearly 100 homes and forcing the evacuation of at least 8,000 people.

The warm, dry winds that drove the fire across 35 square miles of terrain covered with timber and brush continued through Monday night as sleep-starved firefighters struggled to hold their own against the 70-foot-high flames.

At least 142 structures, including 92 homes, were destroyed in an area about 60 miles northeast of Sacramento, authorities said. Some of the homes were valued at $1 million.

A preliminary estimate by the U.S. Forest Service put the loss in structures alone at more than $9 million, and the figure was expected to climb much higher.

"I was coming back from the Bahamas, sitting in San Francisco International Airport, and I see my father's house burning on television," said insurance agent Don Sanzone, 41.

Jim Mowner, a state forestry spokesman, said the continued stiff winds and low humidity were hampering firefighting.

"I would say the fire will burn actively overnight," he said Monday.

The blaze began early Sunday when a transient set fire to toilet paper. The unidentified man was cited for burning without a permit and released, authorities said.

About 4,500 residents of the affluent Lake Wildwood area were forced from their homes Sunday and Monday as erratic winds shifted the blaze.

At least 3,500 people have been evacuated from the nearby communities of Smartville, Rough and Ready, and Penn Valley since Sunday.

Two firefighters suffered second- and third-degree burns. Their conditions were not immediately available.

The fire jumped Highway 20 and headed southwest on Monday, threatening hundreds of scattered, rural dwellings and forcing the latest round of evacuations.

"There are hundreds here and they are pouring in," said Red Cross worker Elizabeth Quirk at the Nevada Union High School evacuation center. "The school buses are bringing in senior citizens, and there are campers and motor homes in the parking lot."

Most schools were closed in the region. Thick smoke made it unsafe to operate school buses, and the Red Cross converted at least three schools into temporary evacuation centers.

By late Monday, the fire had burned an estimated 15,000 acres, or nearly 25 square miles, of western Nevada County.

Flames threatened the high-technology Grass Valley Group, the county's largest employer with 1,000 workers.

The fire reached three sides of the company's sprawling grounds, and destroyed a storage shed. The company produces video equipment used at television stations, and makes special-effects software for national television broadcasts.

The Yuba County Board of Supervisors met late Monday in emergency session to declare the zone a local disaster area, and expressed concern that the fire may threaten Beale Air Force Base near Marysville, 20 miles to the west of the fire and the home base of the SR-71 "Blackbird" spy plane.

The blaze was fueled by drought-dry brush, wood roofs and exploding propane tanks, said state Department of Forestry spokesman Charlie Jakobs.

The greatest concentration of damage was around Lake Wildwood, where at least 15 homes, five boats and a dock were destroyed.

Nineteen other structures outside of the Lake Wildwood area were destroyed, including several residential trailers and agricultural buildings.

Another fire about 80 miles west of Lake Wildwood in the coast range of Sonoma County blackened more than 10 square miles, destroyed several structures and temporarily threatened Pacific Gas & Electric Co.'s geothermal plants.

Altogether, almost a dozen fires destroyed nearly 30,000 acres of timber and brush in California Monday. About 5,000 firefighters were on fire lines statewide.

Scholars doubt Rapture will come today

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—A publishing company closed its offices in the belief that millions of the faithful will be called to heaven today in a prelude to the Second Coming. Most religious scholars and ministers doubt it.

All such forecasts in the past have been wrong, noted Malcolm Tolbert, professor of New Testament interpretation at Southeastern Theological Seminary in Wake Forest.

Nonetheless, a woman who answered the telephone at the World Bible Society in Nashville, Tenn., Monday said the office was closed to give employees time to be with their families. The company published the book by Edgar C. Whisenant that contains the prediction, 88 Reasons the Rapture Will Be in 1988.

"If anyone is left here, they'll be here Wednesday morning," said a woman named Lorraine, who refused to give her last name. "The odds of anybody being right are certainly greater than the odds of winning the recent Florida lottery," Tolbert said Monday.

He noted that such predictions have been made countless times in the past 2,000 years. "Nobody's been right."

Some evangelical and Pentecostal interpreters of biblical prophecy believe "the Rapture" is a sort of prelude to Christ's Second Coming.

But Tolbert said people who believe in the theory support it by plucking various passages from the New Testament.

"People are treating the Bible as sort of a smorgasbord ... and come out with a kind of unified approach that is not justified by any single passage in the Bible," he said. "So what you have is interpretations by people" who are not biblical scholars.

Whisenant, a former rocket engineer, predicted the Rapture would come by tonight. He used mathematical calculations and biblical interpretations to predict that it would occur in the 48 hours of this year's Jewish New Year — 40 years and 120 days after Israel became a nation on May 14, 1948.

The time of the Rapture — by 11 a.m. CDT — was determined according to the hour of sunset in Jerusalem, said KAAV general manager Dianne McArthur, whose Little Rock, Ark., radio station has been carrying Whisenant's Rapture 88 Ministries programs since March.

Whisenant spent most of Monday in Little Rock trying to spread his message.

He fully expects to be taken to heaven today, McArthur said.

Whisenant will not talk with the secular press "because God plainly told him not to sensationalize this," she said.

Whisenant, a 56-year-old self-taught Bible student, has predicted on broadcasts carried by more than 90 radio stations nationwide that Jesus would "rapture the church" — take the faithful to heaven.

But several ministers said the exact time of the Second Coming could not be pinpointed.

"How do they know that?" asked the Rev. M.D. Battle of the Praise Temple Church in Raleigh. "Because Jesus said he didn't even know the minute or the hour. I don't believe (the Rapture) is coming by Tuesday night. Of course, Jesus could come at any time."

The Rev. Tom Vestal of Mount Olivet Baptist Church in Raleigh said: "I have had calls from all over the state from people asking 'Do you think Jesus is coming Tuesday?'"

Five killed in bus crash in northern New Mexico

EMBUDO, N.M. (AP)—A Greyhound bus crashed in northern New Mexico, killing five people and injuring 14 passengers, after colliding with a boulder that fell off a mesa, authorities said.

The bus with 20 passengers and a driver aboard went off New Mexico 68 over the Rio Embudo late Monday about 50 miles north of Santa Fe near the point where the river meets the Rio Grande, State Police spokeswoman Lupita Carrion said in Santa Fe.

The driver and four passengers died, 14 passengers were injured and two passengers escaped unhurt, Carrion said.

The bus had been bound for Albuquerque from Denver when the accident occurred less than a mile north of the Embudo post office, the spokeswoman said.

A large rock tumbled from the mountain as the bus approached, said State Police Officer Harold Zuni.

"It sheered the front end of the bus off," Zuni said, describing the boulder as "about as big as the front end of a car."

The bus "did not go into either river," Carrion said.

It was initially feared that some of the passengers may have been thrown into the river, but O.R. Mascarenas of a search and rescue team said all 21 people aboard had apparently been accounted for.

"I do feel lucky," said Elder Sean K. Jones, a Mormon missionary from Fort Garland, Colo., who escaped injury.

"I felt an impact ... a big concussion and (what sounded like) a loud explosion, kind of deafening," he said.

"All we heard were screams," said passenger David Fuller, 20, of Albuquerque. "People were thrown out of the bus when we hit these rocks here."

Fuller said the driver was "taking it easy," going only 45 or 55 mph, when the crash occurred.

The 14 injured were taken to the emergency room of Espanola Hospital, nearly 20 miles southwest of Embudo, said hospital administrator Grant Nelson.

He said four people were admitted and 10 were treated for lesser injuries and released.

The names of the dead were not immediately released.

Dukakis counters attack on foreign policy

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis countered GOP attacks on his foreign and defense policies, pledging support for the Stealth bomber and assessing U.S.-Soviet relations, while George Bush, bristling at his rival's charge of "McCarthyism," renewed his attack on Dukakis as a liberal Democrat.

The Bush campaign suffered its second setback in as many days on Monday as five members of the vice president's ethnic coalition resigned amid charges of ties to anti-Semitic organizations.

The resignations come on the heels of Frederic V. Malek's decision to leave his Republican National Committee post after a published report said he had compiled a list in 1971 of Jews at the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Bush had appointed Malek to the RNC job.

Democratic nominee Dukakis, stung by GOP suggestions that he is weak on defense issues, was to deliver his evaluation of relations between the two superpowers in an address today in Chicago to the Council on Foreign Relations.

Bush, also in Chicago, was scheduled to give an economics statement to the businessmen's Executive Club before continuing his campaign swing in Jefferson City, Mo., while his running mate, Dan Quayle, campaigned in Bismarck, N.D.

The two presidential candidates were deadlocked in the latest public opinion poll. A Cable News Network-USA Today survey of 1,260 certain voters, conducted last week by the Gordon Black Corp., found 48 percent favored the Republican ticket while 46 percent preferred the Democratic slate.

The margin of error of 3 percentage points makes the race a virtual dead heat.

Stepping up his defense offensive on Monday, Dukakis issued an unusual promise to support the Stealth bomber — a pledge that appeared to go beyond the candidate's previous statements that he supported continued research of the project.

"That bomber was started by a Democratic administration; it was supported by the Democrats in Congress, and it's going to be completed under my administration," Dukakis told workers at a General Electric plant in Ohio.

At a shopping center rally in Illinois, Bush repeated his charge that Dukakis is a liberal Democrat and "card-carrying member" of the American Civil Liberties Union — terms the Democratic nominee used to describe himself, according to the vice president.

"Recently, the governor of Massachusetts accused me of McCarthyism," Bush said. "And it was suggested that when I said he is a card-carrying member of the ACLU that that was McCarthyism; when I say he's a liberal that's ... unfair."

Shouting until he was nearly hoarse, Bush said it was Dukakis himself who said in Iowa, "I'm a very strong Democrat, a liberal Democrat ... a progressive Democrat ... a card-carrying member of the American Civil Liberties Union."

"He says he's that. He's that," Bush said. "I am the vice president of the United States of America, a partner in (the) administration that has turned this economy around, that has put America back to work, that has strengthened our national security and that has enhanced the peace."

At the rally, Bush did not directly respond to Dukakis' criticism that Republicans were attacking his patriotism, using the tactics of the late-Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy.

Earlier in the day, however, in a taped interview with the USA Today television program, Bush was asked what question would he pose to Dukakis and responded: "Do you think the vice president's impugned your patriotism? Were you serious when you suggested to this man who's been in public life for 30 years he is guilty of McCarthyism?"

Dukakis, answering Bush in a separate interview, said, "Oh sure he has. ... You don't run around suggesting to people that a rival for the presidency of the United States is less committed to the Pledge of Allegiance and what it means without impugning his patriotism."

At the rally, Bush made no mention of the resignations from his ethnic coalition but later told reporters, "Nobody's giving in. These people left of their own volition. We're not accusing anybody of anything."

West German hostage freed from captivity in Lebanon

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—West German Rudolf Cordes enjoyed his first day of freedom since being kidnapped in Lebanon 20 months ago. His former captors credit Syrian and Iranian intervention for the release.

But the captors said the midnight Monday release was linked to a Lebanese Shiite Moslem on trial in West Germany for the 1985 hijacking of the TWA jet and the shooting death of U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem.

In a note issued in Beirut, they said if Mohammed Ali Hamadi's release cannot be gained legally, "then we shall be obliged to again resort to violence."

In Bonn, West German television reported early today that a military plane was being sent from Bonn to Syria to pick up the 55-year-old businessman.

His kidnapers released Cordes in Moslem west Beirut. He was later taken to the Lebanese interior minister's home, then turned over to Syrian security forces and driven to Damascus by Col. Ali Hammoud, chief of Syrian intelligence for the Beirut area.

Interior Minister Abdullah Rassi said Cordes "is in excellent health."

A high-ranking Syrian official in Damascus said Cordes would spend the night in the Syrian capital and be turned over to German Ambassador Juergen Herman Schlingensiefen in an official ceremony today.

Seventeen other foreigners, including nine Americans, are still missing in Lebanon and it is believed most are held by pro-Iranian Shiite kidnapers. Longest held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. Anderson, 40, was kidnapped in Beirut on March 16, 1985.

Cordes was the last West German held. He and another West German, Alfred Schmidt, were kidnapped in Beirut in January 1987 in a scheme linked to the arrest in Frankfurt of Hamadi for the TWA hijacking.

Schmidt, an engineer, was freed Sept. 7, 1987.

Hamadi, 24, has acknowledged in a Frankfurt court to hijacking the plane but denies killing Navy diver Stethem. In the murder and air piracy trial Monday, the captain of the hijacked jetliner, John Testrake, testified that he believed Hamadi fired the shot that killed Stethem aboard the aircraft.

The kidnapers' note, one of three issued Monday in Beirut, said the decision to release Cordes "does not mean in any way the abandonment of holy warrior Mohammed Hamadi."

If Hamadi's release cannot be gained legally, "then we shall be obliged to again resort to violence," the note said.

His brother, Abbas Hamadi, 29, is serving a 13-year prison sentence in Frankfurt. He was convicted in April of complicity in kidnapping Cordes and Schmidt in an effort to force West Germany to free Mohammed Hamadi.

In another development, Lebanon radio and U.S. officials said an American engineer who was kidnapped in Lebanon on Sunday overpowered his captors and escaped to Damascus on Monday with the help of Syrian troops.

Another version said Syrian troops in Lebanon rescued the engineer, identified in Washington as Kenneth Wells, after overpowering the kidnapers.

Gunmen abducted Wells, 25, who reportedly works in Saudi Arabia for Litton Industries and holds a black belt in karate.

In one statement Monday, the captors said Iran and the Syrian president had "guaranteed" that the problem of the Hamadi brothers would be resolved.

"In respect to sincere appeals from Mr. Hafez Assad and the Islamic government of Iran, and upon their guarantees that the problem of the Hamadi brothers will be resolved, we declare that we shall release the German, Cordes, within 12 hours," it said.

In Bonn, a West German government spokesman, who asked not to be further identified, said he knew of no deal with Iran or with the kidnapers for Cordes' freedom.

Beaten flight attendant testifies

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP)—Mohammed Ali Hamadi "joyfully pointed" to the blood of a murdered U.S. hostage and indicated it was a great victory for his cause, a crew member of a hijacked jetliner testified today.

The chief judge in the case meanwhile expressed relief that a West German businessman shortly after Hamadi's arrest had been released after 20 months of captivity in Lebanon.

Flight engineer Benjamin C. Zimmermann took the stand in the Frankfurt trial of the Lebanese Shiite Moslem, accused of the 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner and killing of U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem.

Zimmerman, of Cascade, Idaho, said Hamadi proudly pointed to blood on the aircraft's fuselage as he and Hamadi walked around the plane when it landed in Algiers, Algeria from Beirut.

"When we went around the front, the nose of the airplane, Mr. Hamadi joyfully pointed to the blood running down the door. And with the pistol he pointed—he indicated—he was very proud of this gun and of him having caused this," Zimmermann told the court.

Zimmermann said that the flight crew was attempting to keep the airplane on the ground for as long as possible, and that he and Hamadi left the plane to inspect its engines.

"We walked hand-in-hand around the airplane. Unfortunately, I couldn't find anything wrong with the airplane, at least nothing noticeable to Mr. Hamadi," Zimmermann said.

Zimmermann said he was stunned by Hamadi's behavior as they observed the blood.

"I wondered how he expected me to respond to him. It was if he wanted congratulations. It seemed to be a great moment to him, what that blood represented to him," Zimmermann said.

Zimmermann also described the events that led up to Stethem's shooting.

He said that when negotiations for fuel with the tower in Beirut went too slowly, Hamadi shouted "Get up! Get up!" to Stethem.

Zimmermann said both hijackers then left the cockpit.

"I heard a pop. I heard someone exhale very loudly. I heard it above the engine noises. The shock of that noise was added to by the co-pilot on the radio stating that we needed fuel because they were killing passengers," Zimmermann told the court.

On Monday, the pilot of the hijacked plane testified that Zimmermann was brutally beaten during the ordeal and accused Hamadi of shooting and killing Stethem.

After Testrake finished his testimony Monday, Hamadi was asked by chief Judge Hainer Mueckenberger if he had any comment.

"There are some things that are being lied about here," Hamadi said. He did not elaborate.

Hamadi is being tried on murder and air piracy charges in connection with the June 14, 1985, hijacking. Thirty-nine Americans were held hostage 17 days during the ordeal.

Hamadi has acknowledged being one of the hijackers, but has denied killing Stethem.

Testrake said he was not hurt during the ordeal.

The Athens to Rome flight was seized on June 14, 1985 and diverted to Beirut. Hamadi was arrested at Frankfurt Airport in 1987 after explosives were found in his luggage.

In a related development in Lebanon, Shiite Moslem kidnapers freed West German hostage Rudolf Cordes at midnight Monday after declaring that they were ending his 20-month ordeal in response to Syrian and Iranian intervention, a Lebanese government official said in Beirut.

In Frankfurt today, Judge Mueckenberger said he was "extremely relieved" that Cordes had been released.

"This happy news means an end to endless speculation about what influence Cordes' captivity would have on these proceedings," the judge added.

Six people on Haiti TV say massacre was 'child's play'

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—Five men and a woman appeared on government television boasting they participated in Sunday's massacre at a Roman Catholic Church and threatening "a heap of corpses" at future Masses.

The six also spoke on broadcasts by private Radio Metropole and Tele-Haiti TV station Monday.

They said the bloody attack Sunday, in which five parishioners were killed and 77 wounded, was aimed at Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the church's pastor and militant critic of the military government.

"We were after Father Aristide; what you saw yesterday (Sunday) was child's play. In whatever parish Father Aristide is accepted, a heap of corpses will attend that Mass," a spokesman for the group said on the Radio Metropole broadcast.

The six did not give their names, but their faces were clearly shown on television.

Their appearance on state-run Television Nationale recalled one by a group of men who appeared on the same network two days before Nov. 29's presidential elections, in which gunmen protected by soldiers killed at least 34 voters at polling stations.

On Nov. 27 the unidentified men said they were calling on the army to "rescue" the country from "rigged elections."

The elections were aborted because of the violence and the army rescheduled them.

During 9 a.m. Mass on Sunday about 300 people stoned Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide's St. Jean Bosco church in the La Saline slum. Then two dozen men with guns and machetes burst into the church and shot, stabbed and slashed terrified parishioners, as soldiers watched from across the street and did nothing, radio stations and witnesses said. The assailants then set the church on fire.

Aristide escaped unhurt and went into hiding.

Witnesses at the church said they recognized some of the attackers as city hall employees, but did not identify them.

Port-au-Prince Mayor Franck Romain, a former colonel in ex-dictator Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier's presidential guard and former chief of police under Jean-Claude Duvalier, denied the charges, although he said Aristide was "justly punished" in the attack.

"If (city) employees were involved... I don't see how I am concerned... I am not someone who preaches violence and who sends people out to die as Aristide has always done," Romain told Radio Metropole Monday. "He who sows the wind, reaps the storm."

Biologists blame noisy people for loss in walrus population

EDITOR'S NOTE—It's the largest walrus hauling ground in the United States, an island off southwest Alaska that each summer attracts thousands of the 2-ton mammals with their long tusks. But the numbers of walrus on Round Island have been dwindling in recent years, from a peak of 15,000 in the mid-1970s to about 4,500 this summer. State biologists blame the noise.

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer

ROUND ISLAND, Alaska (AP) — Noisy sightseers and fishermen intruding on the walrus of Round Island may be causing the blubbery beasts to defect to the Soviet Union where they enjoy more privacy.

Each summer, thousands of bull walrus haul out on the huge rocks that ring the shore of this mist-enshrouded island 13 miles off southwest Alaska.

The puffing, snorting, hissing mammals ponderously heave their 2 tons of bulk from the frigid waters of the Bering Sea and shoulder and poke their way with their huge ivory tusks into the overlapping mass of their thick-skinned brethren.

Each is seeking a place in the sun, a spot to rest between seven- to 10-day feeding frenzies.

From a distance, they look like layers of cinnamon-colored fringe stitched to the base of the cliffs. Up close, they look more like bewhiskered bachelors sleeping off the effects of a boozey beach party — eyes closed, heads down, their bodies oozing into crevices in the rocks.

While the males are piled up on beaches as far south as Kodiak Island and Yakutat Bay, the females and their young remain with the pack ice north of the Bering Strait and into the Arctic Ocean.

But the number of Pacific walrus that haul out here and in lesser numbers at the other six islands of the Walrus Islands State Game Sanctuary have started to decline again, after a spectacular comeback that peaked in the 1970s.

On Round Island they have enjoyed considerable privacy in the past, largely because of the weather and location. The nearest community is Togiak, some 33 miles by charter boat to the northeast.

Summertime weather is characterized by wind, rain and high waves that make approach by float-plane or small boat hazardous if not impossible.

But with increased commercial bottom-fishing activity and the prospect of oil exploration and development in salmon-rich Bristol Bay, all that isolation may come to an end. And that has some professional walrus watchers concerned.

"Walrus are pretty sensitive to disturbance," says Lloyd Lowry, a marine mammal specialist with the Alaska Department of Fish and Game in Fairbanks.

"There's more than a little concern that the noise caused by the fishery has adversely influenced the haul-out. People on the island say they sometimes can hear the radios on the bridges of the boats."

Ken Taylor, another state biologist, monitors walrus numbers from his office in Dillingham.

"In the mid-1970s, we had as many as 15,000 animals there," Taylor says. "It was 4,400 last year and about 4,500 now."

"To my mind, the sheer number of boats out there with motors droning in the water sets up an acoustical noise that may be a cause."

The state set up the sanctuary in 1960 to protect the last remaining walrus hauling grounds in the south Bering Sea.

No one seems to know much about the dynamics of the Pacific walrus herd. It's believed to comprise some 234,000 animals, back to its 18th century levels before commercial harvesting severely depleted its numbers.

Changes in the climate, variations in the food chain, the growing volume of noise and other human disturbances are being blamed for what appears to be a downward trend.

Taylor says the Soviet Union is more protective of its walrus herd.

"On the Soviet coast, aircraft are held to 10,000-foot minimums and boats restricted to 16 miles," he says. "It may be because of those more severe restrictions that more Pacific walrus are hauling out there."

U.S. Border Patrol also hunting snake smugglers

By LARRY LOPEZ
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Cocaine and marijuana are still the major targets, but spiders and snakes are showing up in some contraband searches.

So are iguanas, desert tortoises and just about anything else that creeps or crawls, officials say.

Federal and state officials who patrol Arizona's borders don't keep tabs on their living hauls the way they keep a count of kilos and bales they seize, but consider the numbers in two recent cases:

■ On July 28, 1987, the U.S. Border Patrol seized 3,000 iguanas and several hundred tarantulas that were being smuggled into the United States through Nogales, Mexico.

■ On March 23, the U.S. Customs Service confiscated 1,600 tarantulas and 500 iguanas from a pickup truck as it tried to cross the border.

"We're not seeing a vast amount cross the border," says Tom McDermott, agent in charge for the customs office in Tucson.

"It's just in the course of our normal customs-type of exams."

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Reese Bostwick, who is prosecuting Jorge Manuel Martinez-Quintero in the March 23 incident, says there is "a real market" out there for almost anything that is rare, even when it would make most people's flesh crawl.

Bostwick, who handled wildlife cases for the Pima County attorney's office before switching to the federal prosecutor's office, recalls trailer home bedrooms where walls were lined with reptile cases and closets held "canvas bags full of poisonous snakes."

"To me, it's not normal to sleep in your bedroom with all kinds of reptiles," he said.

"There's big bucks involved," Bostwick added, saying tarantulas go for $1.25 each while Gila monsters can sell for $50 to $75 apiece and the endangered twin-spotted rattlesnake fetches $100 to $150.

Although traffic in endangered or protected species such as 18 types of iguanas is a special focus of such agencies as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, even a common species can draw the attention of customs agents.

That's because federal smuggling laws require importers to declare their goods and pay tax, whether or not the goods are legal.

"Anytime you conceal something and bring it across the border and don't declare it, you are violating a general smuggling statute," McDermott says. That's true even when the item is duty-free, he added, citing laws on declaring currency and jewels.

Smuggling of endangered species and their pelts was a bigger concern in the 1970s, but drugs provide a bigger margin of profit and "it's going to take you just as much room to smuggle in a tarantula" as a more-profitable amount of cocaine, he adds.

Over the years, customs agents "run across every type of commodity conceivable," from pre-Colombian artifacts to bull semen, McDermott says.

Still, officers tend to "jump back a few feet" when they open a box that looks as though it could contain drugs but find a boa constrictor, says Assistant Chief Ron Moser of the U.S. Border Patrol's Tucson sector.

Hunting a protected species not only devastates the population but often also ruins the only habitat in which the species can live, Bostwick said.

And while the squeamish may think of a world with fewer spiders and snakes as a better place to live, other animals have provided useful medicines as scientists learned more about them, Bostwick added.

Exhausted professionals find haven in an isolated location

EDITOR'S NOTE — They are lonely, isolated from their own humanity, overworked to the point of exhaustion, on a treadmill to nowhere. Now there is a program to help them find themselves. A "retreat" for the high-powered to escape to, a haven for professionals on the road to burnout.

By DEAN GOLEMESKI
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — If you're ever in a hospital, keep an eye out for the "night riders" because they've stopped watching out for themselves.

They're doctors who work long hours at unusual times of the night, often winning the admiration of their peers.

But they are really out of control, overly dedicated to work, obsessed.

Dr. Charles Boren, medical director of The Institute of Living, a renowned psychiatric hospital, is lassoing night riders and other professionals who are running on empty, becoming inefficient and isolating themselves from their colleagues.

'I was finding I wasn't measuring up and wishing I could do better dealing with the problems of people around me.'

The institute, one of the nation's oldest and largest private psychiatric hospitals, has established a program called "The Retreat" to treat the businessmen, doctors, priests, lawyers and others who are losing their ability to function because of the stress of their careers.

The program allows up to 28 professionals at a time to live together, talk to each other, share their common problems and put their lives back together.

In the two years since it was created, it has been so successful that it now has a waiting list.

A stay can be as short as one week or as long as six months, but the average stay is about 62 days, said Dr. Walter A. Kekich, the institute's director of the acute, specialty and ambulatory services unit.

During that period, the professionals receive individual counseling and group therapy. They also have free time for reflection, travel and other recreation.

One participant in the program who has spoken publicly about his experience is Archbishop John Quinn, who tenders to 375,000 Roman Catholic parishioners in the San Francisco area. Quinn, 59, spent four months at the retreat earlier this year, before returning to his job in April.

A former president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, he said he entered the program because of stress, exhaustion and depression.

"I was finding I wasn't measuring up and wishing I could do better dealing with the problems of people around me," Quinn told reporters when he returned to work. "You feel disappointed in yourself that you're not doing more, and yet you're doing so much you're at the point of exhaustion."

He decided after the retreat to make some changes in his life to include more relaxation. He said he planned to buy a dog, play some golf and to end his isolation by opening his residence to two other priests.

Quinn's case fits the pattern that the experts at the institute have seen repeated over and over again.

"These people are often used to having the answers, used to giving help, used to being looked to as someone who can ease the pain. When they reach a point when they're in need, they really don't know how to go to someone else," Boren said.

"Often they have sort of kept it together and continued to function, albeit with great pain and some disability, until generally there is some kind of situation where their colleagues see that they're having trouble ... They may have trouble with drug abuse or alcohol ... The greatest problem is depression."

The institute, founded on 35 acres in Hartford in 1822, is a 400-bed general psychiatric hospital.

In the 1930s, it built a reputation as an exclusive center that catered to the rich and famous. Patients were considered guests and they were offered limousine service and such leisure activities as golf, swimming and shuffleboard.

'When they reach a point when they're in need, they really don't know how to go to someone else.'

The institute today remains sheltered from the bustle of the city by a surrounding brick wall and steel gates. But it has broadened its services to include outpatient treatment and schools for troubled children, while offering traditional psychiatric services.

"Probably the most difficult task of working with professionals is to get them to put their intelligence aside for a minute to look at how they really feel and then in turn to use their intelligence to understand what's going on," Kekich said.

Rural teachers preparing their students for college

By RON BATES
Amarillo Globe-News

GROOM (AP) — In this largely rural community in Carson County, teachers are preparing to send Travis Britten off to college.

But first, they've got to get him into second grade.

Travis, 6, began first grade this month. In Groom, teachers say they work their lessons around the idea that the student is college bound. Most of the time, they're right.

"That's the way I teach my English IV class," Janet Lamb, a Groom teacher, said. "They're college bound."

All 15 of the students who graduated from Groom High School in May have enrolled in a college. Principal Kenneth Sweatt said he is not surprised by the high percentage of students continuing their education.

"We'll be close every year," he said. "The community puts quite an emphasis on education. It's expected. Most of them go to school somewhere."

According to Sweatt, the graduating class comes close to 100 percent each year. Stability, he said, is one of the key factors, with most students spending all 12 years in the Groom system.

Also, most of the teachers in the system have been teaching in Groom for several years, Sweatt said.

Judy Babcock, a Groom teacher and administrative assistant who handles college counseling, said that going to college has become "the thing to do" among graduates in the community.

"The fear is that if they don't go, they're not going to have anything to do," she said.

Small schools, she said, seem to have an advantage in preparing students for college.

"Since there are just 15 students, it's easier for me to keep an eye on each one," Babcock said. "They don't get lost in the shuffle."

Sweatt said he believes a higher percentage of students from rural communities go on to college than do their metropolitan counterparts, in part, because vocational opportunities are not available at the smaller schools.

Officials from area districts of similar size agreed that rural district students were more likely to at least attempt higher education.

"We have this trend, too," Don Johnson, Changing High School principal, said. "We have a high percentage that go to college."

Johnson said that of last year's 12 graduates, 11 went on to college and one entered the military.

"We try to prepare them for college. Here in our neighborhood, there's not a lot for them to come back to," he said.

Bill Mayfield, superintendent of Happy schools, said that most students in his district attend college, but attributed it to the work of the schools.

"I think in a lot of cases they have more counseling in that area."

Miami Superintendent Allan Dinsmore said that rural students in this area seem college-oriented, but that it is not a universal trait among small districts. He said the lifestyle and economic condition of the people in the community seems to be the determining factor.

"In Miami, the community and the people in the community value a good education," Dinsmore said. "They're willing to put forth the effort in materials and time."

In Groom, Lamb said students realize few opportunities exist in small towns.

"They see that there's nothing for them here and they've got to get away," she said.

Sweatt maintains that Groom educators do nothing out of the ordinary to direct students toward colleges and universities, but points to the newly adopted school motto as an example of the district's philosophy.

A sign outside the school reads, "Excellence Now. A commitment to the future."

"I think we have an excellent little school system here," he said.

Changes have been subtle since papal visit last year

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Pope John Paul II inspired Texas Catholics to recommit themselves to their faith, their families, their communities and their immigrant neighbors, said church officials who are celebrating the first anniversary of the papal visit to San Antonio.

"I don't think anyone in church can say they are in church because of the papal visit," said the Rev. Greg Nevlud, pastor of St. Francis of Assisi Catholic Church. "But I think it has increased evangelizing by not only the priests, but by the laity."

Catholic church officials in San Antonio celebrated the Sept. 13-14, 1987, papal anniversary Sunday with an evening Mass.

A historical marker at a plaza near Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church also was scheduled to be dedicated and blessed Sunday, but the installation was postponed.

Last year, more than 300,000 Texans saw the pope when he celebrated the only Sunday Mass of his 10-day, nine-city tour of the United States at a 144-acre lot in northwest San Antonio in an area known as Westover Hills.

The pope's Texas visit also included speeches to Catholic Charities USA in Municipal Auditorium, an address at San Fernando Cathedral to men and women studying to become priests and nuns, and a speech in Spanish to parishioners in Plaza Guadalupe.

Today, the papal Mass site near Sea World of Texas is the home of a Stop-N-Go convenience store and the future home of a Dairy Queen restaurant and a shopping center.

Landowner A. Wayne Wright said other developments could include a McDonald's, a 18,000-seat amphitheater, a golf driving range and another shopping center.

But Wright said, "from an economic standpoint, (the papal visit) didn't have an impact on Westover Hills."

But for the Catholic community, Pope John Paul II's 22-hour stay in San Antonio visit may have helped strengthen community and religious bonds, officials said.

"I see a lot of good curiosity coming out of it," the Rev. Virgilio Elizondo, rector of San Fernando Cathedral, told the San Antonio Light. He noted some 300 adults recently completed a five-week course that explains Catholic customs.

As for more visible work, Catholic leaders say they have stepped up efforts to help immigrants and have begun to revamp programs to strengthen the family.

"We redoubled our efforts in the amnesty program," said the Rev. David Garcia, a key figure in the papal-visit planning who now is archdiocese director of vocations.

Monsignor Marvin Doerfler, director of social services for the archdiocese, said the focus has shifted from helping aliens seek temporary resident status to the second phase of the amnesty program — teaching English and civics classes to potential citizens.

A consultant will arrive in San Antonio in October to assist the church in teaching couples communication skills and methods to break cycles of family violence.

"I'm not going to pretend that we're doing all that needs to be done," Flores said. "That's not going to be a one-year assignment. It's going to go on."

AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE SCHOLARSHIPS
Scholarship certificates have been presented to 13 area students by the Panhandle Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute. A total of $7,800 was awarded for the scholarships in amounts of $400 to $1,000. Top awardee receiving the maximum scholarship was Albert Hernandez of Pampa.

Other recipients are Chandra Boehmisch, Jerod Imel, Willie Jacobs, Dana Marchman, Kim McCullough, Enoch Phetteplace, Jay Snow and Sharia Vaughn, all of Pampa; Cathy Anderwald of San Angelo; Sherri Daniels of White Deer; Steven Lusk of Canadian; and John Wier of Borger.

The scholarship fund was raised by participating members in the annual golf tournament held May 21 at Phillips Country Club in Borger and from other donors to the Panhandle Chapter. The Chapters of the API are formed by persons associated with the industry who promote meetings for fellowship and communication for exchange of technology through presentations and papers, and also provide various civic and educational functions. The 1988 membership supper was to be Sept. 10 at the Sportsman's Club in Pampa.

Hernandez will attend the University of Texas at Austin, planning to major in chemical engineering with a minor in biomedical engineering. He is the son of Albert and Rosalie Hernandez of Pampa.

Boehmisch is a sophomore attending St. Gregory's College in Shawnee, Okla. for a liberal arts associate degree. She plans to work toward a bachelor's degree in business or foreign languages, with a goal in marketing. She is the daughter of John and Mary Ann Boehmisch of Pampa.

Imel will attend Texas Tech University in Lubbock, planning to major in petroleum engineering by transfer to the University of Texas at Austin. He hopes to work with his grandfather, J.C. Daniels, in Suoco Oil Corporation. He is the son of Marilyn Imel of Pampa and Jack Imel of San Antonio.

Jacobs will attend the University of Missouri at Rolla, Mo., where he will work toward a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering and participate in track events. He is the son of Joseph and Mary Jacobs of Pampa.

Marchman is a sophomore at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene, where she is majoring in education and plans to teach elementary-age children. She is the daughter of Fines Ray and Patricia Sue Marchman of Pampa.

McCullough is a senior at West Texas State University in Canyon, studying business administration with a major in business management. She is the daughter of Aubrey and Mary McCord and is the wife of Philip McCullough. She and her husband have two daughters, Tiffany, age 7, and Amber, 2. They reside in Pampa.

Phetteplace will attend Tarleton State University, planning to study agriculture and animal breeding with a minor in business. He is the son of Gilbert and Nell Phetteplace of Pampa.

Snow is a junior at Tarleton State University in Stephenville, majoring in petroleum engineering. He is the son of Frank and Sue Snow of Pampa.

Vaughn will attend Texas Tech University, planning to major in business administration and minor in computer science while continuing music study. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Vaughn of Pampa.

Anderwald is a senior at Angelo State University in San Angelo. She is majoring in elementary education with a specialization in English and a kindergarten endorsement. She would like to teach second or third grade. She is the wife of Aaron Anderwald and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cook of Pampa.

Daniels will attend Texas Tech University and plans to pursue a master's degree in a health-related field, possibly in pharmacy or radiology. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Daniels of White Deer.

Lusk is a junior at Texas Tech University, majoring in chemical engineering. He has been named to the Dean's and President's Lists. He is the son of Sharon Lusk of Canadian and Glynn Lusk of Pampa.

Wier has transferred from Texas Christian University in Fort Worth to the University of Texas at Austin to major in English and political science. He is the son of Donald and Imogene Wier of Borger.

Mrs. Acker and former Pampa AFS student Pedro Correia.

'80-'81 AFS student from Portugal visiting Pampa

Pedro Correia, a Lisbon, Portugal resident who was an American Field Service foreign exchange student at Pampa High School for the 1980-81 school year, is currently here visiting his former host family and friends he made while attending PHS.

Wayland and Donna Acker are hosting Correia, who will be in the United States until his return to Lisbon in November. He attended PHS at the same time in the same class as the Ackers' son Greg. During his stay, he has also visited the Wallace Birkes and the Leonel Fords.

His studies have continued since he graduated from PHS. He has spent the last seven years studying to be a doctor, and upon his return to Portugal, he will serve an 18-month internship. He studied medicine in Lisbon, and also went to Sweden to work with a surgery team as part of his training.

Correia hopes to become a cardiothoracic surgeon upon completion of his education. He explained that a cardiothoracic surgeon deals with the heart, lungs and other organs in the upper body, or thorax.

"I wanted to come back for a visit. I came back mainly to visit with the people. I wanted to see how they changed and how they were. I notice the economy is not as good as it was when I was here before. But the people, they are quite the same," Correia said.

He may visit California or Florida before returning to New York, where he arrived before coming to Pampa, on his way back to Portugal. He hopes to return to Pampa for his class' 10th year reunion, in 1991.

Correia, who was active in Key Club and Red Cross while at PHS, has two brothers; the younger was also an AFS student who lived in Missouri last year.

Anyone wishing to visit with Correia may contact Wayland and Donna Acker.

Clarendon College has largest fall enrollment

Clarendon College-Pampa Center has enrolled a record number of students for the fall semester, with 329 enrolled this year, compared to 286 for fall 1987.

"We have a lot more, not just Pampa High School graduates, but also area high school graduates who are going here. We also have more women enrolled. I'm seeing more husbands supporting their spouses' schooling. There are a lot of single people, too, who have to go back and retrain," said Larry Gilbert, director of the Pampa Center.

For the spring 1988 semester, there were 163 female students and 70 males enrolled at the college.

"This is a sociological statement in that women are more career-minded, not just here but all through our society," Gilbert said.

The most popular courses for the current semester include computers, which drew enough students to make seven classes; four biological sciences classes; and education and nursing offerings.

The enrollment figures for the fall term don't include the additional 300 to 400 different continuing education classes to be offered this fall, Gilbert said. These classes are typically completed in a few class sessions and include everything from computers to real estate to day care training. Free study classes for those planning to take the G.E.D. test are also available.

Enrollment for the spring 1989 semester will be worth noting, if this term is anything to go by, because "we typically have larger spring enrollments than fall enrollments," Gilbert said.

Firms, job seekers to meet during annual Career Day

CANYON — West Texas State University will hold its annual Career Day on Thursday, Sept. 22, for students and alumni.

Anyone wishing career information is welcome to attend. There will be more than 75 agencies in attendance to provide information on career opportunities.

The event will run from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the ballroom of the Activities Center on campus.

Career Day is sponsored by WT Career Planning and Placement. For more information, call 656-2345.

Man neglects to tell family that girlfriend has children

DEAR ABBY: I am 38, twice divorced and have three kids, ages 20, 16 and 3. I have always supported myself and my children with no help from anybody.

Six months ago, I met "Mr. Right" — I'll call him Mel. He's 31, kind and honest. He's been divorced for a year after a seven-year marriage (no children). He loves my kids and they love him.

There is only one thing wrong. Mel has been hiding my children from his friends and family. We live 70 miles apart and see each other only on weekends. It bothers me that he doesn't want his family to know that I have three children. (He has asked me not to mention them because he doesn't want them to know yet.)

We have had long talks about our future together. He foresees marriage in about three years. So, what do you think of this, Abby? I really love him and he says he loves me.

IN LOVE IN SOUTH DAKOTA

DEAR IN LOVE: There is something wrong with Mr. Right. "Hiding" your children from his friends and family is downright deceitful. Mr. Right is very shortsighted. If there is marriage in your future, your three children will have to come out of the closet. What then? Put this question to him, and draw your own conclusions.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns something that sounds trivial, but it's actually very serious. I heard that while baseball players are waiting in the bullpen, they pass the time by pulling the hair out of each other's noses. A man told me that his aunt actually died after she had pulled some hairs out of her nose. This shocked me into writing to you so you could warn your readers. I hope you print this. It may save some lives.

Dear Abby

F.S.S., DENVER

DEAR F.S.S.: I consulted a medical expert and was told that because the membranes of the nose are very delicate, pulling hair from the nostrils can cause an infection called furuncle of the hair follicle. However, since the advent of antibiotics, the chances of dying are minimal. Bottom line: This baseball team needs a better way to pass the time.

DEAR ABBY: I have no problems, complaints or questions, but I would like to tell you what my husband gave me for my 30th birthday.

Kevin and I have been married for 11 years and have five daughters, ages 10, 8, 5, 4 and 2 1/2. For obvious reasons, I do not work outside my home, and my "outing" is a weekly trip to the grocery store. Although my birthday is two months in the future, last week Kevin surprised me with a birthday cake and a round-trip airline ticket to visit my best friend in Florida — alone. Yes, all by myself — for eight days!

He had prearranged this trip so it wouldn't interfere with the children's school or the holidays. He lined up a sitter for the kids while he's at work. (I baby-sit weekdays, so he's already informed the children's parents that I will be gone for eight days.) I have nothing to do but pack, and grocery-shop before I leave.

I thought I'd share this with you, so you can pass it along to other husbands who wonder what to give their wives for a birthday present. Just a little vacation with rest and recreation.

LUCKY SALLY HANDLEY, BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: I desperately need an answer to this question. I am due to have my first baby soon. If we have a boy, my husband wants him to be a "Junior." I am all for it, but there is a problem. My husband does not have a middle name, but I would like for our son to have one. Would our son be considered a "Junior" if we gave him a middle name even though his father had none?

LADY IN WAITING

DEAR LADY: No. In order for your son to be a "Junior," his name must be exactly the same as his father's.

The facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy are all in Abby's new, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064. Postage is included.

U.S. athletes threaten boycott

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — American athletes don't want to spoil the party, but they are threatening to boycott the opening ceremonies of the Olympic Games if the whole team isn't allowed to march in Saturday's parade.

That jolt to the Olympic spirit hit Tuesday along with reports of Soviet gymnasts spying on Romanians, a new excuse for a steroid scandal among the Canadians and last minute moves by boycotting Cuba to join the Games.

The International Olympic Committee and the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee want to speed up the ceremonies by cutting back on the 13,000 athletes, coaches and officials who planned to take part, sources said.

The cutback, which may be for security reasons, would affect all countries with more than 30 team members.

Medium-sized teams would be cut by a third, while the largest delegations, such as the United States, Soviet Union, China and host South Korea would be limited to 42 percent of their total.

Only about 300 of the 800-member American delegation would be allowed to join the ceremonies, a prospect that has angered and disappointed many American athletes.

"This is not acceptable," said Evie G. Dennis, chief of the U.S. mission. "Our athletes resent it and want to march."

"Every American who has a right to compete here feels that the chance to march in the opening ceremonies is the culmination of the Olympic dream itself," said Mike Moran, spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"Any athlete who represents his or her country and could not march would have a disappointment probably exceeding any failures they suffered on the playing field," he said.

There was no word yet on whether other large nations also would protest the ceremony cutback.

Meanwhile, Cuba, which has supported the boycott by North Korea, may try to compete in a nominal way to avoid sanctions from the International Olympic Committee, according to a top South Korean Olympic official quoted in the Korea Herald.

Cuba is worried that if it boycotts the Olympics it may be denied the right to stage the 1991 Pan American Games, the official said.

The boycott has been ignored by most other North Korean allies, including the Soviet Union and China.

Soviet gymnasts are focusing on their Romanian rivals, with an eye especially on recapturing the Olympic women's team championship they won at every Summer Games since 1952 except for the boycotted Los Angeles Games in 1984.

Romania went to Los Angeles and won the gold, then stunned the Soviets at the world championships last October by winning the women's title again.

The Soviets have come here with a particular grudge to settle against their rather independent comrades.

"We are most determined and very confident that we will win both the team and all-around gold medals," says Lioubov Mirmanova, one of the Soviet coaches.

You bet they are, especially after sneaking a peak at the Romanian team practice. Among those watching was Soviet gold medal favorite Elena Shushunova, the 1985 world champion dethroned by Romanian Aurelia Dobre in 1987.

When the Romanians spotted the Soviets scouting them at the Gymnastics Hall, the Romanians ordered their athletes off the uneven bars.

Walker sparks Cowboys

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Cardinals may have moved from St. Louis to Phoenix, but one thing hasn't changed — they still can't stop Dallas Cowboys running back Herschel Walker.

Walker rushed for 149 yards on 29 carries, scored one touchdown and set up the clincher in the fourth quarter as the Cowboys beat the Cardinals 17-14 Monday night in the first NFL regular-season game ever played in Arizona.

"Herschel did it almost all by himself. A lot of times, he didn't have good blocking," Dallas coach Tom Landry said. "I think he's going to run this way every week. If we can get him out in the open more, he'll be devastating."

Walker took a pitchout and scored on a 3-yard run around left end with 4:35 remaining in the second quarter to put the Cowboys ahead to stay at 10-7.

He knocked over a television cameraman in the end zone on the play, sending the man to a local hospital with a bruised arm and cut under an eye.

"I hope the guy is OK. I know I took a pretty good shot to the back of the head myself," Walker said. "It was just a little sweep play. I got the ball and headed for the end zone, that's all."

The 1982 Heisman Trophy winner from Georgia almost did it all himself on a 13-play, 81-yard drive in the fourth quarter. He gained 58 yards on nine carries and got the ball down to the 1-yard line where Steve Pelluer's quarterback sneak made it 17-7 with 5:23 remaining.

"It was a great drive," said Pelluer, who finished 12-of-24 for 162 yards with one interception. "Phoenix had a tough zone defense, so we kept calling Herschel's number and he got us the yards."

The drive started with 10:22 left and was delayed for several minutes as the near-capacity crowd of 67,139 at Sun Devil Stadium caused such a din that Pelluer couldn't call the signals.

"We weren't trying to encourage the crowd," Phoenix coach Gene Stallings said. "I tried to quiet them a few times, but it wasn't that bad. The problem was we couldn't stop Herschel Walker."

The 6-foot-1, 225-pound Walker had averaged 100.3 yards in four previous games against the Cardinals and scored four touchdowns. He had 137 yards and two touchdowns on 25 carries in the Cowboys' 21-16 victory in the 1987 regular-season finale — denying

St. Louis its first playoff berth since 1982.

Dallas, 1-1 this season, is now 33-18-1 in the all-time series with its NFC East rival and 13-0 against the Cardinals in games where one of its running backs has gained at least 100 yards.

Walker had his first 100-yard game in the NFL against the Cardinals in 1986 and the first 100-yard game of his pro career here in 1983 as a member of the USFL's New Jersey Generals.

The 98-degree Arizona heat didn't bother him.

"I felt good. During training camp, we ran a great deal in the heat in Dallas trying to get ready for games like this," Walker said. "We were in great shape."

Phoenix, 0-2, seemed to be in position to at least force overtime after closing to 17-14 on Neil Lomax's 23-yard touchdown pass to tight end Jay Novacek with 3:52 to go in the game.

But a pass-interference call on cornerback Reggie Phillips on a third-and-12 play gave the Cowboys a first down with 1:50 remaining and they ran out the clock.

The Cardinals also hurt themselves with four crucial mistakes, two involving placekicker Al Del Greco.

Olympic souvenirs: all shapes and sizes

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea — Sunglasses in the shape of the Olympic rings may be just the thing for watching athletes in their shining moment of glory.

Or how about bringing home the gold and silver from the Seoul Games in the shape of badges and spoons?

Merchants eager to cash in on the 24th Summer Games and the expected flood of 250,000 foreign visitors and millions of Korean spectators have produced a huge range of Olympics souvenirs.

Shops are bulging with souvenirs ranging from the traditional T-shirts and keyrings to the unusual: embossed Olympic socks and an ashtray in the shape of the Olympic Stadium.

"Oh look at this!" exclaimed a foreign tourist inspecting the offerings in a souvenir shop. Then she added: "What is it?"

Souvenir sellers say business is good. Many shopkeepers said sales started to soar after the Olympic flame arrived in South Korea Aug. 27.

"We have very good business. About 500 people came today to buy souvenirs," said Kwak Jin-kwon, manager of one souvenir shop.

Popular items are badges, stuffed toys, T-shirts, spoons, towels and caps, merchants said.

Some dealers hope their eye-catching Olympic sunglasses will be a hit. Shaped like the famous Olympic symbol, the bottom two rings cover the eyes, with the three top rings decorated with pictures of Hodori, the tiger mascot.

"You like?" inquired a helpful saleswoman offering a pair of the sunglasses that blot out half the wearer's face. "Make you look nice."

Priced at about $14 a pair, the sunglasses reflect a basic fact about Olympic souvenirs: many of them are not cheap.

The prices range from about $4 for an Olympic lapel pin to $40 for a set of Olympic pins to $70 for an ashtray in the shape of the main Olympic stadium or $700 for sets of gold-plated Olympic pins.

The ashtray, which comes in smaller and cheaper sizes, does weigh about 10 pounds, so merchants say buyers get their money's worth.

More than 70 commemorative spoons range from ones the size of soup laddles to racks of mounted tea spoons decorated with flags, birds and other motifs.

"It's for spoon collectors," a salesman told two tourists at a Seoul shop gawking at a display case filled with the utensils.

Hodori, the smiling tiger that is symbol of the Games, appears on many souvenirs.

Merchants offer stuffed toy versions of the tiger cub in traditional Korean dress, tracks suits, Olympic T-shirts and a referee's outfit.

Hodori fans can also pick up ceramic bells with Hodori pictures and statues of the tiger in various costumes, including bridegroom and an ancient Korean aristocrat.

He also appears on bottle openers, lapel pins, plaques, towels, pillows, stickers, badges, money boxes, keychains, belt buckles, commemorative coins, fans, coffee mugs, plates, flags, paper knives, ashtrays and socks. The tiger also appears on spoons — lots of them.

But the market isn't dominated by Hodori. Hosuni, a lady tiger and friend of Hodori, also is available on a wide range of Olympic souvenirs.

Lefors, Alamo Catholic clash could be a tossup

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

ALAMO CATHOLIC at LEFORS
Friday, 7 p.m.

Judging from the past couple of weeks, this Friday's contest should be a tossup.

Lefors whipped Patton Springs 34-18 in the season opener. Last week, Alamo Catholic surpassed the same team by a margin of 40-28, although Patton Springs was lacking the services of running back Randy Finkelbinder, who scored all three touchdowns against Lefors.

"I think it should be a good game. It will come down to preparation and intensity, both of which we lacked in the last game," said Lefors coach Dale Means, referring to the Pirates 60-31 loss to Guthrie.

Alamo, like Patton Springs, features a top-sided offense, one that relies mainly on the strength of running back Michael Cruz.

"They have one running back (Cruz) that they go to about 80 percent of the time," Means said. "He's a good back, and their five other guys are a lot better than what Patton Springs had. They're bigger than we are, and they have a lot of kids that come out of 5A schools."

In fact Alamo's quarterback was to be the backup quarterback at Caprock this season. He enrolled at Alamo to avoid warming the bench his senior year, according to Means.

At this point in the season, the Pirates' primary concern is defense. They've proven they can get on the scoreboard, racking up 65 points on the strength of the passing game in their first two contests.

"We've got to work on defense," Means said. "We're tough on offense, and we feel like we can score, if our defense will only come around."

As always, according to Means, a win for Lefors depends upon attitude. "Judging from practice Monday, we're more fired up than we were last week," he said. "I think we'll be a better team than we were then."

If the Pirates, now 1-1, can hook up against Alamo the way they did against Patton Springs, they should find themselves at 2-1 after Friday night.

BOVINA at GROOM
Friday, 7:30 p.m.

Following their impressive playoff season in 1987, one which was brought to an end by Wheeler in the bi-district round, the Bovina Mustangs, like Groom, find themselves among the six-man ranks in 1988.

And although the Mustangs are 0-2, that record may be a little deceiving. Opening the season against Jayton and Silverton would be any team's nightmare. In doing so, Bovina has proven it can play with the big boys.

Groom coach Jim Branch has been keeping a close eye on the Mustangs. "We've scouted them twice," he said, "and the game against Silverton was one of the most physical I've ever seen."

"Bovina's got about everything you could ask for. Once they master the six-man game, they'll be one of the top five in the state. They only lost those two games because of a lack of six-man experience, because they've got just as much talent as Silverton and Jayton."

Besides drawing a power like Bovina, the Tigers have a couple of other problems to contend with this week. Two of their prime performers, end-MLB Stoney Crump and RB-LB Richard Koetting, are suffering from injuries and are not expected to suit up.

And since Groom was forced to sit out a week when Texline forfeited last Friday night, the Tigers will enter the contest with only one game, a 20-12 loss to McLean, under their belts.

"Missing last week will hurt us," Branch said. "We need the playing time and experience. With only 13 players on the team, we can't get game experience in a workout. It definitely takes a lot out of you."

The Mustangs boast plenty of power in the form of three All-State candidates, including running backs Bud Venable and Denver Riddle, and end Scott Schaff, although Schaff is questionable for Friday night.

Venable and Riddle each provided the big plays for Bovina last week. Venable on a 60-yard TD run and Riddle on a 55-yard pass from Cory Kirkpatrick for the second six-pointer.

"They are gonna flat line up and run at us," Branch said. "They can block and get it done, and I look for it to be pretty physical. This week didn't help us a bit, and with these injuries..."

"We need to get past Bovina and get over these injuries, and I think we'll be ready to get it when district play rolls around."

Indians hold off Yankees

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

This time, not even Claudell Washington could save the New York Yankees.

Washington, whose two game-winning homers during the weekend pulled New York back into the American League East, struck out to end a furious ninth-inning rally Monday night as the Cleveland Indians held off the Yankees 8-6.

The Yankees slipped 4 1/2 games behind division-leading Boston, which beat Baltimore 6-1. Detroit, winning for just the fourth time in 21 tries, defeated Toronto 6-5 and remained 3 1/2 behind the Red Sox.

Trailing 8-1, the Yankees rallied for five runs in the ninth on a three-run homer by Jack Clark and solo homers by Luis Aguayo and Joel Skinner.

Rafael Santana and Rickey Henderson singled with two outs, bringing up Washington.

On Friday night, Washington homered in the ninth to beat Detroit. His two-run homer in the 18th inning Sunday also meant victory and a four-game sweep of the Tigers.

Facing Cleveland relief ace Doug Jones, Washington hit a line drive down the right-field line that landed inches foul.

"I was right on that pitch," Washington said. "I thought it had a chance, but it hooked foul."

Jones, who has allowed only one homer in his last 135 innings, then fanned Washington for his 33rd save.

"I don't think anybody expected to get seven runs in the ninth to tie it or eight to win it," said Don Mattingly, whose one-out single started the Yankees' comeback. "But we weren't going to quit."

Milwaukee, trying to cling close in the AL East, also lost a tough game when Chicago scored twice in the bottom of the ninth for a 2-1 victory. The loss dropped the Brewers 5 1/2 games behind Boston.

In the other AL game, Seattle beat Minnesota 3-1.

Greg Swindell, who six days ago beat New York 1-0 with a three-hitter, improved to 16-13. He had little trouble before the ninth inning when Clark hit his 25th homer and Aguayo hit his second. Skinner homered against Brad Savener.

Tommy John, 9-8, took the loss. He gave up seven runs on seven hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 1
Bruce Hurst won his 17th game and Ellis Burks got three hits and scored three runs as Boston beat Baltimore.

Hurst, 17-5, allowed one run in 6 2-3 innings and won for the eighth time in nine decisions.

Curt Schilling, acquired by the Orioles in the trade that sent Mike Boddicker to Boston on July 29, lost his first major league decision. He left in the second inning as Boston took a 5-0 lead.

Baltimore's Eddie Murray got three hits, giving him 2,001 in his career. He is the 18th active player to reach 2,000.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 5
Chet Lemon hit a three-run homer and scored the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning on Darrell Evans' pinch-single as Detroit won at Toronto.

Lemon's 12th homer gave the Tigers a 4-1 lead in the sixth. Pat Borders' two-run triple keyed Toronto's three-run rally in the seventh that made it 4-4.

Lemon drew a leadoff walk in the eighth from Tom Henke, 3-4, and advanced on a sacrifice. Evans followed with his single, and Fred Lynn hit his 21st homer in the ninth.

Mark Huisman, 1-0, got the victory.

White Sox 2, Brewers 1
Mike Diaz and pinch hitter Russ Morman singled home runs with two outs in the ninth inning, foiling Milwaukee's strategy as Chicago rallied to win.

With two outs in the ninth, Harold Baines doubled off Dan Plesac, 1-2. The Brewers then intentionally walked Carlton Fisk, but Morman and Diaz followed with RBI singles.

Barry Jones, 1-2, got the victory.

Pampa rodeo team competes at Leedey

The Pampa Rodeo Club competed in a Tri-State High School Rodeo last weekend in Leedey, Okla.

For Pampa, Misty Coleman placed fourth in poles (21.433), Tamra Johnson, fifth in goat tying (12.60) and sixth in poles (21.790).

Pampa hosts a Tri-State Rodeo here Saturday. A dance will follow the second performance at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion.

PMS volleyball teams win Hereford matches

Pampa swept Hereford White in Pampa Middle School volleyball matches Monday night.

Pampa used an outstanding team effort to win the seventh grade match 15-11, 15-4.

Led by the serving of Andree Lowrie, Pampa won the eighth grade match 15-3, 15-15.

Lowrie served up nine points in the first game and seven in the second.

Rozelle encouraged Tisch to buy Pokes

DALLAS (AP)—National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle says he has encouraged New York billionaire Robert Tisch to purchase the Dallas Cowboys.

"We've talked about it a great deal and I think he'd be a terrific owner," Rozelle told the Dallas Morning News Monday night at the Dallas-Phoenix game. "He's the kind of owner that the NFL would want and welcome. He's a great success in business, he's a former postmaster general and he would do a terrific job with the Cowboys. I'm encouraging him to do it."

Rozelle said that Tisch, a close friend, is concerned about the commuting distance between New York and Dallas.
