Pampa school trustees hear report about at-risk students

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

An overflow crowd was on hand at Tuesday night's Pampa public school trustees meeting to hear a report on at-risk students from a committee of the Pampa 2000 project.

"The at-risk committee started in June and worked for six weeks on this. Each subcommittee met at least once a week," said Colleen Hamilton, school board member.

Members of the committee, made up of teachers, community professionals and interested area residents, studied parental involvement, school programs, educational philosophy, attendance, policies and procedures, staff and parent development and area services.

"Students need to realize that what they do in school counts in our society. We need to find kids that fall through the cracks and develop programs for them," said Kay Warner, committee member.

Each of the subcommittees stressed the importance of attendance in good academic work. Warner urged the board to adopt a policy that insisted on good attendance beginning in kindergarten.

Sara Carmichael, a committee chairman, stressed the importance of good public relations from school staff. "We found out that not all parents feel welcome. Sometimes we've had a hard day, but we need to treat parents with kid gloves."

"To keep children from being at risk is to keep them happy," Carmichael said.

One of the findings of the at-risk group was that by the year 2000 the minority population in Pampa will be 8 percent higher than it is now.

"The project revealed that the projected population in 2000 will be about the same. However, the minority population will go from 12 percent to 20 percent. We need to have programs that address this," said John Warner, a local attorney.

Warner said there are currently about 40 girls in the Pampa area who are dealing with teen-age pregnancy. He suggested the board continue finding ways to deal with the issues teen pregnancy brings out.

Overall, each of the committee members who spoke to the board expressed excitement about what Pampa has to offer.

"We need to take advantage of the programs we have, especially for our at-risk kids," Warner said.

His committee also outlined several programs the city does not have, but needs.

Warner

School staff organized each of the reports into a matrix that defines clear goals for the district.

"We outlined their reports into four areas: policy or procedural change, budget item, community action or legislative issue," said Sally Griffith, at risk coordinator for the PISD.

The committee recommended 60 policy changes, 41 budget or major policy revisions, and a large number of community and legislative issues.

Mrs. Griffith defined community issues as those that were outside the boundaries of the districts ability to carry out.

Those items included urging all parents to get involved in schools by joining booster clubs, encouraging more minority reading programs at Clarendon College and asking Mexican-American churches to encourage their members to speak English at home and in the community.

Republicans try to stall minimum wage bill vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans, demanding lower pay for unskilled workers and Democratic action on President Reagan's nominees to the federal bench, are stalling action on raising the $3.35 minimum wage in high-stakes parliamentary maneuvering where the biggest stake is presidential politics.

"Unless we see progress with the judges and keep our ability to amend, we're going to be on the minimum wage a long time," Senate GOP Whip Alan Simpson of Wyoming said Tuesday.

Simpson made the comment following separate party strategy luncheons after Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia filed a second cloture motion in as many days to limit further debate on the bill by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

According to the Senate Judiciary Committee, 25 nominations by Reagan for federal judgeships are now pending before the panel and four other nominations are on the calendar for Senate floor action.

Kennedy's bill would raise the minimum wage by 40 cents an hour each of the next three years — to $3.75 in January, to $4.15 in 1990 and to $4.55 in 1991.

Vice President George Bush's presidential campaign said Tuesday that Bush likely would not unveil any specific minimum wage proposal until after his debate this Sunday with Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis.

"We're exploring a modest increase so long as it's tied to a subminimum or training wage," said David Sandor, a Bush campaign spokesman. "But there's nothing scheduled for this week."

Bush's vice presidential running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., offered an amendment in the Senate Labor Committee in July for raising the minimum wage over two years to $4 an hour and coupling it with an 80 percent subminimum for new hires.

The minimum wage has been stuck at $3.35 since 1981, with the Reagan administration contending for the past three years that any increase would have to be coupled with a subminimum standard.

The White House reiterated that position Tuesday, saying its senior advisers would recommend that Reagan veto any minimum wage increase that does not include a "training wage at a rate approximately four-fifths of the minimum wage for a specified period of time."

"The training wage would permit the administration to consider a reasonable increase in the minimum wage that would not bring about the unacceptable adverse economic effects" of Kennedy's bill, the White House said in a statement of administration policy.

The White House listed the primary adverse effects as fewer new job opportunities and higher inflation.

Byrd stopped short of accusing Republicans of filibustering the minimum wage bill, saying his cloture petitions were aimed only at curbing unrelated amendments.

The cloture motions, if approved by 60 senators in votes scheduled for Thursday and Friday, would effectively require an up-or-down vote on the minimum wage package.

City Commission hears requests for water services outside city

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Two requests for water service outside city limits were discussed when the Pampa City Commission met in a work session Tuesday afternoon in City Hall.

Previously, commissioners had taken a position of not granting anymore water service outside city limits because it had opened up a "Pandora's box" of problems.

"It's a question of, if we grant these two requests, how many more people are going to want to get in on this?" asked Commissioner Gary Sutherland.

Gary and Elizabeth Swinney, Rt. 2 Box 386-C, and Charlie Mullen, 232 Eshom Rd., both said water service has previously been available at their properties.

"I just bought this thing. On this place is four lots," Mullen said. "The man who owned the property split it, and I bought two of the lots with the house on it."

Mullen said the water meter is on the other two lots; therefore, the city had decided that technically water service had never been available at Mullen's property.

"I could have hooked up to the other meter and split the bill, but I found out that was illegal," Mullen said.

Illegal tapping of city water lines was part of the reason city commissioners decided to adopt a policy of not granting new water service outside the city.

"I don't know why they wouldn't approve (new service). It doesn't make a lot of sense, as long as the bill gets paid," Mullen said.

He said the gas and electric companies agreed to connect service to the house at no charge. "If the city won't give me water, I don't know what I'll do," Mullens said.

For the Swinneys, the lack of water has created problems with feeding livestock. Their property is located on South Barnes, outside the city limits.

"I'm having to carry water out every day to water my animals. I understand they have got their bureaucracy to go through, but I wish the process was faster," Mrs. Swinney said.

The Swinneys said a water main is on the property. However, when it was connected it was owned by Chase Oil. The city has ruled service in anyone else's name would be a new account.

"It doesn't seem like it's new service to me," said Commissioner Richard Peet. "The water is there. It's just a matter of turning it on."

Commissioner Joe Reed, who chaired the meeting in the absence of Mayor David McDaniel, said, "As a practical matter, you want to sell water. You want to sell water until it is not economically practical to sell it."

Reed said the commission had not fully dealt with problems surrounding water service in and out of the city limits.

"We need to get a handle on this before it gets out of hand," Reed said.

Problems with illegal taps on out-of-city water service in the so-called Horse Alley area created potential health problems due to the possibility of washback contamination.

"I hope you understand that we are not picking on you. It's a question of how many people are going to want to get in on this if we grant you service," Sutherland said.

The commission discussed the possibility of annexing the area around South Barnes to make it inside the city limits.

"I would like to know what kind of impact that would make on (raising) ad valorem tax money. I wonder if we could raise about $80,000 that way," Reed asked.

He was referring to the proposed 2 cent city tax hike that will raise about $80,000 a year in new revenues.

Swinney said they are hauling 20-25 gallons of water a week to the property to feed sheep.

The commission will again address the issue in two weeks.

Higher food, shelter and fuel costs send inflation rate up

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher costs for food, shelter and gasoline sent consumer prices up 0.4 percent in August, the government said today, as the effects of the drought in the Farm Belt began to ease.

The August increase, equivalent to an annual inflation rate of 5.2 percent, was the same as in July.

Higher rents and gasoline prices in large part replaced food as the sharpest spurs to higher prices.

Food and beverage prices were up 0.5 percent last month, compared to 0.6 percent and 0.9 percent gains in June and July, respectively.

Shelter costs, reflecting higher rates for hotel and motel rooms, were up 0.6 percent, the steepest gain in seven months.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said today that housing construction fell 3.3 percent in August, with a steep drop in apartment construction more than offsetting a modest gain in single-family home building.

The report said new homes and apartments were built at an annual rate of 1.44 million units last month, down 49,000 units from a month earlier.

The decline followed gains of 1.4 percent in July and 5.2 percent in June.

Economists had been expecting a drop in August because the Federal Reserve Board was pushing up interest rates in an effort to ease inflationary pressures.

The gains earlier in the summer have been attributed to homebuyers attempting to beat the rise in mortgage rates.

In its price report, the Labor Department said energy prices jumped 0.9 percent on a 3.0 percent boost in gasoline prices, their sharpest gain in a year. The report said, however, that gasoline prices were still slightly below the level of August 1987 and were 26 percent below their peak of March 1981.

The higher gasoline prices offset decreases for all household fuels. Heating oil costs were down 0.8 percent; natural gas prices were off 1.2 percent; electricity costs slipped 0.2 percent.

The lower home energy prices somewhat offset 0.4 percent increases in rents and repair expenses and a 0.5 percent gain in mortgage costs.

"Increases in the food, shelter and energy components accounted for over four-fifths of the August advance in consumer prices," said the Labor Department.

Excluding those three areas, which account for two-thirds of the goods and services consumers spent money on, prices rose just 0.2 percent last month, compared to a 0.3 percent jump in July.

Grocery store prices continued to climb, but at a slower pace than in July. Those prices were up 0.8 percent last month, compared to a 1.4 percent jump in July. That had been their largest gain in 4½ years.

"About 90 percent of the August advance was due to price increases for items that were adversely affected by the drought — fruits and vegetables, cereal and bakery products, poultry and eggs," the department said.

Fruit and vegetable prices rose 1.3 percent after being up 2.9 percent in the preceding month. They have jumped a total of 10.6 percent over the last year.

Cereal and bakery product prices were up 1.6 percent, reflecting higher prices for wheat, oats and eggs. The August increase was the largest since January 1981.

The government's calculation of prices for meats, poultry, fish and eggs rose 0.5 percent as gains of 8.4 percent for eggs and 2.1 percent for poultry were partially offset by declines in the costs of beef, pork and seafood.

Restaurant meal prices gained 0.3 percent while alcoholic beverage prices jumped 0.1 percent.

Panel looks at Social Security, military cuts to balance budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Out of the glare of the presidential campaign, a bipartisan commission is quietly crafting a proposed solution to the federal budget deficit that would include cuts in Social Security and defense spending as well as possible increases in consumption taxes.

That is the word from Democrat Robert Strauss, who is co-chairman of the 12-member commission along with Republican Drew Lewis.

Strauss provided a tantalizing glimpse Tuesday of what options the panel is considering recommending to the new president. The panel, concerned about becoming embroiled in the presidential campaign, has purposely kept out of the public eye since July.

Strauss indicated that work has been going on behind the scenes and he said the commission will resume holding public hearings immediately after the Nov. 8 election. The commission would like to finish its work by Dec. 21.

The commission, which is split evenly between Democrats and Republicans, was created by Congress last year in an attempt to break the impasse between President Reagan's refusal to increase taxes and the refusal of the Democratic-controlled Congress to cut government spending enough to bring the deficit under control.

Strauss said the group probably will recommend a four- or five-year plan to eliminate the deficit, which this year is expected to total about $152 billion.

Social Security benefits, Medicare and other entitlement programs and defense spending will have to be cut, Strauss said, since they account for 68 percent of total spending.

Strauss said the commission was aware of the political firestorm likely to be triggered by such suggestions.

"That means you are withholding money from the sick, the elderly and the defense of the nation," he said.

Strauss said top priority will be given to spending cuts and only after they are exhausted would the commission look at possible tax increases as a way of balancing the budget.

His comments marked the most detailed discussion yet of where the commission is headed. The panel has been criticized for not holding public meetings in the past several months, opting instead to hold informal discussions with less than a quorum present in order to avoid requirements of the Government in the Sunshine Law.

But Strauss defended this approach, saying the commission's chances of success would be doomed if the presidential candidates were forced to take a stand now on every proposal the panel was considering.

Democrat Michael Dukakis has indicated a willingness to listen to the group's recommendations, but Republican George Bush has vowed to ignore any calls for a tax increase.

On the revenue side, Strauss said the commission was examining boosting so-called sin taxes such as federal levies on cigarettes and alcohol. Strauss said that other types of consumption taxes also would be considered.

While Strauss did not talk about gasoline taxes in his presentation, there have been published reports that a hike in the gasoline tax of up to 50 cents is among the tax options the commission is studying.

Strauss' comments came during a two-day conference on the economic problems which will face the next president. The top economic advisers to both Bush and Dukakis were participants in the program.

Gang rape trial testimony under way

SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP) — A prosecution witness said he saw a group of men sexually assault a 19-year-old woman on the hood of a car, including Orlando Garza, the first of 10 men to face trial in the gang-rape case.

"They were just like dogs," Jose Carlos Briones said in Spanish Tuesday through an interpreter during the first day of testimony in the 229th District Court in Duval County.

Prosecution testimony was scheduled to continue today.

Briones said he saw the woman "necking" with Garza inside Garza's car shortly before the alleged assault took place near a shed where a cockfight was being held.

Later, he said he saw Garza forcing the woman to perform sexual acts, and that the defendant also helped restrain her while other men attacked her.

Briones also faces a sexual assault charge in the case, but said Tuesday he did not remember being offered probation in exchange for his prosecution testimony.

All 10 men in the case have entered innocent pleas on charges ranging from kidnapping to aggravated kidnapping to sexual assault.

Defense attorney Albert Pena questioned Briones' credibility by bringing out a court-ordered competency report on the witness.

Corpus Christi psychiatrist Laurence Taylor reported in June that Briones told him, "She was lying there letting everybody do it. She loved it — no screaming from her. She was a run-around."

Briones said Tuesday he did not remember making that statement.

The competency examination, requested by Briones' attorney, found that he was capable of facing trial.

The woman told authorities she was assaulted repeatedly over a period of several hours by as many as 20 men.

Briones testified Tuesday that the woman initially appeared willing to be with Garza, but later resisted.

"She was groaning and crying," Briones said.

Garza also faces a kidnapping trial in connection with the case. Briones admitted fondling her, but denied raping her.

The 29-year-old witness said he remembered seeing the woman sodomized, with Garza as one of the participants.

Asked how many men participated in the alleged gang rape, he answered, "I don't remember because there were a whole bunch of them."

He said he tried to stop the men from raping the woman, but they did not listen.

Before testimony began Tuesday, the prosecutor apologized to the jury in advance for sexually explicit language.

Hurricane Helene gaining in strength

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Helene formed early today in the central Atlantic and forecasters say the ocean's fourth hurricane this year has already begun to strengthen as it churns across open water.

Helene, packing sustained winds of 85 mph, is the first hurricane to form since Gilbert went on a rampage last week through the Caribbean, Mexico and the Texas Gulf Coast.

At 11 a.m. CDT, the center of Helene was located near latitude 12.0 north, longitude 40.2 west, or about 1,300 miles east of Barbados, according to an advisory from the National Hurricane Center.

The storm, with winds clocked at 75 mph when it became a hurricane early today, was moving west at 12 mph and was expected to maintain that course for the next day or two, the advisory said.

At 5 a.m. CDT, the center of Helene was located near latitude 12.1 north, longitude 39.3 west, or about 1,450 miles east of the Lesser Antilles, according to an advisory from the National Hurricane Center.

"Conditions are quite favorable for it to pick up strength, there's nothing to stop it way out there in the middle of the ocean," said Stanley Wright, a meteorologist at the hurricane center. "But it's still way too early to tell if it will get as big as Gilbert."

Meteorologist Randy Lascody said the path of Helene, the eighth named storm of the Atlantic hurricane season, cannot be projected until it moves closer to the Caribbean.

"It's going across the warmest water of the year now, which is perfect to fuel its growth," Lascody said. "But it really would be very premature to give a guess on what may happen. It still has a long way to go."

Storms that form this month near the Cape Verde Islands off Africa's coast are often the season's strongest because of ideal hurricane-spawning conditions, forecasters say.

Factors such as low-pressure zones in the Caribbean and high-level winds will affect the path of the storm, said Lascody.

"It looks like it will reach a peak point sometime later this week," he said.

The depression that became Helene had initially seemed disorganized when it formed two days ago, but satellite photos showed circulation had improved.

It will take about four days for Helene to get close enough to the Caribbean to allow an Air Force reconnaissance plane to fly over the storm.

Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of schools, said the administration would be making suggestions to the board on new policies that would implement the Pampa 2000 recommendations.

The goal of the group is to have as many programs in place as possible in the next 11 1/2 years.

The board also voted to apply for a 22-1 student-teacher ratio waiver. The board will vote in October on where to build 18-20 new classrooms in the district to deal with long-term overcrowding problems.

Boulter's campaign banking on Reagan's Waco appearance

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Rep. Beau Boulter's uphill campaign to unseat Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is banking on a big boost from President Reagan's trip to Waco this week, but Democrats say it shouldn't make much difference in the race.

A spokesman for Boulter's campaign, Joe Fleming, said the two-term Amarillo congressman expects to raise $100,000 in a private fund-raiser with the president Thursday in the conservative Central Texas city.

The White House announced Friday that Reagan planned to attend a rally at Baylor University and appear at a private fund-raiser for Boulter, a graduate of the Baylor law school.

President Reagan will also visit the Johnson Space Center and attend a Houston fund-raising event Thursday evening, possibly with Republican presidential nominee George Bush, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"It's going to be a great day with Ronald Reagan coming to help us with our fund-raising effort," said Fleming.

"It's a tremendous boost that the most popular president in modern history is coming to campaign on behalf of Beau Boulter in an area that's critical to our campaign."

But Anita Dunn, a spokesman for the Democratic Senatorial Committee, said she doubted Reagan's presence would do much to sway Texas voters away from Bentsen, a three-term senator.

"He (Boulter) will need more than the money that will be generated at this event to convince Texas voters that he can beat Lloyd Bentsen," Dunn said. "It will help him raise money — it will probably double his campaign in the amount he has raised so far."

Bentsen, who is also running as the Democratic vice presidential nominee under a Texas law that permits both races, has far surpassed Boulter in fund-raising for his Senate campaign, according to reports filed with the Federal Election Commission.

At the end of the last reporting period, June 30, Bentsen had $3.8 million cash on hand to the $14,098 in Boulter's campaign kitty.

Since the first of last year through the end of June, the Democratic senator who chairs the influential Senate Finance Committee had raised $6.1 million and spent just over $3 million. Boulter during the same period raised $587,254 and spent $582,721.

But Fleming said fund-raising has picked up significantly for Boulter since July 12, when Bentsen signed on as running mate to Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, and the campaign's next FEC report will show a total of $1 million has been raised.

"Big things are starting to happen and our message is starting to take hold," Fleming said.

Boulter has hit on Bentsen for "hedging his bets" by running two races, and for teaming up with a Massachusetts governor who is, Fleming said, "way out of the mainstream" with more conservative Texas voters.

Fleming said Republican vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle also plans campaign appearances in Texas with Boulter on Sept. 27 and 28.

"If Texas is the big enchilada, which Richard Nixon said it is, and I think it is, they you'll see a lot more (high-ranking Republicans) coming into the state," Fleming said.

Dunn, however, believes voters decide a Senate race on its own merits and not on whether a candidate campaigns with Reagan or other heavyweights.

She said Reagan in 1984 campaigned in 49 states but the Democrats still picked up two seats.

Dukakis proposes requiring employers to give private insurance for workers

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

HOUSTON (AP) — Democrat Michael Dukakis proposed Tuesday that the federal government require employers to provide minimum health insurance coverage for all American workers, which his campaign said would provide benefits to about 22 million people who have none.

Underscoring his emphasis on health issues, the Massachusetts governor campaigned at a Houston medical center with visits to two clinics. He was to present his health insurance plan in a speech at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green, Ky.

At Hermann Hospital, part of the Texas Medical Center, the Democratic nominee sat with a dozen selected patients and family members in the waiting room of a cancer ward and asked each in turn about medical costs and health insurance problems.

"I think it's time we did something," he said. "It's getting worse ..."

"If all goes well on the 8th of November, Sen. (Lloyd) Bentsen and I are going to do something about it," Dukakis said. "Spread the word."

His campaign issued a statement saying that as president,

Dukakis would propose legislation that would require all employers to provide basic health plans for their workers, with special provisions for small and start-up businesses.

Dukakis' health adviser, Dr. David Blumenthal of Boston, said the campaign had no estimate of what the proposal would cost employers. The statement said it would not cost the federal government anything.

The statement also said that if elected, Dukakis would appoint a task force to report by March 30, 1989, on follow-up legislation that would guarantee universal health coverage, thus extending benefits to every American, working or not.

Blumenthal said 37 million to 40 million Americans are without health insurance. He said the initial Dukakis plan would guarantee coverage to about two-thirds of them by requiring that employers provide insurance or risk civil penalties.

The other one-third would be covered under the second-step universal health plan.

The follow-up plan for all Americans presumably would require some federal financing, but the campaign was silent on that question. Details apparently would be worked out by the task force. Blumenthal said the proposed national plan was patterned after a Massachusetts system not yet six months old, which is to provide health care coverage to every state resident by 1992.

The prospective cost of that system is a topic of debate. Dukakis estimated net cost at about $623 million through 1992; some critics say it would be twice that much.

The stress on health care was part of the campaign effort to take control of the political agenda, and choose topics instead of replying to Republican political offensives.

Dukakis punctuated it with a daylong offensive against his Republican rival.

Campaigning with his running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Dukakis said he wondered what might have happened during the past eight years if President Reagan had chosen a vice president "strong enough to think for himself and speak up for himself."

Dukakis said he chose Bentsen because he didn't want a yes man but a strong man who would "speak his mind and make a difference."

"We haven't had that kind of vice president" in Bush, Dukakis said. Campaigning in Little Rock Monday, Dukakis told an invited audience of about 800 that Bush's proposal for a reduction in the capital gains tax is "a warmed-over call to selfishness."

He said Bush's vision is of "a complacent America, an America that wants to look backward."

Dukakis added that even Republicans realize four more years of Reaganomics would be bad, "and four more years of Reaganomics without Reagan would be a disaster."

At a Houston forum sponsored by representatives of the depressed oil industry, Dukakis accused Bush of changing his tune on energy policy, promising to stop offshore drilling when in California, supporting it when in Texas.

"George Bush is like a coin," Dukakis told an audience of about 1,000 at the Houston Club Monday night. "They just flip him. Sometimes he lands on his head. Sometimes he lands on his tail."

At the energy forum, where Bush was jeered for declining to appear, Dukakis promised to pay premiums or provide tax incentives to purchase domestic oil and promote oil and gas drilling. He did not estimate the cost or say how it would be financed.

Experts say computer case sets a precedent

By TIM LOTT
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH (AP) — Industry experts say the conviction of a man charged with spreading a computer "virus" in his old company's system after being fired could pave the way for more guilty verdicts.

"It's very rare that the people who spread the viruses are caught," said John McAfee, chairman of the Computer Virus Industry Association based in Santa Clara, Calif.

"It's absolutely precedent setting. This is absolutely the first time," for a conviction, McAfee said Tuesday.

Donald Gene Burleson, 40, was convicted Monday of charges of harmful access to a computer, a third-degree felony that carries up to 10 years in prison and up to $5,000 in fines. Sentencing is set for Oct. 21.

"In the past, prosecutors have stayed away from this kind of case because they're too hard to prove," said Tarrant County Assistant District Attorney Davis McCown.

"They have also been reluctant because the victim doesn't want to let anyone know there has been a breach of security."

A key to the conviction was that State District Judge John Bradshaw allowed the computer program that deleted the files to be introduced into the case as evidence, McCown said.

Burleson planted the virus in revenge for his firing from an insurance company, McCown said.

During a technical and sometimes-complicated trial that spanned three weeks, jurors were told that Burleson planted a rogue program in the computer system used to store records at USPA and IRA Co., a Fort Worth-based insurance and brokerage firm.

The so-called virus was programmed like a time bomb and was activated on Sept. 21, 1985, two days after Burleson was fired from his post as a computer programmer, because of alleged personality conflicts with other employees, McCown said.

The virus could have caused hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage to the system, but was caught and expunged after it destroyed a series of payroll records.

The case may offer two precedents, McCown said.

One is admittance of the "virus" program as evidence — a strategy other attorneys may want to follow in similar cases, he said.

The second is found in the conviction itself. "It is legal precedent in that it makes new law, but it really won't be strengthened until it's upheld by a higher court," McCown said.

Burleson's attorney, Jack Beech, maintained Burleson is innocent and said he is considering appeal but might not have enough money.

Beech, Beech said, Burleson is likely to get the minimum sentence of two years' probation.

"I think if he got probation and no fine, then it would be saying this crime is all right," McCown said.

"But the conviction is the big issue," McCown said. "The punishment is secondary. The conviction is enough to deter." Burleson already has lost a civil case waged against him by USPA in connection with the incident. The jury in that case ordered him to pay $12,000 to his former employers.

Cavazos reports to his new post today

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lauro Cavazos reported for his first full day of work as the new education secretary today with plans to meet his staff and outline where he stands on the issues and how he'll manage the Department of Education.

Cavazos, confirmed by the Senate 94-0 and sworn into office by fellow Texan and Republican presidential nominee George Bush in a White House ceremony Tuesday, had planned three get-acquainted sessions with department employees this morning, a spokesman said.

"He considers that an important courtesy, that people should meet their boss directly before they meet him on television," said spokesman Tom Lyon. "He has made it clear it is something he wants to do."

Cavazos planned to fly home to Lubbock later in the day to pack his belongings, following a scheduled news conference at the department.

The president of Texas Tech University and its medical school, Cavazos is the first Hispanic member of a president's Cabinet.

President Reagan called the 61-year-old registered Democrat "a sterling example of the magnificent contributions Hispanic Americans have made to our national life."

"Larry Cavazos has already made a major contribution to American education," Reagan said. "He brings to his new post a record of solid accomplishments that promises even bigger contributions in the future."

But on top of that, Reagan said, Cavazos brings "something even more important to our schools and to our students, something I've made a cornerstone of this administration's policies since day one — the idea of educational excellence and a passionate commitment to quality schools."

Vice President Bush gave Cavazos the oath of office as Cavazos' wife, Peggy, held the family bible. The couple's 10 children also attended the East Room ceremony.

Cavazos said Reagan's leadership and commitment to education had "truly helped this country make significant gains and strides" but "we must awaken

Cavazos

America to renew its commitment to education" to help all citizens reach their potential.

Earlier, senators praised Cavazos, the son of a Texas cattleman on the legendary King Ranch who worked his way through college and graduate school to become president of Texas Tech, as an American success story.

Boy falls to death under school bus wheels

DALLAS (AP) — A 13-year-old boy fell beneath the wheels of a school bus he was attempting to board and was crushed to death while hundreds of students watched, authorities say.

Adonis Collins, a student at Gaston Middle School, was pronounced dead at Baylor University Medical Center Tuesday morning, officials said.

The eighth-grader was trying to catch his bus as it pulled away from the curb at John Henry Brown Elementary in South Dallas.

The boy pounded on the side of the bus, jumped up and clung to a window to get the driver's attention, but he lost his grip, fell to the pavement and was crushed by the rear wheels, witnesses said.

There were 66 students aboard the bus as it pulled away from the curb and dozens of students at the elementary school and dozens more from Pearl C. Anderson Learning Center witnessed the accident.

Homer Garner, 59, an alternative education teacher at Gaston and driver of the bus, was being counseled by a Dallas Independent School District psychologist Tuesday.

Garner was not at fault and no charges would be filed against him, police said.

"There was no way the driver was at fault. It was a freak accident. It was almost unpreventable."

Pat Raney, assistant director of the Dallas County Schools transportation services, said Garner told the bus system safety supervisor that the boy often was late catching the bus and he had discussed this problem with him.

"There was no way the driver was at fault," Ms. Raney said. "It was a freak accident. It was almost unpreventable."

The driver was in shock after the accident, she said.

"At first he was handling it real well, but I think he was really in a state of shock," she said. "He wanted to continue to drive the route, but the supervisor had another bus pick up the students."

"Then, after he got to school and the assistant principal told him the student had passed away, he became very emotional. He is very upset, and I'm not sure when he'll drive again."

Teams of psychologists counseled children who witnessed the accident.

Betty Dodd, a school psychologist who spoke with children who were on the bus, said children suffer grief in the same way as adults.

"Some kids just collapse and are completely undone; other kids go into shock and say, 'I don't believe this,'" Dodd said. "We've seen the range here."

"He was a real nice kid," said Robert Lee Collins, the boy's father. "I never had any problems with Adonis. He worked hard at school."

Collins, a custodian at Brown, where the accident occurred, said the day had begun routinely.

"I was in bed this morning and he came in to say, 'Goodbye, Robert Lee.' That's what he called me sometimes, Robert Lee," the father said. "And I said, 'Goodbye, be careful, just like I always said to him. He left on the early bus because he usually ate breakfast when he got to school.'"

Collins' daughters summoned him to Brown, down the block from his small frame house, only minutes later.

"When I got there he was lying there in a pool of blood, breathing hard," Collins said. "He was in no shape to talk. I went with him to the hospital, but I don't even think he knew I was there."

"I love him. I'm gonna remember him for saying 'Goodbye, Robert Lee' and running out," the father said.

The boy was carrying a handwritten copy of bus safety rules in his notebook at the time he died. They had been given to students as part of the current observance of National School Bus Safety Week.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

We need another leader — Nobody!

Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle should be off the ticket. He has proved to be a lightweight rich kid who has trouble answering a straightforward question with a straightforward answer. He's embarrassed us long enough. Away with him!

Naturally, that judgment raises questions about the judgment of the man who's raised him so suddenly to prominence. In his first action as a presidential candidate, George Bush demonstrated that he has been a second banana so long he has little idea how to make an important decision. But that's nothing new. It's doubtful that he's ever entertained a political idea in his life longer than it takes to get a reading on it from public opinion polls. Does he have any political philosophy more profound than a desire to hold offices? Away with him, too!

Which brings us to the guys in the other party. If Dan Quayle has demonstrated that it can be tough to deal with little insignificant fibs, Michael Dukakis has shown that an ambitious politico can get away with a Big Lie for quite a while. The Massachusetts Miracle? Insofar as there has been one, it has been based on tax cuts by his predecessor and the Reagan tax cut and defense build-up. Dukakis has done everything he can to derail the Massachusetts economy with higher taxes, more regulation and misguided efforts at central management, and his gubernatorial administration has had more than its share of sleaze. Away with him!

Then there's the Democratic veep aspirant. Lloyd Bentsen has demonstrated an uncanny ability to abandon any political position he has held in the past — tax cuts, Contra aid, etc. — in the service of the politician's lust for higher office. Away with him!

The point is that there is simply nobody in the country qualified to fill the kind of office the presidency has become. We expect the president to manage the economy, set a moral tone, help us Just Say No to all the evil temptations in life, to be simultaneously a philosopher and a down-home, aw-shucks kind of guy who can bear any burden. We've invested the president with power beyond that held by many absolute tyrants, and we have expectations beyond what we'd ask of a god.

Reposing so much expectation in a single person, and surrendering so much power to, him is an unhealthy exercise for free people in a free republic. Maybe it's time for a rest. Maybe we should just leave the office vacant for four years or so. Maybe we'll rediscover that we can get along fine without an official father-figure or an ersatz monarch.

Nobody for President? Well, at least Nobody will tell you the truth.

Let's be tolerant of librarians

WASHINGTON — School librarians have something in common with the policemen of The Pirates of Penzance. From time to time, when there's duty to be done, their lot is not a happy one. They must fix boundaries on a child's freedom to read, and these boundaries are fearfully difficult to define.

In a just-published booklet by Henry Reichman, Censorship and Selection, these difficulties are fairly described. Incidents of "censorship" appear to be increasing across the country, as pressure groups attack both textbooks and library books and demand their removal.

Reichman writes under the auspices of the American Library Association and the American Association of School Administrators. In an ideal world, he suggests, all such decisions would be left to librarians, educators and professional administrators "without external interference." Their training and experience equip them to judge which books will best serve the goals of education in a free society.

But ours is not an ideal world. Parents of schoolchildren have a right to be heard. The political process cannot be ignored. Even the best librarians are not infallible. Challenges come from blacks, demanding that Huckleberry Finn be prohibited as recommended reading in high school English classes.

Challenges come from white fundamentalists, demanding equal time for creationism. Liberals and conservatives alike seek to mold library shelves to their point of view.

Reichman grapples with the distinction between "selection" and "censorship," but he never quite pins it down. When a librarian decides not to buy a particular book, is this an act of professional judgement? Or is the librarian stuck in "the mire of self-censorship"? Once a controversial book is purchased for a school library, may the book never be removed? Why is it "selection" to put the book on a shelf but "censorship" to take it off?

The questions defy easy answers. School librarians have an obligation to choose a wide variety of published material to supplement classroom instruction. Their resources are pitifully small. A budget may limit the purchase of new books to no more than a hundred titles a year.

Choosing the first 99 may be relatively easy. But what of the 100th that must be chosen to the exclusion of the 101st?

To be sure, librarians have certain obvious lamps to guide their way. One is the "reputation" of the author. One American author of note is William Faulkner. Should the librarian therefore buy Faulkner's comic novel, The Reivers? Much of the book involves two whores in a Memphis brothel.

Is this fit reading for 16-year-olds? Many parents would say no. Others would say yes. Suppose we are at the critical point of the 100th book to be purchased: Is Faulkner in? Or out?

What about books that contain those dirty four-letter words? The words appear in many contemporary novels by established authors whose work is published by reputable houses. Should such novels be made available in a high school library?

Reichman contends that the purchase of a controversial work should not be regarded as official approval of the work. There is a difference between recommending a book and merely making it available.

Those who love libraries understand this distinction clearly, but not everyone shares this affection. Besides, good librarians are not meant to be as mute as maps; they are not potted palms. Of course they will recommend particular titles to children who are eager to read. Librarians are as mortal as justices of the Supreme Court, whose personal prejudices shape the law of the land.

Do children have a constitutional right to have certain books in their school library? The Supreme Court tackled the issue in what is known as the Pico case of 1982, but the issue slipped away. Justice William Brennan found such an implied right in the First Amendment, but he failed to muster a majority of the court for that bizarre conclusion.

Well, this is National Library Month, so let us hear it for good librarians everywhere — and especially for the good librarians in public schools. In the best school districts they will be supported — at least most of the time — by principals, superintendents, school boards and local newspapers.

If they purchase a few books with four-letter words, let us be tolerant. A high school student will have discovered the four-letter word for flatulence before he reads Chaucer in the library. Let the winds of doctrine blow!

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, Sept. 21, the 265th day of 1988. There are 101 days left in the year. This is Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement.

Today's highlight in history:
In 1938, a devastating hurricane with winds clocked at more than 180 mph struck parts of New York and New England with little warning, causing widespread damage and claiming more than 600 lives. (The hurricane bears no name because the system for assigning names to major tropical storms did not go into effect until 1953.)

On this date:
In 1792, the French National Convention voted to abolish the monarchy.

In 1866, English novelist H.G. Wells was born.

In 1897, the New York Sun ran its famous "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus" editorial that answered 8-year-old Virginia O'Hanlon's letter about Santa's existence.

In 1931, Britain went off the gold standard.

In 1937, The Hobbit, by J.R.R. Tolkien, was first published.

Super-rich keeping quiet now

The super-rich are not strutting their assets anymore. Terrorism and kidnapping for profit have taken the fun out of flamboyance.

The posh marinas of the world once once showcased the yachts of the rich and famous. Today, around most any harbor, the owners of the big boats are as anonymous as possible.

There are a scant few exceptions — a Donald Trump whose public image is essential to his investment strategy — and the rare movie star whose ego outweighs his (or her) paranoia. But, for the most part, the world's wealthy these days prefer the lowest possible public profile.

Talk show hosts find it increasingly difficult to find willing subjects from among the industrial elite.

Similarly, architecture magazines that formerly showcased homes of the elite now must make do with photographs of the homes of fashion designers and rock musicians who have something to sell.

My son, Paul, researching The Rest of the Story stories, discovered that a corporate tycoon whose name you would recognize had also written a popular love song that you would recognize.

The industrial giant and his corporate board and his insurers are so anxious for his vulnerability to kidnapping, that he asked us please not to give him any added prominence. Understanding and respecting his reasons, we set aside what would have been a charming story of "the sentimental giant."

The low profile does not always serve its purpose. Industrialist-banker Bob Hearin of Jackson, Miss., and his family — though wealthy — lived modestly; no yachts, no palace on the Riviera, no "showy" personal life. The Hearins have been among the South's hardest working, most generous and least pretentious of families.

Yet, this did not spare her from being kidnapped from their Woodland Drive home.

A proliferation of security-related industries has responded to the increasing public anxiety. Every metropolitan telephone directory includes a variety of home-protection devices. A multiplicity of schools have been established to teach executives and their chauffeurs "defensive driving" to elude kidnapers. Increasingly, corporate boards restrict the overseas travel of their top officers.

A New York City publisher friend of mine can quite afford any form of luxury transportation. Instead, he has himself driven to work each morning by an unshaven, plain-appearing bodyguard in a shabby, solid panel van. Behind the panels, Henry sits at a desk with a portable telephone and "works his way" to and from his Manhattan office.

Airport hangars that shelter corporate jets have initiated elaborate security measures with round-the-clock surveillance by carefully selected security guards.

Further evidence of everybody's vulnerability these days is the increased sale of synthetic jewels as precious stones become insurable only at prohibitive rates.

Ironically, it was the underworld that was first to teach us how to hide our assets. Ever since Capone, to circumvent IRS scrutiny the upper-echelon crime family bosses have sought for themselves and their associates a minimum of media coverage.

It seems the ultimate irony that it is now law-abiding people who must be "locked up," behind electric fences and guarded gates and bolted doors and barred windows — while the "good life" of fancy cars and private jets and luxury yachts is enjoyed mostly by drug-dealing hoods.

Then tell us what war Dukakis was in

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Ever since our liberal media spent a whole week trashing Dan Quayle for having joined the National Guard during the Vietnam War, I have been fascinated by the iron reticence of Dukakis' headquarters on the subject of the Massachusetts Miracle's own military record.

You can't call it a "war record," because he doesn't have one. Instead, Dukakis chose — I repeat, chose — to spend the Korean War years studying at Swarthmore College (as was his legal right), while other Americans his age, who didn't have the smarts or maybe the money to get into college, or who just chose to serve, were fighting and in some cases dying in Korea.

Then, as recently reported in this column, when peace had returned, Dukakis shrewdly got his military obligation out of the way by "letting himself be drafted" for two peacetime years (rather than enlisting for the usual four).

He spent 16 of those 24 months as an enlisted man in peacetime Korea, rising to the rank of specialist third class. According to his campaign staff, he was assigned to "a support unit for the U.N. command delegation" that conducted the interminable peace negotiations with the North Koreans at Panmunjom on the DMZ.

Exactly what young Dukakis did for the U.N. command delegation is something I have been unable to wrench from his staff. Did he fill the water pitchers on our side of the negotiating table? Did he empty the ashtrays? Did he type? Or did he simply peel potatoes, like many another GI on KP duty?

I was still musing idly on this question the other day when there came to hand a copy of the March 1988 issue of Boston Magazine, containing an article entitled "The Duke Does Dixie." The author, Ken Englade, was described by the magazine as "a freelance writer who lives in Atlanta," and his piece was a mildly critical analysis of how Dukakis was doing (or rather, as Englade saw it, not doing) in the South during the primary campaign.

What caught my eye, though, was a short paragraph in which Englade was describing Dukakis' visit to a Veterans Administration hospital in Atlanta last November. "In a brief warm-up speech," Englade reported, "Dukakis recalled his own years in the Army: 'I spent 18 (sic) months sitting in a rice paddy in Korea praying I'd get back in one piece.'"

Now that must have gone over pretty well with the hospitalized veterans in Atlanta, but it clearly presents problems for people like you and me, who know the truth. At a minimum Dukakis' quoted statement is seriously misleading; one would be justified in calling it in effect a brazen lie.

Maybe the "support units" for the U.N. command delegation in South Korea in the peacetime years of the mid-1950s were housed in rice paddies (though I doubt it). But, whether Dukakis was or not, what put him in fear of life and limb? Was he afraid the general's limousine might run him down en route to the peace talks? Or did he fear that he would cut himself peeling potatoes and bleed to death?

At this point, Dukakis' headquarters in Boston has had my questions on these subjects, and my unlisted phone number, for more than two days now, but the phone hasn't rung — even though the young lady I talked to volunteered that they "have that article on file" and that she had relayed my queries to someone capable of answering them.

As usual, though, the really fascinating point is not whether Dukakis is the liar he appears to be, but the performance of the media. This information has been on the public record for at least six months, yet there is the feeding frenzy? Come on, Sam Donaldson; here's your big chance.

It's a bird! No, it's a plane! Nah — it's actually Mars!

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Mars' closest approach to Earth in 17 years — and the best Northern Hemisphere view of the red planet in 113 years — has backyard astronomers peering excitedly through telescopes.

A network of 500 mostly amateur astronomers in 33 countries has been organized for Mars Watch '88 by the International Mars Patrol and the Planetary Society, which has dubbed the occasion "a close encounter of the red kind."

"Unless you're on the North Pole or South Pole, you'll get good views of Mars" through telescopes until mid-December, said Dr. Donald Parker, a Coral Gables, Fla., anesthesiologist and "Mars recorder" for the patrol, which is part of the Association of Lunar and Planetary Observers.

"You can see the surface, the clouds and the polar ice caps and really realize it is a whole world," Parker said. "Occasionally we've seen shadows cast by big dust storms. It's really neat."

"For observers in the Northern Hemisphere, Mars is more favorably positioned than at any time from 1875 through 2025" because it's not only closer, but farther north in the sky than usual, said Jeff Beish, an Eastern Airlines technician in Miami who collects reports for the Mars Patrol.

Mars watchers already have provided 1,200 reports, photographs and sketches to Parker and Beish, who send key findings to Jet Propulsion Laboratory astronomer Stephen Edberg, who coordinates Mars Watch '88 during his spare time.

The observations mean "when we send cosmonauts or astronauts to Mars, we're going to have a better understanding of the planet," said Edberg.

"Mountaineers use telescopes to look at routes before they try them. The same goes for preparing for manned exploration of a planet."

The Pasadena-based Planetary Society is a non-profit group lobbying for manned exploration of Mars.

At 10:18 p.m. CDT today Earth and Mars will be 36.54 million miles apart — the closest since they were 34.92 million miles apart in August 1971, said telescope demonstrator Anthony Cook, of Los Angeles' Griffith Observatory.

Mars and Earth are close now because on Aug. 12 Mars was at perihelion — its closest approach to the sun — while at 10:25 p.m. CDT Sept. 27 it will reach opposition, meaning it is on the opposite side of Earth from the sun.

They won't be so close again until Aug. 27, 2003, when they get within 34.65 million miles. They sometimes are as far as 248 million miles apart.

To the naked eye or through binoculars, Mars now is easily visible all night as a reddish-orange spark, the evening sky's second brightest object after the moon.

For Northern Hemisphere viewers, Mars appears low in the east-southeast after dark. At midnight, it is halfway between the southern horizon and a point directly overhead. Before dawn, it is low in the west-southwest.

The smallest telescopes capable of providing detailed views of Mars are 3-inch refractors or 4-inch reflectors, each with 150-power magnification, Cook said.

Because time on big telescopes is dominated by observations of distant stars and galaxies, "most of the round-the-clock watch of the planet is kept by amateur astronomers."

Parker, 49, has spent nights outdoors to watch Mars for 40 years.

"I have very bad arthritis and get mosquito bites, but I look at this damn planet and it makes my whole day," he said. "I hope in my lifetime men will get to Mars. It's always been a dream of mine."

Bush joins patrons at Glenwood Diner in Bloomfield, N.J.

Dukakis: Where's your plan, Bush?

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis challenged Republican rival George Bush to spell out his health insurance program for American workers while negotiators for the two candidates wrangled over panel members and podium heights for the upcoming presidential debate.

The Democratic nominee, who offered his own health care plan Tuesday, called on Bush to step out "from behind the flag" and address the issue of providing health care to the 37 million Americans who are unable to afford it.

The vice president spent the day touring a flag manufacturing company in Bloomfield, N.J., where he told employees, "My friends, flag sales are doing well and America is doing well."

Bush's own political fortunes received a boost from the latest ABC News-Washington Post poll. The survey of 1,271 likely voters found that 70 percent consider the GOP nominee to be a known quantity compared with 54 percent who said they didn't know enough about Dukakis.

The poll, conducted Wednesday through Monday, also found the two candidates in a near dead heat with Bush leading Dukakis 50 percent to 46 percent. The margin of error of three points either way virtually negated the lead.

A similar ABC-Post poll released last week found Dukakis holding a slim three-point lead.

Bush was taking a day off from campaigning today to prepare for Sunday's debate with Dukakis in Winston-Salem, N.C. — the first face-to-face encounter between the two contenders.

A mock debate with former Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard G. Darman standing in for Dukakis and Bush working on responses to issues questions, with advisers giving their assessment, were on the vice president's agenda, according to aides.

Dukakis was introducing another health care plan — government-guaranteed pre-natal and infant care for all, tending to statehouse duties in Boston and preparing for the debate.

Negotiations on debate logistics hit a snag Tuesday as the two presidential campaigns failed to agree on the height of the lecterns and the composition of the panel.

Paul Broutas, chairman of the Dukakis campaign, said Tuesday that the bipartisan commission handling the debate had agreed on podiums 42 inches high. But Bush campaign officials, according to Broutas, asked that the podium height be raised to 46 inches.

Broutas said that if the height is raised, the 5-foot-8 Dukakis would insist on a riser.

A Bush campaign source, who requested anonymity, said the 6-foot-1 vice president usually speaks at a 52-inch podium but had agreed to 46 inches.

The two sides also failed to agree on the makeup of the panel, with Dukakis suggesting television anchors to question the candidates and the Bush campaign proposing print journalists.

While the debate over the debate continued, Dukakis used campaign appearances in Bowling Green, Ky., and Houston to propose a broad health care plan beginning with the 22 million Americans who have no insurance. That would leave 15 million or more Americans still awaiting protection, campaign aides said.

Angry blacks battle police after shooting in Louisiana

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Hundreds of angry blacks looted or burned four stores and held off authorities with rocks and bottles early today after a black man was fatally shot, police said.

Two white women were arrested after the shooting at a park, described by police as an area with drug problems. Police did not release the women's names and no charges were immediately filed.

During the rock-throwing, a seven-block area was cordoned off and police warned motorists to stay away.

Police Chief Charles Gruber said the crowd could have been as big as 1,000 people at the height of the disturbance, but most estimates put the figure between 300 and 500 during most of the evening.

Reba White, 22, said she was at a convenience store when the shooting happened in the nearby park. The rock-throwing started when officers took the two women inside the store and a crowd gathered outside, she said.

"That's when the riot happened," she said. "They were throwing bottles and anything that was there." She said the shooting victim lived in the area and those throwing rocks were his friends.

The disturbance was not brought under control until about 3 a.m., said police Sgt. Rick Ware. Three people were arrested on charges ranging from resisting arrest to inciting to riot.

The building housing the convenience store and a liquor store was burned to the ground. Looting or fires were also reported in a service station and a second liquor store.

No police or demonstrators were reported seriously injured, although some were treated at hospitals and released, authorities said. Several were hit by rocks and bottles.

Gruber said a brick came through the windshield of his car, which was also hit by automatic weapons fire, but he said he was not hurt.

'That's when the riot happened. They were throwing bottles and anything that was there.'

A car owned by KTBS-TV was set ablaze, while a fire truck that arrived to fight the blazes was attacked by protesters, who beat it with bats and clubs after firefighters abandoned the vehicle, according to reporters at the scene. About 200 police were called in, Gruber said, including reinforcements of state troopers, sheriff's deputies, and officers from nearby Bossier City. They pulled back during the melee and did not fire their weapons, Gruber said.

Community leaders rushed to the area to help get the crowd under control. Meetings were planned later in the day to try to head off any recurrence.

"We've had considerable drug problems in this area," said Gruber. "I think that's something that might be fueling this."

William David McKinney, 20, died at 12:12 a.m. of a gunshot wound to the head, said Ware.

During the disturbance, some in the crowd shouted "Hot Biscuit," the name of a restaurant where a white man fatally shot a black teen-ager Aug. 4.

Five white men were arrested in that case. One of the five admitted to the shooting, but said it was self-defense. That man is being held on $250,000 bond on second-degree murder charges. Charges against three of the others were dropped in return for their cooperation.

Shreveport in northwestern Louisiana is the second-largest city in the state after New Orleans, with a population of about 250,000.

PUBLIC NOTICE

CITY OF Pampa

TEXAS COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

The City of Pampa is currently making plans to apply to Texas Department of Commerce for Texas Community Development Program funds. Two public hearings to solicit the input of the community in the preparation of the 1988 Community Development Program will be conducted.

The first public hearing will be held at Southside Senior Citizens Center, 438 West Crawford at 6:30 p.m., September 26, 1988 to discuss housing and community development needs, use of past TCDP awards, amount of funds available and eligible activities. The City encourages individual citizens and citizen's groups to make their views known at these public hearings and welcomes the full participation of its citizens in the development of this TCDP application. General information on the TCDP program will be available. Citizen comments may be delivered in advance to City Hall at any time. Groups representative of persons of low and moderate income may request technical assistance in developing TCDP proposals by contacting the person listed below.

The second public hearing will be held at City Hall, 200 W. Foster at 6:00 p.m., October 11, 1988 to allow citizens an opportunity to comment on proposed project, amount of funds requested and estimated amount proposed for activities that will benefit low/moderate income persons.

More detailed information on proposed activities, amount of funds and proposed location of activities will be available for inspection at City Hall after the second hearing. Handicapped individuals who may have difficulty in attending these meetings should contact City Hall to arrange for assistance. Para residentes necesitados de interpretes, favor de comunicarse con la municipalidad antes de la audiencia publica.

Top hot dogs and other grilled foods, including burgers and bratwurst, with a homemade relish that includes onion, red pepper and tomato sauce.

Make your own onion relish for grilled hot dogs, burgers

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

Whether you roast hot dogs on sticks over an open campfire or on a backyard barbecue grill, they'll taste super with this onion relish. It's good with brats and burgers, too.

ZIPPY ONION RELISH
3 large onions, finely chopped (3 cups)
2 tablespoons water
½ cup tomato sauce
3 tablespoons ketchup
1½ teaspoons sugar
½ teaspoon dried oregano, crushed

½ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon crushed dried red pepper

In a 2-quart saucepan combine onions and water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Add tomato sauce, ketchup, sugar, oregano, garlic salt and red pepper. Simmer, covered, about 20 minutes or until onions are just tender. Serve hot or chilled with meats. Store remaining sauce in refrigerator for up to 2 weeks. Makes 40 one-tablespoon servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 7 cal., 0 g pro., 2 g carb., 0 g fat, 0 mg chol., 43 mg sodium.

Your family will love these citrus-glazed pork chops because they taste terrific. You can feel good about serving these chops because they're a healthful choice. Trimming off fat and broiling the meat keep calories, fat and cholesterol in check.

ORANGE-GLAZED PORK CHOPS
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon cornstarch
¼ teaspoon finely shredded orange peel
½ teaspoon grated gingerroot
¼ teaspoon ground red pepper
¼ cup orange juice
1 tablespoon soy sauce

4 pork loin chops, cut ¼ inch thick (about 1½ pounds total)

For glaze, in a small saucepan stir together sugar, cornstarch, orange peel, gingerroot and red pepper. Stir in orange juice and soy sauce. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir 2 minutes more.

Trim any separable fat from the chops. Place chops on the unheated rack of a broiler pan. Broil 3 to 4 inches from heat for 20 to 25 minutes or until pork is no longer pink, turning once. Brush chops with glaze frequently during broiling. Pass remaining glaze. Makes 4 servings.

Caramel-apple bake cooks in microwave

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

No peeling, no slicing, no long baking and homemade — four good reasons to prepare this apple dessert. Serve it while just warm enough to melt the edges of a scoop of ice cream.

MICROWAVE Caramel-Apple Bake
Two 20-ounce cans sliced

apples
16 vanilla caramels
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Topping: 1/3 cup all-purpose flour, ¼ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon, 2 tablespoons margarine or butter

Ice cream or frozen whipped dessert topping, thawed (optional)

Drain apples, reserving ¼ cup liquid. Cut up large pieces of apple. Set aside. In a microwave-safe 1½-quart casserole combine reserved apple liquid and caramels. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) 2 to 3 minutes or until caramels are soft enough to stir smooth, stirring twice during cooking. Add apples and lemon juice. Toss to coat.

For topping, in a small mixing bowl combine flour, sugar and cinnamon. Cut in margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Sprinkle topping evenly over apple mixture. Cook, uncovered, on high 7 to 9 minutes or until heated through. Serve warm with ice cream or whipped dessert topping, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 213 cal., 2 g pro., 42 g carb., 5 g fat, 2 mg chol., 75 mg sodium.

Cream-puff strips have Mexican tang

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

Cream-puff strips with a spicy Mexican twist make a delicious party appetizer. To pipe the dough, a pastry tube is nice but not essential. You can also drop the dough by rounded teaspoons to make small puffs.

MEXICAN CHEESE STRIPS
½ cup margarine or butter
1 cup water
1 cup all-purpose flour

1 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon dried coriander, crushed
½ teaspoon dry mustard
4 eggs
1 cup diced fully cooked ham

½ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese with jalapeno peppers (2 ounces)
In a saucepan melt margarine.

Add water; bring to boiling. Stir together flour, chili powder, cumin, coriander and dry mustard. Add flour mixture to butter mixture; stir vigorously. Cook and stir until mixture forms a ball that doesn't separate. Remove from heat; cool slightly, about 5 minutes. Add eggs, one at a time, beating with a wooden spoon after each addition for 1 to 2 minutes or until smooth. Stir in ham and cheese. Spoon dough into a pastry tube fitted with a tip with a ½-inch opening. On a greased baking sheet slowly pipe dough into 3-inch strips, 1 inch apart. Bake in a 375-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes or until golden and puffy. Serve warm. Makes 36.

Nutrition information per serving: 56 cal., 2 g pro., 3 g carb., 4 g fat, 41 mg chol., 90 mg sodium.

Pampa Mayor David McDaniel signs a proclamation declaring Sept. 17-24 as Constitution Week in Pampa. With McDaniel is Mrs. Jeff Anderson, chairman of the Pampa Bicentennial Commission and a member of the Las Pampas DAR.

Las Pampas DAR chapter observes Constitution Week

Las Pampas Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution are participating in the observance of Constitution Week, Sept. 17-23.

Sept. 17 is designated as Citizenship Day, commemorating the signing of the Constitution on Sept. 17, 1787 and recognizing citizens who have come of age (new voters) and who have been naturalized (new citizens) during the past year.

Citizenship Day was first observed in 1952, when Congress authorized the President to issue an annual proclamation observing the day on Sept. 17. In 1955, the Daughters of the American Revolution proposed devoting an entire week to the Constitution by extending the period of observance beyond Sept. 17. This week would be devoted to study and consideration of the events that led to the framing of the Constitution and the means for preserving it.

A second congressional resolution, approved Aug. 2, 1955, authorized the designation of the week beginning Sept. 17 of each year as Constitution Week. Now the President issues a single proclamation each year, designating Sept. 17 as Citizenship Day and Sept. 17-23 as Constitution Week.

Study shows rural kids more involved in school

By MITCH WEISS
Associated Press Writer

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP)—Neither rain nor snow seems to stop rural students from attending class and taking part in more school activities than their city cousins, according to a study by Bowling Green State University researchers.

"Rural schools and their students are an educational success story," said Joann Martin-Reynolds.

"Our country's form of government is dependent on a citizenry with a sense of good civic responsibility and a commitment to work for the common good. Our study demonstrates those characteristics are successfully developed and nurtured in rural school settings," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Reynolds, her husband William, and Robert Yonker recently completed a two-year study focusing on three rural northwest Ohio school districts. The researchers are teachers at Bowling Green's College of Education and Allied Professions, one of the nation's largest teacher-training institutions.

The study sought to determine why rural schools seem to foster the characteristics inherent in the virtues that mark a good citizen, and find ways that larger suburban and urban schools could emulate them. The project was partially funded by a $100,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education.

The researchers selected the Gibsonburg, Hopewell-Loudon and McComb school districts, each with a student population of about 1,000. They surveyed students, teachers, administrators and community residents and examined school policies, curriculum, home-school communication and community values.

Data on school attendance, graduation rate and participation in extracurricular activities was compared to a 1980 national study conducted by the National Center of Education Statistics. The national study involved 58,000 high school students from rural, urban and suburban schools.

"The 700 rural high school students involved in our study exhibited extremely high rates of school attendance — 95-98 percent a day — and a 95 percent graduation rate," she said.

She noted that 35 percent of the students in the three rural school districts missed no days of school, compared to 30 percent of students in the national sample. Sixty-three percent of the rural students said they had not been late to school all year, compared to 40 percent in the national survey.

The study also showed 59 percent of rural students enrolled in college preparatory courses, as compared to 35 percent in the national sample, she said, and it found that 14 percent of students in rural schools reported cutting classes, compared to 34 percent in the national study.

The study also indicated that, outside of the regular school day, rural students work fewer hours for pay, and are more likely to take part in extracurricular activities like athletics and band.

Mrs. Reynolds said student participation in extracurricular activities appears to be one way in which schools influence personal-social characteristics such as self-esteem, academic achievement, a sense of satisfaction and responsibility.

"Rural schools and their communities may make their greatest contribution to student character development because of their small size. The visibility of the individual student is accentuated in a small school.

'Rural schools and their students are an educational success story.'

"Participation by a high percentage of students is vital to the success of nearly all school activities, therefore it is strongly encouraged by the parents, as well as the school," she said.

Reynolds said they began the study because many students in the BGSU program will begin their careers in small, rural school districts.

"Our study seemed to indicate that there is a value structure that exists in the rural schools — in the rural communities in fact — and these value structures give rise to the work ethic, the values that are vested in not only the teachers, but the kids," he said.

"They approach the issue of education a little differently than their urban cousins ... What I think the issue is, in a sense, is that parents' and children in rural areas value education more highly. Therefore they are more motivated to achieve and to live by the rules of the school itself," he said.

ABWA Day

New book lists best companies for women

EDITOR'S NOTE — A businesswoman trying to crack the so-called glass ceiling may find a useful tool in a new book that lists the 50 companies that, in the authors' view, give women the best opportunity for advancement. Here's a report on how the list was compiled.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's not a book an unreconstructed male chauvinist will run out and buy, unless perhaps he's a CEO. It's written by women for women, working women, a guide to the companies where they are most likely to succeed.

Two avowed feminists, one a psychologist and business consultant, the other a journalist and author, spent almost three years of research in their quest to find the best U.S. companies for women. They came up with a list of 50.

"It is possible that we missed a great company," says the journalist, Lorraine Dusky of Sag Harbor, N.Y., "but I doubt it."

The researchers sent letters to 76 executive recruiters, 72 professional women's groups and 15 researchers and asked for nominations. They came up with over 200 nominations. Some companies appeared on every list.

Dusky and co-author Dr. Baila Zeitz, a psychologist who practices in New York City and Teaneck, N.J., then sent out a six-page questionnaire to the companies and requested permission for an on-site visit to interview women employees.

They followed that up with private telephone interviews with the women, who were allowed to remain anonymous if what they had to say might jeopardize their position within the company.

The result is The Best Companies for Women, published this summer by Simon & Schuster. It lists the 50 best companies, representing 22 industries, and gives profiles of each.

The authors offer specific pros and cons, be it maternity leave benefits or the whereabouts of the much-discussed glass ceiling that women can only look through.

"We found that often those with terrific benefits for maternity leave had a glass ceiling so low that you couldn't stand up straight without bumping into it," Dusky says.

"We also found that the attitude of the CEO had a great deal to do with the way the company treated women."

In addition, the authors list 60 additional companies worth considering by women in the job market, but which they did not profile, for various reasons.

"Some companies that maybe should have been on the list refused to see us, because there was some dirt going on," Dusky says. One company who turned them down cold despite recommendations was found to be in the midst of a sexual harassment suit.

Wall Street, the authors note, has been notoriously tough on women and the only Wall Street entry is Salomon Brothers. That's because of one man, John Gutfreund, the CEO.

"If he gets interested in an account, he doesn't care if you're a zebra or someone from a small area of Tibet, you're the person he'll call if anything gets screwed up or he's got an idea he wants you to think about," said one woman who wished to remain anonymous. "And if you need to find him, you just walk over to his desk, you don't have to go through a secretary. He is colorblind and sex blind. He's not interested in you personally, he's only interested in what you are doing to make money from your accounts."

As determined by the authors, the top 50, in alphabetical order, are: American Express/Shearson Lehman Hutton; American Telephone & Telegraph; Avon Products; Barrios Technology; Bidermann Industries; CBS; Children's Television Workshop; Citizens and Southern; Cognos; Conran Stores; The Denver Post; Digital Equipment Corporation; Drake Business Schools; Federal Express; Fidelity Bank; First Atlanta; Gannett; General Mills; Grey Advertising; GTE; Hallmark; Hearst Trade Books.

Herman Miller; Hewitt Associates; Hewlett-Packard; Home Box Office; Honeywell; International Business Machines; Levi Strauss; Lotus; Manufacturers Hanover Trust; Merck; Mountain Bell; Mount Carmel Health; Neiman-Marcus; Northwestern Bell; Payless Cashways; PepsiCo; Pitney Bowes; Procter & Gamble; Recognition Equipment; Restaurant Enterprises Group; The Rowland Company; Saks Fifth Avenue; Salomon Brothers; Simon & Schuster; Southern New England Telephone; Syntex; Time Inc.; and U.S. West Direct.

Postal service receives stamp of approval

DEAR ABBY: I wish people would quit knocking the U.S. Postal Service. We have the best service and the cheapest rates of any country in the free world.

It costs the equivalent of 46.5 cents to mail a letter in Japan. (They have us beat in many ways — but not in this!) It costs 38.3 cents to mail a letter in France. And in the United Kingdom, it costs 31.9 cents to mail a letter.

The U.S. Postal Service delivers Monday through Saturday to any place in the United States, whether it's a remote spot in Alaska or an apartment in New York City, for the same price.

Also, when a letter isn't delivered, it's usually the fault of the sender who has used an incorrect address, wrong ZIP code or insufficient postage.

VICKI DUKE,
LAKE CHARLES, LA.

DEAR VICKI: Three cheers for the red, white and blue. You can lick our automobiles, but you can't lick our postage stamps! Now, let's hear it from a carrier:

DEAR ABBY: I've been a mail carrier for a year, and after hearing

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

so many complaints about the Postal Service, I would like to air a few of my own to the public:

— Why isn't your house number clearly visible on your mailbox or on your house?

— Why is your mailbox hidden behind bushes and fences?

— Why do you park in front of your mailbox when your driveway is empty?

— Why is your dog out roaming the streets?

— When you moved, why didn't you file a change of address with the post office, and also send individual change of address cards to your utility and credit card companies, your magazine subscriptions, banks, etc.?

— Why do you send mail with incorrect addresses (i.e., incomplete street numbers, no apartment/suite numbers, misspelled names, etc.)?

— If you're tired of getting the previous tenant's mail, why isn't your name on the mailbox so that the carrier knows who lives there?

Normally, a regular carrier has memorized several hundred names of residents and businesses on his route. However, a new carrier, or even an experienced carrier unfamiliar with a route, cannot be expected to know all these names. Unlike the regulars, we substitute carriers take much longer to sort out, route and deliver the mail. We do not always have the time to check carefully the forwarding lists to see who has moved. Supervisors constantly pressure us to work faster and carry more mail than we can handle, in order to avoid having to pay us overtime. We cannot perform 100 percent under such stress.

I am not passing the buck. The Postal Service needs to improve.

However, before people criticize the postal employees, they should make sure that they haven't contributed to the problem. Thank you.

CALIFORNIA CARRIER

DEAR ABBY: Maybe this is why some folks haven't been getting their mail: A postal inspector in Pensacola, Fla., used a front-end loader to remove the last five tons of undelivered mail found piled at the home of a rural mail carrier.

An estimated 500,000 pieces of mail up to 3 years old were discovered.

MAGNOLIA, KENTUCKY

DEAR MAGNOLIA: Now I suppose a lot of folks will be saying, "Your check was in THAT mail."

In the year ahead it could prove to be a good policy to minimize socializing with your business contacts. Too much familiarity might breed a lack of proper respect in the relationships.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you might bend over backwards to assist someone who won't appreciate your efforts. Don't let this ingratitude sour you on the rest of the world. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There is a chance you may meet someone socially today who is in a position to use his or her influence on your behalf. If you make a poor impression, the contact will count for nil.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to dress and conduct yourself in harmony with your peers and surroundings today. Setting yourself apart could be a decided mistake.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might be inclined to follow the path of least resistance today in both work and play. If so, don't expect anything significant to result from your efforts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Investigate carefully anyone you're considering letting handle money matters today. A poor choice could put you in the deficit column.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Showering a demanding companion with too much attention today could upset your relationship. This person might expect the same treatment as standard procedure from here on.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Usually you are artistic, tasteful and imaginative. Today, however, these splendid qualities could be suppressed, "specially when dealing with co-workers."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be cognizant of your behavior today so that you do not disappoint a friend who holds you in high esteem. This person won't like being taken for granted.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Instead of trying to imitate someone else's style today, just be yourself. It's difficult to walk gracefully in shoes belonging to another.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's ego-enhancing when others say nice things about us. However, be wary that flattery isn't heaped on you for an ulterior motive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're presently on a spending binge, keep in mind the bills will eventually come due. Are the deficits you are now accruing worth the anxieties you may face later?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Guard against tendencies to look for easy outs today instead of doing things the right way. This could create problems for you, especially in partnership arrangements.

Pampa spikers down Randall

RANDALL — Pampa's Lady Harvesters pitched a shutout in the second game to defeat Randall 15-7, 15-0, Tuesday night in a District 1-4A volleyball match.

Pampa is now 2-1 in district play and in a four-way tie for second with Borger, Levelland and Hereford.

Dumas is the district leader with a 3-0 mark.

Randall led 2-0 the first game, but Pampa quickly rallied behind the serving of Dori Kidwell, who had nine of her team's 15 points.

"The girls set a goal in the second game to not let Randall score and that's exactly what they did," said Pampa coach Mike Lopez.

Traci Cash served 11 consecutive points for Pampa while Yolanda Brown scored on five spikes.

"All of our players served the ball well," added Lopez. "It was a strongpoint for us."

Sophomore Jennifer Bailey played an outstanding match, perhaps her best of the season, added Lopez.

Pampa plays at Lubbock Dunbar on Saturday with the match starting at 5 p.m.

The Lady Harvesters are the defending District 1-4A champions.

In junior varsity action last night, Pampa defeated Randall 15-5, 15-3.

PHS tennis teams win over Tascosa

With the girls' team winning all but one match, Pampa won over Tascosa 12-6 Tuesday in a high school tennis duel at the PHS courts.

One of the better matches in the girls' division was between No. 1 players Daphne Cates of Pampa and Chryl Stafford. Cates won the first set, 6-0, but lost the second one, 6-7. She came back for a 6-4 decision in the final set.

Results of the Pampa-Tascosa duel are listed below:

Parity arrives at Olympics

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Gold, silver and bronze hang from Matt Biondi's neck and four more Olympic medals are within his giant reach, but the gold that got away by a hundredth of a second belongs, strangely enough, to a swimmer from Suriname.

Parity has arrived at the Games, scattering medals Wednesday to athletes barely known and nations most unexpected.

Suriname? Yes, that South American jewel with one Olympic-sized pool on the coast north of Brazil has its first medal, matching the feat of tiny Costa Rica.

The longtime superpowers of sport — the Soviets, Americans and East Germans — still top the medal list, but they're finding they can't win as easily as they used to.

China is making a big splash in diving and swimming, and Bulgaria's bulging weightlifters are leading a brigade of medalists in several sports.

American athletes did themselves proud on the fifth day of the Games, highlighted by a world record and gold medal in the men's 800-meter freestyle relay and a 102-87 rout of the Brazil basketball team that upset them in the Pan Am Games last year.

The water polo team beat top-ranked Yugoslavia 7-6, scoring a

Irish hopes up after ending loss streak

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

FOLLETT at SHAMROCK
Friday, 8 p.m.

The Shamrock Irish improved to 1-2 last Friday when they downed Sayre, Okla., 20-6 for their first win of the season.

This week finds the Irish paired with the Follett Panthers, also 1-2, whose lone victory came against Beaver, Okla., in the season opener.

Coach Guerry Wright's Panthers will face their first Texas foe after three consecutive contests against Oklahoma teams.

Follett is led by senior quarterback Shawn Jergenson, a two-way returning starter. "Jergenson is a good athlete," Shamrock coach Ed Johnson said, "and he is probably their strongest kid."

The Panthers have also been bolstered by senior Darren Todd, who plays end on offense and halfback on defense.

The Irish squad is riding high after bringing an 11-game losing streak to an end with last week's victory. "The kids are up, and I've got to bring them back down to get ready for this game," Johnson said. "We feel real positive with our first win."

Against Sayre, tail back Ruben Garza racked up 136 yards and one touchdown on 19 attempts, averaging 7.3 yards per carry.

Full back Tracey Smith covered 86 yards on 19 tries, including one TD, and quarterback Darren Rushing completed five of 12 passes for 62 yards.

If the Irish can retain the momentum they found last week, they have a good chance to even their record at 2-2. But Johnson is wary of writing off the Panthers.

"Guerry Wright is one of the best coaches in the Panhandle," Johnson said. "He's got a good team, and I respect what he has."

"He's got an excellent program, and he's had those kids for so long that they know what they're doing."

This should be a close one.

LAZBUDDIE at GROOM
Friday, 7:30 p.m.

After last week's narrow 16-12 loss to Bovina, the Groom Tigers have another dogfight on their hands this Friday.

The Lazbuddie Longhorns, whose 13-game winning streak is currently the area's longest, come to Groom after a 52-6 shellacking of the Silverton Owls, ranked fifth in the state.

This is the second consecutive week that Groom faces a team ranked among the top ten Texas six-man squads. Entering the game against Silverton, Lazbuddie was ranked ninth, although the Longhorns should be closer to fourth or fifth by the time they meet Groom.

If the Tigers hope to pull this one out, they'll have to find a way to get to quarterback Michael Williams, who completed 10 of 19 passes for 253 yards and three touchdowns last week. Williams also caught a TD pass.

Wes Jarman, the Longhorns' top receiver, pulled down 4 aerials for 121 yards and three six-pointers.

Groom coach Jimmy Branch spoke to Silverton's coach Jack Shely and asked Shely what it takes to stop the Lazbuddie onslaught.

"He seems to think they're nearly unstoppable," Branch said. "I asked him if he thought he could have stopped them if his team had been healthy, and he said, 'Absolutely not.' He was just glad it was over."

Despite the Longhorns' obvious attributes, the Tigers' performance against Bovina last week has Branch convinced that his squad can turn the tables this Friday.

"I honestly believe there are some things we can do, if not to shut them down, at least to slow them down," he said. "If we have a good offensive night, it should be a good game."

Groom will be counting heavily upon quarterback Michael Rose, who figured in both of the Tigers' touchdowns against Bovina, as well as Richard Koetting and Stoney Crump, provided these two can get rid of the injuries that have nagged them.

Branch will get the opportunity to match wits with an old com-patriot, Lazbuddie coach C.W. Williams, whom Branch coached alongside for seven years.

"If we win, we'll be the first to upset them," Branch said. "We're not dreading the game — we're looking forward to it. The kids are excited about getting to play Lazbuddie."

"And somewhere down the line, it will pay off to play the kind of teams we've been playing."

Groom has had a difficult time getting started in this debut six-man season. "We're just trying to go one week at a time, and we've been a little tight, so the fans haven't seen a wide open game yet," Branch said. "But if they show up Friday, they'll see one."

Biondi, trying to become the first seven-medal winner since Mark Spitz won all golds in 1972, became this year's first triple-medalist when he anchored the relay and secured the record in 7 minutes, 12.51 seconds.

"I definitely was tired of losing," said Biondi, third in the 200 freestyle Monday and second in the 100 butterfly in his first race Wednesday. In the last 25 meters of the relay, he said, "I didn't want to be anywhere but on top of the awards stand with my teammates."

The U.S. team trailed East Germany by about a meter after the first three laps by Troy Dalbey, Matt Cetlinski and Doug Giertsen, but Biondi made up the difference in the first of his four 50-meter laps, then pulled away. East Germany finished second and West Germany third.

If Biondi needed any extra motivation, he got it from his heartbreaking loss in the 100 fly to Anthony Nesty, the first swimmer from Suriname ever to make an Olympic final.

Nesty, eight inches shorter than the 6-7 Biondi, reached the wall a hundredth of a second sooner in 53.00 seconds and stood a head taller on the victory stand as his nation's flag, with a bright yellow star, was raised at the Olympics for the first time.

The victory was a surprise to everyone except Nesty.

"I knew I was going to be in the top three or even come in first," he said.

Biondi was bothered more by the margin of defeat than the loss itself.

"The worst part was losing by one one-hundredth of a second," he said. "Maybe if I had grown my fingernails two weeks longer or kicked better going in, I would have gained an inch and won it."

The problem for him was in his finish, when he glided to the wall instead of stroking in.

"As luck would have it, the wall came at the wrong time," he said. "I was halfway between a stroke and trying to kick in and I decided to kick in. If I had tried a stroke, I might have touched with my nose."

Heike Friedrich of East Germany won the women's 200 freestyle while Silvia Poll won a silver, Costa Rica's first-ever Olympic medal. East German Manuela Stellmach won the bronze.

East Germany also won the women's 200 breaststroke, with Silke Hoerner taking the gold, followed by Xiao Min Huang of China and Antoaneta Frenkeva of Bulgaria.

The U.S. men's basketball team overcame Oscar Schmidt's 31 points in beating Brazil and improved its Olympic record to 3-0, with two games against China and Egypt before the medal round next week.

Schmidt, who scored 46 points in the Pan Am Games final against the United States, couldn't give a typical Oscar performance under constant defensive pressure this time.

"This team was Oscarred to death," Thompson said of the pregame hype. "I don't think it was overly done (on the staff's part). I would be wrong if I said I never mentioned it very strongly."

Pampa Eighth-graders win volleyball match

Pampa eighth-graders defeated Borger 15-6, 2-15, 15-9 in girls' volleyball action Monday.

Veronica Santacruz and Kasey Bowers sparked a strong service attack for Pampa.

Pampa lost the seventh-grade game 12-15, 13-15.

Both Pampa teams will play in the Borger Tournament this weekend.

Rodeo results

The Pampa Rodeo Club held its annual Tri-State Rodeo performance at the Top O' Texas Arena.

Tamra Johnson won the pole bending (20.772) and Marty McFall finished fifth in barebacks (60). Cydney Morris was eighth in barrels (18.291) and sixth in goat tying (13.872). Keziah Rucker finished seventh in pole bending (23.235) and Misty Coleman was eighth in goat tying (14.504).

Kim Beaver of Wheeler won the all-around girl's saddle with 12 points. Darren York of Wheeler won the all-around boy's saddle with 13 points.

Keziah Rucker was crowned the Pampa Rodeo Club Queen.

The girls' all-around saddle was donated by Jerry Etheredge and Miami Roustabout Service. The boy's all-around saddle was donated by Phillips Petroleum. The queen's buckle was donated by Cooper Flow Control and The Music Shoppe.

Metcalf garners SWC honors

AUSTIN (AP)—Texas tailback Eric Metcalf gained 285 yards running, catching passes and returning kicks in a first-game performance this season that Longhorn football coach David McWilliams called a bit "rusty."

"I thought that early in the game he was still having a problem getting that feel under him as to where the sideline was and making those cuts," McWilliams said.

"Then, as we got on into the game and gave him the ball more, I think he gained a lot more confidence."

Metcalf, a 5-foot-9, 179-pound senior, was a clear choice as The Associated Press' Southwest Conference offensive player of the week after scoring three touchdowns in Texas' 47-0 thrashing of New Mexico.

Arkansas tackle Wayne Martin, who had four quarterback sacks among his eight unassisted tackles in the Razorbacks' 21-13 victory over Mississippi, was named SWC defensive player of the week.

Other defenders considered included Houston linebacker Robert McDade and Texas Christian cornerback Stanley Petry.

McDade, a transfer from Southern Methodist, had 13 tackles in the Cougars' 31-7 victory over Missouri, and Petry intercepted two passes as TCU whipped Bowling Green 49-12.

McWilliams said although Metcalf missed Texas' opener against Brigham Young because of a one-game NCAA suspension, he was not preoccupied with making up lost ground in his bid for the Heisman Trophy.

"What's important about Eric Metcalf is that his concern at the half (of the New Mexico game) had nothing to do with what he had done. He was talking about the offense — 'We keep stopping ourselves, and we've got to do a better job getting it in,'" McWilliams said.

"I think that shows how he's thinking, that it was more important to him that we get some points in there on the scoreboard, and it didn't matter to him whether he carried it in or whatever," he said.

McWilliams pulled Metcalf with 1:42 to go in the third quarter, and he sat out the final quarter after running 21 times for 133 yards, catching five passes for 86 yards, returning two punts for 47 yards and one kickoff 19 yards. He scored on runs of 3 and 21 yards and caught a 7-yard scoring pass.

"I didn't realize what his stats were at the time when I pulled him out," McWilliams said. "I was kind of shocked when they said he had 285 yards because, it didn't look like that many."

"You throw a 3-yard pass to him, and all of a sudden it ends up being a 15- or 16-yard gain."

New government formed in Burma

By SEIN WIN
Associated Press Writer

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Coup leader Gen. Saw Maung formed a new military-dominated government Tuesday after his troops a day earlier shot and killed at least 100 people in quelling widespread opposition to his rule.

Opposition leaders issued a joint statement calling for talks with Saw Maung to resolve the crisis. Both demonstrators and soldiers retreated from the streets of the capital.

State-run Radio Rangoon said Saw Maung became both the defense and foreign affairs minister in the new government. He was defense minister and armed forces commander when he seized power Sunday from civilian President Maung Maung.

No president or prime minister was named, and there was no word on Maung Maung's fate.

Only one of the nine Cabinet ministers named was a civilian, Minister of Health Pe Thein. At least six ministers were among the 18 senior officers who mounted the coup with Saw Maung.

The broadcast said the military commanders in each of the country's seven states and seven divisions also would serve as the top government representatives in those areas.

Troops on Monday shot and killed at least 100 people protesting the coup and the two sides fought sporadic clashes until late that night. Some protesters hurled gasoline bombs at troops who fired back.

But only a few small clashes were reported Tuesday, between residents and troops clearing roadblocks put up by protesters. One person was shot and killed as soldiers halted looting at a market in the city.

Sporadic clashes also were reported in Mandalay in central Burma but no details were available. Telephone communications were out after the communications department's microwave dish was damaged in the morning, reportedly by some kind of rocket.

Bloody protests and general strikes began Aug. 8, toppling hard-line President Sein Lwin four days later.

Tuesday, military trucks rolled down Rangoon's streets with loudspeakers warning soldiers would shoot anyone building barricades, an Asian diplomat in Rangoon speaking on condition of anonymity said.

People hurried home after buying food at the few small shops that were open.

One opposition leader said street protests have been called off to avoid further bloodshed. Speaking on condition of anonymity, he said government workers would protest by continuing their strikes past Sept. 26, the new regime's deadline for returning to work on threat of dismissal.

Three key opposition leaders issued a statement Tuesday condemning the bloodshed and telling coup leaders that "such suppression by force of arms will not stop the people's just demand for democracy."

They demanded talks with Saw Maung "to seek ways to correctly solve the current crisis."

Saw Maung, who also was defense minister, overthrew Maung Maung, who took over Aug. 19 as Burma's first civilian leader since the 1962 military coup. Maung Maung had ended martial law and withdrawn soldiers from the streets in the start of a series of concessions to the protesters.

But the opposition demanded that he allow an interim government conduct the democratic elections he had promised.

Mutinies, strikes spread in Haiti disorder

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Soldiers sacked their commanders and workers struck state-run companies, ripping apart a boss's home in one instance, as Haitians released pent-up rage at three decades of authoritarian rule.

Violence and sporadic gunfire continued throughout the capital today, four days after soldiers toppled the regime of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

Radio reports said troops were removing more and more commanders and reprisal killings and spontaneous street demonstrations were on the rise.

"I'm afraid we're on the eve of another insurrection," a government official said privately.

Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, who declared himself president Sunday after lower-ranking soldiers staged the coup, tried to end the unrest Tuesday by appointing a new armed forces chief and announcing the retirement of eight generals.

Avril said Tuesday he was aware of "numerous problems" within the armed forces, but urged his troops "to stay calm." At a ceremony outside the National Palace, he appointed a new armed forces commander-in-chief, Maj. Gen. Herard Abraham, who was foreign minister under Namphy.

On state television Tuesday night, the government announced in a communique that it had retired eight generals, including Maj. Gen. Williams Regala, who was ousted as interior and defense minister after the coup and has not been seen since, and Brig. Gen. Carl Michel Nicolas, former army chief of staff.

Radio stations said the revolt in the 7,000-member army spread because Avril had not fired commanders the soldiers identified with the corruption and repression of the governments of Namphy, Leslie Manigat and Jean-Claude Duvalier.

"We will chase out of the army all supporters of Namphy, Manigat and Duvalier," said a policeman at a station in downtown Port-au-Prince where soldiers removed their commander. The army runs the police in Haiti.

Soldiers broadcasting from radio stations Tuesday — something unheard of before the coup — said they identified themselves with the downtrodden of this impoverished Caribbean nation.

Several repeated on the air: "The army is the people, and people are the army!"

The coup leaders have demanded that Avril reorganize the military and institute democratic reforms including free elections, which Haiti has not had for 31 years. On Nov. 29, armed thugs killed more than 30 people at polling stations in thwarting independently run elections.

Avril, left, names Abraham to head armed forces.

Israeli satellite raises worry in Arab nations

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's leaders said their launching of a test satellite reportedly packed with U.S.-made surveillance equipment would not spur the arms race in the Middle East.

But an Arab League official said Monday's launch warranted enhancing Arab defenses.

The launching of a three-stage rocket carrying the gray Horizon-1 satellite made Israel only the eighth nation to place a satellite in space.

"There are few countries in the world capable of doing this and the citizens of Israel can be proud of their country," Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said on Israel radio.

In Washington, Arab League representative Clovis Maksoud voiced concern Tuesday over the launch, saying the satellite gave Israel "a serious strategic leverage" since the country already had the capability to fire long-range missiles.

The Libyan news agency JANA, monitored in London, described the craft as a "spy satellite (and part of a) psychological war being carried out by the Zionists against the Arab nation."

There was no immediate comment from Syria, Israel's main enemy in the Middle East. In Egypt and Saudi Arabia, radio stations reported the launching with no comment. The Soviet media ignored the story, and Israel radio quoted a Jordanian official as saying the satellite apparently had military uses.

Both Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres dismissed fears that the satellite would spur an arms race with Arab countries.

"The Arabs bought missiles and produce missiles and will do anything they can anyway," Peres said on the radio.

Yuval Neeman, head of Israel's space agency, said the satellite would remain in orbit for about a month before disintegrating.

Until now, Israel has relied on the United States to provide satellite pictures, but some officials have complained the U.S. was stingy in supplying intelligence information.

"If you are fed from the crumbs of others according to their whims, this is very inconvenient and very difficult," said Meir Amit, a former head of Israel's Mossad secret service and now chief of the General Satellite Corp., a communications satellites producer.

A possible source of concern to Israel is the news that Saudi Arabia is deploying Chinese-built CSS-2 missiles about 285 miles south of Riyadh.

The Israeli satellite weighs about 340 pounds and is believed to be carrying a 6.6-pound payload for surveillance usage, apparently for monitoring activity in Arab countries, according to a spokesman for Jane's Defense Weekly, the London-based defense magazine.

Tony Banks, a Jane's reporter with close ties to Israeli military sources, said Israel was not believed to have the capability of installing sophisticated surveillance equipment in a satellite.

"U.S. optical equipment is assumed to have been used in the payload," Banks told The Associated Press in London.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said the United States was not involved with the Israeli program.
