Texas gets super collider

By JENNIFER DIXON . Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department will build its $4.4 billion super collider project in Texas, Sen. Phil Gramm said today, hours before the department was to make its official announcement.

Seven states had vied for the project because of the economic benefits tied to the construction of the giant atom smasher.

The official announcement followed in Washington late this morning.

Gramm said the superconducting super collider, a 53-mile underground ring of magnets capable of whipping proton beams together with 20 times the force of the world's most powerful existing accelerator, would be built at site south of Dallas

He called the super collider "the most important scientific project that will be built anywhere in the world in the last quarter of The six other contenders were Illinois, Arizona, Colorado, Michigan, North Carolina and Tennessee. They were chosen from a panel appointed by the Energy Department. "I think that we won on the merits — the scientific and economic proposal that we made. And I believe that it was helped by the congressional delegation's unified, bipartisan support. I don't believe it was a political decision, but a scientific decision," said Morton Meyerson, chairman of the Texas National Laboratories Commission, which coordinated the state's proposal.

"I feel elated," Meyerson said. "It will be the most important scientific project in this century, because of its size and importance. It will be the largest scientific machine ever

Bush vows to begin his presidency with new team of people

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect George Bush, vowing to revitalize government with "a brand new team of people," has instructed key figures from his campaign to develop priorities for the crucial first 100 days of his coming administration.

Even before Bush won the presidency, job applications were pouring into his standby transition office. The stream of resumes is expected to turn into a flood now at newly opened Bush transition headquarters

Just hours after claiming victory, Bush took the first steps Wednesday toward assembling his presidency

The president-elect, at a news conference in his adopted home of Houston before flying back to Washington, named James A. Baker III, his campaign chairman and longtime trusted adviser, to be secretary of State. It could be the most important post in a Bush presidency, given the vice president's emphasis on foreign affairs and his interest in pursuing progress with Moscow.

Baker, while preparing for his diplomatic duties, also will play a major role in the transfer of power to Bush from Ronald Reagan.

Craig Fuller, Bush's vice presidential chief of staff, and campaign pollster Robert Teeter will share authority as co-chairmen of the transition team.

Mindful that the first months of an administration set the tone for relations with Congress and foreign governments. Bush said. "I will have a game plan.

"Part of what the transition is about is to spell out the priorities I spelled them out (during the campaign) in broad terms, in terms of keeping the economic expansion going and in terms of world peace. But the election ended yesterday," Bush said.

"We will now have (73) days to formulate a game plan, the first 100 day priorities, if you will, and they'll be specific.

In an announcement sure to send shivers through the ranks of the 5,000 political appointees happily at work in the Reagan administration, Bush said, "I will for the most part bring in a brand new team of people from across the country.

"And in my view that will reinvigorate the process," Bush said. He deliberately left room for some Reagan holdovers and veterans to join his administration. "There will be ... a major turnover but some people at various levels may be asked to remain.

On the flight back to Washington, Bush said he wanted to announce the rest of his Cabinet 'sooner rather than way late' and would think about the possible choices during a Florida vacation this weekend.

It has been widely assumed Bush will ask Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos to stay on. All three joined the Reagan administration in recent months.

Thornburgh said Wednesday he had been given no indication of whether Bush wanted him to remain "nor have I sought" any information on the question. The Washington Post reported Bush wanted to replace Thornburgh with former Environmental Protection Agency chief and deputy attorney general William Ruckelshaus or Illinois Gov. James Thompson. Thompson said Wednesday he wasn't interested.

Former Sen. John Tower of Texas, an arms negotiator in the Reagan administration who later advised Bush's campaign on national security matters, may be in line for secretary of De-

Ann Dore McLaughlin may keep her post as Labor secretary or get another Cabinet position, possibly Interior, where she was undersecretary from 1984 to 1987.

Others mentioned as possible nominees for the Labor post include Rep. Tom Ridge, R-Pa., and Constance Horner, now director of the Office of Personnel Management.

Former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, wife of onetime Bush rival Bob Dole, also is mentioned as a candidate for

Absentee balloting set record for county

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

Gray County voters set a record by casting 2,420 absentee ballots prior to Tuesday's general election. The previous record for absentee voting in the county was 1,989 in 1984.

The large number of absentee ballots and the hand counting of votes for write-in sheriff candidate Jimmy Free meant the absentee vote count took election judges over 11 hours to complete. While Free defeated incumbent Rufe Jordan in 10 of the 14 · local precincts, it was in the absentee votes that Jordan had his strongest showing. Local observers attributed Jordan's 337-vote lead over Free in the absentee votes to the number of senior citizen voters who supported the 38-year incumbent. However, it was apparent early

Free had an excellent opportunity to upset Jordan.

Each time the precinct totals for sheriff were announced, a gasp permeated the County Clerk's office where votes were tabulated. One supporter of Jordan broke into tears when it became obvious that Free's lead was insurmountable

At one point Free led Jordan by nearly 1,000 votes. The final total gave Free the victory by 673

Libertarian candidates received a sprinkling of "protest votes" in Gray County — 55 for presidential contender Ron Paul and his running mate, Andre

The minority party New Alliance, which grew out of Jesse Jackson's "Rainbow Coalition." was even supported by a handful of local voters. Lenora B. Fulani in the general ballot counting that and Rafael Mendez received seven votes in their attempt to compete with Bush-Quayle and Dukakis-Bentsen.

Republicans carried every race on the ballot in Gray County with the exception of the 84th District seat in the House of Repre-Pampan Warren Chisum held off a strong local contest by Tom Christian, R-Claude, to win in his hometown and throughout the In spite of the delay in tallying absentee votes, election judges and officials in Wanda Carter's County Clerk's Office counted the rest of the 10,159 votes in the county in near record time.

Final tabulations were completed by 10:30 p.m. Tuesday. Voting machines that were used to count all votes except those for write-in candidates made the process very quick

Carter said one of the reasons the absentee votes took so long to count was that mail-in votes were sometimes filled out in a lessthan-careful manner and had to be tabulated by hand, instead of being able to be counted on the voting machine.

Seventy-three percent of the 13,940 registered voters in Gray County made their voices heard on the 22 contested local, state and federal races

Next to George Bush's landslide in Gray County over Michael Dukakis, the race for chief justice of the state Supreme Court was the biggest Republican victory

The large voter turnout in Gray County still did not compare with the massive response to Ronald Reagan in 1980 and 1984 when voter turnout was at 77 percent of the more than 15,000 registered voters then in the county.

Former U.S. attorney general Mitchell dies of heart attack

John Mitchell

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Newton Mitchell, the gruff former attorney general who went to prison for conspiring to cover up the Watergate scandal in his friend Richard Nixon's White House, is dead at 75 after collapsing on a Washington street.

Mitchell was the highest ranking of the government officials who served time for the political scandal that brought about Nixon's resignation from the presidency in August 1974.

"I considered John Mitchell to be one of my few close personal friends," Nixon wrote in his memoirs. "I believed that I owed my election as president in 1968 largely to his strength as a counselor and his skill as a manager.'

An ambulance crew, alerted by a 10-year-old boy who was skateboarding, found Mitchell unconscious on a street in the Georgetown section of Washington in early evening Wednesday. Mitchell had suffered a heart attack. He stopped breathing as he was being taken to the hospital, and died despite cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Mitchell was convicted on Jan. 1, 1975, of conspiring with Nixon's chief lieutenants, chief of staff H.R. Haldeman and domestic counselor John D. Ehrlichman, to cover up White House involvement in the Watergate affair, of the cover-up itself and of perjury. He fought the conviction in vain to the Supreme Court. All three were sentenced after a three-month trial to terms of 21/2-to-8 years

There was testimony at the Senate Watergate hearings, at the cover-up trial and in various published first-person accounts that Mitchell twice rejected plans for spying on Democrats because they were too expensive but that he accepted a third, less expensive, version. Mitchell always denied the allegation.

But in a March 22, 1973, taped Oval Office conversation, Ehrlichman said "John says he's sorry he sent those burglars in there," to which Nixon replied: "That's right."

Mitchell chimed in at that point and said "You are very welcome, sir," and the transcript shows laughter

The tapes also showed that Nixon once wanted Mitchell to take the rap for the entire Watergate cover-up. But Mitchell never said a harsh word about his former New York law partner and would not permit his defense lawyer to do so. By all accounts they remained friends

"He was very loyal to the president and the president was not very loyal to him," the late Sen. Sam Ervin, who presided over the Watergate hearings in the Senate, once said.

Mitchell was the first former attorney general to be convicted of a crime. He was disbarred and served a 19-month prison term, which included five months of medical furloughs.

When he was done with prison number 24171-157. at the minimum-security facility at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama, he told reporters, "Henceforth, don't call me. I'll call you. After his release, Mitchell went into the international consulting business with Jack Brennan, who was Nixon's chief aide in the early postpresidential years at San Clemente, Calif. 'I never heard him be really cross about any of the things that happened to him or any of the people who had hurt him, intentionally or not," Brennan said Wednesday. As attorney general, Mitchell was known for his credo that "when the going gets tough, the tough get going." And in Senate testimony he referred to Watergate as "White House horrors." The former attorney general's second wife, the flamboyant and peppery Martha Mitchell, gained a measure of fame for her late-night telephone calls to reporters in which she offered shrill, shootfrom-the-hip opinions on controversial issues of all sorts, including her husband's problems. She called reporters in 1973 to announce that she and Mitchell had split up.

After he was sentenced for conspiracy, Mitchell said: "It could have been a hell of a lot worse. They could have sentenced me to spend the rest of my life with Martha Mitchell." Mrs. Mitchell died alone in a New York City hospital on May 31, 1976, after suffering from cancer of the bone marrow

Prices flat; drought's effect eases as food costs begin to drop again

WASHINGTON (AP) -Wholesale prices remained flat in October after seven straight monthly increases as the cost of food fell for the first time since February, the government said

Analysts said the stability in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for the first time in eight months signifies a tapering off of the effects of the summer drought, which had sent food prices up 3.5 percent since May.

Wholesale food prices, led by large declines for fruits, vegetables, bakery products, pasta, beef and cooking oils, fell 0.1 percent last month. That was their first decline since February, the Labor Department said

Food prices had skyrocketed 1.2 percent in September. Seasonally adjusted energy prices rose by 0.3 percent last month after falling by 3.3 percent in September.

Following sharp declines over the summer, natural gas rates jumped 4.6 percent last month while gasoline prices held steady and home heating oil prices fell 10.1 percent.

Wholesale prices for goods other than food and energy were unchanged last month. Automobile, home appliance, drug and children's apparel prices fell. Prices rose for women's and men's clothing, household furniture, cosmetics, alcoholic beverages and prescription drugs.

Before seasonal adjustments, the Labor Department's index for goods one step short of the retail level rose 0.6 percent to 109.3, meaning that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 at the wholesale level in 1982 would have cost $109.30 last month.

That same marketbasket of goods would have cost $108.60 in September and $107.70 a year

The seasonal adjustment process is designed to remove predictable, periodic influences from the calculation of price

Analysts said the difference between the seasonally adjusted prices and real ones was primarily connected with the introduction of 1989-model automobiles.

"Because auto rebates (on 1988 models) were smaller than normal in September, price increases in October were less than seasonally expected," said Donald Ratajczak, head of economic forecasting at Georgia State University in Atlanta. "Also, price rebates began almost as soon as new vehicles reached dealers.

Sticker prices on 1989 models were an average of 7.5 percent above what the 1988 models were selling for in September, the Labor Department said.

But it put the value of quality changes such as governmentmandated passive restraints, new corrosion protection and improvements in powertrains at $153.69 per vehicle, or 34.6 percent of the average $444.08 increase in price to dealers. Including seasonal variations intended to spread the increase associated with new models across the year, new car prices were calculated as falling 1.7 per-

Grand jury returns indictments

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Gray County grand jurors handed down 17 indictments naming 13 people in 223rd District Court. Two of the indictments stemmed from the early morning raid of an East Browning Street residence last August.

Danny Ray White, 27, 906 E. Browning, was indicted on two counts of possession of a controlled substance. District Judge Don Cain set White's bond at $7,500 for each count.

Assistant District Attorney Harold Comer said the indictments, brought by the grand jury on Tuesday, are the result of drugs found when Pampa police officers executed a search warrant at the residence shortly after midnight Aug. 26.

A quantity of two "exotic" drugs, dimethylanthetamine and hydromorphone, valued at $7,500, were found in the raid, he said. Dimethylanthetamine is a pure drug that ranks with cocaine, opium and morphine, Comer explained.

Grand jurors no-billed similar charges against Pam Spangler, who was also arrested in connection with the raid, Comer said. "The grand jury found no link between her and drugs found in the house," the assistant DA said. State officials are awaiting a

The state filed for forfeiture of the $12,000, saying it has a right to the money because it was connected with illegal drug activities. White's attorney, Bill McKinney of Amarillo, has filed an answer, Comer said.

Two indictments on felony theft charges named Demesio Jose Mendoza, 29, no address available. These charges were filed in connection with the theft of more than $2,000 in video equipment from The Video Stop, 1334 N. Hobart, and Rainbow Video, 108 S. Cuyler, a day later.

Two warrants have been issued, but Mendoza is currently at-large, Comer said. Bond has been set at $10,000 for each charge.

Alfred Joseph Buchanan, 22, 1312 Coffee, Apt. 1, was named in an indictment alleging possession of six grams of cocaine valued at $1,700 to $1,800. Buchanan was arrested following a raid using a drug dog at a Touch of Class auto detail shop. Bond has been set at $7,500.

Deborah Lee Hoover Hartman. 35, 606 Lowry, was named in three indictments alleging forgery of checks presented at several local grocery stores. Judge Cain set Hartman's bond at $5,000 for each charge.

Joseph Daniel Brock, 42, 1833 N. Nelson, was indicted for felony injury to a child after grand jurors found Brock allegedly struck his 12-year-old daughter in the face with his fist. A husband-wife team, Torreon and Renee M. Gandy, last known address Amarillo, were each named in indictments alleging theft by check of property. Bondfor each was set at $3,000. Warrants have been issued, but noarrests have been made, Comer.

An indictment was handed down naming Albert Mario Luna . Jr., 18, 622 N. Russell, on a charge of theft by appropriation. Bond was set at $3,500.

Jackie Lee Bromlow, 27, 419 Tignor, and Joe David Cash, no age given, 1077 Prairie Dr., were each indicted on felony drivingwhile intoxicated charges. Bond for each of the men was set at

Bentsen campaign cites his biggest election win

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Beau Boulter says he has "no regrets and no complaints" about his unsuccessful attempt to unseat Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, even though he gave up his congressional seat to make

"Obviously, I wish I'd done better, but given all of the financial resources he (Bentsen) had available to him out of both campaign pots, and the limited resources we had available to us, we did very very well," Boulter said

Wednesday Bentsen's name appeared twice on the Texas ballot under a 1959 state law written to allow Lyndon Johnson to run at the same time for U.S. Senate and the White House in 1960. Bentsen, 67, lost his vice presidential bid.

With 99 percent of the precincts reporting, Bentsen won a fourth Senate term with 59.1 percent of the vote to 40.1 percent for Boulter, a two-term congressman from Amarillo.

But Boulter, 46, speculated he got "more votes per dollar than any other statewide candidate in the country." Republican Gov. Bill Clements also said Boulter "did surprisingly well, considering the funds he had available.'

Bentsen raised more than $8.2 million for his Senate re-election, according to campaign spokesman Jack DeVore, Boulter raised about $1.5 million, said campaign manager Greg Graves, excluding money spent on his behalf by the GOP's campaign committee for senators.

"I think we ran a real good campaign ... I'm glad I ran,' Boulter said.

Jack Martin, Bentsen's Senate campaign manager, said Bentsen won re-election with more votes "than any other candidate for statewide office in the history of Texas.

"The senator's presence on the Democratic presidential ticket combined with his coattails in the Senate race to prevent a Texas presidential loss of the magnitude of 1984, when President Reagan carried the state with 63.6 percent of the vote," said Martin

"Sen. Bentsen received more votes than George Bush did in the Election turnout below prediction

AUSTIN (AP) — Voter turnout in Tuesday's election fell short of the record Secretary of State Jack Rains had predicted, and Rains on Wednesday blamed weekend opinion polls for keeping the total vote lower than he expected.

Near-final results showed a turnout of 5,315,037, or 64.8 percent of registered voters, Rains reported.

That was short of the 5.98 million, or 73 percent, he had projected and slightly lower than the 1984 total of 5.38 million.

Rains said news reports over the weekend about polls projecting Republican George Bush the winner in Texas conveyed an impression that the presidential race was over.

"From a constitutional standpoint, I don't believe you can restrict the media's use of polls. But when the media's message to the voter is 'your vote won't count for anything,' then we have a problem with participation, and that, in turn, impacts down ballot races," Rains said.

Rains voiced disappointment with the turnout, but he said he was pleased with the registration drive that signed up 1.5 million

B-1B bomber crash prompts grounding

By NORMAN BLACK AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force is inspecting all of its B-1B bombers for electrical, hydraulic and fuel line problems following the crash of one of the costly new planes in Texas.

The inspections were prompted by Tuesday's crash during a routine training flight out of Dyess Air Force Base at Abilene, Texas. The four men aboard ejected safely after steering the flaming aircraft away from homes where it crashed west of Abilene.

Pentagon officials said Wednesday that the remaining B-1Bs, long-range bombers designed to carry out nuclear strikes against the Soviet Union, would be grounded until the inspections were completed.

Col. Albert Jensen, wing commander at Dyess, said television footage of Tuesday's crash led Air Force officials to believe the plane was downed by a fire in or around its two left-wing engines.

Jensen said the aircraft commander, or pilot, Capt. Michael E. "Muddy" Waters, did an absolutely tremendous job, thinking of the other crew members as well as the local populace, before he got out of the air-

Although Jensen declined to give specific details about the final seconds of the flight, he clearly implied Waters stayed with the aircraft as long as he could and guided it to an unpopulated area before joining the rest of the crew in ejecting.

"He was the last man out of the aircraft," Jensen said. "It was his judgment, while the aircraft still had good flight characteristics, to steer the aircraft to an unpopulated area. He did an absolutely tremendous job.

Some training flights had resumed at Dyess by Wednesday afternoon. Officials said the planes flying had passed the inspection ordered by the Strategic Air Command.

The inspections take two to three hours per plane, according to the Air Force.

An Air Force official at the Pentagon, who asked not to be named, said the inspections generally focus on electrical, hydraulic and fuel lines. The official declined to be more specific, as did Lt. Col. George H. Peck, a spokesman at SAC headquarters in Omaha, SAC, which is responsible for land-based nuclear bomber and missile forces, said the grounding and inspection order was issued Wednesday as a "normal precaution" in the wake of a major accident.

Peck said the order would not affect the B-1B's current standing alert to be ready for immediate takeoff in the event of nuclear

In Texas, the Air Force set up a roadblock to seal off the crash site Wednesday and sent in military investigators, who spent the day mapping the area and searching through de-

The wreckage was scattered over an area seven miles by two miles, said Al Dostal, an Air Force spokesman.

Jensen said his speculation of a fire around the left wing engines was based on a video tape aired on a television newscast.

The Air Force has been criticized over the past two years for its handling of the B-1B program, primarily because of acknowledged problems in developing the bomber's radar-jamming gear. However, the service insists the plane is still the best long-range bomber in the world.

The Air Force has purchased 100 B-1Bs at a total cost of $27.3 billion, or about $273 million per plane. The last plane was delivered on

See related story, Page 7.

Tuesday's crash was the second involving a production-model B-1B in 14 months, leaving the Air Force with 98 of its original 100

The bombers have been deployed at four bases: Dyess; Ellsworth AFB, S.D.; Grand Forks AFB, N.D., and McConnell AFB, Kan.

The four-engine, swing-wing B-1B was the first addition to America's manned bomber force in more than 25 years. The plane is designed to fill the gap between the aging fleet of B-52 bombers and the new B-2 'Stealth'' bomber.

Texas Kangers investigate killing of deputy

PROCTOR, Texas (AP) -Texas Rangers have been called in to piece together the sequence of events that led a Proctor man to shoot his ex-wife and a Comanche County lawman before putting a rifle to his own head and killing himself.

Proctor authorities believe Billy Jackson McDonald, 39, shot and killed his ex-wife, Elizabeth Jane Green, 30, and Chief Deputy David Jones before turning the gun on himself about 1:45 a.m. Wednesday

Ms. Green's two young sons, aged 8 and 10, were at home at the lakefront trailer house where the shootings occurred, but were not injured in the incident, said Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

Wells said Jones was shot while answering a domestic disturbance call at the home. Police be-

Ms. Green ran out of the house as her ex-husband stood on the porch and continued firing at the woman several times, Wells said. Ms. Green's body was found about 35 feet from the house.

"Right after Ms. Green was shot and killed, (McDonald) placed the rifle under his chin and shot himself," said Wells, who added the couple divorced a Police were uncertain when Dolberry was shot. He was treated and released from an area hospital. The bodies were taken to Dallas for autopsies.

Jones, 59, an eight-year veteran of the sheriff's department, 'was an extremely nice person, very likable," deputy George Reynolds said

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Robbing taxpayers to benefit Mexico

Why is it that, whenever faced with a problem, our politicians' first resort is to seize more tax dollars to squander? The latest example is the U.S. government's record loan to Mexico of $3.5 billion. Mexico does face a financial crisis, even having problems paying the interest on the loans it has already taken. And President-elect Carlos Salinas de Gortari faces tough policy choices when he takes power on Dec. 1

But there are better ways to help our Mexican neighbors than robbing the U.S. taxpayers. Mexico's major economic ailment is that the government has botched its management of both. The peso has fallen in value like a rock dropped in a well. As to oil, even in the heyday of high oil prices in the late 1970s, the government monopoly, Pemex, was run inefficiently; today it's even worse.

The flip side is the blundering of the U.S. government, which has acted as little more than the subsidizer of the interest paid on loans from the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank; most of this money has come, in turn, from the big New York banks. So, really, the $3.5 billion is being blipped across the computer screens from the tax dollars the government seizes from you, to the U.S. Treasury Department and Federal Reserve accounts, to the IMF-World Bank, to the big banks. This is a bailout?

Mexico must privatize its banks and oil industry and as many other state industries as possible, and it must stop taking any loans from the U.S. government and the IMF-World Bank. If Mexico's industries are privatized, they may, as private firms, take loans directly from private foreign banks. But such then would be real loans, involving real investment in real, private industries — not the artificial loans the U.S. government now makes to the Mexican government to subsidize the incompetence of Mexico might profitably look across the Pacific to such "Asian tigers" as Taiwan and South Korea, whose private, unsubsidized industries have boomed, bringing vast prosperity. Up until the mid-1960s or so, these nations were also addicted to U.S. govern ment "aid" money. But then they cut lose, depending on the initiative of their own people, with obvious beneficial results. Mexico can do the same.

The United States government must stop seizing its taxpayers' money to prop up bad policies by Mexico and other foreign governments. President Reagan, of all people, should understand this, yet he has made bad loan after bad loan, seized from our tax money, to socialist regimes the world over. But why didn't George Bush discuss this critical issue?

emocrats stole 'liberalism

Michael Dukakis, who had watched unhappily as George Bush created one of the only fourletter words in the English language with three syllables ("liberal"), finally declared that he accepts the description without apology. His late decision brings to mind a Death Row confession: It may ease the conscience, but it won't

The controversy may be a good thing anyway. For one thing, it may help to restore some of the world's original, admirable meaning.

Until now, Dukakis has preferred success over honesty, insisting that a trivial matter like ideology has no place in a presidential campaign. He took his cue from the polls - like the one conducted by the New York Times and CBS News, which found that only 15 percent of Americans describe themselves as liberals, the lowest figure since the pollster started asking that question in 1976.

But Bush's attacks had their intended effect. As the percentage of voters perceiving Dukakis as a liberal rose, the percentage planning to vote for him dropped.

So Dukakis' portrayal of himself as a liberal "in the tradition of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman and John Kennedy'' looked less like candor than desperation. It likely didn't convert undecided voters, few of whom accept the label. It may have reduced Dukakis' margin of defeat, and thus helped Democrats running for lower offices, by spurring the party faithful.

Dukakis said, "I'm not going to let the Republican Party pervert that word or give it a meaning it doesn't have," but most Democratic politicians would rather be stranded in an elevator with Dan Quayle than be identified as liberals. A word once proudly embraced by the party is now shunned as reminiscent of failures and mistakes. Republicans, however, like to encourage such reminiscing

If it's any comfort to the Democrats, the word was originally deployed as an insult. British Conservatives in the early 19th century scorned their opponents as "liberales," using the Spanish version to suggest a sinister foreign influence. But the targets of abuse soon adopted the label, because it underlined their concern with individual freedom.

A liberal, by definition, believed in liberty liberty from government control. Liberals of that era wanted to severely restrict the power of the state, to protect citizens from arbitrary exercise of official authority (such as arrests and searches) and to free the economy from its shackles. In economics, liberalism meant laissez-faire. In much of Europe, it still does

Liberalism became a powerful force in England, and its influence spread to the Continent, especially France and Germany. But it flowered most abundantly in the United States, whose revolution, Declaration of Independence and Constitution were the highest expression of liberal ideals

The architect of the Constitution, James Madison, succinctly phrased its liberal purpose: "You must first enable the government to control the governed; and in the next place,

This is a long way from what is proposed today by people who regard themselves as liberals — who generally support civil liberties, but also favor a powerful state, an ambitious tax system and a regulated economy. The original liberals thought that promoting individual freedom is the highest purpose of public policy. Few modern liberals would agree.

In this century, the term was kidnapped by people who claimed to have a deeper concept of liberty — Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt, Lyndon Johnson. Liberal policies are now closer relatives of socialism than of limited government and economic freedom. It's no surprise Dukakis didn't want Republicans to pervert the meaning of the word. Perverting its meaning is something only Democrats are allowed to do.

But Conservatives are not the true heirs of the tradition repudiated by modern liberals. The Right also rejects many ideals of liberty: freedom of speech and the press, protection against unreasonable police conduct, separation of church and state, individual autonomy over personal morality

Conservatives don't want to reduce the coercive power of the government - they only want to redirect it.

Today there is no commonly accepted label for people who favor freedom in every sphere of life, opposing all but the most limited government functions. Most of us call ourselves libertarians, an awkward invention that few people understand.

But judging from this campaign, "liberal" has been almost entirely abandoned by the people who once claimed it as their own. If those who stole the word no longer have any use for it, those of us who believe in liberty would be happy to take it back.

It was really their own fault

I like whales just as much as the next person. I was in Maui once and could look out my hotel room and see a whale anytime I wanted to.

After witnessing my eighth whale, I lost interest. Whales are a lot like liberal Democrats. You've seen one, etc.

So now we have the story that captured the attention of a great deal of the world.

Those three whales caught in the ice up in Alaska. One died, but even the Russians sent over an icebreaker to get the other two out. It probably wouldn't have been all that big a story if it had been covered only by newspapers. Newspapers would have put the story back on page 17, and a few veterinarians might have glanced through it, but that's about all.

But this was a perfect story for television, what with nothing else much going on but Bush and Dukakis trading verbal blows.

They had that great footage of the two whales bouncing up and down out of the water in order to breathe, and the Cable News Network updated the story approximately every eight

Here's what I think about the whales: It was their own fault they got caught in the ice. They lingered around the feeding ground far too long after the other whales had left.

Once I was at dinner in Heidelberg, Germany. They were giving away free beer to our group. We were off on a sightseeing voyage down the

When the tour director said, "Back in the bus, everybody," I said to my dinner companions, "There's plenty of time left. Let's have another pitcher of beer.

The bus left and my companions made me pay for the taxi ride back to the ship, which took all my deutschemarks.

'Let's hang around and have a few more fish." one of the whales said to the others, and they got "bus-left" like I did.

I have no idea how much money was spent on the whales, but it must have run into the mil-

How many homeless Americans could have benefitted by all that money? And why don't the Russians free the people they trap inside their own country before they get so concerned about trapped whales?

We worry about the lives of the two whales, but we aren't doing very much about acid rain, which kills forests and the animal life that inhabits them

We worry about the life of two whales, but turn 15 zillion hunters loose in the woods to kill

Little Jessica McClure trapped in that well in Texas was a news story. Two whales trapped in the ice in Alaska was Nature doing what comes naturally.

in leadership bids

By CHUCK STONE

Black women scored a big one a few days ago.

Judith W. Rogers was named chief judge of the Washington, D.C., Court of Appeals. She's the first black woman to rise to the highest judicial office in the nation's capital.

Her appointment could be a good omen for two other women seeking national leadership roles among House Democrats and Republicans, provided bipartisan machismo and cupidity doesn't sandbag their quests. Rep. Mary Rose Oakar (D-Ohio), the 48-year-old vice chair of the Democratic Caucus, is trying to step up to the chairmanship. Across the political aisle, Rep. Lynn Martin (R-III.), the 48-year-old vice chair of the Republican Conference, is making a similar bid to lead her House colleagues. Despite their partisan differences, they share a myriad of similarities. Both are Roman Catholics and former English teachers. Both represent industrial-based blue-collar constituencies - Oakar from Cleveland, Martin from Rockford. Both have introlegislation to advance employment equity for women. Both are highly regarded key members on their House committees

Ordinarily, their experience and legislative acumen would rate them heavy favorites in the 95 percentmale institution - if they were men. It's a test of "whether paying your dues really works," wrote Washington Post columnist Judy Mann.

But Martin has one big advantage over Oakar. She is not being challenged by Rep. William H. Gray III (D-Pa.), the overweening Budget Committee Chairman who steps down from that position this year and is looking for another power base.

A prototype for Caesar's nervous observation, "Yon Cassius has a lean and hungry look," Gray has parlayed his brilliant manipulative skills into a national prominence. "A sophisticated tap-dancer," marvels a fellow member of the Congressional Black Caucus, Rep. Mickey Leland (D-Texas).

Whip counts show that most House Democrats favor the election of duespaid-up Oakar. Like the Senate's Robert Byrd (D-W.Va.), she has diligently served the interests of both Democratic House members and the party. But Gray is pulling out all financial and racial stops to win the caucus chairmanship.

He has leaned on national lobbyists to lobby members for his election and has contributed $67,000 from his war chest to his colleagues' campaigns. To shocked accusations that he is trying to buy support for his election, Gray replies with an amazingly straight face that he just wants to help elect Democrats. It's sort of like the little kid caught with his hand in the cookie jar, telling his mother that he was really looking for a cookie to give her.

But Oakar's across-the-board support ranges from Rep. Louis Stokes, a fellow Clevelander and one of America's most respected black legislators, to Rep. Pat Schroeder (D-Colo.), dean of the Women's Caucus, to Rep. Leon Panetta (D-Calif.), who is in line to succeed Gray as Budget Committee chairman.

"She's got a good chance," observed a prominent House member, "but I would give Gray an edge. He's spent a lot of money on this campaign.

Oakar ruefully recalls her efforts in advancing Gray's career. "My high regard for Bill was the reason I supported his Budget Committee chairmanship," Oakar told this column. "I went out and really worked for him."

Do turncoats play fair? Garganutan-ego Gray doesn't. "The question is," said Oakar, which party will be for someone who has paid their dues, which party is willing to have women in real positions of clout and leadership?"

That question won't be answered in November when voters vote on election day, but in December when the Democratic and Republicans representatives vote in the House.

Dukakis: 'I gave it my best shot'

BOSTON (AP) — Michael standard we live to regret." Dukakis was back tending to Statehouse duties a day after losing his bid for the White House, promising to be Massachusetts' 'very best governor" and warning that the negative tone of this year's campaign set a dangerous precedent for coming races.

'I gave it my best shot," Dukakis said Wednesday after spending several hours catching up on state business. "Almost doesn't count in politics."

He said he felt no bitterness toward George Bush and was ready to put the campaign behind him and complete the final two years of his term as governor. Dukakis gave no indication whether he will run for a fourth term in 1990 or seek the presidency again in four years.

'At this point my job is clear: I'm going to be the very best governor of this commonwealth that I can be," Dukakis told reporters. "There's a lot to do. There are many challenges out there ahead. What happens in the future remains to be seen.'

Among those challenges will be re-establishing relations with his state Legislature amid growing rumbling about the Dukakis administration's handling of a revenue shortfall that has forced Massachusetts to borrow to pay

Although it is dominated by Democrats, the Legislature has scheduled hearings next week to look into state finances, and Dukakis could come under fire from lawmakers unhappy that the governor was out of state for much of the past year as the problem unfolded

At the same time Dukakis said he expected to remain a player in national Democratic Party politics - including having a say in the selection of a new party chairman.

Dukakis wasted no time getting back to work, arriving at the office at 9:30 a.m. to applause from about 50 state workers. Later in the day he met with reporters to reflect on the campaign, which he said left President-elect Bush without a mandate and the Democratic Party with lasting grass-roots and fund-raising organizations despite his loss.

"I'm not a bitter person," a weary Dukakis said. "I look forward. I'm fundamentally an optimist and somebody who believes deeply in this country and its people.

"Am I disappointed, sure I am," he said, laying at least part of the blame for his loss on the tone of the Bush campaign.

'It was a distorted campaign," the Massachusetts governor said. "It was a campaign that distorted my record and I think did not set high standards for the kind of campaign we want for the presidency and it may well set a

this country," Dukakis said. "I personally will continue to do whatever I can, with my fellow governors, the Congress, with the new administration, here in Massachusetts, to make sure that we respond and that we respond strongly and well to those concerns and those challenges which face the American people every day

With candles, prayers and a pealing of church bells, Americans marked the 50th anniversary of Kristallnacht, the "night of broken glass" that shattered lives and illusions as it ushered in the Nazi Holocaust.

Synagogues, churches and schools in New York, Los Angeles, Miami, Montgomery, Ala., and other cities on Wednesday commemorated the Nazi riots of Nov. 9, 1938, when scores of Jews were killed and more than 1,100 synagogues set afire. The anniversary also was marked in cities in Europe.

"We all had before the Holocaust the hope of betterment of man," Rabbi Gerald Teller told about 100 people at Ezra Habonim Synagogue in Chicago. "This day is one of reflection on a day of broken glass and shattered dreams.'

In New York City, Cardinal John O'Connor told nearly 1,000 people who attended a service at St. Patrick's Cathedral about the candle burning in the window of his residence.

"I light that candle to tell anyone in New York (who) out of hatred of Jews wants to shatter glass or paint swastikas - shatter the glass of my house, paint the swastikas on my house, for a spiritual Semite lives therein," he said.

Fifty years ago Wednesday, Adolf Hitler's top aide, Josef Goebbels, ordered Nazi thugs to attack Jewish homes, businesses and temples after a German diplomat was slain in Paris.

The Nazis gave the night its name, German for 'crystal night," because shards of broken glass littered the streets. Many historians believe it marked the start of the Nazi campaign to wipe out European Jews.

Gretel Oppenheimer of Chicago remembers finding her dog dead on the doorstep of her Stuttgart home, shot by Nazis.

'For me, it's impossible to think Kristallnacht happened half a century ago," said Oppenheimer, 80. "Every day since, I've lived like it was only last

Oppenheimer agreed that the night could have been called one of shattered illusions.

"My twin brother had already emigrated to America, as I wanted to," she said. "But right up to '38 my father kept saying: 'It will pass. Don't worry. These Nazi thugs are not the real Germany.'

New Yorker Fannie Joelson, a survivor who never saw her father and husband again after they were taken away by storm troopers on Kristallnacht, said the memories were "very painful for

"We saw too much, we hurt too much. We do not want to remember," she said. "But we do remember. How can we forget?"

Those who did not suffer through Kristallnacht must not forget either, said former U.S. Ambassador to Austria Ronald Lauder, chairman of the Kristallnacht Remembrance Committee.

"We must remain vigilant and not allow even the smallest seed of anti-Semitism to take root," Lauder told the audience at St. Patrick's.

In Miami, the Rev. James Fetscher of St. Louis Church stood side by side with Rabbi David Auerbach of Bet Shira Congregation at an inter-faith ceremony. Fetscher prayed for "living memories so we can never forget.'

The congregations have grown close since Bet Shira was desecrated Feb. 28. Fifty windows were smashed and words such as "Die Jew" were spray painted on the walls.

Members of St. Louis Church, three blocks away, responded by putting a blue Star of David in front of their building.

At Wilshire Boulevard Temple, Los Angeles' oldest synagogue, a commemorative program featured keynote speaker Angus Thuermer, an Associated Press reporter stationed in Berlin during Kristallnacht.

'I was absolutely astonished then and I am astonished today. We have not paid attention enough to its significance," Thuermer said.

In Montgomery, Ala., the Jewish community held a candlelight service on the steps of the Capitol at which a proclamation issued by Gov. Guy firms strike back

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nearly 50 insurance companies have swiftly answered a voter revolt against skyrocketing rates by announcing they will stop writing certain policies in California, an industry spokesman says.

At least six other insurance companies, including Aetna Life & Casualty and Fireman's Fund Insurance Cos., said they have withdrawn or intend to withdraw from the auto insurance business in California as a result of the passage of Proposition 103, which was backed by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

On Wall Street, stocks of several companies handling large amounts of insurance in California were down

"We're finding exactly what we feared, and that is that ere's no marketplace left as a result of the passage of Proposition 103," says Don Stewart, executive director of the Pasadena-based American Agents Alliance, a 600member association of independent insurance brokers and agents.

Under Proposition 103, insurers must lower almost all insurance rates, including those on auto, home and business policies, by 20 percent below November 1987 levels. The reductions must be offered when policies come due.

It also requires an additional 20 percent cut in auto rates for drivers with good records, gives control over most rate increases to an elected insurance commissioner, strictly limits the use of territorial rating to set auto rates, and subjects the industry to state antitrust and unfair business practice laws.

Proposition 103 was approved by a narrow margin Tuesday despite the insurance industry's $60 million campaign seeking its defeat. It was the nation's most costly state ballot question battle ever.

State Department of Insurance officials said consumers need not panic about whether they will be able to renew policies or obtain new ones.

"It's premature to say what is going to happen because there are 650 or 700 firms writing property-casualty business in California," said Insurance Commissioner Roxani Gillespie, who is appointed by the governor.

She added that a half-dozen or so companies withdrawing "will not kill the market."

Insurance lawyers waited at dawn Wednesday at the doors of the state Supreme Court in San Francisco, where they filed legal challenges to the initiative.

The industry offered voters four of its own reform initiatives, all of which failed. They included no-fault insurance and a measure to cut fees charged by trial lawyers representing people suing in-

"It's chaos for the companies." said Stewart, who added that at least 47 companies stopped writing new policies Wednesday.

Communist authorities fire strike leaders at Polish shipyard

By DEBORAH G. SEWARD Associated Press Writer

GDANSK, Poland (AP) - Signaling a tough stance on work stoppages, Communist authorities announced that they have fired the organizers of a one-day shipyard strike which did not have the blessing of Solidarity chairman Lech Walesa.

The announcement by the state-run PAP news agency came Wednesday after workers at two small yards in this Baltic port ended strikes they called to protest government plans to close the nearby Lenin Shipyard, birthplace of Solidarity.

The young workers had quit their occupation strikes at the behest of Walesa, who told them there was "no other path than reconciliation."

Hours later, PAP said the director of the Repair Shipyard "sacked the inspirators of the strike action" at the 4,500-worker yard. It did not mention firings at the other affected yard, the 1,000-worker Wisla Shipyard.

The agency said all employees at the Repair yard would be admitted to work today "with the exception of those who have been given notice." It did not say how may workers were dismissed.

The immediate publicity given the firings seemed an attempt to undercut the credibility of Walesa, who had been urging moderation, among supporters of the banned Solidarity free trade union movement

In early September, Walesa persuaded strikers to end Poland's worst labor unrest in seven years in exchange for a government promise to hold talks on ending the country's economic and political crisis and reinstating Solidarity.

But the talks have been repeatedly delayed, with each side refusing conditions set by the other. One Solidarity demand is that about 100 coal miners fired for striking in August be rehired.

The Wisla and Repair shipyard workers went on strike on a day Walesa had said be might call a nationwide strike alert over the government's announced intention to close the 10,000-worker Lenin Shipyard on Dec. 1.

But no strike alert was issued, and Walesa later said shipyard managers told him that liquidation of the huge complex would take several years. Soon after hearing Wednesday of the end of the second strike, Walesa thanked the workers for heeding his request.

"I hope in the future, if there is such a necessity, we will fight together," he said at St. Brygida's church, a Solidarity headquarters. He argued that striking was counterproductive at the moment, and attention should be focused on starting the blocked talks with Communist author-

"For Poland there is no other path than reconciliation, meeting halfway to solve our problems, including social, political and economic pluralism," he told reporters.

But he added: "We will fight for the shipyard sooner or later, and we will regain it."

Solidarity was born in the yard, where Walesa workers as an electrician, in August 1980 during nationwide strikes. It was crushed 15 months later in a military crackdown.

An undetermined number of workers gave up a strike Wednesday morning at Wisla Shipyard, which makes yachts and small river craft, after being promised that those who took part in the strike would not be fired, the yard's strike leader Jan Stanecki said. He said several hundred workers supported the strike.

At the Repair Shipyard, 200 workers who rallied Wednesday morning ended their strike at around 1 p.m., one hour after management said they must leave or be fired, said Krzysztof Kamolak, one of the strike committee members.

Burning Liberian tanker breaks in half in stormy North Atlantic

LONDON (AP) — A Liberian oil tanker with a crew of 27 broke in half in stormy weather in the north Atlantic today and burst into flames, spreading fire over the ocean surface, coast guard officials said.

A Soviet weather ship rushed from 25 miles away to help the 65,700-ton Odyssey but told Canadian rescue officials it was unable to get closer than a mile to the stricken vessel because of the fire, Canadian authorities said.

The Soviet ship said the Odyssey had broken in half but gave no information n the crew, said a spokesman for the British coast guard in Falmouth, England.

'It doesn't sound very good at all," the spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "The So let vessel has lost radio contact with the tanker."

Capt. Pat Phelan of the Canadian Rescue Coordination Center in Halifax, Nova Scotia, said the tanker was about 840 miles eastnortheast of Newfoundland.

The Falmouth spokesman said aircraft passing overhead had seen the surface of the sea was on fire, apparently from leaking oil.

Phelan said the tanker was 52 degrees 38 minutes north latitude and 34 degrees 39 minutes west longitiude, or near the center of the North Atlantic

The Odyssey, built in 1971, sent a distress signal at 9:22 p.m. CST Wednesday, saying it needed immediate assistance, the Falmouth spokesman said.

The signal was picked up by Valentia Radio in southern Ireland and relayed to British coast guard officials in Falmouth, he

The British alerted the Soviet weather ship, which is permanently stationed in the area and quickly arrived on the scene.

The tanker is in the Atlantic sector of responsibility covered by the Canadians and the emergency operation was being coordinated in Halifax with assistance from British coast guard officials.

Phelan said the Canadians had dispatched an armed forces aircraft to the site and that it was due there this morning. The plane, an Aurora surveillance plane, carried survival equipment and liferafts, he said.

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit in Colchester said Valentia Radio had reported that the Odyssey left Sullom Voe, a Scottish oil terminal, on Nov. 5 and was heading for the Canadian port of Come By Chance.

Canadian Coast Guard officer James Cormier said the weather at the tanker site was stormy, with 46 mph westerly winds and

Gunpowder tests not introduced at hearing for teen

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) - A crime expert says results of gunpowder tests that could prove an American teenager did not shoot and kill a Juarez policeman have not been forwarded to the judge hearing the case

"I'd bet if the tests had been positive, you'd have them there,' said Kelly Martin, 18, who is accused of the May 7 slaying of Lt. Jose Zuniga Acevedo.

At a hearing Tuesday in the 7th District Court, criminologist Luis Aguirre Mesa testified in the hearing that two gunpowder tests, designed to determine whether Martin of Dell City had fired a gun, had come out nega-

Mesa said the information wasn't forwarded to the court because negative tests results usually aren't unless they are requested.

Martin and another Dell City teen-ager were arrested just hours after Juarez police officer Pedro Vera Gallegos was shot and his partner Zuniga Acevedo was shot to death.

The other teen was released for lack of evidence, but Martin has been in eustody since his arrest on charges of murder, injuries, theft of a police gun and unauthorized use of a police car.

Martin has said he and a friend, Dale Bridges, were bar-hopping in Juarez when the police officers stopped them, took them to an alley and demanded money. Juarez police frequently solicit bribes and have a reputation for shaking down drunken, rowdy American teen-agers who take advantage of Juarez's drinking age of 18 and infest the downtown streets on weekends.

In the alley, a scuffle ensued and somehow Bridges ended up with Vera's service weapon, Martin has told reporters and Mexican authorities. Martin has said Bridges, also of Dell City, did the shooting and fled to the United States. Martin has accused Mexican officials of trying to make him a scapegoat.

Court authorities repeatedly chastened Martin's attorneys and told Martin to limit himself to answering the court's questions.

Since the anti-inflation program began, there have been shortages of a number of basic foods, including milk, meat and some vegetables. Producers withhold their goods from the market to protest officially-regulated prices that they say are too low.

The government resolved the meat problem by authorizing price increases.

A panel charged with monitoring the pact — which has the formal support of business and labor as well as the government plans to meet Nov. 28 to evaluate the program's achievements.

Commission chairman Javier Bonilla Garcia said Tuesday the panel will not recommend adjustments to the program for President-elect Carlos Salinas de Gortari, who takes office Dec. 1.

Salinas has announced he will continue the program at least through the end of the year.

The three crewmen bailed out first, then Gover ejected about a half-mile away after turning the plane toward an unpopulated area, said Walter Gilstrap, who drove his pickup truck through the fields to rescue the crewmen.

"In my mind, what that pilot did was not only save the lives of his crew but the lives of civilians in the area," Gilstrap said. "He rode it out for as long as he could and set it down where no one would be hurt. That's what he did. They ought to give that man a Distinguished Flying Cross.

Air Force officials said the crash occurred on a routine training flight near Dyess, which is the home base for 29 B-1Bs.

Air I arce officials would not speculate on the cause of the crash. They set up a roadblock and sealed off an area around the crash site Tuesday

Air Force spokesman Al Dostal said wreckage was scattered over an area 7 miles long and 2 miles

At Dyess, Air Force spokeswoman Beverly Foster said a team of military investigators would examine the wreck Wednesday.

Pilot Gover and the three other crewmen, Capt. Michael E. Waters, aircraft commander; Capt. Charles M. Zarza, offensive systems operator; and 1st Lt. Anton Eret Jr., defensive systems operator; were all in good condition at the Dyess Air Force Base hospital, said Air Force spokeswoman Linda

Gilstrap said he was eating a bowl of soup in the Tye Truck Stop just west of Abilene, where he has a knife-sharpening stand, when people around him started yelling about a plane on fire.

"I looked out the window and saw three parachutes and I knew what was happening," he said. 'So I got in the truck and drove - I kind of had the coordinates figured out - I drove to where I thought they would be.'

Gilstrap found the three crewmen scattered about one field, while the pilot a half-mile away in a different pasture.

There were flames in the field where he picked up the crewmen, but not close enough to burn them, Gilstrap said. Witnesses said flames from the crash rose 10 stories in the air and smoke was seen 20 miles away.

Gilstrap said two men were able to get into the truck's cab, and the third, who was "scratched up a little from landing in some trees," got into the

"They were all in shock," he said. "They hugged me and I hugged them and two of them asked me to call their wives."

He dropped the men off at a nearby roadiwhere Air Force rescue crews were waiting, Gilstrap

"That pilot," he said, "that guy is a hero. That's coming from a shade-tree expert, but that's what I

Another witness, Lou Paulsen, said the plane was flying about 2 miles north of Interstate 20 near Tye when smoke spewed from its left engine.

'At first there was just a puff of smoke, then fire," Paulsen told the Abilene Reporter-News. "It looked like it started to go out, then it flared up

Paulsen, an Air Force reserve member, said the pilot apparently abandoned hope of returning to Dyess and turned the plane to ditch it in the fields.

Feds indict 21 in alleged weight-loss clinic scheme

HOUSTON (AP) - A federal indictment alleges that a Houston doctor and 20 others operated a nationwide chain of weight-loss and anti-smoking clinics as a front for such racketeering activities as mail fraud, bankruptcy fraud and money laundering.

All 21 have been indicted in the alleged scheme involving false insurance claims filed for people who visited the clinics to lose weight or quit smoking, federal officials said Tuesday.

Those named in the indictment include five doctors, management personnel and clinic mana-

The 87-count indictment, issued in October but unsealed Tuesday, is the result of an investigation nicknamed "STOPDOC" that began more than a year ago, U.S. Attorney Henry Oncken said.

At the center of the alleged scheme is Dr. Nicholas Bachynsky, a 46-year-old Houston doctor in federal custody on 86 counts, including violation of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Statute, Oncken said

Seven other Houstonians also were in custody, but one suspect remains a fugitive in the Soviet Union, he said.

Arrest warrants were issued for 11 defendants, and summons to appear in court were issued for the other 10, including Bachynsky's wife and a son.

The indictment charges that the 14 clinics submitted fraudulent insurance claims to various health insurance companies.

Federal prosecutor Mitchell Lansden said the group of businesses generated $10 million annually, but he would not speculate how much was in fraudulent Oncken said about $4 million in cash in various deposits is being held under a restraining order and the 14 clinics ceased operations Tuesday. The indictment concerns 66 insurance claims, although federal officials said there probably were thousands more such claims.

Seven other counts concern the alleged intentional sinking of a yacht off the Florida coast in October 1983, and several other counts claim that the theft of a Mercedes Benz, a burglary of an antique store and a boat theft were frauds.

There also are 22 counts of bankruptcy fraud filed in connection with Bachynsky's personal bankruptcy filing and 31 counts of money laundering filed in connection with the transfer of money derived from mail fraud and bankruptcy fraud activities.

entsen clips Bush's coattails in Bush's adopted home state

DALLAS (AP) - George Bush won the presidency with the help of his adopted home state, but Lloyd Bentsen's showing in his Senate re-election bid shortened the vice president's coattails.

Texas voters continued to move away from their solidly Democratic history Wednesday, with the GOP making gains in the Texas Supreme Court and the state legislature.

But with the immensely popular Bentsen appearing twice at the top of the ballot — as Michael Dukakis' running mate and for a fourth term in the Senate - Democrats picked up one and appeared likely to pick up another seat in Con-

With 97 percent of the Texas vote counted by early Wednesday afternoon, Bush was leading Dukakis, 2,821,505 to 2,209,622, or 56 to 44 percent. Bentsen was beating U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, 2,956,893 to 1,973,296, or 60 to 40 percent.

'There are people right here — I recognize them - started out with me in politics in 1962," Bush told supporters at a Houston victory rally. "And you never lost faith. You never left me. And you're a source of my strength. This is a moving night for Bentsen claimed his Senate victory early and praised Dukakis as defeat became apparent.

"I have never seen a candidate that worked any harder, or in those last three or four weeks delivered a message any stronger than did Mike Dukakis in those closing days," Bentsen said. "And he made me proud to be his partner.'

Bush collected Texas' 29 electoral votes, the nation's third largest total, and exit polls portrayed his typical supporter as a white, professional male paid more than $20,000 who calls himself a con-

Dukakis won only 89 of 254 counties. He scored overwhelming victories in South Texas, including a 2-to-1 margin in heavily Hispanic Cameron County, the southernmost in the U.S. Every vote counted in Hudspeth County, in sparsely-populated far West Texas. With all 10 precincts counted, Dukakis won the county 406 to 405. The Democrats increased their standing in Texas' congressional delegation as Greg Laughlin found the second time a charm in his faceoff with Mac Sweeney in U.S. House District 14. He held a 6 percent lead over Sweeney. "I'm excited and I'm looking forward to representing the people of the 14th District," said Laughlin, who lost to Sweeney in 1984.

The outcome of the race in District 13, the Panhandle seat vacated by Boulter, was delayed by a ballot-counting computer malfunction in Randall County. Democrat Bill Sarpalius held a 10point lead, or about 14,000 votes, but in the 1984 election, about 24,000 votes were cast in Amarillodominated Randall County, favoring Republicans by a 3-to-1 margin. But political observers forecast victory for Sarpalius.

The rest of the seats were won by incumbents, including 17 who were involved in contested races. They are Democrats Mike Andrews, John Bryant, Albert Bustamante, Jim Chapman, Martin Frost, Kika de la Garza, Henry B. Gonzalez, Ralph Hall, Marvin Leath, Mickey Leland, Jake Pickle and Charles Wilson and Republicans Bill Archer, Dick Armey, Joe Barton, Steve Bartlett, Larry Combest, Tom DeLay and Lamar Smith.

House Speaker Jim Wright was among four other Democrats and one Republican who were unopposed for re-election to the House. They were: Democrats Jack Brooks, Ron Coleman, Soloman Ortiz, Charles Stenholm and Republican Jack

There will be several new faces in the Texas Legislature this spring, but the balance of power, with Democrats in control, will remain essentially the same. However, Republicans made inroads in the state Senate.

The GOP also gained in the Texas Supreme Republican Tom Phillips was elected chief justice after setting a $5,000 limit on campaign contributions. He criticized his opponent, Justice Ted Z. Robertson, for not doing the same. The contibution controversy, which drew national attention, fueled the bitter tone of the costly campaign.

Three Democrats defeated their Republican opponents as they held off the most ambitious GOP challenge for the high court since Reconstruction. But the GOP gained one seat and one race was too close to call early today.

The composition of the Texas Railroad Commission was unchanged by the election.

Republican Kent Hance, appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to fill a vacancy created by Mack Wallace's resignation, was elected to serve the remaining two year's of Wallace's term. Voters reelected Democrat Jim Nugent to a six-year term.

With three races still undecided in returns Wednesday, the State Board of Education retained the Democratic edge given it four years ago by then-Gov. Mark White. As part of the 1984 education reform measure, the 15-member board became an appointed body.

Grandma hopes to teach lesson by giving gift money to charity

DEAR ABBY: Please comment on a new idea about gift giving that my mother-in-law just came up with.

On her grandchildren's birthdays, Christmas, etc., she is planning to send money to one of her favorite charities and notify the grandchildren that a gift was made in their name in the amount of $() rather than sending a personal gift to each of them as she has done in the past. It seems the reason for this new plan is because she has not received thank-you notes from them in the past, and hopes this "will teach them a lesson.

Abby, I agree that children should write thank-you notes for gifts, and I am all for giving money to charties, but I question her decision. What will this teach her grandchildren about giving? What is her motive for giving gifts in the first place? Whatever happened to the joy of Christian giving, and expecting nothing in return? And what about the golden rule?

I probably should have expressed my opinion about her decision at the time it was made, but I was so surprised that I didn't know what to taught. Parents should teach children early that they may not play with, wear, eat or other-wise enjoy a gift until they have thanked the giver. I do not recommend continuing to give gifts to a child of any age who has not acknowledged previous gifts. Say what you will about "the golden rule" and the joy of "Christian giving," if Grandma chooses to teach thankless grandchildren "a lesson" by sending money to her favorite charity in their name rather than giving them gifts, I'm on

True, one should give for the DISAPPOINTED joy of giving, but when the receiver lacks the courtesy to say "thank you," the giving DISAPPOINTED: loses much of its joy.

pregnant and unmarried. I tried to tell the man responsible (he lives in another state), but he refuses to see me. Because of his behavior, I have decided not to tell him. I do not want to share my child with someone who doesn't have the time of day for us now. At the same time, I do not want to deny my child a father, although I am not sure he would be a good father. (Maybe no father is better than a lousy one.)

I would like to hear the opinions of people who never knew who their fathers were. I would also like to hear from men who have fathered children out of wedlock. Would any prefer not knowing they were fathers?

ALONE IN MINNESOTA DEAR ALONE: You need not be alone. Get in touch with a woman's advocate group to help you make some important decisions. The father of your child has certain legal responsibilities to face. He may even deny paternity, so be prepared for a gal battle.

Every child has the right to know who his or her father is. One's medical history is vital if there's a hereditary disease in the family. My advice: The father-to-be should be informed either by you or an attorney. It's also a man's right to know that he has fathered a child.

Amarillo theatre to stage comedy

AMARILLO - Amarillo Little Theatre will present I'm Not Rappaport, the 1986 Tony Award winner for Best Play, on Nov. 11, 12, 17, 18 and 19 at Amarillo Theatre Center, 2019 Civic Circle. Curtain time each day is 8 p.m.

I'm Not Rappaport, described as one of the best scripts that the theatre world has seen in years, will be presented for the first time on an Amarillo stage. Playwright Herb Gardner received the Outer Circle Critics Award and the John Gassner Award for this production.

I'm Not Rappaport is a bittersweet comedy revolving around two elderly gentlemen who meet on a park bench in Central Park and develop a friendship amidst the opinions and dictates imscript addresses the issues facing the elderly with warmth and humor.

Nat, the Jewish gentleman with a bag full of tricks and a long list of aliases to suit his purposes, is portrayed by Don Shipman. Dale Pitts plays Midge, a man being forced to retire from his superintendent's position when the apartment building where he works and lives goes co-op.

Allen Shankles, director, commented, "I'm Not Rappaport is truly one of the best scripts that we have ever worked with. I think this show will be everyone's favorite production of the '88-89

MINNEAPOLIS - Frank Viola, the American League's most honored pitcher over the last 13 months, is thrilled with his latest award. But not thrilled enough to bring a Cy Young Viola or Cynthia Young Viola into the world.

"Sorry," the Minnesota Twins' ace lefthander says. "If it's a boy it's Steven Paul. If it's a girl its Kalie Marie."

Viola, who on Wednesday was named a near-unanimous winner of 1988 AL Cy Young Award, is on a roll.

He was most valuable player in the Twins' seven-game triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals in the 1987 World Series. He started and won the 1988 All-Star Game. He joined Jim Perry as the only "Twins to win the Cy Young. And any day now, he and his wife, Kathy, will become parents for the third time.

"This is the most incredible year-plus anyone could even dream of, let alone have happen," Viola said in a telephone interview from Orlando, Fla.

Viola has always been confident. Still, he was a bundle of nerves until the Baseball Writers Association of America finally notified him late Wednesday afternoon that he had won the Cy Young in a landslide

"Today was the first day that, I have to say, I was really nervous," he said. "Today, I knew it was the day. I was a little

So, to relax, he played golf with ex-teammates Butch Wynegar, Sal Butera and Jack O'Connor and former Harlem Globetrotter Curly Neal.

"I got the camera crew out of my face finally after the first nine holes and was able to play better," Viola said. "I car pitch in front of 50,000, but I can't play golf in front of a camera.

Fortunately for Viola, the Twins pay him handsomely to pitch in front of big crowds. Including a $100,000 incentive for winning the Cy Young, Viola made $1.6 million in 1988. He'll get a $1.55 million base salary next year.

Viola rewarded the Twins with a majorleague-leading 24-7 record in 1988. His 2.64 earned-run average and 193 strikeouts ranked third in the AL. The Twins didn't repeat as champions, but they did win 91 games - six more than they won during the 1987 regular season.

Viola was especially valuable in 1988 because one-time star Bert Blyleven had a poor year and has since been traded. Viola also served as mentor to young lefty Allan Anderson, who began the season in the minors. Anderson was called up, gradually mastered Viola's pet pitch - the changeup - and went on to win 16 games and lead the league in ERA.

In the Cy Young balloting, Viola captured 27 of a possible 28 first-place votes and 138 of a possible 140 points.

Dennis Eckersley of the Oakland Athletics got the other first-place vote and was second with 52 points.

Mark Gubicza of Kansas City was third with 26 points.

Improved ballhandling by sophomore guards Christa West and Crystal Cook was one of the main reasons Pampa had an outstanding scrimmage against AHS Nichols said

"They both handled the ball a lot better. I saw some good things happening," added Nichols.

Yolanda Brown, who averaged 22.4 points and 14.6 rebounds last year, appears ready for an outstanding senior season. The 5-11 senior scored 33 points in three quarters and led her team in rebounding against AHS.

"It's easy to overlook Yolanda because you always expect her to do well, but she can still improve," said Nichols.

The Lady Harvesters were scrimmaging without the services of injured post players Schivon Parker and Lisa Johnson, Diane Wood, a 5-11 senior, filled up the slack with some outstanding play in the middle.

"She came on and did a good job in leadership and rebounding," Nichols said.

Sheila Reed, a 5-7 sophomore, shot well in the scrimmage and 5-10 junior Leslie Bailey came off the bench to play a good game.

Nikki Ryan, a 5-9 freshman, will help out once she gains more consistency, Nichols said.

Both the Pampa boys and girls teams open the season Nov. 18 at Dalhart. The girls game tips off at 6:30 p.m., followed by the boys

Perez, who also starts in Pamagainst anywhere from 60 to 124 qualifying spot in the final runners and I look for him to do pa's defensive backfield, will "It wasn't a foot race. He had it bock. The top 10 advanced to pretty good because I believe we have to miss Friday night's footdefense lifted Wildcats into playoffs

All games at 7:30 p.m. Friday CANADIAN vs. WEST TEXAS HIGH at Perryton

Following a second-place finish in District 2-2A, the Wildcats will make an appearance in the state football playoffs for the third time since 1951.

West Texas High, which was formed two years ago when Stinnett, Phillips and Plemons merged, has captured the District 1-2A title both of its two years. This week finds the Wildcats and the Comanches thrown together for a Class 2A bi-district showdown.

After dropping its first three outings to Sanford-Fritch, White Deer and Dalhart, West Texas hasn't been in the loss column since. The Comanches stand at 6-3-1 on the season and 4-0-1 in conference play. Canadian has posted a 7-3 and 4-1 mark, with its lone district defeat coming at the hands of Quanah, the loop champion. Things looked grim for the Wildcats at one point this season, until wins over Memphis and Wellington boosted them back into postseason contention.

But with the slate wiped clean, Canadian now has its sights set on the Comanches. "They're a great defensive ball club and they're very physical," Canadian coach Paul Wilson said. "Their defense sets up a lot of their scores because they're so quick and aggressive.

Linebacker Billy DeLuna has led the Comanche defense all year, averaging 16 tackles per game. In last week's 13-8 titleclincher over Stratford, DeLuna made 24 tackles, followed by teammates Brian Williams with 17, Jeremy Yeager with eight and one interception, and Larry Keidel with eight.

For the Wildcats, an evermaturing defense was the difference between a mediocre season and a playoff season. The games against Memphis and Wellington were giant leaps along the road from defensive innocence to experience. But this week, the burden of proof falls upon the offense. Against a team that has allowed only 98 points in 10 games, an average of 9.8 per contest, the yardage won't come easily.

"We're capable of beating them," Wilson said, "but we've got to play an awfully good ball game. If we hook it up and get after them, we can stay in the game - that's for sure.

BOOKER at WHITE DEER White Deer coach Windy Williams can't remember the last time the Bucks ended the regular season without a single loss. "It hasn't happened since I've been here," said Williams, in his fourth year at the White Deer

By Sonny Bohanan

But if the Bucks pull off a win over the Booker Kiowas this Friday night, 1988 should long be a season of memories.

Although the Bucks, riding on the crest of a 9-0 record, have already clinched the District 1-1A title and the top playoff seed, Williams is loathe to discuss the postseason until the last second has ticked off the clock of Friday's scheduled game.

"The kids have goals," Williams said. "They want to be 10-0, and they know there's no skipping one. We've got another game on Friday night, and we're going to play as hard as we can." The Bucks had a week off to prepare for their final regular according to Williams. "The kids got some bumps and bruises and flu bugs taken care of," he said. "We're healthy and ready for the fight.

Booker, 2-2-1 in conference play and 5-3-1 overall, is saddled with the unenviable proposition of facing the best 1A defense in the area. The Bucks, who have allowed a measly 4.4 points per game, were led defensively by freshman Zach Thomas with 17 tackles in a 45-0 shutout of Gruver two weeks ago.

Dustin Miller is the Kiowas best hope for putting some points on the board. He rambled for 107 yards on 21 carries in last week's 7-7 tie with Gruver.

Offensively for the Bucks, running back Bryan Waitman is up to 777 yards and 17 touchdowns on 126 carries, while quarterback Bart Thomas brought his total to season game, a welcome rest 1,053 yards on the season, 485 rushing and 568 passing. Combining ground and aerial stats, Thomas has been directly involved in scoring 19 TDs.

Jason Marlar stands at 526 yards rushing on the year, with three touchdowns and 71 carries. Defensively, the Kiowas haven't fared badly this season either, limiting their opponents to 52 points, which, other than White Deer, is the lowest of any Class 1A team in the area.

"They're a good football team," Williams said. "They've got some injuries right now, but they're as aggressive as they can be. We're looking forward to it. A great football team looks forward to every game."

SUNRAY at WHEELER With the playoffs already out of reach for both teams, this final District 1-1A regular season matchup is a matter of pride. For the Mustangs, who are curcently 4-5 overall and 2-3 in loop play, it is the last chance to finish the season with a .500 mark. Sunray is looking for its second conference win of the year.

Despite the Bobcats' unimpressive record, Wheeler coach Ronnie Karcher sees no reason to take them lightly. "To me they look real good," he said. "In most of their games that I've seen on film, they've moved the ball well on everyone. They've just hurt themselves with mistakes.

Sunray's penchant for varied sets and an offense that consists of about one part passing and one part running has caused more than its share of confusion on the part of opposing defenses. "With Sunray, you have to constantly defend against both the pass and the run," Karcher said. 'They've got a lot of different looks and different sets, and they use a lot of motion. They try to keep you off-balance defensively

For their part, the Mustangs have proven that they can score, and have in fact outscored their opponents 166-156 despite a losing

Shane Guest remains at the top of the Wheeler rushing chart with 763 yards and seven touchdowns on 114 carries for the season. Chad Bentley's average of 16 tackles per game is tops defensively for the Mustangs.

A win Friday night would rescue the Mustangs from their first losing season in some time. "Like I told the kids," Karcher said, being 5-5 is a lot better than being 4-6.

'Maybe we'll get out and end the season on a positive note, and hopefully get next year started out with the right attitude."

Corpus Christi study views school playtime

By BEN GOODWIN Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) - After years of doing calisthenics as required throughout the Corpus Christi Independent School District, students at Montclair Elementary School are running and playing in recess like the old

The 604 Montclair students are getting 15-minute recess breaks as part of a non-scientific study being conducted by 38 Corpus Christi State University students.

Students in other elementary schools still are doing 45 minutes of programmed exercises, a procedure adopted more than 10 ver sago.

ne CCSU students are observing students' behavior in recess. and teachers are watching their students afterward to see if recess has any effect on their be havior in the classroom.

The study will determine whether school administrators recommend a return to recess in elementary schools districtwide.

"The kids are playing red Rover, red Rover,' and '1-2-3 red light,' 'patty-cake,' and games we used to play," said Montclair principal Delia Marichalar.

Marichalar, who has been with CCISD for 15 years as a principal and teacher, said she is biased in favor of recess instead of structured exercise time

"I enjoy watching the children play, seeing games I haven't seen in a long time," she said. "I think the children need free time.'

The study, which began in September and will run through December, came about mainly through the efforts of Candy Skelton and Berny Cron, parents of Montclair children.

They received permission from the CCISD for the study and interested CCSU associate professor Marie Pennington in joining their efforts

'I just think kids need a break," Skelton said. "Adults get coffee breaks at work; why not our children? I think recess is a vital part of school.

Skelton taught physical education as a paraprofessional in the CCISD and then taught three years at the pre-kindergarten level after receiving a college degree. She also taught physical education at both Del Mar College and CCSU

We are concerned parents who want to get something done about recess," Skelton said. "We believe the socialization process at school is important.'

The parents will compile results of the CCSU study and present the data to the district's administrative staff.

"The CCISD has cooperated fully with us," Skelton said. "The staff has been wonderful.'

Cecil Wingfield, a psychologist ca the staff of the Nueces County Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center, agrees that a freetime recess is needed.

"I think the free play period is a good idea, especially at the elementary school level," said Wingfield. "It is good to have some period during the day for the children to have instructured time where they run off their

Wingfield said it isn't easy for a 6- to 8-year-old child to sit still all

"I think recess is good for the children and I believe you will find it also is good for the teachers," said Wingfield. "After recess, I believe the children will sit a lot quieter."

Years ago, the CCISD began using paraprofessionals for teaching physical education after the Texas Education Agency ruled that teachers must have a 45-minute planning period each day. Paraprofessionals usually cover two schools, leading students in regimented calisthenics for the 45-minute period.

According to school officials, the TEA didn't prohibit recess, but didn't leave school districts much time to allow it.

"We are mandated to have a 45-minute planning period for teachers and you can't split the time into segments," said Sandra Younger, director of elementary curriculum development for the Younger said the school district must provide a specific amount of time for each subject to be taught. The time depends on the course and the grade level. In the course of a day of fulfilling those requirements, not much time is left for recess.

Marichalar agrees that the schools are required to run a tight schedule, and doesn't believe the 10-minute break students get twice a day for a classroom stretch is enough. She said a final tally both on classroom and playground behavior will be made in mid-December.

Two RRC commissioners fight off challengers After his loss was apparent, Hackney said

DALLAS (AP) - Republican Kent Hance and Democrat Jim Nugent torpedoed major challenges to retain their posts on the Texas Railroad Commission, and both attributed their victories to positive, upbeat campaigns.

Hance defeated Democrat Clint Hackney by a 55-to-45 percent margin Wednesday in a race marked by Hackney's criticism of Hance for neglecting commission business to attend OPEC meetings.

The commission is a three-member panel that regulates the oil and gas, railroad and trucking industries in Texas.

Appointed to the post last year by Gov. Bill Clements, the Republican incumbent attributed his win to what he called his "positive" campaign.

"Even when our opponent got negative ... we remained positive," Hance said after his victory. "We just ignored him because I didn't have time to teach him the issues.' Hance said he thought his insistence that Texas become more involved in the world oil scene, including attending meetings of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, helped him win.

"I think that was positive," he said. "We made a decision to speak up for Texas." Hance and Hackney were battling for the remaining two years of an unexpired commission term

Hance had greater name recognition because he sought two different statewide offices in the past four years. But Hackney said he thought he was gaining momentum in the final days of the race.

'I think things turned my way, and the question is did they turn my way enough to get more than 50 percent of the vote," he said. With 93 percent of the vote counted early Wednesday afternoon, Hance had 2,542,042 votes to Hackney's 2,082,529. In his bid for another full term on the Railroad Commission, Nugent said he relied on his experience on the panel to carry him to victory over Republican challenger Ed

Emmett. Nugent, with 93 percent of the votes counted, had 2,585,772 votes, or 56 percent, to Emmett's 1,863,501, or 41 percent. Libertarian candidate Richard Draheim captured 1 percent of the vote, while New Alliance Party candidate Reynaldo Lozano garnered 2 per-

Leading up to the election, Nugent said he was running a positive campaign and virtually refused to discuss his opponent.

He also focused on Texas' troubled oil and gas industry, citing suggestions he made to the Texas Legislature during its last session as ways of reviving the ailing business.

Nugent said from his campaign headquarters in Austin that he believed Emmett concentrated too heavily on deregulation of trucking in his campaign.

"I think my opponent wanted to cast it as a referendum on (trucking) deregulation, and he got the results," the commission chairman said.

Emmett, executive director of a group that supports trucking deregulation, made that a key issue. Nugent had criticized Emmett's stance as being colored by the fact that he was a paid lobbyist.

Emmett said he began to realize as early as Sunday, when several poll results were in. that the race wouldn't go in his favor. "It's a name ID situation in a statewide race. He (Nugent) has been in state politics a long time," Emmett said. "I think it's just too much to overcome.'

The Republican had said he was counting on voter support for Republican presidential candidate George Bush to help him win. But he said those coattails weren't long enough. "No question — (Democratic vice presidential and U.S. Senate candidate) Lloyd Bentsen cut off coattails." Emmett, 39, of Round Rock, is a former member of the Texas House, where he served as chairman of the House Energy Com-
