Icy blast brings record low

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures hit a record low early today when Pampa thermometers plunged to 6 below zero as Old Man Winter's icy blast continues.

Forecasters say Panhandle residents can expect more of the same today and tonight with a slight warming trend continuing through the weekend.

Amarillo records show that 1 below zero is the record low for this date, said Darrell Sehorn, staff meteorologist for KGRO-KOMX radio. Pampa's official low was minus 6 at about 7 a.m. today, with temperatures slowly beginning to rise as the sun came up.

However, Sehorn predicts the mercury shouldn't rise much past 10 degrees days as the frigid air mass that paralyzed Alaska for weeks before moving south hovers over the area.

Record low for Feb. 4 is minus 10, Sehorn said, adding that he doubted if temperatures would drop that low this year.

Bitter north winds at 10 to 20 miles per hour have kept the wind chill factor ranging from minus 40 to minus 50 degrees, Sehorn said. Winds in Pampa have remained fairly steady at 20 mph, he said.

Pampans can expect temperatures to dip to minus 5 degrees again tonight, he said, followed by a barely warmer high in the teens for Saturday and Sunday.

"The first chance we have of being above freezing should be Tuesday," he said.

"It doesn't look favorable as far as moisture goes," Sehorn added. "That air mass is so cold it's just not capable of much moisture. A low (pressure system) sliding down the cold front could enhance the possibility of moisture."

However, the meteorologist said he didn't expect to see more than a few flurries of snow, with perhaps a little more on Saturday.

Elsewhere across the state, a strong Arctic cold front brought sleet and snow today to large sections of North and West Texas, closing some freeways and delaying airline flights, while hundreds of South Plains residents lost natural gas service when a line broke.

The winter storm coated bridges and roadways in the Dallas-Fort Worth area with a thick layer of ice and police reported several freeway closures from traffic accidents, several involving tractor-trailer rigs.

A 4-inch gas line ruptured about 3:30 a.m., cutting service to about 850 homes in Paducah, east-northeast of Lubbock.

With temperatures in the single digits, schools were closed and residents were asked to move to electrically heated buildings, including the Paducah Senior Citizens Shelter.

"The whole town is out of gas," said Paducah City Manager Bill Cartwright. "It's a real mess."

About 50 Lone Star Gas workers were trying to repair the break, located 12 miles south of Childress. Spokesman Breck Harris in Fort Worth said it was uncertain whether the problem was weather-related.

West Texas Utilities has been supplying elderly people in Paducah with electric heaters until natural gas service was expected to resume by midday.

The storm brought heavy rains to East Texas, where some farm-to-market roads and bridges were closed by high water in the Longview area.

In Austin, it was 25 degrees at 9 a.m. and the temperature was expected to drop into the teens tonight, according to Jim Dugan, an NWS forecaster.

Despite the frigid temperature, homeless activists continued to stay in a group of huts constructed on rafts and floating in Town Lake, said Ronnie North of the Street Peoples Advisory Council.

"Everything was just fine. They have it set up so they're pretty warm inside the enclosed space," said North.

Central Texans were running for firewood. Hill Country Firewood in Austin said they were booked with deliveries through Wednesday.

"We've been getting an average of 50 calls a day since everyone heard about the cold weather," said co-owner Patricia Fleming.

A First Annual February Beach Party at Bachman Lake in Dallas Thursday was greeted by temperatures in the 30s, and contestants traded their swimsuits in for long pants.

In North Texas, officials did what they could to keep roads and airports open, but freezing rain and icy winds threatened to stall most activity throughout the day.

The brunt of the storm moved through Abilene, into the Dallas-Fort Worth area and on to Paris in the northeast. Temperatures continued to plunge and visibility cut to a minimum. A windchill of 10 degrees below zero was reported at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport about 1:30 a.m. today.

"The air is so cold at the surface that it's just turning into freezing rain and sleet," said David Martin, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Worth.

At Dallas Fort Worth International Airport, there was an estimated quarter-inch of slush covering the airport at 11 p.m.

Joe Dealey, director of public affairs at DFW airport, said several flights were delayed and road crews were treating taxiways and roadways late Thursday.

"The crossover taxiway bridges are being chemically treated to retard the formation of ice," Dealey said about 11 p.m. Thursday. "Arriving aircraft are reporting the braking action — what it takes to stop the plane — as fair to poor."

Dealey advised travelers to check with the airlines and travel agents to insure the proper time for their flights.

"On International Drive, the main thoroughfare through the airport, the 'fly-over' bridges that connect (automobiles) with the terminals are closed," Dealey said. "The automobiles are being rerouted."

Barbara Block, emergency preparedness specialist in Dallas, said city crews began spreading sand on overpasses and slickened roadways between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. Thursday. She said the crews were expected to be busy throughout today maintaining a flow of traffic.

"We're getting to get busy," Block said. "We've had 47 trucks go on standby, as of 5 p.m. this afternoon."

Sand crews had covered parts of Interstate 45, Northwest Highway, Loop 12 and Interstate 35 by 10:30 p.m.

Garland officials shut down a portion of Interstate 635, the Lyndon B. Johnson Freeway, when an 18-wheeler jack-knifed, blocking the highway and causing a four-vehicle pile-up, said Cmdr. Bob McCraw.

Senate rejects pay raise plan; spotlight now shining on House

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's rejection of a 51 percent congressional pay raise places the spotlight on a House leadership plan to legalize the increase next week but scale it back to 30 percent a day later.

The Senate's 95-5 vote Thursday against the raise sent the two houses in different directions, and "no one knows" how the controversy will be resolved, said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. "I don't believe we'll know that for a matter of weeks or months."

The Senate resolution included language to roll back the raise if it becomes law and end the system allowing congressional increases, along with those for top federal executives and judges, to become law automatically unless rejected by both houses.

The chief sponsors were Republican Sens. Larry Pressler of South Dakota and Charles E.

Grassley of Iowa.

Also approved, by unanimous voice vote, was a Senate rules change that would ban senators from keeping fees for speeches, articles and appearances. But the ban on such fees, typically paid by special-interest groups, would only remain in effect while senators were receiving the raise.

The Senate action has strong political appeal to a public angry with the size of the raise, but will have little practical effect under House Speaker Jim Wright's plan to let the increase become law automatically next Wednesday.

Wright plans to use a risky parliamentary procedure that requires a two-thirds majority to scale back the raise to 30 percent, and to pass a House ban on speaking fees along with other outside income restrictions.

House Democratic Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said there was only a 50-50 chance of getting the two-thirds while Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, and a leading pay raise opponent, predicted it would be "very difficult for the speaker to find two-thirds to vote for the resolution."

Rank-and-file lawmakers would see their salaries rise from $89,500 to $135,000 under the full raise. But the pay would be $116,350 under Wright's plan, the same amount House members can now receive in salary plus honoraria — defined as fees for speeches, appearances and articles.

Even if the Wright plan passed, the Senate would be unlikely to go along, since senators can now keep $35,800 in honoraria and would therefore lose money by accepting a smaller $26,850 raise. While the two houses haggled, the 51 percent raise would remain in effect along with the honoraria bans.

Wright explained his rollback plan at a news conference Thursday, emphasizing the virtue of banning honoraria and taking that same amount in salary.

Dabblers in games of occult may be playing with satanism

Heavy metal groups may use satanic images and symbols on their album covers.

Walk into any bookstore and in a section termed "Occult" or "New Age" are dozens, sometimes hundreds, of books on everything from devil worship to palmistry to reincarnation. It is these books, many people involved with satanism have said, that first introduced them to devil worship.

Experts on satanism around the nation agree that other such apparently harmless items as the game Dungeons and Dragons, horoscopes and horror movies may make the occult appear so enticing that young people are drawn in.

Pat Polling, a nationally-recognized expert on satanism from Richmond, Va., has even formed a group called BADD (Bothered About Dungeons and Dragons) after one of her children became involved in the occult through the game.

BADD claims to have 75 documented cases of teen-age suicide directly related to playing the game.

played D&D for years completely discounted the idea.

"It's just a game, that's all. If you want to make it evil, I guess you could. Anything is what you make it," he said.

He refused to be identified with a story that even remotely suggested a connection between D&D and satanism.

"Hell, no, you can't use my name. People think all this stupid devil stuff is real. It's not, but I don't want those religious freaks bothering me just because I play Dungeons and Dragons," he said.

He said he was an agnostic who leaned toward a concept of power in nature that probably most resembled Wicca (witchcraft).

Another local D&D enthusiast, whose wife reportedly dabbles in witchcraft, also refused comment.

"Talk to (name omitted). He's probably nuts. He believes all that satanic stuff," the man said.

A representative at a local bookstore said there is a high demand for two particular books on the occult that give spells.

Cold weather bad for people, pets

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
 Staff Writer

Extremely cold temperatures such as Pampa has experienced Thursday and today can be life-threatening for not only people, but pets, too, if the proper precautions aren't taken.

People going out into the cold should wear several light layers of clothing, suggests Jim Baker, a certified hunter safety instructor.

"Wool clothing is considered the best," Baker said. "Air trapped between the layers acts as insulation and helps keep the body warm."

Baker, who teaches a hunter safety course that includes cold-weather survival techniques, said he dressed in a T-shirt, jeans and a wool shirt today. When Baker goes out, he said he'll put on a coat, hat and gloves.

"And keep dry," Baker added. The two major causes for death in cold weather situations are hypothermia, where the body temperature plummets, and panic, he said.

Those who plan to go out in the weather should eat a big meal to provide the body with extra calories and energy needed to keep warm, Baker said.

"Don't drink alcohol to keep warm," he said. "Warm liquids are fine. Drink coffee, but not alcohol."

Baker explained that drinking alcoholic beverages in cold weather can be dangerous because the alcohol thins the blood to some extent and causes the body to lose heat more rapidly than it normally would.

Most of the heat leaves the body through the extremities, he said, so a hat, gloves and warm foot coverings are especially important.

Any wind, even that caused by body movement, can cool down the body, but when winds reach the 10 to 20 mph speeds that Pampa is experiencing right now, the wind chill drops temperatures far below the actual outside temperature.

Anyone, or any animal, which becomes wet and chilled is in danger of hypothermia. Hypothermia victims, human or animal, may shiver violently. They may stumble, seem confused or drunk. In advanced cases, the skin becomes bluish, muscles rigid, breathing shallow and heartbeat weak.

"Someone with hypothermia may lose all sense of reasoning," Baker said. People who plan to spend an extended time in the cold weather should probably have a companion with them in case hypothermia sets in.

Pampa veterinarian Dr. Ron Easley recommends that pet owners should provide a dry place out of the wind for their animals, with lots of fresh water and food.

Pets are harder than most people think, he said, and can usually withstand the cold if they have a protected area and plenty of food and water.

If pet owners observe signs of hypothermia in their pets, they should rub the animal in, dry it off and warm it up by rubbing it with a dry towel and going over it with a blow dryer.

When the pet's shivering stops, Dr. Easley suggests the animal be given some warm, not hot, bouillon or water with honey in it to help build the animal's energy level.

Animals are also prone to frostbite on the ears, toes and tails, Dr. Easley said.

"You don't want to rub on that," he cautioned. "Frostbite is a burn and if you rub it, it may pull some of the skin off." Again, the veterinarian suggests using the blow dryer to help warm the areas. If the frostbitten areas swell dramatically, the pet owners should have their animal checked by a veterinarian.

Another pet problem that goes with cold weather is anti-freeze toxicity.

"A lot of time their water freezes, and anti-freeze is nice and sweet tasting, so they drink that," Dr. Easley explained. "So if you put your pet in the garage, be sure there isn't any anti-freeze coming out of the radiator of your car that they can lick up."

Elderly cat lover fined $50 for pets

FORT WORTH (AP) — A lawyer for an 80-year-old woman has vowed to appeal the widow's $50 fine for not keeping her cat under control.

Meanwhile, Nan Farris has promised to keep better watch over her feline friends.

"If they get out, I can't help it," she said after being fined Thursday. "But I'm going to do my best to keep them on my own property," she added.

A Municipal Court jury found Ms. Farris violated the city's leash law for cats and had failed to immunize the animal against rabies.

She could have been fined up to $900 for the escapades of her cat, which a neighbor claimed used his property as a litter box.

Charges against Farris involved two of six citations she has received since July, resulting from complaints filed with the city's Animal Control Department.

Diana winds up New York tour

NEW YORK (AP) — Princess Diana made a triumphant but exhausting tour of New York City that embraced both its homeless and high-and-mighty, and by most accounts the only people she failed to charm were 400 Irish-American protesters.

The 27-year-old princess, described as tired and perhaps a little homesick, was to head home to England today after visiting Harlem Hospital and meeting children with AIDS.

"She is a beautiful woman — strikingly beautiful — who has taken the world by storm," Mayor Edward I. Koch exclaimed after meeting the princess Thursday night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Diana was at the Brooklyn concert hall to attend the American debut of the Welsh National Opera, after which she returned to Manhattan and dazzled guests at a gala dinner in her honor at the World Financial Center.

Earlier, she visited a family's apartment at a Lower East Side shelter for the homeless and browsed at the giant FAO Schwarz toy store.

"I dreamed about this last night," said Wanda Morales, who shook Diana's hand. "It was better (than the dream). It was really better. We can hold our head up high and say, 'Princess Diana came to the Lower East Side.'"

Cheering crowds turned out at each stop to glimpse the princess. The lone note of dissent was heard outside the opera performance, where more than 400 protesters chanted "IRA, IRA" and waved signs denouncing the princess.

Charles J. Hynes, a potential mayoral candidate who is active in Irish-American affairs, said the protest "is not directed against Princess Diana, it's directed against her as a symbol of British government, which for much too long has inhabited Northern Ireland."

 Koch and developer Donald Trump were heckled as they entered the elegant concert hall, located in a run-down Brooklyn neighborhood.

But all was calm and serene inside, where the princess watched a performance of Giuseppe Verdi's Falstaff, which tells the story of Sir John Falstaff, Shakespeare's knight of the paunch.
 "She was very proud of the company," said Brooklyn Academy of Music president Harvey Lichtenstein, who sat next to the princess during the opera and at the dinner that followed. As Princess of Wales, she is the patron of the company.

Diana sat in a balcony box festooned with garlands of purple and red satin. As she entered, the orchestra sounded a drum roll and played, "God Save the Queen," the "Star Spangled Banner" and "Land of My Fathers," the Welsh national anthem.

From the stage, Koch told her: "I want to bid you welcome. The city is graced by your presence. We want to be sure your visit goes just the way you want it to be so that when you go home you can say you had a royal New York welcome."

Although tickets for the performance of Falstaff and the dinner afterward went for $1,000, opera-lovers and fans of the princess who were on a tighter budget could attend the show alone for as little as $40.

"I wanted to see the princess. I bought my ticket two days ago," said Margaret Skinner, a secretary who lives in Brooklyn. "She has a very nice quiet air about her, not ostentatious, very royal."

After the three-hour-plus opera, the princess returned to Manhattan by limousine to the gala dinner in the World Financial Center's Winter Garden, where guests were seated at candlelit tables covered in deep red linen cloths.

Bowie wants to tear down courthouse

AUSTIN (AP) — A decision was expected today out of the Texas Antiquities Committee on a request by Bowie County officials to tear down the county's historic old courthouse, a 97-year-old landmark that was destroyed by fire in August 1987.

Only the walls remain, but members of the Historic Bowie County Foundation have vigorously opposed county officials' request for a demolition permit. The foundation has maintained it is feasible to restore the building. Arson was suspected in the building's destruction.

T.R. Fehrenbach, chairman of the Antiquities Commission, said a decision is expected after full discussion of a report based on testimony from county officials, foundation members and structure experts.

In September of last year, it took two full days of testimony and cross-examination before the committee heard from all witness es in the old courthouse controversy.

The nine-member Antiquities Commission refused to vote on the demolition permit request at that time because not all testimony was heard.

On Nov. 18, Bowie County District Attorney John Miller and the foundation's attorney, Tom Newman of Texarkana, concluded their cases.

Ill-fated rock stars' families gather for sculpture unveiling

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — An unveiling of life-size sculptures of rock 'n' roll stars Buddy Holly, Ritchie Valens and J.P. "Big Bopper" Richardson overwhelmed some family members, who say the trio would have been honored by the artwork.

On Thursday — the eve of the 30th anniversary of the men's deaths — the singers' relatives gathered here for a private showing of the sculptures.

Later today, there will be a public unveiling and concert in nearby Beaumont, where Richardson once worked as a disc jockey.

All three were killed Feb. 3, 1959, when their small plane crashed in bad weather near Clear Lake, Iowa, en route to a concert date in Fargo, N.D.

At the time, Holly was a giant on the fledgling rock 'n' roll scene and his death became known as "The day the music died." Valens was a budding star famous for his hit "La Bamba."

Richardson's disc jockey character was known as "The Big Bopper," and he recently had earned a gold record for his hit song "Chantilly Lace." The song, still a favorite on oldies rock stations, begins with the Bopper booming out his trademark "HELLO BAYYYYYY-BEE!"

Thursday night's unveiling overwhelmed some of the family members who had gathered for the ceremony.

"This is really an honor," said Maria Elena Holly, Holly's widow. "I have no words to express. It is very touching. He would be so proud. He would be crying to be in such good company."

"There's no way I can express," said Bob Morales of Watsonville, Calif., Valens' brother.

"He'd love it. It's the most beautiful thing he could see."

Two sisters, two brothers and 13 other relatives of Valens made the trip from central California to Port Arthur for the dedication.

"This is really wonderful," said Irma Padilla, who was 6½ when her brother, Valens, was killed. "We live for my brother. At the beginning we didn't want to do things like this. It was too difficult. But the time now has come."

Another sister, Connie Alvarez, 38, said the family still cries when they hear his music. "We miss him," she said.

Mario Ramirez, 31, another brother, said Valens would be "proud that we're all here together."

J.P. Richardson III, son of the Bopper, was unable to make the family ceremony. Richardson, who lives in Houston, has been researching his father's life for the past 14 months.

"He's very emotional about this. You can understand," Sam Monroe, president of the Port Arthur Historical Society, said. Monroe said he was pleased with the sculptures because "the pieces are artwork in themselves as well as representing the artists."

Two sculptures were made by Port Arthur artist Doug Clark for the city's historical society, which last year began its sculpture collection with a Clark-made piece of late 1960s rock queen Janis Joplin, a Port Arthur native who died in 1970.

Clark said he worked from videos of Richardson and Holly and from photos of Valens. His pose of the three — with the Bopper's arms around Valens and Holly — is intended to show the trio as they were standing for a picture just before boarding the fateful flight to Fargo.

"I don't know that there really is such a picture," Clark said. "But I could just imagine someone getting one last shot before they got on the airplane."

"I was watching a video and at the end of 'Chantilly Lace' he held out his hands and I thought, 'That's it!'" Clark said.

Today's event is sponsored by the Port Arthur Historical Society, and proceeds are intended to bolster a fund to purchase a $50,000 building for a Port Arthur museum that would include local rock and roll memorabilia.

"I think we're really doing something here not only to honor the artists but to help other people appreciate the artists," said John Palmer, a Port Arthur businessman credited with being the force behind the memorials. "These guys need to be recognized."

Jiles Perry Richardson Jr. had gained fame in southeast Texas as a disc jockey at KTRM in Beaumont and as a club performer in the area. His Big Bopper character was started in 1953.

As a writer, Richardson had made a name for himself in music circles for penning "Running Bear," a chart-topper sung by friend Johnny Preston of Port Arthur.

In 1958, he struck gold with "Chantilly Lace," which enabled him to hit the road in a big way. Richardson, a big man who often complained about being unable to get comfortable in bus seats, got a seat on the ill-fated flight with Holly when Holly's bass player, Waylon Jennings, gave up his spot on the plane headed for Fargo.

"He was my hero," Palmer said of Richardson. "These guys were budding stars and then they were gone — whammo! It's frightening and it can happen to anybody. To think the only memorial to these guys is here, it shakes me. I'm so happy."

Clements arrives at hospital Thursday night.

Clements undergoing tests

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements is expected to undergo an angiogram examination of his heart today at Baylor University Medical Center.

Clements, 71, drove himself to the hospital Thursday night after flying to Dallas from Austin.

Clements said physicians told him the tests are part of a routine check-up since he suffered a mild stroke last July.

"I feel wonderful," he robustly told reporters as he marched through the hospital lobby to the elevators Thursday night.

According to medical experts, angiograms are most often used to determine whether arteries or vessels are narrowed or blocked, and how seriously so. In an angiogram, a dye is injected into the arteries and is traced on X-rays as it moves through the vessel or becomes blocked.

"They're going to take my temperature and run a few tests," Clements said.

Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary, said he expects the governor to be released from the hospital by the weekend, if everything goes well. Clements told reporters he only expected to have a 72-hour stay in his private room.

Suspect killed by officer had long criminal record

DALLAS (AP) — Michael Wayne Robinson, the third suspect killed by an Arlington police officer since August, had a long criminal record, authorities said.

"He appeared to be the type that is a time bomb just walking around waiting to explode," said deputy constable Bob Bracken, who said he once arrested Robinson.

Robinson, 21, once an outstanding linebacker at Tyler Robert E. Lee High School, was on 10 years' probation at the time he was killed Wednesday afternoon, WFAA-TV of Dallas reported.

Robinson had 15 moving traffic violations and had pleaded guilty to burglary, drug and assault charges, the station said.

The young man's father in Tyler said Thursday in a tearful interview with WFAA-TV that his adopted son had been getting into trouble ever since his mother died.

"There came a blow in his life when he lost his mother," said Winford Robinson.

Robinson was shot Wednesday by Arlington Officer Brian Farrell, who had killed two men in separate shootings last August. Farrell said the man held a table knife threateningly as he and another officer tried to serve him with a forgery warrant.

Arlington internal affairs investigations cleared Farrell of any misconduct in the two shootings last year, and two separate police panels reviewing his use of deadly force are near completion, Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said.

Deputy Chief Ray Hawkins of the Dallas Police Department said the shooting took place when Farrell and partner Ed Gordon served three forgery warrants on Robinson just after 4 p.m. Wednesday at an apartment located behind a house in Highland Park, an affluent island city inside the Dallas city limits.

According to Hawkins, the officers got a key from the property owner and entered the apartment.

"They saw the man crouched behind a counter with a table knife," said Hawkins.

"They ordered him to drop the knife, but he advanced on the officers," said Hawkins, "so they went out into the yard."

"They were screaming for him to drop it, but he said, 'You'll have to shoot me,'" Hawkins said. "Farrell shot him one time in the chest."

Hawkins estimated Robinson was about five feet from the officers.

Residents in the neighborhood reported hearing someone yelling, "Help me," and then a gunshot, but investigators said no one saw the shooting.

Fraud alleged in program for retarded

AUSTIN (AP) — An internal report by Medicaid investigators from the Texas attorney general's office said "fraud and mismanagement is widespread," according to a newspaper that obtained a copy of the document.

The yearlong probe by investigators for the attorney general's Medicaid Fraud Control Unit found that some companies operating community homes have engaged in illegal "double dipping" by collecting state and Medicaid money to provide the same services to retarded people.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Thursday that the investigators' report concludes that several former employees of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation signed contracts to receive state funds while still employed with the department.

The report was not meant for public distribution and has officially been released only to department Commissioner Dennis Jones and Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle.

At issue is the MHMR Department's multi-million-dollar program that provides $20,294 a year for the care of retarded state school residents who move into community homes.

By the end of this fiscal year, the program will have spent about $143 million since its inception. It will be serving an estimated 2,224 retarded people.

The fund, called the Prospective Payment Program, was created in 1985 in response to a federal court order to reduce the number of retarded residents in state institutions.

The federal Medicaid program covers expenses for basic room, board and care. Supplemental Medicaid funds, or so-called double dipping, is a felony punishable by five years in prison or a $25,000 fine, or both.

The Medicaid Fraud Unit report said that "as a result of our 'PPP' investigation, vast amounts of information has been reviewed, and many other problems concerning Medicaid fraud and mismanagement involving state and federally funded programs is evident."

"The scope of these problems range from individual provider Medicaid fraud to Medicaid fraud in the administration of these programs," it said, according to the newspaper.

The report said the fraud unit needs additional resources to continue investigation of problems uncovered in mental retardation programs. It said an investigation of the department's central office personnel is warranted.

"The Medicaid Fraud Control Unit believes TDMHMR has done more to prevent the discovery of illegal Medicaid supplementation than it has done to prevent the commission of the illegality," the report said.

Jones, the MHMR Department commissioner, and Jaylon Fincannon, deputy commissioner for mental retardation, said the department never tried to "stonewall" the investigation. Fincannon said the Prospective Payment Program has allowed retarded Texans to obtain services never before available in the community.

Three accused of fraud in thrift takeover action

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Three men were arrested in connection with what federal agents described as the largest bank fraud case in South Texas history.

A federal grand jury indictment, made public on Thursday, alleged that the men defrauded San Antonio-based Suburban Savings Association of more than $5 million in an elaborate "land flip" scheme that financed a takeover of the thrift with the thief's own money.

Investigators said Leo A. Ladouceur, 35; David D. Gonzalez, 34; and James L. Eakins, 43, hid the takeover from regulators by listing the shares they purchased under the names of old schoolmates and others.

The majority of the funds described in the indictment were obtained through two separate real estate transactions involving the purchase and sale of 96 repossessed homes in San Antonio between December 1987 and March 2, 1988.

Through their company, Triad Financial Corp., also called Associates Mortgage, Ladouceur and Gonzalez allegedly took loans from Suburban to buy the homes and then took further mortgage loans from Suburban to finance the home "purchases" by straw buyers. The straw buyers were allegedly paid for the use of their names on the documents.

The indictment alleges that $3.4 million was disbursed by Suburban in one day for the purchase of 57 homes in the names of four people who had received cash to be nominee borrowers, or "straw buyers."

The loans were then allegedly re-arranged on the books by Eakins to avoid the scrutiny of the Suburban's loan committee. Eakins allegedly was the loan officer on all the transactions. As the mortgage packager, Ladouceur and Gonzalez also collected $996,882 in closing fees, the indictment alleges.

The money collected in fees and loans was allegedly used to buy ownership shares in Suburban under various names. Investigation sources said that Ladouceur and Gonzalez had controlling, but not majority, interest in Suburban through the spring and summer of 1987. State regulators discovered the alleged fraud in October and turned the case over to the FBI, they said.

One count of the indictment alleges that Ladouceur and Gonzalez attempted to deceive bank examiners by listing the ownership of Suburban Savings in the names of 12 other people when they actually controlled it.

Three charges involve a $150,000 loan allegedly made to a non-existent corporation linked to Ladouceur and Gonzalez.

The remainder of the charges involve four loans totaling $593,000 by Eakins to four corporations alleged to belong to Ladouceur and Gonzalez.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Changes in ethics? That'll be the day!

In one of his first official acts as Oval Office denizen, George Bush named a panel to study how to bolster the ethics of congressmen and top administration officials. But the people he's picked have such close ties to the Washington power structure, it seems unlikely they will achieve substantial reform. Note who's on the panel.

There's Lloyd N. Cutler, fresh from chairing the presidential commission that gave congressmen and top bureaucrats a 50 percent pay boost, costing taxpayers $350 million. He's a Washington lawyer and part of the city's revolving-door establishment. Cutler was a top official in the administration of Jimmy Carter, a Democrat; Bush, a Republican, will be the third president he has worked for.

Griffin B. Bell will be the panel's vice chairman. He was Jimmy Carter's attorney general. Wasn't Jimmy Carter's administration thrown out of town in 1980? Some guests never seem to leave.

The panel's chairman will be a respectable man, Malcolm R. Wilkey Jr., a former senior judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and now U.S. ambassador to Uruguay. But he's also part of the power structure, and he first pushed his way through the revolving door as long ago as the Eisenhower administration.

A panel truly concerned about ethics in government would include men and women from outside Washington, such as businessmen, scientists and clergymen. It wouldn't hurt to have someone on the panel who understands that the Coveting Commandment also applies to government officials.

No doubt Bush's panel will make a few worthy recommendations to curb some officials' worst behavior. But even if it does, and even if those recommendations are enacted into law, they may have little effect. Past practice has shown very limited — and very selective — use of ethics laws already on the books.

House Speaker Jim Wright expects the so-called House ethics committee to whitewash his actions, and also knows the Justice Department, in the executive branch, is unlikely to conduct an independent inquiry. The same goes for the 20 other members of the last Congress who, according to The New York Times, "were publicly accused of ethical lapses, ranging from sexual harassment or misuse of campaign contributions to more serious legal charges of taking bribes and evading taxes."

As long ago as July 3, 1980, a Code of Ethics for Government Service was passed, to be displayed in government offices. Its first plank stipulates that any person in government service should: "Put loyalty to the highest moral principles and to country above loyalty to persons, party, or government department." As John Wayne used to say, that'll be the day.

'Kinder and gentler' won't fly

WASHINGTON — The inaugural balls are over, but a curious melody lingers on. Call me Grumpy if you please, but all this smarmy harmony is making my stomach growl. C'mon, George! Wipe that grin off your face. In this city of the long knives, "kinder and gentler" isn't going to fly.

For the time being, at least, we have had a sufficiency of sweetness and light. Over one endless weekend the country saw Bush the conciliator, Bush the populist, Bush the avuncular grandpa. What we didn't see, and what we must see before long, is Bush the tough guy. He has such to be tough about.

The Inaugural Address read better than it sounded. Perhaps we were spoiled by eight years of Ronald Reagan, who brought to the forensic art the timing and cadence of an experienced actor. Bush is no orator. Until he got almost to the end of his speech, in his pledge to stop the scourge of drugs, the audience sat on his best lines.

It may have been the content, rather than the delivery, that startled the spectators in relative silence. Bush won his election as a conservative Republican. At times he sounded more like a liberal Democrat:

"My friends, we have work to do. There are the homeless, lost and roaming. There are the children who have nothing, no love, no normalcy. There are those who cannot free themselves of enslavement to whatever addiction — drugs, welfare, demoralization — that rules the slums.

"There is crime to be conquered, the rough crime of the streets. There are young women to be helped who are about to become mother of children they cannot care for and might not love."

James J. Kilpatrick

At other points, Bush sounded like William Jennings Bryan fending off a cross of gold. He might have been Franklin Roosevelt denouncing malefactors of great wealth:

"We are not the sum of our possessions. They are not the measure of our lives. In our hearts we know what matters. We cannot hope only to leave our children a bigger car, a bigger bank account. ... And what do we want the men and women who work with us to say when we're no longer there? That we were more driven to succeed than anyone around us? Or that we stopped to ask if a sick child had gotten better — and stayed a moment there to trade a word of friendship?"

This was a George Bush who "didn't mean to be sentimental," but went a long way in that direction. He hailed "the goodness and courage" of the American people. He urged them to join actively in "doing good." He was nothing if not conciliatory. This is the age, he said, "of the offered hand." Good will begets good will.

Well, we will see. Maybe it's worth a try, to see if "greater tolerance" and "easygoingness" will prevail. The trouble is that in dealing abroad with the Soviet Union, and dealing here at home with the likes of Speaker Jim Wright, Bush may be perceived as the eternal sucker waiting to be fleeced.

Those who have watched Wright in action in the House will believe in an end to rabid partisanship when they see it. The Senate has a new majority leader, George Mitchell of Maine. He succeeds Robert Byrd of West Virginia. He is likely to make Byrd look like a pussycat.

Yes, just as Bush said, "the people didn't send us here to bicker." But the voters who put Bush in the White House put him there to defend and preserve certain political values of the Reagan years: federalism, limited government, strong defense, individual responsibility.

Before long, Democrats will be whooping it up for national health insurance, for greater federal regulation of industry, for new and expensive entitlement programs in such fields as day care.

If Bush is urging "compromise," he may have thrown in his hand before the game begins. Without bickering, he soon will have to learn how to say, flatly, no.

It was, taken all in all, a remarkable inaugural weekend. Barbara Bush made a tremendous hit, which was not at all surprising; she is one great lady. Dan Quayle, as vice president, was on his very best behavior; the young gentleman has come a long way from his breathless inadequacy at the New Orleans convention. Bush's overtures to black leaders were certainly welcome. Maybe he scored some points by inviting 4,300 visitors to have a look at "the people's house."

Enough is enough. Homeless chic begins to cloy. Send the grandchildren home, roll up your sleeves, and prepare, if need be, to spit in the speaker's eye.

Silver lining in base closings

The heat's on to balance the budget. Uncle Sam, economizing, needs to close many military bases in the United States — saving billions of dollars for taxpayers.

But it will be an economic blow for communities affected.

Eighty-six military bases will be closed altogether over the next five years. Five will be partially closed. Fifty-four will be "realigned."

Let me note here that our overseas bases are a far greater drain on our economy and there has been no mention of closing any of them. I can understand the resistance of some communities to statewide closings while we continue the extravagance of maintaining redundant overseas bases — but there may be a silver lining for some of the communities on the hit list.

During the 1960s and 1970s our country closed 100 military bases. Only 20 of those towns are still hurting. All the others have picked themselves up, dusted themselves off and with innovation and cooperation they are prospering, with a net gain of 44,000 in the number of civilian jobs.

One good example is worth a thousand admonitions.

When Kincheloe Air Force Base in Michigan closed down in 1977, that sparsely populated county lost one-third of its entire population.

Paul Harvey

Worriers predicted a jobless rate of 40 percent.

Today, scarcely a dozen years later, that area is thriving! What was Kincheloe Air Base is now called Chipewah County Air-Industrial Park. It has 48 new businesses and services including 13 manufacturers, a state prison complex and a busy airport with support services.

Now there is a bank, two video stores, a medical clinic, a pharmacy, tavern, large motel, church and hardware store — none of which were there while Kincheloe was an air base.

Where 737 people had jobs under the "military occupation," today 2,000 people have jobs. Half of the 1,200 former military housing units are now renovated and filled and the community has a new 18-hole golf course.

All this transition in a dozen years makes Kinross, Mich., a textbook example of replacing a superfluous military facility with something better.

Salina, Kan., was on the ropes when Shilling Air Base closed in 1965. Overnight 326 civilian jobs were gone. By now those jobs have been replaced with 3,000 better ones!

Forest Park, Ill., has doubled the number of jobs it had when the naval ordnance depot closed down in 1971.

It is true that some former military bases are in decay, overgrown with weeds.

But Hastings, Neb., responded to the closing of its naval ammunition depot in 1966 by getting busy and attracting 41 companies and a community college, creating 1,200 new jobs.

The difference between the communities that died and the ones that survived and thrived seems mostly to relate to a handful of home folks with the vision to see over the top of adversity.

If there is a common denominator in the lives of men the world calls "successful," it is that they get up when they fall down.

This seems true of communities, too. Those what truly deserve a place in the sun get up when they fall down.

Ed Meese is battling a vindictive report

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

At the height of the brouhaha last summer over various alleged misdeeds of Attorney General Meese, certain nameless officials in the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility leaked word to the anti-Meese media that their little shop was conducting its own inquiry into Mr. Meese's conduct, and that a report would be forthcoming in due course. One didn't have to be a gypsy fortune-teller to foresee that the report would condemn Meese.

Unfortunately for these latecomers to the anti-Meese festivities, Mr. Meese stepped down as attorney general not long before the Republican convention in August, obviously to keep the issue of his conduct from becoming a campaign football, and the OPR's eagerly anticipated report disappeared into limbo along with Beckwith's Tenth Symphony.

Now, however, both the symphony and the report have been resurrected, and one would be hard put to say which is less successful. My own vote goes to the OPR report, which has had the misfortune to come under the withering scrutiny of Nathan Lewin and certain of his colleagues in the Washington law firm that represents Mr. Meese.

The report, says Mr. Lewin, "is patently unprofessional and flagrantly irresponsible."

Unprofessional, in part, because "there is no basis in any statute or in any regulation that permits OPR to issue reports to the public opining on the ethics of former government officials." Its job is to recommend disciplinary action, where appropriate, against current Justice Department officials — period.

Unprofessional, in addition, because "most of the conduct in question antedates (Meese's) service as attorney general.... What possible basis is law or governmental policy in there for a Justice Department agency such as OPR — created to police Justice Department conduct — to review and publish reports on the conduct of any employee while he was employed in a totally different agency and had different responsibilities (as counselor to the president)?"

Irresponsible, because — in violation of the simplest dictates of ordinary fairness — the OPR refused, without any explanation whatever, to meet with Mr. Meese's lawyers before reaching its deliberately damaging conclusion. Its report was completed in final form on Oct. 28, 1988. Yet not until Jan. 9, 1989, did OPR phone Mr. Meese's attorneys and give them 48 hours to review and "comment" on the report before its release. Only after an urgent appeal to the Office of the Attorney General were Mr. Lewin and his associates given an additional week to prepare a reply.

Attorney General Thornburgh, who clearly has no stomach for this whole exercise in retroactive vindictiveness, agreed that the Lewin reply would be attached to the OPR's report. There is much more to it than I have been able to cover in this space: Details concerning the OPR's use (and abuse) of grand jury testimony to which Meese and his attorneys have never yet had access; evidence of selective quotation (and omission) of highly relevant testimony; etc., etc.

One is tempted to conclude that the Justice Department agency that could really use a good hard working over by a tough-minded Office of Professional Responsibility is the OPR itself. Its "report" is a strained tendentious, and absurdly belated effort to damage an honorable public servant who left its legitimate purview more than half a year ago. Who are the individuals who wrote it? Am how does it happen that, after eight years of the Reagan administration they are still there in their little cub byhole, taking in the washing of Ron old Reagan's liberal essence?

Afghan ruler claims his government is 'mightier than ever'

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — President Najib said his government is "mightier than ever" and can defend itself after the Soviet army leaves this month, but Pakistan-based insurgents said the Marxist regime won't last more than weeks.

The embattled Najib also told reporters Thursday he sees movement toward a political settlement that could avoid a violent showdown with the Moslem guerrillas.

Meanwhile today, a convoy of about 100 Soviet tanks and armored trucks began to move up the Salang Highway toward the Soviet border but poor winter weather was impeding their progress.

Soviet troops are due to be out of Afghanistan by Feb. 15 under the terms of a U.N.-brokered accord signed last year.

The Afghan army is "mightier than ever ... can defend the country against any onslaught, and we will prove it," Najib said at a two-hour news conference at the Foreign Ministry, in a room unheated because of the fuel shortage in the capital.

As he spoke, another Red Army convoy of trucks, armored vehicles and tanks moved out onto the Salang Highway that runs 260 miles north to the Soviet border.

In Peshawar, Pakistan, border headquarters of a seven-party insurgent alliance, a guerrilla leader predicted Najib's regime would collapse shortly after the Soviet military withdrawal.

"The regime will fall in weeks, not months," Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, leader of the guerrilla group Hezb-i-Islami, told a news conference. He said the insurgents would not have to attack the cities.

Speaking of a possible political settlement with the rebels, Najib said his Communist Party must be part of any future government. "Any attempt to exclude" the party "and its allies from a coalition government will be in vain," he said.

The guerrillas have rejected offers of settlements based on that assumption and say they are forming a council to choose an Islamic government.

Explosions and artillery fire could be heard in and around the capital Thursday. Insurgent attacks have created severe food and fuel shortages in the capital.

Mountain guerrilla camps surround Kabul and insurgent commander Ahmed Shah Masoud controls the Panjshir Valley, through which the Salang runs.

Pakistan and Iran, the neighboring nations in which more than 5 million Afghan refugees live, urged the squabbling guerrilla factions Thursday to patch up their differences and form a broad-based government in Kabul as soon as the Soviets are gone.

Najib, asked whether he would be willing to resign as part of a settlement, said: "The resignation of a person will not help to solve any problem."

He expressed optimism that Eduard A. Shevardnadze, the Soviet foreign minister, would work out a settlement at a meeting with Pakistani leaders Saturday, but added that Pakistan must change its position.

"Pakistan has not only refused to adhere to its commitment under the Geneva agreements, but it has quantitatively and qualitatively intensified and expanded its armed interferences and aggressions," he said.

Najib's assurances about the ability of his conscript army, estimated to number about 140,000, contrasted with uncertainty on the part of others.

Afghan refugees in Peshawar, Pakistan, await Soviet withdrawal from their homeland.

Several governments, including the United States, are closing their embassies and evacuating the staffs because of concern about what will happen when the Soviets are gone.

Shuttle Discovery rolls out of assembly building early this morning en route to Pad 39-B.

Discovery being readied for launching in March

HOUSTON (AP) — NASA should be able to go ahead with two upcoming shuttle launches despite a decision to delay one of them so workers can replace suspect turbopumps, a top space agency official says.

"I think we're in good shape," Rear Adm. Richard Truly, NASA's associate administrator for space flight, said Thursday. "We'll (the Discovery mission) fly sometime in the middle of March."

Truly was in Houston to accept the annual Rotary National Award for Space Achievement. Four others also were honored Thursday night with related awards.

On Wednesday, NASA said it was delaying the February launch of Discovery so workers can replace the turbopumps whose failure could be fatal to a shuttle and its crew.

The earliest Discovery could launch would be mid-March, but NASA said it will not set a firm date until late February. If the date slips past mid-March, the planned April 28 launch of Atlantis with the Magellan-Venus probe would also have to be delayed, officials said.

NASA has said the April Atlantis mission has priority over Discovery's launch and that it would scrub the Discovery flight until later in the year if it can't get off the pad by about March 15.

The Atlantis astronauts have only a 25-day launch window that is favorable for dispatching Magellan to Venus, and Earth and Venus will not be in the proper alignment again until 1991.

Truly said Thursday he believed that if Discovery didn't launch until March 18, or perhaps even the next day, Atlantis could still meet its launch window.

"I don't feel schedule pressure as much as I did on the last mission (in December)," Truly said.

The three turbopumps became questionable when engineers discovered two tiny cracks in a bearing unit in one of Atlantis' pumps after it completed the second post-Challenger mission in December. Officials became concerned after learning that two of Discovery's pump bearings had gone through the same manufacturing process as the cracked one.

Stroessner surrenders rule in Paraguay coup

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — President Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, the longest ruling leader in the Western Hemisphere, surrendered power today after a coup by the No. 2 army commander, official radio said today.

Gen. Andres Rodriguez told the radio early today that he was "taking command of the country from this moment."

In a three-minute address, Rodriguez said Stroessner "has surrendered, is enjoying good health" and was being held by the First Army Corps that Rodriguez commands.

Earlier today, Rodriguez said in a broadcast that he had launched the revolt late Thursday to restore democracy and human rights.

There was no immediate word on casualties following six hours of shelling by mortars and Sherman tanks, as well as gunfire between the rebels and troops loyal to Stroessner.

Streets in the semitropical capital of 900,000 were deserted this morning.

Stroessner, 76, has been in absolute power in this landlocked South American country since 1954. He has, however, been in poor health following prostate surgery five months ago.

In the earlier radio communication, Rodriguez said he and his men "left our barracks in defense of the dignity and the honor of the armed forces, for the full and total unification of the ruling Colorado Party, for the initiation of democratization in Paraguay (and) for the respect of human rights."

Chinese, Soviets focus on summit meeting

BEIJING (AP) — The foreign ministers of China and the Soviet Union hold a second day of talks today aimed at setting a date for the first Sino-Soviet summit in 30 years.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and his Chinese counterpart Qian Qichen are to meet at the Great Hall of the People for talks expected to focus on the summit issue.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is likely to visit China this spring for a meeting with Chinese senior leader Deng Xiaoping that will climax a year of rapidly warming relations and effectively end three decades of strained ties.

Qian, who spoke with reporters before beginning his second round of talks Shevardnadze, said he expected a date for a summit to be set before the Soviet envoy leaves Saturday.

Shevardnadze arrived Wednesday in Beijing for a three-day visit and planned to meet Premier Li Peng today before flying to Shanghai for a Saturday meeting with Chinese senior leader Deng Xiaoping. He leaves for Pakistan later Saturday.

In almost three hours of talks Thursday, the two foreign ministers reached broad agreement on the need to end the 10-year conflict in Cambodia.

China long has insisted that Soviet financial backing for Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia is the major obstacle to normalizing Sino-Soviet relations.

Qian, in a banquet speech Thursday night, said the two sides had reached general consensus "on many aspects of the problem," including the need for Vietnam to pull out its troops and for some kind of international supervision after Vietnamese troops leave.

China is the main backer for the three-party resistance coalition battling the Vietnamese in Cambodia. It supports the introduction of an international peacekeeping force after Vietnam's departure, an idea Vietnam has rejected.

Foreign Ministry officials said Shevardnadze had canceled a tour of the Forbidden City scheduled for today. While no reason was given, there was speculation Shevardnadze might use the time to meet Cambodian resistance leader Norodom Sihanouk, who is now residing in the Chinese capital.

Soviet Embassy Counsellor V.V. Duhin, asked Thursday night whether Shevardnadze might meet Sihanouk, said the possibility "can't be ruled out."

In his banquet speech Thursday, Shevardnadze called for joint ventures, cooperation in science and technology and the transformation of the Sino-Soviet border into a region of "peace, friendship and good-neighborly cooperation."

The Soviet Union was China's political mentor and main economic benefactor during the 1950s, but relations deteriorated over ideological and strategic differences and the two countries fought a short border war in 1969.

January unemployment rate climbs to 5.4%

By JOHN KING
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment rose slightly in January to 5.4 percent, but the number of new jobs created last month rose by 408,000, much higher than expected, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the civilian unemployment rate rose by 0.1 percentage point from the December rate of 5.3 percent.

But the first major report of the economy's 1989 performance showed continued strong growth, something analysts have predicted would feed inflationary fears and perhaps convince the Federal Reserve Board to tighten its reins on credit.

The 408,000 new nonfarm jobs created last month followed a gain of 279,000 in December and nearly matched November's robust gain of 440,000 new jobs.

Analysts had predicted that January job growth would be in the 250,000 range and that any growth of more than 300,000 could trouble the markets.

The Labor Department said the labor force expanded by nearly 900,000 people, with about 700,000 of them finding jobs, and that a record 62.9 percent of the working-age population had jobs.

The unseasonably warm weather in much of the country helped construction employment rise by 102,000 jobs last month, the department said. Manufacturing employment also was up for the fourth month in a row, with 45,000 new January jobs split virtually evenly between the durable and non-durable goods industries.

There were 260,000 new jobs in the service-producing sector of the economy, with the 135,000 in retail trades accounting for more than half of that figure. Service industries reported adding 75,000 new jobs last month, down from an average monthly gain of 110,000 in that sector throughout 1988.

The unseasonably warm weather in much of the country helped construction employment rise by 102,000 jobs last month.

In data closely watched for signs of inflation, the Labor Department reported that average hourly earnings of nonsupervisory employees climbed by 0.6 percent, or 9 cents, while average weekly earnings rose 1.2 percent in January.

Those figures are adjusted to reflect traditional seasonal changes in the employment picture.

In another sign of continued economic strength, the manufacturing work week rose by 0.1 hour to 41.0 hours and average factory overtime held steady at 3.9 hours.

Janet Norwood, commissioner of the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, said it was difficult to interpret the January data because of the seasonal pressures on the economy usually triggered by colder weather and the passing of the Christmas season.

"Supported by January's mild weather and an economy that continues to grow, many of the usual seasonal job reductions did not take place this year," Norwood said in testimony prepared for the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

Because of the 865,000 gain in the number of Americans seeking jobs last month, the unemployment rate edged up slightly despite the job growth.

Of the 123.4 million people in the labor force last month, 116.7 million had jobs and 6.7 million were seeking employment, the government said. A separate government unemployment rate that includes the nearly 1.7 million members of the armed services stationed in the United States also was 5.4 percent in January, like the civilian rate up 0.1 percentage point from December.

In the civilian economy, the jobless rate among whites remained unchanged in January at 4.6 percent; the rate was 4 percent for white men and 3.9 percent for white women.

The civilian unemployment rate among blacks climbed to 12 percent in January from 11.6 percent in December, while the jobless rate among black teenagers jumped to 34.5 percent from 29.6 percent.

There also was an increase in unemployment among Hispanics, from 7.6 percent in December to 8.4 percent last month.

the books on order," the woman said.

She claims that teen-agers who are "dabbling" in the occult are her best customers for such books.

They may also be the ones who are stealing books on the occult from Lovett Memorial Library.

"We can't keep books on this stuff," said Ellen Malone, a librarian. "The occult books on tarot cards, astrology and the devil keep disappearing. We are getting afraid to replace the books because the kids are getting into this stuff and can't get out. All of them are interested. But a few get in so deep they don't know how to get out."

She said the library is concerned about ordering books to replace the ones that were stolen because many of the new books on the occult are "how-to books that are very specific in what they say."

Among the titles that have been stolen recently are Witchcraft and Magic, Soothsayers Handbook and Servants of the Devil.

And while advocates of witchcraft and other occult practices continue to deny any link with satanism, every person interviewed by The Pampa News who claimed to be a former or current satanist mentioned witchcraft, D&D, astrology and other "harmless" forms of the occult as being what got them interested in pursuing the "powers of darkness" further.

Ann Tuttle, a member of the Cult Awareness Council in Dallas, said that parents should not confront their children if they believe they are dabbling in the occult. But they should monitor the situation.

"If they spend hours with heavy metal music or Dungeons and Dragons, you should be concerned. Find out what's going on. Just because they write '666' on a notebook, don't panic. Try to find out what the child is thinking," Tuttle said.

She said a number of signs of occult involvement taken together may be an indicator that parents need to seek the advice of clergy or counselors to deal with the problem.

"Girls will start to wear black clothes or makeup. That sort of thing. The point parents need to be concerned is when behavioral changes start," she said.

Another nationally known figure dealing with satanic cults is Lou Sloat, director of the Texas Ritualistic Crimes Information Network. Based in Athens, Texas, Sloat has seen a number of hardcore satanists get involved through dabbling.

"Watch for a change in friends, a drop in grades, that kind of thing," he warned.

However, a local counselor agreed that many young people already lead a life so close to that identified with satanism, it is a small step to cross the line into overt devil worship.

He said that youths already involved with heavy metal music, drugs and a disregard for society's rules are in especially dangerous positions.

"There is a lot of dabbling," a local policeman noted, "but that curiosity snowballs. It can get very dangerous. There is a lot of drug involvement and cruelty to animals. It could even grow to human sacrifices."

While rock music has been identified with rebellious behavior since the days of "Elvis the pelvis," certain heavy metal rock groups may have become a sort of satanic missionaries with their "head banger" music.

However, even such a statement can be the subject of disagreement for those who defend heavy metal as "their music."

For years artists like Iron Maiden, Ozzy Osborne, AC/DC, Slayer, Overkill, Black Sabbath, Metallica, Megadeth, Helloween and Anthrax have offered lyrics with titles such as "Suicide Solution," "Hello From the Gutter" and "Am I Evil."

The album covers often have images of implied violence and demons mixed with pictures of scantily clad, buxom women.

Whether or not one accepts the premise that the groups are attempting to promote satanism or the occult, two facts are often noted: (1) young people around the nation, as well as in Pampa, who have been involved in devil worship list heavy metal as their music of choice, and (2) many of the lyrics are oriented toward demonic symbols and ideas.

For example, the song "Overkill III" by Overkill says, "Take from me what you need/take my heart, my soul, my seed/a lasting presence/inside my mind/at last a presence/a contract signed/from the shadows/called my name/from the cold/into the flame/the wings around me/kept me warm/through hollow eyes/I was reborn."

The song concludes: "See the bat/eat the dove/another stage/completed mission/signed on for life/complete submission."

Keith French, owner of the Music Shoppe, said he is uncertain when to make a conscious decision not to carry a product because it may be satanic.

"When the Geraldo Rivera special talked about King Diamond being a satanist, I sent all of his stuff back," French said.

However, many groups insist their music is only symbolic of a state of mind, not indicative of a how they believe people should perceive life.

They also argue that varying interpretations of their music will lead different individuals to draw different conclusions about what a song really means.

Many Christian ministers are even slow to criticize music simply because it falls into a particular category.

"There is not any modum of music that can't be used to proclaim Jesus. Lucifer was the praise and worship leader in heaven before his fall. He can pervert anything for his purpose," said Mark Zedlitz, pastor of Spirit of Truth Church.

However, he is certain that people should avoid such items as horoscopes and Ouija boards at all costs.

"They are a form of divination, which the Bible strictly prohibits. If you want to know what the future holds, ask Jesus," he suggests.

Tuttle, in her advice to parents, does not try to establish what things might be satanic and what might not.

"But if you spend hours with some of this stuff, it is bound to affect you in a way that isn't healthy," she said. "The messages are not the kind you'd want to hear over and over from any of these things."

Report: Jet bomb in CIA suitcase

LONDON (AP) — The bomb that blew up Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland was planted by Palestinian terrorists in the luggage of a CIA agent, a radio station said Thursday.

David Johnson, head of the news department at Radio Forth in Edinburgh, reported the CIA officer was returning from Beirut with five colleagues after a mission to negotiate release of the nine American hostages in Lebanon.

Investigators in Lockerbie, Scotland, where the investigation into the Dec. 21 disaster is headquartered, refused comment on the report, which cited information from unidentified Scottish police sources.

In December, U.S. officials in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press the CIA's chief in Beirut was among the jet's passengers. They did not give the agent's name.

At that time, the FBI's executive assistant director, Oliver Revell, denied the agent was on the jet.

Radio Forth did not name the agent it said was on the jet. It said investigators believe a three-pound charge of Semtex explosive and a timing device were slipped into the agent's luggage by Palestinian terrorists who infiltrated the secret Beirut mission.

It speculated the perpetrators belonged to Ahmed Jibril's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command. Jibril has been accused in the past of involvement in the bombing and has denied it.

On Wednesday night, CBS News said Jibril was the principal architect of the bombing. It said Jibril, based in Syria, was working for Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi but was required to clear the operation with Syrian intelligence officials.

Last month, the Hamburg newspaper Bild reported Jibril's organization was involved in the bombing.

CBS quoted Jibril spokesman Omar Shehawi as saying, "I tell you that we didn't do it and we are not involved. We don't practice terrorism and we condemn such actions."

In Frankfurt, West Germany, one of the stops on the flight, prosecutor's spokesman Jochen Schroers said the report of Syrian and Libyan involvement was "just speculation."

The Radio Forth report quoted sources as saying the bomb was placed in luggage that also carried "quite sensitive documents."

It said the baggage was shipped from Beirut via Helsinki to Frankfurt, where the agents caught the flight for New York. The timer was believed to have been activated during the stop in Helsinki, the report said.

All 259 people on board the jet were killed when it exploded in the sky over Scotland.

Personal observations on series

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

In preparing this series on satanism, I talked to dozens of people with experience regarding the occult.

The opinions they expressed ranged from a suggestion that anyone who believes in organized satanism is a fool to claims of incredible demonic occurrences by those supposedly involved.

Perhaps the hardest thing to come to grips with, as a reporter, was precisely what kind of story I was dealing with. Were the half dozen young satanists I had interviewed merely suffering from psychosis, as was suggested by a mental health professional?

Or were they pawns in some sort of spiritual battle that rages everyday all around us, as was suggested by several ministers?

As a reporter I had to maintain objectivity. I was constantly drawing conclusions and then asking questions based on those conclusions. The answers I get often caused me to adjust my conclusion and the process would start all over again.

With the subject of satanism, this can be a maddening process. You spend weeks interviewing people from around the nation who tell similar stories about their experiences. A peace officer describes demonic activity near Pampa that matches a narrative provided by a woman on the East Coast regarding black masses.

This would go on for days and I would begin to gain a sense of confidence that I was finally understanding the inner workings of covens.

Then a mental health worker or policeman would say something like, "You don't really believe this crap do you? There is no satanic network. There are just a bunch of screwed up kids suffering mental problems."

I would have to start all over again, wondering if there was any case for organized satanism at all, or if this was just some sort of mass hysteria that is sweeping the nation.

Like anthropologist Margaret Mead, I finally decided it didn't matter if I believed a certain young person had really conjured up a demon in his bedroom. It only mattered that he believed it.

Warning signs of occult dabblers

The Texas Ritualistic Crime Information Network offers the following "warning signs" to parents that their children may be dabbling in the occult: Obsession with role-playing games like Dungeons and Dragons, Lone Wolf and It's A Crime.

2. Obsession with heavy metal music ... some groups advocate involvement in the occult, crime, death, suicide, explicit sex and violence.

3. Books on satanism, witchcraft, paganism, magic or the keeping of a "Book of Shadows," a diary of satanic involvement. Many "Book of Shadows" have been found following teen-age suicides.

4. Satanic graffiti such as pentagrams, inverted crosses or the numbers "666," the Mark of the Beast, indicate the youth may be infatuated with the occult or admires people (possibly rock stars) who are.

5. Satanic paraphernalia such as candles, daggers, bells or occult-type jewelry such as pentagrams, inverted crosses or the Star of Solomon.

6. Drug use, especially such mind altering drugs as LSD, PCP and peyote cactus.

7. The child becomes secretive, refuses to talk, hides things from parents or is unresponsive.

8. The child becomes defensive, agitated or violent if the subject of satanic or occult involvement is brought up. The child may fear for his or her life or believe that the satanic group ALWAYS KNOWS what is being said or done.

Note to Parents

The Texas Ritualistic Crime Information Network recommends you DO NOT burn occult records, tapes, books, etc., that you may find in your child's possession. This will only sever the lines of communication.

Instead, they recommend that if you suspect occult involvement you:

1. Become familiar with which cults may be operating in your area.
2. Discuss these cults with your children.

3. Keep all lines of communication open. Point out the psychological techniques used in the name of religion by people like Jim Jones, Charles Manson, etc.

4. Constantly remind your children that you love them. Allow them to participate in family decision making.

5. Watch for abrupt emotional changes, rejection of parental values such as marriage, college, etc.

6. Monitor child's behavior for preference to be alone, chanting, meditation, use of new vocabulary, obsession with music groups that use satanic masses or symbols in their recordings (example: King Diamond, Slayer, Overkill, etc.).

If you believe your child is dabbling in the occult or satanism, contact a family counselor or minister you trust to seek further advice. Do not panic, though. An overreaction on the part of parents may tend to drive the child further away from traditional values and toward the occult.

Panel postpones vote on nominee Tower

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee said Thursday the panel has postponed an expected vote on the nomination of Defense Secretary-designate John Tower, and another senator said additional meetings with the FBI were planned.

Tower, a onetime chairman of the committee, had appeared headed for confirmation after telling his former colleagues on Wednesday that he had no alcohol problem and would not be swayed by past business ties with defense contractors.

But Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., while chairing a hearing on the Savannah River nuclear reactor, announced that the committee would not vote Thursday on Tower's nomination.

"The file is still not complete and there are members now who have made a request to review certain items in the files, so we will not be voting today," Nunn said Thursday. "This is a joint decision between Senator Warner and myself. ... We will announce as soon as we are able to as to the definite date of the vote."

The committee's ranking Republican, Sen. John Warner of Virginia, said he and Nunn would be meeting with the FBI on additional information.

Warner, asked by reporters later if there were new facts, said, "Just information that I would not attach any measure of credibility or non-credibility" to.

Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., a member of the committee, was asked if the information dealt with Tower's personal or professional life. "Possibilities in both areas," he said.

Nunn had said Wednesday he expected the panel to vote Thursday to recommend that the Senate confirm Tower's nomination. Although the hearings for Tower have lasted longer than those of other nominees to President Bush's Cabinet, the senators have treated him politely.

In his testimony on the fourth and final day of hearings, Tower rebutted allegations made Tuesday by conservative activist Paul Weyrich that he had "on a number of occasions" seen Tower publicly inebriated and in the company of women other than his wife.

Asked by Nunn if he had a drinking problem, Tower replied: "I have none. I am a man of some discipline."

The 63-year-old former senator told the committee: "It is essential that the secretary of defense be at all times capable of exercising the duties and responsibilities of his office, some of which are even more sensitive and more critical than the general public realizes.

"Therefore I think there should be zero tolerance of anyone as secretary of defense or any other sensitive job in the Defense Department who has an alcohol problem."

Weyrich, who will be out of town until Tuesday, was unavailable for comment on Tower's remarks, said a spokesman at the conservative's Coalitions for America office.

After the hearings, Tower said little to reporters, describing himself as "embargoed" until after confirmation.

"I feel like I am glad it is the end of the hearings," he said as he left the hall.

On the subject of women, Nunn asked Tower whether he would tolerate any sexual harassment in the Defense Department.

"I will answer again with the term 'zero tolerance' for discrimination against women, the sexual harassment of women," Tower responded.

"I believe that professional women should be afforded the respect and the deference that they deserve," he said. "I will say that I do not believe women should serve in combat slots."

Tower, who has been divorced twice, is now single.

Tower testifies at hearings.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

On Top

The Bible, "God's holy word," is still the best seller, and most quoted book. From the original Greek and Hebrew this book has been translated into many languages.

Through the centuries men have devotedly studied and sought out the truth in the Bible. When one reads the Bible with an open mind, God's word is "as sharp as a two edged sword."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Branscum

Church to have singing service

Rev. Richard Burress of Community Christian Center Church, 801 E. Campbell, extends an open invitation to the public to attend special singing services at 7 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 5, with guest singer Ronnie Branscum.

"Ronnie has been anointed with a special gift of singing from the Lord and I know he will be a blessing to everyone who hears him," Burress said.

Community Christian Center has been in Pampa for 32 years and is a full gospel church.

Rev. Burress says, "Come worship with us, and if you need a ride or more information, contact our church office at 669-2747 or 665-3468."

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: "Bring the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house. Test me in this," says the Lord Almighty, "and see if I will not throw open the floodgates of heaven and pour out so much blessing that you will not have room enough for it." (Malachi 3:10 NIV)

My uncle owns a successful business in Oklahoma City. During a recent visit in his home, I took the opportunity to ask him for his Christian testimony concerning his business. In quiet and sincere humility he shared with me:

"We (he and his wife) were struggling to get our business to go — really struggling. We were preparing to make a selling trip to Chicago. Chicago's a long way from home, and we knew anything could happen; together, we decided to use our meager savings to catch up our tithe before we left on the trip.

"When we arrived in Chicago and met the people with whom we were to do business, we realized God had been ahead making preparations. We found the people to be warm and honest. They placed a $28,000 order; we didn't know there were orders that big!

"To make a long story short, our business quickly went from a few thousand dollar business to a multi-million dollar business. We've never had any doubt that our success can be traced directly back to that one simple act of obedience when, without any ulterior motives, we used the little we had to catch up our tithe.

"Not only have we been blessed financially, but in our travels, we have had opportunities to worship in churches of various sizes in widely differing locales. We've had the privilege of helping to support the very difficult and unique ministry being carried on by a small church in Hawaii. It's amazing how God works!"
Amen, Uncle, amen!

New Hope Baptist Church members dedicate new building

Members, ministers of visiting churches and guests congregated Sunday afternoon for dedication services for the newly constructed New Hope Baptist Church at 912 S. Gray.

Events got under way shortly before 3 p.m. with a procession from the South Side Citizens Center to the new building. The new structure is located at the site of the former building, with the previous address of 404 Harlem. The doors now face east, opening on Gray Street.

Presiding minister for the occasion was Rev. J.H. Blakemore, president of the Original West Texas Baptist District Congress and pastor of Bethel Baptist Church in Borger, who led the call to worship when the capacity crowd had filled the sanctuary.

Rev. V.C. Martin, New Hope

pastor, delivered the prayer of thanksgiving for the new facilities, followed by the reading of the Church Covenant by the congregation.

In his remarks, Rev. Blakemore said, "We came to praise the Lord. We came to have a good time" in celebrating the dedication of the new brick building.

Blakemore noted that the meeting offered an opportunity for "giving to the Lord and thanking him, because you didn't do it," adding that the Lord had helped the church to grow and to provide for the new building.

A sign on the pulpit signified the occasion: "God Building Through Us," with a scriptural verse from Nehemiah 1:18 — "Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the King's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said; Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work."

"This is just a starting point," Blakemore said, adding that the members can now look forward to greater things ahead.

Delivering the dedicatory sermon was Rev. David P. Williams, moderator of the Original West Texas Baptist District Association and pastor of the Eastside Baptist Church in Wichita Falls.

Rev. Williams said he was "humbly grateful to be here with you" for the occasion of dedicating the new church building and commended the pastor and congregation "for a job well done ... You are worthy of the Lord's blessings."

Though praising the new facility, Williams noted that it was

First Assembly to hear missionaries

Robert E. and Alma Jo Ferguson, who have served as missionaries in the Far East, will be speaking at the 6:30 p.m. service Sunday at First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler.

The Fergusons will share their missionary experiences in the Far East.

The couple arrived home in July 1988 from Davao City, Philippines to begin their "Deputational Cycle" in preparation for their sixth missions assignment.

The Fergusons have served as missionaries since 1966. From 1966 to 1973 they ministered in the Bahama Islands. Mr. Ferguson pastored the Evangelistic Temple in Nassau and later directed the pilot program of the Mobilization and Placement Service (MAPS) in constructing a church on the Grand Bahama Island.

Fergusons

served as the missionary in residence for the Missions Department at Southwestern Assemblies of God College in Waxahachie, Texas.

The Fergusons have spent their last two terms in the Philippines as resident faculty of the Immanuel Bible College at Cebu City, planting an evangelistic center at Davao City.

During their next term of missionary service, the Fergusons will return to the Far East to continue planting additional churches and training ministers to meet the challenge of the unprecedented growth the church is experiencing.

Rev. Peak invited the public to come and hear the Fergusons talk of their missionary experiences in the special Sunday evening service.

FGBMFI to have monthly banquet

Paul Yarbrough, humorist, business man and investor from Fort Worth, will be the guest speaker at the February banquet meeting of the Top O' Texas Chapter of Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International.

Yarbrough will be speaking at the banquet to be held at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Starlight Room at Coronado Inn.

Presently an international director for FGBMFI, Yarbrough has spoken throughout the United States and Canada to various organizations at their conventions and charter meetings.

He has spoken at the last five World Conventions for FGBMFI.

Yarbrough

He has also been featured on the Good News television special.

Injuries while serving in the U.S. Marines during World War II led to Yarbrough's becoming an alcoholic. Discovery of an "unusual cure" has resulted in his present success as person and business man.

Dinner cost is $6 a person. Upcoming events include a men's Prayer and Praise Breakfast on Feb. 18. The Deaf Choir of Amarillo will be featured at the March 4 banquet meeting.

Members of the local FGBMFI chapter also are in the planning stages for a FGBMFI rally to be held in June.

God expressed in 'pop' entertainment

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It may seem odd to say that God speaks through the work of such entertainers as rock musician Bruce Springsteen, filmmaker Woody Allen and the singer-actress Madonna.

But that it happens is the studied conclusion of an exploratory and versatile Roman Catholic priest, the Rev. Andrew Greeley of Chicago.

He maintains that they and a procession of other purveyors of "pop" art, including romance novels, westerns, mysteries and comic strips, are frequent channels of divine grace.

"God may indeed be encountered in works of the lively arts which ordinary people enjoy," Greeley says, but "high-culture" critics and church officials generally look down on such output. Just because it's enjoyable, he says, doesn't mean it's not good, and it also needn't be overtly religious to convey notes of the sacred.

After all, he adds, many of the parables of Jesus were utterly secular, yet were loaded with sanctifying import and meaning: "Grace is everywhere," Greeley says, and "is especially to be sought in popular culture" because of its demonstrated appeal and influence.

Greeley, scholarly sociologist and also best-selling novelist with 110 books to his credit in both fields, advances his thesis in a new book, God in Popular Culture, published by Thomas Moore Press of Chicago.

"I suppose the elitists will ridicule the idea of finding God in science fiction, mystery stories, pop singers and comic strips," he said in a telephone interview from his spring semester teaching post at the University of Arizona. "That's their problem, not mine. But God lurks everywhere.

"What I'm doing is nothing more than the song in the book of Job. God speaks through the stars in the sky and also through the storytellers and singers today. He reveals himself through them."

Greeley, 60, details a case for this in a variety of "pop" output and performers.

Describing domestic-life comic Bill Cosby as "an evangelist," Greeley says he is "the most influential religion teacher in America" through the "paradigms of love" on his TV series.

"A modern version of the medieval morality play has slipped into prime-time television almost without anyone noticing," Greeley writes.

He calls actor-filmmaker Allen a "God-haunted person," his work always preoccupied with the "God question," even if dubious about his existence.

"It is humor that has provided the opening for him to become the most explicitly theological filmmaker in America today."

Of the singer-actress Madonna with her flamboyant attire and streetwise candor, Greeley says "she demands for young women the right to be what their bodies demand of them — simultaneously virgin and siren."

Central Baptist Church to hold evangelism rally next Thursday

Dr. John Bisagno, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Houston, will be preaching at an evangelism rally at the Central Baptist Church at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 9.

Purpose of the rally is to encourage the city's participation in the upcoming Jay Strack Crusade to be held at the M.K. Brown Auditorium April 16-21.

Dr. Bisagno is the author of 17 books and is in constant demand as a speaker throughout the nation. He has spoken at many state conventions and conferences, as well as on many seminary campuses.

He does all of this in addition to preaching twice on Sunday morning and once on Sunday evening in an auditorium that seats more than 4,000.

"Dr. Bisagno is truly a man of God and will challenge and inspire each of us in preparation for the crusade," said Rev. Norman Rushing, Central Baptist pastor.

Bisagno is pastor of the 20,000-member First Baptist Church of Houston. He has served as president of the Southern Baptist Pastors Conference and has gained national attention as a dynamic and effective crusade evangelist and Bible teacher.

Dr. Bisagno

In 1965, he was called to the pastorate at First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, Okla. He pastored there until 1970, when he began his pastorate at First Baptist in Houston.

His ministry extends beyond the church through a weekly television program broadcast on several television stations throughout Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma and on National Christian Network satellite broadcasts.

He has lectured at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, as well as New Orleans Theological Seminary; Midwestern Theological Seminary in Kansas City, Mo.; Golden Gate Theological Seminary in Mill Valley, Calif., and Southern Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

Bisagno has conducted major overseas crusades in Brazil, Taiwan, Nigeria, the Philippines, Hong Kong, Guayana, Zimbabwe and South Africa.

Rev. Rushing said, "Everyone from every church in our city and the surrounding area is invited to be a part of this rally. Child care for children from kindergarten age and below will be provided at Central Baptist Church."

Religion Roundup

HONG KONG (AP)—Bishop K. H. Ting, president of the China Christian Council, says there now are about 5 million Protestants in China, six times the number there in 1949 when communists took over the government.

Ting, a senior leader of the church in China, gave the figure in an interview in Bridge, a Christian bimonthly here.

He says new churches are opening at the rate of about three every two days, and there now are about 5,000 of them.

Estimates have put the number of Catholics at about 3 million.

Don't take 'Murder Room' seriously

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

An evening in the Murder Room means an evening of trap doors and secret chambers, rapid-fire dialogue and twisting plots... an evening of old-fashioned entertainment from beginning to end.

Murder Room, a spoof of all crime thrillers, is currently showing at the Country Squire Dinner, 135 Sunset Center in Amarillo.

For the first time since the dinner theatre moved to its Sunset Center location three years ago, the play will be presented before a specially-built set rather than in the "in-the-round" format of previous performances.

This set was built to accommodate the trap doors and special chambers that are to pop up—or down—throughout the play.

Three of the play's main characters, Joe deMorrue, John Brook and Marcie Morgan, came to Pampa recently to promote the production.

Morgan plays Mavis Hollister, "the brains of the whole thing," she says. Often typecast as an ingenue, Morgan says she enjoys her character, a woman who is both glamorous and power-hungry with a touch of mischievousness.

John Brook plays a dual role as Edgar Hollister, Mavis' "short-lived" husband, and as Abel Howard, the police constable.

Brook compares Howard to the constable in Mary Poppins. "All the characters have their moments of stupidity. None of them are great intellects," he says.

Joe deMorrue appears as Detective James Crandall. He warns that this comedy by Jack Sharkey should not be taken seriously, describing the dialogue as a sometimes "surrealistic play on words."

Often three totally unrelated conversations will be going on at the same time and then all come together with the same punch line, deMorrue explains. "You really have to listen carefully to catch it all," he says.

"It's not slapstick humor," he adds, although he says there are some elements of slapstick incorporated in the play such as the "thump, thump thump" of a dead cat being dragged along.

"You can tell the audience is thinking, 'Are these people being serious,'" he adds with a laugh.

All cast members are making their first appearances in the Country Squire. In addition to Morgan, deMorrue and Brook, playgoers will see Caroline Mickelsen, Kim Wieck and Bruce Ballard.

Wieck and Ballard are local talent. Wieck is a music major at West Texas State University, where she is active in the theatre department. She has performed in TEXAS for two years and was among a small group from the play performing in London's World Travel Market.

Ballard is a lifelong Amarillo resident and an instructor of dance at Amarillo College. He plays the part of Barry Draper in Murder Room.

Morgan holds a bachelor's degree in theatre from the University of Houston. She is a VJ/studio manager with Dallas Music Videos-Heritage Cable Vision. Her state credits include Hayfever, Toys in the Attic, A Midsummer Night's Dream, Madwoman of Chollot and The Odd Couple.

deMorrue of Dallas has performed in numerous television commercials in Louisiana and the Dallas area. He is a graduate of the University of Southwestern Louisiana. His most recent stage appearances include Social Security and The Importance of Being Ernest.

Mickelsen's career has taken her from New York City to Dallas. She has performed in Harvey, Hayfever, Arsenic and Old Lace and Social Security. She can also be seen in the soon-to-be-released Tom Cruise film Born on the 4th of July.

Murder Room can be seen each Thursday, Friday and Saturday through Feb. 25. Dinner is served at 6:15 p.m. with the curtain rising at 8 p.m. Show-only tickets are also available. A special Valentine showing is set for Tuesday, Feb. 14.

For more information, call the Country Squire at (806) 358-7486.

Eagle Scout turns clothing into cash for needy families

Eagle Scout Stephen Radcliff, 13, an eighth-grader at Pampa Middle School, devised a plan to sort and bale unwearable clothing for sale to a paper mill as his Eagle Scout project.

His plan, formulated in September 1988, was to use the unwearable clothing and a baler owned by the Salvation Army and stored in a warehouse. Money earned from the sales would go to benefit needy families in the Pampa area.

Radcliff began recruiting Scouts and others to aid him in the plan, and the project was carried out on Jan. 14 with 12 volunteers working a total of 78 hours.

The group bagged 425 giant-size trash bags of clothing which weighed an average of 25 pounds each for a total of 10,625 pounds. The clothing sold for 8 cents per pound, earning approximately $850 for needy families.

In addition, Radcliff and his helpers sorted out hundreds of pairs of shoes and non-clothing items such as sewing machines and hot rollers, and disposed of "untold amounts of trash, carrying off old mattresses and other garbage," he said.

Radcliff is the son of Jim and Linda Radcliff of Pampa and the grandson of Elmer and Lois Radcliff of Pampa and Edd and Bette Fitzgerald of Borger. He is a member of Troop 413, sponsored by St. Matthew's Episcopal Church.

I have nothing against plastic, but as a furniture covering it just makes the wrong decorator statement—something like "Yuck."

We all know and love some devotees of plastic protection for furnishings. My own mother ranks up there with the best of 'em.

Fanatics drape every surface with sheets of clear, high-fashion acrylic in hopes it will make their couch or table last a lifetime. The only problem is, while the furniture may last, the house looks like a bargain basement covered in food wrap.

One way to preserve a good wood table in a more tasteful fashion is to add a glass top. With that idea as a starting point, I created a useful little end table with a glass-covered tray that fits on top. The glass protects the table, and the tray lifts off for separate use as well.

The tray features a needlework inset done in counted cross-stitch that says "Welcome" and includes a family name. It is displayed beneath an oval frame.

You can make this handsome little end table in just a few afternoons in the shop. Our detailed plans include a complete materials list, step-by-step cutting and assembly instructions, detailed diagrams, full-size patterns, plus instructions and patterns for the needlework.

Another terrific furnishing is our drop-leaf, trestle-style dining table, which is easy and inexpensive to make from white pine.

To order plans for the tray table, specify Project No. 2952; or for the dining table, specify No. 539. Send $4.95 for either plan, or order both for only $8.90 and save a dollar.

Mail to: The Woodwright, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. If you'd like our catalog, which includes coupons worth $16, add $2.95.

To build the tray portion of the table, you'll need a 30-inch length of pine 1x8 or an equivalent amount of hardwood (I used white oak).

In addition, you'll need a 2 1/2 x 3 1/2-foot piece of 1/2-inch better-quality plywood, a 13x19-inch pane of 1/2-inch-thick glass, and wire brads. A 13x19-inch piece of needlework cloth and embroidery thread are needed for the inset.

Cut from 1x8 two 2x19-inch side pieces and two 2 1/2 x 13-inch end pieces. Rip and cut four support strips, each 1/4 x 1/4 inches: two 17 1/2 inches long and two 10 inches long.

Edge-miter the end and side pieces at 45 degrees to make the corner joints. Cut or rout a 1/4 x 1/4-inch rabbet along the inside surface of each piece to accommodate the inset, plywood supports and glass cover.

For handles, make a 1/4 x 4-inch oval cutout near the top of each end piece and shape the top edge so that it curves down to match the height of the side pieces.

From the plywood, cut two 13x19-inch pieces. One will fit under the needlework, and the other fits over it as a frame. In the top plywood piece, cut a 10 1/2 x 16 1/2-inch oval in the center.

Assemble the basic tray frame (the end and side pieces) using glue and screws. Countersink the screws and cover with plugs cut from matching stock.

Turn the frame upside down and lay the glass into the rabbets. Next, insert the top plywood frame, then the needlework, then the lower plywood piece.

To hold the insets in place, install the four 1/4-inch strips around the edges, using brads only so that you can remove them in case the glass breaks or you want to change the needlework.

Dog acts as ring bearer at wedding

DEAR ABBY: About the church organist who was upset because the guests talked before the wedding ceremony and applauded afterward: I wonder what she would have thought of our wedding?

David and I wanted a happy, joyful wedding, so we set a light-hearted tone to the ceremony by having Knicky, our female Labrador, serve as the ring bearer.

We had the rings in a beautifully decorated basket. Knicky was to hold the handle of the basket with her teeth and come down the aisle on cue. All went well at the rehearsal, but at the wedding, Knicky got excited when she saw us at the altar and she ran down the aisle, leaving the basket behind.

You can imagine the laughter! But this in no way detracted from the seriousness of our commitment. The guests were quiet and attentive when David and I exchanged our vows, and I have never felt more moved and reverent. It was very fitting when all the guests burst into laughter after the ceremony. JENNY KNICKERBOCKER, BOZEMAN, MONT.

DEAR JENNY (AND DAVID): Congratulations and all good wishes. May your life together be filled with love and laughter.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from the woman who, when asked, "How are you?" didn't want to lie about her physical condition, so she responded with a long-winded health report.

Her answer could have been: "I'm too young for Medicare and too old for men to care."

Chuckle for the day, right? JEANNE L., FORT MYERS, FLA.

DEAR JEANNE: Wrong. Many women would be offended by the inference that when women are no longer "young," men will cease caring about them.

And as if that weren't enough, the feminists would be offended by the implication that unless men care about them, they have little value.

DEAR ABBY: My common-law husband has a big problem with drugs, but he denies it. He says it isn't a problem because he doesn't do the heavy stuff—he only smokes pot. Abby, he smokes a lot of pot. He gets moody, slurs his words, has an "I don't care" attitude and his memory is poor. He keeps saying he can quit if he wants to—but I don't believe he can.

Abby, he is the father of my 2-year-old twin girls and a 10-month-old boy. I am getting so disgusted with him I want out of this relationship, but I really love the guy. What should I do?

CHUCK'S WOMAN
DEAR WOMAN: Your man has a chemical dependency—he's hooked on a drug and will need to go to a "de-tox" facility. If you really love the guy, try "tough love"—tell him he will have to make a decision: It's either you and the children or his pot.

As long as you stay with him while he continues to smoke pot, he won't quit. Trust me.

Unprotected Downs upset with Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys fans felt veterans Danny White and Randy White would be left unprotected, but it was a surprise that free safety Michael Downs was on the list.

Each NFL team had to release a list of 22 unprotected players and Downs was one of the big surprises for Dallas.

"I'm insulted," said Downs, a starter for the past eight seasons.

Downs and others on the unprotected list have until April 1 to sign with another NFL team. After then, if no team has taken advantage of their free agent status, the players' contracts will revert back to their original club.

Landry said he wasn't sure the Cowboys would invite Downs to training camp next summer even if no one else claimed him.

"Our feeling was we need to improve in the secondary, and for that reason we left him open," Landry said.

"We have to make some changes there. I've always respected Mike. He's been a fine player for us. But we gave up lots of yards and lots of touchdowns in the pass defense area, and we just need to be better. There comes a time when you have to make changes," Landry said.

Downs said being on the list was "a slap in the face."

"I'm extremely shocked," Downs said. "I tried to do everything they asked me to do. I played hurt for them last season. I've been faithful to the team, then they do something like this to me."

Downs signed a new 3-year contract last year.

"How can my morale be any good even if another team doesn't pick me up?" Downs said. "I've got to talk to coach (Tom) Landry about this. I guess they are getting ready to move Ron Francis to free safety. I'd like for them to tell me about it."

The Cowboys protected only one safety — Bill Bates — leaving Downs, Vince Albritton, Victor Scott and Billy Owens free to leave.

The Cowboys said they wouldn't attempt to resign Scott because of his refusal to take an NFL administered drug test.

"What if we're all picked up? Who's going to play safety? Where is the logic? You'd think someone went crazy up there," Downs said.

The Cowboys even protected 14-year veteran Ed "Too Tall" Jones.

With the Cowboys expected to take UCLA's Troy Aikman as their number one pick in the NFL draft, Danny White and young Kevin Sweeney were expendable.

Danny White, a 13-year veteran, has been hampered by injuries. Sweeney crashed and burned as a starter during two games after being a replacement hero in 1987.

Defensive tackle Randy White, a 14-year veteran, has been hampered by neck injuries.

Jones was protected because he played like a young colt last season.

The Cowboys also uncovered 10-year veteran tight end Doug Cosbie and 13-year veteran center Tom Rafferty.

However, club president Tex Schramm said putting veterans on the list was "just a numbers game."

"The 28 other teams are doing the same thing," he said. "The players shouldn't feel bad because the same thing is happening all over the league. Too much is being made of it."

Schramm said few veteran players would probably be signed because of high salaries and such fringing benefits as annuities which new clubs would have to put up.

"This mostly is a thing for young, untested players who or two or three deep on a club," Schramm said.

Oilers have 21 players on unprotected list

HOUSTON (AP) — Twenty-one Oilers now can sign with other teams in the league after being left unprotected by Houston under a new plan that made a total of 600 NFL players free agents until April 1.

Almost all of the 21 Oilers left unprotected Thursday are under contract, but they can now sign with any other team in the league. If they don't sign with a different team, the players return to the Oilers under terms of their old contracts.

Like other NFL teams, the Oilers were able to protect 37 players. Houston sent qualifying offers Wednesday to those protected players whose contracts have expired.

Such players as quarterback Warren Moon, Mike Munchak, Ray Childress, Mike Rozier, Allen Pinkett, Richard Johnson and Curtis Duncan can sign with another team, but the Oilers retain the right of first refusal. If the Oilers waive their right of first refusal, they must be compensated.

"We'd like to have all our players but we must realize we're going to lose some of them," Oilers owner Bud Adams said Thursday.

Mike Holovak, who was named the Oilers' general manager Thursday morning following the surprise resignation of Ladd Herzog the night before, said he believes the Oilers stand to lose several players under the new system.

"I honestly feel, maybe with the exception of one or two other ball clubs — I don't think any other club is going to lose more players (to free agency) than we are," Holovak said. "I just hope that some of those fellows who we were unable to freeze will like us so well that they will still favor us when the time comes."

Those unprotected include tight end Jamie Williams, who finished his sixth year in the NFL in 1988.

Homecourt advantage not always there

■The Harvesters attempt to stretch the home winning streak to three as they entertain Frenship tonight at McNeely Fieldhouse.

If successful, they will only need 40 more to surpass the record of 42 straight set from the time Borger downed the Pampanos 62-63 in the 1956-57 season and a loss to Denton, 63-78, Jan. 1, 1960. Borger has always been a problem in the Fieldhouse, the Dogs have administered four of the first nine defeats suffered there, including dedication night, 48-42, in the 1951-52 campaign.

Unfair loss was the 1955-56 home season opener, to Tulia. Yes, Tulia. Three decades ago, Pampa had its own chapter of the Southwest Officials Association, composed almost entirely of football coaches in the system. Noting the ever-present capacity crowds and recognizing the good paycheck the crowd size, sliding pay scale offered, the association constantly harped about not getting any PHS games to call. McNeely didn't want to offend visiting teams by using hometown officials, much less some employed by the school system. But finally, to appease the locals, he agreed to hire them for the Tulia game.

Attempting to assure everyone of unbiased fairness, the Pampa Chapter crew leaned the other way. Pampa spent the night in foul trouble, the Hornets at the foul line. Final score: Tulia 55, PHS 54. Tulia shot 35 free throws during the 32-minute contest, and three Pampa starters spent a major portion of the game on the bench in foul trouble. Needless to say, McNeely never made that Mr. McKinny mistake again when Speaking of home-court advantage, the Louisiana Tech Lady Bachelors hold the record of 62 in a row, and currently are over the 40 mark again at Thomas Assembly Center where they have won 100 of their first 102 games played since it opened in 1962. Monotonous, isn't it.

FREE THROWS: With 1,418 career points, senior Dustin Miller should pass Coyly Winborne, Jr. during tonight's game and move into third place on the alltime scoring list at PHS. Teamwork sparks Pampa Harvesters welcome Frenship tonight

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

That all for one and one for all motto made famous by The Three Musketeers is carried on by the Pampa Harvesters, who have banded together into the stretch run of the 1988-89 basketball season.

While the musketeers may have been a fictionalized adventure story of teamwork, the Harvesters are very much for real, and so are their chances for a playoff spot.

"We've had good team performances and that's something I've been pleased about all season long. There's a good team atmosphere and that has a lot to do with the success we've been having," said Pampa coach Robert Hale.

With Pampa's 60-59 thriller over Randall Tuesday night, the Harvesters keep pace with Borger and Lubbock Dunbar in the battle for first place in the District 1-4A standings. Both Pampa and Borger have 9-2 records while Dunbar is 10-2 in league play.

"With five games to go, it's pretty much of a three-team race now," added Hale.

Pampa hosts Frenship at 8 p.m. tonight while Borger takes on Levelland on the Bulldogs' court. Dunbar travels to Hereford.

Hale is glad to be through with Randall after two narrow wins over the Raiders. It took down-to-the-wire shots by Dustin Miller in both games to help the Harvesters escape with victories.

"We were pretty fortunate to beat Randall. You have to respect a team that has size and the ability to score like they do," Hale said.

Randall, 6-5, was all but eliminated from the district race after the loss to Pampa.

Now, Hale and the Harvesters will focus on visiting Frenship, who gave Pampa quite a tussle for three quarters before losing 70-58 in the initial meeting.

"Frenship has been playing much better," Hale pointed out. "In fact they started playing much better about the same time we played them." The Tigers are led by 6-4 senior Tim Cooper, who is averaging around 13.0 points per game.

"Cooper has been playing good for them," Hale said. "He likes to shoot the 3-point shot and so do a couple of other players."

Chris Boudy, a 6-5 sophomore, is a future star for the Tigers. He's averaging around eight points per outing.

"Boudy is young, but he's been a real good inside player for them," Hale said. "Frenship has the type of team you have to be careful with. They play very aggressive and they don't pay any attention to the record of the team they're going up against."

Miller, a 6-5 senior, is averaging 23.5 points per game to lead the Harvesters. He needs only 11 points to crack the 600-point mark for the season. Mark Wood (6-2 junior) and Ryan Teague (6-0 junior) are averaging 10.8 and 10.3 ppg respectively. Floor leader Chris Hoganson carries a 4.0

ppg average. These three, plus 6-6 junior Landon Thornton (2.9 ppg) or 6-0 senior Billy Wortham (4.7 ppg) are probable starters tonight.

Since a 73-70 loss to Borger on Jan. 13, the Harvesters have won three consecutive games and stand 18-7 for the season.

"Things are going pretty good for us right now and we can't afford to take anyone lightly. We're sure not going to overlook Frenship," Hale said.

The Pampa Lady Harvesters will try and get back on the winning road tonight against Frenship, starting at 6:30 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Lady Harvesters lost to Randall, 71-61, Tuesday to drop their district record to 6-7.

Frenship, 6-8, lost to Pampa, 59-51, in an earlier game.

A&I upsets Angelo State

KINGSVILLE (AP) — Al Taylor scored 28 as Texas A&I handed Angelo State its first Lone Star Conference loss with a 77-64 upset.

The win pulls Texas A&I into a tie with West Texas State for second in the conference.

The Rams fell to 6-1 and are now one game in front of Texas A&I and West Texas State, both with 5-2 LSC records.

Texas A&I moved to 15-5 for the year. Angelo State, the defending LSC champion, fell to 11-7.

The Javelinas led 62-60 at the 2:00 mark when Allen Gratts hit a bucket. After an ASU missed attempt, freshman Kyle Roher canned a 3-pointer at the 1:49 mark to increase the Javelina lead to seven.

Texas A&I increased its lead to 70-60 before the Rams scored again, and this was with 45 seconds remaining.

Gratts ended with 18 and Thomas Gummings hit 16.

Arkansas-Little Rock 117, Hardin-Simmons 80

Johnnie Bell, one of seven Arkansas-Little Rock players to score in double figures, made 22 points to lead the Trojans to a 117-80 Trans America Athletic Conference victory over Hardin-Simmons on Thursday.

The victory Thursday night was the Trojans' seventh straight and marked the fifth time in the last six games that they have topped 100 points. The Trojans are 10-0 at home, where they average 100.3 points a game.

UALR moved to 15-4 overall and 9-1 in the league with the victory. The Cowboys fell to 6-13, 2-8.

The Trojans led by as many as 18 in the first half, but Hardin-Simmons rallied late to cut the lead to 52-41 at halftime. The Trojans shot 55 percent from the field in the game, and tied a school record with nine 3-point goals.

Seventeen of Bell's points came in the second half.

Texas A&I increased its lead to 70-60 before the Rams scored again, and this was with 45 seconds remaining.

Gratts ended with 18 and Thomas Gummings hit 16.
