Armenia demands annexation of Azerbaijan

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Armenian legislators today rejected political changes sought by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and demanded annexation of a part of neighboring Azerbaijan, residents said.

The legislative session came as more than 2,000 ethnic Armenians streamed into Armenia from Azerbaijan, panicked by ethnic rioting there that killed three soldiers and left more than 126 people injured earlier this week.

It was the worst outbreak of violence since February in the Caucasus, where tensions have run high because of a bitter territorial dispute over Nagorno-Karabakh, a predominantly Armenian enclave inside Azerbaijan.

The legal status of the decisions made by about 200 of Armenia's 340 Supreme Soviet members was uncertain, but Armenian activists called the session a victory for democracy. Residents said the legislators met in their capital's Opera Theater until 2 a.m. today.

In Azerbaijan, the chief of information for the Azerbaijan Foreign Ministry said the situation in the republic's capital, Baku, remained tense, and that industries in the Caspian Sea port city were closed by strikes.

The official, Musa Mamedov, speaking by telephone from Baku, said soldiers had cordoned off the city's Armenian districts but that for safety's sake, "Nobody is going there."

Gennady I. Gerasimov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, said in Moscow on Thursday that tanks and troops were sent to restore order in Baku and the two Azerbaijan cities where rioting flared Tuesday, Kirovabad and Nakhichevan.

Ruben Karagosyan, chief editor of Armenia's official Armenpress news agency, said by telephone from Yerevan, the republic's capital, that a curfew was imposed there Thursday night.

Karagosyan said 2,200 ethnic Armenians who fled the violence in Azerbaijan had been registered as refugees by a newly created Armenian government commission. The republic allocated $2.8 million in aid, he said.

The Armenian Supreme Soviet, or legislature, broke off its regular fall session Tuesday after a Kremlin envoy, Arkady Volzky, said the situation in the Caucasus had become too enflamed to proceed. The lawmakers had been scheduled to debate the Nagorno-Karabakh issue.

About 200 deputies resumed the session Thursday night, enough members for a quorum, said Victoria Manukyan, chief of local news for Armenpress.

Mrs. Manukyan gave no details on the decisions reached. But Rafael Popoyan, an Armenian activist, said the deputies again demanded unification of Nagorno-Karabakh with Armenia and rejected the constitutional changes proposed by Gorbachev.

"They decided that the constitutional amendments do not correspond to the interests of Armenia or of democracy, and demanded that new proposals be drawn up in two months that will meet those criteria," Popoyan said from Yerevan.

The meeting in the opera house took place in the absence of Armenia's president and top local Communist Party officials, but Samson Tonoyan, chairman of the Supreme Soviet, led the session, Popoyan said. He said Tonoyan announced the decision to a crowd after the meeting.

Gorbachev's amendments have provoked strong criticism, especially in the Baltic republics, where activists argue they would strengthen Moscow's powers at the expense of the 15 Soviet republics and eliminate the republics' right to secede. The legal changes are to be voted on by a special Nov. 29 session of the national Supreme Soviet.

The parliaments of Estonia, Latvia and Georgia have demanded changes in the Gorbachev proposals, and Lithuania has rejected them.

Both Azerbaijan and the Soviet leadership have rejected any change in sovereignty for Nagorno-Karabakh, with the Kremlin opting instead for a long-term economic and social development plan for the region.

'Indian' Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving "Indians" from the first, second and third grade at Lefors Elementary School celebrated with a feast of stew and Navajo fried bread during the annual celebration at the school Wednesday.

Teachers said the non-traditional meal was inspired by the thought that "we're going to be eating turkey for the next month. We wanted something else."

PPROA head says energy policy needed to protect nation's security

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

This nation's security is jeopardized unless the United States establishes an effective long-term energy policy, David Willard, president of the Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association, told Pampa Rotarians Wednesday.

At present the United States imports 41 percent of its crude oil, 17 million barrels a year — a 2.4 percent increase from 1987 figures, Willard said. Meanwhile, U.S. production of crude oil has decreased seven percent from 9.2 million barrels in 1987 to 8.2 million.

"We are fast approaching 50 percent," Willard warned about oil imports.

"This affects the national security," he said. "I know no one wants to talk about it, and heaven forbid that it would happen, but it takes oil to fight a war."

Willard credits the fall in domestic production of crude oil to the decline in exploration and the fall in crude oil prices.

According to the National Rotary Rig Count, he said, the United States had 3,970 producing wells in 1981. That has decreased to 936 wells today, he said. In addition, oil prices have fallen from $31 a barrel in 1981 to the present rate of $12 a barrel. Natural gas prices have decreased from $2 per million cubic feet (mcf) to $1.50, he added.

"Independent oil and gas producers have lost 60 to 70 percent of their income in recent years from falling prices while production has also declined," Willard said.

"The independent oil and gas industry is being dismantled slowly, and locally that means a loss of jobs," he said. As executive vice president of Willard Oil and Gas in Borger, Willard cited the collapse of two of Borger's major banking institutions in the past four years, a direct result of many bankruptcies caused by the falling oil and gas economy.

"The oil man borrowed the money based on $30 a barrel, and as anybody can see, they can't pay it back at $12 a barrel," he said.

"I know no one wants to talk about it, and heaven forbid that it would happen, but it takes oil to fight a war."

"The irony of this is that the major oil companies are reaping huge profits," Willard said. "Cheap oil means cheap feed stock for them."

In 1987, the top 20 oil companies reported a profit of $400 billion with a net income of $9.4 billion, up 80 percent, or $20 billion, from the past year, Willard said.

Meanwhile, independent drilling has dropped 85 percent, he said.

"If the independents go out of business, production and exploration for oil and gas in this country will fall even more dramatically than it already has," Willard said. "The independent oil man is a vanishing breed."

Willard outlined six solutions to the independent oil and gas producers problems.

■ Adoption of an effective national long-term energy policy.

■ Taxing policies to encourage exploration and production of oil and gas. "Oil and gas industry is one of the most highly taxed industries in the United States," Willard said.

■ Deregulation of natural gas at the wellhead. "We have huge reserves of natural gas," he said, adding natural gas is also the cleanest fossil fuel in the United States.

■ Price supports on crude oil. Willard proposes this or an oil import tax fee or surcharge to the refineries as alternatives.

■ More governmental money for research and development of oil and gas. "Currently one percent of the Department of Energy budget goes towards research for oil and gas," Willard said.

■ Incentives for the oil and gas producers.

"We are in trouble energy-wise," Willard warned, urging Pampa Rotarians to write their elected officials in support of a national energy policy.

Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association attempts to monitor and promote or defeat legislation that affects independent oil and gas producers, Willard said.

"We have two basic goals. We monitor issues vital to the (oil and gas) industry in Washington and Austin. The oil and gas industry is so regulated it's a nightmare to keep up with. And we are charged to stay up with that," he said. "And we are a voice for the industry of oil and gas in the country. We are becoming increasingly more important."

OPEC ministers cut tentative deal to limit oil production by members

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Iraq's oil minister predicted today that a tentative OPEC deal to end a bitter dispute over production between Iran and Iraq would send crude oil prices soaring to $18 a barrel within a few months.

Such a steep climb theoretically could add as much as 10 cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline, but analysts said they doubted that would happen because retail prices had not come down during the recent slump in crude prices.

The tentative deal worked out by the ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to limit their production next year was announced late Thursday.

Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, flew to Tehran today to get his government's approval for the pact, which sets a ceiling on OPEC's production at 18.5 million barrels a day in the first half of 1989.

The futures price for West

Texas Intermediate, a major U.S. crude, closed Wednesday at $13.97 a barrel. The financial markets were closed Thursday in the United States for the Thanksgiving holiday.

The ministers want the production agreement to dry up some of the glut on the market so prices will go up. The major stumbling block to the accord, which would replace one drawn up in 1986, has been the Iran-Iraq dispute.

Iraq had been insisting that its production quota, or ceiling, in any new pact be the same as Iran's. Aghazadeh repeatedly said no.

It was not known exactly how that dispute was resolved.

Aghazadeh said Iran would retain its share of total cartel output at 14.27 percent.

"I received a new proposal in which my main concern, which is to preserve my percentage share, is taken into consideration," he said.

With a ceiling of 18.5 million barrels, that would give Iran a quota of 2.64 million barrels a day. Its current cap is 2.4 million barrels.

"As for the Iraqi quota, 11 members have agreed to donate part of their share to that country," Aghazadeh said. "Insofar as this particular issue is concerned, I find it necessary to consult with my government."

"But other issues, I have agreed to," he said.

Aghazadeh did not say how large Iraq's quota would be under the plan. Its ceiling was set at 1.5 million barrels under the current pact.

Asked if he was still refusing to allow Iraq the same quota as Iran, he replied, "This is exactly the issue which I have to consult with my government."

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait had insisted that all 13 members would have to be party to any new agreement.

Holiday traffic death toll hits 11 in Texas, 105 nationwide

By The Associated Press

A 16-year-old San Antonio boy was thrown from the bed of a pickup truck and killed just after midnight today when the truck collided with a car on Interstate Highway 35.

The teen-ager became the 11th person to die on Texas highways during the long Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

The unofficial count by The Associated Press began at 6 p.m. Wednesday and continues through midnight Sunday. By early morning today, the traffic toll nationwide was listed at 105 deaths.

The identity of the teen-ager had not been released pending notification of relatives.

The pickup the boy was riding in was struck broadside by a Camero at the intersection of Interstate 35 and Southwest Military Drive in San Antonio. The boy suffered massive injuries when he was thrown from the truck. He later died at Wilford Hall Hospital.

On Thursday, one man was killed in Midland, another outside Anahuac, one near San Benito and three others in Houston in five separate accidents.

Four others were killed Wednesday in three separate accidents in Dallas, Kirbyville and Sanderson.

In addition, a Texas family of five from Lancaster was injured in a collision in Shreveport. Authorities say none of the family members were killed.

A male pedestrian was struck and killed shortly before 3 a.m. Thursday in Midland, police said. The victim's identity had not been determined Thursday night.

Robert Burns Scherer, 80, of Anahuac man died in a one-vehicle accident near the southeast Texas community Thursday. Scherer's vehicle ran off the left side of the road and struck a tree.

Two northeast Houston men were killed early Thursday when their car struck a utility pole north of downtown Houston. Police said Gabino Juarez, 33, and Jorge Emilio Torres, 18, were killed when the pole broke and fell on the car.

Bryan Keith Valentine, also of Houston, died about 2:30 a.m. when he was thrown from a car, police said.

Felipe Villarreal Duenez, 27, was killed about 6:30 p.m. Thursday on Farm Road 345 just north of San Benito when he lost control of his car and it overturned and skidded into a ditch.

Kevin Lee Henne, 34, of Killen, was killed Wednesday night in a Dallas motorcycle accident, investigators said.

Lige Horton III, 23, was struck by car and killed in north Jasper County.

William Leslie Brown, 31, and Cecil Ray Warren, 21, both of Fort Stockton, were killed in a one-vehicle rollover Wednesday at 8:15 p.m., on U.S. 285. The accident happened about two miles north of Sanderson, investigators said.

Separate fires on Thanksgiving claimed the lives of two 4-year-old boys in Texas and left family members hospitalized today.

One child died early Thursday morning in a mobile home fire in Comanche that sent the rest of his family to a Dallas hospital for treatment of severe burns.

A house fire near the East Texas town of Hemphill also killed a 4-year-old boy and injured his infant brother Thursday.

Comanche Fire Department officials said the mobile home fire in the Central Texas community may have started in the heater of the family room where the boy, Brian Hatley, was sleeping.

His parents, Jack and Sheila Hatley, and sisters, Tabatha, 3, and Samatha, 1, were taken to the Comanche Hospital and later transferred to Parkland Hospital in Dallas.

Late Thursday, Sheila and Samatha Hatley were in serious condition and Jack and Tabatha were reported in fair condition.

After the fire broke out, the parents quickly carried their youngest children out, but by the time they returned for Brian it was too late, officials said.

Fire Chief Dale Nowlin said no cause had been established for the blaze.

In Hemphill, firefighters responded to a house blaze around 9 a.m. Thursday. The 4-year-old was pronounced dead upon arrival at Sabine County Hospital and his brother was taken to the Shrine Burn Center in Galveston.

Hemphill Fire Marshal Bill Barcheers identified the dead boy as Ronnie Procell Jr. His 9-month-old brother, Rusty Procell, was hospitalized today with third-degree burns over more than half of his body, officials said.

Country singer to give benefit concert for Panhandle museum

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Michael Martin Murphey

AMARILLO—Country singer Michael Martin Murphey, who has nearly two dozen hits to his credit, will perform a benefit concert for the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum Saturday night, Dec. 3, at the Tri-State Fair Grounds.

The concert/dance, dubbed the Cowboy Christmas Ball after one of Murphey's hit songs, will begin at 7 p.m. in the Rex Baxter Building on the fair grounds site. Tickets will be available at the door.

Chris Manning, operations director for KDJW radio, said the event is a community-wide effort to support the museum.

"When they lost their biennium funding, we immediately offered them $1,000 a month free advertising to help raise money. We don't give away cars or houses, so events like this to raise money for a worthwhile cause are our forte," Manning said.

He termed the dance a cooperative effort between old friends, saying that Murphey knows the people at the museum and the radio station well.

Mike Merriman of Piper Productions in Amarillo said the effort was a "selfish" attempt by area businesses to save the museum.

"I've gotten so much from the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum and this is my way of making sure it's still going strong for my children and grandchildren," Merriman said.

Prior to the concert, Murphey will join Dr. Charles Townsend, author of The Biography of Bob Wills, for a discussion of western influences on music. The discussion will be from 2-4 p.m. at the Branding Iron Theatre on the campus of West Texas State University. Tickets for the lecture will be $5.

Murphey, who first had chart success penning hits for the Monkees, has meshed rock, pop and country influences into a blend of music he calls Americana.

The sound ranges from the western swing of "Fiddlin' Man" to soft ballads like "Long Line of Love" and pop-flavored hits like "I'm Gonna Miss You Girl," which was originally a hit for Jesse Winchester in the 1960s.

His first success as a solo artist came with "Geronimo's Cadillac," a theme song from the Indian movement of the early '70s. During that time he spent most of his energy writing hit songs with a community of country-rock performers that included Jackson Browne, Linda Ronstadt and Don Henley and Glen Frey of the Eagles.

It was from this period that tunes like "Carolina in the Pines" and "Wildfire" emerged. Both were top 10 on the country and pop charts. In the '80s Murphey has tasted pop success with the song "What's Forever For."

The pop music trend in the late 1970s and early '80s toward a more synthesized sound forced many performers to move more strongly toward either rock or country. It also brought a decline in popularity for many artists who merged both styles successfully during the '60s and mid '70s.

However, for Murphey the move into a strictly country format only strengthened his following. And in many ways, the change was only a cosmetic one by marketing specialists. His music has remained as multifaceted as ever.

One of his biggest country successes was writing "Cherokee Fiddle," which was a staple of the Urban Cowboy movement performed by Murphey and Johnny Lee.

On his most recent album, River of Time, Murphey has dueted with his son on the top five "Talkin' to the Wrong Man" and had a hit with the tune which scored big for Winchester in the '60s. His most recent success is "Pilgrims One the Way."

It will be followed by "What Am I Doin' Hanging Around," this time with Murphey doing the vocals instead of the Monkees' Michael Nesmith.

In addition to his considerable talents as a singer, Murphey has also earned a reputation on the concert trail. In addition to playing the guitar and fiddle, he also has been known to dance Irish jigs and bring members of the audience on stage to join in on numbers such as "Geronimo's Cadillac."

The benefit concert tickets are priced at $10.

Llama mama factory busy

NAPA, Calif. (AP)—When will a llama become a mama?

It isn't always easy for llama ranchers to tell when one of their fat, woolly animals is pregnant, but a human hospital is cashing in on finding out.

"We're the llama pregnancy factory of the world," said Glenn Lee, head of outpatient laboratory services for Queen of the Valley Hospital. "UPS, Federal Express, every delivery system in the U.S. pulls into the lab's driveway at least once a day," he said.

The hospital performs up to 600 llama pregnancy tests a month for breeders as far away as Louisiana, Texas and Canada, Lee said. The hospital estimates that it now performs five times as many tests for llamas as it does for humans.

"It can cost you a great deal of time and effort if you think a llama is pregnant and she isn't," said Don Judah, head of the hospital's radiology services and owner of five of the animals.

Students learn about a do-it-yourself Thanksgiving Day meal

By CONNIE KENJURA
The Brazosport Facts

LAKE JACKSON, Texas (AP) — Turkey, pumpkin pies, Pilgrims and Indians.

That's what Thanksgiving means to a group of early childhood, pre-kindergarten and kindergarten children who learned about the traditional side of the holiday through a three-day program that included cooking their own feast.

These 160 students at A.P. Beutel Elementary took their Thanksgiving project from start to finish: beginning with a shopping trip last week where they purchased all the necessary ingredients for the turkey celebration with help from their teachers and ending with a feast they helped prepare.

Smiles and looks of wonder adorned the faces of the eager students as they helped their teachers and participating parents prepare a 20-pound turkey, a dozen pumpkin pies and countless miniature corn muffins they ate Tuesday.

The hardest part about the day-ahead of cooking on Monday was having to wait to eat the delicious end results, said pre-kindergarten teacher Dorothy Rayburn.

As the children rotated from one cooking station to the next, each had the opportunity to measure sugar, beat eggs and get right into the thick of things by buttering Tom.

Anxiety filled the room as each child impatiently waited for his or her turn to participate in the cooking.

Pre-kindergarten student Tiffany Lewis was amazed by the size and texture of the turkey as she helped butter and season it while one of the teachers pointed to the different parts of the bird, asking the children to name each section.

Lake Jackson students prepare their turkey for Thanksgiving feast.

When early childhood teacher Nancy Standlee showed the class where the stuffing is placed, Tiffany put her hand inside the turkey with a look of awe as it almost "swallowed" her entire arm.

"Wow! It's really big," Tiffany said with excitement. "How far does it go?"

As fellow classmate Alex Gore repeatedly pushed an over-sized Pilgrim hat back off his forehead, he said he liked the shopping part of the lesson the best.

He liked the turkey the best and making pies the best, too, he said as his big, brown eyes radiated excitement.

The children really enjoyed learning about Thanksgiving through this fun, hands-on project, Standlee said, because for many of them this was the first time they had ever been allowed to touch a whole turkey.

"Our goal and main purpose of this classroom project was to try and help the kids relate all the different parts of Thanksgiving together," Standlee said.

"It's difficult for the children to grasp the concept of what the first Thanksgiving was really like, so we are trying to tie the past and the present together."

"By having the children see the food being brought from the store to the oven to the table, they can get a better feel for what the holiday is about," she said.

Most of the activities are for language development, Rayburn said. The children learn well with concrete examples, and that is what the project is all about teaching the children while they have fun.

"The kids don't realize they are actually learning if they are having fun at the same time," she said.

The elementary school was transported back to the days before microwaves and grocery stores as almost 200 little Pilgrims and Indians gathered for their hand-prepared feast dressed in costumes they made.

A&M biochemist says violin maker used all the right stuff

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The way a Texas A&M biochemist sees it, Stradivari was lucky. Those world famous Stradivari violins were just the product of all the right stuff, says Dr. Joseph Nagyvary.

Nagyvary said he discovered several years ago that the wood Stradivari used to make his violins was soaked in water, not dry-seasoned as is commonly believed. He also found that the Stradivari varnish, which is a composite made up of billions of crystals and other particles in addition to linseed oil, played an important role in the fine instrument's sound quality.

"Stradivari did not know materials science," said Nagyvary. "He just happened to use the right materials to produce the quality violin he is famous for."

During restoration, some of the Stradivari had sound quality inadvertently stripped away along with the varnish, Nagyvary said.

Some collectors considered the thicker, colored varnish to be unattractive, and did not realize its value in producing tonal quality, he said.

For centuries, families of tradition-bound craftsmen produced perfect copies of Stradivari violins — complete with blemishes, chipped varnish and burn marks.

But Nagyvary is producing a violin that is meant to appeal to those who want a violin for its sound quality, not its physical resemblance to an antique.

"I don't consider violin making an exalted artwork, nor was it in the beginning, since the same artisans also made furniture and shoes," said Nagyvary, who holds a Ph.D. in biochemistry and biophysics and who is a violin enthusiast.

Nagyvary, who has had his work on the violin published in scientific journals, said the debate over his violin is basically a debate over two different commodities — sound and appearance.

"I'm not arguing with the artists," Nagyvary said. "I'm producing a 'high-performance violin,' not a piece of artwork. The value of the violins produced by people who consider it artwork lies in the label, the condition and the appearance. It is a serial product sold as artwork. I base the quality of mine on such things as sound spectrum analysis.

"I compare this to the difference between coach-making of the 1800s and the production of race cars. A sports car is not sold merely on its looks, but on its performance," he said.

Nagyvary earlier received a $274,000 grant from the Texas Advanced Technology Program to fund studies that would help establish a major string instrument industry in Texas. Several members of the Texas A&M engineering faculty are collaborating on the project.

"Our violin industry in Texas would be backed with sound scientific evidence," Nagyvary adds. "For the first time in history, the violin will be offered as a tool, an instrument with distinct and scientific specifications for why and how it performs."

Nagyvary said he has received criticism from violinmakers and dealers who as teen-agers were educated in trade schools and have expertise in recognizing valuable violins. "But they are not qualified in our area of material science and computer analysis of sound," he added.

"The trouble is that the elite violinists have no education even in the rudiments of science. Therefore, they are more easily influenced by subjective persuasion of an old-fashioned medicine man than by the computer printouts of a modern physician."

Part of the problem in the production of many replicas in the last 150 years was the materials, he said. No one before had scientifically and chemically analyzed what the materials used in Stradivari's days were.

"We know now that Stradivari's materials were no different from his competitors, but his output was some 10 times greater. So he was a great salesman. I think a definitive story can be told about his instruments from chemical and microscopic investigation."

Nagyvary and the artists using his violins claim the instruments have gained a mature, low-noise sound within a few months of playing. In contrast, experts and other makers suggest that as many as 60 years are needed to obtain the fine sound from a new violin. By that time, Nagyvary said, the player is usually deaf, or dead.

Researcher: Lovelife drops off with sunlight

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Want a romantic winter evening?

A San Antonio researcher says turn up the lights.

University of Texas Health Science Center professor Russel J. Reiter said there's a hormonal link between light and wintertime blues that include a seasonal loss of sexual desire.

Seasonal affective disorder "is not uncommon in San Antonio," Reiter told the San Antonio Light. "Mid-November is the time most people will experience it."

As the daylight hours grow shorter, so, too, does sexual desire in nearly 5 million Americans affected by the hormonal changes. But cravings for starchy foods, frequent mood swings, depression and lethargy increase.

Reiter said lower light levels force a tiny pine cone-shaped pineal gland, located under the brain and linked directly to the eyes, to work harder.

The less light it senses, the more it works to produce a hormone called melatonin, which can plunge a particularly sensitive person into depression and shut down his sexual responses.

Similarly, the lengthening daylight of springtime has the opposite effect on the melatonin cycle, shutting down the pineal gland sooner and turning on sexual desire.

Other factors may be involved in seasonal affective disorder, but the pineal gland and melatonin appear to be key triggers of the problem, Reiter said.

The pineal gland is what tells bears to hibernate and snowshoe hares to exchange their summer brown coats to winter white ones, said Reiter, who has written six books on the gland.

Reiter said seasonal affective disorder is more common in Northern states where winter days are much shorter than the normal 10-hour Texas days. He said women are four times more likely to be affected than men.

Phototherapy — exposure to lots of bright light — rapidly is gaining acceptance as treatment for the disorder. For some, a visit to a tanning salon might do the trick, Reiter said.

But the common treatment is sitting in a brightly lit room in the morning for a half-hour to two hours. That also is the method chosen by two Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center researchers in an article in the November issue of Texas Medicine.

Also available for those most severely afflicted with the disorder is an overnight bag loaded with light bulbs, so they can have sufficient light with them at all times.

"The bottom line is that light is a drug that can have significant impact," Reiter said.

Reiter said jet lag also may be affected by melatonin production. He and 50 other science and business travelers are taking melatonin capsules as part of a study by the University of Surrey in England.

"What I'm more interested in is sex — scientifically speaking, that is," Reiter said of his current research. He is studying how to use bright light to help women suffering from infertility.

Toy collector obsessed with the 'one-of-a-kind'

By STEVEN LONG
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — A mechanical bank, one of two known to exist, just sold for $175,000 at the Perelman Antique Toy Museum Auction in Philadelphia.

An antique board game called Man in the Moon sold for $2,000, and an original Monopoly game went for $2,000 to Parker Bros.

And you thought toys and games were kid stuff.

For Constance Haenggi of Houston and other serious collectors, collecting is an obsession.

"I like one-of-a-kind toys. They're like works of art. These early toys were hand-painted, so each one is different from the next. Finding them, seeing the variations, becomes a passion," she said.

Haenggi, who has been collecting for more than 30 years, finds the toys everywhere, from private sales to auctions.

"I collected to the point that it drove me to sell," she said, "but it seems to me that I still collect more than I sell."

Haenggi is one of more than about 20 serious toy collectors in the area. She has so many toys that she has to store them in two houses and two garages. She sells toys at two mall locations, one in Meyerland and one on the Katy Freeway.

She wouldn't put a value on her collection, nor would she expect someone to buy her collection for an astronomical sum. Her collecting began from the heart. But she acknowledges that many today collect for the investment.

"When Malcolm Forbes and other big people got into it, toy collecting became big business," said Haenggi. Forbes, publisher of Forbes Magazine, paid $20,000 for a tin-plate boat. His collection is on display at a museum in one of his office buildings.

Europeans have come to the United States to buy back European toys, Haenggi said. "The Japanese are buying American, too — battery-operated toys."

Antique toys are artifacts of an age. "They reflect the times," she added. But most men are buying toys of their youth. "They're all buying their own 'Rosebud,'" she said, referring to the sled in the movie, Citizen Kane.

Even some Space Age toys have become collectible. "Certain robots bring an awful lot of money," she said. Yet traditional toys like marbles are always a staple item.

Antique 19th-century American toys are difficult to find and are expensive. Collectors look for toys in perfect condition. "They generally want it in the original wooden box with every piece intact. The best toy is one that has never been opened or played with," Haenggi said.

Of personal interest to Haenggi are one-of-a-kind folk art toys. But she buys and sells almost everything. Dustin Hoffman bought a Happy Hooligan comic character from the early 1920s.

But Haenggi doesn't play with the toys she is so attached to. "I'm a very logical person who reads a great deal. I wind them up to see if they work."

TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Republicrats ignore other parties' rights

Americans used to laugh at the farcical elections in the Soviet Union where only one handpicked candidate from one ruling party was on the ballot, and at the controlled media that were willing handmaidens to selling this imposture to the public. Perhaps we should laugh no more.

We have two parties, but they exercise something of a hegemony — even when third and fourth parties are permitted to exist. Our legislative districts are so gerrymandered that each of them might as well be a one-party mini-state. Between 98 and 99 percent of incumbents are re-elected without breaking a sweat, though they raise and spend gargantuan sums anyway. And third-party results are simply consigned to the memory-hole by most of the lapdog media.

There were American Independent, Right to Life, Populist and Progressive parties on the ballot in various states, but only the Libertarian Party and New Alliance folks ran anything resembling a nationwide campaign. The reason is that if you aren't a Republican or a Democrat, you have to spend tons of money and jump through countless hoops just to get on the ballot. When the Libertarians filed a form late in Missouri, they were kicked off the ballot. When both Bush and Dukakis filed precisely the same form late in Indiana, the law was ignored.

Are you just a little surprised that you didn't hear even a murmur about this on election night? The reason is that an outfit called News Election Service, jointly owned by ABC, CBS, NBC, AP and UPI, provided the data the networks had to work with. And NES decided not only to ignore votes from all but the two major parties, but to massage the figures so that the Republicrat total added up to 100 percent, a truly Orwellian move. It actually took an extra run through the computer to falsify the first draft of history, but they were glad to oblige.

The presidential debates were run by an outfit formed by the two major parties. When the bipartisan (not non-partisan) League of Women Voters, which had previously sponsored the debates, showed a slight tremor of independence, the two majors yanked the debates away in a trice.

Other countries seem able to cope with more than two parties. Although most democracies feature two major parties and a swarm of minor parties, at least the results from the minor parties are reported. Are our two dinosaurs so insecure that they can't stand even that? Or are our media so complacent and lazy, so happy to get taxpayer-paid advertising from the major parties, that they consider it their duty to suppress any news of divergence from the ruling hegemony?

Is a puzzlement.

Republicans also had defeats

WASHINGTON — Ever since that Wednesday morning, following upon Tuesday's night before, the Democrats have been getting tons of advice.

Rep. Tony Coelho of California says the party should look to the West in 1992. Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia says the party must find a unifying theme. Jesse Jackson urges undiluted liberalism. Other helpful fellows want to "broaden the base."

On the other side of the political aisle, similar questions also need to be asked. Never mind the Democrats' future. Whether the Republicans?

Now that the balloons of presidential victory have been popped, and all the confetti has been swept up, some disconcerting facts have to be faced. George Bush won the White House decisively. He carried 40 states in the Electoral College and claimed 54 percent of the popular vote. But what else is there for Republicans to cheer about? Not much.

Yes, Connie Mack squeaked to a senatorial victory in Florida. In Montana, Conrad Burns overcame an 18-point disadvantage and defeated Doc Melcher. In Mississippi, Trent Lott edged Wayne Dowdy.

But Republicans failed to take Senate seats they had hoped to win from the Democrats in Wisconsin and New Jersey; they never laid a glove on Sen. Howard Metzenbaum in Ohio. They lost seats in Virginia, Connecticut, Nevada and Nebraska. When the spotlights went out, the GOP had lost ground in both the House and the Senate.

This is not the overriding concern. There is no significant difference between a 54-46 Senate and a 55-45 Senate. The Democrats' advantage in the House has increased from merely huge to regrettably humongous. What should worry the Grand Old Party is not the returns of 1988 but rather the prospects for 1989. The prospects are not encouraging.

The Republicans are great up top. They are not much down below. In key areas of the country — most notably the South — they have failed sorely in developing the kind of party organization that wins elections at the local level. This failure will be keenly felt after the census of 1990, when the boundaries of House districts must be redrawn.

Consider the South. At the local level it remains unreconstructed. Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi went for Bush by landslide margins of 60-40. Bush took 61 percent in Florida, 62 percent in South Carolina. All very heartening. But when one looks at the state legislatures, the picture is something else entirely.

Mississippi will now have two Republican senators, but the state legislature is 165-9 Democratic. In Georgia the imbalance is 201-35, in South Carolina 132-37, in Alabama 115-16, in Florida 109-51. The figures are for 1986-87, but they change little year by year.

At the level of county commissioners, sheriffs, treasurers and tax collectors, Republican officeholders are as rare as peacocks in the Bronx.

What this means, among other things, is that the party simply is not finding, grooming and successfully promoting a cadre of ambitious young Republicans. Virginia went 60-40 for Bush, but in its General Assembly the Democrats hold the state Senate by 4-to-1, the House of Delegates by 2-to-1. Louisiana fell to Bush 55-45, but how are things in Baton Rouge? Democrats 156, Republicans 15.

This is the area in which party efforts have to be concentrated over the next 10 or 15 years. If the House of Representatives ever is to become a closely related chamber, respectable Republican candidates must be discovered and helped down at the grass roots.

It makes no sense that a Republican Party that can win five of the past six presidential elections should fare so poorly in elections to the House.

A part of the problem in the South lies with engrained Democratic tradition; part of it lies in the hold that Democrats have on the black vote; part of it — perhaps the most important part — lies in the steady decline of political parties as such.

There was a time, and it wasn't too very long ago, when our politics turned upon yellow-dawg Democrats and rock-ribbed Republicans. There were party bosses — Crump in Tennessee, Pendergast in Missouri, Daley in Illinois, Byrd in Virginia — who could roll out impressive majorities. The parties cultivated attractive candidates, raised money for them, dispensed rewards and imposed punishments.

Those days probably are gone forever. Party labels mean less and less as years roll by. But in Congress, where the action is, labels are vital. The Republicans have a right to savor Bush's victory. They had better brood upon their own defeats.

Get off the back of the poor

Welfare is "big business." The poverty industry in the United States has become our biggest business — and it's an industry which "rides the backs of the poor."

Who said that? Robert Woodson, a black man, who heads the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise. He is also chairman of the Council for a Black Economic Agenda.

Woodson noted that since Lyndon Johnson's "war on poverty" began in the 1960s, we have spent more than a trillion dollars on aid to the poor — and yet we are told that 30 million Americans still live below the poverty line.

How come? For one reason, 75 percent of the money budgeted for anti-poverty programs does not go to the poor — it goes to the "industry" which serves the poor.

Woodson says further that most of our money for the poor tends to perpetrate poorness, to reward failure.

"If you are poor and a truant from school, there is a program for you. If you are poor and alcoholic, there is a program for you. If you are poor and pregnant, there is money for you. Thus we do reward failure."

On the other hand, "If you are merely in the low-income category, if you obey your parents, if you are staying sober, if you are struggling to achieve in school, if you refrain from promiscuous sexual activity — sorry — there's no money for you. You don't qualify."

Politicians have been out-promising one another in their quest for votes. The poor voter was targeted with additional promises of "what government can do for you."

Woodson says poor people should recognize there's a hook in their bait, that perpetuating subservience is "plantation politics."

What should we do? Encourage the natural instincts within people to improve their own condition.

Example: There is a public housing project (464 units) in Washington, D.C. Until recently only two individuals from that environment ever went to college; most never finished high school.

One woman living in the project started a tutoring program in which students helped one another. One who was good in math would tutor another, in turn getting tutoring in some subject in which he or she needed help. If a student failed to show up for the sessions, the others would go and get him. At the end of each grading period, report cards were posted on the bulletin board.

In the seven years since this program began, more than 580 students from this project have gone to college!

It was not a government program which inspired this effort; it was self-help inspired by the leadership of one dedicated woman.

Yet, politicians even now are calling for increased spending on programs which demonstrably don't work!

Vote-splitting really limits Bush's power

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

If you are one of the millions of Americans who split their ticket on Election Day — voting for a president of one party and a senator or representative of the other — please accept my congratulations. You voted for four years of stalemate at best and chaos at worst, and now you (and the rest of us) are going to get what you voted for.

I happened to think George Bush was the better of the two choices offered to us this year, and I voted Republican in the Senate and House races as well, to give him a Congress that would work with him rather than against him. If I had preferred Michael Dukakis, I certainly would have voted Democratic in the other contests, for the same reason.

But the choice of a president of one party and a Congress of the other simply guarantees that neither will be able to carry through a coherent program. It is a prescription for instability and inefficiency, and I cannot for the life of me imagine why any sane voter would opt for it.

There are, I know, voters who want to set the legislative and executive branches at each others' throats, on the primitive theory that they will be too busy fighting each other to bother the public at large. It doesn't work that way, of course; the constant rivalry simply heightens the temptation to demagoguery on both sides, and the public is the loser. George Bush will no doubt be a better president than Michael Dukakis would have been, but he won't be — he cannot possibly be — as good as he might have been. Congress will see to that.

The Democrats, having lost the presidency for the fifth time out of the last six tries, nevertheless slightly increased their strength in both houses of Congress. They will be returning to Washington in January in a thoroughly foul mood, determined to punish the new Republican president for a campaign that they are convinced was full of low blows.

Don't be fooled by all the pious Democratic rhetoric about wanting to "work together" with President Bush. They intend to make him walk the plank, and they have already chosen the plank.

It is said that, thanks to the largely non-specific nature of the campaign, Bush "has no mandate." But about one important matter he was completely, repeatedly and loudly specific: "No new taxes." If ever a president-elect had a mandate, Bush has one to reject new taxes.

But the congressional Democrats couldn't care less what Bush (or the voters) think about the desirability of new taxes. They intend to force him to agree to new taxes, as the price of permitting him to govern at all, and then they plan to spend the next four years calling him a liar.

All this is predictable, and I don't even much blame the Democrats for it. Their job, after all, is to fight the Republicans, and if the president is a Republican he's fair game. But I do blame the voters — in many states, as much as a quarter of the electorate — who set the fight up by splitting their ticket.

Realize that some people get a psychic charge out of ticket-splitting because it makes them feel virtuously independent. It demonstrates that they wear no party's collar. But such people are then among the first to complain when Congress and the president get into an ugly series of vetoes and overrides (or attempted overrides), or Congress stages one of its grand investigations of alleged presidential misbehavior, with impeachment as the goal.

Those, I'm sorry to say, are the prospects for the next four years, and the voters who asked for it have nobody but themselves to blame.

Ethics investigator subpoenas records on Jim Wright's wife

WASHINGTON (AP) — The special counsel investigating House Speaker Jim Wright has subpoenaed records on work his wife, Betty, did for a partnership between Wright and a Fort Worth real estate developer and investor, according to a source familiar with the case.

The source, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said investigators for outside special counsel Richard J. Phelan had subpoenaed and received records of transactions, working papers and memos related to Mrs. Wright's work for George A. Mallick.

Until 1984, Mrs. Wright was paid $18,000 a year for advice that she gave to an investment venture formed by the Texas congressman, Mallick and their wives in 1979, according to financial disclosure statements filed by the speaker.

With the six-month ethics probe of Wright entering its home stretch, the investigators are examining transactions underlying the partnership company, Mallightco, in much greater detail than available in public records, the source said.

Wright's financial disclosure form shows that he apparently exchanged stock worth between $50,000 and $100,000 for his initial share of the partnership, which was formed to manage investments in stocks, real estate and precious and semi-precious stones.

He listed the value of his Mallightco holdings, which were later placed into a blind trust, at between $100,000 and $250,000.

The trustee disclosed last July, two months after the ethics probe began, that the assets had been disposed of.

Wright's investments with Mallick are not mentioned in the six-count resolution which spells out the bounds of the investigation by the ethics panel, formally known as the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct.

The complaint against Wright involves charges that he improperly used his office to lobby federal officials, used campaign funds to pay for publication of a book on which he received some $55,000 in royalties, and used rent-free a Fort Worth condominium owned by Mallick's son.

Committee chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., declined to comment on whether Phelan is probing Wright's financial dealings with Mallick or on other matters under investigation.

But he denied that any such scrutiny would amount to an expansion of the investigation.

"I am totally satisfied that Phelan's office has not in any way expanded the scope of the preliminary inquiry," Dixon said. "I cannot comment or explain why a particular issue is relevant" to the initial six charges.

Dixon also said he was not concerned that Wright's attorney, William Oldaker, also is acting as counsel to others who testified before the ethics panel, including Mallick and Carlos Moore, a Wright campaign contractor who published the book that is a subject of the probe.

Oldaker did not return phone calls earlier this week.

But he told the Washington Post that he represents at least three other witnesses in the case. He declined to name them but defended the practice as ethical so long as each witness is aware of his representation of the others.

However, Wright's chief accuser, Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said in an interview that the multiple representation suggests collusion among the witnesses.

"If that's not a collusive defense, I don't know what is," Gingrich said, adding that he had sent a letter to Dixon asking if the ethics panel had approved the arrangement.

Wright has said repeatedly that he is confident the probe ultimately will find no wrongdoing.

Shoppers may find shortages for Christmas

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG
AP Business Writer

Christmas shoppers wading into the post-Thanksgiving rush today face a little added pressure this year: tight inventories.

That's a business decision prompted by a long-running slump in the retail business, but for consumers it means limited selection and shortages of hot-selling items.

Today's opening of the nation's annual shopping spree finds retailers optimistic about improving their seasonal sales, but conservative enough to stock sparingly.

Inventories have been tight for much of the year, and few retailers are likely to take many chances at this point.

The advice from industry analyst Monroe Greenstein of the investment firm Bear, Stearns & Co., is to shop early.

"If consumers want to buy popular items, they better not wait," he said.

The most popular items this season are expected to include designer and cashmere sweaters, leather goods and compact disk players, and for children, Nintendo video games and Barbie dolls.

"It is still too early to get a true reading on whether this is going to be a nail-biting Christmas. We never anticipated Christmas 1988 to be a barn-burner Christmas," said Mike Wellman, marketing vice president for K mart Corp. in Troy, Mich.

"There are more people working, the election is behind us, and people seem to be reasonably, if not optimistic, comfortable with the shape of the economy."

K mart, with thousands of discount stores, book shops and drugstores, expects holiday sales to run about 6 percent ahead of last year — in the range of most optimistic forecasts.

For K mart, and other big retailers, the decisions that may make or break Christmas 1988 were made as long as 16 months ago.

"We have been playing the whole inventory thing conservatively all year long and that's continued right into Christmas," Wellman said.

Promotions are expected to help generate traffic.

While the day after Thanksgiving is the traditional start of the season, many stores have had their decorations up for weeks. At Saks Fifth Avenue's flagship store in Manhattan, for instance, the evergreens went up right after Halloween.

To get Chicago shoppers in the spirit, Marshall Field's hired carolers and minstrels to roam its stores and installed a Christmas tree in one location that it calls "the tallest indoor handmade-ornament tree in the world."

Some "sale" signs and price markdowns will be popping up around the country, but analysts say many of these promotions also were planned in advance and prices have been adjusted to account for them.

"We continue to operate in a very competitive environment, and we see some caution on the part of the consumer," said Kathy Blackburn of Mervyn's, a Hayward, Calif.-based department store chain.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, plans to give shoppers a taste of the new low prices that are part of its recently announced restructuring plan. Most Sears stores will not switch to "everyday low pricing" until next year, but the company will still be touting holiday sale items.

Some retailers say price chopping may be inevitable later in the season.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

NOURISHMENT!

Three times a day we care for our body's needs. From this food we receive new strength and vigor with which we may face each day. Without proper nourishment we would become weak and our bodies would wither away. The soul needs nourishment too... "Man shall not live by bread alone..." Without proper nourishment our soul becomes weak and withers. Attend church each week and feed your soul, and know the joy of a full and happy life.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Former Pampa Baptist president in New Mexico

Former Pampa resident Dr. Charles Price, pastor at First Baptist Church in Las Cruces, N.M., has been elected president of the Baptist Convention of New Mexico.

He was pastor of First Baptist Church, Santa Fe, for nine years prior to accepting the pastorate at Las Cruces nine months ago.

He has served as the moderator of Santa Fe Baptist Association and has been involved with the Baptist Convention of New Mexico in numerous capacities.

He grew up in Pampa and graduated from Pampa High School. He is the son of Onis and Joy Price and brother of Harold Price, all of Pampa.

Dr. Price is a member of Rotary International and was chaplain for a week for both the New Mexico State Senate and House of Representatives. He currently serves on the Hardin-Simmons University Board of Development.

He received the bachelor of arts degree from Hardin-Simmons University at Abilene and master of divinity and doctor of ministry degrees from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth.

Since his arrival, the Las Cruces church has received more than 200 new members. It has acquired the historical Las Cruces High School complex containing 63,000 square feet of education space, a gymnasium, cafeteria, auditorium and a multipurpose cottage. A worship center to seat approximately 1500 persons will be added to the existing buildings, which are located on 8.5 acres in the downtown area.

Price, a native of Pampa, is married to Sheri Martin Price from Beaumont. She is a counselor for the Las Cruces public schools. They have two sons, Martin Lee, 13, and Judson Charles, 10.

He is the son-in-law of Brigadier General and Mrs. Jack T. Martin of Beaumont.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Search me, O God, and know my heart; test me and know my anxious thoughts. See if there is any offensive way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting. (Psalm 139:23-24 NIV)

It's that time of the year of beautiful Indian summer days and increasingly colder nights.

I like to sleep in a cool room because I like to curl up under a pile of covers. Often I reluctantly awaken with a vague sense of discomfort. As my awareness becomes more acute, I am able to pinpoint the problem; invariably my covers have slipped away, leaving one ear exposed to the cold and feeling like a Popsicle.

Most Christians have had the experience of participating in an activity, habit or mental process over a period of time, warm in conscience and soul, only to eventually awaken spiritually to a vague awareness of God's displeasure. After reluctantly squirming our way into a more receptive attitude, we can usually pinpoint the problem.

Our immediate reaction to the realization of sin in our lives is often one of incredulity; we're appalled that we could have been tucked so snugly under our transgression, and we wonder why God didn't drop a brick on us to wake us up.

However, if God suddenly awakened us to all our vices with brutal clarity, we'd be so overwhelmed with the enormity of our guilt and inadequacy we'd drown in our sorrow.

God's method of gradual revelation — that niggling little spot that feels uncomfortable and exposed — is His fatherly chastisement and guidance, tempered with love and understanding.

It's all part of the gradual growing up process, Christian children!

Southern Baptist representative to speak at Lefors First Baptist

LEFORS - Dr. Finlay M. Graham, emeritus Southern Baptist representative, will preach at the 7 p.m. Sunday service at Lefors First Baptist Church, announced Rev. Lewis Ellis, pastor.

Preceding the evening service, a fellowship supper will be held at the church beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Dr. Graham of Scotland was appointed a Southern Baptist representative in September 1947 and retired October 1986.

He was born March 23, 1920 in Greenock, Scotland, but considers Oban, Scotland as his hometown.

Dr. Graham received the master of arts degree from the University of Glasgow (Scotland) and the bachelor of divinity and doctor of theology degrees from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

He is married to Julia Saccar, born in Hallettsville, Texas. They have five grown children.

Graham served as a British Royal Air Force navigator in the Middle East, North Africa and Europe during World War II from 1940 to 1946. He was a guest professor of missions at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary at Mill Valley, Calif., in 1972-1973.

Graham

He is the author of Sons of Ishmael: How Shall They Hear?, a 1969 Foreign Mission Graded Series book for adults.

His assignments include language school in Jerusalem,

Palestine, in 1946-1947; general evangelism in Nazareth, Palestine in 1947-1948; and Beirut, Lebanon, in 1948 to 1960, where the Grahams were the first Southern Baptist missionaries to that country.

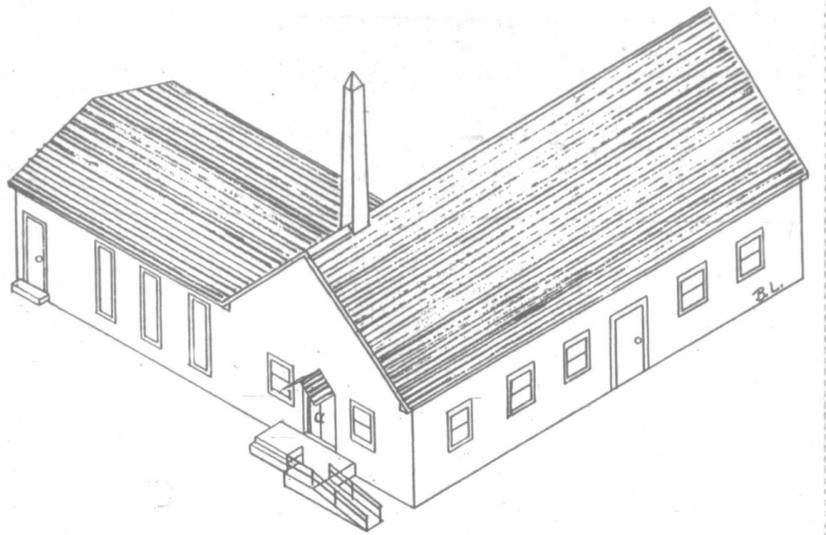

He was principal of the Beirut Baptist School in 1958-1960 and was the founder, president and teacher at Arab Baptist Theological Seminary at Mansourieh-Beirut, Lebanon, from 1960 to 1976.

Graham served as a special assistant to the associate to the area director for Europe and Middle East from January 1985 to June 1986. During this time his primary task was preparing theological textbooks in Arabic for publication.

He and his wife lived in Nicosia, Cyprus from January 1977 to July 1986. He retired Oct. 1, 1986.

Graham has served as guest professor of Missions and Arabic at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1986-1987.

Rev. Ellis invited the public to attend the special Sunday evening supper and service.

First Pentecostal Holiness Church to mark 60th founding anniversary

On Sunday, Nov. 27, the First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, will have special services marking the 60th anniversary of its founding. Early day members and some of the former pastors are expected.

A display showing news clippings, bulletins, pictures and materials from the church's history will be featured.

The day's activities will begin with Sunday School at 9:45 a.m. The morning worship begins at 10:45 a.m. A covered-dish luncheon will be served at noon. The afternoon singing will begin at 2:30 p.m.

Former pastors will bring greetings and early day members will share reminiscences of the church's colorful past. The congregation and Pastor Albert Maggard are welcoming everyone to share the day's activities.

The Pentecostal Holiness Church was organized in Pampa on Nov. 25, 1928 by the Rev. John T. Mahoney. There were five charter members. Mrs. Jessie Williams of Calvin, Okla., had conducted revival services in Pampa and was instrumental in helping to get the church going.

Rev. Mahoney was a colorful part of the Pampa scene in the Twenties. Before his conversion he was a businessman who supplied tools to the area oil fields. Many of his deliveries were made by wagon. Life was raw in the oil patch and Mahoney was rough enough to survive.

His scrappy nature and salty tongue could match any tough oil patch residents. When he found Christ, his life changed so instantly and dramatically that the oil patch was stunned. When he entered the ministry many came to hear him preach — to see if it were really possible for God to make a saint from such rough material. They were convinced! The young church flourished.

In 1945 the church moved from its old location on Roberta Street to the present site on the corner of Alcock and Zimmers. The building faced Zimmers and occupied a space at the back of where the present sanctuary is located.

During the pastorate of Rev. R.G. Sloan, in the early Fifties, the group began construction of the large building which now houses the congregation. The father of Pampa businesswoman Jim McBroom, the Rev. M.C. McBroom of Oklahoma was engaged to oversee the new construction.

The structure was soon completed and occupied by the still growing church. A striking feature of the church interior is the extensive use of light-colored woods throughout.

The oil building, with its quaint little bell-tower removed, was sold and moved across the street. There it saw its last days as a laundromat and was torn down a few years ago.

In the 37-year period from 1928 through 1965, 15 different pastors served the congregation. The present minister, the Rev. Albert Maggard, came in March of 1966 and has remained for over 22 years.

Ministers having served the church include John T. Mahoney, Vance Knowles, S.D. Dodd, Mrs. Margaret Howard, J.M. Lemmon, C.R. Howard, Henry Maxwell, Mrs. Irene Wilson, Luther Reed, Spenser Blake, R.G. Sloan, J.B. Caldwell, G.W. Roachelle, Robert Marsteller, Duane Snyder and Albert Maggard.

Presently nearing completion is a construction project which is adding new rest rooms, a nursery, a kitchen, a large fellowship hall and pastor's study. The new addition almost doubles the size of the church.

Information compiled and submitted by congregation members.

New Life Worship Center to have counseling crusade

New Life Worship Center will host a Creative Counseling Crusade with Dr. Tommy Beard of Denver, Colo., this Sunday through Wednesday.

Dr. Beard will speak at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sunday and at 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

Dr. Beard's unique ministry will speak to the real issues of life, according to Pastor John Farina, offering messages that touch the nerve fiber of where people live and addressing answers to problems of depression, anger and fear with a goal of bringing spiritual and emotional wholeness.

"Tommy Beard is a dynamic evangelist bringing Biblical concepts to life's problems," Pastor Farina said.

Farina and congregation extend an invitation and "a warm welcome of fellowship" to the public to attend the services at the New Life Worship Center, 318 N. Cuyler.

MONTREAT, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham, who turned 70 on Nov. 7, says people must "work toward the elimination of these arms that are draining the world of its energy and its strength."

He has just completed a crusade at Hamilton, Ontario, in which he told students at McMaster University:

"We're spending billions and billions on bombs that will never be used, and yet millions of people are on the verge of starvation or are actually starving. We cannot justify that from a Christian point of view."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Lilly Endowment has awarded $3.1 million in grants to strengthen the caliber of ministers and priests in the United States.

The grants, ranging from $175,000 to $355,000 each, went to five theological schools and to offices of five of the largest religious denominations in the country.

Mandela won't be taken back to prison after hospital care

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said it will not send black leader Nelson Mandela back to prison when he completes his hospital stay but will keep him under guard at an unspecified location.

A brief statement on Thursday by Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee did not give any details on when Mandela would leave the hospital, where he would be taken or what restrictions he would face.

The 70-year-old Mandela, head of the African National Congress guerrilla movement, has been recovering from tuberculosis since August at the Constantiaberg Clinic in Cape Town.

Mandela's health has "improved to such an extent that should the improvement continue it will eventually no longer be necessary to care for him in a clinic," Coetsee said.

"When the time arrives he will be transferred to suitable, comfortable and secure living accommodations, where he will be able to receive members of his family more freely and on a continual basis," Coetsee said.

"His family will be informed of the locality in due course," the statement concluded.

Mandela's wife, Winnie, said in a statement issued by family attorney Ismail Ayob that she "attaches no significance to the (government) statement."

"Mr. Mandela still remains a prisoner of the South African government and there is no indication of any imminent release," the statement said.

The government statement suggests authorities are attempting to release Mandela in stages in an effort to temper the public's reaction to the country's best known black leader.

The government has expressed concern that Mandela's release could reignite black political demonstrations that have largely been quieted under the 29-month-old state of emergency.

Earlier Thursday, Pat Robertson, a television preacher and former U.S. presidential candidate, told reporters he had discussed Mandela during an hour-long meeting with President P.W. Botha at government headquarters in Pretoria.

Robertson said the president told him that Mandela will not be returned to prison, but would be placed in custody to protect him from assassination.

Mandela has been jailed since 1962 and is serving a life prison sentence for conspiring with other leaders of the African National Congress to wage an anti-government sabotage campaign.

A prolonged international campaign has sought his release.

Mandela was transferred from Cape Town's Pollsmoor Prison to the state-run Tygerberg Hospital in early August for treatment of tuberculosis. He was moved Aug. 31 to the Constantiaberg Clinic, a private hospital.

Students demand Chun's arrest

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Radical students and Buddhist monks demanding the arrest of former President Chun Doo-hwan hurled hundreds of firebombs today at riot police in street clashes after authorities blocked a protest march.

About 2,000 students from 10 Seoul colleges battled police around Dongguk University in eastern Seoul despite freezing temperatures. Students stormed out of the college's gates to bombard troops with rocks and firebombs that exploded in showers of blazing gasoline.

"Arrest Chun Doo-hwan," protesters shouted. "Yankee go home."

Several thousand riot police in green combat fatigues and black visored helmets ringed the campus to stop students breaking through. Troopers fired volleys of choking tear gas and hurled back rocks and other missiles.

Police had no immediate word on casualties or arrests.

Student leaders at an earlier campus rally denounced Chun's apology on Wednesday for corruption and human rights abuses. Leaders demanded the former president be arrested and prosecuted for numerous alleged crimes.

Protesters also denounced President Roh Tae-woo and demanded he also be punished. Speakers told the cheering crowd that Roh was guilty of corruption and was trying to protect Chun.

Protesters burned an effigy of Roh before marching out with banners and flags to try and parade through the city. "Punish Roh Tae-woo," protesters chanted.

Buddhist monks armed with firebombs joined the students in the fighting. Chun has taken refuge in a remote Buddhist monastery on the east coast, and the monks claimed his presence there was a desecration of a holy place.

"Drive out Chun from our sacred temple," the monks chanted.

Chun, in a nationally televised speech Wednesday, apologized for abuses under his seven-year authoritarian rule. Chun said he was surrendering his personal property and going into internal exile.

Chun has denied any personal corruption, but some of his relatives and associates have been convicted of or charged with embezzlement and other offenses.

Dissident groups refused to accept the apology as sufficient and said Chun must be prosecuted. The main opposition parties have also said further explanation is necessary.

Roh, a former close associate of Chun, is scheduled to make a statement Saturday in which he may pardon the former president or at least ask for public mercy. The announcement probably would trigger further outbursts from radicals and other opposition groups.

Sales of Santa's home plans to help runaway children

Early this month, just in time for their busy season, Santa and Mrs. Claus moved into this spacious new home. In recent years their old home at the North Pole had grown far too small to handle the increasingly huge volume of mail. The elves also needed more space for making and storing toys.

Several rarely-used construction materials have been adapted for incorporation into the building's exterior. The fudgerock chimneys, lollipop fringed rooftop and gumdrop exterior walls are particularly unique.

Through the candy cane arched, just inside the front door, a year-round Christmas tree in the circular reception atrium extends up through both stories. Passageways leading off of this central hub provide easy access to all other areas of the house. A staircase curves up the right side to the Claus' private living space. The kitchen, designed with Santa's sweet tooth in mind, features an ice cream freezer, candy pantry and cookie jar cupboard. Thermal-paned windows brighten the snack nook, while the woodstove radiates toasty warmth. The snack and dining tables are specially designed to accommodate Santa's belly.

With its soft couches, easy chairs and big screen television, the lounging area provides a comfortable environment for taking a break from the day's work. On long winter nights, roaring fires in the massive stone fireplace invite storytelling while warding off winter's chills.

Clusters of cubicles in the elves' quarters simulate their normal forest habitat. Since elves vary in their personal preferences for privacy or company in their sleeping arrangements, several sizes are available. Toilets and lavatories are scaled down to fit their smaller-than-average body builds.

With its numerous long workbenches, the adjacent workroom provides plenty of space for handcrafting hundreds of toys at once.

Easy access to the full basement, provided by the nearby stairway, makes it a natural for the year-round toy storage. The work area is also conveniently close to the mailroom where Santa reads the letters from all the good little girls and boys and decides which gifts he'll ask the elves to make.

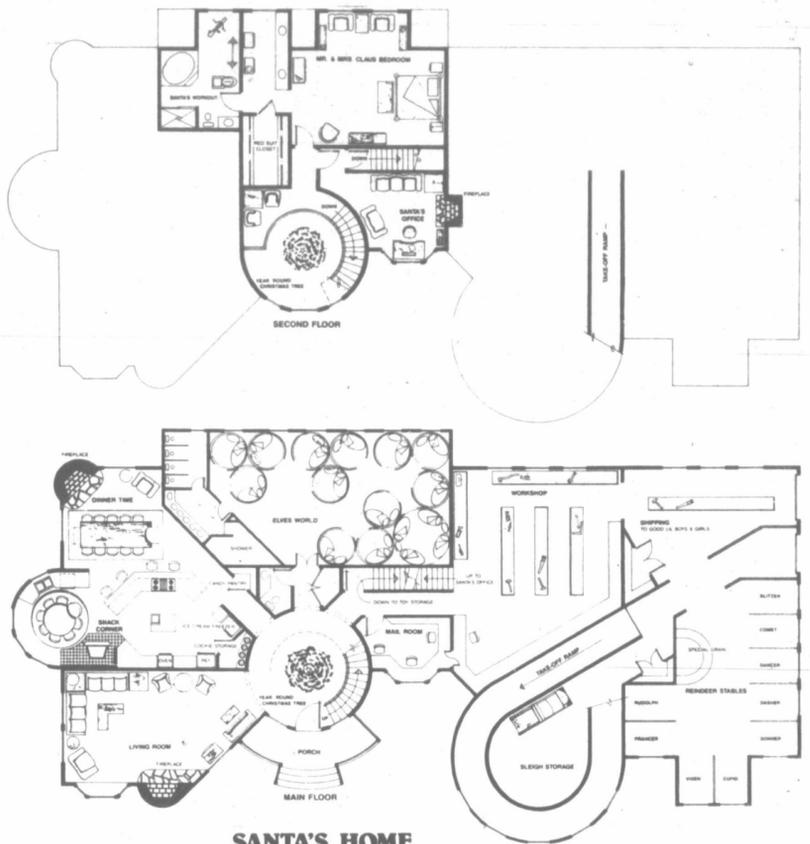

Shipping and receiving is right next door. Supplies arrive here, and it is here Santa's bag is packed on Christmas Eve. A ramp spiraling up from the ground floor stable to the rooftop runway enables Santa to build up enough speed to take off with his reindeer and sleigh.

Upstairs in the Claus' personal living area, one large closet is devoted exclusively to red suit storage. Santa recognizes that he has a weight problem, partly from eating all the cookies and milk children leave him on Christmas Eve. A fitness room, complete with a scale, weights and exercise bicycle helps him stay on top of it.

For an activity packet of all materials and instructions needed to make the house, including an artist's conception, floor plans, exterior views, and sheet of cut-out stick-on furnishings, send a check for $6 to Santa's Home, P.O. Box 2307, Eugene, Ore. 97402. The 15" X 22" sheets are suitable for coloring and can be used as wall decorations.

Three dollars of each order will go to the National Network of Runaway and Youth Services, to help children who have no homes. Delivery before Christmas cannot be guaranteed for orders placed after Dec. 5.

Cemetery listings, Dallas genealogy columns published

Margaret Ann Thetford, columnist for The Dallas Morning News, has published a book of her 1981 "Family Tree" columns. The column was published biweekly and the book includes an index of approximately 4,000 names relating to the 400 queries published. If you have Texas ancestors, this might be a place to search for your lineage.

The book costs $10 and can be purchased from the author: Margaret Ann Thetford, 3725 Mockingbird Lane, Dallas, 75205-2124.

Are you researching in Red River County? Many Georgia and Alabama families moved into that area after the Civil War, and while some moved further west, many planted "roots."

If you have ancestors in that area, you may find their death dates and place of burial in one of the four volumes of cemetery listings. These books are just the beginning of the county listings and can be purchased for $18.50 (add $1.50 postage for each book) from: Bertha L. Gable, 506 North Walnut, Clarksville, 75426.

Holiday mail call lifts spirits of service people overseas

DEAR READERS: Can you believe it's time for Operation Dear Abby IV? Once again, we will join forces with the America Remembers campaign, whose national chairman is still Donald P. Grimes.

Last year, Operation Dear Abby III sent an estimated 3 million pieces of mail to our servicemen and women stationed in Korea, Japan, the Philippines, Iceland and Europe, as well as those serving in the Mediterranean and Indian Ocean. Tons of letters and packages were dropped from helicopters to aircraft carriers to cheer those who had been deployed for weeks — some for months.

I received hundreds of heartwarming pictures of men and women in uniform — jubilant as they eagerly sorted through thousands of letters, searching for some from their home states.

Veterans of previous wars wrote to give our young servicemen and women a lift because they remember how rough it was to be away from home for the holidays.

Romances blossomed — and some weddings took place following pen-pal relationships.

This year, more than 100,000 troops will participate in the program. Please join me in this campaign to let them know that you love and appreciate them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) When selecting your activities today try to plan something with active friends who don't take themselves or life too seriously. Involvements with negative types could spoil your day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Lady Luck tends to favor you today in situations of a material nature. Be alert for an opportunity that could help feather your nest.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Leadership, judgment and initiative are likely to be your dominant qualities today. Success in furthering your personal interests can be achieved if you use your gifts wisely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Developments out of your control could work to your advantage today in bolstering your career or financial position. Move swiftly if opportunity knocks.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your enthusiasm is contagious today and you can easily arouse an interest in others for what interests you. This is why partnership arrangements are likely to be your strong suit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If your objectives are clearly defined today, your chances for achieving them will be better than usual. The key to today's success is being single-minded.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In order to perform at your best today, you need stimulating and risky involvements. Your judgment in challenging ventures should be quite good.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A matter that has been hanging fire can be finalized to your satisfaction today if you're prepared to dedicate energies and efforts to doing it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Although you could do well operating on your own today, you are likely to be even more effective in situations involving partners. Be a team player.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have the faculty for bringing things to a successful conclusion today that should please you and win the admiration of others, especially if you're materially motivated.

Oilers, Vikings post Thanksgiving Day wins

Houston overcomes on-the-road phobia

IRVING (AP) — Soft-spoken Warren Moon shocked the Houston Oilers into action with a rare tongue-lashing.

"They were so amazed at their quarterback that the Oilers overcame their road phobia to beat the Dallas Cowboys 25-17 on Thanksgiving Day.

It was Dallas' ninth consecutive loss and its 11th defeat of the season, tying a club record set in 1960 when the Cowboys went 0-11-1.

The Oilers, 9-4, had four road losses this year. And Moon was sick and tired of them easing up once they left their "House of Pain (Astrodome)."

He gave them a hard chewing out after Dallas jumped to a 7-0 lead and seemed to be on the way to one of the shocking upsets of the NFL season.

"When you get to this time of a year you have to count on something besides the home crowd to fire you up," Moon said.

So Moon took it upon himself to act like the Houston home crowd.

"Moon said, 'I had a few players on my team mad at me for a while. I felt we came out flat and I said so on the field. I don't usually do things like that but I could see us flat and so I said something.'"

"Maybe some of the guys thought it would be like preseason (Houston won 54-10) coming in here but I knew it wouldn't be like that. When you're playing a team that's down and you get off to a good start it gives them too much of a lift. That's when I noticed I had to say something. Dallas played us tough and I knew they would."

The Oilers stayed only a half game behind Cincinnati in the AFC Central division race.

Houston coach Jerry Glanville said, "We ran into a trap today. Dallas was emotionally high. We were flat coming out."

Glanville added, "I thought (Dallas coach) Tom Landry did a hell of a coaching job. You saw a lot of pride out there. They gave us a lot of new looks."

He said Moon awakened the Oilers.

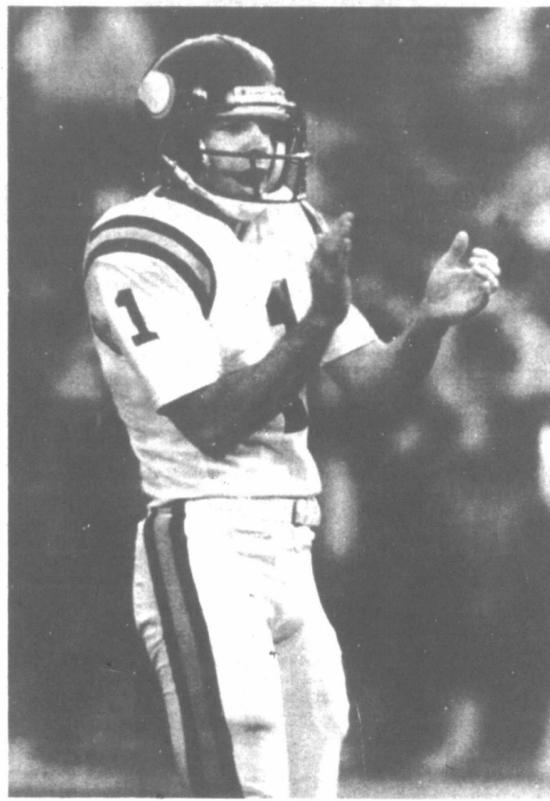

"He was the key, the catalyst," Glanville said. "He makes this football team work."

The Cowboys led 17-10 in the third period after Steve Pelluer's three-yard touchdown run but Moon wouldn't be denied.

Minnesota defense dominates Detroit

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit coach Wayne Fontes didn't know it, but his good buddy Jerry Burns had him in a hole before the opening kickoff.

Once the Thanksgiving Day contest between Detroit and the Minnesota Vikings had begun, Burns quickly filled in the hole and the Vikings buried the Lions 23-0.

Fontes, coaching his second game on an interim basis after the firing of Darryl Rogers, went from player to player during warm-ups, giving hugs and handshakes.

Meanwhile, Burns, a Detroit native, was standing at midfield chatting with Lions owner William Clay Ford, the man who will decide Fontes' future when the season is over.

"Wayne's a good friend," Burns said. "I think he could be a very good coach for the Detroit Lions."

But it became quickly apparent that what separates the Vikings from the Lions is not coaching. Detroit needs horses.

The Lions fell to 1-1 under Fontes and 3-10 for the season.

"One day, hopefully, we'll be that good," Fontes said. "They've got athletes and they're so well-coached."

The Vikings, evoking memories of the defensive line dubbed "The Purple People Eaters," completely dominated the Lions.

The Vikings defense allowed only three first downs, a club record; 60 yards total offense, tying a club record, and intercepted two passes to run their season total to 30, tying another team mark.

One of the interceptions was by Carl Lee, his seventh, making him the NFC leader.

"It was a dominating defensive game, but Detroit is not a very good offensive team and we should be able to dominate them," Burns said. "Their passing game is suspect and the running game never materialized."

Detroit, which had the ball only 15 minutes, 3 seconds, didn't get a first down until late in the third quarter and didn't cross midfield until 2:25 into the fourth quarter.

"We went out and played like girls," Bennie Blades, the Lions' rookie safety, said. "Any time the offense is not playing well, it makes it tough for the defense."

Cowboy fans still have sense of humor

IRVING (AP) — It was bring your own turkey day on Thursday at Texas Stadium — but not without some Dallas Cowboys fans undoubtedly suggesting a few might be suited up for the game.

Still, many of the once-proud Dallas fans who showed up early to munch their Thanksgiving turkey dinners in a festive pre-game tailgate party said they have managed to keep a sense of humor about the team's miserable season.

The Cowboys lost their ninth straight game to drop to 2-11 and the only top spot they are competing for anymore seems to be the league's top draft choice.

Some die-hard Cowboy fans have improvised, and even have taken financial advantage of the situation.

"I've been a Cowboys fan from the beginning," said a Dallas businessman, who asked not to be identified by name because he said he feared a tax audit. "But last week I took Cincinnati, the week before I took Minnesota, and I took Houston today."

Standing next to his Chevy van, he wiped gravy from his paper plate with a biscuit and said: "I'm thankful for the Cowboys."

Marcia Wegner of Hurst was philosophical as she shared food with 23 others at a 12-foot buffet table loaded with three turkeys, a ham, gravy, stuffing, scalloped corn, pies and candles.

"It's not whether you win or lose," she said. "What matters is that the dressing is hot."

American Airlines pilot Jim Osborne had a season sign taped to the bottom of his table. It read: "Happy Thanksgiving: Welcome To Plymouth Rock Bottom."

Jack Deaton, a retired oilman from Fort Worth, told the Dallas Times Herald that he has watched his team fall faster than the price of West Texas crude. Yet he took comfort Thursday in a turkey and champagne dinner party with 13 other members of the "Gate 7 Club" — a 16-year-old group united by football and a love of the paved outdoors.

"We're thankful," said Deaton. "We're thankful that the Cowboys would come and play, as sorry as they are."

Robert Brown, a Dallas school administrator, said he preferred to find other reasons to give thanks.

"I'm thankful for my wife. I'm thankful for Jack Daniels," he said, then went back to enjoying a meal served up from the trunk of a friend's car.

Aggies hold off Longhorn rally

By JACK KEEVER
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas, frustrated for the fifth year in a row by Texas A&M, 28-24, can only look to next season. A&M, basking in its 500th college football victory, will seek No. 501 next Thursday against Alabama.

A&M, 7-4, but ineligible for bowl play because of NCAA probation, led 28-0 Thursday before the underdog Longhorns, 4-7, rallied in front of a national television audience and sellout home crowd of 77,809.

The Southwest Conference loss ended Texas' worst football season since 1956 when it went 1-9.

"The seniors on this team have gone through so much this season with all of the adversity and they have done nothing but fight back," said

A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill.

Sherrill himself has been at the center of controversy as the Dallas Morning News quoted a former player as saying Sherrill had paid him $4,400 in "hush money" during an NCAA investigation of the A&M football program.

The player later recanted the story, but Sherrill has refused to give his version, saying he will wait until after the season.

A&M running back Darren Lewis, a 210-pound sophomore, ran 38 times for a career-high 212 yards and a 15-yard touchdown for the favored Aggies.

Lewis also set up fullback Robert Wilson's 1-yard touchdown with a 36-yard run.

All-American linebacker John Roper ran unblocked field goal 48 yards for a 21-0 A&M lead, and sub quarterback Chris Osgood's 8-yard scoring run raised the score to 28-0 in the second quarter.

Texas redshirt freshman Mark Murdock brought screaming Texas fans to their feet with scoring tosses of 9 yards to Kerry Cash in the second quarter, 14 yards to Stephen Clark and 76 yards to Tony Jones in the second half.

"It was all on guts and effort tonight," said Texas Coach David Williams, whose team lost four games this season by a total of 13 points.

A fumbled pitchout on third-and-2 after Texas had reached the A&M 34 spoiled Texas' chance for a possible go-ahead touchdown.

Texas sub quarterback Donovan Forbes tossed the ball to tailback Eric Metcalf, who said he slipped, and the ball bounced to the A&M 49, where A&M recovered.

"We practiced it all week—it's unfortunate it turned out that way," said Metcalf, among the nation's leaders in all-purpose yardage.

"The momentum was ours the whole second half. Time just ran out," said Texas linebacker Britt Hager, who was credited with 20 tackles.

Lewis' ninth consecutive game of over 100 yards rushing is one short of the SWC record by 1977 Texas Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell.

"He (Lewis) made a lot of yards and he earned them all," McWilliams said.

Pampa girls at PD

Pampa visits Palo Duro in high school girls' basketball action tonight.

The Lady Harvesters are off to a 2-0 start. Palo Duro is 3-2. Gametime is 7:45 p.m.

The Pampa girls begin tournament play next week in the Hays City Shootout at Hays City, Kans.

DeLeon overcomes adversity to reach football playoffs

When undefeated DeLeon takes on the Quanah Indians for the Region I championship tonight in Abilene, it again proves the theorem that the ability to overcome adversity builds strength. For surely, the Bearcats have done that in the past 12 months.

Coach Grady West's ballclub entered the 1987 season excited. With 14 starters returning, pre-season pollsters had them ranked No. 13 in the state and their goober-grabber fans excited. But then things started going awry.

In the first pre-season scrimmage the starting flanker was severely injured. Hit as he ran a pass-pattern, Todd Whitehead sustained a broken neck, throwing a huge black cloud over the team and community. Before the district season even got underway, three more starters went out with knee injuries, each of which necessitated surgery. But the kids pulled together and finished second to Eastland, to earn the runner-up spot in District 13-2A. The Bearcats edged Italy, 13-12 in bi-district before being blown out by Mart, 24-7, in the Area Championship contest. Two days after that hurt, all-state wide receiver Jeff Wilcoxson was killed in a car accident. A lot of mental mending had to be performed by school officials, coaches and parents as the teenagers tried to understand about life and its exhilarating highs and devastating lows.

With eight returning lettermen, the forecasters again made DeLeon an early favorite, selecting them No. 4 in the state. And the kids haven't let them down. They've rebounded from that unhappy 9-3 season a year ago to ring up a dozen wins so far. The inner strength gained from the seemingly unending string of sorrows last season has been a major power in that success. It would only be right that the 2A crown go to this brave team from the peanut-growing country three weeks from now.

And no one would be happier than longtime, avid Pampa Harvester fan Henry Sharp, now living back home in DeLeon. For many, many years he followed the Harvesters in all sports... football, basketball, track and baseball. He wasn't just at home games; he seldom missed a day of practice or a road game, whether it was in Odessa, Hobbs, Lubbock, wherever. You can be certain there's been an awfully lot of chewing and spitting, talking and blowing going on in DeLeon this week. And Henry, along with golfing brother Dr. Terrell Sharp, a director of the Tri-State Golf Association, and son Buddy, former Harvester all-round athlete and now coach at Cisco, are right in the middle of it.

success is also proof there is life after a college coaching career. Indians' coach Jim Wood compiled a 21-30-1 record in five seasons at New Mexico State before repairing to high school... DeLeon is one of 30 undefeated teams still playing, and in five games this weekend unbeaten go head-to-head.

Thirty percent of the teams still playing (24 of 80) were district runners-up, the same percentage as last week. Only two defending champions remain, West Orange-Stark and Lorena. Plano, ousted last week, had lost six players to no pass-no play... Four teams have advanced (or been ousted, depending on your outlook) by the penetration rule following ties. One to advance was Bremond, held to a scoreless tie by Burkeville last Saturday in a Class A contest... Losing his first game of the season last week to Sugarland, 31-year coach Luther Booker announced his retirement. He compiled a 168-37-6 record, the last seventeen years at Houston Yates that included a state crown... The best statewide schoolboy score roundup is on KRLD, 1080 am, Dallas, at 11:06 pm Friday and Saturday nights... Congratulations to the Dumas Demonettes, volleyball state champions from District 1-4A... Hurricane Gilbert, which brought postponement of the Alabama-Texas A&M game until next weekend, shortened schedules for many southwest Texas schoolboy teams, forced to cancel games with no makeup dates available, meaning the state champions could win the title by playing only 14 or 15 games rather than the usual 16... "We had more than 40,000 there," enthused Albie Owens, assistant coach of the No. 1 ranked Sugar Land Willowridge Eagles as he talked about the unexpectedly easy 35-13 triumph over previously undefeated Yates last weekend. The former Mercury Morris-Duane Thomas teammate at West Texas State was concerned that easy win might hurt in tonight's regional championship game at the Astrodome against Deer Park (9-1)... Of the 16 5A teams entering regional play tonight, four never appeared on the AP or Harris weekly schoolboy ratings, nine never appearing on the AP list at all. So much for rankings... Former PHS assistant principal Billy Cooper served as head man at Manor HS (12-0 and facing unbeaten Refugio tonight) for many years... Texas Stadium and the Dome will host three games apiece this weekend, with one each in Rice, Texas Tech, Baylor and Texas A&M facilities... You've got to believe this is truly Willowridge' year to win the 5A crown. The school phone number is 437-1988!!

Douglas leads Syracuse into NIT finals

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — Bob Knight hadn't seen Sherman Douglas since the Syracuse point guard was a sophomore in the 1987 NCAA Tournament championship game.

Today, Douglas is the prime mover of the speedy Syracuse offense that hammered Knight's Indiana Hoosiers to reach tonight's final of the Big Apple National Invitation Tournament against No. 13 Missouri.

"I hadn't seen Douglas since we played them two years ago," Knight said after sixth-ranked Syracuse crushed No. 20 Indiana 102-78 Wednesday night. "He's a tremendously improved player. He's not an ordinary ball-handler, he handles the ball with a purpose. There's a purpose to everything he does."

Missouri defeated fifth-ranked North Carolina 91-81 in the other semifinal.

"Missouri runs as well as we do and they take good shots," Douglas said. "We always try to run and play hard. Friday will be an up-tempo game because Missouri likes to run like us."

Douglas had eight points and 14 assists against Indiana and his favorite target was forward Steve Thompson, who had 23 points in leading three other starters in double figures.

"We have to play with the same intensity against Missouri that we did against Indiana," said Thompson, who scored 12 points in the first seven minutes of the second half as Syracuse continued to pile up the points after leading 54-30 at halftime. "We have to get the rebounds, get the ball to Sherman and fill the wings."

The Orangemen shot 70.6 percent from the field in the first half and 63 percent overall against Indiana. It was the most points the Hoosiers have allowed in Knight's 18 years at Indiana, surpassing by one Iowa's total in a 1987 game.

Missouri was only a bit less impressive against a more formidable opponent, taking 16-point leads in the second half against North Carolina en route to Norm Stewart's 500th victory as a head coach.

Missouri also had good balance against North Carolina, with all five starters in double figures. Byron Irvin had 21 points, Doug Smith 16, Lee Coward 15 and Gary Leonard and Mike Sanbothe 12, each.

"Passing is crucial to our offense," Irvin said. "We play two men inside and three outside and our passing is great. A lot of people thought we'd not be as good this year with Derrick Chievous gone, but Coach Stewart has done a good job for us."

Chievous is now a key reserve for the Houston Rockets of the NBA.

"Last year they relied on Chievous and now they go to everybody the way we do," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said of Missouri.

National spotlight on Irish, Trojans

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

A lot of eyes will be on Saturday's game at Los Angeles between No. 1 Notre Dame and No. 2 Southern Cal — including those of other contenders for college football's national championship.

"No doubt a lot of people will be pulling against us in this game," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "Anybody with hopes of winning the national championship is pulling against us — except West Virginia. My home state (Holtz is from Follansbee, W.Va.) is pulling for us."

Fourth-ranked West Virginia, which completed an 11-0 regular season a week ago, is rooting for Notre Dame to dispose of Southern Cal. Then the Mountaineers hope they can take care of Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl.

Coach Jimmy Johnson of third-ranked Miami's defending national champions makes no secret of his rooting interest. He would like to see Southern Cal beat Notre Dame and then lose to No. 11 Michigan in the Rose Bowl while Notre Dame beats West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl.

Of course, Johnson won't really care what happens if Miami doesn't beat No. 8 Arkansas on Saturday, Brigham Young next week and then No. 6 Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, site of all the Hurricanes' remaining games.

Fifth-ranked Florida State, which entertains Florida on Saturday night, also is rooting for Southern Cal. The Seminoles will meet Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl.

The teams ranked ninth through 13th — UCLA, Oklahoma, Michigan, Oklahoma State and Clemson — are idle. Houston, No. 14, entertains winless Rice, No. 16 LSU plays host to Tulane in a night game and Georgia Tech visits No. 20 Georgia. Also idle are No. 15 Wyoming, No. 18 Washington State and No. 19 Syracuse.

Miami and Arkansas have met only once, and Arkansas would just as soon forget it.

Miami destroyed the Razorbacks 51-7 last year, a nice homecoming for Johnson, an Arkansas grad.

The Hurricanes were just as impressive in trouncing LSU 44-3 last week and Johnson is concerned about a letdown.

"Without question, there will be a tendency for our team to have a letdown," he said. "I am realistic in thinking this team will be somewhat complacent in preparing for Arkansas. There's no way I can expect our team to be as intense as they were a week ago."

In addition, at least a half-dozen key Miami players are banged up.

Southern Cal coach Larry Smith says the meeting with Notre Dame "promises to be one of the great games of all time."

That remains to be seen, but both teams are 10-0, the first time these traditional powers have brought perfect records into their annual meeting. It also is the first time they will be in a No. 1-No. 2 showdown against each other. The winner, of course, will be one step away from the national championship.

"USC may be the best football team in the country," Holtz said. "They don't appear to have a weakness, no matter how hard you try to find one."

"This game is what college football is all about. It should be a fun week for everyone involved. All I want is for us to play as well as we can play and see what happens. We've been ready to play every week except one this year (a 22-7 struggle against Navy four weeks ago), and I'll be surprised if we aren't ready to play this time."

Smith thinks USC also will be ready, although the Trojans are coming off an emotional 31-22 victory over UCLA for the Pac-10 title and a berth in the Rose Bowl.

"When you're ranked number one in the country, you obviously are a great team, and Notre Dame certainly is," Smith said. "They have outstanding personnel on both sides of the ball, they're very physical and have speed at all the right spots. This will be a tremendous challenge."

PMS cagers sweep Borger

Pampa freshmen and Middle School teams made a clean sweep of Borger in basketball action last Monday night.

The Pampa Gold freshmen romped over Borger White, 69-29. Leading scorers for the Gold were Ryan Erwin with 21 points, Alberto Carrillo with 14, Donnie Medley with 11 and Todd McCavitt with 10.

Shawn Beneter had 13 points to lead Borger's White.

The Pampa Green freshmen defeated Borger Red, 60-71. Chad Augustine was tops for Pampa with 21 points, followed by Sammy Laury with 18 and Jeff Young with 15.

Leroy Jones scored a game-leading 25 points for Borger, while teammate Lee Kistler added 12.

The freshmen will host Dumas on Monday, Nov. 28.

Pampa's Eighth Grade Red dominated Borger's Red, 56-33, to improve to 2-0 on the season. Chris Poole led all scorers with 18 points, while Duane Nickleberry added 15.

The Eighth Grade Blue of Pampa slipped by Borger White, 29-24. Kurt West scored eight points to lead Pampa and Danny Hendricks added five points. The win gives the Blue a 2-0 record.

The eighth-grade teams will also host Dumas Monday night at the PMS gym beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Pampa's Seventh-Grade Blue pulled out a 31-27 victory over Borger White. Gavin Porter was tops for Pampa with 11 points, followed by Tony Cavalier with seven.

The Seventh-Grade Red of Pampa raced past Borger Red, 46-13. Greg McDaniel paced Pampa with 11 points, while Shelby Landers and David Potter added eight points apiece.

Both of Pampa's seventh-grade teams are 2-0.

Division I-AA playoffs begin

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — When Marshall takes the field Saturday in an attempt to stop the University of North Texas in the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs, it will have a lot of places to start.

North Texas, 8-3, likes to use four wide receivers, usually three on one side, and keeps a running back behind the quarterback just to keep people honest, according to Marshall assistant head coach Don Poluszek.

"They call the majority of their plays at the line. They check your alignment and predetermine what they do. If you're not ready up front, they utilize the full-back," Poluszek said.

North Texas, the third-place finisher in the Southland Conference, is seeded 10th in the Division I-AA playoffs. Marshall, 10-1 and the Southern Conference co-champion, is seeded sixth and seeking to return to the title game in Pocatello, Idaho.

Southland member Northeast Louisiana defeated Marshall 43-42 in last year's championship game. If Marshall is ready up front on defense Saturday, prepare to see the ball in the air. North Texas sophomore quarterback, Scott Davis, has completed 158 of 270 passes for 2,409 yards. Davis also has rushed for 439 yards and Darin Collins has carried for 412.

"They have a lot of weapons. Ask Texas. They had to hold on to win," Poluszek said. The Mean Green Eagles lost to Division I Texas 27-24 but defeated Division I teams Texas Tech and Rice.

That, of course, is not to say that Marshall doesn't have offensive weapons of its own. Junior quarterback John Gregory is 185-of-327 passing for 2,687 yards — most of that to split end Mike Barber and tight end Sean Doctor, both All-Americans last year.

"Everybody at Northeast Louisiana has said good things about Marshall. I know they have a good group of athletes and a good group of players," said Bob Finklea, North Texas defensive coordinator.
