City Commission awards golf course, vehicle bids

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners awarded bids on golf course equipment and police vehicles during their Tuesday night meeting at City Hall.

However, one Pampa business lost out on a $56,939.60 bid for police cars because it failed to sign its bid.

City administrators opened bids from Culberson Stowers and Pampa Ford, Lincoln, Mercury on four new police cars for the city Monday afternoon.

According to Acting City Manager Frank Smith, Pampa Ford had the low bid by about $400. However, the bid was not signed.

During the commission meeting Tuesday it was agreed that forced the city to either accept Culberson Stowers' bid or rebid the vehicles.

"We've rejected other bids in the past because they did not sign the bid sheet. I don't see that we have any other choice but to reject them," said Commissioner Gary Sutherland.

With that, commissioners voted unanimously to accept a bid of $57,367.08 for four Chevrolet Caprices from Culberson Stowers.

Commissioners awarded bids to several area firms for golf course equipment including Crossman Implement, $29,160 for two tractors and attachments; Jacobson Turf, $4,435 for a sprayer; Watson Distributing, $14,512 for one front-mount mower and one greens aerator; and Goldthwaites of Texas, $40,076.60 for two types of mowers, turf maintenance truck, tow-type top dresser and a pull behind.

On four of the items Watson Distributing had the low bid but did not meet city specifications and was not awarded the bid.

In other action, commissioners followed the lead of Mayor David McDaniel and deferred action on a contract with the city of Lubbock to sell extra water from Lake Meredith that Pampa does not use.

Under the contract Pampa would receive $100,000 annually for selling water to Lubbock for the next five years. The contract was instigated at the request of city commissioners several months ago as a way to raise additional revenue for the city.

However, during the Tuesday work session, prior to the commission meeting, McDaniel said he was concerned about proceeding without being personally assured that incoming City Manager Jack Chaney approved of the transaction.

"I don't know that (Chaney) has had the opportunity to look at this and see it's a good deal. I'm not

Candidates for city and school posts can file starting Feb. 20

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Filing for school board or city commission elections will open on Monday, Feb. 20.

Three positions are up for re-election on the Pampa City Commission, including mayor, commissioner Ward 1 and commissioner Ward 2. David McDaniel, Ray Hupp and Joe Reed are the respective incumbents in those positions.

Two positions on the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees are up for re-election. They are Place 6 and Place 7, which are currently held by Jim Duggan and Sherry McCavit respectively.

Dr. Harry Griffith, Pampa superintendent of schools, said anyone wishing to file to run for school board should come to the school business office in Carver Center, 321 W. Albert.

Jerry Haralson, district business manager, said the person should have a campaign treasurer named prior to filing. Deadline for filing is March 22.

To file for city elections, persons interested should see City Secretary Phyllis Jeffers between Feb. 20 and March 22 as well.

There is no cost to file in either election.

Voting for the five positions will be held in separate city and school elections on Saturday, May 6.

Anyone who lives in Ward 1 or 2 and is at least 18 can file to run for those city commission positions. Anyone in Pampa over 18 is eligible to run for mayor.

In the school board elections, all places are open to anyone over the age of 18 who is not an employee of the Pampa Independent School District.

School staff members may run for the position, Griffith said, but by state law would have to resign their positions with the district to serve on the board.

Spouses of district employees are eligible to run if their husband or wife has been an employee of the district for at least six months, according to state law.

"It's probably one of the most important positions in our community. The education of our children is our most important function," Griffith said of serving on the school board.

Anyone filing for school board or City Commission may bring a picture of themselves, a biography and a statement of why they are running for the position to The Pampa News for future news stories on the races.

Audit: City in good financial shape

A report on the 1987-1988 comprehensive Pampa city audit reveals that the city is in good financial shape and has made good investments, according to a member of the auditing firm.

Marylin Ault, a certified public accountant with H.V. Robertson and Co., said the audit revealed no problems with city finances and indicated the city was stronger than many.

"We found the city's finances are sound. There are adequate funds to cover all commitments. Water, sewer and solid waste operated on a break-even basis so that rate setting has been appropriate," Ault said.

During a work session with commissioners prior to their meeting Tuesday night, she said that while taxes remained basically the same in the 1987-1988 fiscal year, tax revenues were up appreciably.

"What that indicates is that delinquent collections were good," she said.

The city's income statement indicated tax revenues went from $4.3 million in 1987 to $4.7 million in 1988. That contributed in part to the city budget deficit falling from $789,652 to $298,466.

"Sales taxes were up as well," Ault said. "That's an indication the economy is up."

She commended city officials for responsible investments that have kept Pampa on solid financial footing.

"The city's investments are all there and safe. The city is not engaged in any risky investments. It's been very conservative and safe," she said.

During the city commission meeting, commissioners accepted the budget audit report.

Up With People to show Pampa it's 'Time for the Music'

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

For the first time in four years, Up With People is returning to Pampa March 9 to present an all new show, Time for the Music.

Approximately 80 Pampa families are needed to house Up With People's international cast of 160 March 6-10.

The Pampa News and KGRO-KOMX radio is jointly sponsoring the local performance of Up With People, opening at 7:30 p.m. March 9 in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

A promotion team of three members of the cast have already arrived in Pampa to make pre-performance arrangements and have set up office in the newspaper office.

Promotion representatives are Ann Peters, 23, of Lakeland, Fla., who is staying with the John and Marcie Welborne family; Delia Regnier, 18, of Munich, West Germany, the guest of Tommy and Helen Burns; and Carla Adams-Seater, 22, of Brandon, Manitoba, Canada, staying with Greg and Lori Wilson.

Peters said at least 70 to 80 host families will be needed to provide homes for the cast members when they arrive. A group of 50 will arrive March 5, she said, and the remainder of the cast will come to Pampa on March 6.

All host families receive two complimentary tickets to the Up With People show, Peters said. Hosts will be asked to provide a minimal amount of transportation, breakfasts and dinner the night the cast members arrive, she said.

Anyone wishing to host Up With People cast members may contact the promotion representatives by calling The Pampa News at 669-2525.

Up With People's Time for the Music presentation is described as a powerful, contemporary musical featuring the talents of a multi-national cast performed in Up With People's well-known energetic and enthusiastic style that inevitably spreads to the audience.

In the first hour, the audience is taken on a world tour featuring popular and traditional songs, dances and costumes from various parts of the world, including Africa, China and the Soviet Union.

Also included is a re-creation of a turn-of-the-century, deep South revival meeting featuring gospel music from the Academy Award winning movie, The Color Purple.

Children celebrating birthdays are in for a special surprise when the cast invites them on a stage transformed into a circus big top complete with international clowns and magic tricks, culminating in an illusion which defies explanation.

In the second hour, cast members go back in time to a 1950s street corner. "Back to Basics" traces the roots of rock 'n' roll through the styles, steps and hit songs of the "doo-wop" era. Included are such favorites as Little Richard's "Tutti Frutti," Elvis Presley's "Jailhouse Rock" and "Shout" by the Isley Brothers.

"Junk Jam" combines gritty street music with everything from hub caps to garbage cans. "Black and White," a funky urban rap, deals with some of the issues young people face today.

Families need to plan ahead to make wills before deaths

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Dr. Wayne Hayenga, guest speaker of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday, took a typically unpalatable topic and turned it into an entertaining, yet informative, after-dinner speech.

People generally prefer to avoid discussing the eventualities of death, but in his speech, "Are You Up-to-Date to Die?" Hayenga managed to make several necessary points in a humorous way.

Hayenga, a lawyer and an economist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, asked, "Do we have our important papers in order in case the ultimate should happen to us? Will we be able to provide for our loved ones?"

He conceded that many people have a simple will "lying around the house" that gives everything to the spouse and if the spouse should die, that it be split between the children.

"Or if you don't get around writing one for yourself, that's OK," he said. "The state legislature has already written one for you ... Who's going to get your goodies?"

Hayenga explained that there are four ways to pass property after someone dies. "What you want to find is the cheapest, easiest, most beneficial way," he said.

First, a person can pass property by contract, a life insurance policy, for example. Other possibilities are retirement benefits or annuities, he said. Second, by operation of law. A person can go to a bank and sign a signature card on an account that gives joint tenancy by right of survivorship. There's no transition if one of the parties dies; the other can continue to make transactions as usual.

"That is so easy and so dangerous," Hayenga warned. "You have to die first before (your spouse) gets the property."

"What if I get Alzheimer's? Who's going to take care of my business? That scares me to death. What if they get the wrong card or put the X on the wrong box?"

Hayenga told of his mother who uses the joint tenancy by right of survivorship method. She remembered that that was what her mother did. She was the only daughter. When her mother died, she took over her affairs without a hitch.

But Hayenga has a brother, who has more hair and is better looking. What if, he asked, his mother decided to come visit Hayenga's family in College Station in March? What if, when he was bringing her home from the airport in Houston, they had a terrible accident? His brother was killed instantly and his mother died several days later in the hospital.

Most people want their property divided equally between their children, he said. But since his mother used the right of survivorship method, his brother got his full share. However, the brother was dead. Therefore, the property that would have gone to him is handled in his mother's estate and divided equally between his brother and his children. Hayenga's children end up getting half what they might have otherwise.

"It may frustrate the intent," he said. Third, property can be passed through a trust. "In theory a trust is a simple document," Hayen-ga explained. "There is one person who has property and wants to pass it on to a loved one, but not directly. The loved one may not have the maturity to handle it. A trust gives legal title to a trustee to handle the property and see that the loved one is provided for as you want."

Fourth, property can be passed through probate. If a person has a will it will be probated testate. If the person does not have a will, it will be probated intestate.

As an example of problems that can arise with the probate process, Hayenga hypothesized a widow with two children, Joe and Sue.

Say Joe was to be given the farm that had been in the family since the 1890s and Sue was to be given the certificates of deposit and the house.

But the mother had a stroke and the medical bills began to pile. What is used first? The CDs. What next? The house is sold.

Then the mother dies. So Joe gets the farm, Sue gets the house and the CDs.

Shooting spree leaves three dead

LUFKIN (AP) — A Nacogdoches County man was hospitalized today after he allegedly went on a Valentine's Day shooting spree, killing his sister, brother-in-law and a former girlfriend before turning the gun on himself, authorities said.
Richard King, 42, walked into a Lufkin grocery store around 7:20 a.m. Tuesday and dragged his former girlfriend into the parking lot, said Police Chief Sherman Collins.
"We had two officers arrive at the scene just in time to see him shoot her three times with a 30-caliber carbine," Collins said. "Then he turned the gun around and shot himself in the stomach."
Denise Rae Fanel, 24, was pronounced dead at the scene, he said.
King was reported in guarded condition today at Lufkin Memorial Hospital, where authorities said he had regained consciousness.
Relatives in nearby Nacogdoches County, aware of a long-standing dispute between King and his sister, went to her home after hearing a television news report of the Lufkin attack and found her body in a bedroom doorway.

Kay Buford Scott, 38, and her husband, Bill Scott, who turned 42 Tuesday, were both found dead in their home near the Woden community east of Nacogdoches. She had been shot once in the head at point-blank range with a 30-caliber rifle and her husband apparently was shot three times — twice with the rifle and once with a shotgun, authorities said.
Autopsies were scheduled today to determine the exact cause of death, said Lt. Bill Ball of the Nacogdoches County Sheriff's Department.
"For the last year-and-a-half there's been a family squabble between the sister and brother because of some property owned by the family," Ball said. "That's in civil litigation right now from what I understand."
The Nacogdoches County slayings occurred sometime after 4 a.m., just hours before King allegedly turned the weapon on his former girlfriend in the adjoining county. Collins believes King may also have intended one other victim.
"He had a Lufkin telephone book in his car with her new boyfriend's name and number circled in the book and a map with the area of his residence circled," Collins said.
"The boyfriend worked at the same store as she did, and he may have been expecting him to be there," Collins said. "But he was scheduled to come in later and had just dropped her off."

Bands to have concert

Pampa High School and Middle School bands are to present the Nona S. Payne Mid-Winter Concert at 7 p.m. Thursday in M.K. Brown Auditorium.
The yearly event features the Pampa High School Concert and Symphonic Bands directed by Charles Johnson.
Also scheduled to perform will be the Pampa Middle School Patriot Band led by Bruce Collins and the Patriot Concert Band directed by Brent Collier.
Sixth-grade Cadette Band will be directed by Colwell, Collins and Jeff Hogan.

Judge upset with trial delays

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in the Oliver North case says that if the Justice Department is intent on preventing the trial, it should do so now instead of trying to "chop up the case" with constant censorship demands.
U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell on Tuesday rejected a Justice Department bid to suppress evidence which North's lawyers say will show a Reagan administration coverup of secret attempts to help the Nicaraguan Contras.
North's lawyers revealed more of their planned defense on Tuesday, saying that the Reagan administration offered "CIA covert support" to Central American nations if they would help the Contras during a period in which Congress had banned U.S. aid.
The alleged "quid pro quo" added a detail to the scenario outlined earlier this week by North's attorneys, who say Reagan and other top administration officials ordered that the arrangements be kept secret.

The Justice Department is trying to suppress such information, saying disclosures could harm national security. North's lawyers say the information is essential to his defense.
Four of the 12 criminal charges against North involve allegedly misleading Congress in 1985 and 1986 by denying reports of National Security Council efforts on behalf of the Contras. Three other counts say he obstructed Congress, an inquiry by the attorney general and destroyed documents in November 1986 by shredding material that concerned aid to the Contras.
Gesell said Tuesday that he won't let Attorney General Dick Thornburgh "chop up the case" with a series of affidavits barring disclosure of information each time North tried to introduce evidence the government found objectionable.

He noted that Thornburgh could invoke the Classified Information Procedures Act and bar any such disclosures. That, however, could make any trial of North impossible.
"He can act now if he wants," Gesell told Thornburgh deputy Stephen Saltzberg.
Otherwise, Gesell said, decisions on possible challenges to classified information will be left to independent counsel Lawrence Walsh, who is handling the case against North.
Saltzberg had proposed a three-step process for dealing with classified information.
He said the government, through Walsh, would first seek to fashion for the court a summary of facts. Failing that, the prosecution would then seek to censor portions of the material.

trying to jeopardize the contract. I just want to make sure we have the best knowledge from our chief negotiator, the city manager," McDaniel said.
Commissioner Richard Peet pointed out that Smith and Nathan Hopson, director of public works, had been working on the water plan for some time.
"Our best knowledge is right here. I don't see this serving any purpose," Peet said.

During the meeting, commissioners unanimously agreed to call a special meeting next Tuesday at 4 p.m. to discuss the matter further.
McDaniel noted during the commission meeting that his fears over Chaney not being informed about the matter had been dispelled; however, he did not elaborate.
Commissioners also deferred action on appointing a committee to the All-American City application team and an ordinance amending personnel policies of the city regarding employees who receive traffic tickets or who are involved in an accident.

They did approve payment of $334,145 to Simon Ladder Towers Inc. of Ephrata, Pa., for a new aerial ladder truck for the Fire Department.
They also unanimously approved the refund of over $1,000 to Jones Everett Machine Co. for overpaid taxes and the calling of a city election on May 6.

Families

"Guess what's not there?" Hayenga pointed out.
To avoid this problem, Hayenga suggested a clearly written will that is updated regularly to provide for this type of eventuality.
Also to be considered when writing the will is the right choice for executor, guardian for minor children or handicapped adults, and whether or not to assign someone power of attorney.
An executor has three jobs, Hayenga said: to collect the property (the hardest job, he said); to file the appropriate papers with the court and taxing authorities (hire a competent attorney and accountant, he said); and to distribute the property.
When deciding on the executor, Hayenga suggested that one ask oneself, "Who knows more about my business than anybody still alive?"
"The main reason a lot of young folks don't make wills is because they can't agree on who will be guardian," Hayenga said. He said that choice of guardian is best made by the probate court.

Another good question to ask oneself is: "Who would manage my affairs for me if I was in a serious accident?" Hayenga said. He suggested that someone who can be trusted to handle your affairs as you want them to be handled be given "durable power of attorney."
"That means they can do everything you can think of and things that you don't think of... and shall not cease to be in force through your lifetime," he said.
If a matter such as this comes before the court, a judge is obligated to appoint the spouse. "What if my wife is a better mother than a money manager?" Hayenga asked.
In that case, he recommended that prior to any crisis the wife be made guardian of the body and someone else be made guardian of the estate.
First National Bank of Pampa sponsored the luncheon Tuesday with Sirloin Stockade catering the steak meal. The Rev. Gene Allen of Briarwood Church was recipient of the $50 door prize, which he promptly presented to his wife as a Valentine gift.

Hospital mourns deaths, but vows to continue air ambulance

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

TYLER (AP) — As investigators searched the wreckage of a downed medical transport helicopter, Mother Frances Hospital officials today were expecting a replacement aircraft to arrive and keep the air ambulance program going.

The BK-117 twin-engine helicopter of the hospital's Flight for Life program crashed Monday night in rain and fog after striking a high-voltage power line and bursting into flames. A pilot and two nurses aboard were killed.

Dead are pilot Gerald Morgan, 46, of Houston, and nurses Kathryn Lea Ohnheiser, 31, of Haltom City, and Jeanne Lackey, 29, of Lindale, authorities said.

Mother Frances spokeswoman Bobbie Burks said Tuesday afternoon that the hospital had ordered another BK-117 to replace the one that crashed. The new aircraft could arrive as soon as today, she said.

"I like the philosophy," Burks said. "You get thrown off the horse. You get right back on." The new helicopter will be leased from U.S. Jet Aviation of Washington, D.C., the same company that leased the hospital its previous helicopter, which went into service Nov. 29, 1988.

The Flight for Life program had made 700 flights between December 1985 and Nov. 29 without any accidents, Burks said.

The BK-117 had a 150-mile travel radius around Tyler. The majority of people it transported were heart patients, according to Burks.

When the air ambulance went down Monday night in muddy woodlands 1.5 miles south of Interstate 20, it was en route to Pittsburg, Texas, to pick up a cardiac patient.

The patient later was brought to the hospital by ground transportation and was in stable condition Tuesday.

The helicopter team started its flight at 10:14 p.m. Five minutes later, the aircraft crashed after Morgan radioed back to the hospital that he was aborting the mission because of bad weather, authorities said.

Nothing further was heard from the crew, and it was confirmed shortly thereafter that it had gone down.

"We were laying in bed and about 10:18 we heard a helicopter come over and it was real low," said Tina McFarland. She and her husband, Tracy, were believed to be the first to contact authorities. "To me it sounded funny. It sounded different," said McFarland. "A few minutes later — kaboom."

She said after she and her husband heard an explosion they looked out of their window and saw a red glow in the sky. Their home is located about one-quarter mile from the crash site.

Warren V. Wandel, air safety investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board, said his team of six, including a Federal Aviation Administration investigator, probably would remain at the crash site through today.

Trudging through the mud and woods, investigators photographed the wreckage, made diagrams of the site and recovered some of the helicopter's flight instruments.

Wandel said the helicopter was not equipped with a flight recorder as are some other types of aircraft.

Based on his initial investigation, Wandel said, the helicopter apparently struck the power line then hit the ground, causing the fuel cell beneath the aircraft to rupture, sparking a flash fire.

"I think it's safe to say they died instantly," Wandel said of the crew members aboard.

The wreckage was to be removed for storage late today or Thursday, investigators said. Another part of the investigation, which could take six months to a year, involves interviewing hospital officials and piecing together weather data.

Although the helicopter snapped a power line, causing damage to static arms atop three 125-foot-tall utility towers, electrical service was not disrupted, utility officials said.

News of the helicopter accident spread quickly through this East Texas city, as banks and savings and loans set up memorial funds for the victims' families and citizens sent memorial wreaths to the hospital.

Some of the wreaths were placed at the Flight for Life helipad, where lights were left on during the day in honor of the dead team members. Flags at the hospital flew at half-staff.

"The tough thing about this is this is a community. It's not just a hospital," Burks said. "It's just one of those things. You can't ask God questions."

LULAC wants FBI, AG to investigate 'execution'

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO (AP) — The Colorado City police department is trying to cover up a case in which two Anglo officers "summarily executed" a Latino man who one of the officers had a grudge against, the Texas director of LULAC says.

The FBI will investigate the case at the urging of Hispanic activists, said John T. Garcia, head of the League of United Latin American Citizens' Texas chapter.

"These police officers need to be brought to justice," Garcia said Tuesday. "We cannot have this kind of conduct."

The police and some witnesses have told vastly conflicting versions of the May 13 shooting death of Sammy Gomez, 27, in the cotton-farming town between Abilene and Big Spring.

On Feb. 3, the FBI took the unusual step of commenting on a pending investigation when bureau spokesman Charles Steinmertz told the Big Spring Herald that the FBI planned to probe the 9-month-old incident.

"Since this is a sensitive matter with the people in West Texas — as well it should be — and is already public, I can assure you the bureau is taking it extremely seriously," Steinmertz said.

Latino activists in and outside of Colorado City have accused Colorado City officers Billy Ray Williamson and Lt. Pat Taylor of executing Gomez. They have accused the police department of fabricating evidence in a coverup.

Gomez's father, Marcario, has said Williamson had a longstanding grudge against Sammy Gomez because of a police brutality suit filed eight years before the shooting. Williamson was exonerated.

Last May 13, Williamson and Taylor went to arrest Gomez at his grandparents' house on an aggravated sexual assault charge. Colorado City police chief Bobby Sparks said Gomez lunged at the officers with a knife, and Williamson shot Gomez dead in self-defense.

Mitchell County officials wouldn't release the autopsy reports to inquiring reporters, but they finally released the record Nov. 22, more than six months after the shooting. The report said Gomez died from a gunshot wound to the back of the head.

The bullet traveled downward from about halfway up the head and lodged in the right jaw, according to the report. The downward angle of the bullet's travel implies that Gomez was on his knees or lying on the floor when the shot was fired.

"We're convinced this man was summarily executed and these police officers need to be brought to justice," Garcia said.

Gomez also was shot in the front of the left side of his chest and in the back of his left shoulder, according to the autopsy report. The autopsy was performed in Dallas.

Garcia charged that Gomez was unarmed and that police planted a "throwdown knife" at the scene to justify the shooting and cover up any wrongdoing.

Gomez's grandmother, Jessie Gomez, said she never saw a knife before or after the shooting, and a statement by an ambulance attendant who went to the scene makes no mention of a knife.

INS begins processing asylum candidates

HARLINGEN (AP) — Political asylum-seekers in southern Texas beginning today must file their applications at a rural Immigration and Naturalization Service detention center, an official said.

More than 100,000 Central Americans are expected to pass through the area this year, said Omer G. Sewell, INS Harlingen District director.

He said the INS was considering moving from a location on the southern edge of Harlingen, 25 miles north of the border city of Brownsville, even before Harlingen city officials sued last week for health and safety violations.

The applicants will not be locked in the new asylum office at the minimum-security Port Isabel Service Processing Center, but Sewell said detention is being considered as a way to manage the refugees.

"There are a number of alternatives that are being considered, and as Attorney General (Richard) Thornburgh said, detention was one of them," Sewell said.

He said the dispute with Harlingen officials over garbage, human waste and fire code violations at the asylum office speeded up previously made plans to move to the rural INS detention center southeast of the city.

But he said the INS could continue to process hundreds of asylum applicants in town if it chose to. "We want to be good citizens in this community as well," Sewell said.

The city of Harlingen evicted the agency from a former furniture store on the edge of town Friday and chained the doors. The city also obtained a temporary restraining order in state court to prevent the agency from reopening an unsafe and unsanitary facility.

INS officials responded Monday by obtaining a federal restraining order to regain access to the building, where they cut the chains.

Sewell said the INS will continue using that building to process the applications of people seeking amnesty under the 1986 immigration reform law.

Asylum can be granted to immigrants fleeing political or other forms of persecution.

Asylum processing will take place at a building outside the double-fenced detention area, Sewell said. As of Tuesday, 425 undocumented aliens were detained there, most of them pending deportation proceedings.

City Manager Gavino Sotelo called the move a "partial solution." He said the INS needs to detain asylum applicants who otherwise will continue to strain local communities with their need for shelter and assistance.

"They need to address this problem the way they did with refugees from Vietnam, Cuba and Haiti," Sotelo said.

During an influx of Cubans and Haitians in the early 1980s, the government used facilities similar to the detention center in southern Texas, Sewell said.

The center, on approximately 400 acres near the Laguna Atascosa National Wildlife Refuge, also has an immigration court, he said.

"Hopefully we'll get control of the situation and there won't be this large-scale need for processing asylum applicants," Sewell said.

The remote location and prison setting will discourage people from seeking asylum, said Mark Schneider, an attorney with the Harlingen-based Proyecto Libertad legal aid office for Central Americans.

"It's going to be a return to the old days, where people went underground instead of working through the system," said Schneider, one of a group of immigration attorneys who on Jan. 6 sued the INS over a policy that restricted asylum-seekers to southern Texas while their cases for refugee status were under review.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela issued a restraining order Jan. 9 allowing the immigrants to pursue their claims at their intended U.S. destinations, but Vela has said he probably will allow the INS to resume the no-travel policy Monday.

Women's magazines question lady handgun ads

By SUE FAHLGREN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Smith & Wesson is trying to sell a new line of handguns to women, but several leading women's magazines are refusing to carry the gunmaker's advertisements for the petite "LadySmith" .38 revolvers.

"We would not accept that category of advertising," said John de Holl, director of advertising services for Woman's Day magazine in New York. "It would be against the policy of the magazine to run any advertisements for firearms."

Woman's Day is not alone. Smith & Wesson officials say New York-based Conde Nast Publications, including Mademoiselle, Glamour and Self, and Des Moines-based Meredith Group's Better Homes & Gardens all have rejected ads for the LadySmiths.

"We do not accept handgun ads for any of our magazines — even Playboy," said a representative of Conde Nast's West Coast advertising firm, who asked not to be identified.

"Some publications I have approached have turned down the ads," said Michael Shypula, director of advertising and promotions for the Springfield, Mass.-based gunmaker. "I think the bias is against the Smith & Wesson name...since there are no guns in our ads."

Smith & Wesson last month unveiled the new line of four handguns, the LadySmiths, at a trade show in Dallas. The guns — all .38-caliber revolvers — have been scaled down to better fit a woman's hand.

Shypula said advertisements for the guns will focus on public safety. The ads will not feature pictures of the guns, but rather illustrations of women in typical pre-crime situations — stuck on the side of the road with car trouble or hearing a noise in the middle of the night.

Rather than carrying the name of the guns, the ad will have a toll-free 800-number Smith & Wesson is setting up for women to talk to a female gun specialist about purchasing a handgun.

"We're using illustrations," Shypula said. "None of them show anyone in a dangerous situation. A lot of our ads tell women to call the police."

The ad with the woman with car trouble carries the headline: "This is no place to take a walk." The one featuring a startled-looking woman in bed reads: "Things that go 'bump' in the night aren't always your imagination."

"I want to inform women, I don't want to offend women," Shypula said, adding the ads do not specifically advocate buying a gun. "People who want to learn more about it, can pick up the phone and dial the toll-free number to talk to someone about it."

Shypula said the ads will run for about four months, beginning in April issues of these magazines: Country Home, Executive Female, First, Harpers Bazaar, Lady's Home Journal, McCalls, Metropolitan Home, Redbook, Shape, Town & Country, Vanity Fair, Women's Sports and Fitness, Working Mother, Working Woman.

But Andrea Kaplan, spokeswoman for the Working Woman-McCall's Group magazines, said none of the company's three publications, including Working Mother, will be running the ads.

"I think there had been some discussion about them, but our publisher decided not to run the ads," she said.

Barbara Lautmann, spokeswoman for the Washington-based Handgun Control Inc., criticized Smith & Wesson when the LadySmiths were introduced. She said the company and the National Rifle Association have tried to boost sagging handgun sales by presenting women with a fear campaign.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Yugo was driven on a bumpy road

I go, you go, we all go ... to trade in our Yugos. As a result, Global Motors Inc., which distributes to capitalist America the midget car made in Yugoslavia, announced it is filing for bankruptcy. The Yugo's parent company, Zestava, which is run by the Yugoslavian government, says it will keep supplying the cars to the United States, and plans to introduce new models.

But as Car & Driver, Consumer Reports and other magazines have detailed, the Yugo may be the worst car ever sold in America. That's just what you might expect of a flivver built at the Red Flag Works factory owned by the Yugoslav communist government. Socialism by nature ignores the passion for quality that is the essence of capitalism. Under capitalism, if you forget quality and make a bad product, people buy something else, as our Detroit automakers found out in the late 1970s when people shunned Motown lemons for Japanese models.

Moreover, you can only develop quality control adequate for exports by first developing a domestic capitalist market. The Japanese car companies fiercely competed with one another at home for decades before they started shipping to America. The Yugo has never had such competitive discipline.

Still, some Americans bought the Yugos when they were first introduced in August 1985; some 120,000 have been sold. With the cheapest car then offered in America running about $6,000, and prices of many small import and domestic models running well more than $10,000, the Yugo's $3,990 price when introduced was irresistible to many.

The Yugo's troubles spell big problems for Yugoslavia itself. Central planners there staked much of the country's economic future on the Yugo's success. It was supposed to bring in capitalist hard currency that would be used to build new factories and to raise the people's low standard of living. But as the Yugo founders, Yugoslavia's crisis of communism worsens.

Like all other communist countries, Yugoslavia faces further economic decline and potential collapse. It can avoid disaster only by adopting economic, political and religious liberty. Those steps must be taken, but they will be as bumpy as driving a Yugo on a gravel road.

IMMIGRATION

ANOTHER FAULT LINE

Free enterprise has ugly side

WASHINGTON — Over the past eight years, more than $2.6 billion has been spent under the Superfund program to clean up sites of toxic waste, yet only 43 of 1,175 priority sites have been decontaminated. How come?

The problems admittedly are complex, but the Office of Technology Assessment last month pointed an accusing finger at a major contributing cause: Private consultants and engineers have reaped exorbitant profits for work that often is sloppy. This is the ugly face of American free enterprise, and I for one am sick of it.

A century ago, in the era of the robber barons, the nation was revolted by the abuse of financial power. All kinds of reforms were instituted; protective laws were passed; trade associations and chambers of commerce worked hard at better public relations.

It is a fair statement, but it ought not to be a necessary statement, to say that today the overwhelming majority of businesses and industries are honorably run.

But lately even the most ardent defenders of our enterprise system have been forced to hold their noses. The Superfund charges come as part of a melancholy pattern.

Consider the Drexel Burnham Lambert affair. The principals pleaded guilty — guilty, mind you! — to six felony counts of mail, wire and securities fraud. This once-respected house stands convicted on its own confession of shameful behavior.

Every few days the Department of Justice mails me a handful of press releases. Reminding you that charges are not convictions, I offer a random sample from recent weeks:

Here is one from California: The government has recovered $2.4 million from Varian Associates Inc. of Palo Alto for overcharging the Department of Defense on Air Force contracts.

James J. Kilpatrick

In Gloversville, N.Y., the Department of Justice charged Mario Papa & Sons Inc. with conspiring to rig bids for the sale of dress gloves to the armed forces.

Last month the department recovered $300,000 from an Alabama division of Teledyne Industries. The company was accused of charging the Department of Defense "for unallowable commercial selling and advertising costs incurred in the company's promotion of a computer software product."

In Los Angeles, Rockwell International Corporation pleaded guilty to charges of double-billing the Pentagon on a contract for satellite repairs. Court documents alleged that top officials of Rockwell's satellite division embarked on a scheme to defraud in 1982, two weeks after Rockwell had been convicted and fined $500,000 for padding labor costs on another contract.

Stories come from all over. In Oklahoma, a federal grand jury returned a felony indictment charging Ryans Moving & Storage with conspiring to fix prices on the movement of household goods for military personnel at Fort Sill.

In Pensacola, Fla., the government has charged Pensacola Builders Supply with conspiring to fix the local price on concrete blocks.

In December the Justice Department reached agreements to recover $425,000 from two companies, one in Philadelphia, the other in Monroe, N.C., for rigging bids on contracts for the sale of nylon fiber to the prison industry at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

The department announced that it will seek a maximum fine against the Bill L. Walters Companies, a Colorado commercial real estate development firm. The outfit pleaded guilty to illegally filling a three-acre wetlands area on the site of a proposed shopping center.

Here is an item from Tampa, Fla. The government in December filed a felony charge against A. Lamar Garrett, former general manager of the Tampa plant of Borden Inc., alleging that the defendant rigged bids on contracts for school milk.

These press releases pour from the Justice Department in an unending stream. The government seeks treble damages from two Florida companies for false or fraudulent claims on sugar imports. A bottling company in Florida is charged with fixing prices on soft drink products.

And all this has said nothing of the massive fraud and mismanagement that have led hundreds of savings and loan associations into receivership. Neither have I mentioned the leveraged buy-outs that are contemptible manifestations of greed, pure greed, having no socially useful aspects whatever.

What has gone wrong? What has become of simple honesty and fair dealing? I love the enterprise system, but some of its practitioners are giving capitalism a very bad name.

Some must rise above spite

Sen. Everett Dirksen once described political pragmatism like this: "Sometimes a man must rise above principle."

In practice, of course, the political pragmatist has no fixed star by which to steer, is very likely — scoring rhetorical points — to contradict himself.

The Senate's new majority leader, George Mitchell, told ABC recently that our president must not pardon Col. Oliver North, for to do so would send the wrong signal to Americans — a signal that in our society there are two systems of justice — one for our leaders and another for the rest of us.

Sen. Mitchell was then asked about the possibility that former President Ronald Reagan might be summoned to testify at North's trial and Sen. Mitchell said it would be necessary for the president to testify — certainly not in person — as it would pose "too great an inconvenience."

Whoa there! How's that again?
Do I understand that there must not be two systems of justice; one for our leaders and another for the rest of us ...
And that there must be two systems of justice;

Paul Harvey

one for our leaders and another for the rest of us?

Sen. Mitchell, almost in a single breath, acknowledged the double standard which moments before he had declared unacceptable.

Sen. Mitchell, remember, is a former judge. Oliver North ...

In the no-man's land between the White House and the Congress ... North dodged two bullets a few days ago.

Counsel Lawrence Walsh agreed to drop charges of conspiracy and theft.

That still leaves 12 other criminal charges which could put him in prison.

But North's attorneys say the heart of the government's case against him has been destroyed.

After spending 12 million of your dollars examining acres of classified material — the "persecution" has dropped the two most significant charges.

It's time now to drop the others and bring this wasteful congressional vendetta to a close.

Ollie North, as any perceptive observer can plainly see, was a profoundly patriotic Marine who, while serving his commander in chief, got caught in the cross fire between the White House and the Congress.

He was a military man trapped in a political no-man's-land.

Mrs. Reagan, sorely distressed that the Contraversy cast a shadow over the White House, has never forgiven the aides she blames for it. Ollie North was one of those aides.

But her feelings notwithstanding, Reagan's refusal to issue pardons to North and John Poindexter — and put this whole silly vendetta behind us — is leaving for himself, his associates and his successors a litigious mess which the media will exploit terminally.

Sen. Dirksen said, "Sometimes a man must rise above principle."

Sometimes a woman must rise above spite.

Solutions much better than celebrations

By CHUCK STONE

If a choice were available, I would favor scrapping this month's celebration of black history and seek instead, a consensual solution to the controversies over minority set-asides and the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Proposition 42.

Here it is 125 years after the Emancipation Proclamation, and Americans are still locked in a divisive national debate over measures to advance equality for darbies.

(I couldn't resist that. It was one of my beautiful mother's favorite words. I'm off now on a Joycean "stream of consciousness" kick, but I thought about my mother when I read a story about a Hong Kong toothpaste called "Darbie" being changed to the less offensive "Darlie." My wife suggested that I write a column on it. But at this point, I have a hard time working myself into a passion over racial symbols on a toothpaste tube used by people I don't even know 10,000 miles away.) Right now, I'm disturbed by the divisiveness spawned by the controversy over Proposition 42. That's the NCAA's more stringent rule that would require freshmen athletes with scholarships to have a combined high school C average and a score of 700 (out of a possible 1600) on the Scholastic Aptitude Tests.

With blacks scoring an average of 106 points below whites on the SATs, 90 percent of the freshmen eliminated last year by the NCAA's ruling were black. That's why Georgetown University basketball coach John Thompson walked off the court in protest.

The real problem is the NCAA lame brains who are misusing the SATs to set academic standards.

First of all, SATs are surplus. "The single best predictor of college performance is the high school record," concedes a publication from the College Board, which owns the SATs.

Second, SATs are culturally biased, and you've heard that argument before, haven't you? But here's proof of what the psychiatrists call "differential item functioning" or DIF. Try this question.

Runner is to marathon as:

- (a) envoy: embassy
- (b) martyr: massacre
- (c) oarsman: regatta
- (d) referee: tournament
- (e) horse: stable

The correct answer is (c). Whereas 52 percent of white test takers get that question right, only 23 percent of black test takers do. (Suburban kids are just more familiar with regattas than ghetto kids.)

Multiply DIFs like that on standardized tests, and you can eliminate most potential black applicants, despite their C or even B high-school averages. Recently, the Council of the Great City Schools (the nation's 44 largest school systems) passed a resolution expressing its "profound concern" over Proposition 42 and asked to meet with the NCAA.

Instead of expending so much energy celebrating Black History Month, white and black Americans might try sitting to resolve the divisive controversy over the new regulations. For starters:

- (1) Secondary school systems should require students to have a "C" average in order to participate in any extra-curricular activity.
  - (2) Eliminate the SAT as a mandatory admission requirement and make it optional.
  - (3) Require colleges and universities to publish the graduation rates of all athletes categorized by sport, race and sex — and those of all other students categorized by race and sex. (We'd soon find out which colleges are teaching their athletes and which ones are "shuckin' and jivin'.")
  - (4) Tie athletic scholarship aid to athletes' graduation rates.
- Celebrating Black History Month is a lovely annual exercise. But celebrations become feckless in their festivity when major inequities between black and white perpetuate conflicts between the two groups.
- My mother would have opted for solutions instead of celebrations.

States taking action against frauds in charity fund raisers

By JENICE ARMSTRONG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Triple-bypass heart surgery and a stroke left Emile Blouin disabled and with substantial medical bills. When he got a letter a few months ago telling him he had won $5,000 in a sweepstakes, he thought at least some of his problems were over.

"I was completely surprised. I was so elated," said Blouin, 77, of Phoenix. He and his wife, Mary, followed the instructions on the prize notification letter, which asked them to send in money which would be donated to a charitable cause. They sent a $25 check to the Cancer Fund of America and waited. But their $5,000 prize never came.

"You feel as though you can't trust anybody anymore," said Mary Blouin. "It's not fair to the public."

The Blouins are among thousands of consumers around the country who have complained to charity regulators that they were tricked into making contributions.

Attorneys general in Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Massachusetts and Illinois have filed suit against the Watson and Hughey Co., a direct-mail fundraiser which represents a number of charities. They allege that the Alexandria, Va., company engages in fraudulent fund raising with its sweepstakes prize announcement letters.

A foundation started by an award-winning government scientist is among the groups that have employed Watson and Hughey for fund raising. Robert I. Glazer, a senior scientist at the National Cancer Institute, has been ordered by federal officials to return all donations collected through the solicitations, his lawyer said Tuesday.

Attorney David H. Shapiro said Glazer's foundation, the National Leukemia Research Foundation, has yet to receive any money from Watson and Hughey under a contract giving the direct-mail company the first $100,000 raised.

Tom McClure, a postal inspector, said the U.S. Postal Inspection Service also has launched an investigation into Watson and Hughey.

"People are really upset," said Frank Driscoll, of the National Charities Information Service in New York City. He said his office averages 36 calls a day from people concerned about the sweepstakes letters. "We never imagined we were going to get this avalanche."

Many consumers have complained to charity regulators that they were sent letters telling them they had won $5,000 or some other amount in a Cash Bonanza or Irish Sweepstakes. To claim their prize, they were asked to make a voluntary contribution which would go toward a charity.

After sending in donations and a form to claim their prize, most received checks for only 10 cents.

"They create the false impression that you win a valuable prize and the likelihood that you would win a lot of money is not very likely," said Wendy Burt, a Minnesota state attorney spokeswoman. A disclaimer on the back of the letter was insufficient, she said, adding "it was in fine print and could easily be overlooked."

The Iowa suit alleges that Watson and Hughey's solicitations are "targeted toward susceptible populations, including elderly people who may be unable to read deceptively worded disclosures buried in fine print."

The award notices are signed by Washington attorney Robert R. Stone, who defended the fundraising tactics. "I don't believe they're misleading if they read the facts. But some people don't read everything," Stone said.

Stone said he advises the company on state fund-raising laws and his name appears on the letters.

Watson and Hughey Co., is headed by Jerry C. Watson and Byron C. Hughey, both of Virginia. Most of their clients are small charities with no large-scale fund-raising experience, according to the Chronicle of Philanthropy, a trade publication.

Watson and Hughey declined to be interviewed. Contacted by phone, Hughey said only, "I'm sorry. I can't talk to you on the advice of my attorney."

Besides the leukemia research foundation, Watson and Hughey clients have included the Cancer Fund of America of Knoxville, Tenn.; Pacific West Cancer Fund of Seattle, Wash.; Walker Cancer Research Institute of Edgewood, Md.; Social Security Protection Agency of Washington; American Heart Disease Prevention Foundation, Inc., of Mountclair, N.J.; and Project Cure-Center for Alternative Cancer Research, of Washington.

Some state attorneys general allege that little of the money raised through Watson and Hughey actually goes toward research.

"Normally, less than 5 percent of the contributions are used for research or some kind of service for the people they say they're going to help," Burt said.

Baker says he'll sell bank stocks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III says he will sell his large stock holdings in a major international lender, after questions were raised about the potential for conflicts of interest.

Baker said Tuesday he will sell his stock in Chemical New York Corp., which has loaned $4.5 billion to Third World nations, as well as all other publicly traded stocks held in a qualified blind trust.

Members of Congress had expressed surprise when Baker's stock holdings were publicized last week, noting that as Treasury secretary under President Reagan he made decisions affecting the Third World debt crisis. The same issue confronts him as secretary of state in the Bush administration.

Baker's promise to get rid of the stocks was hailed Tuesday at the White House, where President Bush's ethics chief had questioned Baker's holdings under a new, stringent interpretation of government ethics rules.

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater issued a statement saying Baker "has gone even further than required to insure there is not even the perception of a conflict of interest."

The controversy revolved primarily around Baker's holdings in Chemical New York.

While heading the Treasury Department in the Reagan administration, Baker developed the so-called Baker plan, which called on Third World nations to make good on their debts as they restructured their sagging economies. It called for new public and private lending, but it did not attempt to force the banks to forgive the loans.

As Bush's chief adviser on foreign policy, Baker will be forced to deal with the same nagging problem of the indebted nations, which owe billions to Western and other commercial banks.

Currently in Europe on a tour of U.S. allies, Baker initially had said he would seek a conflict-of-interest waiver on Third World issues from the White House. But on Tuesday, with increasing attention being focused on the issue, he said he would instruct the trustees in charge of the bank stocks to sell them.

Baker made the announcement during a visit to NATO nations. A Baker spokeswoman, Margaret Tutwiler, said the publicly traded stocks held by his wife, Susan, and those held for their minor daughter, Mary Bonner Baker, also will be sold.

Baker said the decision went "well beyond" what was required by law.

Richard Arregui parked his car at a Miami art gallery one day late last year and noticed something amiss. An 8-foot aluminum outdoor sculpture was now only 4 feet high.

"Someone had literally torn half of it off," said Arregui, assistant director at the Barbara Gillman Gallery. He found the missing half of the $25,000 sculpture hours later — at a scrap yard. They had paid $192.50 for it.

In recent months, thieves have stolen aluminum from practically everywhere to cash in on a prolonged boom in aluminum prices at scrap yards.

Vandals have stripped siding and gutters from New York City homes, faucets and window frames from a New Orleans housing development, swing sets from a Miami playground, bridge railing from Connecticut highways, and cans from Chicago recycling bins.

Nothing is sacred. Not even the historic Brooklyn Bridge.

A few months ago, three men piled loose supports from the 105-year-old suspension bridge's pedestrian walkway and from a catwalk used by ironworkers, authorities said. Two were caught. Damage was estimated at $37,000 and the walkway and catwalk were closed temporarily for repairs. "I think all this is a little nuts," said Officer Bob Hardy, who in his Queens precinct in New York City has investigated cases of stolen aluminum siding, gutters and 100 posts from a foot bridge in the last month. "People are desperate for money, that's what it is."

Hardy and other police officers said the aluminum is stolen by crack addicts or scavengers. Authorities said the problem is limited to areas with markets to recycle aluminum. A pound of the material can bring up to 60 cents, triple the price three years ago.

"Unfortunately in our society, many people will do illegal things to make money," said Frank Rathbun, spokesman for the Aluminum Association in Washington, D.C. "When the price of aluminum is high enough, people will steal aluminum. It's really not a surprise."

Aluminum is swiped more often than other metals because of its high price and availability.

It is used in hundreds of products, from beverage cans to airplanes. More than 25 percent of the 16 billion pounds of aluminum made each year in the United States comes from recycled aluminum, which is much cheaper than producing aluminum from ore.

"We encourage recycling,"

Rathbun said, adding quickly, "but legally, of course. We don't believe in taking bridges apart."

In New Orleans, a crew worked four days on an apartment at a housing project only to return each morning to see its repairs undone by thieves who removed all the aluminum in sight — window frames, mail boxes, mail slots and faucet handles. In eastern Connecticut, railings from six highway overpasses were stolen last year.

Scavengers are even hitting on Chicago recycling centers, taking newspapers and aluminum left in special collection boxes, said Michele White, program developer for the Resource Center.

"If recycling is going to be viable in the city of Chicago or anywhere, scavengers are going to have to be stopped," she said.

Chicago police are now helping the recyclers by enforcing an old ordinance that makes it illegal to sort through junk on streets and alleys. The first scavenger arrested was scheduled to face a misdemeanor charge in court Friday.

Mo Ross, manager of AMF Enterprises Corp. in New York and a 40-year veteran of the recycling business, said the recent spate of thefts doesn't surprise him.

"In the scrap business, anything is possible," said Ross, who doesn't buy scrap off the street.

Heavy rains bring flooding in East

By The Associated Press

An unusual winter deluge that left three people dead in Tennessee and Kentucky raised the threat of more flooding from Indiana to Texas today as hot southern air met cold northern air with dangerous results.

The relentless rain filled rivers to overflowing, closed roads and forced the evacuation of a hospital.

Although it brought relief to drought-stricken areas of Tennessee and Texas, for many people it was too much of a good thing.

"There have been very few floods people can remember worse than this," Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., said Tuesday night as he toured hard-hit sections not far from his home in Carthage.

Wilson County, just east of Nashville, was drenched with nearly 6 inches of rain.

One woman, 62-year-old Sophia Payer, drowned when she ignored police warnings not to cross flooded U.S. Highway 231, authorities said.

The rainfall also caused a power outage in the county that forced 70 people to be evacuated from a hospital in Lebanon. Schools were canceled and police reported 80 vehicles stalled on flooded roads.

Flash flood watches were in effect early today from northeast Texas to southern Ohio, ranging along a line that crossed through Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana and West Virginia.

Rivers overflowed in central and western Kentucky. Residents were evacuated along the Green River and Little River; merchants in New Haven, Ky., began sandbagging the banks of the Rolling Fork River.

Many rivers in Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana are expected to flood later in the week as their water levels continue to rise.

"The ground is pretty well saturated," National Weather Service meteorologist Bob Watson said.

President Bush 'back home' in Maine

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — As the helicopter "Marine One," bound from Pease Air Force Base in Portsmouth, N.H., reached the Atlantic Ocean at twilight and whirred north along the rocky Maine coast, its primary passenger suddenly grew animated.

President Bush was headed home. Even though he and his wife Barbara have lived in 31 homes in 17 cities, the comfortable three-story gray shingle and stone house on the ocean is the only one they own.

"You could see the sparkle in his eyes as he was getting closer to home. He started pointing out houses of friends and neighbors as we got closer. He loves being back in Kennebunkport," said Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Fitzwater was aboard the presidential chopper with Bush last weekend as the chief executive made his first visit back — as president — to his family retreat, a stop on the way back to Washington from a visit to Ottawa, Canada.

But the seacoast village — permanent population 1,200 — had changed even since the Bushes visited there last Thanksgiving.

No longer can motorists drive unimpeded along Ocean Avenue, which winds along the coast right past the Bush compound on a rockbound promontory known as "Walker's Point." The road passes so close that you can easily pick out individuals on the lawn of the house.

At night when the president is present, the road — a main thoroughfare — is closed now where it passes the Bush home, except to "authorized personnel" or to the three other families who live in the secured stretch.

Public Notice

On November 9, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company filed a tariff which proposes to prevent local exchange calling over interstate, unrestricted, multi-jurisdictional, WATS Access Lines (UWALs) and intrastate WATS Access Lines (WALs).

UWALs are provided to interexchange carriers for their use in the provision of interexchange interstate and intrastate long-distance and WATS-type services. Similarly, WALs are designed for use in the provision of interLATA and intralATA WATS services. The UWALs and WALs were not intended to allow local exchange calling.

If these proposed tariff changes are approved, the blocking of local exchange calls over intrastate WATS access lines and UWALs will take place within 30 days. This proposed tariff change will not result in the blocking of local calls placed to an 800 Service number.

The Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas has assigned this matter to Docket 8421. A hearing on the merits of these proposed tariff changes is scheduled for March 13, 1995.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should mail a request to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757 by February 27, 1995. Further information may also be obtained by calling the PUC Public Information Office at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

Soup can make a warm dish for those cold winter nights

NEW YORK (AP) — As the weather turns colder, we begin looking forward to the heart-warming foods that hark back to our childhood days.

Fresh, hot whole-wheat breads and muffins, as well as nutritious vegetable soups, help to balance one's diet and reduce fat intake. Using whole grains and legumes such as lentils, barley, beans and oats is a delicious way to provide nutritious meals.

The following recipes for Vegetable Bean Stew and Lentil and Vegetable Medley are among those offered in the Eat Well, Be Well cookbook (Simon and Schuster). The 100 recipes included in the cookbook follow the federal government's "Seven Dietary Guidelines for Americans" based on moderation, variety and balance as the keys to healthful eating. The cookbook also includes a comprehensive nutrition guide.

(For a mail-order form, write to: Eat Well, Be Well Cookbook, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Health and Safety Division, Dept. STN, One Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10010. The cookbook is $10.45 including mailing and handling costs.)

DILL ENHANCES SOUP — Celebrate January as National Soup Month by serving vegetable beef soup. Dill adds zest to the zucchini used in this recipe. For extra flavor, the soup can be made a day ahead.

low; cover and simmer about 1 hour.

In medium saucepan over medium-high heat in hot oil, cook onion and garlic about 3 minutes. Add white beans and bean liquid, tomatoes and seasonings; heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer about 30 minutes. Add carrots and zucchini; continue to simmer covered about 30 minutes. Stir in kidney beans; cook about 5 minutes until beans and vegetables are tender. Makes 6 servings.

Nutrients Per Serving: 185 cal., 31 g carb., 10 g pro., 3 g fat, 0 mg chol., 345 mg sodium.

LENTIL AND VEGETABLE MEDLEY

2½ cups water
One 13½-ounce can chicken broth
1 cup lentils, washed and sorted
1 teaspoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon thyme, crushed

¼ teaspoon pepper
4 teaspoons vegetable oil
½ cup chopped carrot (about ½ small)
½ cup chopped onion (about ½ medium)
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 cup chopped tomato (about 2 medium)

In a medium saucepan over medium-high heat, heat water, chicken broth, lentils, chili powder, thyme and pepper to boiling; reduce heat to low, cover and simmer about 30-35 minutes until lentils are tender. Meanwhile, in a large skillet, heat oil over medium-high heat. Add carrot, onion and garlic and saute about 7 minutes until tender. Stir in tomatoes; cook about 2 minutes more. Combine mixtures. Makes about 4 servings.

Nutrients Per Serving: 250 cal., 15 g pro., 6 g fat, 36 g carb., 0 mg chol., 340 mg sodium.

SOUPS MADE WITH DILL
Dill has the unique ability to soften the taste of strong-flavored vegetables, such as cauliflower and cabbage, as well as adding zest to the milder ones, like potatoes and zucchini.

Dill seed is usually used in long-cooking dishes, whereas dillweed releases its flavor instantly for shorter cooking times. "Weed" refers to the leaves of the dill plant.

The following recipe for vegetable beef soup, provided by the American Spice Trade Association, uses both forms of dill. For extra flavor, make the soup a day ahead. Then, when you reheat it, whip up some dumplings (from a mix) and lightly season them with dillweed. You'll be ready to serve soup and dumplings in 20 minutes.

Also from the American Spice Trade Association: a low-calorie, yet tasty, version of Potage Parmentier, prepared with potatoes, instant minced onion, dillweed and milk, instead of the traditional heavy cream. Here dill adds a delicate but definite zest to the mild-tasting soup. Served with chunks of black bread and cheese slices, this Creamy Dilled Potato Soup makes a delicious and warming meal.

Meanwhile, prepare dumpling batter by combining baking mix, milk and dillweed. Add zucchini to soup. Drop heaping tablespoonfuls of dumpling batter on top of soup, making 4 dumplings. Simmer, uncovered, for 10 minutes. Cover and continue to simmer until meat and vegetables are tender and dumplings are cooked through, about 10 minutes.

Curry powder spices up chicken meal

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor

Curry powder gives a clue to this recipe's origin; it probably came from India by way of early trading ships. "Captain" may refer to the man who brought it or may be a corruption of "capon," used in the recipe in India. Use a cut-up chicken or 6 meaty pieces such as breast halves, thighs and drumsticks.

CHICKEN COUNTRY CAPTAIN

One 2½- to 3-pound broiler-fryer chicken, cut into pieces
½ cup chopped onion
1 medium green pepper, cut into 1-inch squares
1 clove garlic
One 16-ounce can tomatoes, cut up
¼ cup dried currants or raisins
¼ cup snipped parsley
2 teaspoons curry powder
½ teaspoon ground mace or nutmeg
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons cold water
Hot cooked rice

Spray a large skillet with non-stick spray coating. Brown chicken in skillet for 15 minutes, turning once. Add onion, green pepper and garlic. Stir in undrained tomatoes, currants, parsley, curry powder, mace and pepper. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, uncovered, about 30 minutes or until chicken is tender.

Remove chicken; keep warm. Skim excess fat from sauce, if necessary. Combine cornstarch and cold water; stir into sauce. Cook and stir until bubbly; cook and stir 2 minutes more. Serve chicken and sauce over hot cooked rice. Makes 6 servings.

CHICKEN COUNTRY CAPTAIN — Chicken becomes a one-dish meal when you simmer it with vegetables. Serve with a sauce over cooked rice.

Cocoa powder, turkey are unique combination for dip

Don't be surprised by the cocoa powder in this microwave main dish. It's the ingredient that makes it so dark and full-bodied. Serve the saucy mixture with your favorite south-of-the-border toppings: tortilla chips, sour cream, chopped tomato, and/or sliced avocado.

TURKEY MOLE

1 pound ground raw turkey
1 stalk celery, sliced (½ cup)
½ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
One 8-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons unsweetened cocoa powder
¼ to 2 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon apple pie spice

1½ cups beef broth
Tortilla chips
Dairy sour cream
Chopped tomato
1 medium avocado, halved, seeded, peeled and sliced (optional)

In a 1½- or 2-quart microwave-safe casserole crumble turkey. Add celery, onion and garlic. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 6 to 8 minutes or until no pink remains and onion is tender, stirring once. Drain off fat. Stir in corn, flour, cocoa powder, chili powder, sugar, salt, pepper and apple pie spice. Stir in broth. Cook, uncovered, on high 6 to 8 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every 2 minutes. Cook 1 minute more.

Place one-fourth of the turkey mixture and tortilla chips in each of 4 individual casseroles. Top with sour cream and tomato. Serve with avocado, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Diet pills need to be used with caution

Saddled with extra post-holiday pounds, countless Americans will follow the latest diet touted by their favorite magazine or sign up during a local health club's New Year's promotion. But others will take what they believe is a short-cut to slimming their silhouettes: diet pills. Such drugs range from so-called appetite suppressants to amphetamines and amphetamine look-alikes. But in recent years, some Americans have resorted to importing purported "miracle" portions from other countries despite the potential health risks of using a drug that has escaped Food and Drug Administration scrutiny. According to Lucy Silvy Peluso, who with her husband Emanuel has written the new book Women and Drugs: Getting Hooked, Getting Clean, most of these substances do work — at least in the short run.

Falling under the class of drugs known as central nervous system stimulants, they typically suppress hunger while producing a sense of euphoria and increased energy. According to Peluso, damaging side effects tied to diet pill use have emerged, including headaches, dizziness, agitation, confusion, fatigue, anxiety, heart palpitations, hallucinations and depression. Amphetamines, above all diet aids, appear to have the most negative side effects ranging from jitteriness with low doses to fever, paranoia and psychosis in higher amounts, Peluso reports. Recognizing the hazards of amphetamines for weight control, the FDA has put restrictions on how they are dispensed. However, such action hasn't deterred many Americans from using drugs to trim their torsos. The following are some of the diet aids that have been popular in recent years and the side effects associated with them: Over-the-counter diet pills Nonprescription drugs are typically promoted as "appetite suppressants" and contain phenylpropanolamine (PPA) as one of their main ingredients. PPA is a substance chemically related to amphetamines and originally marketed as a nasal decongestant. PPA has a strong stimulating effect on the nervous system, causing the user to feel more energetic and less hungry. But if the user exceeds the recommended dose — usually 25 to 30 milligrams every four hours — unpleasant side effects can result, according to Dr. William Reyburn and Dr. Fredrick Zupan, authors of Every Woman's Pharmacy: A Guide to Safe Drug Use. Such effects can include nervous anxiety, restlessness, insomnia, headache, nausea and high blood pressure. The Journal of the American Medical Association also has cited life-threatening heart and kidney problems associated with PPA use. The Drug Abuse Warning Network, which monitors emergency room visits in 27 hospitals nationwide, reported 746 PPA-related emergencies in 1984.

Redotex In recent years tens of thousands of desperately overweight Americans crossed the Mexican border in search of Redotex, reputed to be a miraculous diet drug. In reality Redotex proved to be a mixture of five powerful drugs, including three stimulants, a strong laxative and a tranquilizer, according to FDA Consumer, a publication of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The FDA became so alarmed about reports of addiction, psychosis, hypertension and deaths among Redotex users that in 1987 it banned over-the-border trafficking of the drug. Diennet Sold by mail order from France and billed as a nutritional supplement, Diennet has been particularly popular in California. Diennet consists of three different capsules to be taken twice a day. According to a report last summer in the Journal of the American Medical Association, the capsules contained two anti-anxiety agents and an amphetamine-like substance which could be addictive. ## Cold weather offers chance to kill weeds

Last week's cold, wintry weather was good to slow down a lot of plants that were sure beginning to think spring had sprung. A lot of plants were beginning to get their biological clocks ahead of the calendar. If you have a bermuda or buffalo grass lawn that is infested with henbit, dandelions and other kinds of winter annual grass and weeds that you want to kill out this spring, then get ready. My choice to clean out all of the unwanted, green, growing vegetation in your dormant bermuda grass lawn is Roundup®. This product must be applied before your dormant grass starts to grow. In checking a little on bermuda, I find some of it in protected areas on the south sides of buildings is starting to show a little green. Therefore, check your dormant grass to see just how dormant it is, because Roundup® will kill the green sprigs. Anyway, I expect that as soon as our weather starts warming up again, homeowners will need to spray with Roundup®. Therefore, get ready so that when we have another pretty 60 degree day, you can spray all of the green unwanted vegetation in your dormant bermuda or buffalo yards. Don't expect quick results because it takes two to three weeks for plants to die at this time of year.

FRUIT TREE PLANTING TIME Early spring is generally the best time to plant fruit trees. For Gray County, this includes the months of February and March. Recommended varieties of adapted fruit trees is very important for successful fruit production. It pains me a lot to see folks buy and plant new trees that I know will not produce as well as other varieties. A list of adapted, recommended fruit and nut trees are available in the Gray County Extension office. Please get a list before you buy. When spring begins to break rapidly, a difference of two weeks in the planting date often results in obviously better growth of earlier-planted trees. Since new roots develop when the soil temperature is above 45 degrees, earlier established trees can make some root development in their growing location before leaves appear and get off to a vigorous start. The best fruit trees that one can buy are ones that are two years old and three to five feet tall. Not only do they survive transplanting better, but they become established faster. The largest tree is not necessarily the best. Smaller unbranched trees often are best because they cost less, are inherently more vigorous, start growth sooner, are easier to plant and, most importantly, can be trained properly to look shapely and bear heavy crops. Tiny trees (less than 18 inches tall) were runts in the nursery and should be avoided. To insure a successful transplanting after buying a tree, keep the roots moist by wrapping them in damp packing material or sawdust. The roots must not dry out or the tree will die. Trim off broken or injured roots. To prepare the plant, dig the hole a little deeper and wider than necessary to accommodate the roots. Leave some loose soil in the bottom of the hole. Set the tree at the same depth that it grew in the nursery. Never set it so deep that the bud union of the scion and root section is below ground level when the hole is filled. If a tree cannot be planted immediately, keep it in the original package and refrigerate it for a week or two. Otherwise, heel (temporarily plant) the trees in a well-drained area, making sure the roots never dry. Soak the tree in a bucket of water several hours before planting to insure good moisture intake. Once the tree is in the hole, fill it with pulverized soil, shaking the tree gently to filter soil among the roots. Use the same soil that was removed from the hole earlier. Tramp the soil firmly and thoroughly with the foot or a well-padded stick. Add water when the hole is about three-fourths full to help pack the soil around roots and increase chances for survival. After the water has soaked in completely, fill the hole with soil, leaving it loose on top. Do not add fertilizer at planting time but consider a light application of nitrogen in June following the planting. Keep all fertilizer at least 18 inches away from the trunk. It is essential that the tree be well watered and that all vegetation be controlled immediately under the tree. A heavy layer of mulch does an excellent job of weed control.

Two area students named scholarship semi-finalists

Coca-Cola officials have announced that Dollie Haynes of McLean and Matt Weinheimer of Groom have been named as semi-finalists in the Coca-Cola Scholars Foundation competition. The two high school seniors, the only Panhandle semi-finalists, are among 1,500 semi-finalists nationwide. More than 50,000 students have applied for the honor. Haynes, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Haynes of McLean. She is a senior honor student at McLean High School. Weinheimer, a senior at Groom High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Weinheimer of Groom. The students must now each submit a comprehensive essay, recommendation and an official school transcript. If selected as one of the 150 finalists, the students will advance to the National Competition in Atlanta, Ga.

Semi-finalists were presented a $50 savings bond in recognition of their achievements. The bonds were presented Jan. 25 at the Amarillo division office. At the national competition, each of the 150 Coca-Cola scholars named as finalists will compete for designation as a National Scholar or a Regional Scholar. The 50 National Scholars will receive renewable awards of $5,000 per year totaling $20,000 over a four-year undergraduate program. The 100 remaining finalists will be designated as Regional Scholars and receive one year non-renewable awards of $1,000. Students may use their awards at any accredited college or university of their choice. More than $1 million in scholarship funds will be disbursed annually by the fourth year of the merit-based program.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the mother of a girl who had been taken advantage of by people for whom she baby-sat reminded me of a job I had in college. A young couple got my name from a friend of mine and asked me to sit with their two children until midnight. They picked me up at my dorm, and when we got to their house I was informed that I was spending the night there so they wouldn't have to drive me home in the middle of the night! Being the polite person I was taught to be, and needing the money, I slept in a nightgown the lady loaned me and spent the night there. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you don't have something nice to say about others today, it's best you keep your opinions to yourself, especially when talking to a person you know from experience who'll repeat everything you'll say.

Harvesters' title drive put on hold by Bulldogs

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

BORGER — Pampa lost the battle of Borger, but the Harvesters can still win the District 1-4A war.

A quick start paved the way to Borger's 70-64 win over Pampa here Tuesday night, but the Harvesters can still wrap up the district title outright with a win over Levelland Friday night.

Pampa is now 12-3 in district play while Borger is 11-4. The Bulldogs, still in the running for a playoff spot, never trailed after opening up a 17-6 first-quarter lead on the Harvesters.

Borger, however, did find itself in trouble early when strong inside player Steve McDonald drew his second foul two minutes into the first quarter and spent the rest of the half on the bench.

The Bulldogs more than took up the slack with some deadly long-range shooting. Danny Loftis drilled four 3-point shots the first half to go with two more the second half. Ivan Hunnicutt added two 3-pointers and Keith Wheeler had one.

"That changed our strategy with our big guy in foul trouble and we had to hit those outside shots. That made the difference. Some good foul shooting also helped us," said Borger coach Duane Hunt.

Borger canned 17 of 24 free throw attempts, including 11 of 14 in the fourth quarter. Pampa also shot well from the line (13 of 16), but the Harvesters were inconsistent from the floor.

McDonald, who scored 19 points in Borger's 70-73 win over Pampa in McNeely Fieldhouse, came back in the second half and finished with 10 points.

A poor shooting first quarter, only one of 12 from the floor by the Harvesters, helped give the Bulldogs the early lead, one which they never relinquished.

"We didn't run our offense very well the first quarter and it put us in the hole. We took too many outside shots, like Borger, but they're used to playing that way and it got us into trouble," said Pampa coach Robert Hale.

Borger led by as many as 15 points the first half and survived a comeback attempt by Pampa in the second and third quarters. Reserve guard Jimmy Massick came off the bench to spark the Harvesters, hitting a pair of free throws and a 3-point shot to cut the gap to six, 34-28, in the second quarter.

Pampa cut the lead to four early in the third quarter, but Borger used the 3-point shot to keep the Harvesters from getting any closer. Mark Wood's 15-foot jumper drew Pampa within four (38-34), but Borger retaliated on Ivan Hunnicutt's 3-point shot from the top of the key. That started a sprint of 10 unanswered points by the Bulldogs before Dustin Miller brought Pampa back within eight (48-40) after three quarters on consecutive goals.

The Bulldogs stayed in front by as many as 11 points the fourth quarter to win two of three meetings with the Harvesters this season.

"Our kids hung in there and gave a pretty good effort. It was a disappointment not to win at Borger in front of a huge crowd and miss the chance to ice the district championship, but we still have the best opportunity of all the teams to win district," added Hale. "It would be fun to win every game, but I don't think you can do that."

Loftis topped all scorers with 30 points.

Miller led Pampa with 22 points after going scoreless in the first quarter. Ryan Teague and Massick contributed 13 and 12 points respectively.

Deadlock at the top

By The Associated Press

Arkansas and Texas remain tied atop the Southwest Conference with 9-2 records heading into this week's action, but in terms of the SWC post-season tournament, the Hogs are first.

If the two teams tie for first during the regular season, the Razorbacks get the first seed by virtue of their two regular-season victories over the Longhorns.

So Texas is looking for help as the SWC race enters the stretch run. It might come this week as Arkansas plays road games at Southern Methodist on Wednesday and Texas A&M on Saturday.

Two of the Razorbacks' last three games are at home.

Texas will attempt to stay close when it plays host to Houston on Wednesday before playing at Texas Tech on Saturday.

Texas Christian has lost its grip on the SWC top spot. The Horned Frogs, now two games behind the frontrunners, have lost four of their past five conference games, most recently a 100-60 loss at Arkansas on Saturday.

"The crowd put pressure on the officials and it went from there," said TCU Coach Moe Iba. "When you run out of players, what can you do?"

Texas' Lance Blanks and Travis Mays scored 33 points each in a 116-74 victory over the Rice Owls, who are 3-8 in SWC play.

"We tried zone and man-to-man and if you have any other defenses to try call them out to me and I'll listen," said Rice Coach Scott Thompson.

"When both Lance and Travis are tracking, we are an awfully tough team to beat," said Texas Coach Tom Penders.

TCU is third in the league race with a 7-4 record followed by Tech at 6-5, Houston and SMU each at 5-5, Texas A&M at 3-7, Rice at 3-8, and Baylor at 1-10. Every team is eligible for the post-season tournament except the ninth-place team.

In other games Wednesday Texas A&M is at Baylor and TCU travels to Rice.

Also Saturday, Houston is at TCU and SMU is at Rice.

Wildcats take sole possession of second place

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

The Canadian Wildcats moved into sole possession of second place in District 2-2A and clinched a bi-district playoff berth by narrowly defeating the Memphis Cyclones, 60-58, Tuesday night at McNeely Fieldhouse.

The close contest was a fitting conclusion to what had become one of the hottest rivalries in the conference. Canadian and Memphis split their first two games this season — the Wildcats won, 56-54, in the first half of the district schedule, while the Cyclones were 71-65 overtime victors in the second half — and were tied for second place in district entering Tuesday's rubber match.

Quannah captured the conference championship by winning the first-half title outright and then tying Canadian and Memphis for the second-half title. By winning Tuesday's second-place tie-breaker, Canadian climbed to 23-3 overall and will advance to the state basketball playoffs as the No. 2 seed from District 2-2A.

After battling to a 15-13 lead in the first quarter, Canadian went into overdrive midway through the second behind a tenacious defense and the baseline shooting of junior wing Larry Dunnam. The Wildcats trailed by two, 21-23, with 3:45 to go in the half, before forcing eight Memphis turnovers and scoring 14 unanswered points to carry a 35-23 advantage into the locker room at intermission.

Dunnam scored 14 points in the first two quarters, including nine of Canadian's 14-point run, to finish with a game-high 20. Teammate Bobby Stephenson, a senior forward and the Wildcats' top scorer this season, added 18 points.

"Dunnam's been coming on during the last half of district, and he's really upgraded our offense," Canadian coach Robert Lee said. "When Bobby (Stephenson) is covered, Dunnam opens up our outside shooting."

Part of Memphis' second-quarter problems can be attributed to the absence of guard Don Jeffers, who retired to the sideline after committing three personal fouls in the first quarter. He still managed to score 10 points before fouling out in the fourth quarter, but without him, the offense went flat.

"Jeffers got his third foul before I noticed, so I was a little late in putting him on the bench," said Memphis coach Jay Harris, whose Cyclones fell to 19-10 overall and 4-1 in district play. "He's the one that makes our offense click, and he fouled out in the fourth. Those little things make a big difference."

Memphis wasted no time in staging a comeback in the second half. Jeffers and teammate Steve George, who paced the Cyclones with 14 points, chipped in six points apiece in the third quarter to pare Canadian's lead to six, 46-40, by the end of the third period.

Steve Richardson, one of four Cyclones who scored into double figures, fueled Memphis' fourth-quarter rally and finished with 11 points on the night. With 3:20 to go, Memphis knotted the score at 54 before committing two critical turnovers that allowed Canadian to go up by two, 58-56, with just under a minute remaining.

"We changed our offense and defense in the second half and I think that helped," Harris said.

"The calls at the end hurt us, but we shouldn't have gotten 12 points behind."

In the last half-minute, Richardson fouled Dunnam, who converted both ends of a one-and-one and left Memphis trailing by four. Steve George hit a jumper with five seconds left, but Canadian ran out the clock to wrap up the 60-58 victory and clinch the No. 2 playoff seed.

"We were playing good defense in the second quarter," Lee said, "but when you get a good lead, you tend to get lax. I knew Memphis was going to come back, but I didn't know how or when."

Canadian will meet Highland Park, winner of District 1-2A, in the bi-district round of the playoffs during the weekend of Feb. 23-25. A site and time have not yet been determined.

The No. 1 player on the 1983 PHS tennis team was a Pampa visitor this past weekend. Burkhardt Brehm, who was an American Field Service student from Germany, took a few days off from a year-long laser research study at U-Colorado, Boulder to visit friends here. He now resides and teaches in Hannover. "My coach then was Mr. (Terry) Culey," Burk recalled. "But the big thing was the basketball team won the 4A state championship that year."

strip the Dallas inner-city school of the 5A football crown... A belt of the Bible: Basketball has become a religion in Oklahoma when the OU cage squad plays a home game during Sunday church service time! That helps explain the fact football coach Barry Switzer doesn't think his program is out of control despite the shootings, lootings, rapes and cocaine deals that have disgraced national sports page headlines in recent weeks.

Price of Fame: American League MVP Jose Canseco, who won a $1.6 million contract in arbitration ($1.245 million more than he made last season) charges $14 for his autograph at sports card shows, and brother Ozie charges $4. Jose was recently arrested by Florida cops

Heep has signed a one-year pact for speeding at 120-mph-plus in his new sports car. NY Mets ace Ron Darling, who just got a new $6 million contract, still hasn't paid off eight-year-old student loans he received to attend Yale. Maybe the baseball commissioner, former president of that school, can get the dough back. Tony Dorsett was given a 90-day suspended jail term and ordered to attend an alcohol education program along with other sanctions, after pleading guilty to driving while impaired charges. And not only is Jim McMahon in disfavor with his bosses and teammates, but apparently also with the fans. His downtown Chicago restaurant has closed its doors due to lack of business. Shouldn't have served those drinks in colored glasses... Danny

Some examples: Beloit, Wis., 37 channels, $14.75 per month; Hartford, Wis., 36 channels, $16.95 per month; Fall River, Wis., 26 channels, $13.25 per month. All except Beloit, with its college population, are smaller than Pampa.

I wonder what other nations that picked up the telecast of the NBA All-Star Game Sunday thought as they listened to the horrible and tasteless rendition of the American National Anthem by Natalie Cole? Especially Great Britain with its always so-formal "God Save the Queen," and France, with the magnificent "Marseillaise"... Baseball was his first sports love, so CBS-TV football commentator John Madden is involved in the possible purchase of the Class A Visalia team in the California League... Kansas City Star columnist C.W. Gusewell: "Proposition 42 is doomed by the opposition of a few powerful men in college sports — men whose true business is not education but putting winning teams on the floor or field of play"... Isn't it amazing how, when a school, high school or college, gets in trouble for rules violations the teflon administrators always manage to shift the blame to teenage kids. Where and when does the buck stop?... The American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons, meeting last week, recommended use of "breakaway" bases in amateur softball, saying it would prevent 1.5 million injuries and save $2 million annually. And probably would have saved the life of a Pashandle-area sports friend who broke a leg playing, and has suffered major life-threatening complications since. Best of luck, Bill.

McGrath receives letter

University of Texas lineman David McGrath of Pampa received his football letter during the Ex-Students' Association's Longhorn Football Awards Presentation. McGrath, a sophomore, was a second-team offensive guard this past season and was also a member of the Athletic Director's Honor Roll. McGrath was an all-state player for the Harvesters in 1985. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. McGrath, 2500 Duncan.

Hearing scheduled for OU quarterback

By PATRICK CASEY
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — The University of Oklahoma football team, a perennial power accustomed to battling for national championships, now is fighting for dignity during an outbreak of criminal allegations that won't seem to go away.

Preliminary and detention hearings were scheduled today for starting quarterback Charles Thompson, who was arrested Monday night by FBI agents on a Jan. 26 federal complaint of selling cocaine to an undercover agent.

The governor of Oklahoma says he's disgusted, the other players say they're shocked. And the second largest newspaper in the state is calling for Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer to resign.

"Nothing less than a new start under new leadership can restore confidence and pride in OU football. Nothing less, in fact, can save the University of Oklahoma from becoming a national laughingstock," said a Tulsa World editorial in today's editions.

Switzer listed the players who recently have been arrested and said: "Barry Switzer should resign because of what they did? No more than I think their mothers and fathers should go to prison to serve their sentences," Switzer told the Oklahoma News Network. Media, friends and spectators crowded into the courtroom Tuesday. Thompson, wearing an orange jumpsuit, was attentive and quiet. He looked at his mother briefly.

Norman police say the investigation of drug trafficking will continue, but no other athletes reportedly are involved.

While Thompson remained jailed, bail was reduced for three other players: Nigel Clay, Glenn Bell and Bernard Hall, who were charged last Friday with first-degree rape stemming from a Jan. 21 complaint in the athletic dorm.

In Fort Bend, Texas, starting cornerback Jerry Parks is home on bail awaiting a preliminary hearing for a shooting with intent to injure charge in which he allegedly wounded teammate Zarak Peters on Jan. 13 in the same dorm.

Not to be forgotten is a three-year probation handed down in December by the NCAA that bars the Sooners from live television next season and bowl games for the next two years. It also limits recruiting.

Five players have been suspended since the NCAA announced its sanctions on Dec. 19. The NCAA also chastized Switzer for failure to "exercise supervisory control" over the program.

"I've never been too lax on them, but I've given kids a second chance," Switzer said. "There have been a lot that I gave a second chance and they graduated and did well. No one knows about that."

Switzer said he had heard rumors about Thompson's alleged involvement.

"I confronted him and he denied it," Switzer said. "Do I fire him on the basis of rumors?"

Gov. Henry Bellmon said he was surprised and disgusted upon learning of Thompson's arrest. The governor said the recent spate of incidents make it "fairly obvious" that "something is wrong" within the football program.

Last Friday, as Clay, Bell and Hall were being arraigned on first-degree rape charges, the university's Board of Regents listened to proposals from Interim President David Swank that outlined new guidelines to increase control at athletic dorms.

"During the last several months, the University of Oklahoma has faced some very difficult times as a result of problems occurring in our athletic program. The OU Board of Regents and I have pledged ourselves to correcting these matters," Swank said Tuesday.

"The faculty is very concerned," Swank said. "They go to national meetings... and the first question that is always asked is, 'What's wrong with your university?'"

"I'm pretty shocked by it," defensive end Wayne Dickson said of Thompson's arrest. "The only thing I can say now is that he is gone and there is nothing we can do about it."

Last Red Army soldiers cross Afghanistan border bridge

By JOHN THOR-DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

TERMEZ, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The Red Army commander for Afghanistan today led the last contingent of his troops across a border bridge, ending for the Soviets a nine-year war that claimed the lives of 15,000 of their countrymen.

"That is it — this war has come to an end," a Moscow Radio correspondent said from the scene.

In Moscow, the Communist Party daily Pravda said the decision to send troops to Afghanistan may have been an error and suggested any future commitment of Soviet forces abroad should be sanctioned by parliament.

About 200 cheering, windburned soldiers, clutching automatic rifles and riding armored personnel carriers, roared across the steel bridge spanning the Amu Darya River just 40 minutes ahead of the Geneva accords' noon deadline.

"I wasn't looking back," said Lt. Gen. Boris Gromov, the commander.

He rode in the last armored personnel carrier and was met halfway across the bridge by his 14-year-old son Maxim. Together, they walked the final yards to Termez.

Lt. Col. Igor Azarenok of the Soviet Defense Ministry said Gromov's group was the last to leave, ending what many Soviets have come to view as their Vietnam.

The decision to intervene in Afghanistan in 1979 was made by the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev and a few close associates, high-ranking officials have said, and Pravda said the security threat they perceived may not have merited sending in troops.

"It is possible to doubt the Brezhnev leadership's evaluation of the level of military threat," the paper said.

"It is possible to say that such vitally important decisions as the use of troops cannot be decided secretly by a small circle of people, without the sanction of the parliament of the country," Pravda continued.

The Soviet parliament has been a rubber-stamp body for decades, but recent reforms under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev have strengthened its role.

A reconnaissance battalion and an airborne assault battalion were the last units to leave, according to Moscow Radio, which was monitored in London.

"Everyone is wearing medals and smiling with satisfaction. ... The dust-covered armored personnel carriers are still. The guns of many of them are already under cover," the reporter said.

Moslem guerrillas Tuesday fired two rockets into Kabul airport, where some of the last Soviet troops remained the day before the Red Army was to end its 9-year military intervention in Afghanistan.

It was the first time in more than a month that forces fighting to overthrow the Afghan government have attacked the airport, the capital's key link with the outside world. The rockets came crashing down near a runway, but no one was injured, according to Soviet soldiers.

With Gromov and his troops gone, major cities held by the Soviet-backed government of President Najib were expected to fall to the insurgents in a matter of weeks, if not days.

The Foreign Ministry reported that 30,000 rebels were massing around Kabul, which has been blockaded for months. Spokesman Vadim Perfiliev said another 15,000 guerrillas were around the eastern city of Jalalabad. Kabul Radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., reported more insurgents surrounding Herat and Khandahar.

Soviet media reported looting by troops of the 30,000-member Afghan army — and mass desertions as the U.S.-supplied guerrillas gain ground.

"Some garrisons have been plundered. Certain posts and strongholds transferred to the Afghans have been emptied," an article in the labor daily Trud said Tuesday. "Their troops, who were subjected to threats and hostile action, simply fled. The extremists have already moved in."

"The political situation in the republic is becoming tense. Attacks by military formations on peaceful cities are increasing daily, not to mention the artillery and rocket shelling of Kabul, Kandahar, Jalalabad and other big centers," it said.

Today, Moslem guerrillas claimed there was heavy fighting around a former Soviet airbase north of Kabul.

A U.N. airlift of food to Kabul, which has been plagued by food and fuel shortages because of the guerrilla blockade — has been suspended for fear the planes would be shot down.

Soviet soldiers intervened in Afghanistan a year after a Marxist coup touched off civil war and an estimated 115,000 were in the country when the withdrawal began May 15 under the U.N.-mediated agreement.

The guerrillas have for months blockaded Kabul, whose population has more than doubled to 2.2 million during the war. They fired five rockets into the capital on Tuesday, and one killed four children and an old man lined up in the snow for bread, Kabul state radio reported.

Two landed at the airport but Soviet soldiers said no one was injured.

Bank to invest money in Mexican companies

By ANITA SNOW
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The International Finance Corp. will invest at least $200 million in private Mexican companies by the end of this fiscal year, primarily to refinance individual foreign debts, an official of the World Bank affiliate says.

"Not only does the Mexican government have a major foreign debt problem, but so do many Mexican companies," corporation vice president William Ryrice said Tuesday at a news conference.

"One of the things we do is to help various private companies restructure their finances and liberate them from the financial burdens that have kept them from expanding."

Ryrice said the corporation's investment in Mexico this fiscal year includes $14.5 million already appropriated to Polimar, a plastics export firm, and a $60 million line of credit granted for restructuring of the government controlled Banca Serfin.

He said most other investments planned for Mexico during the remainder of fiscal 1988-89 are still in negotiations and he would not say what other companies would be involved.

The corporation was formed to boost economic development through private-sector investment.

Helmut Paul, the corporation's director of Latin American investments, said future investments in Mexico will benefit companies producing petrochemicals, household appliances, automobile parts and hotels.

Paul said those petrochemical companies are small private firms making such things as plastics from petroleum derivatives and do not include Pemex, the government oil monopoly.

Ryrice was in Mexico to review corporation programs and meet with federal officials, including Treasury Secretary Pedro Aspe.

"Mr. Aspe and his colleagues have encouraged us to expand our activities here and we expect to have a close relationship with the new (presidential) administration," Ryrice said. President Carlos Salinas de Gortari took office in December.

"Our activities in Mexico are growing very fast," Ryrice added. He said the corporation already has invested $375 million in 27 companies nationwide.

The corporation will continue investing at least $200 million in Mexico each year in the future, he said.

Much of that money will be used to restructure private companies' foreign debts, Ryrice said.

In 1988, the corporation used an $80 million loan to help the Visa Group of Monterrey slash its foreign debt from $1.7 billion to $400 million. The group's principal holdings are breweries, including Dos Equis beer.

Visa's restructuring included a variety of alternative refinancing methods, including debt-for-equity exchanges, in which a debtor uses equity to pay off outstanding debts.

Mexico should examine similar alternative refinancing methods to reduce its $106 billion foreign debt, Ryrice said.

Ryrice said that despite its economic troubles "the adjustment Mexico has made in the last year of crisis has been an impressive one, and one that should be respected."

"The recent expansion of non-oil exports is important, as is the new liberalization of previous trade policies," he added.

Ryrice also praised the government's recent push to privatize some government-held companies and said the corporation is willing to help in the sale of additional state-owned companies to the private sector.

Tutu urges Anglicans to help hunger strike

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Archbishop Desmond Tutu Tuesday urged fellow Anglicans to fast three days each week for the duration of a hunger strike by 300 black detainees who are demanding to be set free.

Some of the strikers have not eaten for 22 days, and 21 reportedly have been hospitalized. They have threatened to starve themselves if the government does not either release or charge them.

Tutu said he and other anti-apartheid church leaders will meet Thursday with Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok to discuss the strike, the strongest challenge yet to the white-led government's policy of detention without trial.

Vlok agreed to meet with lawyers for some of the detainees and was considering a request to meet with parents of hunger strikers.

"You know how a mother feels ... it really hurts," said Neocwisa Lamani, one of six parents who flew to Cape Town Tuesday in hopes of seeing Vlok.

She said her 17-year-old son, Tongo, joined the strike last week at a Port Elizabeth prison, where he has been held since June 1988.

Tutu, who spoke by telephone with Vlok on Monday, described the strike as "very concerned ... The story fact that he is ready to meet a delegation of lawyers and church leaders is an indication that he is prepared to listen to different points of view."

Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, called on Anglicans to fast each Monday, Wednesday and Friday in support of the hunger strikers.

He said a prayer service will be held Thursday at St. George's Cathedral in Cape Town prior to his meeting with Vlok, and that another service was planned for Friday.

The Rev. Allan Boesak, along with Tutu one of the country's most influential anti-apartheid clergymen, announced Monday that he is fasting in solidarity with the hunger strikers.

"None of us wish to die," Boesak said in a letter to Vlok. "But if this is the road we must take to make you and your government understand the evil of your ways, we will take it."

Boesak, 43, is a mixed-race clergyman and president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. Tutu said of Boesak's decision: "That is how he believes God is calling him."

The strikers include about 170 detainees at Diepkloof Prison outside Johannesburg, 105 at St. Albans prison in Port Elizabeth and 21 at a Port Elizabeth police station. Many have been held without charge since a state of emergency was declared in June 1988.

Vlok said the meetings with lawyers are part of a continual process of reviewing the cases of an estimated 1,000 detainees. He said those deemed to pose no threat to state security would be released.
