Bush vows to stand with Tower on vote

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush vowed today to "stand strongly" with Defense Secretary-designate John Tower through a Senate floor vote despite the Armed Services Committee's rejection of Tower's confirmation because of questions of character.

"I'm going to strongly continue to back Senator Tower and I don't believe he's going down the drain," Bush told reporters in Tokyo, where he was attending the funeral of Japan's Emperor Hirohito.

The committee, voting strictly along party lines, recommended by 11-9 Thursday night that the Senate reject Tower's nomination after Democrats expressed continuing concerns about questions of his character.

"I cannot in good conscience vote to put an individual at the top of the chain of command when his history of excessive drinking is such that he would not be selected to command a missile wing, a SAC bomber squadron or a Trident missile submarine," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the committee chairman, said before the vote.

Bush, faced with a political defeat at home as he made his global debut at the Hirohito funeral, said he believed lingering doubts about Tower would be answered when the full Senate takes up the nomination.

"I am going to strongly continue to back Senator Tower," Bush said as he left the U.S. ambassador's residence in Tokyo. "I am hoping that this debate that will follow next week will clear up any questions."

"I haven't considered any options. I stand strongly with John Tower," said Bush.

Tower

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, in Tokyo with Bush, said it would be a mistake for Bush to withdraw the nomination in advance of a vote on the Senate floor.

"If he now pulled it I think all of you would say, 'this is a terrible thing. It shows that his judgment was flawed from the beginning,'" Baker said on CBS This Morning.

The committee vote marked an abrupt departure from the month-long honeymoon between the new Republican president and the Democratic majorities of Congress, but Bush said he still believes his relationship with Congress "is still going fine."

Should the full Senate reject Tower, it would be the first time in history a newly elected president had suffered a rejection of a nominee to his first Cabinet. In all, eight Cabinet nominations have been rejected, the most recent 30 years ago.

A handful of Democrats suggested after the committee vote Thursday night that Bush seek a replacement for Tower before next week's scheduled floor vote. "It doesn't do the president any good," said Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia. "It's a tremendous burden for any nominee to go to the floor with a vote of no confidence."

But the White House quickly rejected that suggestion.

"There's no consideration of alternative candidates," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters traveling with the President in Japan. "There's no alternate list — bar none."

"He'll be working to contact senators throughout the days ahead, sometimes by telephone, sometimes in person," he said.

Tower, a former Texas senator who had once chaired the committee, said in a statement he was "obviously disappointed" but would continue to work at the Pentagon "and await the vote of full Senate."

The strictly partisan vote climaxed an extraordinary 2½ hour night-time committee session at which lawmakers swapped views on the FBI's investigation into numerous allegations against him.

Tower has been dogged by allegations about his drinking habits and womanizing, as well as by questions of possible conflict of interest posed by his earning hundreds of thousands of dollars as a defense industry consultant after leaving the Senate.

The committee's senior Republican, John Warner of Virginia, said Bush was entitled to a Cabinet of his own choosing. Warner noted that many of the senators who had served with Tower had been questioned by the FBI during its investigation.

"Not one single U.S. senator, not one who has served with John Tower can ever recall a single instance where any of his personal habits interfered with his duty,"

Banks raise prime rate to 11½%

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An increase in banks' prime lending rate to 11.5 percent, the highest level in over four years, is a direct outcome of the Federal Reserve's attempt to crack down on inflation, economists say.

Chase Manhattan Bank and Republic National Bank of New York announced the half-percentage-point increases in the benchmark rate on Thursday, and other banks were expected to follow their lead today.

Banks use the prime rate as a base for setting rates on a wide variety of business and consumer loans, including car loans and adjustable-rate home mortgages.

The increases, effective today, lift the prime rate to its highest level since November 1984, when it reached 11.75 percent. In the past year the rate has jumped 3 percentage points. The most recent rise, to 11 percent from 10.5 percent, was on Feb. 10.

The Federal Reserve has been trying to keep inflation under control by slowing down the economy. It does that by draining reserves from the banking system, which drives up short-term interest rates and discourages borrowing.

Banks are passing along higher rates because their own cost of funds has risen and demand for loans remains strong, said Alan Lenz, director of trade and economic

Sheriff organizes search for missing Pampa man

Gray County Sheriff Jimmy Free said this morning he is organizing a search for Robert Eldredge French, 66, of Pampa, who was reported missing on Wednesday evening.

Sheriff Free said the search would get under way at 2 p.m. today, with those helping in the search gathering at the Gray County Courthouse.

The sheriff said the search would be conducted in the fields around Pampa. He said airplanes also were being called out to try to spot French from the air.

Free said the air search would be conducted around Pampa and over to Wheeler, "as far as we can go before dark."

French, who suffers from Alzheimer's disease, is 5 feet, 9 inches tall, 135 pounds, with light brown/gray collar-length hair and blue eyes. When last seen, he was wearing a blue telephone company cap, safety glasses, blue jeans, a brown plaid shirt, tan vest and brown boots.

French also has three teeth missing after a recent fall.

Free asked that if anyone spots French or has any information that might help with the search, the Pampa Police Department or Gray County Sheriff's Department should be notified immediately.

Passengers missing after hole rips open jumbo jet fuselage

By STEVE ELLIOTT
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — The fuselage of a United Airlines jumbo jet ripped open shortly after takeoff today and eight to 11 passengers were apparently sucked from the plane, federal aviation officials said. The damaged airliner returned for an emergency landing with at least 11 other passengers injured.

Initial reports had referred to an explosion aboard the Boeing 747, but there was no immediate confirmation. Some passengers described hearing an explosion, while others described a hissing sound and a "tearing away of the plane."

National Transportation Safety Board spokeswoman Druella Andersen said the jet had departed Honolulu International Airport with 336 passengers and 18 crew members at 1:53 a.m. for Auckland, New Zealand, and Sydney, Australia. It returned 40 minutes later with a 10-by-40 foot vertical hole in the forward baggage area on the right side of the airliner.

"You could drive an ambulance through it, you could see the seats and the baggage compartment from the outside," said Ray Mews, a photographer for KGMB-TV.

Two of the plane's four engines had failed, apparently losing power after the incident, according to JoAnn DeCampra, a dispatcher at the airport.

Barbara Abels, an FAA spokeswoman in Los Angeles, said eight to 11 passengers were believed missing from the plane, United Airlines Flight 811, which had originated in San Francisco and stopped at Los Angeles.

"United can confirm that there have been fatalities and injuries," said airline spokeswoman Sue Moss in Chicago.

Abels said authorities had no immediate clue as to what caused the hole, and a crew from the National Transportation Safety Board was en route to investigate. The FBI also was investigating.

"There's no reason to assume it's a bomb at this time," she said but added authorities hadn't ruled out that possibility.

Passengers gave differing accounts of how the hole might have originated.

Rochelle Perel, 48, of Beverly Hills, California, who was sitting next to the seats that blew away, said, "there was kind of a hissing sound, like air and then a tearing away of the plane. It didn't sound like an explosion. It sounded more like the plane coming apart and a large section of the aircraft on the right side just blew away with the passengers in those seats with it."

Max Thompson of Denver said his wife Sherry Peterson, a passenger on the plane, told him by telephone: "Our plane just blew up over Hawaii." "She said it was like a very loud pop, like you would pop a paper bag. Four rows of seats were just gone. It even sucked her earrings off," Thompson said, adding his wife was uninjured.

"All of a sudden, I could see the sky and feel the wind," said passenger Koji Yamamoto, 23, of Osaka, Japan. "The roof was breaking. Something was blowing toward us."

"All of a sudden it was like a dream," said passenger Gary Garber of Los Angeles, one of those who suffered minor injuries. "A section of the plane wasn't there any longer," he told the Associated Press in a telephone interview from Kaiser Hospital.

Garber said he was sitting in the center aisle. "The people who were sitting adjacent to me next to the window ... there was, I'd say, near six or eight of them were blown out the plane with the hole and we were sitting about a foot-and-a-half, two feet from the hole."

Airport security put the passengers in a roped-off area in the terminal. Passengers were lying on the terminal floor on airline pillows and blankets. One man had an ice pack on his head and one wore a life jacket. Others formed a long line at telephones to call relatives.

Kaiser Medical Center said three passengers were being treated there for minor injuries. Straub Hospital said it treated five minor injury cases. St. Francis Medical Center says they were treating two passengers for minor cuts and scrapes, and a 49-year-old woman was in guarded condition in intensive care at Queen's Medical Center with cervical and abdominal injuries.

A Coast Guard helicopter and search plane searched the area 100 miles south of Honolulu "for any debris, any survivors that might be there," said Coast Guard spokesman Dave Goff.

The Navy ship USS Coronado and three Coast Guard cutters were expected to reach the scene by mid-morning, he said.

ACT I offers a mystery play that has intrigue and suspense

By LAURA ANDERSON
 Guest Reviewer

One of the most pleasurable obsessions I have is to curl up in bed or in an easy chair with a stimulating novel of intrigue and suspense — especially when I can't figure out the plot until the last chapter.

There are always bone-chilling books to read, but when the opportunity to see a thriller performed on stage presents itself, I appreciate that story more enthusiastically. It becomes more realistic.

Last night I previewed the current ACT I production, Thriller of the Year, a mesmerizing tale of mystery and deception by Glyn Jones. The play is directed by Gus Shaver, a veteran board member of ACT I (Area Community Theater Inc.)

Thriller centers upon the lives of five women, including Gillian Howard, a successful author of mysteries, portrayed by Dena Hartscock, who believes that life revolves around her alone.

Upon returning to her apartment from a gala celebration banquet held in honor of her latest accomplishment, The Lady is Dead, she finds her world collapsing into a tangled web of mendacious deception.

Is someone out to eliminate Gillian? What motive would Irene Knight, Gillian's publisher, played by Sandy Crosswhite, have for excluding her? Does Gillian's secretary, Madge Robinson, acted by Bettany Cisneros, harbor resentment for her?

Is it possible Edith Howard, Gillian's mother-in-law, played by Sherri Reynolds, would be capable of exiling her daughter-in-law?

Then there is the good doctor, Beryl Spence, portrayed by Paula Simpson. Could Gillian's husband be involved? Her agent? Maybe her publisher's husband?

If you are a lover of chilling, suspenseful mysteries, you won't want to miss this show. But a word of caution to those with weak hearts and nervous conditions: beware of special effects that may launch you from your chairs.

Performances are tonight and Saturday in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn. There will be an Italian buffet dinner in the Club Biarritz. The buffet is served beginning at 6:30 p.m., with a cost of $7.

The play will begin at 7:30 p.m. with an admission of $6 for those not having ACT I season tickets.

All lovers of mysteries should treat themselves to Thriller of the Year. Reservations can be made by calling 665-7212.

Captain convicted in cannibalism case

SUBIC NAVAL BASE, Philippines (AP) — A military jury spared a U.S. navy captain serious punishment after convicting him today of failing to help Vietnamese boat people who resorted to cannibalism to survive.

The jury of six Navy captains could have jailed Alexander Balian for 90 days and made him forfeit two-thirds of his pay for three months.

Instead, they gave the decorated Vietnam War veteran a reprimand, saying he erred last June 9 while his ship was in the South China Sea but deserved no further punishment than to be relieved of command, as he was in August.

Balian, 48, claimed he had been made a scapegoat over the incident and that "heroes like me are hung out to dry when they get in trouble."

The jury had acquitted him of the more serious charge of ordering one refugee shaken off ropes as he tried to climb aboard the amphibious landing ship USS Dubuque.

Balian, of Los Angeles, was accused of failing to render adequate assistance to more than 80

Vietnamese refugees in a leaky boat the Dubuque encountered about 250 miles north of the Philippine island of Palawan.

U.N. officials said 31 of the refugees later died. Survivors said they had devoured the dead to survive before Filipino fishermen rescued them on June 27.

U.N. officials said 31 of the refugees later died. Survivors said they had devoured the dead to survive before Filipino fishermen rescued them on June 27.

The jury found Balian guilty of dereliction of duty for failing to conduct an adequate inspection of the refugee boat; determine whether its sail was adequate; conduct appropriate medical examinations of visibly dehydrated refugees; provide necessary navigational equipment; provide adequate water and clothing to the naked, and take refugees aboard or see to it they were taken aboard or assisted by a Navy supply ship in the area.

The defense argued that he was under pressure from his commanders to reach the Persian Gulf, where the Dubuque served as mother ship for U.S. minesweepers and provided a backup force of 400 Marines.

Balian testified he did not pick up the refugees because he did not realize how desperate their situation was.

Dogs find drug-use evidence at school

Two visits to Pampa High School by security personnel with drug dogs earlier this week led to discoveries that indicated illegal substances had been used or stored in a second floor boys restroom, a school official said.

Assistant principal John Kendall said this week's visits by the drug dogs were the first time drug scents had been picked up in several months.

"Somebody could just be getting brave. At least the kids aren't keeping it in their lockers," Kendall said.

Students protest dorm drug searches

DENTON (AP) A University of North Texas policy of searching dorm rooms for drugs without a search warrant is a form of unconstitutional search and seizure, a student leader told about 200 students at a protest demonstration.

"We have a right to live in a cubicle free from unconstitutional search and seizure," Will Helixon, UNT student body president, said Thursday. "When they institute things that we're taught in our government classes are unconstitutional, what are we supposed to do?"

The 55-minute rally in an area designated for free speech on campus featured speeches from about 15 students.

Jerry Dibble, a dorm resident who helped organize the protest, said it was in response to new housing search policies.

"We are here today to organize our discontent and eradicate this policy," Dibble said.

Most speakers were critical of the policy, but some said it was needed to fight drug abuse at UNT.

At least eight dorm residents, including four suspected of being dealers, have been suspended during the 1988-89 academic year, officials say.

"We know that drugs are out of hand," said Kyeve Tatum. "Why don't you come up with a better solution instead of standing out here protesting?"

He believes the school's drug dog program is making progress, since no actual drugs have been found on the campus in several months.

In addition to searching the campus, the dogs were also walked around cars in the school parking lot. Kendall said no drugs were found during the parking lot search.

School officials have said the drug dog visits are random and unannounced, making sure that not even the PHS faculty will know when a search is about to be conducted.

Banks

On Wednesday, the Labor Department reported that consumer prices rose in January at an annual rate of 7.2 percent, the highest in two years.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan called the inflation trend disturbing and vowed to keep upward pressure on rates until the pinch succeeds in squeezing inflation out of the economy.

Since February 1988 the federal funds rate has jumped by more than 3 percentage points. This rate, the interest on overnight loans between banks, is closely controlled by the Federal Reserve.

The Fed drained reserves from the banking system on Thursday, seemingly indicating that it wants to keep the federal funds rate somewhere between 9.5 percent and 9.75 percent, said Giulio Martini, an economist at the investment firm Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. in New York.

Banks typically set their prime rate about 2 percentage points above the federal funds rate, which would translate to a prime of 11.5 percent to 11.75 percent, Martini said.

"This is essentially a correctly placed prime," Martini said.

Undocumented aliens a challenge for American Red Cross

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The more than 400 Central Americans staying in a former laboratory by the Rio Grande add up to an unusual task for the American Red Cross, an organization used to natural disasters.

"You take into consideration these people have had a long trip by bus, by train, many of them by foot," said David M. Townsend, disaster services director for the Red Cross' Midwest operations. "The've got everything they own either on their back or in a plastic garbage bag. For whatever reason they're here, they're cold, they're hungry, many of them have minor illnesses or injuries or something like that, and we feel it's just a real basic humanitarian need to provide these services."

Although he said it is chartered by Congress to provide aid primarily in natural disasters, such as floods and hurricanes, the Red Cross since Jan. 9 has cared for Central Americans in 10 buildings of a former U.S. Department of Agriculture subtropical plant research center near Brownsville's main international bridge.

More than 40,000 Central Americans have crossed into this country illegally near Brownsville since last spring, when the Immigration and Naturalization Service noted a sharp increase in political asylum applicants from that region.

Justice Department officials announced Thursday the government has authorized $3 million to pay the Red Cross for funding the shelter expected to swell in population with a new get-tough immigration policy of arresting and detaining denied political asylum applicants.

"It's certainly eased the burden, because this is not a traditional Red Cross role," Townsend said. "The stewardship of the money that's donated to the Red Cross for disaster purposes makes us not be quite as flexible or lenient in our spending as we would have been if this would have been a natural disaster, so to speak."

He said the organization has played minor roles in previous refugee situations, such as with the Southeast Asian immigrants of the mid-1970s and the Mariel boat lift of 1980, but never as primary provider.

"It's something that literally was not done before," Townsend said. The INS has reserved the shelter for family groups ordered detained and marked for deportation under the procedure that began Tuesday. Single adults face detention at the INS' minimum-security Port Isabel Service Processing Center northeast of Brownsville.

Those at the Red Cross shelter are free to come and go, but must report for nightly roll calls conducted by the INS, or face deportation in absentia. Lights go out at 10 p.m.

Wednesday night's total staying at the shelter was 425 people, but Townsend said it is equipped to house 1,000.

Some lone adults remain who arrived before this week.

Juan Bautista Luke-Castellon, 31, of Nicaragua, said he fled his country because he was told he would have to battle the rebels fighting the Marxist Sandinista government.

He said he, his wife and two sons left last summer, but he had to leave them in Guatemala because he did not have enough money for them to travel.

"I can't return to Nicaragua, because I'll die," said Luke-Castellon, who has been at the shelter about two weeks. "My hope is that my wife and children make it here somehow, so we can go to Miami."

He filed for political asylum four months ago, was denied and is awaiting a hearing before an administrative judge next month.

New arrivals receive health screenings in an on-premises clinic.

The immigrant families sleep on cots in former plant-experimentation laboratories. They receive three meals a day and have access to shower facilities and a row of 20 portable toilets.

"You notice how clean the place is?" Townsend asks a visitor, as children play in the hallway. "The (immigrants) do the cleaning and everything, and with very little urging. Most of them get up in the morning, grab a broom or a mop and go to work. So I've been very gratified with an association with these people."

"They're very cooperative, they feel very much that they are guests and they go out of their way to avoid any problem or any appearance of impropriety or anything like that."

Order has prevailed, Townsend added. "Essentially the guys in the shelter here police themselves," he said. "They make sure that everyone behaves. We've had no problems with discipline, with anything like that."

The shelter also has a few South Americans. Miguel and Eva Brito said they and their 9-year-old daughter sold all of their possessions in Ecuador to fly to Mexico, and paid a "coyote" (alien smuggler) a total of $3,300 to get them across the river into Brownsville.

Shortly after crossing Tuesday, the Border Patrol apprehended them and took them to the shelter pending deportation.

Mrs. Brito said it will be difficult to return to Ecuador, because they could not find work, but that they feel relieved to have made it through Mexico, where she said they were robbed.

Firemen inspect burned offices in Dallas complex. Plant explosion investigated

ALVARADO, Texas (AP) — Investigators prepared to begin their probe today of a fiery explosion that blew the roof off an explosives manufacturer and touched off a series of smaller blasts.

At least four people suffered minor injuries in the fire at Jet Research Center Inc. Thursday afternoon. The fire raced through a horseshoe-shaped building at the plant, which manufactures explosives for oil production.

A financial estimate of the damage was not immediately available.

An employee said the fire began when chemical powders she was mixing in a jar ignited. "It just blew up in my face," Corine Hines said. "I couldn't run because I couldn't see."

Lou Iliano, resident agent-in-charge of the Fort Worth office of the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms bureau, said his agency would begin an investigation of the incident today. "Our part in it right now is to determine that (the fire) was accidental," Iliano said.

Jet Research is a subsidiary of Dallas-based Halliburton Co., which acquired the company when it purchased Fort Worth-based Gearhart Industries in September 1988.

Arson suspected in blaze at gay center

DALLAS (AP) — Before the offices of the Dallas Gay Alliance were torched, someone ransacked the building and made off with computers and legal records, authorities said.

The Gay Alliance was one of three businesses destroyed early Thursday in a six-alarm fire in the Oak Lawn area about two miles north of downtown Dallas.

Fire investigators said the offices at 3920 Cedar Springs Road apparently were set afire about 5:30 a.m. Thursday by someone who stole complete file drawers that included records of a lawsuit the alliance filed against Parkland Memorial Hospital. No confidential information about AIDS clients was taken, gay leaders said.

The AIDS Resource Center of Dallas was housed in the Gay Alliance building.

Damage caused by the fire, which quickly spread through a common attic in the strip shopping center on Cedar Springs to several businesses, was estimated at $750,000, said fire Capt. J.E. Foster. No injuries were reported.

Arson investigators said they had no suspects.

Union Jack Hair Cutters clothing store and the Round-Up Saloon also were gutted by the fire, which was brought under control about 7 a.m.

A video rental store and a self-service laundry, which serve as bookends to the three damaged buildings in the strip shopping center, suffered minor smoke and water damage.

"At this point, we have so much damage and debris to dig through that it will take awhile to determine how the fire was set," Fire Capt. Randy Sanders said Thursday. "But we do believe it was set."

William Waybourn, president of the alliance, which operates the resource center, said he believes that the burglars sought specific documents. "I would say they were after files more than money or equipment," he said.

Waybourn said all services, including a food bank and a new program of low-cost anonymous testing for the HIV virus associated with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, would continue at new offices less than a block from the burned-out center.

Waybourn said signs of a burglary were evident in the charred debris. Desk drawers had been pulled out and file cabinets pried open, Waybourn said. A quick inventory revealed that at least three desktop computers were missing, along with computer discs, he said.

Empty bank-deposit bags were found at the back door of the facility. Less than $200 was believed to have been taken, Waybourn said.

Destroyed in the fire were six compressors used to administer an experimental pentamidine AIDS treatment for 80 patients per month. The center also lost equipment that was to be used for low-cost testing for the AIDS virus, a service that was to begin Thursday night.

FBI disputes value of Spanish-speaking agents

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

MIDLAND (AP) — The damages phase of a racial discrimination trial against the FBI has degenerated into a morass of confusing statistics and conflicting testimony.

The FBI's statistical expert says Hispanic agents are paid more than other agents. The statistician for the 311 Hispanic plaintiffs says the truth is just the opposite.

And the FBI is arguing Spanish-speaking Hispanic agents are valuable to the bureau, but don't deserve extra pay because pilots, undercover agents and lab technicians don't get bonuses.

The problem with that reasoning, plaintiffs' attorney Hugo Rodriguez said Thursday, is that pilots, undercover agents and lab technicians have not been found to be victims of discrimination, while Hispanics have.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled last September that the FBI discriminates against Hispanics in promotions, assignments and working conditions.

Bunton is now presiding over the damages phase of the trial, in which he will decide how the FBI should change its procedures and whether Hispanic agents should be compensated for suffering discrimination.

The class-action lawsuit was filed in January 1987 by Bernardo "Mat" Perez, then the No. 2 man in El Paso and the FBI's highest-ranking Hispanic agent. Eventually, 310 of the FBI's approximately 400 Hispanic agents joined Perez in the suit. The FBI has about 9,000 agents.

About 300 of those agents are pilots, which the FBI characterized as dangerous work that can be done only by experts. But they aren't paid more because their flying work comes under the scope of their regular duties, FBI lawyers and witnesses argued, trying to draw an analogy between knowing how to fly a plane and knowing how to speak Spanish.

But under cross-examination, John Covert of the bureau's manpower budget office said fulltime pilots don't handle a normal investigative caseload above their flying duties.

The plaintiffs contend Spanish-speaking Hispanics have to do other agents' jobs as well as their own: handling non-bilingual agents' phone calls, interrogations and transcript translations.

The plaintiffs contend such work on other agents' caseloads is above and beyond their regular duties, and that they should be paid overtime for it.

They also argue the FBI takes advantage of their language ability and ethnicity by assigning them an unequal number of dangerous undercover assignments and by sending them out of town, away from their families, for months at a time on boring wiretap-listening duties.

Hispanic agents are promoted slower because they are not given enough recognition for their work, Bunton ruled last year.

Both legal teams called to the stand statistical analysts who used different methods to reach conclusions favoring their sides.

Rebecca Klemm, who said she has billed the government $400,000 so far for her statistical services, brought forth statistics that showed Hispanic agents are paid more than non-Hispanic agents with the same seniority.

Gary LaFree, statistical analyst who has been paid $53,000 by the plaintiffs' two-man legal team, came up with statistics showing most, but not all, Hispanic agents are paid less than non-Hispanics with the same seniority.

In testimony littered with phrases like "bivariate linear progression," "linear regression" and "quadratic models," the two statistical experts criticized each other's work as being too simplistic or misleading.

Much of Klemm's testimony seemed aimed at disproving Bunton's ruling that the FBI discriminates against its Hispanic agents.

He should have thrown the cruller

I was having a cruller and cup of coffee at Donuts-R-Us the other day with some of the local fellows when the subject of the proposed Gray County Veterans Memorial came up. We got to talking about the military and I was surprised at some of the opinions I heard expressed.

I've always thought the Israelis had the right idea by demanding two years of service, either in public or military work after high school graduation.

But since we Americans usually only focus on the liberty that freedom provides and not the responsibility, such ideas are almost always rejected as fascist.

Anyway, one of my fellow cruller-munchers said something along the line of, "We're not in war and war is terrible and why have something like that veterans thing staring us in the face to remind us of war. Our society is already violent enough."

I nearly threw my donut at him. Whatever else this fellow may have accomplished in his life, a clear understanding of wars and those who fight them is not one of them.

During my six years in the Marine Corps, especially the first few weeks when I was in boot camp, I thought about war a lot.

Even though my occupational rating was public information and not artillery or some other overtly violent MOS, I knew I might have to be in combat some day.

I was being trained to kill. To destroy. To murder. I was being trained to do it better than the other guy, so I could come home without a body bag when the whole thing was over.

During those days of boot camp I would lie in my rack at night and think about a boot camp in the USSR. I would picture a young recruit like myself who was also learning to kill. Was he also trained to do it better than the enemy? Sure. I wondered if he and I would meet one day in some place like Libya or Iran or Nicaragua. I wondered who would return home alive and who would get the body bag.

Off Beat

By Bear Mills

Fortunately, those thoughts never materialized into reality. But they made me forever aware of how serious war is and how we must work to avoid it. I also realized that if and when we are thrown into a war again, we must fight like the dickens to win. We must fight to win because human life is too precious to waste on losing.

I realized something else too. I was fortunate. I wasn't 18 when World War II or Korea or Vietnam came along. If I had been, I would have been drafted, had I not signed up voluntarily. I might have been killed by some soldier who was a little quicker or luckier than I was.

That's why I admire the men and women who have given their lives for our country. They were just normal Joes like you and me, who were called on to make a sacrifice none of us can ever fully thank them for.

I really believe we owe their memory a memorial like the one the local veterans are planning. I also believe such a memorial will remind us how serious war really is and how much our freedom cost.

I wish our veterans groups well as they continue to raise money for the memorial.

And the more I think about it, the more I wish I'd gone ahead and tossed a cruller at the guy in the donut shop. He had it coming.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Time for public to use its power

Power to the people! — as they used to say in the sixties. A firestorm of opposition across America, fighting up radio talk shows and sending millions of tea bags to Washington, forced Congress to cancel its own scheduled pay raise. The American people finally had enough, and said no to the Capitol Hill lim-flam. For once our servants listened, and did the right thing.

The political fallout has hurt House Speaker Jim Wright, who strongly supported the undeserved and unneeded raise, and who right up to the end manipulated events — until events overwhelmed even his immense talents. Wright is damaged; you could see the rage seethe beneath his crocodile grin. But he probably will find a way to slither out of the mess. He has already sold himself to the special interests, meaning that nothing else he does really matters. He made a mistake, but he's still their wholly-owned subsidiary.

The vote also embarrasses President Bush. Though he holds the only national position chosen by the American people (though somewhat indirectly through the electoral college), he sided with the high-rollers and against the interests of the people. Even in ultimately rejecting the pay raise, he did so only to buy Congress's favors. That, contrary to conventional pragmatic wisdom, was bad politics. He might better, following Ronald Reagan's successful first-term script, have gone over the heads of the congressional leaders and rallied public sentiment against them.

He also has supported a tax increase to bail out the savings and loan industry, making him 0 and 2 in sticking up for the interests of regular Americans. One more strike and he'll strike out. That's no way to spend spring training in the Washington League.

What Americans need to do now is to press on from this gain. Congress has been collared once; it can be done again. The first thing to do is find another popular issue — fast. How about balancing the budget without tax increases?

Congress will hate it just as much as it hated rolling back the pay boost. With this and future doses of castor oil, Congress might become so healthy that it will restore government of, by and for the people. But we're dreaming. Anyway, the thought of it is fun.

One more thing: Throughout the pay-raise debate, our congressmen and their partisans said that, with the old "low" pay of $89,500 per year, good people would be driven out of government "service." Let's watch how many wagon trains load up on Capitol Hill and head off into the sunset. Watcha guess it'll be none?

"It's nice to be with you..."

Let's whoop it up to make 38

WASHINGTON — James Madison is in his grave, but a constitutional amendment he sponsored in 1789 goes marching on. The event went almost wholly unreported in the news, but on Feb. 7, Iowa became the 26th state to ratify the "put off the pay raise" amendment.

This is beginning to get exciting. To recapitulate a story that most of the country knows nothing about, Congress in September 1789 approved 12 proposed amendments to the Constitution. By 1791, 10 of them had been ratified by the states; we know them as the Bill of Rights. Two of the proposals failed of ratification at that time. One dealt with apportionment of the House of Representatives and is of no current interest.

This was the forgotten 12th: "No law varying the compensation for the services of the senators and representatives shall take effect until an election of representatives shall have intervened."

It is marvelously simple, is it not? Thirty states have similar provisions affecting their own state legislatures. If the amendment had been part of the Constitution a few weeks ago, members of Congress might have voted a substantial raise in their compensation — but they could not have received it until after the congressional elections of 1990.

All but one constitutional amendment since the 18th Amendment of 1919 has carried a kind of statute of limitation: The article would be inoperative unless it were ratified within seven years of submission to the states. Madison's proposed amendment of 1789 carried no such limitation.

It is a nice constitutional question if the 200-year-old proposal is still validly before the states. In what is known as the Dillon case of

James J. Kilpatrick

1921, the Supreme Court approved the power of Congress to fix a seven-year period for ratification. In the process the court threw cold water on the idea that resolutions of amendment could stay alive forever.

That view, said Justice Van Devanter for a unanimous court, is "quite untenable." These comments were dicta, not relevant to the question before the court, which had to do with the 18th (Prohibition) Amendment.

The matter came up again in 1939 in the case of Coleman v. Miller. The case involved an open-ended amendment to prohibit child labor, submitted to the states by Congress in 1924. Was it still subject to ratification in 1937? This time the court backed away from the digressive pronouncements in Dillon. The viability of a constitutional amendment, said Hughes for the majority, is a political question, not a judicial question.

Thus the constitutional question is very much alive. My thought is that the amendment itself is also alive. Six states (Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Delaware, Vermont and Virginia) ratified between December 1789 and December 1791. Ohio suddenly came to life and ratified in 1873. Wyoming came along in 1978. Then the forgotten amendment picked up steam. Maine ratified in 1983, Colorado in 1984. Five states joined the parade in 1985: South Dakota, New Hampshire, Arizona, Tennessee and Oklahoma. The following year saw three more: New Mexico, Utah and Indiana.

The movement toward ratification now is rolling steadily along. Arkansas, Montana, Connecticut and Wisconsin ratified in 1987; Georgia, West Virginia and Louisiana gave their consent in 1988. And on Feb. 7 Iowa shouted its approval by 44-0 in the state Senate, 86-2 in the House of Representatives.

Thirty-eight states must ratify an amendment in order for it to become part of the Constitution. Iowa is No. 26. Idaho is virtually certain to make the count 27 (the proposition was approved in a state referendum last November).

If the magic number of 38 is attained it will be up to someone — or some body — to declare the amendment officially promulgated. That could be the archivist of the United States, on advice of the attorney general. Congress itself apparently has no more say-so in the matter.

My own thought is to whoop it up for the necessary 38. Madison in 1789 defended the measure: "There is a seeming impropriety in leaving any set of men without control to put their hand in the public coffers, to take out money to put in their pockets. There is a seeming indecorum in such power, which leads me to propose a change."

A seeming impropriety? A seeming indecorum? In the past month the American people have spoken in unmistakable language to the point. No raise without an intervening election! And thank you, Mr. Madison.

The lawyer has the problem

A good shoeshine man can make twice the national minimum wage — easily. Why aren't there more of them?

Let me tell you about Ego Brown. As a federal worker in Washington, D.C., he saw the plight of the homeless as an opportunity.

Brown quit his government job and set up a shoeshine stand — and then another and another.

He staffed these portable outdoor shine stands with homeless people who'd been unable to qualify for other jobs. He washed them up and dressed them up in white shirt, bow tie and satin striped pants.

Each repaid him for equipment, bookkeeping and supervision with income from the first four shins each day. Earnings beyond that belonged to the shine man. Within days, therefore homeless men were entrepreneurs, self-sustaining.

Brown was on his way to opening dozens of these neat, profitable sidewalk establishments when District of Columbia officials closed him down.

They cited a 1905 regulation banning shoeshine stands except indoors or on private property.

Paul Harvey

Frustrated, Brown appealed the prohibition. He pointed out that hundreds of other street vendors operate legally on city sidewalks. Still the District said no.

City officials, meanwhile, are loudly protesting the plight of the "poor street people" — but when offered a chance to do something pragmatic about the problem they cited an archaic statute left over from the Jim Crow era and now nearly a hundred years out of date.

When the Wall Street Journal interested itself in Brown's problem, it found none of the usually vocal defenders of civil rights willing to support Brown's efforts.

One civil rights lawyer who works for the federal government said this: "Mr. Brown's business is demeaning; if he were on welfare at least he could keep his dignity."

Reread that last line; it says a lot about the bureaucratic mentality.

There is nothing "dignified" about welfare. Welfare is "plantation politics," a perpetuation of subservience.

Here is a creative black businessman who asks nothing more than to help himself and others — denied that fundamental civil right.

U.S. District Judge John Pratt has told Washington D.C., that he "may very well declare this regulation unconstitutional." He suggests the city act immediately in Brown's favor. It hasn't yet.

Whatever the outcome, I will remain troubled by the response from that government lawyer who considers shining shoes "demeaning" and who considers welfare "dignified."

Brown has a problem; that lawyer's parasitic premise is the problem!

They would execute freedom of speech

By CHUCK STONE

SAN FRANCISCO — Advocates of censorship, like Homer's gods, "go in various disguises": Pakistani and Indian Moslems trying to banish a book, Christians trying to banish a movie, Jews trying to banish a speaker, or blacks trying to banish a newspaper.

Whenever a censorship crisis erupts, I manage to be in the one geographical area where free speech has always gotten an audacious working over.

Last summer, I was in Berkeley when Catholics and Evangelicals mounted a censorship offensive across the bay in San Francisco against the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ."

A few days ago, I was in San Francisco when Pakistani Moslems were assaulting an American cultural center in Islamabad to protest the U.S. publication of a book, "The Satanic Verses," that has offended them as "blasphemous."

Ironically, I was in town to participate in a program on the First Amendment and racism at San Francisco State University. For some of San Francisco State's black students, the First Amendment offers no protection for racist ideas.

Last October, a group of black students accused the university paper of being racist and physically threatened its editorial staff, after warning the editors not to print a correction to an erroneous story written by a black woman reporter.

Their action differed little from Dartmouth College members of the school's right-wing newspaper, the Dartmouth Review, who physically destroyed anti-apartheid shanties on campus two years ago.

Theirs was not an issue of freedom of speech as was Nation of Islam minister Louis Farrakhan's grievous slur of Judaism as "a gutter religion." Deploable as it was, he had a right to say it.

"It makes a difference whose ox is gored," Martin Luther wryly noted, but that difference depends on the intent behind the goring. Malice is the basis for libel. But the unrestricted right to satirize is probably the First Amendment's most precious possession.

Moslems living in nations without a history of First Amendment freedoms, however, see no satirical merit in "The Satanic Verses." They have condemned it as blasphemous, and that's an almost impossible accusation to counter, despite Supreme Court Justice Marshal Harlan's famed protective covering for the First Amendment, "One man's vulgarity is another's lyric."

For Sayyid M. Syeed, general secretary of the Association of Muslim Social Scientists, no First Amendment protection exists for a book that is "pornographic ... a vulgar kind of thing ... (which) should not have been published."

In the language of censorship, that's known as prior restraint. Historically, American courts have rejected prior restraint by permitting the publication of literature that some have condemned as obscene or the showing of movies denounced as blasphemous.

The University of California at Los Angeles seems to have parted company with America's historical affection for the marketplace of ideas. A Neanderthal policy prohibits student publications from publishing "articles that perpetuate derogatory cultural or ethnic stereotypes." Recently, a cartoon in the student newspaper poked fun at affirmative action (a roster confirms its admission through affirmative action). I thought the cartoon was funny as hell, but several black students threatened violence unless the editor was punished. Threatened with suspension, he printed an apology.

Moslems can easily justify their protests by citing the UCLA policy. Satire notwithstanding, "The Satanic Verses" does nurture stereotypes about Islam. And stereotypes are fodder for the devil of censorship in various disguises. Whenever one of our own oxen is gored, we meet willingly with the executioner of free speech.

Among some Moslem groups, unfortunately, executioner is not a metaphor.

Hunting of buffalo in Yellowstone Park called a disgrace

LIVINGSTON, Mont. (AP) — Hunters call it the experience of a lifetime, a trophy retrieved from the long-ago days of the American frontier; critics call the century's first large-scale buffalo hunt a slaughter and a disgrace.

More than 15 percent of the Yellowstone National Park buffalo herds have already been killed this winter as they wandered beyond the park's boundaries to forage, victims of a state law that permits the shootings to avert the spread of disease to cattle.

A total of 500 likely will be killed by Monday. And the state was mailing letters today to 250 hunters, notifying them that they can come to Paradise Valley to shoot their buffalo if the beasts cross into Montana.

"If any animal, even a blood-thirsty Montana hunter, could be a part of this and say it's exciting, it's such stupidity that I can't believe it," said Cleveland Amory, president of the Fund for Animals in New York. "This is no longer a hunt, it's a massacre."

East Coast animal-rights activists are not the only people critical of the hunt.

Ellery Merrell, a 73-year-old rancher who has lived his entire life in Tom Miner Basin about 18 miles north of Yellowstone, said it was sickening to watch the buffalo fall.

"They're about as smart as a damned old milk cow," Merrell said of the bison.

Merrell said he had nine buffalo on his property Wednesday morning. He allows no buffalo hunting, but the animals are killed when they cross the road to other property, he said.

Its legendary lack of intelligence notwithstanding, the buffalo fascinates hunters and wildlife lovers equally. The stubborn, shaggy giants represent the frontier lost 100 years ago.

Many of the hunters, most of them Montanans who have Small herd of buffalo graze in field.

hunted all their lives, call the bison hunt an experience they will never forget.

U.S. Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-

Mont., said he had looked forward to killing a bison with his .44-magnum pistol, but was unable to get away for the hunt.

"I think that both the National Park Service and the state are acting in a responsible manner," Marlenee said. "There are too many buffalo in the park. The harvest of those buffalo is a humane harvest of animals that would otherwise starve to death."

For the state of Montana, however, it's an economic issue.

About half of Yellowstone's bison carry brucellosis, a disease which some scientists say could be transmitted to Montana cattle herds. Brucellosis causes cows to spontaneously abort their calves.

Herds could be quarantined if the disease should start to spread.

The Legislature cited that concern when it decided in 1985 to allow hunters to kill bison entering Montana. The previous winter, state wildlife officials shot 88 bison in Montana to control brucellosis.

But Louisa Willcox of the Greater Yellowstone Coalition dismissed disease as a justification for the hunt, saying cattle in the area are vaccinated against it.

"Theoretically, it's certainly possible," she said of the disease risk. "Realistically, it's not."

Once numbering in the millions, the buffalo faced extinction by late in the 19th century. Yellowstone's buffalo herd has rebounded from fewer than 50 at the turn of the century to about 2,700.

Park spokeswoman Jo Anzelmo said that even if all 700 hunters on the state's list were to kill a bison, the survival of the Yellowstone herds and the species is not at all threatened by the biggest hunting death toll of the century.

Anzelmo also said there would be another year like this one soon. Large numbers of buffalo are being killed this year because recent mild winters allowed the survival of many animals that normally would have died.

Texan opens cowgirl restaurant in New York

By JUDIE GLAVE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Hombres hankering for a bit of downhome cooking and a dose of cultural lore can get their fill at a new Texas-styled barbecue restaurant deep in the heart of Greenwich Village.

Some may dismiss the Cowgirl Hall of Fame Bar and Restaurant as the latest gimmick in a city that has a restaurant mortality rate of about 95 percent.

There are, after all, wagon-wheel booths, checkered tablecloths, a fake stone fireplace and antler chandeliers.

But the restaurant also has legitimate ties to the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame in Hereford, Texas.

Restaurant owner Sherry Delamarter has a licensing agreement with the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame which allows her to use its name and display artifacts from its museum in return for a percentage of the restaurant's yearly profits. She declined to give specific figures.

Delamarter, who was born in Waco and lived in Lubbock, Fort Worth and Arlington before moving to New York in 1979, got the idea for the restaurant after catering the Hall of Fame's national induction ceremony last year.

"I was so impressed with the museum," Delamarter said. "I'm sure most people don't even know there is one and I just felt the need to get the word out for them and support them in some way."

The 37-year-old Delamarter and her partners run three other restaurants in the Village: Tortilla Flats, a Mexican restaurant; Gulf Coast, which specializes in Cajun food, and Sugar Reef, which offers a Caribbean menu.

"I try to make my restaurants a cultural experience and I thought this was something that would honor the West and some pretty important but under-recognized women," she said.

The 120-seat restaurant, which opened to the public Wednesday, will honor four Hall of Fame members a year. There are 96 women in the Hall of Fame and 10 more will be added in June.

Singer Patsy Montana, inducted into the hall in 1987, will be the first honoree. Montana, who recorded "I Want to Be a Cowboy's Sweetheart" in 1936, is said to be the first woman in the United States to sell 1 million records in the country category.

The museum has lent Montana's awards, outfits she wore performing at the Grand Ole Opry and other items for display in the restaurant.

'I thought this was something that would honor the West and some pretty important but under-recognized women.'

The menu will include specialties from Montana's home state of Arkansas, including black-eye peas, meatloaf and cornbread.

The displays will be changed every four months.

Though the restaurant at 519 Hudson St. is in a spot where three previous restaurants have failed, Delamarter believes this venture will succeed "because of the decor, because it's going to be an educational experience ... but most of all because it's going to be fun."

Her staff, she says, is not made up of "professional restaurateurs, just friendly Texans." Everyone — the chef, bartenders and the waiters and waitresses — is either from Texas or "at least somewhere in the South."

"I've made that my top priority," Delamarter says. "I want that good ol' Texas homeyness to come through."

Delamarter poses in her restaurant in New York's Greenwich Village.

Smoking promotes unhealthy body fat

CHICAGO (AP) — People who smoke to control their weight are simply redistributing their fat and putting themselves at risk for potentially deadly illnesses, according to a study published today.

Smoking does reduce weight, the researchers acknowledged, but flab stays around the waist, increasing the chance for heart disease, diabetes — and early death.

"If you're a cigarette smoker who is continuing to smoke in order to control your body weight, or a non-smoker considering starting up again ... you're making a bad decision," said Dr. Reubin Andres, a co-author of the study and clinical director of the National Institute on Aging in Baltimore.

"There's no question that the risk of cigarette smoking is much greater than the risk of a few (excess) pounds of body weight," he said.

Cigarette smokers generally weigh less for their height than non-smokers and typically gain weight if they quit, the researchers acknowledged in their report in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

But in looking at the ratio of waist size to hip size in men over a period of 26 years, the researchers found that waist sizes generally were larger in relation to hip size among smokers than non-smokers.

Mean measurements among smokers were 35.7 inches at the waist and 39 at the hips, compared with a mean ratio of 35.7 to 39.5 among non-smokers, the researchers said.

The more a person smokes, the larger the comparative waist size, the study found.

While the difference between the two ratios is small, Andres said previous studies have indicated this can have a big effect on risks of heart disease.

"If you are fortunate enough to be shaped with the fat down around the hips, then you have a relatively safe form of obesity," Andres said. "You are less likely to have high cholesterol, high blood pressure and diabetes."

How smoking causes differences in fat distribution is unclear, Andres said, but cigarettes could affect hormones or could have a drug-like effect on their own.

Andres said no data on smoking and body-fat distribution is available for women, but "one can hypothesize that women will show the same sort of changes" as men.

Emperor Hirohito's body laid to rest after 13-hour funeral

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — The body of Emperor Hirohito today was sealed inside a hillside crypt and offerings were made to his spirit, ending a 13-hour funeral attended by the largest gathering of world leaders in modern history.

A day of elaborate ceremony concluded by torchlight shortly before 9 p.m. after the coffin was placed on a cart and pulled 33 feet up a slope. It was then moved inside a prepared stone tomb dug into the hillside and sealed with concrete.

Hirohito's mound-like mausoleum is in a grove of towering cypress trees at the Musashi Imperial Cemetery west of Tokyo.

Worshiped as a living god and branded a war criminal during his long life, Hirohito was honored by the presence of official representatives of 163 nations at some of the ceremonies, including President Bush and his wife, Barbara, who sat in the front row covered with blankets to protect them from the winter chill.

Hirohito renounced his divinity in 1946 as Japan began its climb from the ashes of World War II.

Bush, the collar of his black overcoat turned up, paused in front of the coffin and lowered his head in a slight bow when his turn came to approach the coffin.

"The people will remember him forever," Emperor Akihito eulogized during the ceremony, expressing his "overwhelming emotion" and "extreme sense of sorrow." He thanked the Japanese and foreigners who sent condolences.

The $74 million, 13-hour funeral began with private Shinto rites within the walls of the Imperial Palace in downtown Tokyo. The body was then driven to Shinjuku Imperial Gardens for the main ceremony.

The metropolis of 12 million people came to a virtual standstill and 32,000 police mounted the largest security operation in Japanese history.

Police estimated 210,000 people — braving the wet and 37-degree temperatures — lined the streets as a black hearse carrying the lace-draped coffin drove at 6 mph from the palace to Shinjuku gardens.

The motorcycle-escorted, 32-car procession passed Parliament, the democratic core of modern and officers arrested five people. Protesters carried banners denouncing the funeral and attacking Hirohito for his role as titular leader during Japan's World War II aggression.

But others cried or clasped their hands together in prayer as Hirohito's coffin passed.

Hirohito renounced his divinity in 1946 as Japan began its climb from the ashes of World War II toward spectacular economic success.

Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko led the imperial mourners, but Hirohito's 85-year-old led by Emperor Akihito. The body of Hirohito, who died of cancer Jan. 7 at age 87, was encased in an inner wooden coffin and an outer one of metal.

In his eulogy, Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita referred to Hirohito by his posthumous name, Emperor Showa.

He described Hirohito's 62-year reign as "eventful and turbulent times for Japan, including the calamities of that deplorable war, the struggle to reconstruct itself from the ruins amid confusion and dire poverty and to regain its full independence..."

"During all these years, Emperor Showa ardently wished for world peace and the well-being of the Japanese people."

A bomb exploded in a roadside embankment about 20 minutes before a motorcade carrying his body and members of the imperial family passed by on its way to the burial ground.

Police said groups opposing the emperor system staged 11 demonstrations in the Japanese capital, and officers arrested five people in disturbances.

The Japan Communist Party

boycotted the funeral and some members of the main opposition Japan Socialist Party stayed away from the Shinto ceremonies while attending the state ones.

A 72-year-old farmer, Morie Hiroki, tried to commit suicide by ritual disembowelment, or harakiri, on the southern island of Kyushi.

Police said Hiroki was in serious condition after slashing his abdomen with a kitchen knife. The World War II army private, who served in China, left a note saying he felt he had to follow his emperor in death.

Police said 4,300 people took part in 11 anti-emperor demonstrations and rallies in the capital widow, the Empress Dowager Nagako, did not attend the public ceremonies due to reported poor health.

At the Shinjuku gardens, 51 black-robed men carried the coffin on a 22-foot-long palanquin to a wooden shrine for Shinto rites

Gorbachev visits Chernobyl site

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev inspected the site of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster for the first time Thursday, and an official said the president discussed safety measures taken since the 1986 reactor explosion.

The 57-year-old Kremlin chief visited the Chernobyl nuclear power plant's control room and the hall where turbines generate electricity, said Yuri Risovany, a spokesman for Kombinat, the company running the plant.

The April 26, 1986 explosion, the world's worst nuclear power disaster, sent a cloud of radiation around the world and killed at least 31 Soviets. It also shocked many Soviets into reassessing the safety of nuclear power.

Gorbachev met with plant managers and workers and discussed safety measures taken after the explosion, the spokesman said in a telephone interview.

Three of the plant's four reactors were operating during Gorbachev's visit, Risovany said. The damaged No. 4 reactor, encased in a steel-and-concrete shell, does not operate.

The visit to the plant, 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, came on the third day of a four-day trip to the Ukraine.

Gorbachev then traveled to Slavutich, a town 30 miles to the west built to house plant workers after the accident. Workers previously lived in Pripjat, a city just a few miles from the stricken plant.

Gorbachev met with Kombinat officials to discuss their work and returned to Kiev, Risovany said.

In Kiev, Gorbachev met workers, farmers and Communist Party activists and other Ukrainians, the official news agency Tass reported.

The official Soviet media carried no immediate reports on Gorbachev's visit to Chernobyl and Slavutich.

In Kiev on Monday, Gorbachev assured residents concerned about the safety of a nuclear power plant being built on the Ukraine's Crimean Peninsula that Soviet officials are taking a very cautious approach to nuclear power.

Bookstores decide to put 'Satanic Verses' back on shelves

By TINA SUSMAN
By The Associated Press

Pro-Iranian militants holding American hostages in Lebanon Thursday vowed revenge for the publication of The Satanic Verses, but publishers in France and West Germany reversed decisions not to put out the book, and two U.S. bookstores returned it to the shelves.

Former pop singer Cat Stevens, who gave up a successful music career in 1977 after becoming a Moslem, supported Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's execution order on the book's author, Salman Rushdie.

In London, Stevens, whose hits included "Peace Train" and "Wild World," endorsed Khomeini's death sentence, telling Moslem students: "The Koran makes it clear — if someone defames the prophet, then he must die."

Stevens took the name Yussuf Islam and founded an Islamic school in north London after leaving music.

The U.S. bookstore chains of B.

Dalton and Barnes & Noble, which last week pulled the book from their shelves, both reversed themselves after nationwide rallies by writers and said they would have The Satanic Verses in stock in about 10 days.

Police in Canada said they received a bomb threat against the Iranian Embassy in Ottawa.

A Yugoslav republic joined the global chorus of condemnation of the death threats and criticized this week's visit to Belgrade of Iran's president.

Rushdie, 41, born into a Moslem family and living in London, was in hiding for the tenth day along with his wife, American novelist Marianne Wiggins, who canceled her own book promotion tour to stay with her husband.

Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which holds Americans Alann Steen, Robert Polhill and Jesse Turner in Beirut, released a statement threatening to take revenge against Rushdie, the book publishers and their supporters. The statement was accompanied by photographs of the hostages but it did not specifically threaten the men or any of the 12 other foreign hostages in Lebanon.

The group said it will "take revenge against all those who took part in strong and ferocious campaigns against Islam." The revenge will cover "all institutions and organizations that insulted in one way or another" members of the prophet Mohammed's family, it said.

Some say The Satanic Verses insults Islam by portraying the prophet's wives as prostitutes and suggesting he wrote the Koran rather than receiving it from God. Iranian clerics offered $5.2 million to anyone who killed Rushdie.

Rushdie apologized Saturday for the distress the book has caused. Khomeini, who on Feb. 14 called for Rushdie's death, rejected the apology.

In West Germany, the prominent Kiepenheuer and Witsch publishing house of Cologne said Thursday it will publish the German-language edition of The Satanic Verses.

Postal Service warns public against 'boiler room' scams

The U.S. Postal Service today warned the public about the increasing number of "boiler room" scams that use the telephone to pitch a variety of products, usually attached to a "free gift" gimmick.

Chief Postal Inspector Charles R. Clauson says the bogus companies flood post offices with computerized mailings notifying people "they've won a prize," usually after offering for sale everything from vitamins to office supplies.

"The operators then follow up with high-pressure telemarketing," Clauson says, "usually asking for money or a credit card number to cover shipping charges."

Clauson says the best way to defend against the scams is to "check out the company and call them back — without giving out your credit card number or any money — and if still suspicious, get in touch with a postal inspector through the nearest post office."

Just last week a promoter and 12 telephone pitchmen were arrested in the New York City area for misrepresenting the sale of cleaning supplies. Several weeks ago four operators from Seattle, Wash., and Las Vegas, Nev., were arrested for mail and wire fraud for offering prizes as part of a nationwide promotion.

And in Houston, William E. Gardner, 35, operator of International Direct Mail Marketing Inc., is awaiting sentencing after pleading guilty to mail fraud charges.

He told those who responded to his mailing to call a Houston area phone number to claim a motorboat and outboard motor he said was worth as much as $500, as part of a marketing survey. The thousands who responded — by each paying more than $120 for shipping — received an inflatable raft and motor worth $40.

Chief Inspector Clauson says "the telephone boiler rooms have been concentrated in certain areas of the country but the victims come from all over."

If you receive, through the mail, such material as described, or if you feel you have been a victim of such a scam, please contact the U.S. Postal Inspector at (806) 762-7821, Clauson said.

Company says Texans recycle more aluminum

Texans recycled more beverage cans and other aluminum items than ever before in 1988, according to Van McPherson, Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company's manager for West Texas.

"Aluminum recycled at our locations in Texas last year totaled 34½ million pounds for which consumers were paid about $14 million," he explained. "This is the equivalent of 930 million cans, or 50 for each person in the state."

"The poundage recycled amounted to a 30 percent increase over 1987 and was the most that has been recycled through our facilities in the 19 years we have been operating in Texas."

Reynolds has 82 recycling facilities in Texas, including one location in Amarillo at 3615 Tower Street.

"We believe three main factors influenced these record results. Prices paid to consumers were the highest ever, sometimes exceeding 2 cents per can or 50-plus cents per pound."

"We expanded the number of recycling locations in Texas by opening 18 new recycling centers and eight recycling machines in 1988. And there was increased public awareness of the necessity and benefits of recycling," McPherson said.

Many people supplement their incomes by recycling, and schools, Scouts and charitable groups find it an easy way to raise funds for worthwhile projects.

The cash that recyclers are paid is "new" money for the local economy, because if the aluminum items had been discarded, the money would have been lost forever, McPherson said.

Since Reynolds introduced the concept of consumer aluminum recycling in 1968, the company has paid recyclers more than $900 million for returning the equivalent of more than 90 billion used aluminum beverage cans, McPherson said.

Reynolds' recycling efforts have accounted for the conservation of more than six million tons of bauxite ore, the raw material from which aluminum is made.

It also has saved more than 20 billion kilowatt hours of electricity since recycling aluminum saves more than 95 percent of the energy originally used to make aluminum from virgin sources, he said.

While beverage cans make up the vast majority of aluminum recycled, other aluminum is also purchased.

Reynolds purchases in manageable sizes items such as siding, gutters, storm door and window frames, lawn furniture tubing, castings including pots and pans, lawn mower housings, barbecue grills, auto parts, etc.

For the nearest Reynolds Aluminum Recycling center to your home, call toll-free, 1-800-228-2835.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself.

Luke 10:27

The basis of God's first and greatest commandment is love. God gave man the freedom to choose ... and therefore will not force his love on anyone. God took the first step and is always ready to receive any who would come to Him.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Boulware

Former pastor to lead revival at local church

Rev. Van Boulware of Webb City, Mo., is returning to Pampa for a three-day revival beginning tonight at the Community Christian Center church at 801 E. Campbell, according to Pastor Richard Burress.

Services will begin at 7 p.m. today, Saturday and Sunday evenings and at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Rev. Boulware pastored the church here in Pampa for almost three years starting in 1979. Since then he has served congregations in both Arkansas and Indiana.

Boulware has conducted special revival meetings in many area churches. He recently preached in a revival at Hutchinson, Kan., that lasted three weeks.

Pastor Burress said the public is invited to attend the revival services "and experience the anointing of the Lord."

"You will enjoy the ministry of Rev. Van Boulware," he said.

A nursery will be available for the revival services.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Finally, be strong in the Lord and in his almighty power. Put on the full armor of God so that you can take your stand against the devil's schemes. (Ephesians 6:10-11 NIV)

(This column was written with my husband's consent. What a guy! What a guy!)

I know my husband has a clear conscience because when he goes to bed he has trouble getting his feet off the floor before he commences to snore.

He comes from a long line of snorers, and he carries on the family tradition admirably. His snore isn't steady and monotonous; he sputters, honks, snorts, gurgles, hoots, tweets — and that's a mere prelude to his repertoire.

I'm a light sleeper, and my husband's nighttime serenade has frequently driven me to the couch in search of an uninterrupted night's sleep.

However, a few summers ago while vacationing, I accidentally discovered that an electric fan did much to drown out the snores. When we got home, I dug through the attic and found the biggest, loudest fan we had, and it has become a permanent part of our bedroom decor.

The sound of the fan is steady and strong; even when particularly gusty snorts from my husband's gifted throat break through the fan's sound barrier, I still can focus on the constant sound of the fan and go back to sleep.

We are bombarded daily by the snarls and shouts and taunts of temptation. They disrupt our concentration, corrupt our efforts and frequently send us running from the moral chaos in search of spiritual peace.

However, Christians have an effective sound barrier in God-powered faithfulness — faithfulness in prayer, Bible study, church attendance, private worship, Christian service, evangelism. The stronger our faithfulness habit becomes, the more effectively it drowns out the sounds of the world.

With Almighty God as our power and focus, we cannot be defeated.

Ham radio organization gives missionaries a link with home

By JUDY BERNAS
The Odessa American

MIDLAND (AP)—An amateur radio organization, Blessings for Obedience, may be the only link among some missionaries and their families in the states.

"It is a support ministry for Christian ministries to get in contact with their families or support ministries for supplies and needs," said Kelly Coleman of the group of Midland and Odessa ham radio operators.

Communication with families is done through phone patches. Someone is reached on a ham radio and asked to make a phone call in his area. Then radio and phone are connected and the call is made.

Coleman, a Midland oil investor, said the ultimate goal is to give missionaries easy access to stateside communications. The network, which meets from 3 to 5 p.m. CST on Sundays and 8 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays, has an average 50 listeners who check in.

Listeners are from Honduras, Mexico, Canada, Venezuela, Germany and many states. Coleman offers listeners the opportunity to voice their prayers or get in touch with their families.

"It's like having church around the world in a radio shack," Coleman said.

Coleman began the ham radio group with five members about three years ago when he met Don Matthews, who was interested in missionary work. Coleman went with Matthews to Jamaica in 1985 on a Youth With a Mission trip. While in Jamaica, he tried to find a way to contact his family in the states. He found a ham radio, but said, "Sometimes you could get through to the states, sometimes you couldn't."

That started their dream for Christian missionary radio in West Texas. But the two knew nothing about ham radio and its capability of reaching all areas of the world. Once the equipment was donated and purchased and their licenses in hand, the radio net began.

Coleman said some local ham radio listeners wanted to know how they could get involved, so the ham radio school evolved. Now, on Tuesdays, before the radio show, students hit the theory and rule books and the Morse code keys to study for their ham operator licenses.

Steve Buckley joined the radio class because he works with Comunidad Alabare, a Spanish mission in Midland. Buckley said he was attracted to ham radio because of his need to contact Mexico for the people he helps.

Brad Cox, a school teacher, helps Coleman teach the class. He's been on a ham radio since he was 13 and had wanted to get involved in the ham radio ministry.

When Hurricane Gilbert hit Jamaica in October 1988, Blessings for Obedience was the first there with relief, 80 tons of goods that the Permian Basin donated, Coleman said. Cox was sent to Jamaica with the supplies, including a radio to transmit to the states.

Blessings for Obedience would like to continue that kind of work, Coleman said. Help with radio equipment and supplies is needed.

To join the ministry or donate expertise and equipment, call the Blessings for Obedience office at 915-699-5149 or the warehouse at 915-687-3816.

School in Ohio houses works of reformer Martin Luther

By JAMES HANNAH
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP)—Equipped with protective lighting filters, a library basement at Wittenberg University is home to one of the nation's largest collections of the religious works of Martin Luther, leader of the 16th century Protestant Reformation.

Some materials in the collection are more than 500 years old. Some of the documents are kept in a safe. All require special permission to study.

"It's a real treasure for scholars," said Regina Entorf, special collections librarian. "So many of these things have been lost through fire and flood and bombing."

Entorf said the materials are invaluable to scholars who need to trace exact wording of important documents in the intellectual history of the Western world.

"A surprising number of people know that these are here," she said. "And we do have people come and study them from time to time. A lot of these things are irreplaceable."

The collection boasts about 350 books, pamphlets and prints, including all of Luther's collected works from the 16th century. The oldest is a Bible printed in 1478, only 23 years after the Gutenberg Bible was printed on the world's first printing press.

"It's a very beautiful thing," said Entorf. "It's in the safe, as is a letter that Luther wrote." The letter is to a parishoner and answers questions about eating meat sacrificed to idols.

She said the Wittenberg collection is one of the largest in the country. Other Luther collections include those at the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington and at Stanford University.

Some of the Wittenberg works were part of the original collection at the school, which was founded in 1845.

"Of course, the people are heavily Lutheran," said Entorf. "People just kept these books forever. And we've had a lot of gifts through the years. We've educated pastors from the very beginning of our history."

Wittenberg takes its name from the University of Wittenberg founded in Germany in 1502 by Frederick the Wise, a lifelong protector of Luther against the pope.

Luther was a professor of theology at the University of Wittenberg. He was the leader of the Reformation, a religious movement that led to a schism in the Catholic Church and the birth of Protestantism. His translation of the Bible into German helped create the modern German language.

The Wittenberg collection boasts numerous pamphlets written by Luther.

"This is what really spread the Reformation throughout Europe because these would go to pastors in small towns throughout Europe," she said. "And that's the way the word would spread."

Along with the 1478 Bible and the original Luther letter, the collection includes a Bible Luther translated from Latin into German in 1555, a Luther translation of the communion service from Latin into German and a 1570 church order prescribed by the government on how church services were to be conducted.

Entorf said the Wittenberg collection has held up well, with the bindings being virtually indestructible if they are treated properly.

"The content is interesting because the original text is here, and the scholars can trace that back," she said. "But the other thing that you have is a lot of history in the bindings. So these are interesting as artifacts to scholars as well as intellectual content."

Printing in the 16th century was often done on linen, which lasts indefinitely. Covers of the books are made of embossed pigskin or of parchment, which is dried lambskin.

Entorf said fluorescent lighting in the library basement has special shields to reduce the ultraviolet light and protect the works.

"We don't have climate control yet, but we're working on it," she said. "You need to keep it (the humidity) down in the summer and up in the winter. It has to be level."

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP)—Students from 20 Roman Catholic, Protestant, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish seminaries in the Northeast are taking part in a program of mutual visits to discuss and learn about each other's faiths.

Ellen Charry, director of the program called "Theology in a Pluralistic Setting," sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, says:

"The idea is for each of the students to have an opportunity to identify the distinctiveness of ... who they are ... and also adjust their thinking to take in a more realistic and full picture of who the others are."

Marcia Prager, a student at Reconstructist Rabbinical College in Wyncote, Pa., who took part in recent conversations in Washington, at Howard University Divinity School and Catholic University of America, says:

"People who are going to be religious leaders, if they don't know how to listen, are going to be lost in an endless forest of misunderstanding that will only aggravate past wounds."

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Roman Catholic leader says the Soviet release of a Lithuanian bishop gives "cautious hope" of improved conditions for religion in the Soviet Union.

Concerning release of Bishop Julijonas Steponavicius from more than two decades of internal exile and his return to Vilnius, Lithuania, Monsignor Daniel F. Hoye, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, said it is an added "sign of improvement in the situation of the church."

NEW YORK (AP)—An international group of 10 churchmen and statesmen has completed a series of appeals to industrial nations to apply economic sanctions against South Africa for its apartheid system.

Such sustained economic pressures are the last hope for peaceful change in that country, they maintained in visits with government leaders in Western Europe, Japan and the United States.

Their three-week tour, organized by the World Council of Churches, was concluded in early February with meetings with officials in Washington.

The Rev. Canaan Banana, former president of Zimbabwe and head of the groups, said:

"It's our considered view that economic assistance of any kind helps sustain the apartheid system and contributes to the suffering of the people there."

Government places some S&L 'crooks' on federal payroll

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

In their rush to catch up to thrift industry fraud and mismanagement, federal regulators may have unknowingly hired some of the culprits responsible for the savings and loan debacle, The Associated Press has learned.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board hired as many as 800 people — a "high percentage" of them from failed S&Ls — without performing background checks, government and industry officials said.

Two of them are now targets of criminal investigations. One is being prosecuted for alleged fraud committed last year at the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp., the agency that insures thrift deposits.

The other has been transferred from a top regulatory job while the FBI pursues a probe requested two years ago when his old S&L went under.

Regulatory officials in Washington did not know about that inquiry, which had been launched in Dallas, when he was hired last year.

The bank board made 6,000 such criminal referrals to the FBI from insolvent thrifts, asking the bureau to look into specific transactions and individuals.

When employees of failed thrifts are hired as regulators, "that's a risk, sure," acknowledged bank board spokesman Bill Fulwider.

Still, he added, "The assumption is it's generally not their fault the institution went down. They understand the assets, and they have expertise that's valuable."

Most of the people hired to handle the billions of dollars' worth of property and loans seized from failed thrifts are honest, officials said. Yet they expect to find more bad apples.

"I would not be surprised to see one or two instances of that emerging as the (Justice Department's bank fraud) task force proceeds," said U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins, who has been working on S&L fraud since the mid-1980s.

Added one longtime industry official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity:

"I would imagine there would be one or two others when you hire 800 people. Maybe 80 or 50 or 30 people — some percentage that drops over the line. ... It will take a long time before it all gets out."

The collapse of the S&L industry is expected to cost some $100 billion to resolve. A large portion of that cost, officials have said, results from mismanagement and outright fraud by S&L executives.

Some criminal activity is still going on, Collins said. "Some people feel they can take advantage because the system is currently overloaded by investigations," he said. "We'll be very attentive to them."

When the Justice Department task force uncovers evidence against an S&L official now working for regulators, however, it can't tip off the agency because of confidentiality laws, he said.

A private attorney specializing in bank fraud told the AP of a case he encountered where a former S&L official was hired by the government to handle repossessed properties even though he has a financial interest in some of the properties — a probable conflict-of-interest violation.

"As many people as they had and as many problems as they had, I wouldn't believe that's the only problem," said the attorney, a former white-collar crime prosecutor who asked not to be named because the incident involved a confidential attorney-client relationship.

As the S&L industry was deregulated and high-flying thrifts took off into speculative and sometimes fraudulent endeavors, federal regulators found their agencies grossly understaffed and unable to keep up.

By the mid-1980s, a hiring push was approved, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board found itself needing not only examiners but also real-estate and banking experts who could help handle the giant portfolios the government was seizing.

The people with experience and available for hire were the ones who had worked at the failed thrifts.

Until August 1986, they were hired under Schedule B, a government program that waives background checks to speed up the process, Fulwider said. After that, the bank board contracted with an agency to check new hires for criminal records. Checks have never been done retroactively.

Philip S. Noons was hired by the FSLIC in April 1986 after Mainland Savings, a Houston high-flier suspected of widespread fraud, was declared insolvent. Noons had been a project manager at Mainland, and he went to FSLIC managing Mainland assets.

On Feb. 8, the FBI arrested Noons and his 31-year-old twin brother, Thomas, and charged them with conspiring to embezzle money from the FSLIC by grossly undervaluing Mainland loans acquired by the FSLIC and then selling them to two Houston companies on behalf of themselves.

One package of 16 loans was valued by Philip Noons at $1,500, prosecutors said, while the FSLIC said the package is actually worth $1.6 million. In another case, the brothers paid $692,821 for a loan worth $4 million, the FBI said.

The Noons' attorney, David Berg, says that his clients are innocent and that the government has overreacted and overstated the amounts involved because of pressure for S&L action following President Bush's new plan. Neither brother was implicated in any wrongdoing while at Mainland, Berg said.

Regulators have also drawn fire for the hiring of Stuart Jones, a former real estate loan officer for Richardson Savings & Loan Association.

Jones was hired in October as deputy director of the bank board in charge of disposing of the agency's massive real estate portfolio, despite criminal referrals to the FBI about his conduct at Richardson, officials said.

In December, when officials in Washington learned about the request for an FBI probe made by Dallas regulators, Jones was transferred to a post that does not handle selling assets, Fulwider said. The investigation continues, he said.

Despite those two cases and suspicions of others, regulators say they do not believe they have a significant problem.

Mormons schedule Amarillo Stake conference

Bishop Robert A. Wood of the Pampa Ward, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has announced the Amarillo Texas Stake Conference will be held this weekend in Amarillo.

The Saturday meeting will be in Amarillo at 6:30 p.m. The Sunday meetings will be in Borger at 10 a.m. and Amarillo at 2 p.m.

Elder Ronald E. Poelman, member of the First Quorum of Seventy in Salt Lake City, Utah, will preside at all meetings.

Wood gave several outlines regarding the structure of the LDS church.

"The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has no professional clergy. Lay members chosen as regional and local officers are not paid for their services," Wood said.

"The General Authorities of the Church have their headquarters in Salt Lake City. They are led by the president of the church, whom members consider to be a prophet of God," he explained.

The president, along with his two counselors, make up the office of First Presidency, according to the bishop.

"Next to the First Presidency in authority is the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles. Other general authorities include the members of the First Quorum of the Seventy and a three-man presiding Bishopric that oversees temporal affairs of the church," he said.

The Saturday meeting will have a theme of "How Scriptures Help Us in Our Daily Lives." The Sunday meetings will have several speakers on a variety of topics.

Pampa's poor help each other

They say it doesn't happen in Pampa, but Good Samaritan Christian Services records say it does... hungry people do scavenge for food here.

"This month's family is an out-of-work grandmother with some children and grandchildren to care for," write Bill Ragsdale, Good Samaritan executive director in the February newsletter.

"There is NO family income," Ragsdale continues. "Someone is letting them live in a rent-free house. They had not come to the Good Samaritan for food because they were able to get enough to eat from the dumpsters. We are attempting to get them to return for more food, but they have made it so far with only one visit to the Good Samaritan."

Ragsdale says he has talked with grocery store employees who try to dump the food in a way that will not cause contamination. Others are ordered to unwrap the food, but manage to leave some in good condition anyway for people who dig through the trash containers looking for food.

Good Samaritan volunteers often see the poor helping the poor as extreme weather bills pile up and many construction jobs end.

"We have many times seen people open their homes to other people without shelter, when both are sitting, waiting for Good Samaritan to help them," Ragsdale writes. "We don't know how many people are in Pampa living in rent-free shelter provided by others just as poor."

"We have talked to people who have been living for several weeks with others and still don't know each other's last names," he adds.

In November, Good Samaritan helped with nine utility bills. In January, that number skyrocketed to 52. "We expect our reserve funds to take a nose dive in the next few months," Ragsdale predicts.

January records show 289 families applied for help through Good Samaritan and help was given to 278 of those families.

Some of those were not helped because their requests for utility or rent aid were higher than Good Samaritan could pay and the families had little hope of other aid or earnings, Ragsdale says. "We were able to aid some of these with additional help from churches and/or other agencies," he says.

Of those that were helped, 261 were from within Gray County. Two dozen families were newcomers to the area, while there were two each of people living within 25 miles of Pampa and transients.

One was referred by a church, 28 were referred by friends, two from news articles and seven from other agencies. More than 250 were return requests.

For the month of January, out-of-pocket expenses for Good Samaritan totaled $117.08 for food, $20 for clothing, $112.50 for rent, $2,409.10 for utilities, $188 for transportation, $92.09 for medical and $1.47 for miscellaneous.

Mom: little thief deserves no reward

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was in a grocery store with my two daughters, ages 4 and 7. After we left, I discovered that my 4-year-old had taken some candy, so I made her go back in with me, apologize to the manager and return the candy.

To my amazement, the manager rewarded her for her "honesty" by giving her and her sister more candy than she had stolen!

Abby, please tell shopkeepers to reinforce parents' efforts to teach children that stealing is wrong. I'm afraid that shopkeeper gave the wrong message to my children. The 4-year-old felt like a hero in front of her big sister for getting even more candy than she had taken.

Please comment on this.
MOM IN SNELLVILLE, GA.

DEAR MOM: You make a very important point. Rewarding a

Dear Abby

child lavishly for returning ill-gotten gains gives the child the impression that stealing pays off. The shopkeeper should have praised the child for owning up to her wrongdoing and told her sternly never to take anything again.

DEAR ABBY: I lost my wife after having been married for 30 years. We had one of those very good marriages that are all too rare these days. She died a little over a year ago, but she was a very sick woman for the last two years of her life.

After my wife was diagnosed as terminal, she told me that she had heard (she didn't say where) that men over 50 are highly susceptible to cancer of the prostate if they go without sex for very long. Is this true?

I certainly hope not, because my religion forbids sex outside marriage and I am in no mood to date another woman, let alone go to bed with one.

You can print this if you think it will help others, but I respectfully ask you to withhold my name and the name of my town. Sign me...
OVER 50 AND WORRIED

DEAR OVER 50: Cancer of the prostate does occur more frequently in men past 50, but it has nothing to do with sexual activity. See your physician for regular checkups, and don't worry.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and I are having a disagreement. Is it necessary to write and thank someone for a thank-you gift? This is not a joke. I am serious.

I had a houseguest over the holidays. She sent me a gift thanking me for my hospitality. My mother says I must acknowledge it. I say that she thanked me for my hospitality, and there is no need to thank her for thanking me.

What do you say?
ENOUGH THANKS, ALREADY
DEAR ENOUGH: It is not enough. You should thank her for her gift.

MacScotty charms young animal lovers

By APRIL BAIL

Just like the fabled Chinese water torture, the sight of one more wrinkly-skinned stuffed dog is going to put me over the edge.

I'm an old bulldog and boxer devotee, so it's not their looks that bother me. It's just that they're so, so, so... everywhere!

I am hereby on a campaign to broaden the fad to include dogs of all shapes and styles, particularly those with smaller skin sizes.

Take MacScotty, for example. Here's a nice a dog as you'll ever meet, standing about 15 inches tall from the tips of his fuzzy ears to the bottoms of his stubby little feet.

You'll have to take my word that his skin fits to a T, because MacScotty's guaranteed-not-to-shed long fur makes his skin size totally undetectable. Dare to be different, eh?

To underscore his heritage, this easy-to-make pooch wears a jaunty plaid tam and neck scarf. He makes a terrific afternoon project that will charm the young animal lover in your family.

MacScotty requires only 1/2 yard of shaggy fur fabric. As you cut the pieces, make sure the fur runs the right way.

Cut two body/head pieces, rounded at the rear and squared off at the nose. Overall size is about 13 inches long from chest to rear, 12 inches from top of head to bottom of chest, and six inches from top to bottom of the torso portion.

Sew a vertical dart in each one, at the bridge of the nose. Sew the two body pieces together, leaving an opening at the bottom. Turn right side out and stuff.

Cut eight stubby leg pieces, about 7x5 inches, rounded at the top. Stitch together in pairs, turn and stuff.

Secure the legs to the body with movable joints by stitching back and forth, catching only the inside layer of leg fabric.

For the tail, cut two curved triangles, about seven inches long. Stitch together, leaving the unpointed end open, and turn right side out. Stuff and whipstitch to the body.

For each ear, cut one fur and one felt piece. Stitch them together, turn, but do not stuff. Whipstitch to the head with felt side facing front.

Glue and stitch black buttons to the face for the eyes, and use a domed button for the nose. Glue on a small, red felt tongue.

To make the tam, cut an 11-inch-diameter circle from plaid fabric. Baste around the edge and gather tightly. Stitch a large black pompom to the top and whipstitch to MacScotty's head. Tie a ribbon scarf around his neck.

Our step-by-step plans for MacScotty include sewing tips, a materials list, full-size patterns and complete, illustrated instructions. To order, specify Project No. 2140 and send $4.95.

Mail to Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008-1000. Add $2.95 for our catalog.

One in four men risk heart disease

NEW YORK (AP)—Health statistics show that one in four American men have a high blood cholesterol level (240 milligrams or more), which may increase their risk of heart disease.

Medical experts say men can achieve a "desirable" level of less than 200 milligrams by consuming less fat and cholesterol. Each 1 percent reduction in cholesterol, say experts, causes a 2 percent reduction in risk of heart attack—one of the leading causes of death among adult men.

Nutritionist Barbara Beck of Dannon Yogurt suggests men lower fat and cholesterol intake by limiting meat, fish or poultry to 5 to 7 ounces per day, choosing only lean cuts of red meat and eating fish and skinless poultry more often.

She also recommends eating low-fat dairy products such as low-fat yogurt as an alternative to ice cream, or as a substitute for mayonnaise and sour cream in salad dressings and dips or on baked potatoes.

Odds makers favor Tyson

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — Frank Bruno carries the added weight of nearly a century of British heavyweight futility when he steps into the ring Saturday night against Mike Tyson.

Not since Bob Fitzsimmons lost the heavyweight crown to James Jeffries in 1889 has a British fighter held the title. Eleven times since then, Britons have fought for the crown, and each time they came away emptyhanded.

Odds makers figure Bruno, who became victim No. 11 when he was knocked out by Tim Witherspoon in July 1986, will also become No. 12 when he faces Tyson for the undisputed heavyweight crown.

"Being in America I know I'm the underdog," Bruno concedes. "And being a British heavyweight, I know I'm another underdog. But I get strength from it. I really do."

Bruno will need all the strength he can muster against Tyson, who will be making the eighth defense of his undisputed heavyweight title at the tender age of 22.

Bruno is a 7½-1 underdog in man-to-man betting and odds makers are taking even-money bets on whether the scheduled 12-round fight will last four full rounds.

Even Bruno seems to hedge his bet on the fight, talking vaguely about a "plan" and how Tyson's personal troubles have somehow made the undefeated champion vulnerable inside the ring.

"I've said from the beginning that I think this is a peak time to beat Mike Tyson and I'll stick to that," the British challenger repeated this week.

TV reports say Arkansas oilman Jerry Jones (above) has purchased the Cowboys.

any knowledge Thursday night of the NFL team's sale to Arkansas businessman Jerry Jones.

Cowboys under new ownership?

Reports say Landry will be replaced by Johnson

DALLAS (AP) — Amid reports that Dallas Cowboys majority owner H.R. Bright has sold the team to an Arkansas oilman, an aide close to Bright said negotiations are continuing with several prospective buyers.

"Jerry Jones is not someone to take lightly," aide Jim Francis said Thursday night. "We think he's serious. The Bright people are taking him seriously. He's a good guy and he'd make a good owner. He's for real."

"But there has been no deal. We're working on several deals. Some are ahead of others. Some are closer. Some are more real."

Francis' remarks came late

Thursday night after KXAS-TV in Fort Worth, citing unnamed sources, reported the Cowboys had been sold to Jones, president of Arkoma Exploration of Little Rock, Ark.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram, citing a source close to the negotiations, reported in today's editions that a deal is in place and could be completed as early as next week. That same source said if Jones' bid to buy the team and the lease to Texas Stadium is approved, there could be wide-sweeping changes in the organization, changes that could put Coach Tom Landry's job into question.

"Things are about to change," the source told the Star-Telegram. "If Jerry buys the team, things won't be the same."

KXAS reported that Jones, 46, would replace longtime Cowboys Coach Tom Landry with University of Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson, who played with Jones on Arkansas' 1964 national championship team.

Cowboys president Tex Schramm denied any knowledge of the KXAS report.

"This is all a complete surprise to me. It's totally new to me. I guess anything can happen, but I know nothing of it," Schramm told The Associated Press in a short telephone interview Thursday night.

Shortly after the sportscast, which aired at 10 p.m. CST, Landry said from his home, "I don't know a thing about it."

Schramm said he last talked to Bright on Wednesday, "and he said nothing about it." Although it was conceivable the team could be sold without him knowing about it, Schramm said, "I think it would be strange."

But Schramm also told The Dallas Morning News that he no longer is directly involved in the sale discussions. Earlier, Bright had instructed Schramm to solicit prospective buyers for the franchise.

Jones, who has been involved in sale negotiations for the last six months, recently intensified his efforts to purchase the Cowboys. He visited Bright's office at least twice last week, and a source in Little Rock told The News he has enlisted the services of an investment firm, Stephens Inc., to help raise funds for the purchase price.

"He's legitimate," Francis said.

Asked whether Jones was the top candidate to buy the team, a source close to the sale told the Dallas Times Herald, "You're sniffing up the right path."

Jones was not available for comment. Bright did not return phone calls from The Associated Press.

Dantley ends holdout

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Adrian Dantley was in Dallas today after an 8-day holdout, vowing to give the Dallas Mavericks 100 percent and let "bygones be bygones" in his contract dispute with owner Donald Carter.

Dantley, acquired by Dallas Feb. 15 along with a first-round draft choice in a trade with the Detroit Pistons for Mark Aguirre, arrived Thursday night and was given an enthusiastic welcome by a group of Mavericks fans at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

There were only a few boos and a few anti-Dantley signs, but they were in the minority.

The former Notre Dame star explained his holdout by saying "the circumstances of the trade were so unusual that I needed time to sort things out."

Dantley's contract, which calls for $1.2 million a year, was not renegotiated and the $45,000 that Dantley would have earned in the three games he missed still will be deducted from his pay, Carter said.

Asked if he thought it would be a good will gesture to pay Dantley, Carter said, "Good will has industries after it."

Dantley promised to give the Mavericks 100 percent.

"I haven't talked to (John) MacLeod yet, but I plan to handle whatever role he has in mind for me," Dantley said. "I'm told this could be the team of the 1990s and if that's the case, I would like a contract to the year 2000."

"Adrian wants to outlive Kareem Abdul-Jabbar," Carter joked.

Dantley, the 10th leading scorer in NBA history, said, "Let's hope this is my last stop. I guess I will probably hear some boos Friday night, but I've heard them before."

Dantley, who averaged 18 points a game for the Pistons, was scheduled to play in tonight's game against Golden State.

"I'm not sure how much I'll play," Dantley said. "I've been working out at American University and playing against college students and that's not exactly like going against the pros."

Carter's persuasiveness had a lot to do with his coming to Dallas, Dantley said.

"The more I talked to Mr. C., the easier it was for us to work things out and I'm sure once I'm around the coaches, the fans and the team, we will all be able to appreciate each other," Dantley said. "We've agreed to put this behind us and I'm a Dallas Maverick now."

He added, "I hope this is my last stop. I'm set financially and really don't need to play basketball, but this team has a lot of talent and I would like to see us win a championship."

Carter said that Dantley had called him at 4:15 p.m. and said, "I want to be a part of the team, but there is a big if."

Knicks on home win streak

NEW YORK (AP) — The last time the New York Knicks won 20 consecutive games at Madison Square Garden, they went on to win the NBA title.

This year's players don't want to forget the past glory, but they also don't want to play in its shadow.

The 1988-89 Knicks won their 20th straight at home Thursday night, routing the Charlotte Hornets 139-114. There was little doubt of the outcome after New York took a 36-13 lead.

"We have to go down as one of the best teams ever to play here," Patrick Ewing said after scoring 11 of his 28 points during the first-quarter spurt. "It means a lot. Hopefully, we can set a record on Sunday, then we can have our own destiny without worrying about the past."

New York, whose only loss in 24 home games was a 110-98 defeat to the Los Angeles Lakers on Nov. 22, matched the 20-game winning streaks by the Knicks' 1968-69 and 1972-73 teams. They could set a team record by beating Boston at Madison Square Garden on Sunday.

Workers needed at golf course

A work party has been scheduled for 9 a.m. Saturday at the Pampa Public Golf Course north of town.

Buddy Epperson, president of the Pampa Public Golf Association, asks volunteers to report to the pro shop.

"Please bring a hammer. We'll assign a job to everybody that shows up," Epperson said.

Work is currently being done on the pro shop, Epperson said.

"This is a critical time for us. Concrete will be poured for the pump station and outdoor restrooms, he said.

Grass will be planted sometime in April, Epperson said.

"That would give us four months of good-growing time. Edges will be knocked off the fairways and, hopefully, we'll be ready to play in September," he added.

New playoff plan put Pampa, Andrews in Area round

The playoff confusion in Class 4A, as it was during the football season, is a result of the re-districting which took place in the UIL program this season. The new enrollment figures provided too many high schools to continue with the long-used 16 district, and yet not enough for the balancing 36. So the plan employed was the standard 36-district brackets, but give 12 a free ride through the bi-district round, directly into area play. Both Pampa and Andrews happened to be in the districts which drew the bye; thus they meet for the area championship tonight.

The next step is sub-regional, where the winner must be declared by midnight next Tuesday; the regional winner by midnight next Saturday; and the four regional champions appearing in the state tournament's first round March 9, with the title game March 11.

Pampa and Andrews stand 1-1 in this decade. The Harvesters defeated the 3-4A school once in bi-district, in February of 1984. But the Black and Gold downed Pampa in the Ft. Worth Lions event this year. Selection of Coronado's 4,000-seat, wood floor facility became the site because the two schools were slow in getting together and it was the most convenient large enough facility available. While neither team has played there this year, it provides a mileage advantage to Andrews, which will be the home team. Pampa, though the visitor, will be clad in the white home unis tonight.

Harvest coach Robert Hale is a Coronado HS grad. However this facility didn't open until the year after he finished playing. He has a 2-2 record, built while at Everman, the No. 3 ranked 4A team in the state, which was upset Tuesday night by FW Saginaw-Boswell, 60-49, in bi-district. Everman coach is Lonnie Nichols, former West Texas State assistant and senior sibling in the coaching Nichols' family. Hale promoted all seven junior varsity players to participate in post-season play; however only 14 will be dressed tonight due to a variety of ailments to three athletes. The officials were quickly agreed to, each coach producing one from his area, resulting in a split crew, not always the best arrangement.

Having drawn a bye through the first round of post-season, the Harvesters have been victorious in 9 of 15 second-round contests, which they will be playing tonight. The most recent the 1982-83 campaign. The next season they reached the second round, but fell to Wichita Falls Hishi.

Andrews presence at this game is not surprising, since pre-season polls had the Mustangs picked to win district. Pampa was a bit of a surprise, as the district coaches favored Estacado, with Pampa and Berger tying for second spot. Out of the districts comprising Region I, the coaches correctly picked three district champions, and eight of the 12 teams (first and second place finishers) to get into the playoffs. In I-4A, Dunbar was picked to finish fifth but wound up second, making Joe McWilliams a strong candidate to challenge Hale for coach of the year honors.

THROW INS: The first point season tonight will make him the all-time single-season point-scoring record holder. His 31 in the last outing gave Miller 723 for the season, tying him with Coyle Winborn, Jr.'s 1963-64 31-game season. Miller has done it in one less game...Teams fortunate enough to get to the state tournament could get jolted by no pass-no play, as the next six weeks ends the weekend of regional play.

Athletes would be eligible to play on March 9 in Austin, but not for the championship on the 11th...The boys' basketball championship vaulted PHS to third place, within 2½ points of Hereford for the district all-sports scoring lead. Levelland is a point ahead of Pampa, with five spring sports still to go...Among the spring sports, boys and girls track teams are entered in the Amarillo Invitational tomorrow, tennis is at Randall Hi, and the girls varsity golf team is scheduled in Odessa today...The chance of Pampa playing A&M Consolidated, where former PHS star Randy Matson has a son starring, still exists as the Tigers went through an undefeated season. Playing in Region III would mean both would have to get to Austin.

Another Matson offspring, Cole, scored 42 points for his ninth grade district champs in their final game...Berger, Canyon and Amarillo have reaped a bountiful harvest of girls and boys playoff games, to the huge benefit of their taxpaying merchants...Fortunately, ESPN has joined the bidding for telecast rights for a possible national schoolboy game of the week next season...A 30-second spot on Atlantic Coast Conference basketball games sells for $14,850; $12,000 for the SEC, $11,385 in the Big Ten. The Southwest Conference costs $2,875, a leading barometer of fan interest and playing quality...The Wyoming HS Activities Association has been warned that some state high schools are liable to a civil lawsuit because of the inequities in the number of boys and girls sports offered...The nation's No. 1 junior college team, Odessa JC, played at Clarendon College last night. Would have been great to have had the game at McNeely Fieldhouse as a public relations effort by and for the Pampa campus of CC...White Oak's Lance Noll saw his string of free throws end at 42 straight, a number former Harvester Sam Condo can relate to very well.

That's where Sam's string stopped, too...Basketball star Bob Cousy: "The things I used to do passing and dribbling a basketball that brought me fame are now being done by kids in junior high."

Calcavecchia leads Doral Open

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MIAMI — It was something of a blessing in disguise, Mark Calcavecchia said, when he missed the cut last weekend in San Diego.

"I was trying as hard as I could. I'd made a lot of cuts in a row and for pride's sake, I wanted to keep it going.

"But I needed a couple of days off. And by missing the cut, I got to spend a day with Peter Kostis," Calcavecchia said.

"When I see that guy before a tournament," Calcavecchia said of the man who teaches a large number of touring pros, "I usually play pretty good."

And this is no exception.

Calcavecchia, clearly the dominant figure this season, compiled a 7-under-par 65 and took a two-shot lead Thursday in the first round of the $1.3 million Doral Open golf tournament.

"If I could see Kostis every week, I don't think I'd ever miss another cut," Calcavecchia said.

"He can watch me hit five shots and tell me what I'd doing wrong.

"Usually I just get a little off on fundamentals, my set-up or something.

"He got me straightened out and I'm ready to go again," said Calcavecchia, who has been on a streak since winning the Australian Open in December.

Since then he's won the Phoenix and Los Angeles Opens, missed a playoff for another title by a single stroke and leads the money-winning list with $358,952.

"Very impressive," said Jack Nicklaus, who played in the same group with Calcavecchia. "He's already had a great season and it's only February."

Nicklaus was less impressive as he struggled to a 78 in the brisk, gusty, chilly winds.

None of the current holders of the Big Four titles could break par 72 on the famed Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

Gilbride joins Oilers staff

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Kevin Gilbride's tenure as offensive coordinator at the University of Cincinnati lasted less than two months.

Hired on Jan. 14 by Cincinnati coach Tim Murphy, Gilbride resigned Wednesday to become quarterbacks coach of the Houston Oilers.

Completing a dizzying series of career moves, Gilbride will report for duty Monday, replacing June Jones, with whom he coached at Ottawa in the Canadian Football League.

Gilbride admits he had some explaining to do with Murphy before accepting the Oilers position.

"He was a little surprised and wanted to know my thoughts," Gilbride said. "I explained to him that normally I wouldn't be investigating another chance but this was a dream of mine to coach in the NFL."

It was the third career move of the off-season for Gilbride, 37, who was dismissed at East Carolina despite producing an outstanding offensive unit.

The Oilers' interest in Gilbride goes straight to his background in the four-wide receiver offense.

In college, it's called the run and shoot. The Oilers call it Red Gun. By any name, Gilbride won't be making any drastic changes in the Oilers offense.

"I think some of the things I've done throwing the football in the CFL, East Carolina and what we are going to do at Cincinnati, are similar to the concept of what Houston has done," Gilbride said.

"I anticipate fitting in with what they do. I think that's the key attraction that I had."

The Oilers have reached the NFL playoffs the past two seasons, led by quarterback Warren Moon and receivers Ernest Givins and Drew Hill.

Gilbride was offensive coordinator for two seasons with the Rough Riders and was head coach at South Connecticut State for four years, compiling a 35-14-2 record.

Jones, who resigned from the Oilers to become quarterbacks coach of the Detroit Lions, worked with Gilbride at Ottawa.

"We've both used the same offense," Gilbride said. "He and I are alike in a lot of ways, both conceptually and the way we handle people."
