Investigators try to identify Pan Am bombers

By ROBERT BARR Associated Press Writer

LOCKERBIE, Scotland (AP) -In their efforts to identify the bombers, investigators sought today to determine the type of plastic explosive that downed Pan Am Flight 103 and where and how it was planted.

On Wednesday, British authorities ordered U.S. airlines to toughen their security for checked baggage in light of the Dec. 21 attack, which claimed the lives of 259 people aboard the Boeing 747 and at least 11 local villagers.

"At this point, we don't have one particular lead or theory that we think is more promising than others," State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said in Washington. "We are simply pursuing all the leads that we have.

The investigation is known to involve Scottish police, the FBI, Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist branch and federal police in West Germany. The New York-bound flight originated in Frankfurt with a Boeing 727.

The Israeli daily newspaper The Nation has quoted West German intelligence sources as saying they believe a suspect from the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, led by a rival of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat named Ahmed Jibril, boarded the plane in Frankfurt.

The suspect carried "a briefcase packed with Syrian-supplied explosives that cannot be detected by routine security methods," The Nation said.

The guerrilla left Flight 103 while it was in transit in London, leaving the briefcase behind, the paper reported Friday without elaborating.

The Syrian-backed Popular Front became the first terrorist organization to bomb an airliner in flight when it blew up a Tel Aviv-bound Swiss airliner in 1970. according to Ian Geldard, director of research at the private Institute for the Study of Terrorism in London. Forty-seven people were killed.

He said the group may have felt itself isolated from the Middle East peace process because Arafat recognized Israel's right to exist and renounced terrorism, leading Washington to open a dialogue with the PLO this month. Geldard, however, said he considered Abu Nidal "the top suspect because he's the most capable of undertaking a mission of this type. Abu Nidal heads the Fatah Revolutionary Council, a Palestinian faction opposed to Arafat's recognition of Israel and talks with the United States. The Libya-allied guerrilla group has been blamed for dozens of hijackings, bombings and assassina-

Search and rescue training saves lives

effort useless

Imagine crawling through a burning building with dense black smoke rolling all around. You feel completely disoriented, even nauseous, as the smoke masks any identifiable object.

You can hear burning wood hissing, cracking, popping and falling nearby. The temperature can be from 600 to 800 degrees. In addition to all this, you are carrying more than 60 pounds of extra weight. And your purpose for entering this blazing inferno is to find an infant on a bed in a house you've never been in. You know you have only a matter of minutes before the heat or the toxic gasses will make this herculean

"Search and rescue is the most dangerous part of our job," explained John Cook, training officer for the Pampa Fire Department.

Firefighters are sometimes called on to risk their own lives in order to save someone who may be trapped in a fire. Tuesday, Pampa firefighters participated in a search and rescue drill to hone the skills needed for this hazardous duty. The drill concluded a month-long training on selfcontained breathing apparatus. Firefighters, dressed in full gear of heat-proof bunker pants, jacket, gloves, face mask, helmet and Scot Pack breathing apparatus) weighing 64 pounds, were given the following scenario: They have just arrived on the scene of a house fire. A young mother is standing on the front lawn. She screams her 2-month-old baby is lying on a bed (not its crib) in a bedroom. Their mission is to find the baby as quickly as possible using the search and rescue techniques they have learned

To help simulate the disorientation the heavy smoke from a fire brings, the face masks they are wearing are completely blacked out. In the scenario they're given, the firefighters are told the baby is unconscious and not crying. They must rely on touch alone

Since babies seldom remain lying on a bed, sometimes the CPR doll used in the exercise is placed on the floor near the bed, as if it had rolled off, or perhaps wedged between the bed and the wall, or under the bed

Firefighters must search several rooms upstairs in Central Fire Station until they find the doll and then, using the same techniques, find their way out.

"There's no time limit," Cook said. "But they know they have about four minutes to revive the child, if it hasn't gotten any poisonous gases.

Firefighters are sometimes called on to risk their own lives in order to save someone who may be trapped in a fire.

Although Cook acknowledged that the actual conditions of a fire rescue would be hard to simulate, he feels the exercise helps Pampa firefighters brush up on search and rescue techniques Fire officials observe the firefighters to be sure they stay low and do not miss any part of the structure in their search, Cook said. After the exercise is over, he said, everyone sits down and discusses the drill.

This reporter decided to go through the drill in order to get a feel for what the firefighters were doing. While it was rather humorous to watch an adult crawl on the floor feeling around for something that could easily be seen, the actual experience is a much diffe-

I was given a pair of waterproof boots, bunker pants with suspenders, a coat, mask, Scot Pack and helmet. Heavy gloves were pulled over my hands. This all weighed 64 pounds, more than half my body weight. It was a good thing I was supposed to crawl, because I wasn't too sure I could walk with it

Unlike the firefighters who had several rooms to search, I was given one room.

Down on my knees I went, sweeping my hands back and forth, feeling for any object that might be a baby. I encountered a dresser. I searched under it and on top of it. The weight of the Scot Pack kept coming forward to push against the helmet. I could breathe inside the mask, but not as easily. My heart was pounding from the exertion.

I bumped into a bed and, mimicking what I had seen the firefighters do, I fanned my arm under it. Nothing was there. I then moved up to the top of the bed and, to my intense relief, found the baby in the far upper corner of the bed next to the wall

Clutching the child, I returned the way I thought I had come, frantic to get to the door and get the mask off my face so I could breathe sweet fresh air.

After the gear was removed, I looked back into the room and to my horror saw that a pair of shoes I had left in the room had not been touched.

My shoes were situated in a corner next to a closet, an area I was supposed to have thoroughly searched before moving on to the bed This space would have been just about the right size for a small child to be sitting in ...

Firefighters are required to study firefighting manuals at least one hour, plus participate in safety training three hours for every 40 hours they work

'Something new every day is discovered in firefighting," Cook said. "You have to study constantly to keep abreast of the changes. I believe you're wasting the taxpayers' money and endangering the safety of the firefighters

Abuse victims find shelter, new life in Tralee safehouse

'baby' in hand during drill.

The safehouse sits on a lonely street near the edge of town. It is far from glamorous and the furniture is anything but new. Its chief feature is its plainness.

But it is a place where women know they will not be beaten and their children will not have to witness incredible acts of cruelty.

Tralee Crisis Center sponsors the safehouse as a means of freeing women from the torment of abuse many of them have put up with for years.

For them, that is enough.

Inside the nondescript building, women and their children begin the healing process, both physical and emotional. They comfort one another and ponder what their future will hold. They live under a cloud of danger, knowing that, in many cases, their husbands will severely beat them if they are found.

For Michelle, 30, and Misty, 25, (not their real names) the safehouse was the only place to go. "I felt like I needed protection from my husband. The police officer told me I could come here to put my family back together and get back into the world," Michelle said.

For Misty, the safehouse was the only out from a live-in boyfriend who not only beat her but attacked her friends

'We were together four years. He'd slap me around and scream and get into a rage. He trashes possessions, and my kid has seen him knock me down and stand on top of me," she said.

When she came to the center, she had a black eye.

'It's gone down a lot. He gave it to me after I'd been out of the hospital two days from having a baby. I gave the baby up for adoption because I wasn't going to let it grow up the way this one has," she said, pointing to her young child, standing nearby

She went to the center a few days before Christmas when her boyfriend assaulted a friend. Both women said the men they were hiding from were heavy drinkers who were very violent. 'I got a job and that set him off," Michelle said. "If I put on a dress or fixed my hair or put on make-up or left the house to walk my daughter to the park, he'd go crazy. If I was five minutes late from work, he'd want to know who I'd been with

She said that while the violence has been very hard on her and her three children, it also led her to Tralee, where she is getting help.

"A lot of people go back to (the abuse). They've been rejected. The blindness of love is wanting to be accepted. This has opened my eyes to the signs of insecurity and sarcasm. Now I've got a sixth sense that tells me to get away,' she said

She said Tralee had allowed her to begin reshaping her familv's life. 'The kids have been waiting for me to make a decision. When we are away from him, we talk more and have fun. They like that," Michelle said.

The turning point for her seek ing help was when her husband attempted to hit her, missed and struck the small baby in her

"That was it. Nobody hits my children. Misty said her feelings range from humiliation to rage that the person she loved would treat her "I feel like killing him. I've had son. He's whacko," she said. She said she could not return to her family, who live in another to give up so much and so has my part of the country, because of her problems

'I was not going to bring a baby into the world to see what my son and I have to. I offered it to them and they didn't want it. Now they can't understand why I gave it up for adoption," Misty said.

She said her son, not yet 3 years old, has learned to call women "dumb b---h" because he heard her boyfriend say it so many "How can a man treat his wife that way. He's 5'11" and I'm 5'6". It would be like my beating up an 11-year-old. I don't know what I'm going to do, but I'm not going back to him. He's crazy," she

Michelle said other women in abuse situations should also get away immediately

'It's not their fault this is happening. They need to know that. They need to get help right now,"

Scouting helped boy find success

Once a local scoutmaster for the Boy Scouts of America answered a knock at the door of a scouthouse meeting room. Opening the door, he saw a young man standing there. "Mister, I have to be a Scout," the boy managed to stammer.

Perplexed by the way the boy worded his request, the scoutmaster invited him in. With the help of the community, the boy was registered in the local Boy Scouts program and supplied with books and a uniform. He stayed in the program for approximately five years, reaching the rank of Life Scout

During those five years, the young man disappeared twice when he and his family moved from Pampa, even though he had developed a close relationship with the scoutmaster and his family.

This young man went on to serve his country in war time as a field surgeon. He is now a staff surgeon. He and his scoutmaster credit his success to the Boy Scout program.

But it was many years before the scoutmaster learned the story behind the boy's strange request so many years ago. A law enforcement officer visiting with the scoutmaster asked him about the boy. He then told the scoutmaster how the boy was given the choice of either making something out of his life or spending time in a correctional facility. The boy apparently chose to better his life through military bases face closing

WASHINGTON (AP) - A government commission announced today a proposal to close 86 military bases and partially shut down five others in an action officials said would save $5.6 billion over 20 years.

Fifty-four other bases were recommended for realignment.

Former Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who served as cochairman of the 12-member commission, said many of the bases slated for closing are obsolete.

They are not capable of providing "future training for future wars," he said. He said he hoped Congress would not interfere with the process it initiated and would allow the bases to be closed that the commission decided were obso-

The list of 86 bases to be closed was far more extensive than had been expected. The panel had been expected to recommend that about two dozen facilities be declared obsolete.

Among the big installations slated to be shut were Fort Sheridan, near Chicago; Pease Air Force Base in New Hampshire; Norton Air Force Base in California. Operations at Fort Dix, N.J., where tens of thousands of young soldiers got their basic training, were to be curtailed.

The commission's proposals loom as devastating news for many areas of the country that derive substantial economic benefits - in good times and bad from the military presence in their communities.

"I expect we're going to be pretty unpopular in some areas after this comes out," said Jack Edwards, the former Republican congressman from Alabama who is co-chairman of a 12-member panel that recommeded the cost-saving measures. Edwards and Ribicoff presented the tightly held report today to Deputy Defense Secretary

William H. Taft IV. Copies were delivered simultaneously to the chairmen of the House and Senate Armed Services committees: Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

The Pentagon has closed no major installations since 1977, mainly because of pressure from members of Congress with major bases in their districts.

Members of the commission visited about 40 bases during a seven-month examination of the nation's 3,800 military installa-

The Edwards panel was approved in the waning days of the 100th Congress as a political compromise by legislators who wanted to reduce the federal budget deficit and also avoid constituent criticism.

Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci will have until Jan. 15 five days before he leaves office — to accept or reject the panel's findings.

Bush says Pan Am bombers should be 'punished severely'

By JOAN MOWER Associated Press Writer

BEEVILLE (AP) - Presidentelect Bush said today he would "punish severely" those responsible for the bombing of the Pan Am jumbo jet that exploded over Scotland last week, killing at least 270 people.

Bush spoke to reporters as he ended a private quail-hunting trip and headed for Alabama for a few hours of fishing on his way back to Washington.

Asked for his reaction to the air tragedy, Bush replied, "Well, horror, and seek hard and punish firmly, decisively, those who did this, if you could ever find them."

The vice president said he did not know who was behind the bombing. Asked what sort of action he would take against the bombers, he replied, "When I say punish severely, that's what I

While Bush was isolated at the Lazy F Ranch, owned by his friend, Houston millionaire Will Farish, his transition office announced that he had selected Robert M. Gates, the No. 2 official at the CIA, to be the new deputy director of the National Security Council.

Bush, in a statement, called Gates, an expert on Soviet affairs, "admirably suited for

To replace Gates, Bush chose Richard J. Kerr, the CIA's current deputy director for intelligence whose background is in East Asian affairs. The Kerr appointment is subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Before leaving Chase Naval Air Station, Bush took a few minutes for a nostalgic gesture that recalled his days as a fighter pilot in World War II.

Using a white felt pen, Bush signed his wife's name, Barbara, just below the cockpit of a restored TBM Avenger, a torpedo bomber of the sort he flew in the Pacific, and then signed his own name.

In Pintlala, Bush scheduled about six hours on Scott's private lake about 15 miles from Montgomery. Scott, a conservationist and long-time Bush supporter. said the vice president called him to arrange the outing.

"We just want to get in some ity adviser. Neither job requires fishing," he said.

Latest bailout of thrifts forms Texas' largest S&L association

DALLAS (AP) - As regulators this week announced the largest thrift bailout ever in the depressed industry, a Dallas Cowboys part owner has apparently failed to complete a federally assisted recapitalization agreement for his namesake savings and loan, Bright Banc, a published

The Dallas Morning News reported in today's editions that H.R. "Bum" Bright has been bidding to keep control of a piece of loss-plagued Bright Banc Savings Association but ran into trouble with the recapitalization plan.

On Wednesday, federal regulators said the Ford Bank Group along with MacAndrews and Forbes Holding Corp. committed $315 million in capital to acquire five insolvent Texas thrifts as part of a $5.1 billion package that federal regulators said was the largest savings and loan buyout ever.

Wednesday's consolidation of five thrifts formed the state's largest savings and loan institution and its fourth largest financial firm, the FHLB said. The agency, before the acquisition, placed all five institutions into receivership.

The newspaper report said the FHLB Board in Washington had been expected to arrange a new ownership structure for Bright Banc this week before tax law changes would make a transaction more expensive for the Federal Savings and Loan

The FSLIC, which protects a maximum of $100,000 per account of thrift depositors' money, has been left with recapitalizing savings and loans that are merged under the Southwest Plan to salvage ailing institutions.

The News said the Bright proposal called for a procedure called open-bank assistance, a process that so far has not been used in Southwest Plan

Sources told the newspaper the Bright Banc charter would not have been pulled but an outside investor contributing 80 percent of a new pool of outside capital to the institution would join with Bright, who would be responsible for the remaining 20 percent of private money.

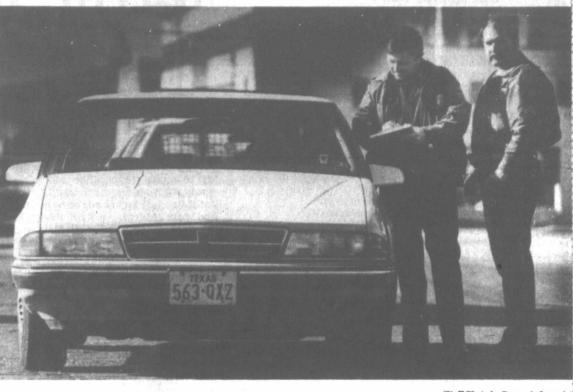

The FSLIC would provide the bulk of recapitalization funds and share in the disposition of bad real estate loans and other troubled assets, possibly holding warrants that give it the right to own a piece of the recapitalized Bright Banc.

The newspaper said the Bright plan had advanced sufficiently that some thrift personnel were told the transaction would require them to work through part of the New Year's weekend.

But sources said Wednesday they believed that bank board officials became concerned that a continued ownership position by Bright could cause a backlash against the agency

Earlier, regulators had allowed the open-bank transaction to proceed, blaming Bright Banc's losses largely on problems inherited during its absorption of Texas Federal Financial Corp. and Dallas Federal Savings and Loan in 1984 — a deal that may not have received enough bank board

NEW YORK (AP) - Energy futures prices were generally lower in light trading with little news to direct the market.

However, after the close of trading Wednesday, the American Petroleum Institute reported that stocks of U.S. crude and heating oil and gasoline declined in the week ended Dec. 23, news that generally boosts the market.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the February contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, rose 2 cents to settle at $16.97 a barrel. All subsequent contract months declined.

Among refined petroleum products traded on the exchange, the January contract for wholesale home heating oil slipped 0.28 cent to 53.49 cents a gallon.

January wholesale unleaded gasoline settled 0.43 cent lower to close at 47.04 cents a gallon.

Richard Redoglia, a trader with Merrill Lynch Energy Futures, said there was little news to influence trading, and that prices were brought down by profit-taking.

'The market is in yearend liquidation." he said.

No trend could be established from Wednesday's session, he Andrew Lebow, a senior energy analyst with E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc., said the February WTI contract rose because of the closure of three oil fields in the British section of the North Sea. The shutdown raised supply concerns, he said.

The fields produce about 210,000 barrels a day, or about 10 percent of Britain's total produc-

Feds break up fur-smuggling ring

PECOS (AP) — A two-year sting operation that shut down a fur-smuggling ring on both sides of the Rio Grande demonstrates the scope of the illegal trapping industry in Mexico, an official Undercover agents of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service set up a phony fur-trading company in Van Horn and bought about 6,000 pelts, some of which were from endangered species, service spokesman Tom Smylie said Wednesday.

After obtaining a sealed federal indictment against 11 suspected smugglers — three U.S. residents and eight Mexicans the agents who ran the Van Horn storefront invited the suspects to a barbecue Dec. 15 near Presidio.

The eight suspects who attended the barbecue were arrested on charges of smuggling furs or conspiracy to smuggle furs. Smylie said.

Three suspects who didn't attend the barbecue are at large in Mexico. Smylie said.

All the pelts came from ocelots. gray foxes, kit foxes, ringtail cats, raccoons, coyotes and bobcats trapped in the mountains of central and southern Chihuahua state in northern Mexico.

"There are smuggling families all along the border," Smylie said. "This is just three families. If this is just the tip of the iceberg, we've got a serious problem with depletion of animals in Mexico — and it's all for the vanity of people in the United States and Europe." About 1,000 pelts came from endangered bobcats, which are legal to trap in Texas during a short

The Mexican bobcat pelts were accompanied by counterfeit tags indicating they were legally caught in Texas, and Smylie said officials are trying to find out where the tags came from. Investigators next expect to begin going after other fur dealers who bought the pelts and sold them to garment makers in the United States and across the Atlantic, Smylie said. Agents spent about $77,000 on the 6,000 pelts, but the finished products would have been worth much more, he said.

'When (pelts) come from Mexico, they're really rough - not really tanned, just skinned - so they don't get as much money as a legal fur man in the United States," he said.

The sting operation began in December 1986, when an undercover Fish and Wildlife agent met with Arnulfo Arreola of Ojinaga, Mexico, according to the indictment, which says Arreola offered to arrange illegal smuggling of furs into the United States from sources in Mexico. The next month, Arreola, Oscar Zuniga Sr., his son, Oscar Jr., and Jose Urias, all of Ojinaga, delivered 148 furs to the undercover agent for $3,729. according to the indictment.

Deliveries of furs continued until February 1988, according to the indictment.

The Zunigas and three other Ojinaga residents were arraigned Dec. 16 before U.S. Magistrate J.M. Preston of Three U.S. residents were arraigned on charges of smuggling the furs and delivering them to undercover agents. They were identified as Daniel Sanchez, 57, and his son, Jose Alfredo Sanchez, 26, both of Ruidosa, and Manuel Castillo of Candelaria.

Castillo rowed pelts across in a boat, and the elder Sanchez allowed transactions to occur on his property, according to the indictment.

All suspects remain in jail in Pecos, where they are being questioned, officials said.

Arreola, Urias and Ojinaga resident Antonia Zuniga were indicted, but did not attend the barbecue and remain at large in Smylie said Fish and Wildlife officials had wanted to mount such a sting operation since a $1 million load of illegal furs was seized from a trailer near Big Bend National Park in 1978.

He said that seizure was the first indication that fursmuggling was a big business in the area, and agents finally made contact with smugglers in 1986.

Warm winter nearly killed driver

There was a lot of talk this last week that had to do with weather. What else are you going to talk about with a house full of relatives you only see The comment I kept hearing over and over was,

28, died of an extremely warm winter.' It happened something like this: My wife, mother-in-law and I were motoring down a lonely Oklahoma highway talking about (what else?) the warm winter. About that time a wasp came up out of nowhere and began swarming around my head

People who know me will tell you I have enough trouble staying on the road without these kind of distractions.

Now, I'm not a coward. But I DO NOT like wasps. Wasps are like tiny Chinese stinger missles aimed at all decent God-fearing people.

This wasp was aimed right at me. As I took a wild swing at the thing, my car veered into the other lane. I know the driver of that cattle truck probably told all his friends about the drunk who almost hit him on Hwy. 62.

How could I have explained to St. Peter that it wasn't my fault four people were suddenly knocking on his door? Blame it on a wasp

We missed the cattle truck and I pulled onto the shoulder. So did the wasp. He was digging his stinger into the material of my jacket, a mere two inches from

My wife and mother-in-law piled out of the car. I don't know whether they were running from the wasp or my driving. With a gallant swing of a trusty ice scrapper, I knocked the wasp into the floor board. I then proceeded to dance on the little demon as he lay writhing on the floor of the car.

In fact, I did such a good job of squashing him, I couldn't even find him when I was through. That Several miles and a lot of apologies about my driving later, my wife got a wild look in her eye. 'Bear, don't panic, but he's crawling up your boot into your pants. 'That's not funny, Dear.''

"Just pull over slowly and try not to throw me through the windshield this time.

I looked down and there the wasp was, about to catch the 3:15 right up my trousers. Again I pulled over. People passing us must have thought I was quite a sight, doing my little rain dance trying to get the wasp out of my britches.

He finally came out and flew back into the car. That was all, buster. I grabbed some Kleenex for insulation and proceeded to trounce on the monster. I ground him up in the tissue and threw him on the side of the road.

"Honey, I did it. He's dead. Boy those are tough little critters aren't ...

Before I could utter another word, the stupid thing rose from the dead and flew back in the car. My wife started calling him Jason (after the guy in Friday the 13th) as I chased him like a madman through the car.

He flew into the backseat. Over the seat I went in hot pursuit. He went for the dashboard and I was right behind him.

Thirty minutes later the wasp was in about three pieces and we were on our way again. They say wasps are a result of warm winters. I say a warm winter nearly killed this boy.

Grocery store security guard killed

DALLAS (AP) — Police say a security guard was shot to death in an apparent robbery at a grocery store where a suspect then frightened employees and customers into hiding at the building as tactical officers arrived.

Officers surrounded Angelo's Food Mart following the shooting. Police said that a customer found the guard, bleeding on the floor, about 12:20 a.m. near the front door of the South Dallas store. The customer then ran across the parking lot to a hamburger restaurant and told an employee to summon police.

Brian E. Williams, 29, died after surgery today at Baylor Medical Center, a nursing supervisor who did not want her name used said. Reports from a police dispatcher indicated the guard may have been shot as many as phone contact with the people inside the store, and convinced two men to come out of the store. The first man walked out of the store about 3 a.m., the other followed about five minutes later. One identified himself as a store employee and the other said he was a customer.

A woman who identified herself as a store employee locked herself in a room at the back of the store and refused to come out, Lt. James MacArthur said. Police tactical units entered the store about 3:30 a.m. and escorted the woman out of the store.

The tactical squad continued searching the store for a suspect, but uncovered nothing. The search was called off shortly after 4 a.m. The woman employee told police that she was eating her dinner in a back room when she heard what she thought were two shots from the front of the store, MacArthur said.

The other employee and the customer also told police they were near the back of the store when they heard what they thought were shots at the front of the store. They sought safety near the back of the store also, police said.

MacArthur said one of the people in the store heard the sound of the cash register being emptied. leading police to believe that robbery might have been a motive.

A second customer found the security guard laying in a pool of blood near the front door as he walked into the store sometime after midnight, police said. The customer ran about 100 yards across the parking lot to the hamburger restaurant and told an employee there to call police.

Police said they received the call about 12:26 a.m. A police unit pulled up in front of the main entrance to the grocery store, and officers hurried the wounded security guard to safety.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Keep steady course in dealing with PLO

Palestinian Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat has accomplished one thing. He got the United Nations to move out of the United States to Geneva, if only for a few days. The move cost more than $500,000 and should prompt many Americans to wonder why we give almost $1 billion a year to such a wasteful organization. Would that the move brought about a permanent shift to Geneva Arafat's speech before the U.N. General Assembly continued the line the PLO has taken the last few weeks. It is a bit more conciliatory toward Isreal but it is still largely intended to advance propaganda points. Arafat called for "a comprehensive settlement" among all parties, including "the state of Palestine, Israel and other neighbors," but refused explicitly to recognize the state of Israel. Arafat said an international conference should be held "on the basis of (U.N.) Resolutions 242 and 338," which recognize Israel's existence, but he refused to recognize those resolutions himself.

Arafat also called for "a serious effort" to convene an international peace conference in Geneva. But Israel understandably refuses to enter into any such conference until the other countries involved, mainly its Arab neighbors, first recognize its exist-

The situation in the Middle East isn't going to be solved swiftly, despite the delusion of an instant solution offered by outgoing Secretary of State George Shultz. His successor, James Baker III, will improve things if all he does is realize the difficulty of the situation.

American policy has all too often involved quick reactions that have led to tragedy, such as the death of more than 200 Marines in Lebanon in 1983. The Marines were there to no purpose, except to give the appearance that the United States was doing "something"; and when the Marines — those who surthat is — were pulled out a few months after the terrorist attack, nothing much changed.

Baker and his friend, President-elect George Bush, would help advance peace by maintaining a steady course toward the PLO, emphasizing two points. Terrorism must end, not only in word but in deed. And Israel's right to exist must be recognized. Even if the PLO does these two things, it will take years to assauge the animosities of decades. But that would be a start, and would probably lead, rather quickly, to an easing of Israel's position toward Palestinians in the occupied lands.

America's interests would be served by peace between Israel and the Palestinians. But there are no instant solutions.

Maybe it will be a blessing

Now it's Israel's turn. Shocked by the United States government's decision to open talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization, Israelis may identify with Winston Churchill. After his defeat for reelection as prime minister in 1945, his wife consoled him, by saying it might be "a blessing in disguise." His reply: "If so, it is very well disguised indeed."

Israelis have always had two great fears. The first is that their enemies wouldn't ever be willing to make peace. The second is that they would. Unrelenting Arab hostility is unpleasant, but it has left Israel a free hand in the matters under its control. An Arab desire to reconcile, however, forces the Jewish state to confront the compromises it will have to make for peace.

The price, in Israeli eyes, will be high maybe too high. A settlement will mean giving up the vast bulk of the West Bank and Gaza. It will mean accepting as a next-door neighbor some sort of Palestinian state, whether independent or confederated with Jordan. It may mean accepting some changes in the status of Jeru-

Israel will have to start with an even more bitter pill: entering negotiations with Palestinians who, if not official representatives of the PLO, will be approved by the PLO. The government has always sworn never to deal with that organization, whatever its professed changes in policy. In the past Israel has been joined by the United States in that refusal. Now it is alone.

But it isn't alone in its quest for security. No one can doubt that the 40-year-old American commitment to Israel's survival is as strong today as it was before. The United States is not just an ally; it is a friend. It is not about to leave

Israel to face the rest of the world by itself. One function of a true friend, though, is providing blunt counsel. The clear message of this month's landmark decision is that Israel can't refuse to deal with a PLO that shows a readiness to face reality.

The PLO has shown its readiness. For Israel to turn its back looks like obstructionism - and, in fact, is obstructionism.

And what's the alternative? Israel might have found ways to bring forth Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza to negotiate on the future of the occupied territories - say, by holding free elections and accepting the results. But it never did. Now the chance has passed. The only negotiating partner Israel can get is the one it wants Israel procrastinated because it assumed that it could govern the territories indefinitely without any real inconvenience, allowing it to put off any decision on their ultimate fate. But the Palestinian uprising has changed things. If Israel keeps the territories, it will have to fight the inhabitants.

Many Israelis think if they give up the territories, they will still have to fight the inhabitants. The PLO, it is argued, hasn't given up its really was a blessing.

dream of destroying the Jewish state. A Palestinian state will not be the foundation for peace but a launching pad for war.

That's a real risk, whatever Yasser Arafat's promises. But every peace treaty holds dangers. The Camp David treaty carried the risk that Anwar Sadat, having regained the strategically valuable Sinai Peninsula, would tear up the agreement and resume his plots of military conquest. So Camp David erected a wall against that danger: It largely demilitarized the Sinai.

The way to minimize the danger posed by a Palestinian state is not to trust its intentions, but to limit its strength. No treaty is going to be reached without strong measures to ensure Israel's safety. Every Palestinian knows that.

Of course many Israelis don't want to give up the territories for peace or anything else. They think Judea and Samaria rightfully belong to the Jews. The United States should have no more patience with this belief than it had with the PLO's demand for all of Palestine.

For Israel to cling to a romantic claim to the territories is unreasonable. Its Arab neighbors may not be willing to trade peace for land; they certainly will not trade peace for no land.

Holding on to the territories is also selfdestructive. Nothing could be more dangerous to the character of the Jewish state than to keep authority over territories in which Arabs outnumber Jews by 25 to 1.

Just as the Palestinians will have to make unpleasant concessions, Israel will have to settle for less than what it would prefer. But at least today there is a new chance that Israel will get peace in return. If it does, Israelis may someday see that the U.S. decision, despite its disguise.

Today in history

By The Associated Press Today is Thursday, Dec. 29, the 364th day of 1988. There are two days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1890, the Wounded Knee massacre took place in South Dakota. More than 200 Sioux Indians were killed by U.S. troops sent to disarm them. About 30 of the soldiers were slain.

He hopes sex will sell book

The following is an excerpt from Lewis Grizzard's new book, an original work on sex, titled Don't Bend Over in the Garden, Granny, You Know Them Taters Got Eyes.

I decided to write a book about sex and its awesome effect on our lives for a number of reasons. I shall list them:

1. Dr. Ruth talks funny and I can't make out what she's saying half the time. Dr. Ruth looks like a very nice person and she probably knows her sexes well as anybody else, but with her accent, there is a danger somebody might misunderstand something she said and become injured - or, at best, terribly embarrassed trying to follow her instructions.

Let's say Dr. Ruth was jabbering about, as she does. "Never have sex without a condom."

With her accent it might come out, "Never have sex without a quorum." This, of course, could lead to a sudden increase in group sex, and when you get a lot of people together like that somebody could get hurt, even if it's only their

2. Sex, it now has been proven, will kill you. We need a book on how to have sex without getting killed. If AIDS were not enough of a getting totally confused by it. worry, I read in an aviation newsletter where a guy was flying a light plane out west and it crashed killing him and his female companion.

said that due to certain injuries found on the pilot and the position of his female companion, it was easy to figure out what they were doing.

Somebody needs to write a book about sex and mention that it has no place in the cockpit, something I don't think Masters and Johnson has mentioned

3. I was considering ideas for books and somebody suggested I do one on sex.

"You don't need to write something filthy," I was told. "Just get in there and point out how sex makes the world go around and how much a part of everybody's life it is and how we're always talking about it and laughing about it and

"But," I pointed out, "there have already been tons of books about sex."

A Federal Aviation Administration report books were by alleged experts. Are you an ex- somehow involved in the Louisiana Purchase.

"Of course not," I said. "I wasn't in the Army and I missed all those training films.

4. The year 1987, when I began writing my book, was a banner year for sex, which makes my book topical. Think of all the big stories of '87 that have sexual themes:

Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker and Jessica Hahn, et al.: They're thinking of making a movie about all that called The Three Bimbos. Gary Hart and Donna Rice, the Monkey Business and the Miami Herald: "Your house or the White House? Ollie North and Fawn Hall: I don't believe Ollie fooled around with his ace evidenceshredder, but there were more than a few eyebrows lifted when some weeks after Col. North testified in the Iran-Contra hearings, Fawn was arrested for eating a banana in a Washington railroad station. 5. Sex books historically sell a lot of copies. So you think I'm still writing books at the advanced age of 42 just because I like to type? Of course not. I have a profit motive here. This is America, we have a capitalistic society, and I like an occasional bottle of wine with a cork in it. Sex sells cars, clothes, cigarettes, watches, grain elevators, television programs, maga-"Yes." my counsel continued, "but all those zines and I wouldn't be surprised if sex were

Let's take a peek behind nuclear curtain

By ROBERT WALTERS

HONOLULU (NEA) - In the files of the U.S. District Court here are documents that provide a rare and disturbing view of how the nation's nuclear arsenal is managed in peacetime

Although the military services almost never reveal what they do with nuclear weapons, the Navy released some of that information during the litigation of an obscure civil suit filed here under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act.

In that case, which resulted in limited disclosure, the Navy revealed that inept if not sloppy handling of nu-clear weapons led to 381 accidents and incidents during a 13-year period in the 1960s and 1970s.

"The documents reveal that the Navy's nuclear accident record is far more extensive than the public had previously been led to believe," says lan Y. Lind, who initiated the lawsuit in 1980, when he was director of the Honolulu office of the American Friends Service Committee

The Navy, however, insists that the number is "misleading," that it has "nothing to hide" and that concerned members of the public should carefully analyze the situation before becoming alarmed about it.

But Lind notes that a detailed examination of the facts is impossible to conduct because the Navy claimed in federal court here that "everything about nuclear accidents must remain hidden" and that "all records of nuclear accidents are necessarily secret.' Indeed, the Navy says that even the unclassified but heavily censored docreleased uments were "inadvertently." Like the nation's other military service, the Navy classifies accidents involving nuclear weapons into three categories:

. "Broken Arrow," by far the most serious classification, involves the detonation, burning, seizure, theft or loss of a nuclear weapon as well as instance of radioactive contamination. · "Bent Spear" is an intermediate category covering any incident that

"results in evident damage to a nuclear weapon," that "requires immediate action in the interest of safety" or that "may result in adverse public reaction.

. "Dull Sword" is the lowest classification. It covers incidents in which "the possibility of detonation or radioactive contamination is increased" as well as cases of equipment malfunction and human error "committed in the assembly, testing, loading or transporting" of nuclear materials.

The materials released to Lind and the AFSC include a reference to one "Broken Arrow" event — a mid-1960s accident in which an A4E jet fighter armed with nuclear weapons was lost (under circumstances the Navy has never fully explained) off an aircraft carrier in the Pacific Ocean.

The most frequent occurrences referred to in the materials involve the flooding of nuclear weapons carried on ship during rough seas, improper activation of sprinkler systems and other causes. Additional accidents have occurred during maintenance and testing activities.

Although the Navy's disclosure is very limited, it is especially significant in the context of what the public has belatedly learned about the safety or lack thereof — of the procedures followed by the Department of Energy while making nuclear weapons for the Department of Defense.

Shoddy practices, dangerous spills and obsolete facilities at DOE plants in South Carolina, Ohio, Washington, Colorado and elsewhere have produced a scandal in recent months. More than $150 billion may be required to clean up the mess

Like the Navy and other DOD components, DOE for decades has been exempt from virtually all oversight. As a result, it long has been able to cover up practices that endangered the public's health and safety.

Both DOD and DOE need more scrutiny of their practices and procedures. Pretending that no problems exist in the handling of nuclear weapons only makes more likely the catastrophic accident nobody wants.

FAA considers possible security lapses by U.S. airlines

By H. JOSEF HEBERT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Aviation Administration, mystified at how a bomb got aboard Pan Am Flight 103, began searching for possible security lapses by U.S. airlines abroad and directed tighter screening of passengers and their baggage Government officials acknowledged Wednesday that a week after the Pan American World Airways jumbo jet exploded over Scotland, killing at least 270 people, there are no hard leads on who put the explosive device on the jet or where the deed was done.

Shortly after it was confirmed Wednesday by British investigators that a bomb caused the Boeing 747 to crash Dec. 21 on a flight to New York from London, the Reagan administration promised "all available assistance" in investigating the U.S. officials said there was a wide range of terrorist groups that may have been responsible. But Paul Bremer, the State Department's chief of counterterrorism, told reporters it was too early to focus suspicion on a particular group.

"We shouldn't narrow our field of inquiry until we get more evidence or intelligence that leads us in a certain direction. ... There isn't any prime suspect," he said.

The FAA, meanwhile, said it was "reviewing current security measures" being taken by U.S. air carriers abroad because of the bombing and said it was preparing "more stringent security requirements which will afford additional protection to U.S. air carriers and the traveling public." The FAA in a statement did not cite specific changes that are being directed at the airlines. Agency spokesman Fred Farrar said FAA security experts are still working out details of the new requirements, some of which are likely not to be

Much of the focus is expected to be on tightening passengers screening, inspection of carry-on luggage and taking additional precautions to match all baggage with boarding passengers. "In some cases it will be a matter of degree," Farrar said.

The FAA is responsible for establishing security requirements for U.S. airlines both in the United States and abroad, although many security measures are imposed in cooperation with the other governments involved.

While little evidence so far has been uncovered to indicate who might be responsible for the Pan Am bombing, U.S. officials said there are a number of potential suspects. They include radical Palestinians such as the pro-Syrian Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine - General Command, and the pro-Libyan Abu Nidal group, as well as an Iranian group, the Guardians of Islamic Re-

Bremer said among the tasks confronting investigators was to find out how the bomb got aboard Flight 103, where it was placed and what it was made of. It's not known whether the bomb eluded security at Frankfurt, West Germany, where Flight 103 originated as a Boeing 727, or at London's Heathrow Airport, where the flight shifted to a Boeing 747 for the trip to New York.

Senior FAA officials have acknowledged that they are perplexed by the bombing because both the Frankfurt and London airports are considered to be particularly security conscious and Pan Am had undertaken special security precautions because of a tip the airline might be a target of a terrorist bombing.

"The incident points up the need for the international community to adopt even more stringent air security measures," State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said.

She said the United States had agreed with Finnish police in ruling out any connection between the crash and a Dec. 5 telephone call to the U.S. Embassy in Helsinki from a person who said a Pan Am jet would be the target of a bombing in December. That call had prompted an alert from the FAA and caused Pan Am to increase security at Frankfurt and London, officials have said.

San Francisco gave out woollined coats and long underwear to hundreds of homeless as Californians shivered in a cold spell today that apparently killed three, including a transient in an avocado grove near President Reagan's ranch. Hurricane-force winds wreaked havoc in the East.

Gusts up to 77 mph Wednesday triggered the collapse of a Philadelphia factory roof that killed two people, hampered efforts to rescue the 11-man crew of a cargo ship that sank in rough seas off New Jersey and blew off part of the roof of an airport terminal near Baltimore, authorities said. More than 350,000 buildings lost power

The fast-moving cold front that brought the winds to the East left snow in the Midwest, where four people died after shoveling snow in Indiana.

Two jets skidded off runways at Greater Cincinnati International Airport, which shut down for an hour Wednesday.

California's cold spell entered its third day today with frost and freeze warnings for another round of temperatures in the teens, 20s or 30s in effect in many sections of the state, and in Ari-

Authorities said the cold was suspected in the deaths of the transient found Tuesday in the avocado orchard near Reagan's ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains northwest of Los Angeles. another man found Tuesday in his unheated home in the Los Angeles suburb of Glendale and a man who turned up Monday in downtown Los Angeles clad only in his underwear.

The homeless fought off the cold by huddling together outdoors or taking refuge in packed emergency shelters.

In downtown San Francisco, dozens of transients crawled into sleeping bags or flimsy cardboard shelters.

"It takes at least four blankets and still you can't stay warm, said Vincente Jones, who is 29 and homeless.

The city is giving away 700 wool-lined raincoats and long underwear to help ward off the cold, said Deputy Mayor Myra Snyder. In Los Angeles, Skid Row shelters have been packed for a week. City buses took the overflow to 25 temporary shelters at county parks and National Guard armories.

Growers statewide fired up smudge pots, switched on wind machines and flooded irrigation canals with warm water to ward off the cold that threatened citrus crops, avocados and nursery stock

In Southern California's high desert, a motorist distracted by a rare blanket of snow hit a guardrail, killing her 80-year-old passenger, authorities said.

causing two minor injuries. The winds that tore through the East were clocked at 77 mph in Baltimore, 67 mph in Martinsburg, W.Va., and 60 mph in Newark, N.J., and Elizabeth City, N.C.

The wind knocked out power to 185,000 customers in the Baltimore area, 100,000 in the Washington area, 31,000 in Delaware, nearly 11,000 in New Jersey and at least 31,400 in New York state

Nagasaki gets noisy after mayor's comments on emperor

By TETSUO JIMBO Associated Press Writer

NAGASAKI, Japan (AP) - At a City Council meeting this month. Mayor Hitoshi Motoshima was asked his opinion of Emperor Hirohito's wartime responsibility - an especially sensitive question considering the monarch's frail condition.

The mayor's response, that Hirohito shares the blame for World War II and might have spared this city the atomic bomb, has created a nationwide backlash that includes calls for Motoshima's ouster and huge anti-Motoshima rallies.

It cost Motoshima the support of the governing party and will likely cost him a fourth term in office, and it illustrated the risks of speaking negatively of the 87year-old emperor.

At the meeting, Motoshima said that judging from historical accounts and his own wartime experience, "I believe the emperor shares responsibility for the war, as well as all of us who lived in that period."

Coming on the 47th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, the comments were seen as especially inappropriate by Japanese, who consider it despicable to criticize a suffering person.

More than 100 trucks with loudspeakers paraded through the city center blaring demands that Motoshima be removed from office. About 1,200 riot police were mobilized, both to guard the mayor and to prevent street vio-

Apart from leaders of the antiemperor Communist Party, few public figures have spoken about Hirohito's wartime role since he became seriously ill three months ago with intestinal bleeding and has been hovering near death since.

Soon after Motoshima's comment, which came in response to a question from a Communist municipal assembly member, right-wingers had about 10 sound trucks roaring down Nagasaki's Haranguing speeches and slogans like "Death to Motoshima!" and "Kick the traitor out of Japan!" blared from loudspeakers, and about 260 radical rightists wearing military-style uniforms were present.

A delegation from the Liberal Democratic Party, which controls the national government and had backed the indepenendent Motoshima since he took office in 1979, demanded the mayor retract the comments.

When he refused, the party decided to withdraw its support, making it unlikely Motoshima could win a fourth term.

Motoshima has received death threats, and last week a rightist charged into City Hall carrying a can of gasoline. He was arrested before he could do any damage.

"I never felt in such immense danger to my personal safety as well as to my family's in my life," the mayor told The Associated

Two French girls freed after appeal by Gadhafi

PARIS (AP) — Two French girls held for 13 months by Abu Nidal's Palestinian terrorist group arrived today in Libya and will be turned over to French authorities, the state-run Libyan news agency JANA reported.

The news came just minutes after Foreign Minister Roland Dumas of France said the government's efforts to win the release of the girls were on the verge of succeeding.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. - Indiana sounded a warning blast for future Big Ten foes with its 34-10 whipping of South Carolina in the Liberty Bowl.

As expected, the Hoosiers got another exceptional rushing performance from junior tailback Anthony Thompson on Wednes-

Thompson ran for 140 yards on 26 carries and scored twice, but it was the passing of quarterback Dave Schnell that felled the Gamecocks.

'Schnell had a good game once he got in the groove and got warmed up," Indiana Coach Bill Mallory said.

Schnell, a senior with one year of eligibility remaining, riddled the South Carolina defense for 378 yards and two touchdowns as he completed 16 of 31 passes.

"I never, never thought I was going to have a game like this,' Schnell said after being named the game's MVP.

"This is just a real confidence booster for me to take into the spring. I just felt real confident tonight against their man-to-man defense and I had a lot of confidence in my receivers," Schnell

The Liberty Bowl win capped an 8-3-1 season for Indiana, while South Carolina, which has lost all eight of its bowl appearances, finished 8-4.

Thompson got things started for the Hoosiers with a 48-yard run on Indiana's first play from scrimmage before capping an 88vard drive with a 7-yard scoring Schnell then began to take charge, hitting Cal Miller with a 10-yard scoring pass with 5:54 remaining in the first half.

Indiana later added a 28-yard Indiana's Anthony Thompson finds a big hole up the middle.

field goal by Pete Stoyanovich to lead 17-0 at the half.

South Carolina, which rushed for just 23 yards, had its glimmer of hope early in the third quarter when Mike Tolbert picked up a blocked punt at the Indiana 34 and scored the Gamecocks' only touchdown.

But the Hoosiers answered with a 19-yard field goal by Stoyanovich for a 20-7 edge.

South Carolina pulled within 20-10 on a 43-yard field goal by Collin Mackie later in the quarter before Schnell slammed the door on the Gamecocks.

Schnell opened the final quarter with a Liberty Bowl-record 88yard scoring strike to Rob

"I thought we would be able to throw the deep ball and do about anything we wanted if the offensive line picked up South Carolina's blitz, and they did," Schnell

Thompson completed the scoring with an 8-yard touchdown run. The touchdown was Thompson's 26th of the year and tied a Big Ten record set by Ohio State's Pete Johnson in 1895.

Tonight, Florida and Illinois play in the All American Bowl in Birmingham, Ala., while Brigham Young and Colorado meet in the Freedom Bowl at Anaheim, Calif.

Florida, 6-5, and Illinois, 6-4-1. make the All American the bowl with the worst combined records. Neither team is ranked, although each has a star player.

Emmitt Smith, a sophomore running back, gained 988 yards for Florida despite missing two games because of a knee injury. The Gators were 5-0 before he got

"It's no secret our offense is different when Emmitt isn't in there," Coach Galen Hall said.

Picking the winners in college football bowl games

As the New Year's weekend approaches, it's time to come out of the woodwork with the diminutive, uh, I mean definitive, word on the slew of upcoming college bowl games

So without further adieu, let's jump right in: All-American Bowl: Florida over Illinois. The two have similar records (Florida 6-5, Illinois 6-4-1), although Florida is favored by 51/2 points in the early odds. Really anything can happen here, but playing so close to home in Birmingham, Ala., may help the Gators. The odds are a little high as the Fighting Illini fall by a field goal Freedom Bowl: Colorado over BYU. Brigham Young may have an edge in bowl experience, but the Buffaloes have been more steady this year, losing only to Nebraska, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State. While the Cougars can be excused for falling to Wyoming and Miami, losses to San Diego State and Utah make Colorado a safer bet by 10 points.

Holiday Bowl: Oklahoma State

over Wyoming. OSU's Cowboys had been one of the best-kept secrets in the game until this year, when they turned plenty of heads. Wyoming came on as somewhat of a surprise, falling only to the Cougars of Houston

This could be one of the best games of the week if both teams play as well as they have all year. But with Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders in the backfield and the receiving tandem of Dykes and Green, Oklahoma State should outrun Wyoming by a touchdown

Peach Bowl: North Carolina State over Iowa. Both teams fell a little below the expected mark this season. Iowa, picked to win the Big-10, finished with a frustrating 6-3-3 record in a league where parity is now a way of life.

This one could go either way, but the Wolfpack (7-3-1 this season) should be able to edge the Hawkeyes in Atlanta.

Gator Bowl: Georgia over Michigan State. Georgia's last game under Vince Dooley will send the Bulldog mentor out on a winning note. The Spartans are a Clemson. Although Clemson is an far cry from last year's Rose early one-point favorite, the ish remain No. 1 following their Bowl victors over USC, while the Bulldogs are hoping to get back on track after missing all major bowls since 1983. Count Georgia the winner by a touchdown.

Hall of Fame Bowl: Louisiana State over Syracuse. LSU's 8-3 record is a result of the toughest schedule in the SEC, making a title run difficult this season. The Syracuse Orangemen did exceed early expectations by finishing 9-2. but the Tigers should be too much with quarterback Tom Hodson, possibly the league's

Citrus Bowl: Oklahoma over

Sooners will make good in this, victory in the Superbowl of coltheir final bowl berth for the next two years, despite numerous distractions concerning the NCAA. Clemson won the Citrus over Penn State in 1987, but Switzer will find a way to come out smelling like a rose again. Cotton Bowl: UCLA over Arkansas. Sorry Hogs, but even after the scare you put into Miami, UCLA is still the victor here. The Bruins will be minus linebacker Chance Johnson, their leading tackler this season, but Arkansas is missing two seniors who broke an "undisclosed" team rule and UCLA has plenty of offensive prowess behind QB Troy Aikman. The Cotton Bowl is a step up from last year's Liberty berth for the Hogs, but they'll come up short once more.

Fiesta Bowl: Notre Dame over West Virginia. All the controversy about whether Miami or West Virginia should be ranked No. 1 (in the event that the Mountaineers beat Notre Dame) is rendered moot as the top-ranked Irlege football

And if the Mountaineers do win, they deserve the national championship. Notre Dame already whipped the Hurricanes, and Miami coach Jimmy Johnson's argument doesn't hold water.

Rose Bowl: Southern California over Michigan. Although the Wolverines made a decent showing this year, they're simply outclassed here. And after the Trojans fell, 20-17, to Michigan State in the Rose Bowl last year, the revenge factor could play a role. Throw in the home crowd and

USC comes out on top. Sugar Bowl: Florida State over

Auburn. Tough pick as it's practically a tossup, with both teams at 10-1 on the season. Last year, Auburn tied Syracuse in the Sugar Bowl and the Seminoles ended up ranked No. 2 in the nation. But with Sammie Smith in the backfield and Deion Sanders definitely in the lineup, color me Florida

Orange Bowl: Nebraska over Miami, Fla. I'll allow myself one sentimental pick and go with the Cornhuskers. Coach Tom Osborne owns the second winningest record (.818) in college football behind Barry Switzer (.848), but has never won a national championship.

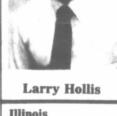

Although he's not likely to do so this year, considering Nebraska's No. 6 spot entering the Orange Bowl, he deserves the win, and could at least put Miami out of the running. And with Switzer's Sooners facing a two-year jail term, Osborne and the 'Huskers could find the going a little easier in 1989 and 1990

Ryan gives Bears edge at one spot

PHOENIX (AP) - Buddy Ryan, in assessing Saturday's NFC divisional playoff game, said his Philadelphia Eagles are better than the Chicago Bears at every position but middle linebacker.

Philadelphia's head coach arrived at the Eagles' practice field Monday after watching the Minnesota Vikings defeat the Los Angeles Rams 28-17 in the wild card game that determined Philadelphia's opponent in the next round.

Under NFL rules, which prevent division opponents from playing during the conference semifinals. Minnesota now goes to San Francisco to play the 49ers and the Eagles go to Chicago for a game on Saturday

The Eagles coach would concede only that Chicago middle linebacker Mike Singletary holds an edge in a position-by -position rundown of the two teams

Ryan at first refused to start a war of words with his old boss, Bears coach Mike Ditka. The two have been feuding since Ryan left as Ditka's defensive coordinator after Chicago's 1985 Super Bowl vic-

But Ryan was reminded that Ditka said the inventor of the "46 defense" knew how only to take orders, not to give them. "I've been giving orders all my life," said Ryan.

who was a sargeant in the Korean War. "I never took orders from him, anyway. The old man (late Bears owner George Halas) hired me before he did him. Ryan said the team had no preference between the 49ers and the Bears. But, he said: "I thought we were going to play the Bears. I thought Minnesota would win in that

And Minnesota's a pretty good football team." Rvan didn't think the potential cold weather and snow in Chicago would be an advantage for the

"That's Eagles weather," he said. "Give us five feet of that. We like that old Minnesota Vikings

The Bears will face the Eagles without defensive end Richard Dent, who is gone for the season with a broken ankle, and with quarterback Mike Tomczak probably starting for the injured Jim

"Everybody's beat up this time of the year," Ryan said. "If you're complaining about injuries, vou're looking for excuses.

49ers' Craig named NFL's offensive player of the year

By DAVE CARPENTER AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. - Roger Craig laid the groundwork for a record-breaking season on the mountainous trails behind his home on the San Francisco Peninsula last winter and spring.

Sixteen regular-season games and over a mile in total yardage later, the San Francisco tailback is still high-stepping in midseason form. Just like the 49ers, Craig finished strong with two 100-yard rushing games in December as the team marched to a third straight NFC West title.

The six-year veteran has a foolproof method to make the weekly batterings seem less tortuous: undergo worse torture in your spare time. "I figure I did all my hurting and my suffering in myself through," he says. Craig's grueling workouts helped pay off again

Wednesday as he was named the NFL's Offensive Player of the Year. He edged Cincinnati's Boomer Esiason 32-29 in the voting by writers and broadcasters in each of the 28 NFL cities.

Randall Cunningham was a distant third with five, followed by Dan Marino of Miami and Eddie Brown of Cincinnati with two each and Herschel Walker of Dallas with one.

"It's a great honor and something I didn't expect," said Craig, 28. "It'll probably take a couple of days for it to really set in. I'll say 'Oh, I was chosen the offensive player throughout the whole league.' That's a phenomenal honor.'

Craig's numbers were at times phenomenal this season as he shattered Wendell Tyler's team rushing record by 240 yards and catapulted into third place on the 49ers' career rushing list, trailing only Joe Perry and Ken Willard.

Craig rushed for 1,502 yards and nine touchdowns and caught 76 passes for 534 yards and one score. He ranked third in the NFL in rushing and eighth in receptions, tying Eric Dickerson of Indianapolis for first with 2,036 combined yards. He averaged 4.8 yards per attempt, best in the NFC, and was the key ingredient in the 49ers' secondranked offense

Barring injury, sometime late next season he should move into first place among running backs in career catches. Walter Payton had 492 receptions in 13 years and Tony Galbreath 490 in 12. Craig has 434. And he already owns the singleseason record for running backs with 92 receptions in 1985, the year he became the only player in NFL history to both rush and catch passes for 1,000 vards

"He's got just incredible determination and dedication, and he thrives on football, truly thrives on it." said 49ers coach Bill Walsh. "He's as inspiring an athlete as we've ever had.

Meat dispute puts U.S., Common Market near trade battle

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States and the 12-nation European Community are teetering on the verge of a full-blown trade war over the issue of whether American meat which contains growth hormones constitutes a health threat.

Both sides are locked in an acrimonious dispute which threatens to spill over into other areas of trade between America and its European allies. Two-way trade between the United States and the European Community totals $150 billion annually.

The Reagan administration has vowed to impose $100 million worth of trade sanctions against European food products, starting at 12:01 a.m. on Jan. 1.

The 100 percent duties will effectively double the wholesale price at the U.S. border for such popular products as hams, canned Italian tomatoes and imported wine coolers.

Clayton Yeutter said the stiff duties will go into effect unless the Europeans back down on their ban on imported meat products which contain growth hor-

The meat ban - which is to be applied to all European suppliers, not just the United States - is scheduled to take effect on Jan. 1. Australia, New Zealand. Brazil and Argentina already have agreed to ship only hormone-free beef to Europe.

The list of European products upon which the higher 100 percent duties will be imposed include beef; pork hams and shoulders, excluding those that have been boned, cooked and packed in airtight containers: canned tomatoes: instant coffee extracts and wine coolers containing less than 7 percent alcohol.

Also subject to the duties will be both fresh and concentrated

U.S. Trade Representative fruit juices and pet food packaged for retail sale.

Yeutter, who is President-elect Bush's choice for agriculture secretary, said the European ban constituted an unfair trade practice because there was no scientific evidence that the hormones, which are used to increase bulk, cause any health effects in hu-

The Common Market countries contend that while the scientific evidence on meat hormones is not conclusive, they have the right to take precautionary action to protect health.

In a statement, the Reagan administration said the U.S.

Food and Drug Administration had determined that the daily production of hormones in humans, even in children, is far higher than the minuscule levels left in meat from treated animals.

"We have tried repeatedly to bring this issue to a scientific dispute settlement panel under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) in order to have it resolved," Yeutter said in a statement. "However, our European counterparts have blocked our efforts.

Yeutter said the $100 million in duties roughly equals the estimated lost sales of American meat products in Europe.

The Europeans, however, have vowed to hike duties on other U.S. products if America makes good on its threat to retaliate. U.S. officials pledge they will counter the counter-retaliation. One proposal being considered by the U.S. side is a ban on all European meat imports, worth $450 million a year.

Officials are predicting that at least the initial ban on meat containing growth hormones and the 100 percent duties announced by Yeutter on Tuesday will take effect on Jan. 1 since there are no talks scheduled before that time. However, officials held out hope that the dispute could still be settled early in 1989. In Los Angeles, where President Reagan is vacationing, Deputy White House Press Secretary Lesley Arsht said the administration had not lost sight of the fact that the European Community and the United States are major trading partners and allies.

"We have our differences over trade, but there is a mechanism for resolving them and we have no reason to believe this one . won't be resolved also," he said

However, the new dispute comes at a time of simmering unhappiness between America and its European allies.
