Dozens of new laws ring in the new year

By MATT YANCEY Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ringing in the new year are dozens of changes in federal laws and regulations, many of them aimed at quenching Americans' thirst for security and a few that will make life a little more expensive.

Among the most significant of the Jan. 1 changes are a vast expansion of Medicare to cover catastrophic illnesses, faster pension fund vesting that will benefit millions, particularly women, and tax changes reducing government subsidies of purch-

Others that occurred just before the end of 1988 or are scheduled early in 1989 include a ban on lie detector tests by private employers, 60 days advance notice of plant closings and large layoffs, and a new law prohibiting landlords from discriminating against the handicapped and families with chil-

Environmental Protection Agency regulations implementing the 46-nation ozone treaty took effect Jan. 1. The regulations will require chemical companies, beginning in July, to cut their production of chloroflourocarbon or CFC compounds by an estimated 20 percent back to 1986 levels.

The treaty is aimed at halting the depletion of the ozone layer. CFC compounds also contribute to the "greenhouse" effect that many scientists say is warming the planet.

As a result of the regulations, consumers may notice fewer plastic food containers from fast-food outlets, thicker insulating panels and possibly even slightly harder seat cushions.

The biggest of the immediate changes is the Jan 1. expansion of Medicare coverage for 32 million Medicare beneficiaries to include catastrophic health care costs.

Prior to passage of the measure last summer by Congress — the first major expansion of Medicare in its 22-year history — the program paid full hospital bills for no more than 59 days a year.

Now, the beneficiary still will have to pay the first-day deductible of $560. But that charge will be assessed no more than once a year no matter how many times the patient has to be hospitalized. The other 364 days are fully paid.

Medicare enrollees will pay for the new benefits through a flat increase in the premium deducted from their monthly Social Security checks and an additional sliding scale premium for approximately 40 percent of the elderly who pay federal income

The flat increase will be $4 a month effective See NEW LAWS, Page 2

Police arrest five and seize drugs, cash in morning raid

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

An early morning drug raid today netted Pampa police officers five arrests, an undetermined amount of marijuana and cocaine, $1,000 in cash, narcotics partment's Tactical Unit and Criminal Investigation Division acted on a warrant to search a residence at 906 E. Browning at about midnight today.

Following the search, officers arrested two women and three men. Arrested in the raid were 1824 N. Banks; Kelley Jean McAulay, 21, P.O. Box 254; and Kenny Jack Addington, 28, 715 Sloan.

Smith and Addington were each charged with possession of a controlled substance and released shortly after their arrests pending further investigation.

White and Heuston were each charged with possession of narcotics paraphernalia and possession of marijuana. McAulay was charged with possession of a controlled substance. All three remained in city jail early today awaiting arraignment on the drug charges.

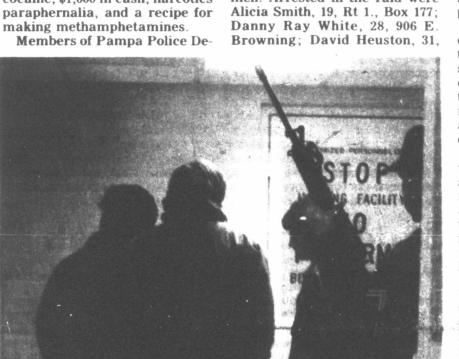

A number of handguns, an envelope containing $1,000 in cash. scales and what is believed to be marijuana and cocaine were among the items confiscated in the raid. Police officers also found a handwritten recipe for making methamphetamine dichloride, a form of speed.

At the time of today's raid, White was free on $15,000 bond on two counts of possession of a controlled substance stemming from a similar search of his residence in August. White was indicted by the Gray County grand jury on the earlier charges in November and is scheduled to appear for trial Jan. 19.

In the first raid, a quantity of two "exotic" drugs, dimethylanthetamine and hydromorphone, valued at $7,500 was found. Dimethylanthetamine is a pure drug that ranks with cocaine, opium and morphine, authorities

Also found in the raid was $12,000 in cash. The state has filed for forfeiture of the $12,000. saying it has the right to the money because it was connected with illegal drug activities. White's attorney, Bill McKinney of Amarillo, has filed an answer contesting the state's right to the cash. Both sides are awaiting trial to determine the outcome of the ownership of the cash.

Bakkers return to TV ministry and Tammy Faye Bakker returned to television today after a two-year absence with a show broadcast from the living room of their borrowed home to a handful of stations around the country.

"Jim, I think this is probably the happiest day of my life," Mrs. Bakker said as the show began.

Sporting her trademark heavy eye makeup, she began crying two minutes into the hourlong

> Today, Bakker told viewers and his supporters crowded into the house that his last television appearance was to break ground for the Crystal Palace Church at Heritage USA, the home of PTL.

"I believe that was the last straw for Satan," Bakker said. "I think the devil was mad that something so beautiful was being left his television ministry in built.... I believe the devil said, 'I have to smash Jim and Tammy

Bakker thanked supporters who had donated money to put him back on the air, and said his viewers should have faith if they were living through a crisis.

"If Jim and Tammy can survive their holocaust of the last two years, then you can make it,' Bakker said.

Palestinian held in Greece may hold clues to jet bombing

By PATRICK QUINN Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A Palestinian held by Greece and wanted by the United States for the 1982 bombing of a Pan Am jetliner may hold clues to the group that blew up Flight 103 over Scotland last month

Whether he will ever tell his story in a U.S. court is an open question.

Greece's Supreme Court has twice delayed the extradition of Mohammed Rashid, 39, who is thought by Western intelligence experts to specialize in the planting of bombs aboard jetliners and to be a senior operative in the May 15 Palestinian terrorist group.

The Rashid case has taken on extra significance since the Dec. 21 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, which killed all 259 people aboard the Boeing 747 and apparently another 11 on the ground.

U.S. and European officials are focusing on the May 15 group and another extremist group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, as possible suspects in the bombing.

On Nov. 15, the Greek Supreme Court indefinitely postponed its decision on extraditing Rashid, saving the United States had failed to supply key documents in the case. The U.S. Embassy in Athens says the requested documents have been turned over to the Greek government.

"The requested papers have been sent. I guess they are being moved from ministry to ministry." said an embassy representative, speaking on condition of anonymity. Rashid is wanted in the United States on charges of planting a bomb that exploded on a Pan Am jet as it flew from Tokyo to Hawaii six years ago. A Japanese teen-ager was killed and 15 people were Rashid was arrested at Athens airport on May 29 on a tip from U.S. officials and was sentenced to seven months in jail for entering Greece with a false passport.

American officials have claimed Rashid and the May 15 organization — which is named for the date the 1948 Arab-Israeli War began - also were involved in the 1986 bombing of a TWA jetliner over southern Greece that killed four Americans. That blast is not mentioned in the extradition request. The Supreme Court has not said when it will issue its decision. An extradition ruling has to be approved by Justice Minister Vassilis Rotis before it can be carried out. The long delays in Rashid's case, combined with the rejection of an Italian plea for extradition of another Palestinian, have given rise to charges that Greece's governing Panhellenic Socialist Movement is not committed to combating international terrorism.

In early December, the government reneged on an extradition agreement with Italy and put 27year-old Abdel Osama Zomar on a plane to Benghazi, Libya. Zomar was suspected of helping to organize a September 1982 attack on Rome's main synagogue that killed a 2-year-old boy and left 37 people injured.

Justice Minister Rotis said he overturned a 1984 Supreme Court extradition decision because Zomar was "acting in the struggle for the reacquisition of his homeland.'

Zomar had been identified as one of two Arabs jailed in Greece with links to the extremist Palestinian faction Fatah-Revolutionary Council, which is headed by terrorist mastermind Abu Nidal.

The other is Omar Mabrouki, serving a 10-year jail term for trying to shoot the Jordanian charge d'affairs in Athens in 1984.

According to Greek and Western intelligence officials, Zomar's detention may have triggered an attack on the City of Poros cruise ship last July near Athens. Nine people were killed and 11 others were injured in the assault.

immediately, climbing to $10.20 monthly in 1993. The sliding scale premium is projected to rise from a maximum of 15 percent of regular income tax liability in 1989 to about 28 percent in 1993.

Many of the Jan. 1 changes grow out of the 1986 Tax Reform Act. The biggest new benefit from that law is faster vesting in pension plans.

The maximum waiting period for employees to become fully invested in a pension is being cut in half from 10 years to five years.

However, employers can adopt an option that denies full vesting until seven years. To do so, they have to offer 20 percent vesting after three years and an additional 20 percent vesting annually until the seventh year, when it reaches 100 percent.

The Employee Benefit Research Institute estimates that the pension changes will provide a retirement stake to 2 million more workers a year. "We'll especially see more women being vested than in the past because they tend to be in the workforce or with the same employer for shorter periods," said Stephanie Poe, a spokeswoman for the institute. Another tax change is that only 20 percent of personal interest payments on everything from car and student loans to credit card charges will be deductible in 1989, compared with 40 percent last

Firefighter denied disability pension

HOUSTON (AP) — A state representative has joined a Houston firefighter's cause after the former city employee was denied a disability pension despite a ruling by the Civil Service Commission that he is physically unable

"It doesn't make any sense for someone who worked for the city as long as he has to get sick and ... not get any money," said state Rep. Al Edwards, who is looking into the case.

Shelton Morris, 36, became a firefighter in 1979. He complains of respiratory and back probems, but also suffers from pernt foot pain because of a demity of a toe and a bunion. He d surgery on the busion in 1994, but says it did not help.

Morris worked for several years in the fire department's public information office, avoiding the kind of duty that aggravated his foot condition. However, he lost his desk job during a recent reorganization.

The Civil Service Commission on Oct. 14 terminated Morris' job based on his physical inability. But he was turned down about a month later after the Houston Firemen's Relief & Retirement Fund board reviewed the same medical information. Morris, who is black, suspected racial discrimination after his usion was rejected because a white firefighter in a similar situation was granted a pension.

After he filed a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, however, he was told the agency had no jurisdiction over the pension board.

Morris was advised to take his case to the attorney general's office, but it is not known whether that office will find grounds to investigate.

City Councilman Jim Greenwood, a Houston lawyer, said he is puzzled about the conflicting rulings in Morris' case.

"From the standpoint of the firefighter, he was damned when he did and damned when he didn't," Greenwood said. "There ought to be one arbiter whose conclusions would govern the situa-

Elected county officials sworn in

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Third floor district courtroom was filled to overflowing with family members and well-wishers of county officials during swearing-in ceremonies conducted there at 10 a.m. today.

"There were more (people attending) than I'd ever seen," commented Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy. One observer estimated as many as 200 people attended the swearing-in. The court room was filled, and others were standing outside the room as well.

Many of those attending were well-wishers of newly elected Gray County Sheriff Jimmy Free, who was inundated with handshakes and hugs after the ceremony. Sheriff Free officially took over the position after receiving the oath of office from 223rd District Judge Don Cain.

Sheriff Free then deputized his 12 deputies, including nine staff members who had previously been employed with the Sheriff's Office. Also deputized were three new deputies - Lynn Brown, formerly with the Pampa Police Department: Steve Green, a former deputy with Hutchison County Sheriff's Office; and William "Bill" Toten.

Free, custodian for First Baptist Church with experience as a police officer and private investigator, overcame seemingly insurmountable odds in November when he defeated incumbent Rufe Jordan, 76, had served as sheriff of Gray County for 38 years without losing an election.

However, when Jordan chose not to join the Panhandle Regional Drug Task Force last July, Free said he decided to run against the veteran law enforcement officer, promising that his first official action would be to join the anti-drug law enforcement agency

In a meeting of the Gray County commission today, commissioners were given a copy of the proposed agreement between the county and the drug task force. Judge Kennedy explained that Free had asked that action on the agreement be included on the agenda for today's meeting. However, task force representatives from Amarillo were unable to attend today's meeting, he said, so the item is to be included in the Jan. 13 meeting's

Other county officials sworn to office in ceremonies today include Margie Gray, who ran unopposed in November for Gray County tax accessor/collector; Joe Wheeley, Gray County commissioner, Precinct 1, who is replacing retiring commissioner O.L. Presley; Gerald Wright, re-elected as Gray County commissioner, Precinct 3; and A.C. Malone, Gray County auditor.

Malone was reappointed to the position of county auditor for another two year term by district judges Cain and Grainger McIlhany.

Gray County Attorney Robert McPherson and District Attorney Harold Comer were not present to take the oath today, County Clerk Wanda Carter said. Both attorneys will receive the oath Tuesday morning before beginning the duties of their respective offices, she said.

Also receiving the oath of office today were the constables for Precincts 1 through 4. They are as follows: Jerry Dean Williams, Precinct 1; Herman H. Kieth, Precinct 2; N.L. "Buddy" Roland, Precinct 3; and Jim McDonald, Precinct 4.

Roger Hubbard, pastor of Bible Church of Pampa, concluded the swearing-in ceremonies with a

Libya: U.S. wants to kill Gadhafi

ROME (AP) — The official Liby an news agency claimed today the United States is using allegations about a chemical weapons plant in Libya as a pretext to launch an attack and kill Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

The JANA news agency, monitored in Rome, referred to a report Sunday in the United Arab Emirates daily Al-Khaleej that quoted unidentified Arab sources as saying the Americans planned to send a "hit squad" to kill the Libyan leader during an attack.

Al-Khaleej claimed an American task force had trained in Italy, Spain and aboard U.S. warships in the Mediterranean for the attack, which it said could come this month. The newspaper said the strike would include bombing attacks on the nuclear research center at Tajura and the alleged chemical weapons plant at Rabtah.

The newspaper report had no dateline but appeared to originate in the Libyan capital, Tripoli. JANA gave the report unusual attention, not only carrying a story but also sending it to foreign news agencies by telex and telefax.

"The uncovering of this terrorist plan reveals and exposes clearly the real motives and dimensions of the hysterical campaign" against Libya, JANA and pretexts for an operation of premeditated individual

It said the report proves the U.S. allegations about a chemical weapons plant "were excuses murder." The U.S. government has contended Libya is on the verge of producing chemical weapons at the plant near Rabtah, a city about 50 miles southwest of Tripoli.

Libya insists the facility is a pharmaceutical plant. West German officials are investigating U.S. charges that a West German company played a key role in helping Libya build the plant.

President Reagan has said the United States had discussed with other NATO countries the possibility of military action against the plant.

"We are confident that the public opinion after knowing these facts will stand on our side...," said JANA, referring to the Al-Khaleej report.

Town residents angered by company's gravel dredging plan

SIMONTON (AP) — It may take a lot of money, but the mayor of this Fort Bend County community 30 miles west of Houston said the town will fight a proposed sand and gravel dredging operation on the nearby Brazos River.

The proposal has angered residents, who have drawn support from county officials and from residents and city leaders in nearby Fulshear in opposition to a state-issued dredging permit to Superior Sand and Gravel Co. of Altair.

Superior Sand and Gravel wants to put the operation on the river, which cuts a path across rich farmland through the Fort Bend County country-

It is peaceful and quiet along the river and Simonton residents want to keep it that way. Some fear the dredging operation would only harm the quality of life. "It is costing us, considering our budget," Simonton Mayor Maurice Berkman said. The fight is taking a good hunk of Simonton's annual $45,000 budget, he said.

"But we feel so strongly about it. We want to let them know we're serious about this."

Superior Sand and Gravel wants a permit from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to dredge 23,000 cubic yards of sand and gravel a month from a 2.4-mile stretch of the Brazos just north of the Farm-to-Market 1093 river bridge near

After review by several divisions within the Parks and Wildlife Department, the staff recommended approval of the permit with some stipulations. A decision is expected this month.

"The net result will be a benefit to everyone." said Jimmy Alan Hall, the company's Austinbased attorney.

Berkman disagrees, and he is counting on additional hearings to argue against the dredging op-

The Parks and Wildlife Department only considers the impact the project would have on fish, wildlife and navigation.

"What bothers me is it takes thousands of years to make that gravel," said Simonton resident Carl Hester, 63, retired environmental coordinator for Exxon Company USA.

"It's an important feature of the river's ecology. In 50 to 100 years, we're just going to have an old muddy bottom trench," Hester said.

During the last hearing before the Parks and Wildlife Department in Simonton, Hester testified that the proposed dredging operation would be highly detrimental to aquatic life in the river.

Not only would the dredging harm aquatic life, but its noise and movement also would disturb birds and wild animals that inhabit the wooded banks of the Brazos, he said.

But John Rollin MacRae, wetlands resource coordinator for the Parks and Wildlife Department, disagreed. He said similar dredging operations occurred nearby "without indication of significant impact on fish, wildlife or other property

And while the president of the Valley Lodge Homeowners Association testified that dredging would ruin canoeing, fishing and floating on the river. MacRae said his research indicated there was little recreational use of the Brazos River in the Simonton area.

Hall attributed the strong opposition to the proximity of the dredging site to a more populated

"With the increase in truck traffic, they're paranoid about that, but that's really not an issue," Hall said. He said the state needs the gravel and sand to build highways.

Hall also said many of the permit opponents live on the Brazos, and the rapid erosion caused by the waterway "makes these people skittish about anything on the river."

Hester said, "Sure, a little (dredging) here and there won't hurt the overall river. But allowed to continue, we're not going to have a river anymore. We're just going to have a drainage ditch.

Drought conditions still prevail in East Texas, coastal regions

By The Associated Press

Businesses and farmers in East Texas and along the Gulf Coast are hoping for more rain this year, but weather officials say they expect it will be even drier than usual for at least the first few months of 1989.

For much of the state, 1988 rainfall was below average. The Beaumont area was 20 inches below its annual average of 50 inches, and Houston's total rainfall for last year was 22.93 inches, just over half of its average of 44.76 inches.

Last week, efforts were taken to keep salt water from penetrating the drinking water supply of Port Arthur, Orange and Beaumont in the Golden quently lead only to slit.

The new year apparently doesn't hold any quick relief. National Weather Service officials predict the Gulf Coast area will get only 55 percent of its normal rainfall through March.

floating docks sit in the mud. Boats normally kept in sheltered slips dangle midair on mooring lines or sit in the muck.

In recent weeks, the reservoir's water level has hovered at 152 feet above sea level — a level that reduces the lake's conservation pool to 12 percent. The conservation pool is water the U.S. Corps of Engineers periodically releases to serve downstream users

"If they keep drawing out water for industrial users in Beaumont, they'll be putting us out of business," said Dan Brudi, who operates the Twin Dikes Marina near the Sam Rayburn

Bill Webb, owner of the Shirley Creek Marina on Sam Rayburn, said his boat launch still has plenty of water, "but if we don't have some good rains, it could very well put a bunch of these little businesses out of business."

Webb estimates his marina's business is down about 30 percent because the reservoir is low.

"I'm sure we're down millions of dollars for the entire lake," he

Directors of the United Lake Sam Rayburn Business Association met with Corps officials reRep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin.

"There wasn't much good news," said Wilson's aide, Peyton Walters. "The 90-day forecast is for there to not be much rain.

January and February, however, are usua"y two of the wettest months in East Texas, and some people haven't given up hope.

"We're not pushing the panic button," said Tommy Hebert, manager of the Beaumont-based Lower Neches Valley Authority, which supplies water to Port Arthur, Port Neches, Nederland and other Southeast Texas cities. "Nature hasn't failed us yet."

The lake usually is lowest in early November and recovers to a full conservation pool by March, but the lake level just kept dropping in 1988.

"I'm not saying that it won't recover, but my confidence is waning," Hebert said.

Although farmers generally don't use a lot of water this time of year, they are still concerned about the persistent drought.

Kraig Gallimore, a Texas Department of Agriculture spokesman in Austin, said 1989 cotton, corn and sorghum crops have lost a lot of sub-soil moisture that must be replaced in order for the At some marinas, one-time cently through the office of U.S. crops to grow to full maturity.

With one day to go, Texas' highway death toll pushed toward the halfway mark of the New Year's holiday prediction for the state by the Texas Department of Public

Seven highway deaths on Sunday, including two pedestrians. raised the state's highway fatalities to 16 over the 78-hour period that began at 6 p.m. Friday and continues through midnight tonight.

The DPS predicted 34 people would die in accidents during the holiday period. During the long Christmas weekend, 36 people died in traffic accidents — four more than DPS officials had predicted.

An El Paso man, Raul Humberto Aguilera, 20, was killed as he tried to cross a street about 12:20 a.m. Sunday, DPS spokesman Tom Mobley said. Kenneth Thomas, 22, of Portland was killed near Bay City as attempted to cross State Highway 35 on foot Sunday, Mobletion Sunday. Ms. Baldwin was wearing a seatbelt, Mobley said.

An Orange Grove man died when his vehicle went out of control and rolled three times near Mathis early Sunday. The victim was identified as Adalberto Gonin the bed of a pickup, died early Sunday morning when the vehicle failed to negotiate a curve on Old U.S. Highway 87 about 1.5 miles north of Grapecreek in Tom Green County.

Elvis Rolando Romero, 18 of Sherman, was killed about 3:45 a.m. Sunday when his car left U.S. 75 in Sherman, hit a concrete abutment and flew 70 feet through the air.

In another one-car accident, Albert Ray Garcia, 19 of Rio Hondo, was killed when his vehicle ran off of FM 508 about 5:30 a.m Sunday about 7 miles east of Harlingen. Garcia's car rolled into a ditch and hit a cement drain, the DPS said.

Open door policy frees inmate, temporarily

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County jail inmate who was wearing a surgical mask because of illness walked out of his unlocked cell and followed an off-duty sheriff's deputy past two checkpoints to freedom, authorities said.

A spokesman for the Dallas County sheriff's department said Arthur Tabor, 47, was arrested on Friday and placed in a holding cell at the Lew Sterrett Justice

Tabor, still in street clothes and wearing a surgical mask because of tuberculosis, saw a deputy leaving the area and apparently followed him because he was unsure of what he was supposed to do, officials said.

aiting for disposable automobile

During my lifetime they (whoever "they" are) have invented disposable everything. Disposable diapers, lighters, cameras, razors, contact lenses, plates, silverware, you name it.

What could possibly be next? If I have anything to say about it, it'll be disposable cars. I've been drawn to this conclusion after a recent phone call to my mechanic. "Thanks for calling Larry-Bob's Really Swell Auto Heaven. Can I help you?" "Larry-Bob, this is Bear. Need you to fix the alignment on the Datsun." 'What year is it?'' "Early import. Came over on the Ark." Larry-Bob looked up the year and came back with the bad news. "Sorry, Barry, you can't fix the alignment on those models.'

"It's Bear. What?" "Them Japs didn't intend for you to keep the thing through the second coming of Christ. You're supposed to sell it and get a new one every decade or so."

They now build cars with parts you can't fix so you'll be forced to buy a new one? We should be outraged. As a matter of fact, I am outraged. I have always looked at cars the way I look at horses. You run 'em till they can't run anymore. Then you shoot 'em and get a new one. But at 10,000 bucks for a new version of the same song, that'd be an expensive shot.

So, in this wonderfully disposable society of ours, why not a truly disposable car? It would cost a thousand dollars, tops. It'd be solid state and guaranteed to last at least 24 months. That way we'd all become two-year-traders and the car companies would reap a regular payday from all of us, not just the privileged few.

Off Beat

In the last 10 years Detroit and Tokoyo have not made one penny off yours truly. But at $1,000 a whack, even I could afford to own a beautiful. if only temporary, new car.

And how would they build these little jewels? Plastic bodies, plastic parts, goofy looking spare tire, AM radio that sounds like a kazoo. In other words, pretty much like they do now.

I checked with the other writers in the office. There is one new car owner and a bunch of folks who drive the motorized equivalent of the brontosaurus. Why? Because few sane people would pay $14,000 for a car made of the finest plastic known to

So let's call a spade a spade. The cars of the last 10 years are disposable. They need a disposable

On the other hand, they could make cars the way they used to, so any shade tree mechanic could do the work himself and feel darn proud of it. But that's not modern, not the way of the '90s. So I'll just keep driving around my Datsun that can't have the alignment repaired. But I'm still waiting for that first Chevrolet Huggie to come rolling off the assembly line. That'll be

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Private enterprise can bail them out

It's funny how politicians throw around your hardearned tax dollars to pointless purposes. The Reagan administration last month reportedly agreed to a "compromise" with Congress for $5 billion in the 1990 budget to bail out the savings and loan industry

Such thinking illustrates the way our politicians and bureaucrats look at things. And it also shows what lies in store for your pocketbook. The dam having been broken by the Reagan administration, future outlays to "solve" this "crisis" will come in a flood.

But all this is unneeded. President Reagan and his staff would have better served the American people by just saying no to the $5 billion down payment on this new boondoggle. The problem was itself caused by government; it will be solved only by removing the stifling government controls.

A study by Citizens for a Sound Economy notes, "Restricting thrifts to making long-term, fixed-rate mortgages meant that thrifts were lending long-term at fixed rates while borrowing short-term, making them vulnerable to rising interest rates." This in turn shifts the mortgage risk from homeowners to thrifts. But when interest rates jump, the thrifts are caught holding mortgages paid at low rates, but they must pay out higher interest to savings accounts. Disaster ensues.

Since the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation guarantees deposits in the thrifts, FSLIC — that is, the taxpayers — actually assumes the risk. So the government strangles the S&Ls, at the same time guaranteeing that their bad loan decisions will be covered by tax dollars.

The road to recovery will be difficult, but it can be done without any expenditure of tax dollars. All controls on S&Ls should be lifted; they should be allowed to become full-fledged banks if they choose. But the federal savings guarantees should also be ended, for banks as well as S&Ls; the guarantees only mask the true risk the institutions take on every loan. A loan should be made by market decisions, not by political dictates. S&Ls and banks should make decisions on loans based only on the borrower's ability to repay, not the taxpayers' willingness to suffer through more extortion.

Finally, to solve the current crisis, all restriction on acquiring S&Ls should be lifted. Many banks and other lending institutions, such as Ford Motor Co., are willing to absorb the thrifts' losses in order to expand their own base of operations. Letting them do so would save taxpayers $5 billion in 1990, and $85 billion over the next 10 years. Since government got us into this mess, the least it can do is let private industry bail us out.

There's nothing right about it

WASHINGTON — On a cool day in January 1988, professional guides associated with a shooting resort near Sabine Pass, Texas, arranged a goose hunt. Their $600-a-day clients were three good ol' boys named Standish, Kuncir and Patterson.

Unknown to the guides, the three were special agents of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. They had a bloody good time.

On Jan. 22, firing three separate volleys, the group killed 204 geese. The next day they went to a different site. This time, in two volleys, the group shot 176 geese. Says the government, laconically, "This was in excess of the daily bag limit."

The charges are contained in the government's own volley of indictments and criminal informations against roughly 200 individuals and guide services. The accusations, made public on Dec. 13, climaxed a three-year undercover operation in Texas.

If convicted, the defendants face fines ranging up to $250,000 and imprisonment up to five years. Twenty-seven of the defendants will go up to court on felony charges.

True sportsmen and conservationists will hail the investigation with warm applause. The government must prove its case, of course, but the very act of filing charges should have a strong deterrent effect against hunters and guides who scoff at laws protecting migratory birds.

Under the law, ducks and geese may be taken only in season and only subject to daily limits; but the defendants in these cases are charged with ignoring the end of season and with flouting the daily limits.

The law says that in certain areas, only steel shot may be used — geese tend to swallow lead role models of sportsmanship — were not con-

shot and to die of poisoning — but some of these defendants used lead shot anyhow

The law lays down strict rules on tagging; the law requires hunters to make an effort to retrieve crippled birds; the law forbids "rallying" or "stringing up" birds at rest; the law prohibits "electronic callers" the law bans baiting; the law restricts the sale of ducks and geese. The government charges that all these laws were violated wholesale in Texas.

A common theme runs through the indictments — a theme of utter contempt for the law. One professional guide is charged with encouraging his clients to ignore bag limits. "Just keep shooting," he instructed them. Another guide boasted that he had purchased a ton of

Other guides used airboats to herd flocks of ducks toward waiting guns. In one instance, so many dead ducks piled up that guides used the names of their own children on official tags. Time after time, excess ducks were simply thrown away

Most revolting, if true, are charges that some professionals — the very persons who should be tent with killing ducks and geese. They casually shot herons, golden plovers, belted kingfishers. killdeer and red-tailed hawks. All these are on the protected list.

How could anyone, just for the fun of it, kill an ibis? One guide unwittingly told Special Agent Nando Mauldin, "Wherever I think we're going to slaughter the birds, that's where we'll go.'

Except for a few species, geese are in no danger of going the way of the passenger pigeon. Their population seems to be holding steady. It is a different story with ducks. The breeding population of the northern pintail in 1988 is the second lowest on record, 54 percent below the average for 1955-87. The blue-winged teal has declined 25 percent below average. In 1958 a wildlife census found a breeding population of nearly 13 million mallards; that number has dropped by half.

To be sure, these declines may be attributed only in small part to the lawless conduct of pseudo-sportsmen. Most of the problem stems from drought in breeding grounds. Some of it probably is owing to highly toxic pesticides and herbicides.

Even so, the bang-bang boys who shoot for simple "slaughter" cannot be condoned, and their cynical guides ought to be run out of busi-

None of this is to condemn hunting as such. It is the oldest of all sports; it brings millions of Americans a little closer to nature; it teaches the proper use of firearms; and for countless families, hunting provides an important source of food.

Nothing is wrong with lawful hunting. The other kind? The kind described in these indictments? Nothing whatever is right about it.

Pacific Century forming in ocean mists

By ROBERT WALTERS

WAIMEA, Hawaii (NEA) - Out there, beyond the spectacular waves that build and break far offshore, beyond the distant reaches of fabled Waimea Bay, beyond even the horizon, is the enticing yet evanescent prospect of the Pacific Era.

For some, the Pacific Century has already started. Others insist that it will begin shortly. Skeptics are convinced that it is not coming any time soon - if ever - because it is largely the product of vapid chatter and unfounded speculation.

"The era of Atlantic dominance is coming to an end. The economic center of gravity has shifted to Asia and the Pacific," says Julia Chang Bloch of Harvard University's Center for International Affairs. Not true, says Christopher Coker, a lecturer at the London School of Economics who insists that the Pacific Century is "a peculiarly American obsession" not shared by any of the Asian nations supposedly responsible for launching and sustaining it.

What is certain is that the phenomenon is anxiously awaited by states throughout the West, particularly those bordering on the Pacific. For them, it represents an unprecedented opportunity to shift the focus of economic activity away from the East and the Atlantic, where is has been since the nation's founding.

The signs of growing Asian economic influence in the region are unmistakable. Bank deposits increased 10 times faster in California than in New York during the 1980s. The Los Angeles-Long Beach port now handles almost three times as much cargo as does the previously dominant New York-New Jersey port.

In no state is the newly emerging pattern of economic activity more important than in Hawaii, where Victor Hao Li, president of the East-West Center, seeks to place recent developments in context:

The Pacific Era is an exaggeration. The world focus certainly is not going to abandon North America and Europe and shift to Asia and the Pacific. ... A powerful new Orient Express is roaring out of Asia — a real bullet train. But it is ... firmly coupled to the revitalized engines of Europe and North America.' Another expert, Seiji Naya, an economics professor at the University of Hawaii, offers this perspective: "Despite rapid growth, the Asia-Pacific developing economies, with the possible exceptions of Hong Kong and Singapore, are not expected to follow Japan into the ranks of the fully developed countries within the near future."

Hong Kong and Singapore, Naya notes, "are unique in many ways" because they "already (have) highly sophisticated economies" and enjoy "a long tradition as merchandising and financial centers.'

Those rity-states and two other nations - the Republic of China (Taiwan) and South Korea - are the region's newly industrialized countries. Each of those "Four Tigers" has enjoyed exceptional economic growth in recent decades.

Ranked behind them are four resource-rich, middle-income members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations — the Philippines, Indonesia, Malaysia and Thailand - whose high growth rates in recent years are expected to be sustained in the future.

In a category all by itself is the People's Republic of China, the world's most populous nation whose vast economic potential remains largely untapped.

Finally, there are dozens of other nations in the region, ranging from oil-rich Brunei, whose sultan is the wealthiest man in the world, to Bangladesh, one of the poorest countries on earth, with a yearly per capita income of only $113. Other low-income nations in the region include India, Burma, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Bhutan, Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and the Maldives. Overall, however, Naya says that Asia has been and "will continue to be the fastest-growing region in the world." A Pacific Century, still somewhere between chimera and reality, is forming in the ocean mists west of

Flurry of thrift bailouts leaves Bush with puzzle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators rescued a post-Depression record 217 savings institutions in 1988, leaving Congress and President-elect Bush to figure out the best way to pay the $38 billion billt 30 years — $45 billion to $50 billion — to cover the

But analysts and many members of Congress say regulators have run up such a huge bill that turning to the taxpayer is inevit-

"We still don't know the magnitude of the S&L crisis," Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said Sunday. "We're not even certain what the regulators have been doing the past week, running up a tab of some $40 bil-

Even with a last-minute spending spree of nearly $6 billion to rescue 22 institutions in the final 48 hours of 1988, regulators still have about 350 more insolvency cases to handle. And, as of last Sept. 30. another 150 savings institutions were sliding toward insolvency with low capital levels.

Estimates of the total cost of paying for the mess run as high as $112 billion, a figure reported last month by the General Accounting Office, Congress' auditing agency.

Treasury Department officials are considering a variety of plans for the incoming administration. Most attempt to spread out the burden over time and keep as much as possible from adding to the federal budget deficit.

But Dole, in an interview on ABC-TV's This Week With David Brinkley, said, "Somebody's going to have to pay. ... We can't hide it by putting it off budget or smoke and mirrors."

This year's failure and rescue total -- 217 of the 3,100 S&Ls operating at the start of the year — is more than quadruple last year's total of 48. It is the highest total since a record 277 failures and rescues in the Depression year of

According to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures the nation's 13,500 commercial banks, 221 banks failed or required government assistance. That is also a post-Depression record, topping the previous record of 203 in 1987.

Both the FDIC and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. draw their funds from an assessment on member institutions. But the FDIC depends on the much-larger banking industry, which as a whole is in much better shape, and enters 1989 in relatively good shape with more than $15 billion in reserves.

FSLIC, however, is technically insolvent. So, regulators have been patching together rescue deals with as little cash as possible. Most of the aid takes the form of various commitments secured by revenue that regulators don't have now and in some case won't have for as long as 30 years.

Moreover, the revenue projections depend on charging S&Ls a special assessment, originally intended to be phased out in a few years, over the next three decades. Industry officials say that would drive even more S&Ls into the red.

The biggest rescue on the last day of 1988 was for the Beverly Hills Savings and Loan Association, a giant California institution whose financial problems had plagued regulators for years.

The package called for the government to provide $983 million in assistance in the sale of Beverly Hills to Michigan National Corp., a bank holding company in Farmington Hills, Mich., that is putting $52 million into the deal.

New Year's fire kills 10 in Minnesota

By PAULA FROKE Associated Press Writer

REMER, Minn. (AP) - A woman celebrating her birthday with her husband broke into hysteria after returning home to find that a fire had destroyed their wooden house, killing 10 people, including their four children.

Firefighters had to restrain Nancy Watson when she repeatedly tried to enter the burned out two-story house, said Valerie Pound, a witness.

"There was no house to get back into. It was just gone." Pound said. "She kept screaming the names of her four kids in a pattern, one right after another.'

Three walls and the roof already had collapsed when firefighters arrived early Sunday, said Fire Chief Leo Renn.

The bodies of the badly burned victims were in or near their beds.

"It's probably the worst situation I've seen where 10 people are killed at one time," said Cass County Sheriff Jim Dawson. "It's just devastating.' Killed were John and Nancy Watson's children, Jenny, 14, Samantha, 11, Edward, 9, and William, 8; Mrs. Watson's sister and brother-in-law, Jean and Becky Smischney; their two children, Jay, 10, and Kimberly, 8; and Michelle Bastle, 10, and Robin Bastle, 12, daughters of Tony and Nancy Bastle, who live near the Watsons.

Elsewhere, New Year's fires killed at least 14 people, including four in Anchorage, Alaska.

Mrs. Watson remained under observation at Itasca Memorial Hospital early today in the north-central Minnesota city of Grand Rapids, 20 miles northeast of this town of 400

The fire spread so quickly it was unlikely anyone woke up before being overcome by smoke, said Renn.

The blaze was sparked by a wood-burning stove or an oil space heater, Renn said. He said the house was not equipped with smoke detectors, which were not required by law.

The Watsons had left the children with her sister and brother-in-law, who were visiting from Bemidji, to celebrate Mrs. Watson's 32nd birthday on New Year's Eve.

Tammy Grover, a step-sister of John Watson, said the Watson children loved the outdoors. "They had pet rabbits and geese and ducks," she said. "Jenny liked drawing and painting a lot. especially unicorns and horses. She just won $75 in a contest at school which was a really big thing to her," Grover said. The Watsons, who are unemployed, "were a poor family as far as material things go, but they were a very close family," said Valerie

Pound. She said a fund has been set up for the victims' families at the Security State Bank

"In a small town, everyone is family," she said. "This is by far the most devastating thing that has ever happened to this town. "Everybody will pull together and help in any way you can. Even though it's not going to bring the kids back, the families will know that everyone in this town is hurt by what happened and is behind them. This has

Computer virus' was year's hottest term

By TRUDY TYNAN Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The term "computer virus" spread into use like, well, like a virus during 1988, but the outbreak came too late to make the latest edition of Merriam-Webster dictionaries.

"It got a tremendous amount of use. It was the word of the year," said James G. Lowe, senior editor at Springfield-based G.C. Merriam Inc., which publishes the nation's largest-selling desk dictionary.

The company got its start about 150 years ago by trimming Noah Webster's two-volume dictionary down to a more marketable single volume

But adding new words is the lexicographer's bread and "Computer virus" is an almost sure bet for inclusion in the next abridged dictionary, Lowe said, thanks to a graduate student who this autumn unleashed a "virus" that clogged university and military computers and exposed the vulnerability of computer banks to infection.

But "computer virus," a program designed to infiltrate and reproduce itself in host computer systems, was hardly the only new term to capture the attention of lexicographers in a year when the normally fertile hunting ground of presidential campaign politics proved something of a disappointment.

"Televangelist," "colorization" as used to describe the tinting of old black-and-white films. and "zap" when used to describe what happens to a television commercial when a viewer switches to another channel by remote control, are also likely candidates for the unabridged, he said.

And that video stalwart, the couch notato " made the printing of the company's collegiate dictionary.

Also getting attention are "veejay," a television version of the disc jockey, and "sound bite" along with the "phonathon" and 'pledgathon,'' popularized by public television, he said.

"Glasnost," Russian for openness, is still debatable despite its frequent appearance in the press for Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms.

"It is still most often found in either italics or quotes and to us that means it has not been completely Americanized," Lowe said. "When reporters and writers start using it without explaining what it means, it will be ready for consideration for the dictionary.'

A word gets into the dictionary simply by being used over a period of years in the popular press, said Lowe. His lexicographers spend their days reading everything from The Wall Street

Journal to Cat Fanciers magazine and Playboy. They make notes on index cards each time they see a new word or new

The citations are stored in banks of cabinets on the second floor housing all the words that have stirred America since 1790. and many more that didn't survive long enough to make the dictionary. As of Friday, the count stood at 13,739,441 cards.

In addition to "couch potato," which has built up a fat file of citations since appearing in The Wall Street Journal and TV Guide in 1979, the 1989 version of Webster's Collegiate Dictionary includes these new entries

"Deep pocket" — to describe litigation against a wealthy defendant; "wish list," "loose cannon," "poison pill" and "microwavable" (which dictionary editors contend can also be spelled 'microwaveable'')

Parade lovers have pick of processions

By JONATHAN W. OATIS Associated Press Writer

About 400,000 Rose Parade fans staked out early viewing spots today as float makers put the finishing touches on their 20million-flower creations for the 100th annual edition of the Southern California tradition.

Halfway across the nation, about 650 pompon dancers lined up outside Dallas' City Hall Sunday to practice for today's Cotton Bowl Parade. Half a million people jammed downtown Miami to watch floats, stars, bands and 20 circus elephants in the 55th Annual King Orange Jamboree Parade New Year's Eve. And 22,000 marchers some dressed as rabbits, Mexican senoritas or California raisins — strutted their stuff in snow for 52,700 hardy spectators of Philadelphia's 89th annual Mummers parade.

People began lining up Saturday morning for Pasadena's Tournament of Roses procession.

By Sunday night, about 400,000 people were waiting along the 51/2mile route, said police Lt. Gregg Henderson

One million people were expected at the parade. Three hundred million TV viewers worldwide were expected to watch the pageant preceding the Rose Bowl football showdown between the University of Southern California and the University of Michigan. The forecast held a chance of showers, but optimists hoped for sunny skies.

The 1989 edition was to feature 275 horses, 20 marching bands and 60 floats - including its tallest ever, a 70-foot creation depicting a roller-skating giraffe pulling a giant calliope. A real wedding was planned for the "Romance in California" float.

In Dallas, organizers promised more floats and fun in an effort to win a little more respect for the nationally televised 32nd annual Cotton Bowl Parade, which has lingered in the shadow of the Orange and Rose pageants.

"We can't compete with the Orange or Rose parades with Walt Disney on one coast and fresh blooms on the other," parade chairman Ward Lay said during final preparations Sunday. "But we are going to have more clowns, mimes and mascots than you've ever seen before.'

Cloudy, mostly mild weather

Thirteen floats, three huge balloon figures, 15 bands and five equestrian units were expected to follow a new route mapped to avoid shadows from downtown buildings. The grand marshal is country singer Charley Pride.

Following the parade, the University of Arkansas and the University of California, Los Angeles will square off in the Cotton Bowl.

The University of Miami plays the University of Nebraska in the Orange Bowl tonight, but Miami had its parade New Year's Eve. Sherman Hemsley, star of TV's Amen, wore flashing sunglasses and was backed up by three female singers on a float celebrating Ben Franklin and electric-

SHOOTING PAINS

If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excrutiating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

At least 51 die in capsizing of sightseeing boat in Brazil

By LISA GENASCI Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) Police blamed overcrowding for the capsizing of a boat packed with revelers planning to watch a New Year's fireworks display off Copacabana Beach. At least 51 died and others were missing

Passengers said the doubledecked cruise boat had ignored a coast guard order to return to port, and officials said the flatbottomed craft — built to hold 100 people — was overcrowded and unfit for Saturday night's choppy

It capsized in 65 feet of water about a mile from shore, and strong currents kept rescue workers from searching the site for bodies early today.

Survivors said few life jackets were accessible when the 100-foot Bateau Mouche went down, and one, Plinio Donadio, said, "I watched my wife die because I couldn't untie one of the life preservers to save her.'

An incomplete reservation list showed at least 131 passengers were aboard the vessel when it sank shortly before midnight. But that did not include crew and may not have counted children under age 3 who accompanied parents for free.

"We don't know how many were on board," said Gustavo Blanco, å spokesman for the Sol e Mar restaurant, which organized the $220-a-person expedition. "Any information besides the reservation list sank with the ship."

"We don't know the exact cause of the sinking, but we think it was because of excess capacity," said Maj. Oldemiro Santos of the Rio de Janeiro state Fire Department's Maritime Group.

Six rescue boats and divers on Sunday pulled bodies from within the sunken wreckage of the Bateau Mouche.

"It's hard to have an accurate number of survivors," said Col.

Jefferson Cardoso de Bem, chief of the Maritime Group. "So many different boats rescued victims, who were taken home or to hospitals throughout the city.'

The boat had a seven-piece samba band playing on board and tables set for dinner when it capsized.

Passenger Fabricio Calo, who was rescued by a fishing boat, shifting. Then tables started flying, glass started crashing, and the whole boat just turned over on its side.

Luxury yachts and smaller boats heading to watch the midnight pyrotechnics display fished survivors from the stormy seas near the base of Sugar Loaf mountain.

'We rescued about 30 people said: "The boat was turning and from the sea," said Valentino Ribeiro, captain of one vessel, the Casablanca. "There were people everywhere screaming for help. We took those we could and left the bodies. We couldn't take on

Officials said at least 51 people died. They had no reports of Americans on board.

Brazil's largest private network, Globo TV, quoted maritime specialists saying the boat was not made to withstand Saturday night's choppy sea waters. But the company spokesman, Blanco, said the boat was "in perfect mechanical shape.'

According to Hans Nihaj of Denmark, who was on the boat with his wife, daughter and five fellow countrymen — all of whom swam to safety — there were no adequate life jackets or preservers on

"We made it because we were strong and could swim," Nihaj told The Associated Press. "If you weren't in good shape, you simply died.'

Donadio, a photagrpher who lost his wife and two other relatives, said the life preservers were "tied onto the railings in the lower part of the boat."

The vessel was so crowded that a naval vessel ordered it to return to port, but it ignored the order. said Irineu Barroso, chief of Rio's 10th police precinct.

Survivors confirmed this account.

"This was not an accident," Fabricio Calo, 38, a businessman from Sao Paulo, said in an interview at the Bateau Mouche's mooring station. "No effort was made to control the number of passengers who got on.'

Many passengers said the cruise boat had been boarded by coast guards, forced to return to the dock and then suddenly freed to return to the open sea with all passengers aboard.

The cruise boat's captain. Camilo da Costa, "didn't want to go out," said his brother-in-law, Paulo Soares.

New Year's fireworks left thousands homeless in the Philippines, and 51 revelers in Rio drowned en route to a pyrotechnics display. The superpowers swapped warm salutations, but a one-sided truce failed to silence the guns in Afgha-

The new year came in as the old one went out, with promises of peace and bursts of tragedy.

Children orphaned by an earthquake got new toys, one Korea offered a tentative olive branch to the other, five Hindus were massacred as they prayed, and the lights went out in Lima for the second New Year's Eve in a row. Thousands poured into streets and squares to celebrate the arrival of 1989, from Times Square in New York to Orchard Road in Singapore on the other side of the globe.

The Japanese went by the millions to temples and shrines Sunday to pray for health and prosperity as the year of the dragon roared out and the snake slithered in.

About 150 people boarded a cruise ship in Rio de Janeiro and set sail for a fireworks display off Copacabana Beach. It capsized and sank, and authorities said at least 51 people drowned.

"It seems there was an excess of passengers ...," said Irineu Barroso, a Rio police official.

Illegal fireworks ignited six fires in Manila, leaving thousands homeless, authorities said. Hospital officials said seven died from stray bullets and stabbings in New Year's celebrations and brawls in Manila and Cebu.

A check with 20 Manila hospitals showed 1,134 people were injured, mostly by fireworks, during the night.

Fire killed at least one person and destroyed 3,000 makeshift houses in one slum neighborhood, said arson investigator Cpl. Edmar Espresion. He said hundreds of homes also were burned in five other fires.

In West Berlin, about 200 youths began the New Year with a rampage, hurling bottles, rocks and fireworks at police. Seven were arrested and one policeman was reported injured. At least two deaths on New Year's Eve in West Germany were attributed to fireworks accidents.

Four men in East Berlin plunged four stories when the balcony they were celebrating on broke off and fell from the building, the ADN news agency reported. One died.

Children injured by the Dec. 7 earthquake in Armenia received toys and clothes from around the world. Tass said.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli early celebrations of Fatah Day, troops killed two Palestinians on Saturday as Arabs prepared to mark the 24th anniversary of the first PLO attack against Israel.

A boy died of injuries from an earlier clash, and 10 people were wounded at his funeral, Arab reports said.

Nine more people were reported hurt in clashes with soldiers in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, where residents observed a general strike called by Moslem fundamentalists.

The army imposed a curfew on the occupied Gaza Strip, confining 650,000 Palestinians to their homes in anticipation of increased violence on "Fatah Day." Sunday is the anniversary of the first attack against Israel by the Palestine Liberation Organization's Fatah faction on Jan. 1.

There's gold in rare baseball cards

Antiques

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

The world's rarest baseball card has just been discovered.

Back in 1932, the United States Caramel Company issued a set of 32 cards picturing famous athletes. Each card was 21/2 by 3 inches and had a black-and-white picture against a red background with a white border and the athlete's name written in white above the picture.

One card was placed in each package of caramel candy. On the back of each card was a premium offer: "Return a complete set of 32 and receive a league baseball, value $1."

For a long time, card No. 16, picturing Freddie (Lindy) Lindstrom, was a ''missing antique. But recently the company's file card was found. The back is stamped "canceled" and there are two small punch holes at the bottom. It is believed to be the only Lindstrom card actually printed, on the assumption that the company did not want to furnish the offered premiums.

But it is possible that there are more. If you have a card like this, make a photocopy of it and write to us in care of this newspaper. The Lindstrom card is in the possession of Lelands, an auction house in Allentown, Pa., that specializes in sports memorabilia. Last year they sold another rare card, one of the 50 known Honus Wagner cards, for $110,000. The Lindstrom card is probably worth considerably more.

Q. My vase is marked "WPA Ceramics, N. Dak." There is a blurred circle beneath the mark. Can you tell me where it was

A. During the Depression, there were many special Works Progress Administration projects for construction and service jobs as well as for artists and wri-

The University of North Dakota had a ceramic project. Pottery was made there from 1936 to 1942. Small figurines illustrating nursery rhymes, bowls, lunch dishes and decorative pieces were made for use in schools and libraries.

The blurred circle on your vase said "Ceramics Project, Works Progress Administration." Collectors search for WPA art today, since many of the pieces were made by artists who later became famous.

Q. I am interested in preserving some family heirlooms: a pair of black leather high-top shoes, a quilt top, and papers pertaining to an old building. The papers are in a safe, in paper and plastic bags.

A. All types of antiques need special care. If the shoes are not damaged, they should be cleaned and waxed with a good shoe polish. Stuff paper inside to keep their shape. Do not display them in a hot sunny spot. The quilt top can be laundered with gentle soap — never use detergent. Support the wet fabric with another piece of cloth to avoid tearing. Rinse completely. The papers should be stored in acid-free paper or archival quality plastic bags. Your local museum should be able to help you find a source for these materials. Paper is very acid and will deteriorate, especially in a damp environment. Your library should have books that detail the proper care and storage of fabrics, paper and other antiques.

TIP: Rub amber beads on a wool carpet, then hold the beads over a small scrap of paner. The amber will collect static electricity and pick up the paper. Glass will not. Sometimes amber smells a little like pine resin when it is rubbed.

- Morel: With a hollow, spongy cap and an aromatic, nutty taste, morels range in size from a button to a duck's egg. They complement chicken, veal, cornish game hens, pasta and rice dishes.

Video designed to teach values to day

By PEGGY FIKAC Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — As a parent who returned to work six weeks after her daughter's birth, Karen Huybrechts saw the need for a different way to teach values to children who spend more time at day care than on their mothers'

So Huybrechts and her husband developed a video — with original music and animated characters — to instill the values of cooperation, self-worth, politeness, self-control, dependability, loyalty and perseverance.

The videos, distributed nationally, have sold more than 50,000 copies for use in classrooms, day care centers and homes so far, Huybrechts says. A pilot television program also has been broadcast on cable. The Huybrechts say they are launching a video curriculum with Scholastic Inc., with editions for preschool and for kindergarten through third grade. "The parents traditionally in our country have instilled in children their value system," Huybrechts says. "They provide the emotional support and teach them the social skills they need."

But 10 million children under age 6 now are in single-parent homes or in homes where both parents work, she says. Teachers have told her they are expected to teach morals and ethics but have few tools to help them.

The video curriculum kit - including the music video, audio cassette, story cards and teachers' guide — relates to lessons normally taught in preschool and the early grades, Huybrechts says.

For example, teachers can assign third-graders to write a news story about one cartoon segment showing a group of ants putting out a fire. The same segment - which features the "Antrew Sisters" trio singing about cooperation - can be used to teach fire safety. "It crosses over into everything from social studies to language arts, dramatic play, music and movement and arts and crafts activities." Huybrechts says. The curriculum is unusual with behavior development, social skills and emotional development," she says.

The Huybrechts established their production company, UMA Mirage Productions of Austin, in 1984. Karen Huybrechts is president and producer. Her husband, Francois, a symphony orchestra conductor, is music director.

More than $1 million was invested in the 24-minute "Watchkins" video, Karen says. By comparison, a regular half-hour Saturday morning cartoon may cost up to $300,000 to produce, she

The difference is quality, she says. The animation, aimed at children aged 2 to 8, used 16 to 20 drawings per second, compared with as few as six in many Saturday morning cartoons.

The pilot TV program featured Winnie and Wally Watchkins --round, fuzzy-looking animated creatures who live inside a book. It also included sunflower puppets named Sol and Flora, and child actors.

The musical segments of the video include a variety of anibecause it specifically "deals mated characters. Among them

— besides the Antrew Sisters are a gluttonous billy goat who learns self-control after eating too many green apples and a frog who admonishes a rude upstart of his species in a Leon Redbonelike song

Francois Huybrechts wrote the music, each song with a different style, including big band, salsa, bluegrass, country and rock and roll. Of seven musical vignettes on the video, five are from the pilot TV program.

"I wanted each one (song) to be quite distinct and different," he says. "I wanted to make sure the music was sophisticated enough for an adult listener to get something out of it."

Huybrechts' wife depeloped the Watchkins concept, and she worked on the story and lyrics with six staff members. The company hires freelancers, including musicians and animators, for its large projects.

The company is developing a 13-week pilot Watchkins television series, which is being prepared for release in fall 1989.

Bills, 49ers advance in playoffs Defense, special teams play spark Buffalo

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Football Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. - For the past four years, NFC teams that play defense have trampled AFC teams that do not in the Super Bowl.

The Buffalo Bills are ready to throw that trend back in the haughty NFC's face ... if they get by the Cincinnati Bengals next Sunday in their first AFC title game appearance in 22 years.

With Bruce Smith, Leonard Smith and Cornelius Bennett leading the defense and the special teams blocking two kicks and consistently establishing field position, the Bills beat the Houston Oilers 17-10 Sunday to earn that trip to Cincinnati, where they lost 35-21 on Nov. 27.

'They're a fine defensive football team," said Houston coach Jerry Glanville, whose team constantly self-destructed in the "red zone," inside the Buffalo 20.

"Rather than us doing something wrong, give them credit for doing something well," Glanville

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bring on the fog, the cold, even the big, bad Chicago Bears.

The San Francisco 49ers finally won a playoff game Sunday after failing for three years to recapture their Super Bowl glory, and they're not about to fret over the elements or the opponent coming

If the NFC title game in Chicago turns out to be another Fog Bowl like the game Saturday between the Bears and Philadelphia Eagles, that's perfectly OK with Joe Montana and com-

"I think this is the fog capital of the United States, so we should be used to it," said Montana, who even has a radio talk show for local rock station KFOG.

Montana saw nothing but blue skies Sunday when he lofted three touchdown passes to Jerry Rice and directed two other scoring drives in a 34-9 thumping of the Minnesota Vikings. It was payback time for the 49ers, ousted from the playoffs by the Vikings last year and by the New York Giants in the first playoff game the previous two years.

Montana, who hadn't thrown a touchdown pass in postseason competition since winning the Super Bowl four years ago, looked especially sharp in completing his first seven passes and 16 of 27 overall for 178 yards.

"He was throwing with zip," said Vikings defensive coordinator Floyd Peters. "He put the ball right on the money. He'd roll out, see a guy coming and stop and pop the football in there."

Minnesota defensive end Bubba Baker, frustrated by a failure to put pressure on Montana and thwarted by the 49ers' smaller but quicker offensive line, said San Francisco played "Montana football."

"Nobody likes to get hit, but at this stage of his career Montana can't stand there and take the pounding," Baker said. "You could tell that was a priority of theirs today - to keep the animals off Montana.'

The 49ers, though, had much more going for them than Montana. They showed the kind of balance and big-play ability that was typical of their two Super Bowl seasons.

"They beat us in every phase of the game," Vikings coach Jerry Burns said. "They dominated us more this year than we did a year ago."

Roger Craig, NFL offensive player of the year, ran 80 yards for one touchdown and four yards for another. He finished with 135 vards on 21 carries as the 49ers outrushed the Vikings 201 yards to 54.

Ronnie Lott intercepted two passes and the defense sacked Minnesota's Wade Wilson six times. Anthony Carter, who caught 10 passes for 227 yards in the Vikings' 36-24 playoff victory over the 49ers last year, was double-covered most of the game this time and held to three catches.

The key to the defense, though, was the pass rush on Wilson and the array of defensive formations the 49ers used to confuse the Vik-

Fiesta Bowl

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Football Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. — Question: Who is Notre Dame playing in today's Fiesta Bowl?

There's got to be an opponent for the No. 1-ranked Fighting Irish. No team has ever opposed itself in a bowl game.

A trip to Sun Devil Stadium provided the answer. One end zone carried the lettering "Notre Dame." And there in the other end zone, plain as day, were the words "West Virginia." They were even spelled correctly.

Not only was West Virginia invited to provide the opposition some say the fodder — for Notre Dame, the third-ranked Mountaineers even planned to attend. They've been here all week participating in all the festivities; it would be a shame to go home without playing the game. Most of the attention has to Notre Dame, which, after all, is college football's most glamorous name. A record seven national championships in the 52 years of the Associated Press poll (1943, '46, '47, '49, '66, '73, '77)

prior to the start of the AP poll. Notre Dame won six other national titles under various rating systems — a record seven Heisman Trophy winners, a record 31 former players and five former coaches in the National Football Foundation's Hall of Fame.

And although both teams compiled 11-0 regular-season records, it was Notre Dame's 11th perfect campaign in this century and the first ever for West Virginia, which has no national championships or Heisman winners and has to be satisifed with six Hall of Famers.

Notre Dame has the mystique of Rockne, the Gipper, the Four Horsemen, Leahy and Parseghian, Lujack, Hart, Huarte and Snow, Hanratty and Seymour, and on and on and on. West Virginia counters with Ira Rodgers, Clarence Spears, Joe Stydahar, Greasy Neale, Sam Huff and Bruce Bosley.

Notre Dame's 1988 victims include defending national champion Miami, Southern Cal and Michigan, all of whom were in the final regular-season Top Ten. Not a single West Virginia opponent is currently ranked.

Nebraska hopes to wear down Miami

AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Tom Osborne says this year's Nebraska Cornhuskers might rank with the best teams he has coached — if they hold their own against secondranked Miami tonight in the Orange Bowl.

"This team might have played as well as any, when you look at both sides of the ball, if they play well," Osborne said. "If not, they're just another good team."

The sixth-ranked Huskers, 11-1, were eliminated from national championship contention by a 41-28 loss at UCLA in their third game. But they've won nine in a row since and captured the Big Eight Conference title outright for the first time since 1983.

"I think Nebraska could be as good a team as there is in the country," Miami coach Jimmy Johnson said.

The Hurricanes, 10-1, hope to show they're the best by beating Nebraska. Johnson says a Miami victory, coupled with a win by No. 3 West Virginia against No. 1 Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl, might give the Hurricanes their second straight national championship.

The final AP poll will be announced Tuesday afternoon. "Our biggest challenge is going to be beating Nebraska, not the polls," Johnson said. The Hurricanes are favored, but Johnson is concerned about how they match up with the Huskers.

"They are one of the more physical teams in the country," Johnson said. "They hammer at you and play what people call smash ball. ... They'll be running the ball in the first quarter, and they'll be running the ball in the fourth quarter."

Nebraska won the NCAA rushing title for the seventh time by averaging 382 yards per game. I-back Ken Clark rushed for 1,497 yards, including 1,069 in the final six games.

"We're basically a power football team," Clark said. "Nothing fancy about it."

Actually, a few frills are provided by quarterback Steve Taylor, who totaled 998 yards rushing and averaged 7 yards per scramble. But Taylor said Nebraska plans to keep things simple against the Hurricanes, who have allowed only 2.2 yards per carry. "They have an excellent defensive line," he said. "They're not overpowering or strong, but they're very agile.

Georgia downs Michigan State in Gator Bowl

By BRENT KALLESTAD Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. - Wayne Johnson threw three touchdown passes and Rodney Hampton ran for 109 yards and scored three times as Georgia gave Coach Vince Dooley a 34-27 Gator Bowl victory over Michigan State in his final game Sunday

The Georgia victory spoiled a record-setting performance by Michigan State's Andre Rison, who caught nine passes for 252 yards, breaking the former Gator Bowl mark of 192 receiving yards by Florida State's Fred Biletnikoff in 1965.

Rison caught scoring passes from Bobby McAllister on plays covering 4, 55 and 50 yards and he also caught a 51-yard pass to set up Blake Ezor's 3-yard touchdown run to bring Michigan State within 27-20 in the opening minute of the fourth

But the Big Ten Spartans couldn't overcome an early 17-0 deficit.

Johnson, a senior who passed for just 945 yards and four touchdowns during the season, connected with Hampton on first-half scoring passes covering 6 and 30 yards and Steve Crumley kicked one of his two field goals as Georgia took a 17-7 lead.

Georgia finished its year with a 9-3 record while Michigan State, which came into the Gator Bowl with a six-game winning streak, fell to 6-5-1.

In 25 seasons at Georgia, Dooley coached the Bulldogs to 201 victories including Sunday's win over Michigan State in the first meeting between

No. 19 Georgia took a 17-0 lead, scoring on its third successive offensive series, when Johnson threw for 66 yards on a five-play, 74-yard scoring march culminated by a 30-yard TD pass to Hampton, who also caught a 22-yard pass on the drive. Hampton caught a 6-yard scoring pass as Georgia grabbed a 7-0 lead in the final second of the first quarter.

Johnson's 21-yard pass to Sean Hummings on a first and 15 from midfield was the key play on the opening scoring drive.

On its next offensive series, Georgia took advantage of a short punt and grabbed a 10-0 lead on Crumley's 39-yard field goal. Crumley also kicked a 36-yard field goal that gave the Bulldogs a 27-13 lead after the third period.

Michigan State, sparked by McAllister's 41 yard pass to Rison, marched 80 yards for its first touchdown when Rison scored with 2:55 left in the half on a 4-vard pass.

Johnson, who passed for a career-high 227 yards, teamed with tight end Kirk Warner on an 18-yard touchdown pass midway through the third period as Georgia took a 24-7 lead.

Hampton, a sophomore, also scored on a 32-yard run in the fourth quarter to give the Bulldogs a

Duke remains atop AP basketball poll

By JIM O'CONNELL AP Basketball Writer

The five-week run of Duke and Michigan being No. 1 and 2 in The AP's college basketball poll ended today as the Blue Devils remained atop the rankings but were followed by Syracuse.

Duke, 8-0, received 49 first-place votes and 1,192 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters to remain in the No. 1 spot for the seventh consecutive regular-season poll.

Syracuse, 13-0, replaced Michigan, which fell to Division II Alaska-Anchorage in the Utah Classic last week and dropped to seventh.

Georgia, 9-2, was the only new member of the Top Twenty, replacing South Carolina, which lost its first two games of the season this week - to La Salle and Princeton in the Cotton State Classic, a tournament won by Georgia.

The Orangemen took second with five first-place votes and 1,145 points, 105 more than Illinois, 12-0, which won the Rainbow Classic and moved up one position in the poll. Oklahoma, 10-1, jumped two places as the Sooners, winners of the All-College Tournament, received 995 points, just 10 more than Georgetown, which held fifth. The Hoyas, 9-0, received five first-place votes.

North Carolina, 11-1, was the only other team to receive first-place votes, two, and the Tar Heels improved one place to sixth with 951 points.

Michigan, 12-1, was next with 837 points, 33 more than Arizona, 8-1, which held eighth from last

Iowa, 11-1, held ninth with 693 points, but the Top Ten was rounded out by Seton Hall, 12-0, with 618 points

The Pirates were 13th last week and they won the Sugar Bowl tournament with convincing victories over Virginia and DePaul. Seton Hall opens Big East play this week with games at home against Georgetown and at Syracuse.

Missouri leads the Second Ten for the second straight week, followed by Nevada-Las Vegas, Louisville, Ohio State, Florida State, North Carolina State, Tennessee, Kansas, Georgia Tech and Georgia Last week's Second Ten was Missouri, Nevada-Las Vegas, Seton Hall, Louisville, Ohio State, South Carolina, Georgia Tech, North Carolina

State, Tennessee and Kansas. Georgia is making its first appearance in the rankings since a four-week stint ended the 1984-85 season. The highest the Bulldogs went in that run was 14th for one week. The Bulldogs' only losses this season came against North Carolina in the Big Apple NIT and to Iowa in the championship game of its Amana-Hawkeye Classic. Georgia stays within Southeastern Conference play through the rest of the season except for a one-game trip to New Mexico.

South Carolina joined the poll three weeks ago as No. 18 and improved two places the next week. The Gamecocks, who had registered victories over Tennessee and Ohio State this season, were undefeated entering the Cotton States Classic.

Last edition of 'Miami News' rolls off press amid disputes

By DAN SEWELL

Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Staff members of The Miami News bid
"Farewell, Miami" with their final banner headline and a newsroom champagne toast Saturday morning as Miami's oldest daily

"It's over," said Howard Kleinberg, the News' editor and an employee for 38 years. "I think we gave it a good effort."

— older than the city itself — shut

"This isn't just another newspaper dying. It has a rich and proud history," publisher David Kraslow said. "Our influence far exceeded our circulation."

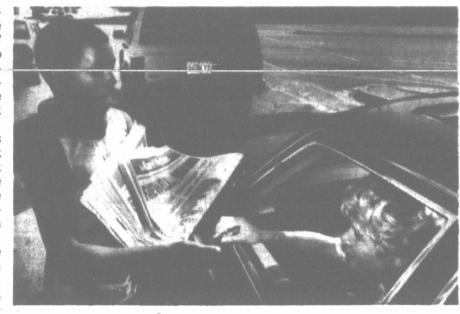

Along with sadness, there was relief from the uncertainty of last-minute efforts to sell the newspaper or get a court injunction to block its closing.

"It's been real stressful," said Bonnie Anderson, a News columnist. "This is a very dignified 92-year-old woman, and she deserves to die with some honor, not to keep her on life-support systems." The circulation of the crusading newspaper, winner of five Pulitzer Prizes, had declined 57 percent in a little more than two decades to about 48,000. The owner, Cox Enterprises Inc. of Atlanta, said it was unable to sell the News and was losing about $28,500 a day.

The Justice Department has said its antitrust division will look at the closing and whether Cox made a serious effort to sell the newspaper. But a federal judge Friday denied a private coalition's effort to get an injunction against the closing.

The only apparent way to give the News a reprieve would be a Justice Department injunction. The department hadn't sought such an injunction, but the newspaper, in a story on its own situation, quoted Justice spokesman Mark Sheehan as saying, "Anything we can do tomorrow."

Cox announced in October that the newspaper would be closed Dec. 31 if it was not sold. Under a recent amendment to a 1966 joint operating agreement with The Miami Herald, Cox would have become responsible in 1990 for the News' operating losses.

But Cox will continue to share in profits of the Herald, a Knight-Ridder newspaper with circulation of more than 400,000, through 2021 even with the News closed. Cox will earn an estimated $300 million through the agreement, the News reported Saturday.

The news staff, which numbered about 105 in recent weeks, is the main staff affected by the shutdown, since the business operation is shared with the Herald's under the joint agreement. More than half of those people already have other jobs, officials said.

A Cox official defended its efforts to sell the paper.

"We sent out prospecti to 50 people," said David Easterly, who heads Cox's newspaper division. "We made presentations to

But Chicago newspaper consultant John R. Malone, representing a group of potential buyers, and an earlier would-be buyer, Michigan attorney Gary Frink, both criticized Cox for not trying

"Cox has made sure there's no way anybody can save that paper," Frink said, calling its efforts to sell the publication a "sham." A federal lawsuit to keep the paper open failed Friday when U.S. Distirct Judge Stanley Marcus rejected arguments from community newspapers who claim closing the News would give the Herald a monopoly. The plaintiffs included readers and distributors of the News.

distributors of the News.

Since the 1966 joint operating agreement, the News' circulation dropped from 112,000 to 48,000. Under the agreement, the Herald provided printing, circulation, advertising and promotion services for the money-losing News, which gave up its Sunday edition.

The Herald's circulation has grown from about 250,000 to more than 400,000 since then.

Kleinberg said while many News veterans blame the operating agreement for "strangling us for 22 years, it kept us alive for 22 years."

The News was born May 15, 1896, two months before the city was incorporated, as The Miami Metropolis. It lost some readers in the 1960s with its early, vigorous criticism of the Vietnam War.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)

— A rancher who allegedly threatened an ecologist fighting to save the Amazon forest is a prime suspect in the environmentalist's slaying, a police investigator said.

Francisco Mendes, 44, was killed Dec. 22 outside his home in Xapuri, a jungle town located 2,600 miles northwest of Rio.

Darly Alves da Silva, a Xapuri cattle rancher, reportedly made threats against Mendes, who was seeking to halt indiscriminate development of the vast Amazon.

Three of the cattleman's sons are in jail and one of them has confessed to the slaying.

But authorities said Saturday they believe the father is the main suspect.

"Without a doubt, all of our investigations up until now show that the man not caught is the man who shot Mendes — Darly Alves da Silva," said Nilson Alves de Oliveira, a special federal investigator.

He said authorities were searching the jungle for "at least one more main suspect."

Mendes was leader of a local union of rubber tappers that fought against clearing the Amazon for cattle grazing.

Instructor: No questions asked before arrest

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A bespectacled language teacher said no one asked him his side of the story before he was arrested for handing a flight attendant a note he found that threatened to blow up an American Airlines jet.

Peter M. Canning, 40, told a news conference Saturday he hasn't decided whether to sue as a result of the incident in which Flight 240 from San Francisco to Dallas was diverted Tuesday to Albuquerque for a bomb

After the landing, FBI agents showed up and Canning was falsely charged in the mock bomb threat.

It turned out that a boy on an earlier flight had left the note on his seat tray.

The note, which said several bombs were planted on the plane, fell into Canning's lap when he folded down the tray for lunch.

Canning's Albuquerque, N.M., attorney, Ray Twohig, said he has advised the University of California lecturer to wait a week or so before contemplating any legal action in the matter.

Canning of Berkeley, in his first statement since charges against him were dropped

Thursday, told how he handed the note to a flight attendant.

"Part of the note said, 'There is bombs planted all over this airplane...' Two minutes into reading this, I thought it was placed there as a prank," said Canning, a slightly built man who wore tinted glasses, jeans and a wool sports coat at the news conference.

He told reporters the flight attendant took the note to the front of the plane but never

'But before I could say anything else, she spun on her heels ... but no one ever came back to ask me for an explanation.'

gave him a chance to explain.

"Thirty seconds later, she returned and said 'Is this your note?' and I said 'No, it is not.' But before I could say anything else, she spun on her heels — she was understandably nervous — but no one ever came back to ask me for an explanation," he said.

The plane was diverted to Albuquerque, where Canning was questioned by the FBI for two hours and arrested.

He was arraigned in federal court in New Mexico and released to the custody of the chairman of his department at UC-Berkeley. He said he became frightened when his attorney told him he still might have faced charges even if a handwriting comparison from the note proved negative.

"What if they decided that somebody else wrote the note and I then passed it?" Canning said

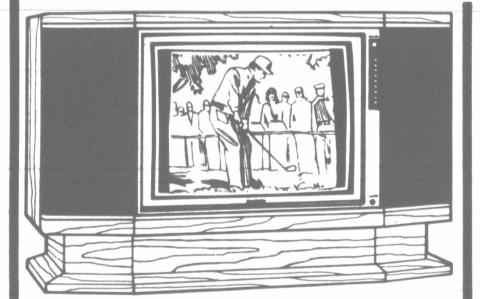

While driving back to Berkeley on Friday night with his girlfriend, Rhonda Lieberman, Canning stopped to eat and learned from a newspaper headline that charges against him had been dropped after the child admitted writing the note on an earlier flight.

Before his arrest, Canning had been en route to the convention of the Modern Language Association in New Orleans, where he hoped to attend several job interviews.

He said it's too soon to tell whether his arrest and missing the interviews would have a detrimental effect on his career.

A message was left with American Airlines spokesman Jim Brown in Fort Worth, Texas, seeking comment on American's procedures for cleaning seating areas on jetliners between flights.
