Final reception

Bob Hart, leaving his post here as city manager, smiles after receiving a plaque of appreciation from the city presented by Mayor David McDaniel at a reception Thursday afternoon at the Pampa Commu-

ity Building. The plaque contains a commemorative plate for the U.S. Constitution Bicentennial. Hart will be taking over the city manager post in Georgetown next week. (See related story below.)

School board accepts bids for classroom construction

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees voted unanimously Thursday night to accept a bid by North Line Construction of Amarillo for the building of 13 new classrooms and a new library at three elementary schools.

Total cost of the project is estimated to range from $731,736 to $735,333.

Austin Elementary School will see the bulk of the new construction with the addition of six new classrooms. Four new classes will be built at Horace Mann and three at Wilson. Wilson will also be having a new library built.

School officials said the total cost would also include some remodeling of current structures that would create additional space at the three campuses. District architect Frank Wilson of Lubbock also recommended the board accept a $787 bid by the contractor to repair some masonry wall damage at Horace Mann.

School board members estimated the total cost of the project would end up being around $800,000 by the time the rooms were furnished. That exceeds the board's projected total by $80,000 and will create a $100,000 budget deficit in what was a balanced budget.

However, Wilson told the board he was convinced the district had received competitive bids. The total cost is also approximately $40,000 less than the original bid because Wilson negotiated that much cost savings with the contractor.

"It is state funding that is paying for this. Your operational reserve is as low as it should go," said Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of schools. "At $700,000 for the project, you would have had a balanced budget. In any form, this will exceed that." Griffith said the cost would prohibit the district from continuing to consider also building two additional classrooms at Horace Mann to eliminate the use of out-of-date portable buildings.

Tom Lindsey, principal at Mann, told the board he thought the portable buildings could last at least another five years.

Board member John Curry expressed a desire to continue to monitor the portable building situation at Mann for signs that the district would have to do more construction still to replace those structures.

City to interview manager candidates

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Four Pampa city manager applicants are to be interviewed Saturday by Pampa city commissioners, Mayor David McDaniel announced following a 90-minute executive session Thursday night.

McDaniel said commissioners have received 13 applications for the city manager's position, recently left vacant after Bob Hart accepted a similar post in Georgetown. Hart is to assume his new duties next week.

While the hiring process continues, Frank Smith, assistant city manager, has been appointed to act as city manager. He is one of the 13 persons who have applied for the city's top executive.

Commissioners retired to privately discuss the applicants' resumes shortly after 6:30 p.m. Thursday and returned to open session at 8:03 p.m.

At that time, McDaniel announced that four people had been contacted and would be interviewed Saturday. Time of the interviews had not yet been set, he said.

Those listed for interviews include Smith, Jack Chaney of Marble Falls, Randy Holley of Kermit and David Maddox of Sweetwater. A fifth person, whose name commissioners are not yet ready to release, may also be interviewed, the mayor said.

"We have not excluded the other applicants," McDaniel explained. "We have made initial contacts with these four."

McDaniel said commissioners plan to interview the applicants and give them a tour of the city on Saturday.

"This is the hardest, most stressful thing I or the commission have to do," McDaniel commented. "We have to choose the very best city manager for the city of Pampa we can find."

"We don't make the choice just for ourselves, but for 21,000 people out there," he added.

"This is the second time I've done this, and I know how difficult it is. I think we made an excellent choice the last time. Bob Hart was a very good city manager. And I believe we will find a good one this time," McDaniel said.

Thursday night's executive session was a continuation of a two-hour long closed meeting that concluded the regular commission meeting Tuesday.

Prior to the Thursday meeting, commissioners had attended a come-and-go reception from 4 to 6 p.m. honoring Hart in the Pampa Community Building.

West Germany uncovers evidence on Libyan plant

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP)—A prosecutor opened a criminal investigation into the Imhausen-Chemie company, which the United States claims helped build a chemical weapons plant in Libya, a judicial spokesman said today.

Hans Frey, a spokesman for the prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe, said the investigation was opened by officials in the nearby city of Offenburg.

Frey said the possible charge being investigated is "a violation of the export control law." He did not elaborate.

Imhausen-Chemie has denied any connection to the Libyan plant.

In a television appearance late Thursday, Chancellor Helmut Kohl said authorities have uncovered new documents implicating West German companies in deliveries of equipment for the plant in Rabta, 40 miles outside Tripoli, the Libyan capital.

U.S. officials believe the plant is on the verge of producing poison gas.

Kohl's spokesman, Friedhelm Ost, today conceded at a news conference that Bonn officials first learned of "indications" in October that West German companies were involved with the plant.

Ost was asked about reports alleging Bonn officials have known for as long as two years that Imhausen-Chemie of Lahr and other West German companies may have been involved in the Libyan project.

He said intelligence sources mentioned the possibility of West German involvement in October but contended they had no evidence then or now that can be used for legal action against any West German companies.

The government's sharp reversal followed the arrest of a Belgian shipping agent linked to the case and confirmation by Libya's U.N. ambassador that West German companies assisted in the project.

In the United States, NBC News reported Thursday that Libyan officials contacted West German companies for clean-up help after a dangerous chemical spill last August at the facility.

The television network, citing U.S. intelligence sources, said the United States determined in the summer of 1987 that Libya had obtained chemical components to manufacture poison gas.

Several high-ranking West German officials said Thursday that the latest indications of West German involvement in the Libyan plant embarrassed the government.

But Kohl, answering questions from reporters on the ZDF television network, defended the handling of the case, saying authorities needed evidence before acting against companies suspected of helping the Libyans.

A group of West Germans in the United States this week are examining evidence that Washington says indicates the Libyan plant is a chemical weapons factory. Libya says the facility is a pharmaceutical plant.

"There are new indications that will be further checked," Kohl said when asked if the government had additional evidence. "More documents have been seized and they could give evidence, I don't know."

Kohl said the documents involved chemical equipment that could be used in many ways, but did not elaborate.

The latest developments came after Belgian authorities arrested and charged Jozef Gedopt, director general of Cross Link NV of Antwerp, with forging shipping documents for goods delivered to Libya.

West German investigators provided the information that led to Gedopt's arrest, a Finance Ministry spokesman said. He said the investigators were examining seized records of I.B.I. Engineering, a defunct Frankfurt company.

ZDF said Gedopt's company allegedly used a Cyprus-registered freighter to deliver West German equipment to Libya in February 1986 after forging destination papers.

President Reagan has raised the possibility of military action against the plant.

Pampa firefighters work to extinguish a blaze at the home of James Bichsel, 1107 E. Francis, Thursday morning. The fire reportedly started in the chimney and spread to a portion of the roof. Investigators estimated the damage to the home at $4,000.

Judge drops key charges against North

WASHINGTON (AP)—The judge in the Iran-Contra case today dismissed the two criminal charges that accused fired National Security Council aide Oliver North of illegally diverting more than $14 million in U.S. Iran arms sale proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell said he had no choice but to grant the motion by independent counsel Lawrence Walsh to dismiss the conspiracy and theft counts against North. The Reagan administration had refused to allow use of some classified documents bearing on the charges in the trial.

"It is apparent that the attorney general and the independent counsel are unable to proceed ... (are) unwilling to proceed in connection with the conspiracy and theft charges," said Gesell.

"The court is powerless to direct the case to proceed" on the two main counts.

The judge dropped the charges under a section of the Classified Information Procedures Act in which the attorney general may certify that a trial may result in the disclosure of classified information.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh made that certification in a declaration filed Thursday with Gesell at the judge's request.

Meanwhile, Walsh embarked on an effort to protect the remaining 12 criminal charges against North from the problems of classified information that plagued the conspiracy and theft counts.

Task force says schools need to move into computer age

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

While new construction at three local elementary schools took up the majority of the discussion at Thursday night's Pampa school board meeting, trustees also heard reports from the Computer Task Force and passed four other items of business.

The task force presentation was the culmination of another phase of the Pampa 2000 project. Members of the community joined with local educators to prepare a report on the district's current computer status and where the district should go in the coming years.

Jay Warner, a member of the task force and a chemist at Hoechst Celanese, told the board the task force felt a sense of urgency.

"The gaps we have found cannot be tolerated. We are in the fourth quarter with no time outs remaining," Warner said.

Warner is considered one of the top chemists in the United States and a respected authority on modern technology. Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of schools, said,

Jerry Wilson, another task force member, said his committee was convinced that "we don't want to be on the cutting edge. It costs too much. But we don't feel we're even in the mainstream."

Warner told the board that the task force had not computed the actual cost of moving full-force into a more computerized mode of teaching.

"But we also did not consider the enormous cost of not moving ahead either," Warner said.

Task force member Mike Fraser, of Fraser Insurance, said, "We believe computers are an essential part of each student's education and that each student deserves the best possible technological training to prepare him or her for the future use of computers and technology. It is with this belief in the importance of technological skills that we make these recommendations."

The task force also suggested that the district's data processing was antiquated and should be replaced in the near future.

"Information is vital to any organization," said Jim Stroud, a data processing manager at IRI International. "American business has discovered that timely, accurate, complete information is vital to survival in today's competitive world. School districts have many of the same needs for information. We should be able to efficiently provide administration and faculty with the information they need to help them do their work ..."

Several of the business leaders who addressed the board expressed shock that the district was so far behind in computer technology.

Griffith said it could take years to implement the numerous suggestions the task force made. However, several board members said they shared the speakers' concerns that the PISD has waited too long to make serious strides in the field of computer-assisted education.

Board members will review the task force findings and vote on accepting its reports during the February meeting.

In other business, the board accepted a recommendation to renew the contract with Lewis Meers, CPA, for outside auditing for another two years. They also accepted an amendment to the current budget that allowed for the updating of real numbers in expenses and income.

The board also appointed a committee to review the current policy on band and choir trips and to write a new, more explicit policy regarding extended travel.

"We need to be concerned with any group taking big trips every year. My recommendation would be every four years or not more than every three. That has not been the trend here in Pampa. These trips were planned before approval was even granted," Griffith said, referring to upcoming trips by the high school choir to Nashville, Tenn., and the high school band to Orlando, Fla.

Griffith said he was also concerned that such trips were causing students to miss more class time than was acceptable. "This is not picking on the band and choir, but it is a good place to start looking at all groups," he said.

Board member Jim Duggan said, "The whole effort is in support of these groups, not to deter anything they are doing."

The committee that will look into forming a new policy regarding extended travel will include band and choir booster club officers, band and choir directors, high school Principal Daniel Coward, Griffith, and board members Duggan and President Joe VanZandt.

They are expected to bring a recommendation to the board by May of this year.

Governor's criminal justice plan includes construction of prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House and Senate leaders say they don't see much alternative to paying for prison construction with bond money, as proposed by Gov. Bill Clements in his criminal justice program.

Clements on Thursday called for almost 11,000 new prison beds, which would require $343 million in general obligation bonds. He declared legislation authorizing the bond sale an emergency, allowing lawmakers to immediately begin work on the issue.

"Well, it's not the best idea, but it's about the only available one," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, presiding officer of the Senate, said of the bond proposal.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said, "I've never been real 100 percent supportive of bonds, but at the same time, under the present circumstances and financial conditions of the state, I find that's the only way that we can do it."

The need for new prisons is crucial, Clements said in remarks to the Rotary Club of Houston.

"The critical need for new space is witnessed day in and day out by the judges and juries who hand down sentences only to have them served out on the street because of a lack of prison beds," he said. "This simply must not continue."

"If the Legislature acts quickly so that approval of these bonds can go before the voters on the May ballot, we can accelerate relief to packed county jails by months, and we can let counties know before their next budget cycle that we are committed to doing all we can to help them," Clements said.

Members of the Senate Finance Committee earlier criticized Clements' support of prison bonds. Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, said taxpayers would pay more in the long run for financing bonds.

Clements said his plan "picks up where our last one left off" and noted that 13,000 prison beds are included in the current expansion effort. That expansion used general obligation bonds, he said.

But the governor also said the state can't build its way out of a crime rate. He said his package, presented for the Legislature's consideration, includes proposals designed to rehabilitate offenders and stop their tendency to slip back into a criminal pattern of behavior.

Clements' program — which has its foundation in recommendations by a special task force and includes some measures like those in a package announced Wednesday by Lewis — would:

- Make drug testing and counseling a condition of probation and parole.
- Allow all assets from drug sales to be seized and used by law enforcement agencies to enhance their resources.
- Provide mandatory flat prison time for major drug offenders, murderers and violent career criminals.
- Increase the penalty for aggravated assault of a peace officer from a second- or third-degree felony to a first-degree felony.
- Close loopholes. For instance, Clements said, laws should be clarified so that evidence seized by an officer acting in good faith is admissible in court.

A representative from North Line Construction said that the majority of the subcontracting on the buildings would be done by Pampa firms. He named Parsley Sheet Metal, Looper Fencing, Malcolm Hinkle, Larry Beck Electric and Pampa Concrete as local businesses that would get the lion's share of the work.

In his closing remarks to the board, Wilson said, "I saw you give certificates to some people here earlier tonight for their outstanding work. I think you should consider certificates for yourself. You reflect why you have been elected. You've asked good questions and you've proceeded in a conservative manner."

The board agreed to scratch plans that called for terrazzo floors at Austin and Wilson and wainscoting that was over seven-foot high in all classes and new halls. Instead, they voted to accept vinyl composition floor and five-foot high wainscoting because of the cost savings.

Board president Joe VanZandt said that even with the $100,000 budget deficit, the district was in solid shape.

"That's still better than the $300,000 budget deficit we had predicted earlier," he said.

Griffith said money the district would be receiving from the state could continue to brighten the financial picture.

"We are looking at an extra $400,000 from the state next year. But unless we can find $100,000 in our current budget, and I doubt it, our next budget will reflect this deficit," Griffith said.

Construction at the three schools is estimated to begin within the next 10 days, Wilson told the board.

DOE report claims accelerator safer to make nuclear weapons

By LES BLUMENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unreleased Department of Energy report concludes that a linear accelerator could produce one of the key ingredients in nuclear weapons more cheaply, quickly and safely than new production reactors could.

Such an accelerator would produce far less radioactive waste than a nuclear reactor and "should be more readily acceptable to the public," according to a draft summary of the report obtained by The Associated Press on Thursday.

The U.S. supply of tritium, a radioactive gas used to produce nuclear warheads, is threatened by the crumbling condition of the Energy Department's existing weapons plants and reactors.

The report, prepared by scientists at the Brookhaven and Los Alamos national laboratories and at Westinghouse-Hanford Co. in Washington state, concluded that an accelerator could produce enough tritium to meet all U.S. weapons needs.

An accelerator is essentially a long tunnel in which subatomic particles are whipped at high speeds until they crash into a target, in this case lithium clad in aluminum. The resulting collision produces tritium.

According to the report, using such an accelerator to make tritium would not produce any "long-lived" nuclear wastes and "costs associated with safety and environmental concerns should be minimal."

In addition, it said, an accelerator "does not have the licensing requirements associated with nuclear reactors and should be more readily acceptable to the public."

Last July, the department recommended building two new production reactors, one at the Savannah River complex near Aiken, S.C., and the other at the Idaho Falls National Laboratory in Idaho.

At present, the nation's only facilities for producing tritium are three reactors at Savannah River, but all three are shut down either for maintenance or because of safety problems.

Department officials have said that at least one of the reactors should be back on line this year, but the start-up date continues to slip as more problems are found.

The department's Energy Research Advisory Board looked "briefly" at using an accelerator to produce tritium, but ended up recommending construction of two new reactors, said Chris Sankey, a DOE spokeswoman.

"The board concluded that these technologies were not mature enough to provide new production capacity in the next 10 to 12 years," she said.

But the DOE report said that the nation's tritium needs could be met by using an accelerator "that could be in operation as early as 1996."

By comparison, the proposed new reactors are expected to take a minimum of 10 years to complete.

"The required accelerator technology has largely been demonstrated at the component level although some additional development work is desirable to effect cost reductions, improved performance and ease of operation," the report said.

The accelerator would take massive amounts of electricity to operate, roughly the entire output of a nuclear power plant. One potential site for it would be in the Pacific Northwest, which has the cheapest electric rates in the nation.

The report said "preliminary discussions" with the Bonneville Power Administration indicated that the federal power marketing agency based in Portland, Ore., would have enough electricity available to power an accelerator.

An accelerator could cost more to build, but because the cost of operating it would be about half that of a reactor, "total life cycle costs," including construction, would be about 25 percent less, said Pierre Grand, a scientist at Brookhaven.

Dallas leaders sparring over plan to unite racially torn city

By SUE FAHLGREN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — A plan to curb racial tensions in Dallas has sparked controversy of its own in the minority community.

Dallas Together, appointed by Mayor Annette Strauss last March to study ways to reduce racial divisiveness in the city, Thursday released its final report. It suggests more minority participation in business, education and government.

"No one has been willing to say there was a race problem," said Pettis Norman, a former Dallas Cowboy and co-chairman of Dallas Together. "Once there is agreement that there is a problem, we can do it with a mixed chorus and go out to the community and ask the churches and the civic groups to get involved."

But other minorities say the proposals are a feeble attempt to stall discrimination lawsuits pending against the city.

"This is a red herring and the fox isn't behind this," said Roy Williams, a plaintiff in a federal redistricting lawsuit that claims the city's election process for council members is discriminatory.

"I do not need the Anglo community to dictate to me what needs to be done in the black community," Williams said. "We've known all along that affirmative action is needed. When is it going to happen?"

Dallas Together chairman Tom Dunning announced Thursday that the group wants the city council to appoint a charter review committee to consider changes to its combination at-large, single-member-district council election system to provide better minority representation. In addition, there are proposals for changes in education, private businesses and neighborhoods to reflect a more equalitarian community.

"Our mission began because of tensions between police department and the community, but it grew to address such issues as economics, education, housing, business and political participation," Dunning said.

"We want to emphasize that this is not the end, but the beginning," Dunning said. "The beginning of easing racial tensions in Dallas."

But Williams said minorities involved in the effort have been duped.

"This smells; I wouldn't trust it," Williams said. Those involved are "those hand-picked preachers they control because they hold the notes on their churches, or the Uncle Toms in the community," Williams said. "They're not the voices of the black community. (Council members) hear the right people down here every Wednesday. They just don't want to listen."

Dallas has endured growing racial tensions that peaked with several police shootings of unarmed, predominantly minority citizens and the killing of a record five Dallas officers in 1988. At one point last year, Dallas parole officers were not permitted to see clients in certain areas of the city because of neighborhood hostility.

Meanwhile, Dallas firefighters remain at odds over affirmative action plans. In September, the Black Fire Fighters Association filed suit alleging historic racial discrimination within the Dallas Fire Department. In November, the predominantly white Fire Fighters Association filed a rebuttal petition.

City Council members themselves have exchanged heated words over minority issues. In fact, notably absent from Thursday's presentation were outspoken black council members Diane Ragsdale and Al Lipscomb and black county commissioner John Wiley Price.

At a council meeting last summer, Ragsdale shouted, "You are a racist!" to a member of a police advocacy group, saying the group was formed only after a white officer was killed and not after the death of a black officer earlier in the year.

Norman said Dallas has undergone an evolution that is still under way.

"I believe Dallas is ready for a change," Norman said. "The city cannot wait for that to happen on its own."

"We're finally emerging from the stigma of President Kennedy being killed here," Norman said. "Now we're known for our police shootings. Once you reduce the atmosphere of people shooting police officers, then time will become an ally." Rene Martinez, another co-chairman of the group, said Dallas Together provides an opportunity for community initiative in overcoming discriminatory practices.

"A number of suits have been filed already, but litigation is a very lengthy process," Martinez said. "History has shown that this city has had to be taken to court to make those changes."

Instead, the committee is recommending changes to the city's charter to provide a more representative government.

Other proposals call for:

- Redeveloping neighborhoods with programs, funds, more stringent enforcement of building codes and the involvement of title companies, financial institutions, attorneys and a city ombudsman;

- Working through local governmental bodies and private businesses for affirmative action programs to hire and promote more minorities, establish employment task forces and prompt minority business investments;

- Encouraging minority representation on business, school and government boards;

- And developing a speakers' bureau to encourage business and community group participation in Dallas Together programs.

"We're asking all Dallas citizens to join us in the commitment to make a positive effort to break down the racial barriers that have divided us," Dunning said.

Researchers say new treatment can reverse loss of spinal bone

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Clinical trials show a new treatment for spinal osteoporosis, the progressive bone loss that afflicts about 5 million Americans, appears to safely curb the condition, researchers say.

University of Texas Southwestern Medical School researchers on Thursday announced results from the seven-year trial of the new treatment, which uses a compound dentists have long applied to strengthen teeth.

The treatment employs a slow-release form of sodium fluoride, which when given with calcium citrate, can reverse the effects of osteoporosis by adding bone mass, said Dr. Charles Pak, mineral metabolism chief at Southwestern Medical Center.

Pak said fluoride has been available as an osteoporosis treatment for decades, but caused serious side effects including corrosion of the stomach lining, painful swelling of the joints and stress fractures.

"These complications have precluded the long-range acceptance of use of fluoride in the United States," said Pak. "Our treatments have been designed to overcome these problems."

Fluoride, under the new treatment, is encapsulated in a waxy substance that allows it to bypass the stomach before much of the compound is released. Pak said that helps alleviate gastrointestinal discomfort and allows the fluoride to be absorbed slowly into the blood, at an effective but not toxic level.

Doctors say spinal osteoporosis results from a gradual loss of trabecular bone, found primarily in the spine. It most commonly affects elderly, postmenopausal women.

Each year, an estimated 500,000 people sustain osteoporosis spine fractures, and a third of women over age 65 will have spinal vertebral fractures during their lives, the Southwestern researchers said.

Doctors say the condition results in shortened stature, curvature of the back and a protruding abdomen that can cause back pain and discomfort in the digestive system.

"Treatments such as estrogen and calcium supplements, which are directed at preventing bone loss, are useful in averting the development of osteoporosis when they are applied early, such as during the early postmenopausal period," said Pak.

"But they have limited value in patients with established osteoporosis, who have already sustained a substantial bone loss. Our treatment is directed toward the latter group."

Pak said the treatment, which has been conducted on experimental basis at 10 hospitals around the country, does not reverse spinal curvature or other damage, but does increase bone mass and forestall further breakage.

He said it cannot be used by people who have sustained hip fractures because of differences in the makeup of their bones.

Doctors said the treatment will not be available to the public, except through experimental programs, pending approval by the Food and Drug Administration.

Pak said he plans to submit his application for approval in April. An FDA review usually takes nine months to 2½ years, he said.

The new drugs promise to increase the availability and usability of osteoporosis treatments, said Dr. Lawrence Raisz, director of endocrinology and metabolism at the University of Connecticut.

"Everybody is anxious to have a treatment approved by the FDA," Raisz said.

The new drugs were developed by Pak and a team of researchers with the help of the Mission Pharmaceutical Co. of San Antonio.

The group, since 1982, has tested the treatment on 251 patients in Dallas, Fort Worth, Temple and Tyler, Texas; Charleston, S.C.; Cleveland and Indianapolis.

Temple vandal receives prison term

DALLAS (AP) — A young Dallas man raised his arm in a Nazi salute after a judge gave him the maximum prison term for the vandalism of a Jewish temple.

Judge Joe Kendall on Thursday handed Daniel Wood, 19, a 10-year sentence and a $5,000 fine on a felony charge of criminal mischief for the Oct. 8 incident at Temple Shalom in Dallas.

"It's not illegal to hate, but it is illegal to act on that hatred," Kendall told Wood, who testified he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

After hearing the sentence,

Wood flashed Kendall a "Heil Hitler" salute, but Wood's attorney, Larry Boyd, said his client was "very hurt."

"I'm sure it was just an immature, emotional reaction," Boyd said.

Wood admitted during the trial that he and two friends spray painted anti-semitic slogans and swastikas on the temple.

But he renounced the philosophy of hate and said he had "gotten rid of most of those beliefs."

Wood also pleaded guilty to three other incidents of criminal mischief involving the Jewish Community Center of Dallas, an Islamic mosque in Richardson and breaking the car windshield of a racially mixed Dallas couple.

Almost 100 people, including members of Temple Shalom, filled the courtroom for Wood's hearing.

The temple's senior rabbi, Kenneth Roseman, said Wood's gesture at the end of the hearing proved Kendall's sentence was appropriate.

"He obviously is not a repentant person," Roseman said.

Houston school officials hoping homeless students seek shelter

By JEFF AWALT
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Public school officials who opened two school-based shelters for homeless students in a pioneer program offering beds, showers and meals hope the colder weather that whipped into Houston may prompt more needy pupils to seek help while it's available.

However, administrators of the program that began Thursday night say it may take more than weather to draw in youths living on the streets of the nation's fourth-largest city.

Of the eight youths served by the shelters on the first night of the pilot program, only one met the original guidelines drawn up for the Schoolhouse Shelters program, believed to be the first of its kind in the nation.

"I'm not disappointed," said school board President Melody Ellis. "It's going to take some time for the children to build up a trust factor with us, and you can imagine how frightened these poor little children are with all this attention."

A 12-year-old girl who had been sleeping under an abandoned house near a public school was the first child to enter one of the two inner-city schools seeking shelter, Ellis said.

"When she first arrived, the principal talked to her and she just broke down, and she just decided she was not going to interrogate that child any longer," Ellis said.

Officials in the district, the state's largest with about 190,000 students, set up the program after increasing reports of students living on the streets. The plan was based on the premise that students who feared seeking help elsewhere may turn to a more familiar environment.

Under their plan, only students enrolled in Houston schools would be eligible to stay in the shelters, which were not meant for families or children who should be served by other social programs.

Of those accepted at the shelters Thursday night, however, only one was a confirmed student living involuntarily without a home and without parents, officials said. A homeless mother brought in her five children, and two teen-age youths believed to be drop-outs offered names of schools not in the Houston district.

Officials who had tried to discourage news crews from staking out the campus sites said later that four boys had arrived at the shelters, but left before entering after apparently fearing the attention they may draw.

Despite the problems, administrators who volunteered to staff the shelters overnight were happy with the results.

"If only one child shows up the program's working because that's one child that's not on the streets," said area superintendent Kaye Stripling. "That's one of the things that the superintendent and I talked about. If we can keep one child off the street, then the program is worth it."

It is estimated Houston has 20,000 to 25,000 homeless people who live on the streets or in shelters, but it's uncertain how many of those are children. Ellis said Thursday that at least 14 Houston students had been identified as truly homeless, but would not speculate on a total number.

The Red Cross donated 75 cots and blankets for the schools and agencies and area residents volunteered to drive the streets in search of children needing shelter. The costs to Houston schools, which provided food, space and security officers for the campus, were described as minimal.

The program will remain in effect at the two schools until at least Jan. 20, when the superintendent will recommend to the school board that it be continued or modified.

One school is set up to handle children from kindergarten through the eighth grade. The other is intended for high school students.

Judy Hay, of Harris County Children's Protective Services, said use of the term "homeless" for the school program may be incorrect.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

They're hurting us instead of serving

Better stock up now on imports from Europe of Danish hams, Italian canned tomato sauce, alcoholic drinks, instant coffee, boneless beef, tomato sauce, fruit juices, pork and pet food. Our government may hit these products with a 100 percent import duty, all but driving them from the market. The action is in retaliation against a threat by the European Economic Community to ban American meat treated with growth hormones. The Reagan administration's attitude is: However hard the Europeans hurt their customers, we can hurt American customers more.

The EEC claims that the hormones may cause health problems in humans. The facts are disputed by scientists; some American officials say the real factor is that the EEC is using the health issue as a way to restrict U.S. imports. Yet for whatever reason, the EEC is wrong to impose the ban. If the European people want to eat hormone-injected American meat, that's their business. Let the people choose.

But whatever the EEC's action, that's no excuse for our government to retaliate by punishing Americans, who will be the first to suffer from the retaliation. European producers will be hurt, but they will be able to search for markets elsewhere. American consumers will be hit hard fast. The ban would also add to the national inflation rate, possibly sparking higher interest rates that could lead to a recession.

U.S. retaliation would be the second shot fired in a trade skirmish. If the trade skirmish turns into an all-out, no-prisoners-taken trade war, as happened in the 1930s, then what does it matter who fired the first shot if everyone's economy collapses?

And the United States isn't exactly an exemplar. Our Food and Drug Administration routinely bans European drugs for reasons more flimsy than what the EEC used to ban U.S. meat. It's pure hypocrisy for our government to complain about European actions that only mimic ours.

There are better ways to deal with trade problems. The General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs provides for ways to resolve such disputes. Certainly peoples so friendly and similar as those in America and Europe should be able to resolve this problem without resort to sanctions and retaliation. And even if it isn't resolved, there's no reason to hurt the American people, whom our government claims to serve.

WELL, JUDGE, I'M HERE
BECAUSE MY STUPID
HUSBAND WON'T TAKE DOWN THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

A billion here, a billion there

WASHINGTON — Some days only two passengers get on the plane at Kokomo. On a good day there may be three. They fly in lonesome glory down to Indianapolis, and for this princely convenience the taxpayers fork over $401,000 a year to the local airline.

The bloated federal budget sweats with non-essential subsidies, but none is less essential than the Essential Air Service program. It benefits Kokomo and 135 other communities around the nation. With a few exceptions, the subsidies ought to be scrapped entirely.

The good news is that by the end of January, the Department of Transportation will have made a small start in that direction. Kokomo is likely to lose its bonanza entirely, along with Lewiston, Me., Clarksville, Tenn., and Moultrie/Thomasville, Ga. Subsidies to the four communities amount to $1.4 million a year. They emplane, on average, 20 passengers a day.

The program provides a textbook example for students of political science. All the elements are here — the levers of power, the easygoing state of mind, the drop-in-the-bucket reationalization, the old American urge to get while the getting is good.

Congress voted to deregulate the airlines in 1978. No longer would carriers be required to serve particular cities. Profitless routes could be abandoned. The act provoked cries of pain from mayors and chambers of commerce. They feared the loss of airline service, and their civic pride was wounded.

These influential folks did what such influential fellows do. Instead of solving their problems on their own, they fled to Washington and put pressure on Congress. Ever obliging, Congress responded with the Essential Air Service Act. After all, subsidies are nothing but money.

Commuter airlines, seeing a good thing, sprang into being. Hutchinson, Kan., averaging one passenger per day, got a subsidy of $176,300 in 1987. Parsons, Kan., with an average daily employment of 0.4, got the same amount. Enid, Okla., with 2.7 passengers, benefited to the tune of $187,600.

Montpelier, Vt., had a daily passenger volume of 2.3; its subsidy, $235,400. Yankton, S.D., boarded 2.1 for $218,000. In Paris, Texas, the figures were 2.4 and $146,600. In Jackson, Mich., 1.3 and $321,600.

The whole idea was to maintain air service from these small towns and cities to the nearest hub. There passengers could transfer to major carriers that would take them to distant destinations.

In some instances a justification could be found. If you want to get to Glasgow, Mont., pop. 4,455, you are 280 miles from Billings; there isn't any train, and it's too far to ride a horse.

In most instances the subsidy made no sense. It is only a half-hour's run down I-95 from Lewiston to Portland, Maine. In Texas, it is about the same distance from Temple to Waco. If it weren't for the cries of wounded pride, neither Lewiston nor Temple would be on the receiving end of congressional largess.

The subsidies were to last for 10 years only, but on Capitol Hill the sun rarely sets on a need-less program. Over the futile protests of the Reagan administration, Congress voted in 1987 not only to continue the subsidies for 10 more years, but also to expand them to additional cities. It was a fine, magnanimous gesture.

Then a surprising thing happened. In an uncharacteristic bow to economy, Congress failed to put its money where its magnanimity was. Instead of increasing the $28.4 million provided for 1988, Congress cut the appropriation to $25 million for 1989.

As a consequence, the Department of Transportation is tailoring its remaining funds. Many communities will have their subsidies reduced, and Kokomo, Lewiston, Clarksville and Thomasville are about to be tailored all the way out.

But maybe not. David A. Heymsfeld, counsel to the House aviation subcommittee, told The Washington Post that "there's certainly concern and opposition to cutting back the program in our committee." He thought members would be working to keep the entire program that was authorized in 1987.

So it goes. The thinking on Capitol Hill is that $25 million a year is a piddling sum, an all-but-invisible drop in a trillion-dollar ocean. Why should anyone object to such trifles?

The late Sen. Everett Dirksen provided an answer for the ages. A billion here, he said, and a billion there — pretty soon it adds up to real money.

Getting things back in focus

Over my shoulder a backward glance. Christmas Day, Angel and I awakened like excited youngsters, anticipating the most wonderful-filled day of the year. Which it was.

That night I retired with a heart so overflowing with gratitude that my prayers could include nothing beyond thankfulness. It had been a magic day.

One of the priceless gifts I got in church. For half an hour we sang all the timeless Christmas carols. And the pastor's message included a proper birthday celebration ...

But it was a distraction which I remember best.

Children of the congregation did not absent themselves for the usual Sunday School. Families remained together for the service.

And in the pew directly in front of us was a young family I do not know by name — yet I am in their debt.

Mother and father, neat and pleasant, probably middle thirties. A daughter about 6, a boy about 4 and a very, very tiny pink-faced newborn baby.

During the service who is cradling the blanket-wrapped baby most of the time? The young girl. With the soft, caring face of a pre-pubescent Madonna — the girl child caresses the sleeping infant.

Paul Harvey

Once or twice during the hour, she passed the baby for her smaller brother to hold. Both supported the baby with what you could tell was experienced gentleness.

When the baby awakened and was passed to the mother, it was the little girl, who, now standing alongside, held the baby's bottle.

Again, all of this caring sharing was done with the ease and naturalness and calm expertise of much experience.

The long week previously I'd had to deal daily with examples of callousness and cruelty and mental images of the unlovely and the unwanted.

But this Christmas Day I was presented with a refreshing picture of what we used to think of as a traditional family ...

Especially, I will remember — I expect for a long time — the little girl in her Sunday-best frock and a ribbon in her hair — a busy mother or father had still found time for that — and the angelic look on the little girl's face as she tended the newborn.

From behind the shrubbery-shrouded windows of a million side streets I imagine voices saying: "Paul Harvey should see our family; our children have always cared for one another."

I know. Thank God there are more of you than there are of the others ...

But because news is what news is, the lullabys are drowned out by anguished cries.

And I needed that Christmas Day experience to get it all back in focus.

It's time to end the hyphenated wording

By CHUCK STONE

It took a lynch mob of Chinese students in Nanjing to remind us that Juliet's inquiry, "What's in a name?" alters no global perceptions, especially of a black skin.

"Down with black devils," screamed the students. "Beat the black devils," exhorted their banners.

That which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet.

And that which the world knows as an African, by any other name would be just as despised, whether castigated as "black devils" in China, "niggers" in America, or "kaffirs" in South Africa.

Granted, nomenclature does not automatically confer power. But at least it ensures respect for ethnographic accuracy. And that's what a group of prominent black Americans, including Jesse Jackson (the nation's equal-opportunity version of Harold Stassen), had in mind at a recent press conference when they requested that they now be known as African-Americans.

If nothing else, their demand tries to clarify the nomenclatural confusion represented by organizational profusion: African Methodist Church, Afro-American Newspapers, Black History Month, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, National Association of Minority Contractors, and the Negro Ensemble Co.

Doesn't one all-encompassing name make more economical sense?

Following the Jackson press conference, a Philadelphia Daily News colleague, Assistant Managing Editor John Praksta, posed a thoughtful series of questions in a memo to me:

Q. With the hyphenated-American concept fading among white folks, what was the sociological trigger that brought this to the fore in the black community?

A. I don't think the hyphenated concept is fading. Several holidays still enjoy a special ethnic affinity from various hyphenated Americans — St. Patrick's Day, Columbus Day, Palastki Day, Three Kings Day and Von Steuben Day.

Although various organizations are already using the term African-American, the "sociological trigger" may have been the formation of the White Students Union at Philadelphia's Temple University. Blacks were shocked. Instead of being accepted as just another ingredient in ethnic America's "melting pot," blacks were being isolated by a coalition of all whites.

Q. Does the movement serve the idea of e pluribus unum, or does it create another divisive strain in society?

A. Divisiveness already exists because of a low esteem for Africa, and Reagan's presidency has made divisiveness more acceptable. During the past eight years, we've seen a war on affirmative action, an academic conservative movement against blacks in higher education, and organized violence against black college students (at the University of Massachusetts, University of Michigan, University of Pennsylvania and Smith College, among others). Ironically, e pluribus unum represents the ongoing resolution of group conflict in American history.

Q. Should the hyphenated form be used with a continent rather than a country, i.e., can we have African-Americans where we don't normally have European-Americans?

"Wouldn't it be lover-ly" if 26 million black Americans could all be Alex Hales and find their Kunta Kintes in their countries of origin. But most African slaves were brought here from several West African countries. My great grandmother was brought to Louisiana from Haiti. But I'll be darned if I know from which African country.

Q. How can people such as Jesse Jackson assume that millions of people want still another name change?

You name it, and Jesse's ego will assume it. But the wisdom of Malcolm X authenticates the case for the name change: "If you put a cat in an oven and she has kittens, you don't call them biscuits."

After 200 years, it's time to stop calling African-Americans biscuits.

Folk-singer Tracy Chapman leading Grammy nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Singer-songwriter Tracy Chapman and vocal gymnast Bobby McFerrin led the field in nominations for the 31st annual Grammy awards Thursday, with six for Chapman and five for McFerrin.

Chapman, whose debut album was a surprise hit in 1988, garnered nominations for best new artist, best album, best song and best record for "Fast Car," best female pop performance for the same song, and best contemporary folk recording for the entire album, named after herself.

Chapman, whose album of ballads and topical songs has sold more than 2 million copies, was a surprise star amid the year's techno-pop and thriving heavy metal sounds.

Her "Fast Car" single was a Top 10 hit, and the album named after her contained several other nuggets, such as the driving "For My Lover."

McFerrin, whose "Don't Worry Be Happy" was the first ever non-instrumental to reach No. 1 position on Billboard charts, received nominations for best song, record and male pop vocal performance for "Don't Worry," plus an album nomination for Simple Pleasures. McFerrin also received best male jazz vocal performance for the song "Brothers."

George Michael, whose smash album Faith sold more than 6 million copies and spawned six hits, received two nominations from the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

Other top nominees were Anita Baker with four and Sting and Steve Winwood with three each.

Ballots will be mailed Jan. 18 to the academy's voting members, who include musicians, recording technicians and industry executives.

Winners will be announced in Los Angeles on Feb. 22 during a televised awards ceremony on CBS from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. CST. Billy Crystal will be the host.

Nominated for record of the year were "Don't Worry Be Happy," "Fast Car," Baker's "Giving You the Best That I Got," Michael Jackson's "Man in the Mirror," and Winwood's "Roll With It."

Nominated for album of the year were Michael's Faith, Sting's Nothing Like the Sun, Winwood's Roll With It, McFerrin's Simple Pleasures, and Chapman's self-titled album.

Nominations for song of the year — a songwriters award — were for "Be Still My Beating Heart" by Sting, McFerrin's "Don't Worry Be Happy," Chapman's "Fast Car," "Giving You the Best That I Got," written by Baker, Skip Scarborough and Randy Holland, and "Piano in the Dark" by Brenda Russell, Jeff Hall and Scott Cutler.

Nominees for best new artist included dethroned Miss America Vanessa Williams, Rick Astley, Chapman, Toni Childs and the group Take 6.

Despite Michael's powerful sales generated by his Faith album and single, music insiders' criticism of pretentiousness and publicity-seeking may have hurt the English artist.

Others, who like Michael received two nominations, included Russell, Neil Dorffman and songwriter Randy Holland.

Comedian Billy Crystal announced the nominations at a mid-morning news conference at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences has widened the field of nominees by adding awards categories for heavy metal-hard rock and rap music.

Forecasting Grammy winners is no longer the easy job it once was, Billboard magazine columnist Paul Grein said.

"The academy has recruited many new members, most of them younger and more ready to give rock its due," he said. "It's much harder now to get a handle on what they do. Once it was pretty easy to just line up whoever fit in the Barbra Streisand-Doobie Brothers-Billy Joel middle of the road form. Now those acts still do well, but they also recognize rock acts like Prince, U2 and Bruce Springsteen."

Bush taking another vacation

WASHINGTON (AP) — With his Cabinet selections finally completed, President-elect Bush heads for the Florida Keys today for a weekend of fishing before returning to the capital for the whirlwind of events culminating in his inauguration.

Bush was bound for Islamorada, Fla., the self-proclaimed sportfishing capital of the world, to fish in the Everglades with buddies including Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady and Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

The excursion to Florida is Bush's third fishing or hunting trip since his election two months ago. He went fishing in Gulf Stream, Fla., in November and went hunting and fishing in Texas and Alabama the week after Christmas.

The president-elect, who once hoped to appoint the whole Cabinet before Christmas, finally finished the task Thursday by naming former naval chief James D. Watkins as energy secretary and tapping former Education Secretary William J. Bennett to lead anti-drug efforts.

Bush had promised to bring "new faces" to Washington, but only three of the 14 departments will be run by newcomers to Washington. Bush wound up recruiting seven current or former Reagan Cabinet officers for top jobs and filling two others with retiring Republican lawmakers.

He also enlisted Edward Derwinski, an undersecretary of state and former congressman, to head the new Department of Veterans Affairs, and kept William Webster on as CIA director.

Labor Secretary-designate Elizabeth Dole will be the sole woman in the Cabinet. It will have two Hispanics — Lauro Cavazos at education and Manuel Lujan at interior — and one black, Louis Sullivan at health and human services.

Bush assembled his Cabinet at Blair House for an informal meeting followed by a dinner with their spouses. He told reporters beforehand:

"I'm going to tell them to think big. I'm going to tell them to challenge the system. I'm going to tell them to ... adhere to the highest ethical standards."

He also said, more in earnest than in jest, "I'm going to tell them I don't like kiss-and-tell books." He added that he wants them to "be on the record as much as possible."

"I'd rather see their name on the record than insidiously leaked to somebody," Bush said.

"I don't mind differences being aired. I want them to be frank. I want them to fight hard for their position, and then, after I make the call, I'd like to have the feeling that they'd be able to support the president," Bush said.

"I'll tell them to work with Congress. We're going to have some fights with Congress, but we're not going to approach it as though we're dealing with the enemy," the president-elect said.

Watkins, 61, the chief of naval operations until 1986 under Reagan, is a nuclear warfare expert who headed the presidential commission on AIDS that called last year for new legislation to protect the civil rights of victims of the deadly disease.

The retired admiral said he is determined to make sure that "safety is never subverted (and) the environment is adequately protected" while nuclear energy is developed.

Bennett, 45, a longtime two-pack-a-day smoker, said he would kick the habit before he is sworn in as director of national drug control policy.

Bush, who will be sworn in Friday, said he is "not entirely" comfortable with the cost of his inauguration, which could reach $25 million.

However, he said it is being paid for largely with private funds and the country deserves "every four years something as unifying, with the pageantry and the drama, of an inauguration."

Wholesale prices rose 4% in 1988

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, boosted by a 0.4 percent increase in December, rose 4 percent for all of 1988, the fastest pace since the nation began emerging from double-digit inflation near the beginning of the decade, the government said today.

The gain in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods, one stop short of the retail level, was nearly double last year's 2.2 percent increase. It was the biggest gain since 1981, when costs jumped 7.1 percent.

The index was propelled upward by a drought-induced 5.7 percent increase in food prices. They had showed no change in 1987.

Meanwhile, energy prices, which had soared 11.2 percent in 1987, fell 3.4 percent in 1988. However, with the production agreement reached by the OPEC nations in November, analysts expect oil prices to head higher this year.

All other finished goods in 1988 rose 4.3 percent.

In December, food prices fell a slight seasonally adjusted 0.1 percent, energy costs edged up only 0.2 percent, but everything else jumped 0.6 percent, the biggest increase since September.

This is the third consecutive month of good news for grocery shoppers. Prices were unchanged in November after a 0.1 percent decline in October. However, that period of stability was preceded by seven consecutive months of increases from early spring through the summer.

With the end of unseasonably moderate temperatures in many parts of the country in December, fuel oil soared 8.5 percent and natural gas rose 3.3 percent. Gasoline prices, however, fell 3.5 percent, holding back overall energy gains.

For other items, a sharp 5.7 percent increase in tobacco prices and significant gains of 0.9 percent in automobile costs and 0.7 percent in women's clothing led the index.

The fall in wholesale food costs was led by a 17.1 percent drop in turkey prices. Fresh and dried vegetable prices fell 8.5 percent; fresh fruit, 2.7 percent; fish, 1.3 percent, and pork, 0.3 percent.

Retail sales up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail spending shot up 6.7 percent in 1988, the fastest pace in four years, despite lackluster Christmas and automotive sales in December, the government reported today.

Sales for all of 1988 totaled a record $1.61 trillion, the biggest annual gain since a 9.8 percent increase in 1984, the Commerce Department said. Sales had increased by 5.1 percent in 1987.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

SURE HANDS OF THE SURGEON

A child walks... an arm is straightened... a growth is removed... these and many other things are the result of the fine work of the surgeon. This is an occupation and a labor worthy of appreciation.

A star... a new born baby... the world itself... these and many other things reveal God to us. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork."

Psalm 19, 1

God has wrought a great work. Let us show our love and appreciation by worshipping him in Church

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Pampa FCA to host rally on Saturday

Students and sponsors from schools in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Kansas will be gathering in Pampa for a Fellowship of Christian Athletes rally at Pampa High School.

Late registration and huddle assignments will begin at 8:30 a.m., with the Pampa High School Show Choir providing entertainment at 9:15 a.m.

In the 9:45 a.m. opening session, guest speaker will be Jim Riley, former All-Pro Miami Dolphins defensive tackle. Riley played in the 1972 Super Bowl, which capped an undefeated season for the Dolphins.

Other activities for the morning and afternoon include fellowship sessions, a Mexican pile-on lunch and Dog Patch Olympics for the huddle teams.

Speaker for the 4:30 p.m. session will be Billy Lemons, a Pampa High School graduate who played football for Texas A&M University and the Cleveland Browns.

Supper will be a "pizza bash," followed by meetings for the huddle groups.

A 7 p.m. session in McNeely Fieldhouse will be open to the public. Guest speaker will be Brad Long of Greenwood, Ind., who played "Buddy" in the 1987 movie Hoosiers, wearing uniform number 14.

Long has also been active in athletics, being named to the First Team Academic All-American at Southwestern College in Winfield, Kan., in basketball. He was a four-year letterman in basketball and golf and served as captain of the basketball team.

While in college he was vice president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes chapter and currently serves as president of the Johnson County Adult FCA chapter. He has also served as a youth group leader at church.

Receiving a bachelor of business administration degree, Long was tri-valedictorian of his graduating class with a 4.0 grade point average and received a number of awards during his college years.

Following the evening session, a rally circle will close the day's events.

The Pampa FCA is hosting the area rally.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Why are you downcast, O my soul? Why so disturbed within me? Put your hope in God, for I will yet praise him, my Savior and my God. (Psalm 43:5 NIV)

I'm always a little sad to see the trees become bare in preparation for winter. Since I'm a warm weather person, I love the bursting forth of spring, the rich greenness of summer and the Indian summer's play of colors. But wind stripped and winter stark, the trees seem woefully more vulnerable to the fury of the elements.

However, in the spring, I'm always amazed at the new branch and bud growth the trees have put out during the bitter winter months. And their root systems have expanded their foundational bases and gripped deeper into the soil. They stand stronger, burgeoning with new life and promising more beautiful foliage than ever.

Life is full of crises which strip people to the bare bones of human emotional existence. We're left scraped raw by shock and nakedly vulnerable to the full fury of elements beyond our control.

But Christians retain the Life Force within which saturates us with vibrant hope. Our Lord uses our periods of brokenness to strengthen our foundational base of faith and to grow our Christian commitment. By God's grace, we emerge from the storm, straightened and strengthened, burgeoning with the promise of new life and enhanced spiritual beauty.

Our merciful God is our hope springing eternal!

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — Some evangelicals in a mainline denomination — the United Church of Christ — say they are starting their own missions work because the denomination isn't doing enough to win new believers.

Barbara Weller, assistant director of Biblical Witness Fellowship, says it decided to create a special missions committee after research indicated extensive disenchantment with the church's official missions work.

Episcopalians remain strong in Congress and presidency

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In proportion to their numbers, Episcopalians as usual hold far more than their share of seats in the new Congress, and next Friday for the 12th time in U.S. history, an Episcopalian — George Bush — occupies the White House.

There have been more presidents of that denomination than any other, although it rates only seventh in size. Its 2.8 million members make up only about 1.2 percent of the population.

But it holds about 12 percent of the seats in the new 101st Congress — 63 of 535 seats in the House and Senate.

In the Senate alone, Episcopalians are an even bigger proportion, 20 members, or a fifth of the 100 senators, more than any other denomination, although several others are much larger.

Episcopal prominence in politics began in early America, with the nation's first president, George Washington, belonging to that church, as have 10 other presidents, most recently Franklin D. Roosevelt and Gerald Ford.

Other Episcopalians among the founders and early presidents were James Madison, who originally planned to become a minister but switched to politics, and Thomas Jefferson, who in his spare time produced the Jefferson Bible version.

It retains the ethical teachings, but eliminates miracles, causing Unitarians to claim him, although that denomination wasn't formed until the year before he died in 1826 — long after his presidency.

Protestants, along with Episcopalians, have always predominated in Congress, and still do, with 334 of 535 seats, but the number of Roman Catholics has swelled over the last two decades, now totaling 139 seats.

That is more than any other single denomination, although slipping slightly by two from the previous Congress. Methodists hold the second largest number of seats — 75 — down by one, while Episcopalians increased three — to 63.

Altogether, about 52 percent of Congress members belong to those three traditions.

Baptists made up the fourth biggest denominational bloc — 55 of them — gaining one. For the first time, they surpassed Presbyterians, whose number dropped four to 53.

The preliminary figures on affiliations of the new Congress were compiled by Rob Boston of Americans United for the Separation of Church and State in Washington.

In sixth place were Jews, who gained two members to a total of 39, while the next-placed Lutherans also gained two to a total of 25. The Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) gained one to total four.

Other numerically unchanged contingents included:

United Church of Christ, 13; Mormons, 11; Unitarian Universalists, 10; Eastern Orthodox, seven; Churches of Christ, five; Christian Scientists, two, and several other Protestant groups with one each.

Twenty-three Congress members, up one, were listed only as Protestant with no specified denomination, while five members, one more than previously, were listed as having no religious affiliation.

Bush, a lifelong Episcopalian, belongs to St. Martin's Episcopal Church in Houston and attends various Episcopal churches in Washington, including the National Cathedral, where he will take part in a post-inaugural service Jan. 22.

Area churches to hold service in King's honor

A special service in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King, the late civil rights leader, will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday at St. Mark CME Church, 406 Elm, announced Rev. H.R. Johnson, pastor.

Guest speaker will be Rev. V.P. Perry of Amarillo, who will also give the invitation during the service.

Prior to the service, the Fellowship Hall will be open from 12:45 until 2:45 p.m. and will reopen after the service. Soul food will be served.

Theme for the service is "I Have a Dream."

Six other area churches will be participating in the service held here in observance of Martin Luther King Day, which will be observed this year on Monday, Jan. 16.

Guest churches include Bethel Baptist Church of Borger, pastor Rev. J.H. Blakemore; New Hope Baptist Church of Pampa, Rev. V.C. Martin; New Zion Baptist Church of Borger, Rev. H. Romaine; Macedonia Baptist Church of Pampa, Rev. L.L. Patrick; Open Door Church of God in Christ of Pampa, Elder H. Kelly; and Progressive Baptist Church of Pampa, Mrs. L.B. (Gladys) Davis.

Sister Cynthia Lemons will serve as mistress of ceremony. Stewards and deacons will give the devotion, with music provided by the St. Mark Choir and guest choirs.

Sister Jessie Samuels will deliver the welcome, with New Hope Baptist Church providing the response. Readings will be from The Life of Dr. King.

In the pulpit devotion, Rev. Blakemore will read the scripture selection and Rev. Romaine will deliver the prayer. Rev. Martin will present the speaker.

Conducting the offering will be Bros. Clyde Durham, Jimmy Johnson and Charles Bradshaw.

The Cathedral Quartet

Cathedral Quartet to be in concert at Briarwood

Southern Gospel music group The Cathedral Quartet will be in concert at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Briarwood Church, 1800 W. Harvester.

With a history going back more than two decades, The Cathedral Quartet has long been an inspirational force in the field of gospel music since the group's early association with the ministry of Rex Humbard in 1964 in his television outreach.

In his program The Cathedral of Tomorrow, broadcast weekly from Akron, Ohio, Humbard featured a collection of young singers known as The Cathedral Trio. He later added a bassist to form The Cathedral Quartet.

Two of the group's members, lead vocalist Glen Payne and bassist George Younce, had previously been members of the gospel ensemble The Weatherfords, though at different times.

The two formed a close partnership as the quartet performed together over the next six years, both live and during nationwide televised services. In 1969, The Cathedral Quartet branched out into their own full-time ministry.

Ten years later, in 1979, all the members of the group except for Payne and Younce decided to leave to pursue other musical directions. The two recruited a trio of talented vocalists and formed a new group, allowing The Cathedral Quartet to continue.

The new quartet sound includes, in addition to Payne and Younce, tenor Danny Funderburk, baritone Mark Trammell and pianist/vocalist Gerald Wolfe.

Through the years, The Cathedral Quartet has received a number of awards. Just in the past year, they have honored as Male Group of the Year and for Gospel Album of the Year, plus five other awards, from the Gospel Music News People's Choice Awards.

They have received four Dove awards and have been recognized with numerous honors from Singing News fans and the Southern Gospel Music Association.

With more than 2 million miles traveled and 5,000 performances to their credit, The Cathedral Quartet has also recorded a number of albums. The Master Builder produced the single "Can He, Could He, Would He," a national number one hit in October 1986.

Catholics plan new WTSU center

CANYON — A plan to build a new Catholic Student Center in Canyon for Catholics enrolled at West Texas State University has been announced by Susie Dolle, general chairman.

The new facility will be located at 2614 4th St. in Canyon and will be designed to accommodate students at WTSU. There are approximately 800 Catholics enrolled at the university.

A kickoff benefit auction will be at 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 3, at Tascosa Country Club. Additionally, kickoff drives will be coordinated to begin Sunday, Feb. 26, in each parish in the Diocese of Amarillo, according to Mrs. Dolle.

A fund will be established to maintain the center's maintenance and operations costs.

"The campaign will be open-ended in that each year there will be a special campaign to support the project," said Jeanne-Marie Picard, diocesan director of development.

The project has been approved by Bishop Leroy T. Matthiesen and the Diocesan Development Commission. Mrs. Picard said that additional solicitations will be made to alumni, relatives of alumni, students, their relatives and families, and to foundations.

The goal is to obtain $500,000. Of this, $350,000 will be for erection of the building and $150,000 for operating expenses and maintenance expenses. Picard said that $140,000 in cash is needed to break ground on the facility. The figure represents 40 percent of the construction cost.

The new facility will be constructed on property adjacent to the existing wood frame house which has served as the Catholic Student Center since the 1950s. The new center, which will have 9,600 square feet of space, will include a gathering room, meeting room/chapel combination, kitchen, office, directors quarters and basement for future growth. The proposed steel building will be bricked.

The new center will be a general gathering place for students to socialize, study, pray, receive counseling, conduct Bible classes, relax and be offered Sunday Mass, according to Dolle.

Rev. Pat Carathers, pastor, St. Ann's Catholic Church, Canyon, is student chaplain. Bishop Matthiesen is honorary committee chairman.

Cops have an angel watching them

By JULIA BENITEZ SULLIVAN
Dallas Times Herald

ARLINGTON (AP) — Local police officers have an angel looking after them.

The angel is a gregarious 65-year-old grandmother who decided that the best way to back the blue was to "Shield the Badge with Prayer."

Bernadette Henze, the mother of four adult sons, three of them police officers serving in Cedar Hill, Arlington and Fort Worth, is the driving force behind a program intended to match each of the 350 commissioned Arlington police officers with a local resident who promises to say a prayer-a-day for a year in the name of the officer.

"The program was prompted by the fact that we have three sons who are police officers and our days are spent on our knees praying for their safety," said Mrs. Henze, a devout Roman Catholic. "People would say that they wanted to pray for our sons, too, and I would say go ahead. Then I decided to share the good will with other officers."

Since she started the program in November, 200 people have signed on to pray for an officer each, but "I'd like nothing more than to double the people praying for our officers," Mrs. Henze said.

She said she has no idea how three of her sons — Peter, 30; Timothy, 26; and Patrick, 24 — "came to be police officers," but added that they may have learned from her example.

"Their mother was always the chief of police at the house," she said.

Only "number two son," Christopher, 28, did not choose to become a police officer, Mrs. Henze said. He works as a financial adviser.

Mrs. Henze, a Chicago native, and her husband, Peter, originally from New York, moved to Arlington 30 years ago when he was offered a job here. Peter Henze III is a retired engineer who runs a clock repair shop from a small building behind the family's southeast Arlington home.

However, there is some family history in law enforcement, said son Patrick, a Fort Worth officer.

Paternal grandfather Peter Henze II, 93, once trained police dogs in New York, Patrick Henze said.

"I think this is a great idea, even if it doesn't extend to Fort Worth," Patrick said. "So many times we do things out there on the streets that go without thanks and this way, at least, the officers hear once in a while from people who say that they care and that they are praying for them."

Patrick Henze said he was not surprised when his mother took on the Shield project.

"It's right down her alley to take care of this," he said. "I think there probably were some big shots in the city who were afraid to say no to her."

"Some of the responses have moved me to tears," Mrs. Henze said. "There was one Spanish woman who said she didn't know how to write in English, so I said, 'So write in Spanish,' and she did. Well, the officer wrote back a beautiful letter to her, also in Spanish."

Religion roundup

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The American Baptist Churches have decided to maintain their historic ecumenical ties, but also to initiate a new one.

The denomination's general board voted to reaffirm membership in the National Council of Churches and World Council of Churches, but also to become an official observer in the National Association of Evangelicals.

The 1.6 million-member denomination had not previously been linked to the NAE, a conservative evangelical body which does not permit full membership to churches belonging to the NCC or WCC.

Some American Baptists had sought withdrawal from the NCC and WCC.

Paul Nichols of Richmond, Va., characterized the compromise decision as "conciliar, broad, inclusive — an appropriate stance for our denomination."

The decision culminated four years of monitoring and critiquing the NCC and WCC.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The theme for Roman Catholicism's 1989 National Migration Week, observed across the country Jan. 9-14, was "Migrants and the Blessed Mother."

In designating the theme, Pope John Paul II pointed out that the Virgin Mary's "earthly life was marked by a continual pilgrimage from one place to another" — from Nazareth to Bethlehem and then in flight to Egypt to save the child Jesus and later back again to Nazareth.

"She shines as a sign of certain hope and comfort to the pilgrim people of God," the pope said.

The week was instituted by the U.S. National Conference of Catholic Bishops in 1980 to emphasize commitment and service to people on the move, including political refugees, economic migrants, seasonal farm workers and displaced persons.

Mexico, U.S. investigate where union boss got his weapons

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican and U.S. law enforcement officials are conducting an investigation to determine the origin of a weapons cache found in the home of jailed Oil Workers Union boss Joaquin Hernandez Galicia, officials said.

Jose Cruz Contreras, the former mayor of Reynosa who allegedly arranged the arms shipment for Hernandez Galicia, is believed to have fled with his family to the United States, according to a highly-placed source in the Attorney General's Office.

Authorities said more than 200 Uzi submachine guns were found in Hernandez Galicia's home when he was arrested Tuesday in Ciudad Madero, about 220 miles northeast of Mexico City.

Hernandez Galicia and 50 other union leaders and associates were arrested Tuesday and Wednesday. Hernandez Galicia was charged Thursday with homicide, possession of large quantities of weapons, importing prohibited weapons and resisting authority.

A federal agent was killed by shots fired from Hernandez Galicia's home before he and his bodyguards were arrested.

Hernandez Galicia told investigators Cruz Contreras secretly delivered the Uzis and about 30,000 cartridges to him on Dec. 10, according to a statement released by the Attorney General's Office on Wednesday.

The weapons were obtained in the United States, the statement said.

The source in the Attorney General's Office said Mexican law enforcement agents and FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration officials met on Thursday to try to determine the origin of the arms.

The source said Mexican and U.S. officials suspected that drugs may have been used to pay for the weapons.

He said Hernandez Galicia faces up to 40 years in prison if convicted.

According to the statement, Hernandez Galicia told investigators that Cruz Contreras was accompanied during the arms transaction by Juan Abrego, the police chief of Hidalgo, Texas.

The statement did not say how

Hernandez Galicia ... behind bars

Abrego allegedly was involved. Hidalgo Mayor Edward Vela told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Thursday that the city was conducting an internal investigation into the allegations.

Vela said he talked with Abrego Wednesday morning and that Abrego denied any involvement in the case.

"At this point they are just allegations and we are reserving judgment until we have all the facts," Vela said. "If and when anything is proven we will take the appropriate action." Abrego will continue working as captain of the 13-member Hidalgo police department, Vela said.

Vela said he was a friend of Cruz Contreras, "but I haven't talked to him. All I know is what I read in the newspapers."

"I find it hard to believe Cruz Contreras is involved. He's a businessman and does a lot of work with the poor and disadvantaged."

He said he had never met Hernandez Galicia. "But everyone here knows who La Quina is and talks about him. And I think most of them like him." La Quina is Hernandez Galicia's nickname.

Hidalgo is a city of about 3,000 residents that sits across the border from Reynosa. Reynosa, which has a refinery and petrochemicals plant, is a stronghold of oil workers allied with Hernandez Galicia.

Attempts to reach Abrego by telephone were unsuccessful Thursday. But in an interview with the Excelsior news agency, Abrego denied he knew of any arms shipment to La Quina.

"On various occasions I went to his house in Ciudad Madero, accompanied by Contreras, but I never brought him arms," Abrego was quoted as saying.

"I have nothing to do with this affair," he said.

In a Mexico City prison Thursday, Hernandez Galicia told reporters: "I signed the statements under the pressure of torture that my companions suffered. They told me my family was kidnapped and if I didn't give a statement that pleased the Federal Attorney General, I wouldn't see them again."

He called his detention "a dirty, prefabricated infamy." Still, he urged oil workers to stay on the job.

Several thousand oil workers and supporters demonstrated in protest Thursday night in Mexico City's Zocalo Plaza.

A bomb threat and rumors of more arrests forced union local chiefs to evacuate the union's national headquarters before they could vote to confirm the choice of a new secretary-general.

Labor Secretary Arsenio Farrell Cubillas objected to the Wednesday election of Sen. Ricardo Camero Cardiel. Camero Cardiel pledged to use

"all legal means to win the freedom of Hernandez, Barragan and other arrested leaders," the daily newspaper La Jornada said.

Camero Cardiel replaced Salvador Barragan Camacho, who turned himself in after Hernandez Galicia was arrested and Barragan Camacho's house was searched.

"I would say that interior secretary (Jose) Melendez should assume the function of secretary general, because the statutes say so," Farrell Cubillas said.

Union spokesman Francisco Arriola said that Farrell Cubillas "obviously does not know the union's bylaws."

La Jornada said Camero Cardiel, "with more than 30 years of union activity, is a recognized member of (Hernandez Galicia's) group."

Barragan Camacho, who has a history of heart trouble, is under arrest in a hospital.

Soviets impose special rule on disputed region

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government's highest executive body Thursday imposed a "special form of administration" on the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh region while keeping it within the Azerbaijani republic, Tass said.

The decision by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet was another step by the government aimed at defusing tensions over the mostly Armenian enclave, which has been the focus of a violent struggle between Armenians and Azerbaijanis.

The dispute between Armenia, which wants to annex the area, and neighboring Azerbaijan has led to more than 60 deaths in almost a year of unrest. About 200,000 refugees have streamed across the border.

Military law and a strict curfew were imposed in many parts of the two republics in November to quell ethnic violence.

Tass said the decision Thursday was made at a meeting of the Presidium convened by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to consider "urgent" state issues.

There had been unconfirmed reports in Moscow as well as the Caucasus region for more than a month that the Kremlin would transfer Nagorno-Karabakh to the Russian federation.

But a Tass statement made it clear the Kremlin intended to keep the small, mountainous region within Azerbaijan.

The Presidium "found it expedient to temporarily introduce in the Nagorno-Karabakh autonomous region a special form of administration, with Nagorno-Karabakh retaining its status as an autonomous region incorporated in Azerbaijan," Tass said.

Britain orders check on jet wiring

LONDON (AP) — British airlines Thursday checked engines and fire alarm wiring on aircraft similar to the crashed Boeing 737 as officials tried to determine why the jet's starboard engine was shut down when its port engine was ablaze.

The Civil Aviation Authority's order prompted experts to speculate that a faulty alarm system misled the crew of the British Midland Airways jet into shutting down the wrong engine, causing the crash Sunday that killed 44 people and injured 82.

"It points to a possibly spurious warning being given to the flight deck," said Freddie Yetman, technical secretary of the British Airline Pilots Association.

In the United States, the Federal Aviation Administration late Wednesday similarly gave U.S. airlines three days to check cross-wiring on 300 Boeing 737s. "We think this is not a very likely scenario, but it's a check that can be done very, very quickly without disrupting service," said FAA spokesman John Leyden.

"We certainly believe it's a prudent measure to go out and check to make sure there's nothing wrong with the fleet," Boeing spokesman Craig Martin said in Seattle. "But certainly this precautionary measure does not imply there has been any cause identified" for the crash.

British investigators said the starboard engine and its warning systems had to be examined minutely and detailed evidence taken from the pilot and co-pilot before the reason for the shutdown would be known.

Pilot Kevin Hunt, who broke his back in the crash, was questioned for 45 minutes by investigators on Wednesday.

The Air Line Pilots Association said there wasn't "a shred of evidence" for such speculation and British Midland Chairman Michael Bishop denounced the "rush to judgment" without all the facts.

The new Boeing 737-400, flying only on the fire-damaged port engine, crashed on the embankment of England's main north-south M1 highway about a half-mile short of East Midlands Airport, where it was trying to make an emergency landing.

The Department of Transport's Air Accidents Investigation Branch issued a statement saying "evidence obtained early in the investigation indicated that both the port and starboard engines might have suffered a related failure."

It confirmed the port engine caught fire while the starboard engine "revealed no evidence of fire as was reported by the crew in their radio transmissions." The port engine was undergoing an urgent and detailed examination to determine what caused the fire, it said.

The Air Accidents Investigation Branch made two safety recommendations that were approved hours later by the Civil Aviation Authority:

- More frequent engine inspections be required on 37 Boeing 737-300 and 737-400 airplanes in Britain with U.S.-French CFM56 engines as well as four Airbus A320 planes which have similar engines.
- The fire-overheat and vibration monitoring circuitry on the engines of Boeing 737-400s and Boeing 737-300s be examined for "left-right engine sense."

Try your hand at noteholders

Crafts

By APRIL BAIL

My body would like to be a teenager again, but my emotions consider themselves lucky to have survived the ordeal.

If I am going to regress, I think I'd rather go on back to toddlerhood, when just about everything was new and exciting.

The simplest things can ignite a young child's curiosity and interest. I remember the first time I saw a magnet — an entire new realm of activities opened for me.

And the fascination continues. My refrigerator is covered with notes, lists, recipes, telephone numbers, sometimes even money. If it weren't for the magnetic noteholders that the kids helped me make, our family couldn't function!

You can, of course, purchase magnets for next to nothing at the dime store or flea market. But making decorative fabric holders for small bar magnets is a terrific project to do with your children.

Color can be added with markers, acrylic paints or embroidery, according to the ages and interests of the kids (or yourself). The noteholders make great bazaaar items as well.

If you would like full-size patterns for eight different magnet covers (mushrooms, flower basket, daisy, owl, butterfly, frog, dove and puppy), you may order our plans.

They include a materials list and step-by-step instructions for cutting, decorating and assembly. Also included are patterns and instructions for a family of kitchen chickens, which can be used on tea towels or made into a quilted wall hanging or a dishwasher "clean" sign.

To order the plans, specify Project No. 424 and send $4.95. If you'd like our catalog, which includes $16 worth of discount coupons, add $2.95.

Mail your order to: Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000.

These magnetic noteholders are small enough to be made from scraps of fabric that you have on hand.

The designs I use are between 2x3 and 3x4 inches in overall size. Draw or trace the designs you are going to use onto fabric scraps, making sure there is room for a seam allowance of about 1/2 inch all the way around.

Cut out a front and back piece for each noteholder. Decorate the front piece, which has the design drawn on it, using laundry or fabric markers, acrylic paints or embroidery.

A nice way to finish, once the colors have dried, is to outline the design and go over the details with a narrow black marker.

When the front is thoroughly dry, press it on the wrong side with a steam iron. Sew the front and back together along the seam line, right sides together, leaving an opening for turning.

Clip the curves and corners and turn right side out. Slip a small bar magnet inside. Topstitch through both layers of fabric around the magnet, to hold it in place.

Turn the seam allowances to the inside along the remaining open portion of the seam and whipstitch closed.

Woman says 'rich' seniors don't really need discounts

DEAR ABBY: "Not There Yet" wrote of his resentment at being asked if he was entitled to a senior citizen's discount since he is only middle-aged.

I resent those discounts for another reason: In case you are not aware of it, senior citizens are the richest group in our population, and it appears that they are going to stay that way.

Why should a senior citizen get a 10 percent discount on drugs, forcing the less well-off single mother of an ill child to pay 110 percent of the cost of the drugs she needs?

If stores gave 10 percent discounts to blonds or red-haired people, this practice would be seen for what it is, and a quick halt would be brought to its use.

The worst example can be seen at our national parks where seniors in their multi-thousand-dollar RVs get into parks free, while the less affluent vacationers must pay up to $25 a year for a pass — all the while the parks are desperate for money. These parks may not even be there for my old age and my children's because of the heavy use they are getting now.

It's just not fair.

CHRISTINE
IN ALBUQUERQUE

DEAR CHRISTINE: Begging your pardon, but where did you

Dear Abby

get the idea that our senior citizens are "the richest group in our population"? Please tell us where they are stashing their wealth, and about 10 million people of that group will begin a treasure hunt.

DEAR ABBY: I am a senior citizen, and the letter in your column signed "Not There Yet" made me absolutely furious! He or she wrote: "I, and many of my friends, have had days spoiled by that obnoxious question: 'Are you a senior citizen?' (Gag me with a cane!)"

The obvious hostility against senior citizens in that letter was very upsetting. I infer from the writer's comments that he or she feels that senior citizens are obnoxious or something on the level of a criminal.

My, how times and values have changed. When I was a child, older people were held in high esteem. According to "Not There Yet," aging is something to be ashamed of. "Not There" suggests that the best way to end the "prying practice" of asking if a person is a senior is to refuse to patronize establishments where they routinely ask such disgusting questions, and be sure to let the management know why.

How insulting! I think "Not There Yet" should have been signed ... "Not All There."

74 AND "ALL THERE"
IN RANCHO MIRAGE

DEAR ABBY: Just a note to "Not There Yet," who is unhappy with clerks who ask if she is entitled to a senior citizen's discount: If that depresses you, just wait until they give you a discount without even asking. That will be a real day-spoiler. By then you will be delighted to have them ask you.

JEAN WARD,
SUN CITY, ARIZ.

Montana has nothing but praise for 49ers' offensive line.

Spotlight on 49er line

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — After being the subject of occasional ridicule for the past several years, the San Francisco 49ers' offensive line is enjoying the spotlight on the eve of the Super Bowl.

In the wake of two impressive playoff performances, quarterback Joe Montana had nothing but praise this week for his linemen.

"We asked a lot of our offensive line in these last two games," he said. "We said before the Chicago game that it would be decided up front. After the game, people look at the statistics of the quarterback and the receivers and they forget what we said going in."

"We got those statistics because our offensive line did its job," Montana continued. "They've been criticized a lot the last few years and this season. Now they deserve the praise."

In the team's last three ventures into the playoffs, the offensive line was blasted by powerful defensive fronts, but those disasters only serve to make this year's showing the surprise of the playoff season.

As the team finished another light practice Thursday, Coach Bill Walsh said he was pleased.

Walsh is hopeful cornerback Eric Wright, battling a chronic groin injury, and linebacker Riki Ellison, recovering from a pinched nerve, will be ready for the game.

Much of the attention now is on the 49ers' offensive line.

In an earlier incarnation, the line was a finesse outfit that only had to block for a millisecond or two until Montana lined up his shot and let it go.

But since 1983, teams have been concentrating on getting the quarterback instead of blanketing receivers. To counter the trend, teams got bigger men to protect their quarterbacks.

For several seasons, Walsh worked to build both force and finesse into his offensive line. After a second consecutive playoff loss to the New York Giants, he used two of his top 1987 draft choices to get big offensive linemen Harris Barton and Jeff Bregel.

More fine tuning resulted in the line that by the end of the 1988 season was good. Particularly good on the move. But against the pass, the line was inconsistent and gave up 47 sacks, including nine in the regular-season finale against the Los Angeles Rams.

The first-round playoff game against Minnesota was a different story. Steve Wallace virtually erased defensive end Chris Doleman. Jesse Sapola and Guy McIntyre took turns fending off tackle Keith Millard. And Randy Cross had a good day against Henry Thomas.

Wyche 'Super Sam' to Bengal fans

CINCINNATI (AP) — A billboard near the entrance to the Cincinnati Bengals' workout site reflects the city's newfound enthusiasm for its team and its coach.

"Super Team, Super Sam, Super Bowl," the sign proclaims in fluorescent orange.

One year ago, not many Bengals fans were calling Coach Sam Wyche super. His love of unorthodox play-calling and innovative tactics like the no-huddle offense had brought derision and calls for his head after a 4-11 season.

Now that he's going to the Super Bowl, all that has changed.

Billboards praise him. Fans cheer him. Players dump ice water on him after games. Suggestions that he might be in line for a coaching job somewhere else draw concern.

Quarterback Boomer Esiason sees the irony.

"Last year they wanted him fired. This year everybody wants to hire him," Esiason said Thursday. "Last year he was wicky-wacky, and this year he's a genius."

His innovations, like the quick snap and no-huddle offense, are being applauded as the wave of the future rather than sandlot gimmicks. Esiason wonders what will happen to Wyche's image if the Bengals win the Super Bowl with them.

"If we can win this one and do the no-huddle offense, he'll be the greatest of all time. He'll be better than Vince Lombardi," Esiason predicted. "If we lose it, it's well, they did too many gimmicks again."

Wyche's upturn in popularity was evident this week, when a newspaper report that he might retire after the season created a stir.

Wyche, in the final year of a five-year contract, has secured his job by taking the Bengals to their first Super Bowl in seven years. Earlier this season, he and his wife, Jane, contemplated leaving after the season when Wyche's contract was up.

"We did say at one time, 'OK, if at the end of the season we still feel the same way that we do that particular night, we won't feel bad about (leaving) because we'll have completed the obligations.'"

Streaking SuperSonics shoot down Mavericks

SEATTLE (AP) — Dale Ellis rediscovered his shooting touch and helped the Seattle SuperSonics retain their home court magic.

Ellis, who spent three largely fruitless seasons with Dallas before being traded to Seattle in 1986, bombarded the Mavericks with 36 points Thursday night as the Sonics won 130-95.

The hot-shooting Sonics outscored the Mavericks 70-48 after leading 60-47 at halftime for their twelfth straight victory in the Coliseum and sixth triumph in their last seven games.

"I enjoy playing well against those guys because I know them so well," said Ellis. "They gave up a lot of easy baskets, which is uncharacteristic of them."

No one was happier about his 15-of-21 shooting, including four of five three-pointers, than Seattle coach Bernie Bickerstaff.

"It was important for Dale to snap out of his shooting slump," Bickerstaff said.

After averaging 39.3 a game in three victories last week, Ellis had 17 each against Cleveland and Portland.

"Seventeen points isn't so bad, but when you shoot eight of 24, that's bad. I had to stay focused and concentrate on getting it done," said Ellis.

Center Alton Lister, who had 12 points, a season-high 17 rebounds, four assists and blocked five shots, said he and the rest of the team worked hard to get Ellis open.

"I was trying to set better picks to get him in better areas to score," Lister said.

Overall the Sonics shot 61 percent, hitting 53 of 87 from the floor, to 43 percent for the Mavericks, who sank 38 of 88. Dallas guard Rolando Blackman was held to four points, more than 16 below his average, on 2-of-12 shooting.

It was the sixth straight loss for the Mavericks and their worst to Seattle, eclipsing a 107-79 shellacking on Nov. 11, 1981.

Dallas coach John Macleod began waving a white towel with three minutes left in the game.

"That was surrender," Macleod said.

"You can't play like that and hide in this league," he added. "Seattle is a very good team. They had a tremendous effort, and they gave us an old-fashioned whipping."

The Sonics led 22-18 after a sluggish first quarter. Ellis had 23 points, Derrick McKey 11 and Xavier McDaniel 10 for Seattle in the first half.

Seattle broke the game open with a 21-5 run, building a 67-53 lead into an 88-58 bulge in the third quarter and led by as much as 117-77 in the final period.

McKey wound up with 19 points, McDaniel had 15 and Michael Cage had 17 points and seven rebounds.

Former University of Washington star Detlef Schrempf led Dallas with 24 points, and Mark Aguirre added 21.

"I like the way he (Schrempf) is coming along scoring and also pounding the boards," Macleod said.

Schrempf, who missed the first 12 games of the season with a stress fracture in his left leg, said the Sonics capitalized on Dallas mistakes.

The Sonics converted 18 Dallas turnovers into 27 points and used a 44-34 rebound advantage for numerous transition baskets.

"Seattle has a lot of talent," Schrempf said, "but we gave them lots of opportunities."

Wolfpack players pull together for troubled Valvano

College basketball

By The Associated Press

These troubled times, Jim Valvano is doing more listening than talking.

"My kids have been telling me things I've been telling them for 22 years. So far, they have been my support system," the usually effervescent coach said after No. 15 North Carolina State beat Coastal Carolina 97-69 Thursday night.

"(Brian D'Amico) gave me a hug after the game. Kelsey (Weems) told me to hang tough," Valvano said.

Valvano's concentration has been interrupted by charges, soon to be published in a book, of wrongdoing in the Wolfpack basketball program.

"The allegations are false. You're finding out part of that now," Valvano said. "Certainly it has been a major distraction, maybe more for me than for the kids."

The Wolfpack players have seen a difference in their coach.

"After Temple, he was really down," Chucky Brown said. "We just pulled him aside and told him we were behind him and supported him."

Brown scored 20 points as N.C. State easily defeated the visiting Chanticleers.

But No. 16 Kansas ran into problems at Miami. Joel Warren's foul shot with two seconds left enabled the Hurricanes to upset last season's national champions 87-86.

Miami ended the Jayhawks' 11-game winning streak with its first victory over a Top Twenty team since reinstating the basketball program four seasons ago.

"It was like in the movies — the kid that hardly ever scores gets in and makes one point to win the game," said Warren, a senior reserve. His first foul shot bounced off the rim before he swished the second try for his only point of the game.

Elsewhere, No. 2 Illinois swamped Wisconsin 103-90. No. 6 Michigan topped Wisconsin 98-83. No. 12 Arizona defeated Oregon State 85-64 and No. 20 Providence routed Central Connecticut State 105-56.

North Carolina State started out slowly, leading just 16-15 midway through the first half.

The Wolfpack eventually put together a 12-2 burst and went on to win its eighth straight game.

Avie Lester scored 15 points and D'Amico had 11 for N.C. State, 10-1. Richard Scantlebury had 20 points for Coastal Carolina, 4-8.

No. 2 Illinois 103, Wisconsin 80
Kendall Gill was 7-for-7 from the field, including four 3-pointers, and scored 19 points as Illinois beat visiting Wisconsin in the Big Ten.

The Illini, 14-0, defeated the Badgers for the 16th straight time. Illinois, trailing 25-24 late in the first half, took command with a 20-6 burst.

Nick Anderson scored 18 points for Illinois. Trent Jackson had 19 points for Wisconsin, 9-3.

No. 6 Michigan 96, Minnesota 83
Glen Rice scored 31 points and Rumeal Robinson had 24, leading Michigan past visiting Minnesota in the Big Ten.

Sean Higgins added 20 points for the Wolverines, 14-1. Higgins made a pair of 3-point shots during a 12-4 run as Michigan pulled away from a 50-all tie in the second half.

Willie Burton and Melvin Newbern scored 19 points each for the Golden Gophers, 8-4.

No. 12 Arizona 85, Oregon State 64
Anthony Cook scored 20 points and Jud Buechler

17 as Arizona overcame an early 11-point deficit and beat visiting Oregon State in the Pacific-10.

The Wildcats improved to 10-2 for the season and 5-1 in the Pac-10, while Oregon State dropped to 9-4 overall and 2-3 in the conference.

Miami 87, No. 16 Kansas 86
Warren was fouled as he attempted a layup. His first free throw bounced off the rim but he swished the second try.

Dennis Burns scored 25 points and Eric Brown had 23 points and 10 rebounds for Miami, 10-6.

Bryant takes Hope Classic lead

Three share second place

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PALM DESERT, Calif. — After four years of nagging injuries, financial struggle and professional frustration, Brad Bryant is back.

"I think I'm almost as good a player as I was before I got hurt," the 34-year-old Bryant said after taking the second-round lead Thursday in the $1 million Bob Hope Classic.

"I know my game has matured, that I have matured. Adversity makes you grow."

Bryant has had his share of that. Take 1984, for example.

"It wasn't a very good year. I was hurt three times. My father almost died. My wife almost died. But the only fatality was my golf game."

A shoulder injury at the PGA national championship, eventually requiring surgery in 1985, ushered in a four-year period in which Bryant didn't win enough money to cover expenses.

"We thought about doing something else," he said, "but it seemed like the Lord didn't want us to do anything else."

"We thought about teaching. We thought about a golf pro club job. We thought about opening a hunting camp."

But he stuck with competitive golf, playing the PGA Tour when and where he could, playing the mini-tours when he was healthy, staying home when he had to.

"In a way, they were good years," Bryant said. "I was home about five months each year. My wife and I got to spend a lot of time together. We lived almost like normal people."

With his injuries healed, he returned to part-time competition last year and recorded a couple of top-10 finishes late in the season. He then returned to the Tour School to regain, once again, his playing rights.

He finished second in the school.

"Now I'm back full time. It's like a second career for me. I feel like a rookie again," said Bryant, who had a 4-under-par 68 at Eldorado on Thursday. It provided him with a one-shot lead at 135 after two rounds of this five-day, 90-hole event.

"He deserves the 'gutsy' award after all he's been through and the way he's coming back," said Peter Jacobsen, one of Bryant's closest pursuers in this tournament that is scattered over four desert courses.

First-round leader Fred Couples, Blaine McCallister and Jim Benep shared second at 136.

McCallister had the best round of the tournament, a 66, at Indian Wells. Couples shot 71 and Benep 68, both at Eldorado.

Jacobsen was tied at 137 with Tom Kite, PGA champion Jeff Sluman and Paul Azinger.

Jacobsen and Kite each had an eagle during their rounds at Eldorado. Jacobsen holed out a 151-yard shot from the fairway on the fourth and Kite pitched in from 75 yards on the 13th. Kite had a second-round 69, Jacobsen a 70.

Azinger and Sluman each shot 68 at Indian Wells. Bryant plays PGA West today under the format calling for the 128 pros to play one round on each of the four courses before the field is cut for the pros-only final round on Sunday at Bermuda Dunes.

Breaking records: The beat goes on RECORDS ARE MADE to be broken, the old saying goes. And new ones are being invented every day so that more can be challenged.

Sacred Heart HS of Carbondale, Pa. recently broke the nation's longest basketball losing streak, 141 in a row dating back to Dec. 22, 1981. In the meanwhile they went through five head coaches in those seven winless seasons.

Class AA Poth down in South Texas finally lost a district girls basketball game after winning 76 in a row.

Sophomore Larry Minter at AA Big Sandy hit 18 straight free throws in one game (the record is 24). Longtime fans can recall Sam Condo hitting 42 straight over a series of games for the Harvies.

Clear Lake Coach Bill Krueger recently became the state's winningest boys coach with victory No. 897 (he's now over 900), while Berger's Duane Hunt captured his 541st coaching victory and No. 500 at Berger High. The most for any PHS head coach was the 321 notched by Clifton McNeely in a 13 year job, his only head coaching post, and it included four state crowns. (Has anyone in the school system found those silver trophies yet?)

And now, attention is to scoring records for the Green and Gold as 6-5 senior Dustin Miller is having a fine season. His 50-point performance against Dalhart in December was single game mark. Entering tonight's fray at Levelland, Miller has a varsity career total of 1,301 and would have to average 80 a game (unless Pampa gets into post-season) to top the three-year mark held by Mike Nelson. Nelson also owns the two-year top producer title, and Miller would have to average 40 per game the next 20 contests to overcome that record. The best chance seems to be the single season record of 723, set by Coyle Winborne, Jr. in 31 games of the 1983-84 campaign. Again, unless the season is extended, Miller needs about 26 per game to set a new standard, fewer if playoff games come along. Whether he reaches new scoring heights or not, Miller is having a great season as the floor leader of the District 1-4A unbeaten. And may it con-

Speaking of scorers, Jim Matson, son of Pampa's Olympic gold medalist and street namesake, is a senior at A&M Consolidated in District 21-4A. At 6-3, Jimbo is a versatile player who is used at all positions and can two-hand dunk, and is averaging 20 points per game, 12 rebounds and five assists as the Tigers are 16-2 after Tuesday night's win. Scoring leader on the team is 5-11 lefthanded guard Roosevelt Moore who is averaging 30 per game and had one 50-plus performance.

Consolidated is a scoring machine that presses and runs-and-shoots. They led Magnolia 70-20 at halftime, winning 117-45. And still to come in the family is 6-2 Cole, a ninth grader who can leap. He tallied 20 in half a game recently. Obviously the boys take after Dad, who many forget was also a fine basketball, leading PHS to a district crown his senior year, later to work in a season of SWC play at Texas A&M around his Olympic track performances. Matson still ranks high in virtually all scoring and rebounding marks at PHS.

"It would be great if Pampa and Consolidated could meet in the playoffs this year," Matson said Wednesday upon returning from a lengthy meeting in Washington, D.C. "But we've got Mayde Creek with that 7-footer in our district, and I hear Andrews has a fine team out in West Texas (the Antelopes beat Pampa in the Fort Worth holiday event.)" But upsets can occur, Randy, as you well know. West Texas State won one game the 1966-67 season, that over Texas A&M, a year after Mat-son's college basketball career was over. Still on that Aggie squad were two West Texas-all area all-stars, Ronnie Peret of Plainview and Dumas' Kelly Baker.

Nehlen voted top coach

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Don Nehlen enrolled at Bowling Green State University in 1955 on a football-basketball-baseball scholarship and thought he would study accounting.

In Nehlen's sophomore year, Doyt Perry arrived as football coach and everything changed.

"After six months of studying accounting, the only thing I knew was that I didn't want to be an accountant," Nehlen said Thursday upon being voted Kodak major-college Coach of the Year by the American Football Coaches Association for leading West Virginia to an 11-1 record and a No. 5 national ranking.

Nehlen went into coaching because of Perry, whose winning percentage of 85.5 (77 victories, 11 losses, 5 ties) trails only Notre Dame's Knute Rockne and Frank Leahy and is one of college football's best-kept secrets.

Texarkana sculptor teaches teachers how to use art in class

By ROBIN SCHILL
Texarkana Gazette

QUEEN CITY (AP) — Gesturing wildly with her arms, Texarkana sculptor Kay Thomas introduces her profession to middle school students.

"I'm Kay Thomas. Call me Kay. I'm an artist," she says. "I'm an artist teaching teachers how to teach art."

It's a task she doesn't take lightly. State art educators have chosen Queen City Independent School District as the model site to demonstrate art can be effectively used in every course.

Recently, Thomas was in a math class. The students made "metric monsters" with construction paper, glue and scissors that they will later diagram and measure on "creature growth charts." Sounds too much like fun to be learning? Wrong.

In the brief, funny, sometimes dramatic talk, Thomas introduces students to the different types of art, the elements of art and throws in a few terms and concepts to boot.

This is the second part of the Texas Commission on the Arts-sponsored Arts Education Initiative (AEI) piloted last year in six schools across the state.

"An art program can be workable and initiated in every classroom," Connie Stockard, AEI state coordinator, says.

Stockard and artists Thomas and Deborah J. Dobbins have fine-tuned a schedule and art program for Queen City schools, which will serve as the model of the state's art program.

Carroll Hall, a consultant with Zia Instructional Assessment in Albuquerque, N.M., is evaluating the local program's effectiveness in the classroom. He serves as a consultant for the state program. Pleasant Grove and Queen City elementary schools served as pilot program sites last year. Artists were actively involved in classroom instruction with students and taught teachers how to incorporate art in the classroom.

The initiative will aid school districts in complying with the Texas Education Agency's mandate to instruct pre-kindergarten through 12th grade students in the arts.

This year, Queen City has expanded its art program. Stockard said the Queen City students' scores on the Texas Education Assessment of Minimum Skills tests are rising, a fact she partially attributes to the art program.

Teachers from across the state are expected to observe the art program in action at Queen City and implement the program back in their districts. Texas is the first state to mandate a visual arts program for all public school students. "We are the first to say that art is as important as math, science or the language arts," Stockard said. "We were the first state to treat art as a basic."

Thomas will be teaching in Queen City two weeks a month. The sculptor will be assisted on occasion by Dobbins, who is a muralist.

Thomas said art may be integrated into math, science and language arts classes and she will provide samples of art lessons and lists of materials and resources needed to implement the program.

All three campuses — elementary, middle school and high school — will incorporate art into the regular classroom. Last year, the program was only initiated on the elementary level at Queen City, with other districts in the state being used as a pilot on the other grade levels.

SPS declares dividend, makes officer changes

AMARILLO — The board of directors of Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 55 cents per share on common stock and regular quarterly dividends on all series of preferred stock.

The dividend on common stock is payable March 1, 1989, to holders of record at the close of business Feb. 15, 1989. Dividends on preferred stocks are payable May 1, 1989, to holders of record at the close of business April 20, 1989.

The electric utility's board also announced officer changes, which include a transitional move resulting from the planned retirement later this year of SPS Chairman of the Board Bert Ballegee.

The board elected SPS President W.R. Esler to the additional post of chief executive officer, formerly held by Ballegee. Ballegee remains chairman of the board.

The SPS board also elected John L. Anderson as a vice president. He had been director of personnel. Anderson will have responsibility for the company's employee development programs, labor relations, insurance and related activities.

Separately, on Jan. 9, the boards of directors of SPS's two wholly owned subsidiaries — Utility Engineering Corporation and Quixx Corporations — made several office changes.

Each board elected Esler as its chairman, replacing Ballegee, who remains a member of the boards of directors of the subsidiaries.

Albert A. "Pete" Smith has been elected president and chief executive officer of Utility Engineering, of which he had been vice president and chief operating officer.

Utility Engineering provides design, engineering and construction-supervision services to a variety of companies. Its recent projects include two power plants for other electric utilities in Texas and a bus-manufacturing facility in New Mexico.

Monroe "Hub" Floyd, who had been president and chief executive officer of Utility Engineering, becomes vice chairman of the board of Utility Engineering. Additionally, he has been elected president and chief executive officer of Quixx.

Quixx provides telecommunications and data-processing services and finances the sale of heat pumps to consumers.

"The increasing activity and responsibility of the two subsidiaries makes these moves appropriate," Ballegee said. "Quixx will benefit from the experienced leadership of Mr. Floyd, who helped launch Utility Engineering to the success it is now enjoying. Utility Engineering is poised to build upon its fine record under the direction of Mr. Smith, who has been a key officer in the subsidiary since its beginning."

SPS Vice President of Marketing Gary Gibson, who had been serving also as president and chief executive officer of Quixx, will remain as director of the subsidiary.

"Mr. Gibson successfully guided the growth of Quixx to a stage where Quixx needs a full-time chief executive," Ballegee said. "This change will allow him to devote greater effort to the expanding marketing activities of the parent company. However, by Mr. Gibson's remaining on the Quixx board, his marketing expertise will continue to be an asset to the subsidiary."

SPS is a regional electric utility that provides service to a population of about one million people in a 52,000-square-mile area of the South Plains and Panhandle of Texas, eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the Panhandle of Oklahoma and southwestern Kansas. Corporate headquarters is in Amarillo.
