Black motorcyclist's death triggers Miami riot

By MICHAEL WARREN
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A riot that began with the death of a black motorcyclist as he fled police ended six hours later with cars and a store ablaze and the Overtown section sealed off, but sporadic gunfire and looting continued today.

Mayor Xavier Suarez declared the situation in the predominantly black neighborhood under control early today.

The riot occurred on the night of the federal holiday for slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. and as national attention was focused on the city as the host of Sunday's Super Bowl. It also rekindled memories of Miami riots in the early 1980s.

"It just exploded," said City Commissioner Rosario Kennedy as she prepared to enter the 1½-square-mile area with a police escort. "People have been celebrating Martin Luther King's birthday all day. Maybe they were drunk. We just don't know."

The riot was triggered by the motorcyclist's death Monday night as he was chased for an alleged traffic violation, said Sgt. Michael Mazur, a police spokesman.

At least two officers were pursuing the motorcycle, and one of the officers fired a shot, police said. The motorcycle crashed into a moving car, killing the cycle's 21-year-old driver, police said. His 24-year-old brother, who was a passenger, was in critical condition today, said Jackson Memorial Hospital officials.

Police refused to say whether the dead motorcyclist was hit by the bullet.

Within minutes, at least 100 blacks began throwing rocks and bottles at police, who called for reinforcements. About 125 officers cordoned off the area.

Four people, including one police officer, were treated for cuts and minor injuries, said Jackson Hospital spokesman Tony Fallon.

The mob set two cars and an auto parts store on fire. The store burned to the ground after firefighters were shot at and had to leave the area, said Mazur.

WCIX-TV reporter Lourdes Ruiz-Toledo, who had gotten out of her car earlier, said she feared for her life.

"All of a sudden they threw a big huge rock right on the side of the driver. I blocked it with my elbow. They were yelling 'Get that white woman out of the car!'" the 27-year-old reporter said.

Miss Ruiz-Toledo, who had stayed in her car while two colleagues got out, said she drove a block and was rescued by an officer who led her from the car behind a plastic riot shield. The car was later burned.

WINZ radio reporter Doug Phillips said he had to abandon his car, which was also burned.

A woman driving home from work said her windshield was shattered by a 5-pound concrete block.

Now there's a geography bee

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

It may never replace the national spelling bee in terms of popularity, but the National Geography Bee is just as intent on making learning about geography as competitive as learning to spell p-h-y-s-i-o-g-r-a-p-h-y.

The contest, for which preliminary rounds were held Monday afternoon at Pampa Middle School, is in its first year.

Richard Williams, a 6th-grade student at PMS, outlasted 23 other local 6th through 8th graders and won the bee. He will now take a written geography test. If he finishes in the top 100 in the state, he will be eligible to compete for the state championship.

State winners will compete in the national finals May 18-19 in Washington, D.C.

Williams competed with another 6th-grader, Michael Griffith, in the semifinals, eventually answering a question that Griffith missed, plus a "championship question" to claim first place.

His final two questions were:

"What two countries administer the Panama Canal?" and "Who was the first person to circumnavigate the world?"

Williams correctly answered "The United States and Panama" and "Magellan."

Questions throughout the competition ranged from "What do the letters U.S.S.R. stand for?" (Union of Soviet Socialist Republics) to "What is the area just above the tree line called?" (tundra).

Students competed in a practice round before the competition began. After each actual round, students who incorrectly answered their question were eliminated.

The contest is sponsored by National Geographic World magazine. Officials with the magazine and National Geographic Society said they decided to sponsor the contest after endorsing a nine-country survey by the Gallup Poll on basic geographic knowledge.

The study found that people in the United States, ages 18-24, know less about geography than young people in each of the eight other countries surveyed.

Williams will take the state-qualifying test on Jan. 30. If he finishes in the top 100 around the state, he will then move to the state competition on April 7.

The National Geographic Society has dedicated itself to the study of the planet earth and its inhabitants. According to figures released by the Society, it currently has more than 11 million members around the world.

National Geographic celebrated its centennial in 1988.

Besides the National Geography Bee, the Society is working on a number of other geography education initiatives, including the Summer Geography Institute for teachers, the National Geographic Society Education Foundation and the Geographic Alliance Network, which currently involves 28 states.

The winner of the National Geography Bee competition will be presented with a $25,000 college scholarship to the school of his or her choice. The second-place winner will win a $15,000 scholarship, and the third-place winner will receive a $10,000 scholarship. The seven other finalists in the top 10 will each receive $700 cash.

Gas leak disaster averted

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Efforts by local emergency workers averted what could have been a serious disaster late Monday when an oil well on the west edge of the city began emitting deadly hydrogen sulfide gases.

Residents of three nearby homes were notified that they were in a dangerous zone by Gray County Sheriff's deputies and Pampa Fire Department personnel shortly before 10 p.m. Monday while firefighters attempted to cap the well.

Steve Vaughn, director of emergency management, said a strong smell was reported to the Pampa Police Department at about 9:40 p.m. Monday.

Firefighters called to the scene determined the smell was coming from an oil well owned by Cuyahoga Exploration & Development Co. located in the 500 block of Baer, one block east of Price Road, Vaughn said.

Hydrogen sulfide gas, a deadly gas which smells strongly of sulphur or rotten eggs, was found to be coming from the well. Vaughn said firefighters measured the gas at the well head at 120 parts per million. Hydrogen sulfide can be fatal at 20 parts per million, he said.

Gray County Sheriff Jim Free and Firefighter Kelly Randall, a hazardous materials specialist, coordinated the notification of area residents affected by the dangerous gas leak, Vaughn said.

As the homeowners were being told of the danger, Training Officer John Cook and Firefighter Tony Dehosse donned air packs and entered the danger zone to cap the well. They first used a rubber cap for the well, Vaughn said.

After consulting with a representative of the Texas Railroad Commission, the two firemen returned to the well head and capped it with a "bull plug" that the RRC officials said would not blow off if pressure built up underneath it, he said.

Vaughn said firefighters cleared the scene at 11:23 p.m. after determining there was no longer any danger from the oil well.

Justice report says Meese violated federal ethics standards

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General Edwin Meese III violated federal ethics standards by acting at the request of a friend to assist scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. and a proposed $1 billion Middle East oil pipeline, a Justice Department report concluded today.

"There are three instances in which friendship between Meese and longtime friend E. Robert Wallach 'dictated government action,' said the report issued by the Justice Department.

The report concluded that Meese engaged in "conduct which should not be tolerated of any government employee, especially not the attorney general."

If Meese were still attorney general, "we would recommend (to the next ranking department official) that the president take disciplinary action," it said.

"As a direct result of the preferential, improper efforts of Meese and his staff, the Army" awarded a $32 million engine-building contract to Wedtech in 1982 while Meese was counselor to President Reagan, said the report by the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility.

The next year, it said, "Meese and his staff injected themselves ... as a direct result of the friendship between Wallach and Meese" into a financial problem Wedtech was having with the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration.

At the urging of Wallach, Meese tried to help clear up the problem Wedtech was having by making a phone call to then-Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, the report said. Meese's intervention is "precisely" the type of activity that is prohibited by a federal executive order spelling out ethical standards for federal employees, it said.

On the pipeline, Meese, again at Wallach's urging, arranged a meeting in 1985 for Wallach and his client, Swiss oilman Bruce Rappaport, with then-White House national security adviser Robert McFarlane in an attempt to help secure an insurance package that would support the project, the report said.

The Office of Professional Responsibility also found that Meese violated the executive order on ethics and the Justice Department's own standards of conduct by failing to file his 1985 federal income tax return on a timely basis.

It also said Meese violated ethics standards by participating in official matters involving the regional Bell Telephone companies while he held some $14,000 in telecommunications stock.

Meese said last July he had been "completely vindicated" by the decision of independent counsel James C. McKay not to seek an indictment against him. McKay found Meese had probably violated federal conflict-of-interest and tax laws, but he said prosecution was not appropriate.

"We trust that this analysis will lay to rest the claims by Mr. Meese that the appropriate standard for official behavior is whether an independent counsel seeks an official's indictment," the report said.

"We found that the independent counsel's report far from vindicates Mr. Meese; rather, it details conduct which should not be tolerated of any government employee, especially not the attorney general of the United States."

The investigators said that if Meese were still attorney general, "we would recommend (to the next ranking department official) that the president take disciplinary action." It did not specify what action would be appropriate.

The Justice Department said in a statement that because Meese is no longer associated with the department, no further disciplinary action is warranted in connection with matters raised in the report.

In a statement, the department said Attorney General Dick Thornburgh has reviewed and accepted the report and considers the matter closed.

Thornburgh addressed the portion of the report that found that Meese had violated the executive order and the department's standards of conduct by participating in matters involving the Bell companies while holding stock in them.

"It appears to me that Mr. Meese's failure to fully dispose of his financial interest in the regional Bell operating companies resulted from a failure to obtain or act upon adequate legal advice rather than an intent to violate ethical standards," said Thornburgh.

In a 16-page statement prepared in response to the report, Meese's lawyers contend that "there is absolutely no basis for criticizing his conduct."

Soviet press gives respectful farewell to President Reagan

By JOHN THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — President Reagan, once referred to as a lunatic and Nazi by the Soviet media, got a respectful farewell from a government newspaper that credited him for helping to forge warmer superpower ties.

Another leading Soviet newspaper gave a glowing portrait Monday of Secretary of State George P. Shultz, calling him "one of the architects of the turning point in Soviet-U.S. relations."

"Of course, Reagan has remained Reagan, the anti-communist and the troubadour of Western society," the government newspaper Izvestia said Monday in a front-page article. "But the restructuring of international relations could not bypass the White House."

In 1984, Reagan quipped into an open microphone that he would begin bombing the Soviet Union in five minutes. In the last days of his presidency, however, Soviets recall not those "five minutes" but his five summit meetings with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Izvestia newspaper said.

"And this is not because we have short memories, but because a long road lies ahead of us, which we can only overcome together," wrote Izvestia's Melor Sturua, a former U.S.-based correspondent.

Pravda, the Communist Party daily, carried an extraordinarily intimate profile of Shultz, Reagan's secretary of state since July 1982.

In the recent warming between the superpowers, Pravda said, "Shultz's realism had a telling effect, as well as his sober recognition of the fact that in the nuclear age, the self-preservation of our two countries can be guaranteed only by the avenues of dialogue."

Pravda also told its readers that the U.S. secretary of state is a father of five, an experienced gourmet cook, an ardent golf and tennis player and an avid devotee of ballroom dancing — surprising revelations in a country where most citizens know virtually nothing about the lives of their own leaders.

Pravda did make one barbed criticism of Shultz in its profile of the outgoing Cabinet member, saying he had been keener than former U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to send U.S. troops "to different corners of the planet to defend American interests."

It also said his Middle East policy had been a flop, but that it was necessary to pay Shultz "his due" for recognizing in the 11th hour of the Reagan presidency that it was time to begin a dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In his eight years as president, Reagan has been labeled a "lunatic" by the official Tass news agency in 1983, and likened by Pravda to a Nazi, an explosive comparison in a country that lost 20 million people in World War II.

The state-run media also made much of Reagan's own harshest comments, such as his March 1983 description of the Soviet Union as "an evil empire" and his quip the following year about launching a bombing attack.

The official image of Reagan began to warm with the coming of the 1985 Geneva summit, and with changes made in both domestic and foreign policy by Gorbachev, named Communist Party chief in March 1985.

"Without our 'perestroika' (restructuring), there would have been no 'perestroika' of Reagan," Izvestia said Monday. "New political thinking and a new world view dictated our 'docking' together."

"During his eight years in the White House, Ronald Reagan recognized this," the newspaper said.

Texas' liability laws frightening manufacturers, economist says

AUSTIN (AP) — Consumer interests are voicing skepticism over a new study that showed business fears over the Texas liability law system are costing the state jobs and money.

Economist M. Ray Perryman of Waco released his study on Monday, saying the current civil justice system had cost Texas 79,361 jobs and more than $8 billion in recent years.

"While the major announcements of new (business) activity are trumpeted with tremendous fanfare, the liability law system is ... quietly negating these gains," Perryman's report said.

The survey was done for the Texas Civil Justice League, a pro-business organization. The group's executive vice president, Ralph Wayne, said it will ask the Legislature for changes in the liability laws this year.

But a lawyer who represents consumers disagreed with the study and said the changes being sought aren't needed.

"This is simply another greedy grab with an attempt to manufacture a crisis where there is none. This will be fought by all consumer groups," said Joe Longley, a former chairman of the consumer law committee of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association.

"This so-called study is interesting for what it doesn't show," Longley said. "It's interesting to see that the manufacturers who they claim might be moving from Texas are not ceasing to do business in Texas" where they still would be covered by the state consumer-protection laws.

Perryman said his survey of manufacturers and industrial recruiters found worries over the fairness, equity and predictability of the liability laws in Texas, including the Deceptive Trade Practices Act, product liability and workers' compensation system.

"The negative economic impact caused by the costs associated with the current liability law system in Texas was greater than the combined positive direct and indirect impact of Sematech, the super collider, Fujitsu, Formosa Plastics and GTE," his study said.

According to Perryman:
■ Some 3,200 Texas manufacturers, employing 340,000 workers, claimed to be considering ending manufacturing operations in Texas, moving to another state or both.

■ About 30,000 Texans have lost jobs due to layoffs in which liability costs were cited as an "important consideration."

■ Three thousand manufacturers decided not to introduce a product because of liability considerations, while 1,500 discontinued a product.

Boot tracks lead to men's arrest

CANADIAN — A set of boot tracks recently led to the arrest of two men suspected of burglarizing the Trading Post in Canadian. And, strangely enough, police say a hydraulic jack taken in the burglary belonged to one of the suspects.

O.G. Riley, owner of The Trading Post, located on the community's main thoroughfare, reported his business was burglarized last Wednesday. Someone had broken the front window, entered the building, and taken a number of items valued at $1,165.

Included in the theft were five new chain saws, a circular saw, firearms, knives and tools.

Investigating officers Sgt. Doug Tennant and Patrolman Dennis Chavira of the Canadian Police Department noticed boot prints in the sand near the building. They followed the prints to a trailer home next door to the business. Hurriedly they photographed the prints that were rapidly being swept away by a brisk Panhandle wind.

Officers located the owner of the trailer home who lived outside of Canadian and at the same time found the trailer's resident who was visiting the owner. A search of the trailer revealed a number of the stolen items, according to Canadian Police Chief Phil Taylor. Three of the stolen chain saws were found hidden under an abandoned black and white Dodge police car that was used for flood control on the banks of Red Deer Creek, he said.

Arrested in connection with the burglary were "Indian Jim" London, 29, and Robert Canada, 35. The two men were arraigned before Justice of Peace Frankie Hill on charges of burglary of business. Bond was set at $10,000 each. Both men remained in Hemphill County jail today in lieu of bond.

Taylor said that at the time of their arrests the two men were free on bond on charges stemming from the December burglary of a Lipscomb County liquor store.

Ironically, among the items reported stolen in the burglary was a hydraulic jack that London had reportedly taken to Riley to secure a $10 loan, the police chief said. The jack was also recovered with the other stolen merchandise, he said.

Border Patrol praises its dogs

EL PASO (AP) — Fourteen keen-nosed Border Patrol dogs are en route to sniffing their way into the record books, officials say.

The dogs are trained to sniff out drugs and people hidden in vehicles. Last year, the canines helped set a record for drug seizures in the Border Patrol's El Paso sector, and the Border Patrol appears to be on the road to setting another record this fiscal year.

In the year ending last Sept. 30, the Border Patrol recorded 908 drug seizures in the sector, which comprises West Texas and southern New Mexico. In the first 3 1/2 months of the 1989 fiscal year, the sector has made 421 seizures of drugs valued at $138 million. Sixteen of those seizures, worth $1.1 million, were made last weekend alone.

Sniffer dogs detected most of the drugs and are responsible for the rise in seizures and arrests over the past year, said Gus De La Vina, chief deputy of the Border Patrol's El Paso sector.

"The dogs have been extremely productive for us," he said. "We started out with them a year and ago and initially they were a hit."

One of those hits is Rex, a Belgian malinois who discovered 84 pounds of marijuana his first day on the job at a Border Patrol highway checkpoint. But the dog is capable of finding much smaller amounts.

One day, Rex alerted his handler, Ray Sanchez Jr., to a suitcase after other agents had opened it, searched and found no drugs.

"I told them to look again," Sanchez said. "They opened it, took out all the clothes and found one marijuana seed in the bottom."

"His sense of smell is amazing. I know now if something's there — no matter how it's hidden — he's going to get it."

In his three years with the Border Patrol before he got Rex, Sanchez made one drug bust. In the year since he began handling the dog, he has made about 100 drug seizures.

Rex and two other dogs began working for the Border Patrol's El Paso sector in December 1987. Now 14 dogs work the sector, which covers West Texas and southern New Mexico. The Border Patrol wants to add at least 10 dogs to the El Paso sector this year; each dog costs about $8,000.

Besides detecting smuggled drugs and people, the dogs are trained to lead search and rescue missions. Last summer, Border Patrol dogs were used to find survivors under the rubble of a department store collapse in Brownsville.

Sometimes finding hidden aliens is a potential rescue in itself: the dogs have found dozens of people hiding in railroad boxcars.

"It takes so much time and effort for agents to search trains on their own," Sanchez said. "With Rex, I just walk him along the track and wait for him to hit on a car."

But drug-sniffing is the dogs' primary role. Officials believe traffickers have switched drug routes from Florida to the relatively unprotected Southwest.

"You've got an alarming situation with the drug traffic here," De La Vina said. "The dogs' performances have put a dent in drug trafficking, said M.S. Dudley, director of the El Paso canine program.

Mattox says insurance board and industry getting too cozy

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says insurance companies and the board charged with regulating the industry have become so cozy that "it's a question of who's in charge."

"We need to end that" or the insurance industry could go the way of failing banks and thrifts in the state, Mattox said.

"We may very well be seeing the same thing happen in the insurance industry that we've seen happen in the banking and savings and loan industry," Mattox said. "But the problem that exists is, the insurance industry is not fully insured by the federal government, which can cause us major problems if we see these companies going down."

"Many, many companies still have people actively working with them that we know are scoundrels and should not be in the industry and should be stopped," Mattox said at a news conference Monday.

Mattox also said if State Board of Insurance members do not step up their process for taking control of troubled insurance companies, "the call for their resignation may very well come within a relatively short period of time."

The Insurance Board called Mattox's comments "unfortunate" and "regrettable."

"Texas clearly is not facing an insurance solvency crisis, and Mr. Mattox is not serving the public by suggesting that one is imminent," the board said in a statement. "It is easy for Mr. Mattox to make criticisms based on inadequate knowledge of insurance regulation and the workings of the State Board of Insurance."

In another development, Lee Powell told The Dallas Morning News in a copyright story in Monday's editions that he will leave his post as acting deputy insurance commissioner in charge of financial regulation because "we do not regulate the insurance companies, the companies regulate us."

As a result of lax enforcement, "I don't see that we've ever taken any action until the condition of a company is terminal or near terminal," said Powell.

Mattox noted that National County Mutual Fire Insurance Co. — under a deficit of more than $50 million — recently collapsed and was declared insolvent. He said that was not an isolated incident.

"We have seen the insurance industry be an industry that at times has attracted scoundrels," Mattox said. He said there are "a number of scoundrels" among the 75 to 125 potentially troubled companies the Insurance Board is monitoring.

He said his office had been waiting a month for insurance board approval to go to court against a troubled company, Texas Insurance Co. of Houston, a major carrier of medical malpractice insurance, including coverage for blood banks.

"Just a glance at those public records should have been a red flag to regulators. But where was the state board? Totally in the dark," Mattox said.

He said the company, which was brought to his attention by Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, "has ties to questionable insurers and its assets appear insufficient on the face of publicly available financial statements."

Foster Brewer, company board chairman, said, "We don't know what he (Mattox) is talking about. I think Mr. Mattox is a good attorney general and a good man ... I trust him but his information is not correct. We don't even know what the war's about."

Brewer said liability insurance represented a small percentage of Texas Insurance's coverage, and if the insurance board had found anything wrong, it would have said, "Shut them down."

"We are in sound financial condition," he said.

The board said the company and the agency that writes most of its business are undergoing financial and market conduct examinations.

"Once these examinations are finished, the board and commissioner will have a firm basis for whatever actions must be taken," the board said.

The 41 Texas domestic insurance companies in receivership represent 5 percent of the total of Texas-based insurance companies, the board said. It said it hopes development of an "Early Warning System" will make the percentage of Texas receiverships even smaller.

As a result of the 1987 Legislature removing the attorney general's authority as an insurance watchdog, Mattox said, it should either beef up the public counsel office or give back to the attorney general the authority "to protect the insurance-buying public."

Mattox said he would also ask the Legislature to:

- Form a special House-Senate committee "to investigate the ongoing scandals within the industry and the lack of regulation" by the Insurance Board.

- Allow the attorney general to sue insurance companies for deceptive trade practices without board approval.

- Repeal partial exemptions for the insurance industry from antitrust laws.

- Provide state regulation of the reinsurance industry.

- Make public the financial status of insurance companies through quarterly reports.

"Publicizing financial problems before the SBI could place a company into rehabilitation would invite a 'run on the bank' that could seriously jeopardize any changes of recovery," the board said.

It also said Mattox's proposal to regulate reinsurers "overlooks the fact that reinsurers must satisfy financial security arrangements imposed by the Texas Insurance Code and that SBI examiners routinely review reinsurance treaties."

Texans celebrate King's spirit with parades and speeches

By The Associated Press

The largest Texas commemoration of the holiday honoring slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. brought about 15,000 people from four directions to a San Antonio plaza, with other parades and marches statewide.

In the Alamo City, marchers gathered at sites up to four miles away from Martin Luther King Jr. Plaza, then met at noon Monday for speeches by city leaders and Numonde Ngubo, a representative of the Black African Miners from South Africa and United Mine Workers of America End Apartheid in South Africa.

A resolution on the "joyous yet solemn occasion" commemorating the life "of one of the most influential men of the 20th century, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr." was adopted Monday by the Texas Senate.

The Senate's two blacks — Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-

Dallas, and Craig Washington, D-Houston — were co-sponsors.

"Probably Dr. King was one of the greatest friends of this nation and this world, for he fought for the rights of all while teaching to love all at all times," said Johnson.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, and Johnson have filed legislation to make King's birthday an official state holiday. State agencies were open while federal and many municipal and county workers had the day off.

Most Texas colleges were open as were some school districts.

Legislators, during their last session, made King's birthday an "optional" holiday for state employees, allowing them to observe it in lieu of another state optional holiday.

The state should make King's birthday a full holiday, said Washington, suggesting it be combined with another optional holiday, Confederate Heroes'

Day, celebrated Jan. 19.

"I know that my colleagues on this side of the rotunda have the courage to combine Confederate who love freedom," said Washington.

After giving students the day off last January, the Corpus Christi Independent School District voted in March to drop the King birthday and Memorial Day from the list of school holidays.

But CCISD officials, responding to protests of local black leaders, voted to compromise and hold class Monday, dismissing students two hours earlier than usual.

"But rather than take a holiday, the district decided to have a regular day and early dismissal so kids could participate in any community activities going on," Chris Garcia, CCISD information officer, said.

In an hour-long demonstration organized by the NAACP, about 50 people marched outside the Grand Prairie school district office, said police. The district held classes Monday.

"There was a small opposition group but they stayed across the street," said Grand Prairie police Sgt. Ron Meine. "Everything was quite orderly."

Police did not identify the opposition group, said Meine.

In Houston, a parade moved through downtown and various church services and vigils were organized throughout the city.

A parade down Martin Luther King Drive in Dallas was led by the Wilmer-Hutchins High School marching band.

In Beaumont, ground was broken Sunday for the third phase of MLK Parkway, a $50 million highway construction project scheduled for completion in 1992.

Last week, the El Paso stretch of War Road, which links the city to the headquarters of White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico, was renamed in honor of King.

Woman shot at day care center

PLANO (AP) — A woman who was mortally wounded at a day care center provided information about her assailant before she died, police said.

"We know who he is, we are getting warrants for his arrest and we are looking all over for him," Jon Giddings, a police investigator and public information officer in this North Dallas suburb said Monday night.

An arrest warrant has been issued for a 30-year-old Plano man, police said.

Police said Laurie Lee Newman, 25, of Richardson, was wounded Monday afternoon, then drove to a nearby bowling alley to seek assistance. She died later at a Plano hospital of a gunshot wound to the right side.

Giddings said he could not give further details about the search, but a witness said the gunman followed Ms. Newman to the bowling alley before fleeing as a crowd of people rushed to her assistance.

Police were first called to the Plano Super Bowl, the bowling alley to which Ms. Newman had driven about one-half mile from her attacker, said Luis Benavides, bowling alley manager.

"She drove to La Petite Academy at 4:30 p.m. to pick up her two children," Giddings said in a statement. "When she pulled into the parking lot, the suspect pulled up directly in front of her, exited his vehicle and began firing a large-caliber handgun."

The first bullet apparently entered the hood of Ms. Newman's car and lodged in the windshield and the second pierced a passenger-side window before striking her, said Giddings, who added several people witnessed the shooting.

"As she sped away from the scene, three more shots were fired," he said. "Two struck the trunk and one went into the unknown."

Police initially thought the shootings had occurred at both the day care center and the bowling alley where the woman fled, said Giddings.

"When she drove up, there were several customers and employees at the entrance who assisted her," Benavides said.

"She evidently was shot at the day care center. She drove up, she got out on her own and said, 'Please help me. I've been shot.' I was working inside but went out when I heard all the commotion."

The gunman followed Ms. Newman to the bowling lanes but "evidently saw the crowd of people there and he took off," Benavides said.

An off-duty firefighter who was bowling at the center rendered aid to the woman as paramedics were called, he said.

"There was blood on the car seat. She was hit in the upper back, righthand side, under her arm but there wasn't much blood. From the way she looked, everyone assumed she would be OK," said Benavides. "It was just a real shock to us" when she died.

Giddings described the suspect as a 6-foot-2 man with medium build, a mustache and blond hair. The gunman was driving a maroon 1982 Cutlass.

Cats don't ask for college tuition

There must be some unwritten rule that says after a couple has been married two years, they start making babies. It seems like all of our friends have seen this rule and want to make sure we know about it.

Any couple just celebrating their biennium of bliss knows what I'm talking about. Caryl and I come home from work to find gift subscriptions of Parenting magazine in the mailbox. Our mothers have begun to discuss whether they want to be called Nana or Grandma.

We even had a kid from our church send us a Congratulations on Your New Baby card. He said he was trying to plant a seed. I told him only I could do that, but thanks anyway.

I guess every married couple discusses having a baby. They talk about two o'clock feedings and mountains of dirty diapers and a little creature that pukes on your shoulder. Then they laugh and turn the volume back up on the TV.

When people ask Caryl and me about having children, we just tell them, "No, but we are thinking about getting another cat."

With cats there are no dirty diapers, just a litter pan to carry out every two or three days. With cats you don't need a special seat to take them in the car or a babysitter when you go to the movies.

With cats, there is no college tuition looming on the horizon.

I feel certain having a baby does have its advantages. There is someone to love and nurture and watch grow. There is someone to carry on the family name and values. There is someone to ... well, you get the idea.

But I also wonder if all these people who want us to have children aren't just playing a big practical joke. I can see them the day Caryl and I walk in and announce, "Well, we did it."

They will all try to suppress a giggle as they say, "You mean you dummies really fell for it?" Then

Off Beat

By Bear Mills

they will grab their sides and laugh for hours. For they know that soon morning sickness, swollen feet, cramps and endless nausea will strike. And that's not even mentioning what Caryl will go through.

After the baby is born, we will come to work with red eyes and short tempers because we were up all night with 10 pounds of the croup.

We will join the legion of adults who talk for the next 20 years about nothing but Junior's grades and Missy's science project. We will spend our Tuesday nights at the soccer field, our Fridays at football and our Saturday mornings at the orthodontist.

We will look forward to one day mortgaging the house to pay for four years at a state university, which will probably be stretched to six when the little darling changes her major three times like her father did.

Speaking of which, I've been told children make you pay for every ugly thing you ever did to your parents.

I'm in a heap of trouble. The more I think about it, the more I become convinced of one thing: tonight I think I'll ask Caryl whether she wants a Persian or a Siamese.

Fire deaths under investigation

RICHARDSON (AP) — Results of autopsies, conducted after four people died in a roaring apartment fire, were not released pending investigation by authorities who were told loud noises resembling explosions preceded the blaze.

Fire and police investigators were also told three other people may have left the unit at Spring Valley Apartments about an hour before the fatal fire was reported.

"A lot of things have been said, but so far we haven't been able to put two and two together," Richardson Assistant Fire Chief Steve Brown said Monday.

Dead in the 3 a.m. blaze were Jenny Kale, 30, of Dallas; her 14-year-old daughter, Nancy Stall; and Nancy's 1-month-old daughter Christina Marie. The identity of a male victim, who was staying with Ms. Kale, had not yet been determined.

Authorities said the man, apparently a hitchhiker, had duplicate identification listing two different names. Autopsy results were pending, said a spokeswoman for the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Neighbors said loud noises like a gunshot or explosion preceded the blaze.

Neighbor Danny Davidson said his brother Jerry heard an explosion before the fire was discovered.

"Jerry was here typing a letter and he heard something like a gunshot or an explosion go off," said Davidson.

Richardson police officer Bud Renner said that he tried to alert apartment residents of the danger.

"There was smoke and a lot of flames. And at that time, I called for more officers," he said, "and we just went from there, trying to get as many people out as we could. We couldn't get close to the apartment. It was too hot."

Flames began in the apartment and spread to two others, but occupants in the adjoining units escaped safely.

Ms. Kale, the man and infant were found in an upstairs bedroom of the two-story apartment. The teen-ager was found near the stairwell about 8 feet from the door, said Brown.

Motorists need correct address

The Texas Department of Public Safety issued a statement today reminding all motorists to make sure the address on their driver's license is correct.

According to DPS officials, it is a misdemeanor offense not to change the address on your driver's license within 30 days after moving. Troopers have been instructed to strictly enforce this law in the future, officials said.

There is a $5 fee to change the address on a license.

DPS officials said that while there has been a certain laxity regarding this law in the past, state orders have made it mandatory for drivers to make sure their licenses have a correct address.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Valued customers may object some

Along with the New Year comes a special present from your federal government: the forms and instructions booklet for your 1040 tax payment. How lucky you are. Your government always wants to provide you with good reading material. Remember, there will be a quiz later, and the wrong answer could put you in jail.

The new booklet contains a special message from Lawrence Gibbs, the jolly commissioner of Internal Revenue. "Dear Taxpayer," Gibbs writes — he's your best pal, we're sure — "Thanks for your special effort in making last year's tax-filing season a success." Since the IRS took in almost $1 trillion last year, it certainly was a success for Gibbs; you may have another opinion.

Gibbs continues, "I pledge my personal effort and that of the IRS to search for new and better ways to reduce the burden placed on you, our valued customers." It's so nice to have polite thieves. But referring to you as "valued customers" is a bit much. Common robbers at least have the honesty to state things bluntly, such as, "Stick 'em up!" or "Gimme your dough!"

Maybe government needs euphemisms because it knows it will be back again, year after year, heisting your money. If its words soothe you, perhaps you won't complain. If you get riled, you might just do something to make the government stop robbing you. You might even start remembering tales from your parents and grandparents, who as recently as 70 years ago paid only about 5 percent of their incomes to the federal government, compared to some 21 percent today. In those days government stealing was only petty theft; today it's grand larceny.

The IRS booklet says, "You have the right to be treated fairly, professionally, promptly and courteously by IRS employees. Our goal is to make sure that your rights are protected, so that you will have the highest confidence in the integrity, efficiency and fairness of our tax system." Then why did IRS honchos oppose the Taxpayer Bill of Rights, sponsored by Sen. David Pryor of Arkansas, and passed by Congress in its last session?

One thing is certain: Despite the IRS's claims to the contrary, you have no privacy. As the booklet admits, "We may give the information (on your taxes) to the Department of Justice and to other federal agencies, as provided by law. We may also give it to cities, states, the District of Columbia and U.S. commonwealths or possessions to carry out their tax laws. And we may give it to foreign governments because of tax treaties they may have with the United States."

Someday we'll all rise up and write back to the IRS: "As one of your 'valued customers,' I no longer want to do business with you. And as is also said, 'The customer is always right.' Don't bother me anymore."

"WELL! IF IT ISN'T MOAMMAR GADHAFI!"

It's Judgment Day for football

In college football, it is Judgment Day, with the National Collegiate Athletic Association taking the role of the wrathful Jehovah and schools like Oklahoma State and Texas A&M being cast into the depths.

This may please those who can still say "amateur sports" or "student athlete" with a straight face. Anyone else should see this morality play for the fraud it is.

The offensive won't clean up college sports, and it isn't supposed to. What it will do, if it achieves its stated goals, is dampen competition and preserve an outrageously unjust system.

The NCAA's crackdown falls unequally on the weak and the strong, helping those who don't need help and hindering those who do. It's no accident that the schools running afoul of the rules have mostly been those who have transformed weak teams into powerful ones. They're the ones handicapped by the sanctimonious rules on recruiting.

Under NCAA regulations, colleges are free to earn huge sums of money by the sweat of their athletes' brows. They are not free to pay a player for this trouble. They can only give him a free education, including tuition, books, room and board.

Consider these meager outlays against the vast profits to be made with a winning program. Notre Dame and West Virginia each pocketed $3 million for their appearance in the Fiesta Bowl this year; Miami earned $2.65 million when it went to the Orange Bowl. Schools also reap handsome rewards for televised games, and only good teams get on TV.

These bonuses may be the least of the payoff for athletic prowess. A school that prevails on the gridiron assures that its alumni will stay in a perpetual mood of loyalty and generosity.

But if you're a college with a weak football team, how do you turn it around? Good players would rather go to a school with an established record of success, where they can hope to get TV exposure, post-season trips to places like Pasadena and New Orleans, and fat professional contracts.

Luring those athletes to a lesser institution often requires offering them something extra — something green.

If you're a Southern Methodist University — a small, private institution with a history of mediocrity — there is only one reliable way to change your luck. SMU found that way, and as a result it has spent most of the last two decades in the NCAA jail house. Finally it reached death row: SMU was not only barred from TV and bowl games, it was forbidden for two years to play football at all.

The connection between monetary rewards and cheating is clear. A good baseball team is nice to have, but it won't make a university rich. And you can count the number of schools on probation for baseball violations on the fingers of one batting helmet. The scandals are almost all in the lucrative, crowd-pleasing sports: football and basketball.

Doug Single, the athletic director at SMU, wants SMU to be included in the list of schools that combine academics, integrity and football success — citing Notre Dame, Michigan and Stanford as examples. He can take Stanford off that list: Its record over the last 10 years is 46 wins, 62 losses and three ties.

Single used to work at Northwestern, which has also proven the difficulty of mixing first-rate education with big-time sports. It's won just 19 games since 1979. Even at Notre Dame, often hailed for winning without cheapening academic standards, the average SAT score for football players is 250 points below that for the student body as a whole.

Given the financial incentives and the competition for athletic talent, it's no surprise that some schools are willing to run clandestine semi-pro operations. What's so terrible about that? Why should everyone make money from college football except the kids on the field?

Sure, they're offered an education. But many of them, to put it gently, lack the aptitude to make use of that opportunity. Two-thirds of the students in major college sports never get a degree, and a lot of the degrees earned are of dubious value. Most of the athletes would be better off with cash.

The NCAA likes to pretend it's protecting the innocent college players from the dangers of unbridled greed. What it's really doing is protecting successful schools from competition and all schools from having to pay a fair price for their pass-catching employees — uh, students.

The real scandal here is not the rules that are broken, but the rules that are obeyed. Colleges ought to either pay their players or else abolish athletic scholarships entirely, turning the helmets and shoulder pads over to genuine students.

Until the NCAA adopts a radically different approach to college sports, its cleanups won't get rid of the stench.

He still finds the bright side

Thank the Lord another terrible air tragedy didn't occur when a hole blew open in the fuselage of an Eastern 727 during a flight from Rochester to Atlanta.

The pilot acted quickly and put his plane into a steep dive, back down to 10,000 feet where he, his crew and the passengers could get oxygen again.

The incident did, however, add to my fears concerning those oxygen masks that are supposed to fall down in front of you in — as a flight attendant always says — "the unlikely event of cabin depressurization."

I'm told about those masks every time I climb aboard an airplane. Then, one day, I was on a plane and the flight attendant was telling me about the masks, and I thought to myself, are those things really up there somewhere above my seat?

I'd never seen one fall and I didn't know anybody else who had seen one fall.

I used to believe in things that fell out of nowhere. When I was a child, my mother read me the story of Chicken Little.

Chicken Little thought the sky was falling. That was good enough for me. I was 11 years old before I'd go out of the house without wearing my genuine Doak Walker football helmet.

But back to the oxygen masks. I've looked above my seat in 100 airplanes trying to figure out exactly where the masks are located. I've also tried to look and see what was going to open above my seat and allow them to fall.

Lewis Grizzard

But I still can't figure out any of that. Then there is something else that bothers me.

The flight attendant has her mask. It's the one she uses while demonstrating how ours, if they do exist, are supposed to be used.

Do you think she's going to be all that concerned about me if my mask doesn't fall during the unlikely event of a cabin depressurization?

Of course not. She'll lock herself in the restroom with her mask while I'm outside turning blue.

And let me continue. Recall how you are always told to breathe normally after you put on your mask.

I'm at 30,000 feet in a large piece of machinery that manages to fly by some magic I still don't understand and suddenly I've got this mask over my face that may or may not save my life and I'm supposed to breathe normally? If that ever happens to me, rest assured I will not breathe normally. I will breathe as I please, like Secretariat down the stretch.

Anyway, all this to say that the oxygen masks did fall down for the passengers in the damaged Eastern 727.

But a number of passengers said theirs didn't work. Didn't work? I'd never even considered that.

I'll be on a plane and a hole will blow open in the fuselage, and my mask will fall down but it won't work.

Or worse. Mine will work, but not the one for the guy sitting next to me, and he'll be Mike Tyson with a toothache.

On the other hand, if we are to believe Mr. Tyson's wife, maybe he'll leave my mask alone and go into the restroom and beat up the selfish flight attendant for her mask.

That's one thing I really like about myself. Even while considering such horrid, frightening circumstances, I can still look on the bright side. Happy flying.

Why the $32.3 million for inauguration?

By SARAH OVERSTREET

OK, call me a killjoy. Call me a spoilsport. Call me the only one in my crowd who'd have rather stayed home by the fireplace New Year's Eve with a cup of eggnog (OK, several cups) than what we ended up doing — fighting for toe space in a smoky room full of middle-aged people gyrating to songs popular back when they could still hold their liquor and the swim didn't look so silly.

Call me a party-pooper. But I'm plenty put-off by the preparations and price tag for George Bush's inauguration. Thirty-two million bucks seems like a ridiculous amount of money just to swear in a president, when all the law requires is that Bush take the oath of office at noon on Jan. 20. The cost for Bush's gala is double that for Ronald Reagan's bash in 1981, and 10 times what Jimmy Carter's cost in 1977.

Why do I care how much he spends, when an estimated $25 million of it will come from private corporate donations? A good question. I've given it considerable thought, because I understand my pronounced blue-collar proclivities and don't believe I should foist my partying values on another party's party. But I think at least two of my objections don't stem from the fact that all I need for a good wingding is a barbecue grill and some good friends.

As for the cost, $32.3 million dollars only seems like an affront when you stand it up alongside our massive and incomprehensible deficit, and the belt-tightening and program-cutting Bush says must be part of our solution. I guess it's sort of like Mom and Dad telling the kids the family's a little short this month so they'll need to curb their toy and cassette buying for a while, and then coming home with a new Cadillac themselves. Although neither Bush nor his opponent offered conclusive answers to the deficit, Bush stressed wise, moderate spending as well as "no new taxes!" This is a heck of an example to set.

And I'd like to know how much of the taxpayers' $7.1 million are going for festivities ALL taxpayers can participate in, and how much of it is going to the various invitation-only dinners and balls Bush is giving for the people who helped elect him? Only $775,000 of that money is going to the construction of a heated inaugural stand on the Capitol steps and other hoopla that goes along with the actual swearing-in.

At least the swearing-in is something John Q. Citizen can stand in a crowd and watch from afar, if he gets there early enough. But this year, getting there early won't even get him a decent view of the parade. They're constructing bleachers along the parade route and charging "user fees," for crying out loud. Over the years, we've grown accustomed to the balls and dinners being only for the haves. However, during the other inaugurations, our share of the tab wasn't so high, and at least the have-nots could enjoy the parade.

Tom Johnson of the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, is put off by this year's segregated hoo-ha as well. He makes the point that "invitation-only," offensive enough to some, has gradually become "invitation-and-price-of-a-ticket only."

"When does an inauguration lose its public face and become an elaborate private function for the party faithful?" Johnson asks. "Is the Presidential Inauguration Committee a private entity or a public entity? The GAO is saying let's define it."

High time, Tom. If you agree, let him hear from you.

America's enjoying a mild winter from Midwest to Maine

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

January usually means harsh winds, bone-chilling temperatures and lots of snow, but not this year. From the Midwest to Maine, snowfall has been below normal and temperatures have been above normal.

"Looking at the weather map and temperatures across the nation... one would never realize that it is the middle of January," the National Weather Service said in a statement Monday night after the mercury had climbed into the 40s and 50s across much of the country. Temperatures early today generally were in the 30s and 40s.

The relatively mild season has been a boon to motorists, joggers and municipal budgets but a bane for snowmobile dealers, winter festival organizers and some ski resort operators.

"We've really had to scrap with nature to get every bit of snow this year," Matt Kelly said at Brodie Mountain Ski Resort in western Massachusetts, which reluctantly "loaned" Grafton, N.Y., snow for its winter festival last weekend.

Meteorologists say climatic conditions, such as upper-atmosphere winds, haven't encouraged the kind of storms that leave a heavy snow cover.

"It's pretty free of snow from the southern and central Plains to the Atlantic Coast," Hugh Crowther of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. "They have quite a bit of snow across the Northern Tier, but it's remaining up there."

Much of the area from Burlington, Vt., to Bangor, Maine, was as brown and bare Monday as it was last summer. Even in the region's far northern snow belt, snowfall has been far below normal.

As of Monday, Portland, Maine, had received a paltry 4.2 inches of snow this winter, compared with a normal 30.2 inches.

Buffalo, N.Y. — often the butt of snow jokes — has received just 16 inches, 30 inches below normal.

"We're enjoying the weather right now," said

Buffalo streets commissioner Stan Buczkowski. "But we're not going to kid ourselves. We know we've got two months of winter left, and we're going to get some snow."

In the Midwest, Iowa received just 1.3 inches last month, the seventh lowest December total in 102 years. Large areas of the state had no snow at all. Temperatures averaged 25.9 degrees, 1.6 degrees above normal, and on Dec. 2 Sidney and Indianola basked in balmy 65-degree weather.

Illinois normally has had 16 inches of snow by now, but only 6 inches have fallen. Temperatures have been 6 to 8 degrees higher than the normal 29 degrees.

"The 30-day outlook calls for continued mild weather, with temperatures averaging about 60 to 65 percent above normal," Allan Morrison of the weather service said in Chicago.

In some sections of the Midwest hit hard by last summer's drought and heat wave, the low snowfall is not expected to hurt the replenishment of depleted water supplies, officials said. However, a lack of snow cover can cause wind erosion, they said.

In the West, winter has been more familiar. Colorado, for example, has had an average snow year, with ski resorts reporting bases of 30 inches to 86 inches.

While Western ski resorts have had little to worry about, some cross-country ski resorts in the East have had to close, officials said.

Some Eastern downhill ski resorts stayed in business by putting snow-making equipment to use, but others said bare ground in major cities has made it tough to persuade would-be skiers to head for the slopes. Cross-country races at festivals in several New York communities have been canceled.

Many of the New York festivals, which bring in $5 million to $10 million annually, don't start until late this month or early February, but organizers are worried. Syracuse, where Winterfest begins Jan. 27 and which normally gets 109.9 inches of snow, is barren.

Report: Stuttering linked to brain flaws

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Stuttering, once thought to be psychological, has been linked to brain abnormalities by scientists who hope to understand many disorders by making 3-D videotapes of the brain in action.

Subtle irregularities in electrical activity and blood flow were found in brains of 60 percent of stutters, whose speech is broken by abnormal pauses, repetitions (st-stuttering) or prolongations (sssstuttering) of sounds, said audiologist Terese Finitzo, who directed the University of Texas studies.

She said similar brain abnormalities were detected in 84 percent of people with spasmodic dysphonia, in which malfunctioning vocal cords produce a hoarse, strained, strangled-sounding voice.

The Dallas scientists studied 20 stutters and 77 people with spasmodic dysphonia by examining magnetic resonance imaging pictures of brain anatomy. Unlike CAT scans, which use X-rays, the technique uses a giant magnet and radio waves to make pictures of organs.

The scientists also made maps of brain electrical activity as measured by electrodes on the head; and images of brain blood flow. But they also developed a way to process the two-dimensional maps of brain electrical activity to pinpoint the location of that activity.

That let them superimpose the brain anatomy and electrical activity images, then string them together on videotape to make "an animated movie or cartoon, so as electrical activity progresses you can see it moving through the brain" in three dimensions, said Dr. Kenneth Pool, a neurologist in the Texas group. Blood-flow images will be added later.

Such technology might help scientists understand how the brain works, and perhaps eventually how to better diagnose and treat speech defects, mental illness, epilepsy, dyslexia, Alzheimer's and Parkinson's diseases, post-stroke speech loss and other disorders, Pool said.

The technique "is expected to radically alter (brain) disease evaluation and management for neurologists, psychiatrists and neurosurgeons," said a news release from the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Scientists have long believed that the speech impediments were psychological. But in recent years, many have linked the impediments to brain malfunctions that can be aggravated by psychological stress.

That view is supported by findings of the government-funded, $2 million Texas research outlined by Finitzo, Pool and colleagues Monday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The studies also suggest the speech defects have many causes, because not all the patients had brain abnormalities, Pool said.

About 1 percent of Americans stutter to some degree. Spasmodic dysphonia is uncommon, although there are no reliable estimates, Finitzo said.

Stutterers and people with spasmodic dysphonia often receive speech therapy to learn to slow down, breathe differently or otherwise alter their speaking habits, but for many "the benefits are minimal," Pool said.

He said patients are relieved when told their stuttering or spasmodic dysphonia is physical.

"We've had people say, 'Thank God it's not my fault. They don't have to feel responsible for it, (even) if everybody's telling them, 'If you just relax you can speak better,'" he said.

Arnold E. Aronson, head of speech pathology at the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota, said there are several forms of the speech defects and that people whose stuttering is psychological may get improper treatment if they believe otherwise.

Americans remember King with speeches and protests

By The Associated Press

Ringed bells and ringing speeches commemorated the legacy of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. amid renewed calls to strive for the goals of the slain civil rights leader.

Marchers filled city streets in San Francisco, the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia was symbolically tapped, and national leaders descended on King's hometown to join his family in Atlanta on the federal day marking his 60th birthday.

"He lived a hero's life. He dreamed a hero's dreams," President-elect Bush told black leaders in Washington. "He left a hero's indelible mark on the mind and imagination of a great nation."

A unity march across the University of Michigan campus in Ann Arbor drew about 2,000 people, who paraded as the university's carillon played "We Shall Overcome," the anthem of the civil rights movement.

Later Monday, Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young told a University of Michigan audience that, "The world King left is not a great deal different."

"But there seems to be an awareness that violence is not the solution to the world's problems, as we learned in Vietnam, as the Russians have learned in Afghanistan, and as the PLO has learned."

Nowhere was King's influence felt more strongly than in Selma, Ala., where he began the 1965 Selma-to-Montgomery march that helped establish voting rights for blacks throughout the South.

On Monday, three blacks were sworn in as members of the Dallas County Commission in Selma. They became the first black Dallas County commissioners since Reconstruction and gave the five-member commission a black majority.

"We bring home to Dallas County the harvest of the Martin Luther King voting rights act," said U.S. District Judge U. W. Clemon, the first black federal judge in Alabama, who administered the oath of office.

King's widow, Coretta Scott

King, was joined by black and white political leaders for the annual ecumenical service at the Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King and his father preached.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, once one of King's young lieutenants, used the occasion to criticize the Reagan administration's civil rights record and President Reagan's suggestion that civil rights leaders bolster their position by fostering an attitude of oppression among blacks.

Jackson called Reagan's statements "petty comments from the same man who implied that Martin Luther King Jr. was a communist."

In Pretoria, South Africa, U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins, who is black, marked the holiday by unveiling a bronze bust of King that will sit in a new U.S. embassy compound. The ceremony included blacks and whites who have been prominent critics of South Africa's system of racial separation.

In the United States, parades were held in places like New Orleans, Honolulu, Atlanta and San Antonio, where 15,000 people marching from four directions converged on Martin Luther King Jr. Plaza.

Bush, city rehearse for his inauguration

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush is polishing his inaugural address, trying to make it shorter, while the Senate opens the first confirmation hearing for his Cabinet and the capital rehearses ceremonies marking the change of power at the White House.

Three days before Bush will be sworn in as the 41st president, hotels are filling up with early arrivals from the 300,000 people expected to watch or take part in the five-day extravaganza.

"The mood is very upbeat," said Ed Cassidy, a spokesman for the inaugural committee. "Rehearsals are taking place all over town. Decorations are going up. Thousands of media people from all over the world are picking up their credentials" to cover the inauguration.

On Capitol Hill, James A. Baker III, picked by Bush to be his secretary of state, was going before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to testify about his nomination. Democrats hoped to pin him down about Bush's policies on everything from the Soviet Union to Central America.

Baker's confirmation hearing, expected to run two days, is the first for any member of Bush's Cabinet. The next round begins Thursday when the Senate Labor Committee meets on the nomination of Elizabeth Dole as labor secretary, and the Governmental Operations Committee hears testimony from Richard G. Darman, chosen as Bush's budget director.

Other hearings will follow in quick order. None of the Cabinet nominees is expected to encounter much difficulty winning confirmation.

"They are generally experienced, hopefully pragmatic people, and we won't have the rigid ideology of the first Reagan term," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. "I am trying very hard to establish from our side an atmosphere of cooperation and bipartisanship."

Bush had no public appearances on his schedule today but was expected to announce his choices for some top jobs in his administration. Among those expected to be named was Donald Atwood Jr., vice chairman of General Motors Corp., to be deputy secretary of defense, the No. 2 post at the Pentagon.

Bush and speechwriter Peggy Noonan worked on his inaugural speech Monday but "she had to go back to the drawing boards. They're trying to shorten it, edit it," said Bush spokeswoman Sheila Tate.

"He wants it short," Tate said, without saying how short is short. She said Bush would work more on the speech today and planned a dress rehearsal on Thursday using a TelePrompTer.

Noonan, considered one of GOP's most talented speechwriters, wrote Bush's convention speech and also worked on the farewell television address delivered by President Reagan last week.

The inaugural festivities officially open on Wednesday with a ceremony at the Lincoln Memorial, featuring fireworks and 21 Navy F14 fighter planes flying wingtip to wingtip.

Tiny flashlights will be distributed to the first 40,000 people at the event, and they will be asked to flick them on to underscore Bush's campaign theme of "a thousand points of light."

A dress rehearsal of the opening pageant will be held today, complete with the flyover of jets.

Bush began his inauguration week Monday by paying tribute to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. at a breakfast for black supporters.

"We must not fail the nation he loved so much and gave his life for. I understand that five days before becoming president of the United States of America," Bush said. Federal offices were closed for the national holiday commemorating King's birthday.

As Bush prepared to step into the limelight, President Reagan was spending a low-key week.

Mexico's interior minister defends arrests of union leaders

By JAMES ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's interior minister vigorously defended the government's crackdown on corruption in the powerful Oil Workers Union, declaring that "nobody must shun the laws."

The union, bowing to government pressure, announced on Monday that its interior secretary had assumed the post of interim secretary-general, replacing a local leader opposed by the government.

Interior Minister Francisco Gutierrez Barrios said that the arrests of dozens of union leaders last week was a legal matter and not an attack on labor.

"We want to make it clear that the rule of law prevails permanently for the Mexican people. The Constitution of the Republic demands of everyone, absolutely everyone, an unconditional respect for individual and social guarantees," Gutierrez Barrios declared.

"Nothing and nobody must shun the laws that sustain the government's actions," he said during a luncheon attended by President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and the governors of Mexico's 31 states.

His remarks were contained in a statement released by the presidency.

Soldiers and police arrested Joaquin Hernandez Galicia, the longtime de facto chief of the oil workers, after a gunfight at his home on Jan. 10. One federal agent was killed. Fifty other union leaders and Hernandez Galicia associates also were arrested.

Hernandez Galicia is imprisoned on charges of murder, tax evasion and illegal possession of weapons.

Authorities also are looking into assets compiled by Hernandez Galicia, former union secretary-general Salvador Barragan Camacho and other union leaders.

Jose Melendez Maranto, the union's interior secretary, assumed on Monday the functions of interim secretary-general, replacing the jailed Barragan Camacho, union spokesman Francisco Arriola said.

The Labor Department immediately recognized Melendez's appointment, the government news agency Notimex reported.

Last week, Ricardo Camero Cardiel had been named to the interim post. But government officials complained that Camero Cardiel's election violated union bylaws. They also said he had close ties to Barragan Camacho and Hernandez Galicia.

Arriola said Melendez would call a special convention within 30 days to elect a permanent replacement for Barragan Camacho.

Barragan Camacho has pleaded innocent to weapons charges. He is under arrest at a Mexico City hospital where he is undergoing treatment for heart trouble.

Mexico's top labor leader on Monday said he accepted as necessary the crackdown on union corruption, but indicated disagreement with the tactics of the Salinas administration.

Fidel Velazquez, head of the Mexican Labor Federation, said Salinas "has tried to implant a new politics, using the maximum force of the law to reform attitudes. I don't believe there is going to be a clash over the new way of politics, although we believe that they must use other tactics and strategies."

He did not elaborate, but the oil workers and others have objected to the violence used in arresting Hernandez Galicia.

Velazquez told a news conference that efforts to wipe out union corruption "must be accomplished where necessary." He did not refer specifically to the Oil Workers Union.

The Mexican Labor Federation includes the oil workers and claims 5 million members of a total national workforce of about 25 million.

Israeli troops kill two more Palestinian teens

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops Monday shot and killed a 17-year-old Palestinian during a clash with youths in the West Bank, and another teen-ager died of gunshot wounds suffered earlier, military officials said.

Troops elsewhere in the occupied lands forced the mid-night burial of two Palestinians slain last week and limited the number of relatives allowed to attend, an Arab reporter said. The move apparently was designed to prevent unrest.

Monday's deaths increased to 359 the number of Palestinians who have died since the uprising in the occupied territories began 13 months ago. Fifteen Israelis have been killed.

Hospital officials identified the Palestinian killed Monday in Hebron as Radwan Sbeih. Arab reporters said he was shot in the chest when youths stoned soldiers and the troops responded with fire.

A military spokesman, who was not identified according to regulations, confirmed the death and said another 17-year-old Palestinian, Ahmed Mustafa of the Khan Yunis camp in the occupied Gaza Strip, died Monday.

The high rate of casualties — eight in the past four days — brought complaints about army policies from Israeli politicians from the left and right.

Minister without Portfolio Ehud Olmert, a member of the right-wing Likud bloc who has charge of Arab affairs, said Monday every Arab death caused him personal anguish.

Olmert said he favored tough measures against rioters, but did not understand the army's policy for opening fire.

"I don't think there's a lot of logic or common sense in shooting after a boy when he's already finished throwing his stone and is running away," he said. "There must be some judgment and some restraint."

Two Koreas agree to new high-level talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Communist North Korea Monday agreed to rival South Korea's proposals to hold the highest-level political and military talks on easing tensions since the Korean War.

Prime Minister Yon Hyung Mok of North Korea accepted the south's proposal that he and his South Korean counterpart, Kang Young-hoon, should head their respective delegations at talks to be held in both country's capitals.

"The north and south should remove the state of tension which is driving the same people toward disaster," Yon said in a letter to his Kang. He said the two Koreas should "prepare a firm foundation for peaceful unification."

Yon proposed a meeting at the Panmunjon border truce site on Feb. 8 at which vice ministers would work out terms for full-scale talks. No date was mentioned for the main talks, and the two sides are expected to face problems on agreeing on terms.

Yon repeated the north's demand for separate talks with South Korea and the United States on reducing tension on the divided peninsula. He also demanded an end to annual South Korea-U.S. military exercises.

"It is obvious to everyone that the north and south can not fundamentally resolve the question of peace by setting aside the United States, which is the party responsible for the aggravation of tension," the letter said.

South Korea and the United States have rejected the north's demands for separate three-way talks.

Seoul agreed last month to the north's call for high-level political and military talks on reducing tension.

China, Vietnam open discussions on Cambodia

BEIJING (AP) — China and Vietnam have begun talks on the Cambodian conflict in the first face-to-face meeting of high-level officials from the two countries in more than nine years.

China's Foreign Ministry said Monday that First Deputy Foreign Minister Dinh Nho Liem of Vietnam was in Beijing for "private consultations with Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Liu Shu-ying on a political settlement of the Kampuchean (Cambodian) question."

Neither China nor Vietnam would offer further details of the visit, which both sides apparently tried to keep secret.

Eastern European sources said the talks would last at least several days and cover the timetable for Vietnam's troop withdrawal from Cambodia and that country's political future.

Vietnam, which invaded Cambodia in late 1978 to drive the pro-Chinese Khmer Rouge from power, claims it now has about 50,000 troops in Cambodia and has set September 1989 as a target date for pulling out all its forces.

China, a staunch ally of Vietnam during the 1960s and 1970s, launched a 20-day border war against Vietnam in early 1979 to "punish" Hanoi for its invasion of Cambodia.

There have been no direct senior-level talks since, and China has insisted Vietnam must first pull its troops out of Cambodia before normal contacts can be resumed.

China is the main arms supplier of the Khmer Rouge and other guerrilla forces fighting the Vietnamese.

China has said Cambodia is the major obstacle to improved relations with Vietnam and that Vietnam must withdraw its troops as soon as possible.

In August, China opened direct talks on Cambodia with the Soviet Union, Vietnam's main financial backer, and now says enough progress has been made to hold the first Sino-Soviet summit in 30 years.

Shultz calls on Soviets to destroy Berlin Wall

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Praising the Soviet Union for its progress on human rights, Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived Monday for the end of a 35-nation review of Moscow's record and called for the dismantling of its radio jamming transmitters.

Shultz also renewed his demand that the Soviets tear down the Berlin Wall. He called it "one of the acid tests" of Kremlin intentions.

The secretary and other foreign ministers are in Vienna to sign off on the most ambitious East-West human rights and security accord of the 1980s, a review of the 1975 Helsinki agreements.

The 50-page document took more than two years to negotiate and was formally adopted Sunday. It contains landmark commitments on human rights and sets the seal on new NATO-Warsaw Pact talks on conventional arms control that are due to open in Vienna in March.

Shultz flew to Vienna from Washington on his final diplomatic mission after 6½ years as State Department chief. He is to visit today to foreign ministers reviewing the Vienna accord.

Listing human rights improvements as his proudest achievement, Shultz credited the Soviets and their East European allies with adopting "much more open" societies than they had in 1975, when the agreement to foster East-West understanding was signed.

However, he called on the Soviets to dismantle the giant transmitters that had jammed Western radio broadcasts for years. Late last year, the Soviets and their East European allies stopped interfering with Radio Liberty and Radio Free Europe broadcasts.

"Jamming has stopped," Shultz said, "and we don't want to see it reinstated."

The Helsinki accords, signed by the United States, the Soviet Union, Canada and 32 European nations, tacitly accepted the post-World War II borders of Eastern Europe. In exchange for this concession, the Soviets pledged to permit more contacts with the West and freer movement of people and ideas.

TREATMENT FOR STIFF NECK

If you're suffering from a stiff neck, don't wait for it to take care of itself when treatment is available to correct it.

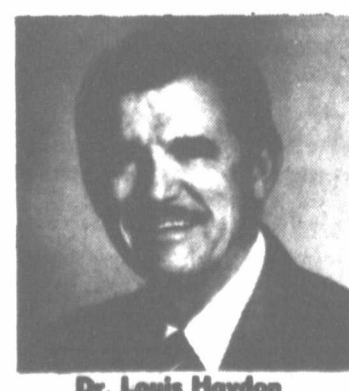

Of all the bones in the spinal column, none are more easily injured or more vulnerable than the seven vertebrae in the neck. None are moved more often. We are constantly turning our heads to look at people and things.

Neck stiffness can have many causes, from sudden and violent accidents to such simple activities as painting a ceiling or just sitting reading a book for a long time. But there's nothing simple about the pain.

A careful examination will reveal the source of the pain and how best to treat it. Any misaligned vertebrae in the spinal column should be properly adjusted so there will be no abnormal pressure on your nervous system. Treatment may also include exercises for the cervical muscles such as gently rotating your head in all directions. This can help restore muscle strength and tone.

Feds' belt-tightening aids growth of home care

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Government's increasing domination of health care through Medicare/Medicaid regulations has brought about a return to the basics as caregivers seek to meet the needs of those who are ill.

One such alternative is providing as many services as possible to a patient in the home. Home health agencies have resulted from the need for home services that require more training and expertise than an unskilled caregiver can perform.

"Home health care is not something that hasn't been done for years," explained Ed Parsons, director of Pampa's Agape Health Services. "People have always been taking care of each other at home. We're just seeing it in a different form."

Juanelle Brooks, one of the founders of Panhandle Health Care, agreed. Medicare regulations have forced hospitals to often release patients before they are completely well, she said.

"They can only stay in there so long," she said. "It's going to get back to people caring for each other in the home. The government is going to make us do that. "The family will be responsible for the patient's care," Brooks added. "Home nursing can teach families to be more secure, more confident, in caring for their patient."

Without home health care, stroke victim Nellie Wood, 85, of Pampa would probably not be able to remain in her home.

"I didn't know there was such a thing as home health care," said Charlene Wood, Mrs. Wood's daughter and primary caregiver. Without home health care, Miss Wood feels her mother would have to have been placed in a nursing home. "There's nothing wrong with a nursing home, but I just didn't feel it was right for Mother," Miss Wood explained.

Care given by Miss Wood, her sister Betty Orr and brother Don Wood is supplemented by services provided by Agape Home Health. A nurse's aide comes to the home three days a week and a skilled nurse two days a week.

Having a nurse's aide come in to bathe Mrs. Wood and change the bedding regularly has eased the burden for her children, Miss Wood said. Licensed vocational nurses or a registered nurse perform services requiring professional skill and training, in addition to monitoring Mrs. Wood's condition.

Mrs. Wood's doctor set up her schedule of care, which is carried out by her children and the home health care staff. Her case is typical of many situations helped through professional home health care.

Recently LVN Ray Palmitier visited Mrs. Wood, a diabetic, to check her blood sugar level and perform a kidney irrigation. He and Miss Wood also compared notes on Mrs. Wood's blood sugar levels.

"The vast majority of families we work with are helpful and caring, particularly Mrs. Wood's daughter," he commented later.

Palmitier has worked as a nurse in hospitals and home health care. "I see home health care as a great way to enhance a patient's dignity and quality of life," he said.

Panhandle Health Care began in Dumas, later expanding to branch offices in Amarillo and Pampa, Brooks said. Headquarters are now located in Amarillo, she said. The agency covers a 27-county area and includes nurses in Wheeler, Shamrock, Miami, McLean and Canadian. Shirley Shirley Meredith, director of Panhandle Health Care, checks medical supplies in the agency's Pampa office.

Meredith has recently been named director of the Pampa office.

"We've encountered many, many hardships along the way, especially with all the Medicare regulations," Brooks said. "But we've stayed with it because we believe in taking care of people of all ages."

Parsons and his wife Meg started Agape Health Services in 1984. Parsons takes pride in the fact that 80 percent of the agency's medical supplies are bought in Pampa and feels his agency has contributed to the community through its employee training program.

"We recently sent several nurses to M.D. Anderson Cancer Center for training and have had some in-service training at Harrington Cancer Center," Parsons said. "We believe in ongoing education for our staff."

"Even if a nurse doesn't stay with us, they usually will still be a part of the community, and we're glad to do that," he added.

Home health agencies are not only paid through Medicare/Medicaid, but also through insurance and private pay. Agencies are monitored by the Texas Department of Health.

State Rep. Dick Waterfield of Canadian has shown interest in home health care and said he plans to work toward providing more funding for the program through the state, without "hanging" home health care agencies with excessive regulations.

Trying to get a better understanding of home health care issues, Waterfield recently accompanied two Panhandle Health Care nurses as they went on their rounds.

"We went to see a patient I had known all my life," Waterfield recalled. "He was in bad shape. I was really impressed with the way they were helping his wife. (Home health care) is a big help from a nursing standpoint, but also the way they are a comfort to the spouse."

"I think it's a super program, especially in rural areas," the state representative said. "We're having so many problems with rural hospitals. It's a Catch 22 situation. People are not being allowed to stay in the hospital as long as they may need to. And this is some way to administer to them."

Waterfield is seeking state funding for home health care that will then be matched with federal funds, he said.

Because of the lack of funding, most home health agencies are operating on extremely tight budgets that do not allow for advertising.

For 18 months, Mary, 75, and Bill Bayless, 89, had searched for someone to come twice a day to give Mrs. Bayless her insulin shots. Although Mrs. Bayless is a registered nurse, she's also an unstable diabetic, a condition that resulted in blindness.

"I wasn't aware there was such an organization until Dr. Kelly found them for us," Mrs. Bayless said. Today, through home health care, the Baylesses can live independently, knowing they can rely on having a nurse come in twice a day to give Mrs. Bayless the essential insulin injections.

"They've been a lifeline to us, that's for sure," Mrs. Bayless said.

"The nurses even check me to see if I'm alive," Mr. Bayless joked.

Charlotte Hall, R.N., director of nurses for Agape, said the agency's clients come to them through referrals from physicians (like the Baylesses), through hospital referrals, repeat patients, family members and friends of persons who have used home health care.

Another way these agencies have found to reach the public is to provide educational programs and free blood pressure clinics. The public is also invited to come by their offices for a free blood pressure check and to discuss services provided by the agency.

Programs to teach kids to be 'super consumers'

Gray County Extension Service is preparing programs to help young people be "Super Consumers!"

Two project groups scheduled to begin in February include "Super Consumer" for elementary and middle school boys and girls and "Dollar Power For Teens" for high school boys and girls. Both projects will be free of charge and open to all interested boys and girls.

Laura Williams, Gray County 4-H teen leader in consumer education, will conduct the "Super Consumer" project. Boys and girls will participate in activities relating to meeting needs and wants, values and goals, money — where it comes from and where it goes, comparison shopping, consumer decision-making, consumer safety and saving money.

The "Dollar Power For Teens" is a project for teen-agers who are interested in making, saving and spending money!

Donna Brauchi, Gray County Extension agent, is coordinating the project, which will incorporate local resource people in the teaching process. The project involves young people dealing with their own money situation.

Session topics will include Goal Tending (money goals), For the Record (financial recordkeeping), Stretching Your Dollars (spending plans), Making Money Grow (saving and investing), Buying on Time (credit) and Wheeling and Dealing (cost of owning and operating an auto).

Project activities will include computer applications, field trips and hands-on activities. The project sessions will be conducted every two weeks. Dates and times will be determined by participants.

Interested boys or girls should call the Gray County Extension Service at 669-8033 by Jan. 23.

King's story of brotherhood has enduring power of truth

DEAR READERS: This week we pay tribute to a great American, Martin Luther King Jr. His words of wisdom are even more meaningful today than they were 22 years ago, when he said: "One day somebody should remind us that even though there may be political and ideological differences between us, the Vietnamese are our brothers, the Russians are our brothers, the Chinese are our brothers; and one day we've got to sit down together at the table of brotherhood."

DEAR ABBY: If people wonder why grocery prices are so high, perhaps I can shine a little light on the subject.

I am a cashier for a large grocery store in a very well-to-do suburb of Chicago. You would not believe what we find in the evening when we close the store: Frozen turkeys and $30 roasts in the magazine racks, half-eaten bags of nuts and candy stuck here and there, frozen food thawing outside the freezer, and foods that shouldn't be frozen in the freezer!

We realize that shoppers have the right to change their minds while shopping, or at times could find themselves short of money, but all they have to do is give the unwanted items to the nearest cashier or stock clerk, who will gladly return the items to their proper places. It's a sin to see so much food wasted because people are either too embarrassed or too lazy to put them back.

Dear Abby

If more customers realized that they are the ones who pay for all the spoiled food, perhaps they'd be more careful.

TIRED OF WASTE
DEAR TIRE: Thanks for the "food for thought" instead of food for the garbage pail.

DEAR ABBY: A relative who frequently visits our home has become a real pain. She is forever asking, "How much did this (or that) cost?" "How much do you get paid, and how often?" "Why do you have two cars when you only need one?"

Or she's always telling me what she thinks I ought to do, such as "Lose weight" or "Wash your car," "Do this," "Do that."

Mrs. Buttinsky gets worse every year. We may not be perfect, but we don't ask questions that are none of our business, nor do we tell people what to do. How can we protect ourselves against this overbearing woman?

SICK OF HER IN OMAHA

DEAR SICK: To personal questions that are none of her business, turn the tables and ask, "Why do you want to know?"

And when she tells you what to do, simply say, "Thank you very much," then quickly change the subject.

DEAR ABBY: Last week we attended two movies and a play at a theater. Throughout the performances (movies and the play) we were disturbed by people around us explaining the plot to their companion. We also had a child kicking the back of our seats!

I find this very rude and would like to know how this should be handled without making a scene. We moved (in the movie) twice, but the new seats were no better than the first.

I love going out for entertainment, but for what it costs, I'd like to be able to enjoy myself without interruptions. Any suggestions?

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Since not all strangers respond to courteous requests to please be quiet, or to kindly ask their child to quit kicking the seat, I recommend asking an usher — or the manager (if you can find him or her) — to handle the situation.

49ers' Rice injured

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The thought of playing a Super Bowl without Jerry Rice is enough to nauseate any San Francisco 49er fan. Or player. Or coach.

It's not something the NFC champions will have to stomach on Sunday, despite the ankle injury Rice suffered in practice Monday. Just ask any 49er — or any Cincinnati Bengal.

"If he can't walk, he'll play," Joe Montana said. The 49ers quarterback knows his All-Pro receiver isn't about to let his first Super Bowl appearance hinge on a twinge six days before kickoff. "Believe me, he'll play. I'll drag him out there."

If he doesn't do the dragging, Bengals coach Sam Wyche might.

"This is a game where the two teams should be at full strength," Wyche said. "I hope he can play. Jerry Rice is one of the best players they've got and one of the best players in the league."

"I hope all of them play, on both sides." Rice left San Francisco's practice after injuring his right ankle and was listed as questionable for this rematch of the 1982 Super Bowl, San Francisco's first of two NFL championships. In the minds of the medics, there might be a question.

As for Rice's teammates and opponents, forget it.

"He's the man you want to get the football to," Cincinnati Pro Bowl safety David Fulcher said of Rice, who when healthy is the most dangerous receiver in the game. "Nobody at this time is going to miss a game like this and I'm sure he knows how important he is to that team."

How important? When Rice's ankle finally healed this season, the 49ers went on a four-game tear that boosted them to the NFC West title. In those four games, Rice averaged five receptions for 104 yards.

"He's our gamebreaker," Montana said. "That's no secret. And you go to your big-play guy in big games. That's not a secret, either."

"Knowing Jerry Rice, he will be on the field and doing his job."

That's all he was doing when he went down in practice.

"He did a hook pattern and finished it off and then he went in," Montana said. "I didn't know it was bad."

"I don't think it means much if he doesn't (practice). By this time, we're not learning anything new about each other."

Bill Walsh wasn't so sure.

"So much of our offense is related to Montana getting the ball to Rice and without that timing and that week of work, it reduces our effectiveness," the coach said. "We'll rest him completely. We feel he'll be OK."

"If he needs the time to rest and heal," Montana added, "he should take it."

For six weeks this season, Rice had trouble taking it to anybody. Because of the sprained ankle and the tendinitis that followed, he didn't have more than four receptions in any of those games and scored only once. Because San Francisco didn't have another deep threat, the team slumped.

Walsh not expected to return

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Bill Walsh is not expected to return next season as coach of the San Francisco 49ers, according to published reports quoting team owner Edward DeBartolo.

DeBartolo, in separate interviews published today, said he didn't think the outcome of the 49ers' Super Bowl showdown Sunday with Cincinnati would have any bearing on such a decision.

"He just wants to wait till after the season's over," DeBartolo said in interviews published in the San Francisco Chronicle and Santa Rosa Press Democrat. "I assume this is his (Walsh's) last game."

"He's told me that. Basically, he's told (the media), too. I really believe that Monday, probably, or maybe Tuesday, at the latest, he'll (make an announcement)," DeBartolo told the Chronicle.

DeBartolo told the Chronicle he put at no better than 20 percent the odds that Walsh would coach the 49ers again in 1989.

"I wouldn't say it's etched in stone that he's not going to coach," DeBartolo said. "I think 80-20. I can't unequivocally say that, but I don't think he's going to coach."

He told the Press Democrat he is almost certain that Walsh, who has led the 49ers to two Super Bowl victories, will resign.

"He's the best coach in football, but sometimes people lose their desire," the newspaper quoted DeBartolo as saying.

As recently as Jan. 1, after the 49ers beat the Minnesota Vikings 34-9 in a divisional playoff game, DeBartolo said he expected Walsh to "do his thing" and coach again next season.

But on Monday, DeBartolo said "a gut feeling" now tells him Walsh will be stepping out.

"If I had to guess right now, I would guess that Bill's made his mind up," DeBartolo said. "If I had to guess again, I'd think that Bill would want to take some time off (from coaching), win or lose."

"Bill seems very at peace with himself. He's just enjoying what he's doing ... That makes me think that he's made up his mind."

Interviewed while playing golf at the Doral Country Club, Walsh refused to discuss the report, the Press Democrat said.

But Walsh, who has posted a 101-63-1 record since becoming 49ers coach in 1979, seemed to hint Sunday night that changes might be in the offing.

"I can say that I'm going to be back with the 49ers next year in some capacity," he said. "I have one year left on my contract, so I'll certainly be back."

While he refused to be specific, DeBartolo told the newspaper Walsh's successor could come from within the team's current coaching staff.

DeBartolo may, however, have tipped his hand Friday when he told the St. Petersburg Times that defensive coordinator George Seifert might be in line for Walsh's job.

Hoyas' Thompson may miss game to keep boycott going

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be no more symbolic walks across the basketball court for Georgetown coach John Thompson, but that doesn't mean his protest against tougher NCAA restrictions on scholarships is anywhere close to a conclusion.

Thompson attracted national attention when he walked off the court Saturday night just prior to the Hoyas' game against Boston College. He said Monday that he will not duplicate that demonstration, but gave no indication whether he would return to guide third-ranked Georgetown against Providence on Wednesday.

"I have no more intention of going to the bench and walking off," he said. "I think that point was made. But I will not go to the bench until I am satisfied. ... I just have to feel sincerely that we are moving in the right direction."

Thompson's protest is directed against Proposition 42, which establishes more difficult entrance and scholarship requirements for incoming freshmen.

While the rule is slated to take effect in 1990, Thompson has said he wants something done about the proposal, which he termed "discriminatory," long before then.

Thompson refused to indicate exactly what changes or actions he seeks. He said he planned to talk to some "people of influence" in the next few days, but refused to specify with whom he will be consulting. He also insisted that he has no intention of placing any demands on anyone.

Lakers perfect on homecourt

By The Associated Press

In a town where 10 is considered perfect, the Los Angeles Lakers are a perfect 15.

Okay, so the Lakers actually play in Inglewood, not Hollywood. Regardless, they remained the only NBA team with a perfect home record — 15-0 — by defeating the Houston Rockets 124-113 Monday.

"We don't want to lose at home. That's the attitude we take — we don't want to lose in our own backyard," said James Worthy, who led the two-time defending champions with 26 points.

Mychal Thompson, the league leader in shooting percentage, came off the bench to score 13 points without missing a shot in the first half — he was a perfect 6-for-6 — as the Lakers made 47 of 72 shots for 65.3 percent, not perfect but the best in the NBA this season.

Home also remained sweet for the New York Knicks, who won their 14th straight home game by defeating San Antonio 116-106 as Mark Jackson had 24 points, 10 rebounds and 12 assists, and for the Cleveland Cavaliers, who have won 10 in a row on their own floor thanks to a 126-110 victory over Phoenix as Mark Price scored 11 of his season-high 29 points in the third quarter.

Elsewhere, it was Detroit 96, Boston 87; Atlanta 117, Washington 106; Charlotte 127, Philadelphia 122 in double overtime.

Lakers' Mychal Thompson hotly pursues a loose ball.

Rice is shown working out just prior to being injured Monday.

Harvesters host Berger tonight

Pampa and Berger clash in a District 1-4A basketball doubleheader tonight in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The girls' game tips off at 6:30 p.m., followed by the boys' around 8 p.m.

The winner of the boys' game takes over sole possession of first place in the district standings. Both teams have 6-1 records.

Pampa defeated Berger 74-71 in the Fort Worth Tournament last month.

Pampa girls are in fifth place in the standings with a 4-5 record. Berger girls are 5-4 and tied with Hereford for third place in district.

The Lady Harvesters defeated Berger 48-40 in the district opener on Nov. 29.

Pampa has a 12-8 overall record while Berger is 13-9.

Navratilova, Sabatini win first-round matches at Australian Tennis Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Gabriela Sabatini scored speedy first-round victories today as they began their challenge to top-ranked Steffi Graf in the $2.4 million Australian Open tennis championships.

Three-time Australian champion Navratilova, seeded second, crushed West German Andrea Betzner 6-0, 6-1 while No. 3 Sabatini, playing Down Under for the first time, beat Cecilia Dahlman of Sweden by an identical score.

Navratilova's victory took just 50 minutes, while Sabatini was a minute faster.

"I think I am playing really well," said third-ranked Sabatini, who beat Graf twice last year. "I think I have a good chance to win a Grand Slam event this year."

Navratilova simply overpowered Betzner.

"I'm enjoying tennis more than I have for the past few years," the 32-year-old Navratilova said. "My body isn't hurting any more."

West German teen-ager Graf, winner of all four Grand Slam tournaments last year, began her Australian Open campaign with a victory Monday over Australian Kerry-Anne Guse.

Two seeded American women, seventh-seeded Barbara Potter and ninth-seeded Lori McNeil, fell today.

Powerful New Zealand left-hander Belinda Cordwell beat Potter 6-3, 6-3.

Runnin' Rebels win a squeaker

College basketball

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The timing would have done a Las Vegas nightclub comic proud. It was good enough to keep the Nevada-Las Vegas Runnin' Rebels from defeat.

Greg Anthony's only 3-pointer of the night came with three seconds to go and gave the 10th-ranked Rebels a 66-63 victory over lightly regarded Fullerton State.

"Maybe we're just not very good; I don't know," UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian said after Monday night's victory.

Anthony, a sophomore guard who scored just five points in the game, launched his desperation 25-footer after Fullerton's Cedric Ceballos had tied the game at 63 with 11 seconds left when he hit a 3-point jumper.

"We got outthusted at home, in front of our own people," Tarkanian moaned.

At least Nevada-Las Vegas ended up a winner. The same can't be said for No. 11 Syracuse, which fell 68-62 to Connecticut.

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, it was No. 6 Michigan 99, No. 16 Ohio State 73; No. 8

Missouri 104, Virginia Tech 99; No. 12 Seton Hall 78, Villanova 61; and No. 20 Stanford 93, Miami of Florida 59.

Anthony's game-winner overshadowed the performance by Ceballos, who scored 31 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and was 10-of-10 from the free throw line in the Big West contest.

The Rebels, 12-2 overall and 7-0 in the Big West, are riding a nine-game winning streak. Fullerton is 5-8 and 0-4.

Connecticut 68, No. 11 Syracuse 62

Cliff Robinson scored 24 points and Phil Gamble 21 as Connecticut handed Syracuse its third straight loss and fourth in its last five game — all in Big East conference competition. The Orangemen are now in last place with a 1-4 conference mark.

"The first 15 minutes we played probably as poorly as we've played since I've been at Syracuse," Coach Jim Boehm said.

Syracuse led for the last time at 39-35 with 15:07 left. But Gamble hit a 3-point basket and a three-point play to put the Huskies back in front for good. Connecticut then hit 14 of 15 free throws in the final 5:31 to seal the victory.

Billy Owens led Syracuse with 19 points.

No. 6 Michigan 99, No. 16 Ohio St. 73

Glen Rice hit five 3-pointers and scored 23 points in Michigan's victory over Ohio State. Terry Mills also scored 23 points and Loy Vaught had 22 for the Wolverines.

Michigan, 15-2 overall and 3-1 in the conference, never trailed, although the Buckeyes, 12-4 and 2-2, cut the deficit to 27-26 with 8:22 left in the first half. Michigan then had a 14-2 spurt to put the game away.

Perry Carter led Ohio State with 17 points.

No. 8 Missouri 104, Virginia Tech 99

No. 12 Seton Hall 78, Villanova 61

Pampa JVs win

Pampa defeated Levelland 73-34 in junior varsity basketball action last week.

Both teams are tied for the district lead at 6-1.

Jayson Williams and Randy Nichols were top scorers for Pampa with 16 points each. David Johnson and Danny Trego had 11 and 10 points respectively.

The Pampa JVs host Berger JVs at 4:30 p.m. today in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Razorbacks down Aggies

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks followed the advice of Coach Nolan Richardson and defeated the Texas A&M Aggies by wearing them down in the second half.
 The Razorbacks defeated the Aggies, 75-60, in the only Southwest Conference basketball game played Monday night.
 "We came out in the second half and stayed after them," Richardson said. "I told our guys at the half that if we would continue our pressure on them, the wear and tear on A&M would hurt them down the stretch."
 "We just got tired," Texas A&M coach Shelby Metcalf said. "We ran out of steam toward the end. Our guys played hard, though, we just don't have enough players. At the start of the second half, Arkansas came out strong and ran with the ball."
 "They also were using a zone and pushing us out of our offense ... We're tired and I'm going to give them a day off tomorrow."
 The Arkansas bench outscored the Aggie bench 37-4.
 Oliver Miller scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half as Arkansas broke away from a 36-36 halftime tie to beat the Aggies, who had led by as many as 10 in the first half.
 "The second half, I calmed down and played better," Miller said. "We went out and got down in the first half and let some of the calls get to us. Coach gave us a pep talk at the half and it turned out well for us in the end."
 Miller got the second half started with a slam off a fast break and then Keith Wilson stole the ball and followed suit. The Razorbacks came up with the loose ball and then Wilson fed Larry Marks for another slam and it was 42-36.
 Arkansas is 10-3 and 4-1 in the conference. Texas A&M dropped to 8-8 and 1-3.
 Lynn Suber led the Aggies with 21 points.

AIDS fear leads to clotting factor shortage for hemophiliacs

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Perhaps the best thing that ever happened to 20,000 Americans with the bleeding disease hemophilia was the discovery of treatment with a protein called factor VIII.

It was also probably the worst. Five-minute infusions of this natural substance overcome their bodies' inability to form blood clots so they can lead nearly normal lives. But the treatments also have given more than half of them AIDS infections.

The treatment has been made safe again, but another crisis looms. Factor VIII is in severe, sometimes life-threateningly short supply.

Doctors say that because of the shortage, most non-emergency surgery has been postponed for hemophiliacs. Bleeding often is treated with less than the recommended doses, sometimes with poor results.

Users have smaller reserves for emergencies and most have stopped taking preventive doses.

They also have had to rely more on cryoprecipitate, an older, less convenient therapy that requires a trip to the hospital to receive blood plasma that is rich in factor VIII. This treatment carries the same very slight risk of AIDS as an ordinary blood transfusion.

The shortage "has produced a tremendous amount of frustration, and in some people despair, in some anger and in some resignation," said Donald S. Goldman, a lawyer from West Orange, N.J., who has hemophilia.

Hemophiliacs represent just 1 percent of the 80,000 AIDS cases reported in the United States since 1982. However, a larger proportion of them are infected than are the other two major risk groups, homosexual men and drug addicts.

About 60 percent of U.S. hemophiliacs are infected, and for those with the most severe form of the disease it's perhaps 80 percent to 90 percent, said Alan Brownstein, executive director of the National Hemophilia Foundation.

While most of the hemophiliacs who carry the AIDS virus are still healthy, doctors fear that many of them will eventually get AIDS.

Hemophilia is caused by a genetic defect passed from mothers to sons at conception. Victims don't produce enough factor VIII, one link in the chemical chain reaction that prompts the body to stop bleeding.

Once, the only treatment was blood transfusions. Then plasma was substituted.

In the 1960s, cryoprecipitate was standard. Finally, in the 1970s, factor VIII became available. Instead of 30 to 50 trips a year to a hospital, people with severe cases could quickly treat themselves at work or at home.

Factor VIII is derived from human blood. A single dose may contain elements of blood from 20,000 people or more.

During late 1970s and early 1980s, AIDS virus passed through the purification process into factor VIII. In 1982, the Centers for Disease Control reported the first three suspected cases of AIDS among hemophiliacs.

Since then, factor VIII makers have adopted cleansing techniques, including detergents and antibodies. Brownstein believes clotting factor is now HIV-free.

But it also has become expensive and scarce. The new processes yield only about half as much per liter as the earlier techniques.

Robert W. Reilly, president of the American Blood Resources Association, an industry group, said the price has risen six- to seven-fold since 1985. Factor VIII for one person typically costs about $50,000 a year, Brownstein said.

Factor VII was already in short supply at the start of 1988. But the situation became much worse because of problems at the American Red Cross, which produces about 20 percent of the country's clotting factor.

Last April, the Red Cross discovered it had allowed factor VIII to be made from blood that should have been discarded under Food and Drug Administration rules because of potential AIDS contamination.

Since then, the Red Cross has released little factor VIII, although it recently resumed production. Meanwhile, about 7 percent of the nation's usual annual production is on hold. Officials of the Red Cross and FDA believe it is safe. But because of errors in the way it was produced, FDA officials say they would be breaking their rules if they allowed its release.

Paul Parkman, director of the FDA's Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research, said the FDA might allow the questionable factor to be released as an experimental drug. Users would have to sign consent statements acknowledging that they understood the protein did not meet federal standards.

Heart disease rate of death shows decline

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Heart disease remains the nation's biggest killer, taking a life every 32 seconds, but researchers have made "unbelievable" progress in taming the disease, according to the American Heart Association.

Figures released this week show that deaths from heart and blood vessel disease have dropped 24 percent during the past decade. Researchers attribute the improvement to healthier living habits and better treatment.

"The public ought to appreciate the progress that has been made in heart disease over the past 20 years," said Dr. Myron L. Weisfeldt, the association's president-elect.

"It's almost unbelievable. There is almost no form of heart disease that we can't approach without meaningful treatment."

However, Weisfeldt, a heart specialist at Johns Hopkins University, cautioned that much work remains in improving care and encouraging people to take better care of themselves.

"I believe we can prevent at least 50 percent of the ischemic heart disease in the United States by the year 2000 if we stop smoking, get cholesterol treated if it's above 220 and identify and treat hypertension," he said.

Ischemic heart disease is the clogging of blood vessels that feed the heart. It underlies most heart attacks, the single most lethal heart ailment.

The association said that in 1986, the most recent year for which there are statistics, an estimated 978,500 Americans died from heart attacks, strokes and other diseases of the heart and blood vessels. Cancer, the No. 2 killer, took 466,000 lives.

The association's latest figures show that more than one in four Americans suffers some form of cardiovascular disease, and almost half eventually die from it.

However, the figures also bear out the brightening outlook: Between 1976 and 1986, the death rate from all forms of cardiovascular disease fell 24 percent, including 28 percent for heart attacks and 40 percent for strokes.

"The good news is that we continue to see an improvement in the death rate from the biggest killer of our population," said Dr. Bernadine Healy of the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, the association's current president.

"Those trends are dramatic and don't seem to be reversing," she said. "The bad news is that heart disease is still killing almost 1 million Americans a year, and we've got a long way to go."

About 60 percent of the heart-attack deaths occur before the victim reaches the hospital. Studies show that about half of all heart attack victims wait more than two hours before getting to an emergency room.

Weisfeldt said a major goal is getting people to go to the hospital within three or four hours of the first sign of heart attacks. During this period, there is still time to give them drugs to dissolve the blood clots that are causing their heart attacks. This treatment can save lives and reduce the disability of heart attacks.

Other major goals, he said, including finding ways to improve the effectiveness of angioplasty, which uses balloons to reopen clogged heart arteries, and finding surgical and medical techniques to identify and protect people at risk of cardiac arrest.

The association estimates that cardiovascular disease will cost $66.2 billion this year in medical expenses and lost wages. In 1986, it estimated the cost at $78.6 billion.
