Drifter opens fire on children in schoolyard

Injured children are attended to in schoolyard Tuesday after shooting incident.

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Police today were unraveling the steps that turned a young drifter with a long criminal record into a silent killer who opened fire on a schoolyard jammed with laughing children, killing five and wounding 30 before committing suicide.

Patrick Edward Purdy, wearing a military flak jacket, a shirt bearing the word "Satan," and earplugs, killed himself with a bullet to the head after firing about 60 rounds from a Soviet AK-47 assault rifle at hundreds of youngsters enjoying recess on Tuesday at Cleveland Elementary School. The five slain were children of refugees from Southeast Asia.

There was no apparent motive. "I'm shocked. It's just horrible," said Purdy's grandmother, 63-year-old Julia Chumbley of nearby Lodi. "I don't understand why and I probably won't ever know why."

Purdy, 26, who most recently listed his grandmother's address as home, began his assault shortly before noon when he parked his station wagon behind the school. The car burst into flames in a fire possibly set as a diversion, said Deputy Police Chief Lucian Neely.

Then the 5-foot-11, 140-pound killer entered the campus through a hole in a fence with the bayonet-equipped semi-automatic and two handguns and walked to several portable classrooms about 250 yards from the main, L-shaped building. He opened fire from the west side of the portable buildings, then moved to the east side and continued spraying the screaming children before turning the rifle on himself.

Although it had been reported that Purdy wore camouflage fatigues, Police Chief Jack Calkins said on ABC's Good Morning America today that the gunman wore a flak jacket and jeans. He said the FBI was trying to determine if Purdy had a military background.

Mary Gonzales, superintendent of the Stockton Unified School District, said psychiatrists, counselors and bilingual volunteers would be on hand when classes began this morning.

"The main focus of our efforts is going to be on counseling," she said on CBS' This Morning.

"He was just standing there with a gun, making wide sweeps," recalled Lori Mackey, who teaches deaf students in one of the portable classrooms at the school about 80 miles southeast of San Francisco.

"He was not talking, he was not yelling, he was very straight-faced, it did not look like he was really angry," she said. "It was just matter-of-factly."

"There was mass chaos. There were kids running in every direction."

Purdy, who also was known as Patrick West and Eddie Purdy West, had an "extensive criminal record," said Neely. Many of the crimes were committed in the Los Angeles area and included soliciting for sex and narcotics and weapons violations, Neely said.

Chisum, Waterfield gain committee posts

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — State Representatives Warren Chisum and Dick Waterfield have received committee assignments from Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis.

Chisum, D-Pampa, has been named to the House committees on Corrections and County Affairs, while Waterfield, R-Canadian, was appointed to the Agriculture, Human Services, and Rules and Procedures committees.

Chisum, a first term lawmaker representing District 84, and Waterfield, beginning his second term as representative of District 88, will serve on the committees for the 71st session of the Texas Legislature.

In making the announcement, Lewis cited Chisum's knowledge of the legislation likely to be considered by the corrections and county affairs panels.

Lewis said he assigned Chisum to the two committees because of the freshman legislator's concern for the issues facing the state's correctional process and interest in those matters involving county governments.

"His insight into the legislative process, as well as his strong commitment to building a better Texas, will make him an effective member of these committees," the House Speaker added.

Chisum said he was quite pleased with the assignments. Both committees were on his requested list, he said, adding that the committees are also considered "substantive committees." This means that these committees will have a substantial role in the state's budgetary process, he said.

"Rep. Waterfield has demonstrated a real concern for the issues affecting the agricultural industry," said Lewis. "He has also expressed interest in those matters involving our social and rehabilitation programs."

Waterfield and Chisum join 148 other representatives from around the state for the five-month long legislative session which will decide how the state's $45 billion revenue for the next two years will be spent.

House representatives will be working with the 32-member Senate and Gov. Bill Clements on such vital Panhandle issues as rural economic development, underground water rights, crime, punishment and school finance.

"One of my main goals is to make sure rural counties are well represented when the issues are debated," Waterfield commented. "The Legislature tends to make laws that often times hurt small communities. I'm going to work to keep those kind of things from happening and also to clean up some previous problems."

Among the legislation Waterfield plans to introduce is a law allowing teachers in school districts in counties of less than 30,000 to continue to teach if they have a family member on the school board. Current nepotism law makes this illegal.

Waterfield believes rural communities are hurt by this law as it now stands since many rural families have several members involved in education and must travel a long way to work in another school district.

The problem was brought to his attention, he said, by a teacher in his district who had to give up her teaching position when a relative was elected to the school board.

Chisum said his County Affairs Committee is to meet next Tuesday for sub-committee assignments and an organization report. He will not know what the committee will be specifically working on until that time, he said. First meeting of the Corrections Committee has not yet been set, he said.

Chisum and Waterfield say they have settled into the offices they are sharing in Room G-59 of the State Capitol building in Austin.

U.S. trade deficit largest in five months

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit widened dramatically to $12.5 billion in November, the largest imbalance in five months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the gap between what the United States imports and what it sells overseas was 21.9 percent higher than the October deficit of $10.3 billion.

The sharply higher deficit was blamed on a big jump in imports, which shot up to $39.7 billion, $1.6 billion above the October level. Exports, which have been booming this year, declined by $639 million to $27.2 billion.

The November deficit was the largest since a $13.2 billion imbalance in June.

In the past, a sharp worsening of the nation's trade performance has sent shock waves through financial markets. However, analysts said that the new report may not have as dramatic an impact because it had been widely forecast.

Even with the November deterioration, the trade deficit for the first 11 months of 1988 was running at an annual rate of $137.3 billion, almost 20 percent below the all-time imbalance of $170.3 billion set in 1987.

This big improvement in trade has been largely responsible for the overall prosperity the country enjoyed last year. But analysts have begun to worry that the trade improvement, which was powered by a surge in export sales, is in danger of stalling out this year.

If that occurs, it raises the threat that the new Bush administration will have to deal with a possible recession, or at the very least that the new president will be faced with growing cries to erect new trade barriers to protect American manufacturers.

"This is curtains for any hope that we are going to get the trade deficit under control any time soon," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington economic forecasting firm.

Many economists believe that the U.S. dollar will have to fall further to spur further sales of American exports. But the Bush administration is worried that sharp declines in the dollar could worsen U.S. inflation by increasing the cost of imports.

For November, the 4.2 percent rise in imports reflected big increases in imports of business capital equipment, which rose by $1.1 billion, and consumer goods other than autos, which climbed by $697 million.

The rise in capital goods reflected increases in U.S. purchases of iron and steel products, airplanes and heavy equipment such as metal working machinery.

The auto category actually dropped by $229 million during November.

Rioters set fires, loot stores as violence continues in Miami

Miami police remove a looting suspect from store in Liberty City on Tuesday night.

By SANDRA WALEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Rioters set fires and looted stores early today as 700 police officers poured into two black neighborhoods, arresting hundreds in an attempt to halt two days of racial violence in which three people have died.

The violence eased toward dawn, enabling police to reduce their presence.

The riots, which began Monday night in the Overtown section following the shooting death of a black motorcyclist by a police officer there, spread to the Liberty City neighborhood Tuesday. The violence, which broke out as Miami made final preparations for Sunday's Super Bowl, forced the cancellation of a National Basketball Association game Tuesday night.

"Things have quieted a lot since about 2 a.m.," said police spokesman David Rivero. "We have pulled back some of the blockades."

Rivero said some sections of Overtown's business district were still closed to traffic at 6:30 a.m., but most roads were open in the mostly residential Liberty City area.

Two fires were burning in Liberty City at dawn, including a church that was being allowed to burn to the ground, Rivero said.

The U.S. Justice Department began an investigation of the cyclist's shooting, which led to the death of the man's passenger after the motorcycle crashed. The city also was investigating the shooting.

"For the sake of our city, I appeal to every citizen, regardless of race to stay calm, get off the streets and stay in your homes," said Mayor Xavier Suarez in a televised appeal Tuesday night.

Police, who earlier had stood by to protect lives and property, took a more assertive role late Tuesday, arresting troublemakers. By early today, 250 arrests had been made, mostly for burglaries, said police Sgt. Michael Mazur. Many were released after posting bond.

The 1½ square mile Overtown section and a small part of Liberty City were cordoned off by police. The decision to sweep through the areas and make arrests came after sniping incidents increased, police said.

In Liberty City, several miles to the northwest, a 16-year-old black youth was killed late Tuesday in a shooting apparently unrelated to the rioting. Metro-Dade police Sgt. John Roper said Troy Robinson was shot to death during an argument over a stolen check-printing machine. Howard Scipio, 37, of Miami, was arrested and charged with first-degree murder.

In Overtown, just north of downtown, two people were shot Tuesday, one of them in the leg by police. Five others were shot in Liberty City, including a police officer who was wearing a bulletproof vest and was not seriously injured by sniper fire.

A white man in a luxury car fired a gun into a crowd of rock-throwing blacks, wounding a 19-year-old man who was hospitalized in fair condition.

Gunfire and rock-throwing in the area of Miami Arena, which is in Overtown, forced the postponement of Tuesday night's NBA game between the Miami Heat and Phoenix Suns.

A meat truck, furniture stores and several smaller stores were looted, Mazur said. The Liberty City community center was set ablaze as were at least a half dozen other buildings.

A white motorist whose car broke down was beaten but managed to run toward police for protection, and an Associated Press photographer was roughed up by a mob and his car torched.

"I saw someone coming around a building and throwing rocks, and I said 'Let's go, get out of here,'" said photographer Mark Pesetsky, who escaped after police fired tear gas at the crowd.

At least two other beatings were reported, and several people were treated for lacerations, Jackson Memorial Hospital officials said.

The violence erupted following the shooting death of 23-year-old Clement Anthony Lloyd during a police pursuit. A passenger on the motorcycle, Allen Blanchard, 24, died Tuesday.

Lloyd died Monday of a bullet to the head fired by Officer William Lozano, a four-year police veteran who was taking a report from a crime victim in an unrelated incident when Lloyd sped by, authorities said.

Lloyd and Blanchard were unarmed and were being pursued for a speeding violation, said police spokesman Angelo Bitals.

Lozano was automatically suspended with pay pending an investigation.

The Pampa Police Department reported the following incidents during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

TUESDAY, Jan. 17
Karen Belt, 1319 Mary Ellen, reported reckless driving near the residence.
Pampa police reported criminal trespass with a weapon in a domestic dispute.
Jerry Woodward, 912 E. Brunow, reported a burglary at the residence.

Pampa police reported tampering with evidence at the intersection of South Hobart and McCullough.

Arrests
TUESDAY, Jan. 17
Loy Joe Stone, 71, 436 Crest, was arrested on a charge of theft at 401 Barnes. He was released on payment of fine.

Russell Owen, 22, 1700 Gwendolen, was arrested at McCullough and South Hobart on charges of tampering with evidence, failure to yield right of way and no driver's license. He was released on bond.

Pam Spangler, 26, 1230 S. Finley, was arrested at the police station for possession of stolen property. She was released pending further investigation.

Fire report
The Pampa Fire Department responded to the following calls during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

TUESDAY, Jan. 17
1:22 p.m. — A tree fire was reported at God's Acres on the Bowers City Highway. Two units and five firefighters responded.

7:00 p.m. — A light ballast shorted out at the Taylor Food Mart, 1340 N. Hobart. One unit and three firefighters responded.

Correction
In the Tuesday edition of The Pampa News, an article on a poison gas leak reported that Steve Vaughn, director of emergency management, said that 120 parts per million of hydrogen sulfide gas was measured at the well head and that 20 parts per million was a fatal concentration.

Vaughn said today that incorrect information was relayed to him on the fatal concentration of gas. 500 parts per million of hydrogen sulfide gas could be fatal to anyone breathing it, he said. Although the gas leak Monday was not as hazardous as first thought, Vaughn said he checked with a representative of the Texas Air Control Board and was reassured that the emergency team took the correct action.

Barn fire kept from fuel tank

By KIT LOOPER
Canadian Correspondent

CANADIAN — Canadian volunteer firefighters Tuesday successfully fought to keep heat from a burning hay barn from igniting a nearby 400-gallon gasoline tank, though the fuel had already begun to expand and leak from the tank by the time firefighters arrived on the scene.

A half-filled hay barn used for winter feed for cattle on the headquarters section of the IV Ranch, 20 miles south of Canadian, burst into flames after a burning feed sack was blown into the building.

Ranch foreman Bobby Crosslin was cleaning up around the ranch house and burning sacks when the wind picked one up and blew it into the barn, Crosslin said.

Sixty feet away from the 50x30-foot barn was a 400 gallon fuel tank used to store gasoline for the ranch's trucks and equipment. It had been filled with gasoline on Monday.

Canadian Volunteer Fire Department was called to the blaze and responded with nine units, Fire Capt. Joe Schaefer said. By the time firefighters arrived on the scene, the heat from the fire was causing the fuel tank to expand and gasoline was running out of it.

Firefighters were able to cool the tank which had almost reached the point of exploding and kept the fire from spreading to nearby outbuildings and the two-story frame ranch house. However, the barn was totally destroyed.

The fire could be seen about 10 miles away from the ranch, located in the Canadian River breaks of Hemphill County about three miles southeast of Lake Marvin. Headquarters section is leased by Brainard Cattle Company.

Paula Crosslin, wife of the foreman, said that, ironically, she and her mother had spent Monday rolling up all the garden hoses and storing them for winter. She and her husband were unable to do anything but watch the fire as it grew out of control.

Bivins schedules town-hall meeting

AUSTIN — State Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, has called a town hall-style meeting to discuss recreational use of the Canadian River at the Borger branch of Amarillo National Bank building at 7 p.m. Friday in Borger.

"I want the people to inform me of their concerns about access to the Canadian River for recreational purposes," Bivins said when he announced the meeting.

A series of dams built along the Canadian River has diminished the water flow to little more than a trickle in many places, leaving wide sandy places from cutbank to cutbank.

A dispute among adjacent landowners, hunters, motorcyclists and all-terrain vehicle riders has emerged along with the sand problem. It is this dispute Sen. Bivins is looking for ways to resolve.

Landowners claim the land down to the waterline belongs to them, while hunters and others say the land from cutbank to cutbank is publicly owned. Both cite state law as the reason for their assumptions.

Landowners also say hunters and all-terrain vehicle riders are disturbing their animals and damaging their property.

On the other hand, others say landowners are infringing on public land and endangering cyclists by building barbed wire fences along the river's waterline rather than along the cutbank.

Anyone interested in the use of the Canadian River for recreational purposes is invited to attend the meeting.

CLUTE (AP) — Police Chief Mark Wicker said he boosted a police applicant's score on a basic literacy test to clear the way for hiring the man, even though the applicant had failed the test.

The applicant was one of eight people who were required to take the state-drafted test in November to seek a patrolman's job.

Four applicants failed the test, which requires a score of 49 to pass, Wicker said.

He said Soto scored 48 before his answer sheet was changed. A perfect score on the test is 60.

Wicker acknowledged Tuesday changing the test scores of Pete Soto after he was told that the Houston Chronicle had received information about the tests from callers asking to remain anonymous.

Wicker said he substituted a new answer sheet and copied all but one of the answers Soto had given. He said he then altered one of Soto's incorrect answers, thus raising his score into passing range.

"He does not know I gave him a point," Wicker said. "It was my mistake, but I felt like I needed the officer at that time." Soto was subsequently hired and is working as a patrolman in this Brazoria County town of about 9,500 people.

City Manager Bill Pennington said he keeps his hands off the police department and didn't know about the doctored test.

Councilman Harry Blevins said City Council allows the department to operate independently.

Wicker said he does not believe he did anything wrong because the test was optional, designed to set a certain standard in the department.

Quayle wants to open up GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Quayle says that as vice president he hopes to help open up the Republican Party to the poor and minorities and turn around its image as "the party of exclusion."

The vice president-elect said that after he is sworn in to office on Friday he hopes to spend time quietly visiting the disadvantaged and learning about their problems.

"I'd like to go out and not have a lot of advance publicity on that, just sit down and talk to these people on their turf, in their neighborhood, on their grounds and to hear them out and get a feel and get a sensitivity for issues that are of concern to them," Quayle said in an interview Tuesday with The Associated Press.

The former senator from Indiana also endorsed the 50 percent congressional pay raise that President Reagan backs. Bush has said he supports Reagan's stance, but that he might take another look at the matter after he becomes president.

"I know it's a lot," Quayle said of the raise for federal judges and Congress members. But he said Reagan "thought long and hard. I support his decision."

The pay raise plan will take effect next month unless Congress vetoes or modifies it.

On another subject, Quayle said Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev "is in a much stronger position" than many U.S. skeptics think. "He's consolidated power much quicker than any other Soviet general secretary," said Quayle, a former member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Quayle said he thinks Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or openness, "is for real," but he sees the perestroika policy of economic reform as just a way to consolidate power.

Quayle has met with several reporters in the past few days after refusing interviews for much of the period since the Nov. 8 election.

Discussing how he will handle his new job, Quayle said he will not speak out at Cabinet meetings, but will relay his opinions to President Bush privately. The key to his job, he said, is a close personal relationship with the new president.

The 41-year-old vice president-elect said he intends to be a "broad-ranging adviser" to Bush, who is 64. He said he has been involved in "all of the discussions for cabinet" choices and other matters, except the early selection of James Baker as secretary of state.

Lloyd Bentsen Sr., 95, killed in two-car collision Tuesday

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

EDINBURG (AP) — Lloyd M. Bentsen Sr. was remembered as a unique South Texas pioneer and entrepreneur, following his death in a two-car collision.

Bentsen, 95, father of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Texas' senior U.S. senator, was pronounced dead at the scene in an accident that occurred about 7 a.m. Tuesday at a rural intersection of Hidalgo County in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

In Austin, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he would ask Gov. Bill Clements to order flags flown at half-staff the day of Bentsen's funeral.

Charles Wilson, director of Wilson Mortuary in McAllen, where the body was taken, said family members were awaiting Sen. Bentsen's arrival from Washington before making final funeral arrangements.

Clements said Bentsen was "a great Texas entrepreneur who contributed much to the people of our state, particularly those in South Texas."

Sen. Phil Gramm, in Washington, said Bentsen was "an entrepreneur whose leadership and character have long since made him a legend in Texas. Texas has lost a true pioneer and a great citizen."

House Speaker Gib Lewis said Bentsen "had a very rich, rewarding life and he was a great man. I hope that when I obtain that age that he obtained, that I'll have the same outlook, the same health and the spirit that he had. He was a great Texan."

Bentsen remained active in his farming, ranching and real estate interests until his death and showed no physical evidence of the two times in his long career he was trampled by stampeding cattle.

"He was here two or three times a week, sometimes every day," said Bud Williams, foreman for the past 25 years at Bentsen's 16,000-acre La Coma Ranch in Hidalgo County, one of six ranches Bentsen owned.

After the fatal accident, there was confusion about Bentsen's age because his driver's license showed him as being 92, but Sen. Bentsen's office in Washington and the elder Bentsen's office in Mission confirmed that he actually was 95.

Bentsen was on the stage during part of last summer's Democratic National Convention, where his son was named the party's vice presidential candidate, and made many campaign appearances with his son. Sen. Bentsen's Washington office said he left immediately for Texas after learning of his father's death.

Wells said Bentsen, who was driving a Buick Park Avenue north on Farm Road 494, apparently failed to yield the right of way at a stop sign to an eastbound car on Highway 107.

Two people injured in the second car were identified as Ramiro Rosalez, 22, and his sister Margarita, 19. Rosalez was released after treatment for cuts and bruises at Mission Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Linda Thayer.

Ms. Rosalez underwent facial surgery and was in stable condition Tuesday night at the hospital, said a nursing supervisor who asked not to be identified.

Bentsen held nearly 50,000 acres of farms and ranches scattered on a South Texas empire he began carving out of brush near the Mexican border in 1920.

McAllen attorney Morris Atlas, who knew Bentsen since 1950, said of his death, "It's an enormous loss for this area. He was not only one of the pioneers, he retained his interest in the development of the area. I always say there are no indispensable people, but he may be an exception."

In his final years, Bentsen continued living at a residence on Bentsen Road near Mission, and was up at dawn every day and on the road to his real estate office or one of the farms and ranches in Hidalgo and Starr counties.

He and his wife, Dolly, who died in 1977, had four children: Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr.; Kenneth, a Houston architect; Don, a McAllen businessman; and Betty, the wife of Lower Rio Grande Valley businessman Dan Winn.

The senior Bentsen, one of six children of Danish parents, grew up thrashing wheat and busting wild horses in the South Dakota Badlands. He had little schooling, leaving his studies at 13 to follow the grain harvests.

He and his early partners bought and tamed wild mustangs trapped in the canyons of the Dakotas, paying $3 a head and selling them for $12.

Judge dismisses tax rollback suit against schools

AUSTIN (AP) — A Fort Worth-area school district no longer faces possible bankruptcy since a state district court dismissed a case calling for the rollback and refund of $1 million in taxes, the school board president says.

"We just could not have handled an enforced rollback," said Dan Kille, president of the Lake Worth school board, which had filed the suit in Travis County district court to stop a rollback election.

"I don't believe we could have survived," Kille said Tuesday. He estimated the refunded taxes would have been about $1 million.

The 1,400-student district raised its tax rate 32 percent in 1987. Some property values have jumped as much as 98 percent, one school board member said. Kille said the school district's tax rate was on par with the state average.

State District Judge Scott McCown threw out the case at the school district's request. An attorney for the district said the case became irrelevant because the district could not refund the taxes anyway.

"We wanted to try this, and I was ready to try it, but the whole issue is moot," Randall "Buck" Wood said.

In dismissing the suit, McCown agreed.

"The Legislature did not authorize a tax reimbursement," although state law would have allowed a tax rollback election, the judge said. He said residents fighting the tax increase should have sought a temporary injunction before taxes were collected under the new rates.

The judge also said he was dismissing the case because delays in bringing it to court nullified the questions involved. He said even if the voters demanded return of those tax dollars, the school district could not pay now without going bankrupt.

McCown said the parties could appeal.

The school district sued state education officials, the state attorney general, and the Committee for Responsible Leadership, which had led the rollback and refund initiative.

The school district argued that a tax rollback was unconstitutional because it gave voters legislative power, and because it would impair the school district's ability to provide an adequate education.

Kille said tax rates went up twice between 1985 and 1987 in large part because of changes mandated by the Legislature, such as teacher pay raises, special education programs and lower student-teacher ratios.

Eric Samuelson, attorney for the Committee for Responsible Leadership, said obtaining a temporary injunction against the increase would have required the petitioners to put up a bond equal to the tax revenues — $1 million.

In a court brief, the committee had asked the court to order the district's 1988 maximum tax rate be no more than 8 percent over the 1986 rate.

George Hollis, a new school board member who supported a tax rollback, said assessments on some of his properties have jumped 98 percent over the past two years.

Hollis and Dan Parker, another new school board member who campaigned for a rollback, said they think the taxes could be refunded.

Bob Bird, secretary of Committee for Responsible Leadership, blamed delays and the eventual dismissal on Wood.

"What they did is they sued us to prevent us from having an election that the law says we can have," Bird said. "And then they dragged their feet so we never got to court."

Texas A&M officials use silver shovels to break ground Tuesday for new biosciences center.

Texas A&M starts construction for new biotechnology institute

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A $21.5 million Texas A&M University biotechnology center expected to open in 1991 will provide a link between the traditional animal and plant research at A&M and the human health research at the world's largest medical center, officials say.

The university broke ground Tuesday for the Institute of Biosciences and Technology, an 11-story, 210,000-square-foot research center on the edge of the Texas Medical Center.

The Texas A&M facility, touted as a project that will make Texas a national leader in biotechnology research, will be the 39th in the medical center, which employs 58,000 people.

"It's research that will provide a better quality of life for all of us," said David Eller, chairman of the A&M Board of Regents.

"Bioscience research is not a shade-tree enterprise. Significant advances will not be made by lucky amateurs. Rather it will require both carefully planned facilities and highly trained, creative minds," he said.

The research facility will be the base for 150 researchers and their staffs. Officials estimated it would pump at least $10 million annually into the local economy.

"Working together we can make Texas the world's biotechnology center," Eller said. "It is clear biotechnology is an emerging research area and emerging industry."

At ceremonies in the one-time parking lot of the famed old Shamrock Hilton, nearly three dozen school, state and local officials turned a pile of dirt with silver shovels adorned with the Texas A&M logo and decorated with large maroon ribbons. The hotel was razed last year.

The goal of the center is to emphasize gene mapping and sequencing, gene therapy and investigate animal models of human diseases like muscular dystrophy, Alzheimer's disease and Down's syndrome.

Other work is to deal with molecular and cell biology, including embryo transfer and fertility research, and protein engineering, which involves development of improved diagnostics, therapeutics and vaccines for illnesses such as AIDS and hepatitis.

"This is the celebration of a dream come true," A&M Chancellor Perry Adkisson said. "It is a dream of expanding our own growing efforts in biotechnology. It is a dream of expanding our firm commitment to the citizens of Texas — a commitment to the economic growth of this state."

U.S. Rep. Bill Archer compared the start of the center to that of the Johnson Space Center, which came to Houston 25 years ago.

"Biotechnology could be the shot in the arm needed for Texas," Archer said.

"Texas not only has a tradition of rallying support for technology causes but the resources to get it done," he said. "It's enormously important, not only to Texas and A&M, but to the world."

School officials estimated the fledgling biotech industry will grow to a $200 billion enterprise nationwide by the end of the century.

Bullock cautions against tax hike

AUSTIN (AP) — A major tax increase now could do serious damage to a rebounding Texas economy, Comptroller Bob Bullock says, adding that he is convinced that the Legislature can avoid one this year.

Although Bullock's official estimate of state government revenue for the 1990-91 budget period foresees an additional $1.6 billion to spend, some lawmakers say that isn't enough to provide all needed state services.

Bullock on Tuesday defended his plan to raise an additional $1.1 billion largely through bookkeeping measures among some 200 special state funds and transferring that cash to the state's all-purpose General Revenue Fund.

"Some say that such a funding mechanism would just prolong the problem, and that a tax bill is the proper vehicle to make up the shortage. But I say there is a darn good reason to balance the budget without new or higher taxes by using this transfer method," he said.

Bullock said such transfers are common in private business, and he said Texas and other states have done it before.

"To those who say we are borrowing from the next budget, then I say so be it, because I for one believe that we will be in better shape to cover it in 1992-93 than we are now," he said in a speech to the Texas Association of Realtors.

"Our economy, the people in it, the businessmen and women in it, need some breathing room in light of the huge tax bills imposed on them the last few years. They need a breath of fresh air, from higher taxes, while they put our economy back in order," Bullock said.

"I believe that new and higher taxes at this time would be ... roadblocks, that they would have a depressing effect both real and psychological on present Texas taxpayers and on those who are giving Texas careful study."

Texas super collider site selection finalized today

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least one senator from a state that lost its bid for the billion-dollar super collider still hopes Congress will send the Energy Department's decision to build the atom smasher in Texas "back to the drawing board."

Despite the some of the losers' bitter complaints and calls for an investigation, however, Energy Secretary John Herrington was prepared to make the Texas site final today, officials said.

Herrington was scheduled this afternoon to sign a "record of decision," a formal document making it official that the super collider, a 53-mile underground tunnel, would be built around the city of Waxahachie, officials said. Herrington was to meet with senior agency managers before announcing his final decision, energy department spokesman Jeff Sherwood said.

A howl of protest went up from officials in some of the six other finalist states when Herrington declared Nov. 10 that Texas was the "preferred site" for the $5.9 billion physics project.

Democratic Sens. Paul Simon of Illinois and Dennis DeConcini of Arizona were among those who requested the General Accounting Office to review the Energy Department's site selection process and determine if the decision had been based on politics over merit.

DeConcini spokesman Bob Maynes said the report was expected sometime in February.

"We knew realistically our best hope for evaluating the DOE decision was by Congress and not the administration. Our best hope for a check on the process lies in the GAO report and action by Congress to send the decision back to the drawing board," said Simon spokesman David Carle.

Herrington's decision to make the Ellis County site official had to wait 30 days following release of the DOE's final environmental impact statement for the seven finalist states. Completion of that statement hinged on the choice of a preferred site.

The period between preferred and final site selection allowed DOE officials time to recheck "all the numbers, all the figures and all the criteria ... and to reaffirm the decision in the face of a lot of criticism from the sore losers that they're going ahead with the Texas site," said one Texas congressional official.

Congress must still authorize construction of the super collider and Texans are predicting a tough battle over funding this year.

Last year, Congress agreed to spend $100 million on the SSC, but decreed no money could be spent on construction.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Sure, Castro's one with all his people!

This New Year marks 30 years of power for Fidel Castro and his Communist regime. In that time, Cubans have suffered more than almost anyone on earth. They live in an island gulag, suffer economic deprivation and see their sons shipped off to die in Fidel's African imperialist campaigns.

How bad is it? Armando Valladares is a Cuban poet who spent 22 years being tortured in Castro's prisons. He recently served as head of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations Human Rights Commission. Last year he told the commission, "I remember when they had me in a punishment cell, naked, my leg fractured in several places (from constant beatings) - fractures which were never treated and eventually fused into a mass of deformed bone. Through the wire mesh that covered the cell, the guards would pour over me buckets of urine and excrement that they had collected earlier ... That form of torture leaves no physical trace. What does leave traces are the beatings with metal bars or bayonets. My head is covered with still detectable scars and wounds."

Those Cubans not tortured have not fared well either. Cuba once was Latin America's richest country, the jewel of the Caribbean. After 30 years of socialism, it is now one of the region's poorest. The people have few rights, no political opposition is allowed and religion is strongly persecuted.

Castro also exports tyranny. In Angola, 55,000 Cuban troops keep in power the Communist regime in Luanda; Castro's troops also prop up the regime of Col. Haile Mariam Mengistu in Ethiopia, even as the regime uses forced starvation against its opponents. And Castro nurtured and armed the Sandinista Communists in Nicaragua.

To finance his imperialism, Castro accepts $5 billion a year in military and economic aid from the Soviet Union. Despite the Soviets' own economic troubles, they are not decreasing their support for his state-sponsored international terrorism.

Many Americans still think that Castro was driven to Communism and his axis with the Soviets by U.S. hostility. Castro now admits otherwise. In 1986 he told Le Figaro, the French magazine, "In actual fact, I was a Communist (at the time of his Jan. 1, 1959 putsch.) But it would have been premature, at that period, to proclaim the Marxist-Leninist character of our revolution."

Today Castro lives like a czar. A recent defector, Florentino Aspillaga, a veteran Cuban intelligence agent, reported that Castro has a home in each of Cuba's 14 provinces, a Swiss bank account and a fleet of yachts. What a man of the people!

Berry's World

"We're not going to ask, but if you want to send some you-know-what to you-know-who, it's OK with us."

But who's to be the master?

WASHINGTON — There is mighty little difference, when you come to think about it, between Humpty-Dumpty on the wall and a federal judge upon the bench. The resemblance was remarkably illustrated last month in a case involving Congress, the District of Columbia and U.S. District Judge Royce C. Lamberth. The case has meaning beyond the Potomac.

These were the circumstances. In 1977, the D.C. City Council, which is perhaps the most liberal legislative body this side of Sweden, adopted a Human Rights Act. The law undertakes to prohibit discrimination on every conceivable ground including "sexual orientation." Because Georgetown University benefits from public funds, the university was caught within the law's embrace.

But Georgetown is an institution closely affiliated with the Roman Catholic Church. The church's teaching on the matter of homosexuality is explicit: Homosexuality is a mortal sin, condemned by God's commandments. Nevertheless, a Gay Rights Coalition sprung up at Georgetown. Citing the Human Rights Act, the group demanded the same recognition, facilities and support the university accords to other student groups.

The university understandably refused the demand. It was as if a Condom Club had been formed to promote birth control. Without violating its clear religious convictions, Georgetown could not possibly have condoned the Gay Rights Coalition.

Whatever constitutional right a student may have to be a practicing homosexual, he has no constitutional right to be a student at Georgetown.

The students sued, and the students won. A local court ruled last March that Georgetown did not have to recognize the Gay Rights Coalition "officially," but the university did have to provide facilities and support. The D.C. Court of Appeals subsequently affirmed the ruling.

James J. Kilpatrick

Colorado's Sen. Bill Armstrong found the decision outrageous. He successfully introduced an amendment to the D.C. Appropriations Act. His amendment directed the District to adopt a further law providing that religious institutions could not be required to accommodate any group organized to promote a homosexual lifestyle. Failure to adopt this further law would cost the district its $3.2 billion federal appropriation.

The District City Council balked. All 13 members joined in a suit asserting that the Armstrong amendment violated their constitutional rights of free speech; they were being coerced and intimidated into voting against their convictions; the Armstrong amendment therefore was unconstitutional.

On Dec. 13 Judge Lamberth handed down an opinion upholding the council's position. The court did not question the power of Congress to adopt the Armstrong amendment by direct legislation. But members of a city council do not park their constitutional rights at the gates of city hall. Their rights include "the right to vote freely."

Now, the judge's view of "free speech" is a view that might mildly be described as novel. (Armstrong calls it "bizarre" and "off the wall.") You will recall Humpty-Dumpty's magisterial assertion in Through the Looking Glass: "When I use a word, it means just what I choose it to mean — neither more nor less." The colloquy continued:

"The question is," said Alice, "whether you can make words mean so many different things."

"The question is," said Humpty-Dumpty, "which is to be master — that's all."

Over the past 30 or 40 years, both Congress and the federal courts hundreds of times have ordered legislators to vote in particular ways or suffer the consequences. Judge Lamberth himself touched — and instantly brushed aside — the example of Yonkers, N.Y., where U.S. District Judge Leonard B. Sand ordered the local council to vote his way or bankrupt the city.

Time after time Congress has conditioned the grant of federal funds upon the enactment of specific state or local legislation. If state legislatures did not raise the legal age for drinking, or did not comply with speed limit directives, off with their heads! Or at least off with a part of their highway funds.

Lamberth's opinion puts all such orders and enactments in jeopardy. If legislators have, as he said, a constitutional "right to vote freely," how can they be coerced to vote as judges or congressmen decree? And on an equally important issue, where stands religious liberty if a local council may interpret liberty to mean whatever it says?

This month Armstrong announced that the Lamberth decree will be repealed. In time we will find out which is to be master — that's all.

It's becoming a lonely world

Country music, more than most, strums heartstrings. Notice how most are sad songs and how many relate to loneliness. "It's a lonely road when you're travelin' all alone."

Why do we listen? Psychologists tell us that it is a comfort to depressed people to know that others are depressed.

Today in the Yellow Pages in many cities are listed old-fashioned telephone party lines on which lonely people can visit with others who are lonely.

Television soap operas and talk shows owe much of their appeal to their ability to embrace the lonelies in their daytime audiences.

In Illinois awhile back a con man conceived a clever way to merchandise loneliness.

He created what he called a Church of Love. It promised lonely men a paradise on earth.

The paradise was to include real, live, lovely lady "angels" who were being specially trained and prepared so that they could satisfy his every desire.

After he was enrolled, he would begin to receive letters signed by his personal "angel" including nude photographs of her, requesting money so that she could complete her training ... "to prepare herself for him."

Paul Harvey

It was a fraud, of course. There was no paradise; there were no angels.

But thousands of lonely men contributed millions of dollars — 31,000 men — $4½ million — for there is indeed much loneliness in our midst.

The memoirs of professional prostitutes relate that a "large percentage" of their male clients "want nothing more than to talk."

For hundreds of years our mostly agrarian society stuck together by necessity. The subsequent industrial society tends to pull families apart. The interstate corporation may send its employees anywhere at any time to sink new roots, establish new friends.

Out of this unhappy evolution has sprung an alone-ness culture.

Mary Tyler Moore — as Mary Richards — sang, "You might just make it after all." The liberation of women was a spinoff of the alone-ness culture; an effect, not the cause.

Until suddenly we were all so isolated that the instinctive hunger for family contributed to communal living, street gangs and the drug cult. At least this way we can share a bed, a needle, a reefer. Even the diet craze is a promise that anybody can attract somebody.

Marietta Shaginian writes of the pre-communist Soviet culture that the urge to re-associate was so strong that people would approach total strangers on the street — seeking dialogue.

History says there is a danger that the quest for a "head of the family" will spawn a charismatic national misleader.

Is it possible that Americans are turning back? Is there a new filiality in evidence — kids coming home — TV sitcoms oriented to "family"?

Yes. But not fast enough. Christmastime, traditionally the happiest time of the year, last year saw more than ever suicides.

Now Japanese have conquered Hawaii

By ROBERT WALTERS

HONOLULU (NEA) — Having almost exhausted the supply of existing hotels available for purchase near this city's famed Waikiki Beach, Japanese investors now have turned their attention to a church at the edge of the tourist district.

But the proposed sale of St. Augustine Church by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Honolulu to a Tokyo real estate firm for $45 million has provoked a storm of protest in a city where Japanese real estate investment already has reached extraordinary levels.

Clergymen and parishioners from Catholic churches around the city have protested the planned transaction. Three priests have traveled to Rome to urge Vatican officials to exercise their power to veto the sale.

"Purchases of prime land by foreign investors have reached alarming proportions," says Mayor Frank F. Fasi in vehemently objecting to the sale. "The prices paid recently by such investors have escalated beyond reason."

In recent years, Japanese interests have purchased prime real estate in many of the nation's largest cities — including Arco Plaza in Los Angeles, Citicorp Center in San Francisco, One Prudential Plaza in Chicago, the headquarters of U.S. News & World Report in Washington, and the buildings housing Tiffany's, ABC and Exxon in New York.

The proportion of office towers in downtown Los Angeles owned by foreigners, most of them Japanese, soared from slightly more than half in 1986 to almost two-thirds in 1988 — and is expected to climb to almost three-fourths by the end of this year.

The Japanese are acquiring more than downtown office buildings, however. In the Los Angeles area, they purchased the Riviera Country Club for $108 million. Near San Diego, they bought the La Costa Resort Hotel and Spa for $250 million.

Nowhere has the buying frenzy had a greater impact than in Honolulu, where Japanese interests now control about half of the office space in the central business district and more than half of the hotel rooms along Waikiki Beach.

"In Hawaii, Japanese investment in real estate is estimated to have hit an all-time high of $6.5 billion in the three years between 1985 and 1987," reports the First Hawaiian Bank. "That constituted 38 percent of the total $17 billion in real estate investments made by Japanese across the country."

Fasi complains that "billionaire speculator Genshiro Kawamoto, who made his fortune in Tokyo real estate, cruises our city in a long white limousine, casually pointing out homes to buy."

Municipal officials believe that the Japanese speculator purchased at least 170 homes valued at more than $50 million. Not included in that total is the most expensive residential real estate transaction in Hawaii's history — Kawamoto's purchase of industrialist Henry Kaiser's estate for almost $45 million.

After spending a record-setting $3.3 billion on Hawaiian hotels, homes and condominiums in 1987, Japanese investors appear to have slowed their rate of buying — in part because they already own so many of the choice properties.

The Japanese spending spree has exacerbated two of the Honolulu area's most serious problems — a housing shortage and prohibitively high home prices. Many would-be home buyers are locked out of the housing market and current owners are confronted by soaring real estate taxes.

One striking example of that trend is provided by the Waikiki Beach block of run-down apartments and homes selected by the Honolulu Diocese for the relocation of St. Augustine Church.

In mid-1987, the property was sold for $3.4 million. During the last 1½ years, however, it has changed hands four times and almost tripled in price. The Catholic Church now has agreed to purchase the site for $9.7 million — from a Japanese company.

Execution scheduled Tuesday for serial killer Ted Bundy

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Serial killer Ted Bundy's death warrant for murdering a girl was signed minutes after the U.S. Supreme Court rejected his appeal, and the mayor of the slain child's town said the execution would prompt celebrations.

In signing the warrant, Gov. Bob Martinez set the execution for Jan. 24 for the 1978 rape and murder of 12-year-old Kimberly Diane Leach, who was abducted in Lake City and was found dead in a pig sty.

It was the fourth time the 42-year-old former law student has been scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair. Bundy, whose case was depicted in the television miniseries The Deliberate Stran- ger, has come within hours of being executed only to win postponement.

His attorneys said after Tuesday's 7-2 high court decision they would pursue further appeals.

Bundy also has also been sentenced to death for killing two women in a Florida State University sorority house in Tallahassee three weeks before Kimberly's murder. He has been linked to up to 36 sex murders or disappearances of young women, most in Utah, Colorado and Washington state.

"Justice has been on hold for a decade, and it's about time Ted Bundy paid for his crimes," Martinez said. "I have a strong feeling on Tuesday of next week, the state will be able to carry out its duty."

Bundy

"There'll be a celebration when he dies," said Gerald Witt, mayor of Lake City, a rural town of 11,000 people near the Georgia border. "He has such a terrible criminal record. It's just impossible to have any sympathy for him."

In Utah, Salt Lake County authorities believe Bundy was responsible for the disappearances of five teen-age girls and think he may have been involved in that of a young woman. Sheriff Pete Hayward said Tuesday that investigators would travel to Florida this weekend to question Bundy, perhaps for one last time.

In western Washington state, Bundy is the prime suspect in the 1974 slayings of eight young women, whose murders remain unsolved.

"I can't believe it's finally going to come to an end," said Eleanore Rose, whose daughter, Denise Naslund, was one of the eight. "They keep giving him appeal after appeal after appeal. Now that it (the execution) may happen, I'm in a kind of shock."

"It's not going to bring Denise back. All of us who lost daughters, we're still going to have all those unanswered questions," Rose said. She said she had hoped Bundy would confess to the slayings "to put our minds at ease."

In the appeal rejected Tuesday, Bundy's attorneys argued that lower courts wrongly determined in retrospect that Bundy had been competent to stand trial in 1980 for Kimberly's slaying.

A federal judge in 1986 ruled that Bundy had been competent in 1980, calling him "the most competent serial killer in the country at this time... a diabolical genius." The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta upheld the judge's ruling.

The appeal said the Supreme Court "has never addressed the issue of when, if ever, a (post-trial) hearing would be adequate to remedy a violation of a defendant's right... to a contemporary determination of his competency when sufficient (indications) arise at trial."

The high court in 1966 said defendants have a right to such a "contemporary" competency hearing.

Bundy's attorney James Coleman Jr., said he planned to file a new emergency appeal.

Outlook dim in kidnapping of multimillionaire's wife

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Multimillionaire Robert Hearin has paid $1 million in ransom and spent six anguish-filled months awaiting word on his kidnapped wife, and neighbors say it might be time to accept she'll never return.

"For fear of sounding callous, I don't want to say that. But yet I think as time goes by, people are becoming increasingly despondent about the chances" of solving 73-year-old Annie Laurie Hearin's disappearance, Julia Yandell said Tuesday.

Yandell and others in Jackson's posh Woodland Hills neighborhood have been on edge since July 26, when Mrs. Hearin was abducted from her home.

FBI agents also aren't as optimistic as they were a few months ago.

"We're pursuing leads. New things develop all the time, but nothing at this time looks real promising," said FBI agent Stewart Murphy.

Murphy said he couldn't discuss the case while it's still being investigated, but said police are hoping something will come of Hearin's Sept. 8 offer of a $100,000 reward for information leading to his wife's safe return.

Hearin, 70, who may be the wealthiest man in Mississippi, has shunned publicity most of his life, and his name was virtually unknown until his wife, who he met before World War II, was kidnapped.

At an Aug. 7 news conference he pleaded for her return, and family members were interviewed on a Nov. 9 segment of the NBC television program Unsolved Mysteries, which generated about 300 calls that didn't pan out.

"The Hearin family very much appreciates your interest, but they don't have any comment at this time," a spokeswoman said Tuesday when asked if Hearin, his son and daughter plan any new appeals.

Hearin, worth an estimated $200 million, controls Mississippi's largest gas distribution company, Mississippi Valley Gas Co.; its second-largest bank, Trustmark National Bank; and its second-largest insurance company, Lamar Life Corp.

Ironically, the kidnapper's vague note demanded that an unspecified amount of money be given to 12 former franchise owners sued by School Pictures Inc., one of Hearin's more obscure businesses.

A letter with an Atlanta postmark, received Aug. 15, is the only message Mrs. Hearin's family has received. The letter urged Hearin to comply with the demands.

Baker cautiously endorses Reagan policies

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State-designate James A. Baker III displayed his trademark caution during confirmation hearings but endorsed the basic thrust of policies that President-elect Bush will inherit from the Reagan administration.

Baker also used his appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to promise regular consultations with congressional leaders and ask for bipartisan support in return.

"In order to succeed we simply must work together," Baker said Tuesday. "That is the verdict of history and that is the verdict of recent experience."

Baker ended the first of two days of confirmation hearings before the foreign relations panel with the endorsement of virtually every member.

Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., indicated the panel may approve the Baker nomination on Friday, even before Bush is sworn in as president and can make the nomination official. The full Senate will act later.

Baker used such words as "prudence," "realism" and "caution" to describe the proper U.S. attitude to the startling economic and foreign policy changes championed by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

And he refused to commit the incoming

Bush administration to resuming nuclear arms control talks with the Soviet Union by any specific date, even though senators repeatedly urged him to do so.

One member, Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., noted that Bush ran for president in large part on his experience in handling foreign policy and arms control issues, contrasting himself favorably with Democrat Michael Dukakis.

Biden said it appeared odd to him that Bush and Baker should now contend they need an extended period to review the proper negotiating positions at arms control talks.

The START talks on deep cuts in strategic nuclear weapons have been recessed since November, and Baker said the new administration's approach to them is among several key policy areas that are "under review."

Baker also said he believed the strategic talks should be pursued on their own merits and not be linked to other issues, including agreement on reducing conventional arms.

The United States should welcome Gorbachev's reforms and any positive change in Soviet human rights, foreign policy and defense postures, Baker said.

But he cautioned: "The talk is different, but the force structure and policies that support far-reaching interests and clients have not changed commensurately. Many of those policies and those clients are hostile to American values and threaten our interests and our allies. That's a reality."

He also opposed subsidized financing or credits to the Soviet Union while endorsing "normal commercial relations."

Baker said the need to construct a bipartisan foreign policy is underscored by the situation in Central America. He said the lack of consensus over the last eight years made it impossible to confront Nicaragua's Soviet-supported Sandinista government successfully.

"Clearly, we need a different approach," he said, including perhaps an economic development plan assisted by European and Japanese allies.

But he added: "We cannot and we must not abandon the democratic (Contra) resistance. We must stand by them until our mutual goals are achieved."

Baker indicated basic support for the so-called Reagan Doctrine, the overall policy of supporting anti-communist military groups in Third World countries.

But he said the standard for deciding whether to offer such support will be based on whether opposition forces are broad-based, national in scope and express "the will of the people."

Baker's performance before the committee was preceded by hours of talks with each member of the panel, and his prepared testimony appeared tailored to meet many of their individual interests and concerns.

Bush's inauguration ceremonies officially begin

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush is moving out of his vice presidential mansion and closer to the White House as the countdown to his inauguration officially begins today with a trumpet fanfare, fireworks spectacular and trio of black tie dinners.

The man who said he wanted to be the education president was beginning the day with a speech to 250 teachers summoned from each state for the inauguration. They were nominated by home-state officials to represent the best from America's schools.

In a bow to the political operation that helped him win the White House, Bush also planned to oversee the installation of his campaign manager, Lee Atwater, as chairman of the Republican Party.

Bush will be sworn in as the nation's 41st president at 10:59 a.m. CST Friday, but the five-day celebration of his inauguration begins today with an outdoors, twilight pageant at the Lincoln Memorial, complete with herald trumpets, fireworks and a flyover of Navy combat jets.

As inaugural guests flooded into hotels, building to an estimated 300,000 celebrants, Bush and his wife Barbara were moving out of the official residence they've occupied for the last eight years on the grounds of the Naval Observatory off Massachusetts Avenue.

Bush's temporary home, until he goes to the White House on Friday, is the Blair House, the newly refurbished government guest quarters across the street from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Bush's aides say the move will allow workers time to prepare the vice president's residence for its new occupants, Dan Quayle and his family, who will move in next month after renovations.

The president-elect and his wife will not be lonely at Blair House. Their five grown children and their spouses, along with 10 grandchildren, also were moving into the guest house.

The whole clan — 22 in all — will live together and then move en masse to the White House on Friday where they'll all spend at least one night.

About 100,000 people were expected for the opening ceremony at the Lincoln Memorial, and the city was braced for traffic problems in the evening rush hour.

The first 40,000 celebrants were to receive tiny flashlights with instructions to turn them on at one point to highlight Bush's campaign theme of "a thousand points of light."

The most exclusive social event of the whole inaugural was tonight's black-tie inaugural dinner, with tickets priced at $1,500 a plate. Yet, the demand was so heavy that organizers had to split it up into three dinners at different sites, all being attended by Bush.

Advocates of the poor a 1 homeless were staging a counter-inaugural banquet at one of the dinner sites in protest of the pricey tickets. Mitch Snyder, an activist for the poor, challenged corporations that are underwriting the cost of Bush's inauguration to contribute like amounts to house the homeless.

Amid the swirl of events, Bush arranged a Blair House reunion with World War II submarine crewmen who rescued him after the Japanese downed his bomber in the Pacific in 1944. He also was working to fill out high-level jobs in his administration.

Industry sources said Bush planned to name Susan Engeleiter, 36, a Wisconsin state senator who lost the race for a U.S. Senate seat last November, as head of the Small Business Administration.

Bush met quietly on Tuesday with leaders of the Teamsters union.

Poland's prime minister urges lifting ban against Solidarity

By DEBORAH G. SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Prime Minister Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski Tuesday urged the Communist Party to legalize the Solidarity trade federation for a two-year trial period.

He said the government ban on Solidarity should be lifted only on condition that it be "a partner," not an opponent that would "pull the country into anarchy."

Rakowski also suggested Solidarity — which was outlawed in 1982 — should give up the financial assistance it receives from the West.

The prime minister said that during the trial period, both the government and Solidarity would gather "positive and negative experiences," according to a TV account of his speech to the Central Committee meeting.

The trial period would last until May 3, 1991, he said. That date is the 200th anniversary of the adoption of a short-lived but still admired progressive constitution in Poland that was overthrown by Imperial Russia.

Earlier Tuesday, Zygmunt Czarzasty, newly appointed party secretary, told the 230-member Central Committee he endorsed the stand of the ruling Politburo on union pluralism. His comments suggested the Politburo already has sanctioned allowing more than one legal trade union.

Permitting more than one union is a "social necessity and not a gesture of the government or the party. In the interests of social peace, social agreement has to be reached," Czarzasty said.

He stressed those which receive permission to function should show responsibility and "above all endorse the principles of the law."

The discussion is crucial, as communist leaders struggle to decide whether to risk repeating the experiment of 1980 that allowed creation of Solidarity as the East bloc's first independent union.

After 16 months of exhilarating freedom, Solidarity was suppressed in a 1981 military crackdown. Since then, the Polish economy has stagnated and reforms have been hamstrung by many workers' and independent groups' refusal to participate as long as Solidarity is illegal.

At the second session of the two-day Central Committee meeting, the manager of southern Poland's Katowice Steel Mill warned that competing trade unions might bring "anarchy and divided work crews." Bogdan Kolomyjski urged talks with the opposition to make clear "proper conditions" for gradually introducing pluralism.

A government source told The Associated Press last week that the two-day meeting would end with a decision to offer Solidarity legalization under certain conditions, thus paving the way for talks with its chairman, Lech Walesa.

Marian Orzechowski, the party's chief ideologist, told the meeting Monday that the question of allowing union pluralism was "ripe to be solved," and said a draft statement on the topic had been prepared for a decision by the Central Committee. "It seems they will register Solidarity," said Zbigniew Bujak, a leading Solidarity activist. If so, he said, formal talks between the authorities and the opposition could begin soon.

The new party secretary, Zygmunt Czarzasty, told the 230-member group Tuesday that trade union pluralism is a "social necessity and not a gesture of the government or the party."

But Jan Turzynski, a party leader from southwest Poland, said groups who receive Western aid — a definition which would include Solidarity — should be barred from public dialogue.

Committee members did not refer to Solidarity by name, but its future appeared the focus of their two-day meeting.

Alfred Miodowicz, chief of Poland's official union federation, told the meeting Monday that no decision on trade unions should be taken before a party conference on ideology next month, according to the state-run news service PAP.

Riot police and militia block statue at Prague's Wenceslas Square.

Czech police disperse protestors, arrest 14

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Fourteen Czech human rights activists were still in custody Tuesday after their arrests during demonstrations to commemorate a student who burned himself alive to protest the 1968 Soviet-led invasion.

The group included banned playwright Vaclav Havel and Jana Sternova, a former spokeswoman for the Charter 77 human rights group who last year had an audience with President Reagan in Washington.

Also among the 14 identified by Czechoslovak state-run media as being in custody were Alexandr Vondra and Dana Nemcova, Charter 77 spokespersons.

The arrests Monday came as hundreds of riot police and water cannons moved into Prague's central Wenceslas Square for a second straight day to disperse demonstrators, some of whom attempted to lay flowers in memory of Jan Palach, who set himself alight there on Jan. 16, 1969 and died three days later.

Palach was protesting the August 1968 invasion that crushed "Prague Spring" liberal reforms.

On Sunday, 5,000 protesters had rallied throughout Prague, and an official report said 91 were arrested as police crushed the demonstration with clubs, dogs and water cannon.

About 500 people attended a Roman Catholic memorial Mass for Palach in the city of Brno on Monday, and the priest referred repeatedly to "Jan the martyr" without mentioning Palach's name, participants said.

Witnesses said they saw secret police inside and outside the church and riot police in side streets off Brno's central Freedom Square, where the crowd headed after the Mass.

The demonstrations have coincided with a meeting of 35 North Atlantic Treaty Organization and Warsaw Pact countries in Vienna to mark a comprehensive human rights accord between East and West.

Witnesses in Prague said most of the people on the square Monday were passers-by on their way home from work.

As activists attempted to lay flowers, a crowd began to gather. Police then moved in in cars, vans and with two water cannons, said Anna Sabatova, a Charter 77 activist.

Botha suffers stroke

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)—President P. W. Botha suffered a mild stroke today and was admitted to a military hospital, his office announced.

A brief statement said Botha, who turned 73 last week, was in stable condition at No. 2 Military Hospital in the Cape Town suburb of Wynberg. It said no further details would be released immediately.

Botha has for the most part enjoyed excellent health since he took charge of South Africa's white-controlled government as prime minister in 1978. Under a new constitution, he became president in 1984.

Botha has refused to comment about when he might step down.

There has been intense speculation, but no consensus, about which Cabinet member might be selected by the National Party as Botha's successor.

Soviets to start troop withdrawals in April

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Moscow will begin its unilateral withdrawal of 50,000 troops from Hungary, Czechoslovakia and East Germany in April, a senior Soviet defense official was quoted as saying.

Deputy Defense Minister Vitaly Shabanov said the withdrawal announced last month by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev will occur in two phases, Austrian Television's Moscow correspondent reported.

The first phase will be completed this year, the second in 1990, Shabanov was quoted as saying.

"We assume it will begin in the coming April," he said.

In a Dec. 7 speech to the U.N. General Assembly, Gorbachev said 50,000 troops and 5,000 tanks would be withdrawn from Eastern Europe as part of a worldwide cut in the Red Army of 500,000 troops — nearly 10 percent of its more than 5 million personnel.

Communist Party leader Karo-ly Grosz of Hungary was quoted as telling a Japanese newspaper last week that the withdrawal of Soviet troops from his country would begin within weeks, but fixed no date.

That country's defense minister, Ferenc Karpati, declined in an interview with The Associated Press in Budapest to set a date for the withdrawal of some of the estimated 62,000 Soviet troops in Hungary.

In Prague on Monday, Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Lomakin announced that one Soviet division — roughly 12,000 troops — would soon be withdrawn from Czechoslovakia. An estimated 80,000 Soviet troops are stationed in the country.

According to the Czechoslovak state news agency CTK, Lomakin said further troop withdrawals depend "on the attitude of NATO countries and the development of the international situation."

There are an estimated 40,000 Soviet troops in Poland and about 400,000 in East Germany.

Refrigerated breadsticks are the secret to this easy-to-make coffee cake, filled with nuts and raisins and topped with a powdered sugar glaze.

No need to knead dough for this easy coffee cake

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor

Here's a good-morning coffee cake that needs no kneading or rising, shapes in minutes and tastes terrific. The secret? Refrigerated breadsticks.

CINNAMON-RAISIN COFFEE CAKE

- ½ cup chopped pecans
- ¼ cup raisins
- ¼ cup sifted powdered sugar
- ¼ cup margarine or butter, softened
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- One package of 8 refrigerated breadsticks
- White Glaze (recipe follows)
- Combine half the nuts with the raisins, powdered sugar, margarine, cinnamon and vanilla. Unroll breadsticks without separating. Spread raisin mixture evenly over dough to within ½ inch of edges. Fold in half lengthwise; seal long edges. Gently stretch dough to a 24-inch strip. Twist slightly.

Shape into circle on ungreased baking sheet. Seal ends. Bake, uncovered, in 350-degree F oven 20 to 22 minutes or until golden. Cool slightly. Drizzle with White Glaze. Sprinkle with remaining nuts. Serve warm. Makes 8 servings.

White Glaze: In a small mixing bowl stir together ½ cup sifted powdered sugar, 2 teaspoons milk and ¼ teaspoon vanilla.

Lure youngsters to a healthy breakfast

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Breakfast in most homes is far from a sit-down affair on weekdays. Lure youngsters into eating a more healthful breakfast with homemade cupcakes and "empanadas." These may be made ahead and refrigerated or frozen, ready to reheat in the oven or microwave.

Another enticement at breakfast time before school is a special nog, chock full of calcium and protein. It is filling and flavorful.

JAM-CAKE CUPCAKES

For Crumb Topping:

- ½ cup butter
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon

For Cupcakes:

- 2½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- ½ cup butter
- ¾ cup sugar
- 3 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup sour cream
- ½ cup Concord grape jelly

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

To prepare Crumb Topping: In a saucepan, melt butter. Add sugar, flour and cinnamon; stir until crumbly, but blended. Set aside.

Jelly- and jam-filled cupcakes and a nutritious breakfast nog help youngsters start school on the right foot.

To make Cupcakes: In a medium bowl, combine flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and nutmeg; set aside.

In the bowl of an electric mixer, cream butter and sugar together. Add eggs and vanilla; blend. Alternately add flour mixture and sour cream until batter is smooth.

Spoon batter into paper-lined muffin tins. Spoon a teaspoon of jelly into center of each cupcake. Press crumb topping into top of each cupcake.

Bake for 25 minutes, or until tops are golden brown. Remove and cool completely before eating. Freeze any extras. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 12 large jam-cake cupcakes.

BREAKFAST 'EMPANADAS'

- 2 cups flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder

- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup butter
- 1 cup milk
- ¼ cup cream cheese
- ¼ cup Concord grape jam

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a medium bowl, combine flour, baking powder and salt. Add butter and work it into flour mixture until combined. Add milk and mix until it forms a stiff dough.

Place the dough on a lightly floured surface. Roll dough until it is ½ inch thick.

Press out 3½-inch circles from dough. Place 1 teaspoon each of cream cheese and grape jam into center of circles. Fold circles in half so that the edges meet. Press the edges tightly together.

Place biscuit pockets on a baking sheet and bake for 20 minutes. Let biscuit pockets cool for 10 minutes before eating. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 6 empanadas.

FROSTY BREAKFAST NOG

- 1 cup low-fat vanilla yogurt
- ½ cup purple grape juice
- 1 ripe banana
- 4 ice cubes

In the container of an electric blender, combine all ingredients; blend until smooth. This kitchen-tested recipe makes one 12-ounce shake.

This microwave meat pie is upside-down

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor

Oops! This meat pie is upside down; the meat forms the crust. You can have this satisfying main dish ready in 30 minutes. (Test Kitchen Tip: Hold the cooked crust in place with a spatula as you tip it to drain off the fat.)

TOPSY-TURVY VEGETABLE-BEEF PIE

- 2 cups loose-pack frozen mixed vegetables
- 2 tablespoons apple juice

- or water
- ½ cup ketchup
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 1 beaten egg
- ½ cup fine dry seasoned bread crumbs
- ½ cup milk
- ¼ teaspoon salt

- Dash pepper
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- Packaged instant mashed potatoes for 4 servings
- 3 slices American cheese, cut into triangles

In a microwave-safe 1-quart casserole combine vegetables and apple juice. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 4 to 6 minutes or until crisp-tender. Stir in ketchup and mustard; set aside.

In a medium mixing bowl combine egg, crumbs, milk, salt and pepper. Add ground beef; mix well. Press beef mixture into bottom and up sides of a 9-inch pie plate. Cover loosely with waxed paper. Cook, covered, on high to 8 minutes or until done, giving dish a half-turn once. Carefully drain off excess fat.

Prepare potatoes according to package directions. Spread potatoes over meat. Top with vegetable mixture. Arrange cheese triangles over vegetable mixture. Cook, uncovered, on high 1 to 2 minutes or until cheese melts. Makes 6 servings.

Rice and tuna offer a different combination for stuffed onions. A creamy curry sauce spices up the entree.

Use onions as shells for this curried tuna-rice mix

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Large, sweet onions make ideal "edible containers" for an easy winter meal. Onion lovers will enjoy the combination of tuna, cooked rice, celery soup and chopped green pepper spooned into these easy-to-do shells. Top off with a creamy curry sauce for added flavor. Usually, those who find raw onions difficult to digest can enjoy cooked ones.

CURRIED TUNA-RICE STUFFED ONIONS

- 6 medium (8 to 10 ounces each) sweet Spanish onions
- 1 12-ounce can tuna, drained
- 1½ cups cooked rice
- 1 10½-ounce can condensed cream of celery soup, divided
- ¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons milk, divided

- ¼ cup chopped green pepper
- ½ teaspoon curry powder

Peel onions and cut a 1-inch slice from top of each onion. Place onions in a large kettle with 1 inch of salted water. Cover and bring to a boil. Simmer for 10 to 15 minutes, or until onions are almost tender. Drain.

Push out onion centers, leaving ½-inch shells, about 2 to 3 rings thick. Reserve onion centers for soups, sauces or casseroles.

For stuffing, combine tuna, rice, ½ cup celery soup, ¼ cup milk and green pepper. Spoon mixture into onion shells.

Place in a shallow baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes, or until heated through.

For curry sauce, combine remaining celery soup with 2 tablespoons milk and curry powder. Heat and serve on the side, to spoon over stuffed onions. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 6 servings.

Coconut tart recipe features ease, elegance

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor

It's not often that you find a recipe that's as easy to fix as it is elegant, but here's a dessert that lives up to the claim. To keep the pastry from puffing during baking, prick it deeply enough to see the baking sheet through the holes.

COCONUT TART

- ½ cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 and ½ cups milk
- 2 beaten egg yolks
- ¼ cup toasted coconut
- 2 tablespoons coconut

- liqueur or white creme de cacao
- ½ of a 17½-ounce package (1 sheet) frozen puff pastry
- ½ cup fudge ice cream topping

For filling, in a small saucepan combine sugar and cornstarch. Stir in milk. Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened and bubbly; cook 2 minutes more. Remove from heat. Stir about 1 cup hot mixture into egg yolks. Return to mixture in saucepan. Bring just to boiling. Cook and stir 2 minutes more. Remove from heat. Stir in coconut and liqueur. Cover surface with clear plastic wrap. Chill, without stirring, about 6 hours or until cold.

Thaw pastry according to package directions. On lightly floured surface lightly roll pastry sheet into a 10-inch square. Cut four 1-inch strips off one side, making a 10- by 6-inch rectangle. Transfer rectangle to ungreased baking sheet. Prick at 1-inch intervals, making definite holes in pastry. Trim 2 strips to 6-inch lengths. Gently twist all strips. Place on edges of rectangle to form a rim around edge. Moisten ends. Press together lightly to adhere. Bake in 375-degree F oven about 25 minutes or until pastry is golden brown. Carefully remove pastry from pan. Cool on wire rack.

To serve, place pastry on serving platter. Heat fudge topping until warm. Reserve 1 tablespoon topping. Spread remaining topping in bottom of pastry. Beat filling until smooth; spread over fudge topping. Drizzle reserved topping over filling. Makes 6 servings.

French bean stew cooks in crockery pot

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor

This stew is an easy, delicious version of the classic French bean stew called cassoulet (kasoo-LAY). It cooks on its own in your crockery cooker while you deal with the demands of a busy day.

CHICKEN AND SAUSAGE CASSOULET

- 3 medium carrots, cut into ½-inch pieces

- (1 cup)
- 1 medium onion, chopped (½ cup)
- cup water
- One 6-ounce can tomato paste
- ½ cup dry red wine
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- ½ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
- ¼ teaspoon ground cloves
- 2 bay leaves
- Two 15-ounce cans navy beans, drained
- 4 boneless, skinless

- chicken breast halves, frozen individually
- ½ pound fully cooked Polish sausage, sliced ¼-inch thick

In a small saucepan combine carrot, onion and water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, 5 minutes. Transfer to a 3½- or 4-quart crockery cooker. Stir in tomato paste, wine and seasonings. Add beans.

Place frozen chicken on top of bean mixture. Place sausage on top of chicken. Cover; cook on low-heat setting for 9 to 10 hours or high-heat setting for 5½ to 6 hours. (Do not cook for less time; this long cooking time is necessary when starting with frozen chicken pieces.)

Before serving, remove bay leaves and skim off fat. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 626 cal., 56 g pro., 46 g carb., 22 g fat, 136 mg chol., 948 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 325 percent vit. A, 29 percent vit. C, 46 percent thiamine, 25 percent riboflavin.

Take this salad to gatherings

Basket dinner, potluck, hot-dish dinner — whatever your community calls them, these meals are a favorite way to get together during the winter. Here's a good choice for your next share-the-cooking dinner.

FRUIT-AND-RICE SALAD

- 4 cups cooked brown rice
- One 11-ounce can mandarin orange sections, drained
- One 8-ounce can pineapple chunks (juice pack), drained
- 1 cup chopped carrot
- 1 cup seedless red grapes, halved
- 1 medium apple, cored and coarsely chopped
- ½ cup raisins
- ½ cup mayonnaise or salad

- dressing
- ½ cup whipping cream
- 2 tablespoons chopped chutney
- 1 tablespoon curry powder
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup chopped walnuts
- ½ cup pine nuts
- Spinach leaves (optional)

In a large mixing bowl combine rice, orange sections, pineapple, carrot, grapes, apple, raisins, mayonnaise, cream, chutney, curry powder, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Cover and chill for several hours. Just before serving, stir in walnuts and pine nuts. Serve in a spinach-lined bowl. Makes 10 servings.

Handwritten thank-yous are preferred

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Wedding traditions that once were thought old hat are back.

"Bridal couples are getting pleasure by doing things the old-fashioned way," according to Barbara Tober, editor of Bride's magazine.

For example, she says, "calligraphy once again is in fashion for invitations and people are thinking of toasts in advance and caring about the fact that someone should say something at the reception."

"Couples are embracing the idea of dressing up, sending out invitations in advance, putting announcements in the newspaper. They have music, they carry flowers, they say their vows. Brides are having attendants, throwing bouquets, wearing a garter and cutting the cake," she says.

The once-overlooked personal letter of thanks to friends and family for wedding gifts is again in favor. Though pre-printed thank-you cards are available, etiquette experts agree that the sincere and courteous way of expressing thanks is with a handwritten note.

As the arbiter of the '80s, Judith "Miss Manners" Martin, put it: "The only time a handwritten thank-you note is not necessary is when no wedding present has been received."

According to the Bride's Book of Etiquette, another exception to the requirement for a note is acknowledging gifts from parents or a spouse. However, it's also duly noted that parents and spouse will appreciate a special letter of

(AP Laserphoto)

Etiquette mavens suggest acknowledging wedding gifts promptly, preferably with a personal note such as these, which were penned with a sterling silver fountain pen.

thanks. For all other thank-yous, the first requirement is to keep a thorough and reliable gift record.

Keep track of gifts in a wedding journal, a notebook, index cards or even on a computer. Record the gift along with the name and mailing address of the giver so it will be simpler to get the thank-you note on its way quickly. Indicate when you've mailed it, so you won't overlook any.

While it has been traditional for the bride to acknowledge all gifts, today it's also quite acceptable for the groom to share the responsibility by writing to those whom he knows best.

Etiquette requires the use of folded note paper in white, ivory or the shade of the wedding invitation. The stationery can be plain or embossed or printed with your name or initials. But the bride shouldn't send stationery imprinted with her married name until after she is married.

A note should mention the gift and refer specifically to something about it, such as its usefulness or style. If you are not quite sure what the gift is, compliment an unusual or unique feature such as color material. Mention your spouse's name in the note since, as a rule, only the writer will sign it. Conclude with a friendly closing sentence.

The timetable for thank-yous calls for a note within two weeks of the arrival of the gift. If the gift arrives on the wedding day or during the honeymoon it should be sent within a month after the honeymoon, says Bride's.

A good reason for writing notes a few at a time is that it's easier to make the words of thanks spontaneous and sincere than if you tackle several dozen notes at once.

If you expect to receive more gifts than you think you can acknowledge right away, you can send printed cards to let donors know the gift arrived safely and follow up with a personal note as soon as possible.

Cut roses for Valentine's Day loved ones will be selling at the rate of about 49,000 per minute across the United States. In all, a record 70 million fresh cut roses will be sold to consumers in retail stores for the Feb. 14 event, according to figures from Floral Index of Chicago.

The rose has long had the reputation as the leading floral conveyer of romance on Valentine's Day. Last year, roses represented 60 percent of all flowers bought for Valentine's Day, Index reports.

Rose production and prices are influenced by various factors, including weather. In addition to Valentine's Day, Easter, Mother's Day and Christmas are special occasions for roses. However, it's virtually impossible biologically for a single plant to produce blooms for all four events, according to Roses Inc., the commercial growers association.

The Valentine's Day favorite is the velvety, deep-red rose, which accounts for 85 percent of all roses sold for the event. Pink and yellow blooms are gaining in popularity, each accounting for about 5 percent of total rose sales.

When selecting roses, look for an appealing bud form that's free of blemishes, bruises and scars. The outer petals should have just begun to unfurl, and foliage should be a deep, fresh green. A bud that's too tight may never open, and one that's too open may not last long.

Gardening

Caring for Roses

Roses last longer with proper care. Carefully cut the stems about an inch above the end, under water if possible, cutting on a long, gradual slant with a sharp knife.

Immediately place the newly cut stem in fresh, clear, barely warm water. Add a floral preservative to extend flower life. Follow this routine daily, changing to fresh water each time.

There are many ways to enjoy roses, from a single flower floating in a bowl to several blooms in an attractive container. Try different containers in various locations, changing arrangements.

New for the Garden

A soil-free growing medium for container plants has been developed by A. E. Hoffman Inc. and is available in garden shops. Container Gardening Soil Mix holds water, air and nutrients and is recommended specially for use in the new indoor and outdoor self-watering containers.

There is a tendency among conventional mixes, when used in self-watering containers with built-in water reservoirs, to draw up too much moisture and compact over time, resulting in an elimination of pore space and the ultimate suffocation of the plants. The new composition mix discourages this tendency.

Twilley Catalog

The Otis Twilley Seed Co. (Trevose, PA 19047) has an entirely new 1989 catalog offering "exclusive Professional Seed Series" vegetables and vegetable recommendations best for your state, included among its offerings are 12 Summer Flavor series hybrid sweet corns, five Summer Flavor hybrid tomatoes, three sweet peppers and three cucumbers.

Flower seed choices also have been expanded.

Thornless Blackberries

Improved thornless blackberries have been developed by researchers at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, good news for gardeners stuck with this "thorny" problem!

"While thornless blackberries have been around for a while, their quality as well as productive capacity has been lacking some," said Dr. John Lipe, Extension Service horticulturist. "However, that gap has now been narrowed."

Thornless varieties include Hull, Chester and Navaho. Hull and Chester do best with some trellis support, while the newer Navaho grows erect without support.

Some junk foods are wholesome in moderation

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Your hand slides into a bag of potato chips, but a twinge of guilt makes you hesitate. Potato chips are junk food, right?

Not necessarily, says a professor at the University of Rochester Medical School. "If you ask people what are junk foods, potato chips are probably one of the first things they will name," says Dr.

Gilbert Forbes, who specializes in nutrition and body composition.

"But if you break down the composition of potato chips, you find that they have the same amount of protein as rice and wheat, more iron than milk, less sodium than cow's milk, and as much niacin as milk. They're low in thiamine and riboflavin, but they have a bit of Vitamin C. All in all, there's more nutritional value than in apples."

"The real point is that some of the foods that get labeled as 'junk' are perfectly wholesome — in moderation," says Forbes.

Daughter asks how to deal with elderly mom's shoplifting

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when you go shopping with your 80-year-old mother, and you see her shoplift?

Abby, this is the mother who held down two jobs all the time her children were growing up in order to make ends meet. She taught us to be honest, respectful, upstanding citizens. We respected her so much — and now this! I can't believe it.

I let her know that I saw what she had done, but what do I do now? I dread the thought of taking her into another store for fear she will do it again. Can you imagine how embarrassing it would be if she were caught?

Abby, she never misses your column. Please print this. Maybe she will get the message. Sign me ...
A LOVING DAUGHTER WHO'S WORRIED SICK

DEAR DAUGHTER: Please consider the possibility that something has happened to your mother's mind — her conscience, her sense of right and wrong.

Be patient with her, and explain — as though she were your child — that all stores have security officers and devices to catch shoplifters, and if she is caught, she will be severely dealt with by the police.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

If you shop with her again, watch her closely. And should you see her take something, insist that she return it. Also, share this disturbing change of behavior with your mother's physician.

DEAR ABBY: Could you please print the following letter to my father and thousands of others who are like him:

Dear Dad: Mom got custody of us in the divorce so she could raise me and little Tommy, but she is not doing a very good job. Tommy had to quit Little League because Mom didn't have time to take him to the games, and last week when I broke up with my boyfriend, she wasn't even there to talk to.

Mom is never home in the evenings because she works, and Tommy and I both have trouble with our homework. (Tommy may flunk third grade.) Mom says she wants to be there for us, but because you don't pay the support money, she's forced to work two jobs.

Dad, could you please help support us so Mom will have time to raise us?

Love, YOUR DAUGHTER
DEAR DAUGHTER: I'm publishing your letter. I hope that your dad — and the "thousands like him" — will see it and heed your important message.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to offer another precaution to J.S. in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who suggested passing on duplicate wedding gifts to others.

My husband and I saved all of our duplicate gifts with the same intention. One such present was a set of sterling silver napkin rings.

Two days before the wedding, I thought I had better check the rings to make sure they weren't tarnished. To my surprise, I discovered they were engraved — with our initials!

Lady Harvesters fall to Borger

Muriel Brown scored 30 points to lead Borger past Pampa, 66-58, Tuesday night in girls' District 1-4A basketball action in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Borger improved to 6-4 in district and 14-9 overall. Pampa dropped to 4-6 and 12-9.

Brown, a 5-11 pivot, proved unstoppable inside as she kept Borger on top most of the way with her offensive rebounding and turnaround jumpers.

Borger led at halftime, 32-28, and upped that margin to six (50-44) going into the final quarter. Pampa never led in the second half as Borger built a nine-point advantage (57-48) midway into the fourth quarter. Freshman Nikki Ryan played a solid game on both ends of the court as she scored 16 points and collared 15 rebounds. Yolanda Brown added 13 points for Pampa before fouling out with 3:30 remaining in the third quarter. Sheila Reed had nine, Christa West, seven; Diane Wood, six; Tara Hamby, five, and Crystal Cook, two.

Marcy Gallaspy added 15 points and Anna West 10 for the Lady Bulldogs, who avenged an earlier loss to the Lady Harvesters.

Borger won out on the boards 33-29 as Brown and Gallaspy combined for 17 rebounds.

Pampa had a slight advantage in field-goal shooting, but Borger's press caused problems as the Lady Harvesters committed 25 turnovers to 17 for the Lady Bulldogs. Pampa downed 22 of 46 shots from the floor (47.8 percent) while Borger hit on 26 of 61 attempts (42.6 percent).

The Pampa girls host Lubbock Estacado at 6:30 p.m. Friday night in District 1-4A action. The Pampa-Estacado boys game tips off around 8 p.m.

Athletes, coaches share PSHOF spotlight

FROM THE NOTEPAD: It was a long time between for the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame coach and athlete of the year honors. Bulldogs edge Harvesters

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Borger made good on pressure-packed free throws in the fourth quarter to hold off a frenzied rally by Pampa for a 73-70 District 1-4A win Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Bulldogs made 19 of 22 charity tosses in the final quarter, including eight in a row in the last 1:39 to break a deadlock with the Harvesters for first place in district.

The two clubs came into the contest tied for first with 6-1 records. It was the second straight loss for Pampa after a 6-0 start in league play.

Pampa came from an 11-point deficit at halftime (36-25) to give Borger quite a scare.

"I've got to give Pampa a lot of credit," said a relieved Borger coach Duane Hunt. "They hung in there and Miller (Dustin) came back and did a great job for them in the second half."

The 6-5 Miller, who had only four points the first half, bounced back to finish with 32 points.

Pampa had some catching up to do after a cold-shooting first quarter (3 of 13) enabled Borger to run up 11 unanswered points.

Pampa, led by Miller, started its comeback in the third quarter by outscoring Borger, 22-14, to pull within three (50-47) going into the final stanza. Miller racked up 15 points, including 10 battling for offensive rebounds, in the third quarter.

"Our offense wilted in that third quarter and we just couldn't get things going our way," Hunt said.

The Bulldogs used the foul line to get things going their way in the fourth quarter after Miller's 3-point shot from the corner knotted the score at 50-all with 5:30 remaining.

Pampa never could capture the lead as the Harvesters ran into foul trouble with junior starter Mark Wood fouling out at the 4:15 mark.

"It hurt them when they lost Wood," Hunt added.

Borger increased its lead to nine (65-56) with 1:39 to go when Pampa mounted another comeback. Chris Hoganson canned a pair of foul shots, followed by a 3-pointer by Jimmy Massick as Pampa trimmed Borger's lead to four (65-61). After the two teams traded baskets, Borger's Steve McDonald beat Pampa's defense downcourt for a fast break layup to make it 69-63 with less than a minute to go.

However, Borger's lead still wasn't safe as the determined Harvesters ran off the next four points. Massick and Miller connected from the foul line and then Billy Wortham took a rebound away from two Borger defenders and put it back in to make the score 69-67 with 18 seconds left.

Pampa, forced to foul, sent Wheeler to the foul line and the pint-sized guard sank both attempts for a 71-67 Borger lead. Miller brought Pampa back again on a 3-pointer from the baseline, but only three seconds remained. The Harvesters quick-fouled Danny Loftis, who dropped both free throws to make it 73-70. Pampa had one last-gasp opportunity, but Chris Hogan-son's shot from near halfcourt just clipped the bottom of the backboard as the buzzer sounded.

McDonald led Borger's attack with 19 points, followed by Ivan Hunnicutt's 17.

Miller was the only scorer in double figures for the Harvesters, who are now 15-7 overall. Borger is 16-7 in all games.

Pampa edged Borger on the boards, 35-34, with Miller ripping off 19 rebounds.

While Borger was successful from the foul line, it was just the opposite for the Harvesters, who hit only 10 of 21.

Borger (73)

Steve McDonald, 19; Ivan Hunnicutt, 17; Keith Wheeler, 13; Danny Loftis, 12; Matt McIntosh, 8; Jeff Isom, 2; Chad Thompson, 2.

Pampa (70)

Dustin Miller, 32; Mark Wood, 9; Greg Fergerson, 8; Jimmy Massick, 7; Ryan Teague, 5; Chris Hoganson, 4; Billy Wortham, 3; Quincy Williams, 2.

The Pampa Shockers defeated Borger 70-51 in the junior varsity game Tuesday night.

Randy Nichols was top scorer for Pampa with 16 points, while Jayson Williams and Daniel Trejo had 11 points each and Chris Roden 10.

"Good, quick hands by Jayson Williams and good rebounding by Randy Nichols really helped us out," said Pampa JV coach Mark Elms. "Chris Roden and Jason Becker played good defense."

The Shockers are the district leaders with a 7-1 record.

No respect for defense

MIAMI (AP)—The Super Bowl might be about a lot of things — fame, fortune, television ratings. Respect shouldn't be one of them.

By the time an NFL team has gone through six months of training, practicing and playing, winning enough to become conference champions, how can it not feel respected? Even revered?

Members of the defensive units of the Cincinnati Bengals and San Francisco 49ers can get, well, downright defensive about the issue. Respect? That's something the offenses get. Not us.

"There's no doubt the defense gets overlooked," Pro Bowl nose tackle Michael Carter said Tuesday as the full complement of 49ers met the mass of media for the first time. "In our conference, the Chicago Bears and Minnesota have the killer defenses. And our offense gets the publicity. People don't focus on us."

"We use it as a motivating factor. Nobody is talking about us shutting down other teams. All we hear is how our offense blows away people."

The 49ers' offense can do exactly that, scoring 196 points in the last seven games. The defense, which also sends safety Ronnie Lott and linebacker Charles Haley to the Pro Bowl, hasn't taken a subordinate role, however. It has allowed 101 points in that span, including just 12 in two playoff contests.

"We do mention it to each other. We talk about going out and shutting down the other team's offense and showing just what we can do."

What the 49ers could do was rank third in the league, behind those more acclaimed defenses in Chicago and Minnesota. In the playoffs, the Niners tore down those supposedly immovable barriers to the tune of 778 yards. Jerry Rice, who is questionable after re-injuring his right ankle in practice Monday, has been the main weapon with 10 receptions for 194 yards and five scores.

Meanwhile, the defense was yielding 529 yards, many after the games were decided, and constantly pressuring quarterbacks Wade Wilson of Minnesota and Jim McMahon of Chicago.

"Our offense has been scoring points just when our defense has been stopping people, and it happened together in the playoffs," said Haley.

Jones taking PGA victories in stride

By BOB GREEN

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Steve Jones suddenly finds himself a celebrity.

Phones ringing. Requests for interviews. Congratulations.

The lanky, 30-year-old Jones, who swept the first two PGA Tour events of the season, is taking it all in stride. "It won't last. So we're just enjoying it while we can," Jones said before a practice round for the $700,000 Phoenix Open, which begins on Thursday.

In that one, his hometown tournament, Jones will be seeking a rare third consecutive victory, a feat that hasn't been achieved since Gary Player did it in 1978. Is the pressure beginning to mount? "Pressure? What pressure? There's no pressure at all, because nobody expects me to win again," Jones said. "I don't expect me to win again."

"I'm just trying to make the cut (and qualify for the final two rounds). I think that's a good, realistic goal for me. If I can make the cut here, I think I will have had a good tournament," said Jones, whose home is only about 10 minutes away from the tournament site, the TPC at Scottsdale in the northern suburbs.

Buffs down Abilene Christian

ABILENE — West Texas State downed Abilene Christian 91-78 in men's college basketball action Tuesday.

Rod Tolliver scored 24 points to lead the Buffs in scoring. Rodrigo Mello added 15.

Emmitt Davis also had 24 for ACU. The Buffs host East Texas State Saturday night, starting at 8 p.m. In the women's game, WT won a 71-70 squeaker.

Teresa Tinner scored 27 points to pace WT. Denise Hunt followed with 12.

WT had to come from 11 points behind in the second half for the victory.

Pat Birdwell had 26 points for the losers. The Lady Buffs are now 1-1 in Lone Star Conference play and 12-2 overall.

McLean stays on top

Tigerettes emerge as district leader

By SONNY BOHANAN

McLEAN — Tuesday afternoon's warm weather has been an inspiration for the McLean cagers, because when they hit the hardwood floor Tuesday night, they were hotter than fire.

After the smoke finally cleared, the McLean girls were clutching a 68-47 victory over the Samnorwood Lady Eagles and a one-game lead in District 6-1A. McLean's win unsnarled the first-place tie between the two teams and boosted the Lady Tigers to 4-0 and 13-7, tops in the conference standings. Samnorwood dropped to 3-1 and 13-5 for a share of second place.

The McLean boys, who already led the district race by one game prior to Tuesday's contest, continued their dominance with an 84-64 pounding of Samnorwood. The Tigers climbed to 4-0 in loop play and 12-8 overall, while the Eagles landed in third place, 2-2 and 7-10.

The Tigers remained atop the District 6-1A heap thanks to a perpetual fast-break offense and aggressive driving and shooting by Donald Harris and Sid Brass, the top two scorers of the night.

Harris, a junior, finished with a game-high 25 points, while teammate Brass added 22 more. Two other Tigers, Kyle Woods and Quinton Brown, scored into double figures as well, posting 17 and 15 points respectively.

For McLean coach Jerry Miller, the Tig-gers' run-and-gun approach is the only way to go. "I like to run our offense like that," he said, "and this was one of our better nights. Tonight we probably shot about as well as we have all year."

The tempo of the game kept the Eagles off-balance, especially in the second period, when the Tigers poured in 22 points and limited Samnorwood to four.

"It took us awhile to get used to it," Donald Harris said, referring to the Tigers' offense. "We used to be a half-court team before Coach Miller came, but he wants us to fast-break."

Although McLean eventually won by 20 points, the game began in a dead heat. With 1:40 to go in the first period, the two teams were tied, 12-12, before the Tigers opened a 16-14 lead to begin the second quarter.

But the outcome was ultimately decided even before intermission. McLean outscored the Eagles 22-4 in the second eight minutes and led 38-18 at the half, which supplied the final margin of victory. McLean led by as much as 25 points in the third quarter, but Samnorwood again closed the gap to 20 (61-41) by the start of the final period.

The Eagles went to work in a fury during the last eight minutes, hitting three three-pointers but still never managing to get closer than 14 points. The two squads battled neck-and-neck throughout the second half, scoring 23 points apiece in each of the third and fourth quarters before the clock ran out.

Rob Sharp posted 17 points on the night to pace four Samnorwood players who scored into double figures. Teammate Alex Brown was next with 15, including three three-point shots.

McLean went 60 percent from the foul line, converting 18 of 30 attempts. Samnorwood collected on 4 of 13 for 31 percent.

In the girls' game, McLean was flawless in its 68-47 victory over Samnorwood. Kim Beaver, who drilled a game-leading 24 points, led a list of three Lady Tigers that scored 18 points or more.

Misty Magee was close behind Beaver with 20, followed by Alicia Reynolds with 18. All three players had scored 10 points apiece by intermission, accounting for all 30 of McLean's first-half points.

McLean's offense clicked on all five cylinders the entire night, consistently getting the ball inside to Beaver and Co., who didn't hesitate to put it away.

"We passed the ball extremely well," McLean coach Bill Wilson said. "We were patient and waited on the good shots. Our point-guard Daria McAnear got the ball to the person that needed it, so Kim (Beaver) and Alicia (Reynolds) had a good inside game."

McLean went to work early, racing to a 14-7 first-period lead, although the Lady Eagles put the pressure on in the second quarter, outscoring the Lady Tigers 20-16 and cutting McLean's halftime margin to 30-27.

But it was all McLean in the second half, as the Lady Tigers pegged 38 additional points and limited Samnorwood to 20. McLean didn't miss a free throw until late in the fourth quarter and finished at 92 percent on the night, hitting 12 of 13 from the line.

Susan Throckmorton and Leslie Lindley paced the Lady Eagles with 12 points each. As a team, Samnorwood converted nine of 12 free throws for 56 percent.

Rockets fizzle

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) Coach Jerry Reynolds isn't worried about a power shortage among the Sacramento Kings' forwards.

"Ed (Pinkney) and Jim Petersen are as good at power forwards than we have ever been," Reynolds said following the Kings' 123-109 victory over the Houston Rockets Tuesday night.

Pinkney scored 20 points and Petersen added 5 during Sacramento's victory against the Midwest Division leaders. It wasn't their scoring, though, that impressed Reynolds the most. It was defense and rebounding.

"They did a job in their defending for us," Reynolds said.

Petersen, who was traded along with Rodney McCray to Sacramento by Houston in exchange for Otis Thorpe in October, agreed with Reynolds.

"Historically, when I play well, Ed does a good job of backing me up and when Ed plays well I do the same for him," Petersen said. "We complement each other well. He cheers me on and I cheer him on. We get along just great. It wouldn't work if we didn't."

Harold Pressley led Sacramento with 24 points while LaSalle Thompson added 18 as the Kings snapped a three-game losing streak.

Eric Floyd topped Houston with 23 points while Akeem Olajuwon added 17 and grabbed 12 rebounds.

"They (the Kings) are playing totally different than the past," Thorpe said. "They have better transition."

Reynolds said trading Thorpe to Houston gave Pinkney a chance to prove himself this season.

Spurs bow to Nets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Seeing the New Jersey Nets take a big lead is generally the last thing Buck Williams likes to see.

It doesn't happen that often, but once it does, Williams knows the Nets are going to have a fight on their hands.

That's exactly what happened Tuesday night as New Jersey built a 19-point first-half lead and then had to rally in the closing minutes to post a 117-112 victory over San Antonio, which lost its sixth in a row.

"I think we have a mental block about the lead," Williams said. "Every time we get a big lead, we seem to become cautious and timid. Rather than build on the lead, we just try to maintain it, and that becomes our undoing."

The Nets played an outstanding first half and built a 64-45 lead behind the scoring of Dennis Hopson and Mike McGee, who combined for 39 points. Hopson had 20 of his 24, while McGee added 19 of his 24 in the half.

"In the second half, we began standing around, the ball stopped moving and we began making mistakes," Williams said. "That seemed to energize San Antonio."

The Spurs still trailed 90-78 after three quarters, but they scored 14 of the first 16 points in the final quarter, including seven by Willie Anderson and five by Alvin Robertson, to tie the game at 92.

"I thought we were just going through the motions for most of the game," Nets coach Willis Reed said. "I never really thought we had control of the game. I just don't see us being able to blow another team out."

San Antonio took a 104-102 lead with 4:11 to go when Darwin Cook hit an 18-foot jumper. But Lester Conner tied the game with a jumper. Then, after a steal by Hopson, Joe Barry Carroll hit a hook shot and Conner added two free throws to give the Nets a 108-104 advantage.

San Antonio pulled to 112-110 on a tap-in by David Greenwood with :38 to go, but the Nets tallied five of the game's final seven points from the free throw line with Carroll and Conner hitting two apiece.

"I was determined not to let this get away from us tonight," said Conner, who had eight of his 10 points in the fourth period. "It seems like every time something like this happens, it either falls on John Bagley or my shoulders."

The Spurs hit 28 of 45 shots in their second half comeback, and they had a chance to tie the game after Conner hit one of two free throws with :24 seconds to go, putting New Jersey ahead 113-110.

Confusion reigns over controversial Proposition 42

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

If ever an NCAA rule seemed doomed, it is Proposition 42, the loophole-closing freshman eligibility measure whose supporters are dodging charges of racism.

"That is a very ugly accusation to make," said Jim Epps, assistant athletic director at Kansas State, one of the schools that switched its vote the second time around and boosted Proposition 42 over the top. "We find it regrettable that some people have taken such an emotional stance and equated it with racism."

As presented at the NCAA convention last week in San Francisco, Proposition 42 eliminates the "partial qualifier" provision in the 3-year-old freshman eligibility rule known as Proposition 48. Previously, high school graduates who met part but not all of Proposition 48 requirements could still receive scholarships while sitting out their freshman year without playing or practicing.

Black coaches and administrators have been particularly opposed to Proposition 48 because they believe standardized entrance exams.

About 600 partial qualifiers, most of them black, have taken advantage of the provision each of the three years that Proposition 48 has been in effect.

Delta Air Lines finds faulty wiring in more Boeing 757s

WASHINGTON (AP) — Engineers found errors in emergency system wiring of two Delta Air Lines Boeing 757s, an airline spokesman said Tuesday. Similar problems have been reported in five other planes belonging to four carriers.

Jim Lundy, a Delta spokesman in Atlanta, said the airline immediately notified the Federal Aviation Administration and corrected the problems, which would have prevented sprinklers from working properly in the event of a baggage hold fire.

Similar problems were earlier reported in another Delta-operated 757, one belonging to Royal Brunei Airlines, two owned by Air Holland and one operated by the British airline Air 2000. One of the Air Holland planes was being used by a charter company in Canada.

Discovery of the crossed-wiring by Delta engineers in one of its 41 new 757s led to an FAA "airworthiness directive" last Friday. Airlines using the planes had until this morning to complete the inspections.

Officials of Eastern, which operates 25 of the 757s, and Northwest, which has 33, said Tuesday they found no problems with any of their planes.

Lundy said all other Delta planes also passed the inspection.

He said one plane had cross-wiring into the cargo area, which would have resulted in the wrong sprinkler system going off. The other had a wiring error that would have flashed a warning light in the cockpit, but the fire extinguisher would not have worked, he said.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said the agency had not yet received complete results of the testing of either the 757s or of testing under an earlier order involving engine fire warnings systems of Boeing 737s. In checks with several of the 10 airlines involved with the 737 inspections during the weekend, none reported a problem.

Regular airline service was not affected by any of the inspections, officials said.

The directive for 737s came as the result of speculation that cross-wiring might have misled the pilot of a British Midland 737 to shut down his good right engine after the left one caught fire. Officials have yet to determine cause of the crash that killed 44 people Jan. 8.

The two FAA directives were not related, except that both involved possible cross-wiring.

The 757 inspection was for cross-wiring of warning systems from the cargo holds, done either on the Boeing assembly line in Seattle where the planes were built less than a year ago or during maintenance.

"We are looking into the technical aspects of it to see what the miswiring was or is, how they relate to each other, and what might have happened so we can correct it," Boeing spokesman Tom Cole said after problems with five aircraft had been reported.

Cole said three of the first five planes affected were manufactured at the same time, but the one owned Royal Brunei and the first one from Delta were not.

"The Boeing Co. will examine what happened and study the way the (fire extinguisher) bottles are put in there," he said.

Police sting on racism brings call for conduct investigations

By ROSE FITZPATRICK
Associated Press Writer

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The smashing of an off-duty black policeman's face through a window by a white officer during a "sting" to expose alleged police racism has renewed calls for a citizen board to investigate police conduct here.

A television news camera crew that arranged to follow Hawthorne Police Sgt. Don Jackson during his informal sting captured Saturday night's confrontation on videotape.

"We've never been able to come forth before with enough evidence (of alleged police racism). Now, it is brought to your living room in living color," said Frank Berry, president of the Long Beach chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The police chief in Long Beach declined to comment pending an investigation. City officials promised a thorough inquiry.

"We will pursue it aggressively," said Long Beach City Manager James Hanklad. "If there is evidence of brutality, we will act accordingly."

Long Beach Mayor Ernie Kell said on NBC's Today show Tuesday that he was disturbed by the videotape.

"I ... do not support racism or police brutality, nor do the vast majority of the citizens of Long Beach, and we're a caring, thinking community and it disturbed us very much to see the tape," he said.

Long Beach, about 20 miles south of downtown Los Angeles, has about 450,000 people, including a sizeable black population.

Jackson and a companion were driving through a high-crime area of the city when their car was pulled over.

The NBC-TV videotape shows a white officer unleashing a stream of profanity and roughing up Jackson after he stepped out of his car and demanded to know why he was being searched.

The incident renewed calls for a citizen review board, debated last year amid allegations of police brutality. But Jackson's boss said the black officer was looking for trouble.

"I submit that if Mr. Jackson had stayed in the vehicle, as did the driver, this incident would not have occurred," Hawthorne Police Chief Kenneth R. Stonebraker said at a news conference.

He said Jackson apparently timed the confrontation to coincide with the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. birthday holiday, so it should be considered "nothing short of timed sensationalism at the risk of serious injury to all of the parties involved."

"I find it ironic that Dr. King was a man of peace rather than someone who provoked civil confrontation and violence. ... As a police chief," he added, "I do not for one minute, condone the unlawful use of force or police brutality."

The 30-year-old Jackson, who has been on a stress-related disability leave from his Hawthorne job for 22 months, contends the incident is typical of a pattern of racism by white officers in the area.

Jackson alleges racist slurs and actions forced him from the Hawthorne department. He has a disability lawsuit pending, has filed racism complaints against the department and conducted a similar personal sting operation against Los Angeles police.

Jackson was riding as a passenger with Jeffrey Hill, a 30-year-old off-duty state corrections officer, when they were pulled over allegedly for straddling lanes, which they denied. Jackson got out after the car stopped and police approached.

During an argument, Long Beach Officer Mark Dickey ordered Jackson to face a building and put his hands behind his head.

"You want to write a ticket, write a ticket man, Don't mess with me, man," Jackson told the officer, according to the videotape.

"Listen, I've got a right to pat you down," said Dickey. "I'm going to ... do that. I don't know if you've got a knife or a weapon on you."

Dickey drew his nightstick and ordered Jackson to turn and put his hands on his head. Jackson complied, and moments later was pushed through a plate-glass store window. "I'm all right. OK, no problem," said Jackson.

Police booked Jackson for investigation of interfering with police and challenging a police officer. Hill was issued a traffic citation.

"The officer simply used violence," Jackson said Monday.

"I already cooperated and told him he could search me," Jackson said. "I had already had my hands up and was turned to the window and he slammed my face in it."

Jackson said he chose Long Beach police because of complaints to the Police Misconduct Lawyer's Referral Service of Los Angeles.

State turns more often to bonds

AUSTIN (AP) — A review of state records by the Houston Chronicle shows that recent calls to build additional prison beds with proceeds from state bonds is the latest move in a trend that has sent bonded indebtedness soaring in the 1980s.

Gov. Bill Clements' call last week to borrow $343 million for prison construction didn't disclose that interest on that debt would cost nearly $330 million, or that about $9 million would be paid lawyers, financial advisers, investment bankers and underwriters to issue the bonds, the newspaper reported Monday.

The Chronicle's review of Texas Bond Review Board and comptroller's office records showed that when this decade opened, Texas had $16 million in taxpayer-supported debt.

At the close of the last fiscal year, the state had $704.7 million in taxpayer-supported debt, mostly to pay for prisons, mental health and university construction, the newspaper said.

Lawmakers also have authority from voters to issue another $1.2 billion in debt, primarily for the super collider and new prisons and state office buildings.

This legislative session alone is "locked into using about $200 million in taxpayer dollars to service the debt already accrued in this decade," the Chronicle reported. In 1980, no taxpayer dollars were used for state debt service. By the year 2009, Texans will have spent more than $350 million of their tax dollars in interest on already existing debt, the Chronicle said.

Clements' prison plans would double that amount, according to numbers provided by the bond review board.

"I'm not sure the generous use of bonding is consistent with our traditional fiscal conservatism," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

"I'm afraid a lot of people are looking over there and saying, 'Wait, wait, we don't have to pay for everything right now. We can put it off.' That's true. It gets us through the short-term crisis, but it doesn't do anything for the future to put it off," Caperton said.

The Texas Constitution says "no debt will be created by or on behalf of the state." However, the constitution has been amended by voters many times to create debt for specific programs.

But before the 1980s, those amendments involved bonded indebtedness for self-sustaining programs such as the Veterans Land Program or the Water Development Fund.

Those programs use the credit of the state to borrow low-interest money, which is lent to individuals or local governments. The state debt is repaid as the loans are repaid, rather than by taxpayer dollars.

The total amount of bonded debt for the state stands at $7 billion, and debt service accounts for 6 percent of all state spending, the Chronicle reported. Most of that debt will not be repaid with taxpayer dollars.

The trend changed in the 1980s as the state's economy declined and lawmakers found themselves faced with tighter budgets.

Clements said he sees no point in forcing taxpayers to pay for a prison facility now that will be in use for 30 years. He wants his prison bond issue before voters by May.

"If there ever was anything that was proper for us to bond, it's our prison system, where those facilities will be on line and in use for a 25- or 30-year period. It's absurd, and that's my opinion, to pay for a program that involves $300 million all in one year when we're going to be using it for 25 or 30 years," the governor said.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman James Rudd, D-Brownfield, calls it deficit financing.

"Yeah, a prison lasts, a highway lasts, whatever you bond is going to last," Rudd said. "All we're doing is postponing, having a longer pay with interest. It's not a savings for the state. It's just not facing up to realities."
