George Bush takes oath as 41st president

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Herbert Walker Bush was inaugurated 41st president of the United States today, describing the nation at the end of the Reagan era as prosperous and at peace while adding, "a new breeze is blowing."

Bush took the noontime oath of office at the West Front of the Capitol.

"There is new ground to be broken," Bush said in the prepared text of his inaugural address. "I come before you and assume the presidency at a moment rich with promise. We live in a peaceful prosperous time but we can make it better."

Before him, former Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle took the oath as vice president.

The noontime transfer of power had to be as satisfying to Ronald Reagan as to Bush. Not since Dwight D. Eisenhower left office in 1961 had a president served the full two-term limit, and it had been 60 years since a president bequeathed office to a man of his own party.

Bush recited the 35-word oath of office in a formal and festive ceremony. He rested his left hand on a Bible used by George Washington at his swearing in 200 years ago.

More than 100,000 people spilled across the Capitol grounds to cheer the noontime transfer of power to Bush from Ronald Reagan, an extremely popular two-term president who was barred by the Constitution from seeking office again.

In his address, Bush began by paying tribute to Reagan, his political mentor of the past eight years. "On behalf of our nation," Bush said, "I thank you for the wonderful things you have done for America."

Promising a bright future, Bush said, "A new breeze is blowing — and a nation refreshed by freedom stands ready to push on: there is new ground to be broken."

"I am speaking of a new engagement in the lives of others — a new activism, hands-on and involved, that gets the job done," Bush said. "We must bring in the generations, harnessing the unused talent of the elderly and the unfocused energy of the young. For not only leadership is passed from generation to generation, but so is stewardship. And the generation born after the Second World War has come of age."

His swearing in crowned a government career more than two decades long.

Yielding office after two terms, Ronald Wilson Reagan, 77, a one-time Hollywood actor and later the consummate Republican conservative, returns this afternoon to California.

Stepping up from the vice presidency is Bush, 64, born to wealth and privilege, a decorated Navy combat pilot in World War II, Yale man, Phi Beta Kappa, Texas oilman and millionaire, congressman, U.N. ambassador, GOP chairman, envoy to China, CIA director.

In contrast to the formal attire of Reagan's inauguration in 1981, Bush donned a dark gray pin-striped suit. In a brief exchange with reporters before a morning church service at St. John's Church, he said today meant "an awful lot" to him.

Bush previewed his inaugural address for several reporters, saying, "It will be just a broad appeal to the American people to pitch in and help. It'll be an expression of satisfaction about how far we've come as a nation, and a recognition that we've got a long way to go."

He said that in the first days of his administration, he would order a sweeping review of U.S. relations with the Soviet Union while making the federal budget deficit his top priority at home.

Bush raises his right hand as he takes the oath of office at noon today in Washington, D.C.

He will meet Tuesday with leaders from Congress.

Organizers distributed 140,000 tickets to the inaugural ceremony at the West Front of the Capitol, and extraordinary security was in place. The day dawned pleasant, with some wisps of clouds. Temperatures were in the 40s, nothing like the conditions that froze out Reagan's 1984 inaugural parade.

Asked what he would pray for, Bush said he would pray for the country, for world peace.

Chamber honors Jerry Sims as its Citizen of the Year

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

To the consternation of some and the delight of everyone else, the identity of Pampa's 1989 Citizen of the Year was revealed in the opening prayer at the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce annual banquet Thursday night at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

In the invocation, Rufe Jordan intoned about the many qualities of the guest of honor, whose name had been a carefully guarded secret for some time. Then Jordan said, "Thank you, God, for Jerry Sims." Without a pause, he continued, "And now that you know and we all know who it is ..."

Once Sims, senior vice president of First National Bank, was named Citizen of the Year, he acknowledged he had already figured out that he must be recipient.

"I began to wonder when I saw a lot of people here who had no reason to be here," Sims commented, indicating his children, grandchildren and long-time friends who had arrived for the occasion.

Dr. Darrel Rains, pastor of First Baptist Church where Sims has been a member since 1960, made the Citizen of the Year presentation.

"As his pastor I am happy to make this presentation to a man who deserves respect, deserves honor, because he doesn't seek it," Rains said.

Rains said Sims' motto has always been, "I'll take the time."

"He's successful because he sets priorities with his family, with his church, with his business. He's always willing to help others. He's honored to lift others up."

"I think when we get to heaven, Jerry Sims is going to be taking tickets," he added.

A videotape, narrated by Linda Haynes, told how Sims' hard-working nature was evident early in his childhood. While attending school, he and his brothers would be at the schoolhouse at 5 a.m. to start the fire in the boiler and clean up before the day began.

When he was 10 years old, his family moved to Hedley, where he attended school and worked in the afternoon at the Hedley Ice Co. getting blocks of ice for customers. He was so small, only his red baseball cap could be seen over the counter, earning him the nickname, "Red Top."

His banking career began following his graduation from Hedley High School in 1946 at Hedley State Bank. He was employed there four years before being drafted into the U.S. Army in 1950.

Sims served 16 months in West Germany, eventually attaining the rank of sergeant major, the highest of non-commissioned officers.

In 1953, Sims moved to Pampa, where he began his employment at First National Bank. Now senior vice president of the institution, he has been employed there for more than 35 years.

Sims has served as president of Pampa Chamber of Commerce and Optimist Club. He has been an active member of the Kiwanis, the Shriners and the Democratic party. He served as cashier for the Top O' Texas Stock Show and has been associated with the Miss Top O' Texas Scholarship pageant and the Chamber of Commerce Country Fair.

As a member of First Baptist Church, Sims has served on every major committee, including the building committee which rebuilt the church following the 1973 fire. He has served as church treasurer and is currently the Sunday School director.

"I almost left when I saw some people coming in I knew didn't have any business being here," Sims said as he accepted the award.

Stumbling over the word "outstanding," he quipped, "I wouldn't say I'm outstanding. Rotund, maybe, robust, or just plain fat, but not outstanding."

"It's not the things you do that make you outstanding," he said. "It's the support of those around you that make you outstanding."

"I wish I could be 10 percent as good as you think I am," he added.

Pump safety stressed in speech at API awards banquet

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Safety near pumping units was the theme of a presentation by a representative of Alram to members of the Panhandle Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute during their annual awards banquet and officers installation meeting Thursday night at the Sportsman's Club.

Kent McDaniel, a sales manager for Alram, which manufactures, sells, services and repairs oilfield pumping units, said carelessness and a desire to save money on the part of pumping unit owners can lead to accidents or even death to those working in the oil patch.

Using a miniature scale model of a working pumping unit, McDaniel showed the capacity crowd several areas in which pumps and those working near units can make serious mistakes.

"The first rule on a pumping unit is to read the instructions. A lot of times people try to put a bicycle together. Then they have to start again because they didn't read the instructions."

"You also have to watch the automatic cut-on. If they kick on automatically while you're standing under them, it can be dangerous," McDaniel said.

He said such simple things as a pencil dropping into a flywheel when a pumping unit is operating can be extremely hazardous, because the pencil will shoot out like a bullet.

The presence of employees in the oil patch who have long hair is another serious problem, he said. Recently McDaniel viewed a videotape which showed a man with long hair who had it caught in a unit.

"It literally scalped him. It wasn't a pretty sight," McDaniel said.

He warned that those who have worked around oilfield equipment for years are just as prone to accidents as newcomers, because they tend to get careless.

"On Friday you are thinking about what's coming up on the weekend and not what you're doing. That can lead to accidents," he said.

Other safety measures like keeping a pumping unit clean and turning the power off at the pump and the electrical power box can also prevent accidents.

"Manufacturers say to change the oil in the gearbox every three years. We've talked to people who say they haven't changed the oil in 20 years. How long would our cars or homes last if we took care of them like we do a pumping unit?"

He said grease on a pumping unit can lead to workers falling under the swinging arms of a pumping unit, which carry thousands of pounds pressure. Further, a handbrake that slips can lead to death for the person working on a unit.

"When something is not exactly right, check it out. We tend to have more wells than we have time to take care off. We crack the window, drive around and make sure there are no leaks. But we need to be more careful," McDaniel said.

He pointed out that his company was recently contacted by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) to get details on a pumping unit sold to a local company.

"A worker was setting the brake and the unit cracked and fell over on him and killed him. We have a rule at our company that if somebody gets killed or hurt, the people who were out with him get to notify the spouse. It makes you stop and think," McDaniel said.

A trend toward younger employees in the oil patch has led to other dangers, McDaniel said. He told the audience that young employees are often ignorant of many oilfield dangers and should be thoroughly trained.

During the awards portion of the meeting, API cited Dale Greenhouse, Carroll Langley and Robert Benyshek for outstanding service to the chapter. Charles Howell was given a meritorious service award from the national directors of API for work as local scholarship chairman.

New officers were also named. They include: Bill Morgan, chairman; Charlie McDaniel, assistant chairman; Ray Eckart, first vice chairman; Gil Phetteplace, first vice chairman assistant.

Dale Greenhouse, second vice chairman; Flavious Smith, second vice chairman assistant; Merle Spence, third vice chairman; Al Hernandez, third vice chairman assistant; Gary Stinnett, treasurer; Gary Samuels, treasurer assistant; Renea Hess, secretary; and Rex Waller, secretary assistant.

Grand jury brings 9 indictments

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Members of the newly-impaneled 31st District grand jury handed up nine indictments to District Judge Grainger McIlhany Thursday following the first session of the year.

Grand jurors were impaneled Jan. 6 by Judge McIlhany and gathered to hear evidence and consider indictments in Gray County District Court Thursday morning.

Clifford Dale Teakell, 29, of 125 S. Wells, was indicted on 14 counts of burglary of a building. Judge McIlhany set bond at $100,000. Teakell remained in Gray County Jail early today in lieu of bond.

Teakell is charged with the burglary of 13 Pampa businesses and an elementary school.

Listed in the indictment are the burglaries of Short's Bar, Baker Elementary School, B&L Tank

Two more banks closed Thursday

By The Associated Press

First National Bank of Cedar Park and Merchants State Bank in Dallas closed Thursday and were placed in receivership with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

First National Bank's sole office in Cedar Park will reopen today as a branch of Union National Bank of Texas, which will assume the failed bank's depositors. With $8.4 million in assistance from the FDIC, Union National will assume about $18.5 million in 3,400 deposit accounts and will purchase about $10.9 million of the failed bank's assets, including $1.3 million of the bank's small loans, at a discount of $305,100.

The FDIC will hang on to assets of the failed bank that have a book value of $7.8 million.

Grand jurors presented three indictments against Bobby Hicks, 20, of 320 Cook Ave., on one count each of delivery of a controlled substance. McIlhany set bond at $20,000 on each count. Hicks remained free on bond early today.

Hicks was arrested on delivery of a controlled substance charges after he allegedly sold amphetamines and methamphetamines to agents of the Panhandle Regional Narcotics Task Force on three separate occasions in September and October, said District Attorney Harold Comer.

Albert Johnson, 1149 Prairie Dr., was also indicted on a delivery of a controlled substance charge. At press time today, Johnson was free on $7,500 bond.

Comer said the charge against Johnson stemmed from his alleged delivery of cocaine to a drug task force agent in October.

An indictment on charges of burglary of a vehicle named Johnny Ray Harkness, 17, of 800 W. Brown. Bond for Harkness was set at $1,500.

The charges are in connection with the burglaries of six motorhomes at Bill's Custom Campers, 930 S. Hobart, Comer said.

Items taken in the burglary included refrigerators and microwaves and approximately $5,000 in damage was reported, the DA said. Harkness remained free on bond early today.

Three persons were indicted on felony driving while intoxicated charges. They are Lois Glin Woodruff, Jr., 31, of Skellytown; James Michael Edwards, 34, 1101 Ripley, and Cynthia Ann Vargas, 29, also of Skellytown.

Judge McIlhany set bond for Woodruff at $1,250 and at $1,000 each for Edwards and Vargas. All three are out on bond.

Comer said grand juror considered aggravated assault charges brought against a 19-year-old Pampa woman but had passed on the matter until the next grand jury meeting.

Marleena Fay Winborne, 19, 1000 S. Schneider, was charged with aggravated assault after she allegedly tried to run over Pampa Police officer Bryan Hedrick and Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Clifton Fletcher following a routine traffic stop on Jan. 11.

Comer said since he already had a number of felony cases ready for consideration, he expects the grand jury will soon be called to meet again.

Reagan pardons Steinbrenner, others

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan pardoned New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner for his violation of election law during the 1972 re-election campaign of Richard Nixon, while two other well-known people were still waiting to hear about the status of their pardon pleas.

A senior administration official said Thursday that Reagan approved the pardon of Steinbrenner and nine other men.

The Justice Department had recommended the pardons and Reagan gave his OK earlier this week.

But the official would not say precisely whether any more pardons would be forthcoming today as Reagan's two-term presidency ends and he gives way to successor George Bush.

Among those with pardons pending are industrialist Armand Hammer and newspaper heiress Patty Hearst Shaw. It could not immediately be determined whether the Justice Department's pardons office had made recommendations to Reagan on their applications.

None of the nine other men receiving pardons this week was well-known. They had served time or paid fines for a variety of offenses ranging from income tax evasion and possession of stolen firearms to concealment of non tax-paid whiskey.

Steinbrenner pleaded guilty in 1974 to charges of violating the federal election laws. He had been accused of conspiring to violate the laws in connection with corporate campaign contributions.

Steinbrenner also had been charged with trying to "influence and intimidate" employees of his shipbuilding company into lying to a grand jury. The questions were raised about the nature of a $100,000 contribution to Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

The contributions were made through the American Shipbuilding Co., a Cleveland-based firm in which Steinbrenner is chief executive officer. On Nov. 27, 1974, Steinbrenner was suspended by then-commissioner Bowie Kuhn from active management of the team for two years. Kuhn reinstated him 15 months later.

Steinbrenner paid a $15,000

Speech contest judges needed

Pampa High School Speech and Drama Department needs approximately 100 local persons to judge a number of events in a speech and drama tournament scheduled here Feb. 4.

Tournament organizers are seeking not only those who have experience in speech and drama or have participated in similar tournaments, but also anyone who is interested in judging, said Barbara McCain, PHS speech teacher.

Training sessions for judges will be conducted on Tuesdays and Thursdays, Jan. 24 and 26, and Jan. 31 and Feb. 2, McCain said. At these sessions, prospective judges can become familiar with the ballots, rules and regulations and learn more on what to look for when judging speech and drama events, she said.

Scheduled tournament events include debate, extemporaneous speaking, humor and dramatic interpretation, poetry and prose interpretation, impromptu speaking, duet acting, duet improvisation and standup comedy.

Speech and drama students from throughout the area, including White Deer, Dumas, Wheeler and at least two Amarillo schools, are expected to attend the Pampa tournament, McCain said.

Anyone interested in volunteering as a judge may contact McCain for more information by calling PHS at 669-6833 on weekday afternoons.

fine, but served no time. Steinbrenner was not available for comment, said Harvey Green, a spokesman for the Yankees.

Patricia Hearst Shaw, now living in Connecticut with her husband, Bernard, and two daughters, was sentenced to seven years in federal prison for her role in an armed robbery in San Francisco in 1974.

She claimed she had been brainwashed by the radical Symbionese Liberation Army after she was kidnaped by members of that group. She was released from prison after serving only 23 months, as her sentence commuted by then-President Carter.

Town stunned by gang attacks with alleged occult influence

By JEFF AWALT
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND (AP) — By some accounts they were an organized gang of devil-worshipping youth, by others a loose-knit band of misfits gone astray.

Regardless of how the teenagers are viewed, the crimes they are accused of committing have shocked this usually quiet community southwest of Houston.

They called themselves Wolverines, and in a 12-hour period on a September night, authorities say, the youths turned weapons on their parents in a scheme to run away from home leaving no survivors.

One woman was killed. Police say her 15-year-old son repeatedly swung a baseball bat into her head. Three other parents survived gunshot wounds.

"I think it's just disbelief more than anything," said Susan Lowery, an assistant district attorney for Fort Bend County.

"The crimes being committed by an adult would be terrible enough. But when you think of it being a 15-year-old and this being his own mother, it just makes it that much worse," she said.

Authorities say the youths planned to steal money, weapons and a pickup truck and escape to a place where they could live off the land. Their destinations, however, suggest to prosecutors that the teen-agers were more vicious than they were sophisticated.

"They wanted to go to either Canada, Louisiana or Port Lavaca," Lowery said, noting that the latter is just 70 miles away. "That tells you something about their thinking. There are just a lot of things in this that don't make any sense on a normal level."

Prosecutors say a 16-year-old girl was ringleader and ordered the attacks, including a shotgun assault on her own parents.

"She was very manipulative. She was definitely the leader of the group," said Alan Small, an assistant district attorney.

"It's not like she took normal everyday kids and turned them into criminals," Small said.

"They didn't come from good homes. They all had a bad family situation to start off with, and then they found each other and agreed to kill their parents."

'There are just a lot of things in this that don't make any sense on a normal level.'

Until the case took a twist Tuesday, three of the teen-agers had been certified to stand trial as adults.

The alleged ringleader and the boy accused of bludgeoning his mother now face new certification hearings because the Huntsville psychologist who examined them was charged with misdemeanor perjury.

James C. Whitley, a witness for the prosecution, was charged Tuesday for allegedly lying under oath about notes he took while examining the youths' mental competence.

Lowery said Whitley testified twice that he had shredded his notes. He later told a prosecutor he still had them, but had lied because he didn't want to be cross-examined on them, Lowery said. Authorities with a search warrant recovered the notes from Whitley's office.

He is free on a $2,000 bond. His lawyer, Hal Ridley of Huntsville, said Whitley believed the notes had been destroyed at the time of his testimony, and never intentionally lied.

The two youths must be certified as adults before a grand jury can consider criminal charges against them. They now are being held under juvenile law.

So is a second 15-year-old who was certified as an adult after examination by another psychologist. A grand jury was impaneled last week to consider charges against the boy, who is accused of shooting his father in the arm with a shotgun.

The fourth teen-ager, Eugene Lewis, 19, is charged with attempted murder in the shotgun attack allegedly ordered by the girl against her parents.

Police reports suggest the group was involved in satanism, although prosecutors question whether there were any serious ties to the occult.

"One kid (in the group) was asked one time if he loved the devil and that's it as far as we know," Small said. "There was no apparent devil worshiping, not meetings, none of the animal sacrifices that are generally associated with satanism."

Detective Lt. Marshall Whichard of the Fort Bend County Sheriff's Department said the avowed leader of the Wolverines reportedly tested recruits with three questions: "Do you believe

'Although there is no overt evidence that there is a big problem (with satanism), the rumors probably do have some foundation.'

in God? Do you love the devil? Will you do what I tell you?"

Police estimate there were, perhaps, 10 members in the Wolverines.

The Rev. Ron Moore of the First Baptist Church in nearby Rosenberg said he is convinced the Wolverines were occultists and that their practice has spread.

"From what I have heard it was a satanic group, a home-grown group dabbling in the occult," Moore said. "I talked to one young man who said he was a part of it, but got out of it when he became a Christian. When he told them he wanted out, they told him they would kill him."

Stories of the occult and the violent crimes allegedly staged by the youths "shocked parents just tremendously," Moore said. School officials said they received numerous calls from concerned parents.

School leaders say they have no indication of devil worship among the Lamar Consolidated district's 12,000 students, but nevertheless, last November they advised staff to watch for gang and cult activity.

"Although there is no overt evidence that there is a big problem, the rumors probably do have some foundation," according to a memo circulated by school counselors last fall.

"Certainly this alarms people," said Lamar Superintendent Ronald Caloss. "You hear something like this and you just shake your head. We don't want to underplay it, but we haven't found any sign of it."

Harold Kennedy, the lawyer representing the 15-year-old youth whose mother was killed, scoffed at talk of the occult.

"(The youth) is not a member of any occult group or a follower of satanism. That whole thing has been blown totally out of proportion," Kennedy said.

"I haven't seen any proof of it (satanism) and just because someone listens to a particular rock group doesn't mean they are a satan worshiper," he said. "It may be a coincidence that these other attacks occurred on the same day. It doesn't mean there was a conspiracy to commit these acts."

Kennedy said he is determined to keep the case in juvenile court. If the boy is certified as an adult, he will plead innocent in any criminal case, Kennedy said.

Prosecutors say one of the strangest aspects of the case has been the unwillingness of the teen-agers' parents to cooperate, even though they were the targets of the attacks.

"When we had the detention hearings, the parents wanted them home," Lowery said. "It came out in the detention hearing that the girl had even tried to poison her parents before, and they knew about it. She put rat poison in their coffee."

"This is a difficult case because there really was no rhyme or reason," Lowery said. "They were just misfits," she said. "They didn't fit in anywhere, and unfortunately they found each other."

Dignitaries gather for Bentsen funeral

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

McALLEN (AP) — A host of dignitaries, friends and family turned out to pay their last respects to South Texas trailblazer Lloyd M. Bentsen Sr., including Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, who picked Bentsen's son to join him in a bid for the presidency.

Bentsen Sr. was eulogized Thursday as a South Texas pioneer and devoted family man at a funeral attended by more than 1,000 at McAllen's First Baptist Church.

The 95-year-old elder Bentsen died at the wheel of his automobile Tuesday morning in a two-car crash at a rural intersection in Hidalgo County in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Others at the funeral included state Attorney General Jim Mattox, state Treasurer Ann Richards, U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and McAllen Mayor Othal Brand.

At the state capital in Austin on Thursday, flags were flown at half staff to honor Bentsen, and the Texas House passed a resolution honoring the early developer of the state's southern tip along the Mexican border, noting "Texas lost one of its most esteemed citizens."

Dr. James Eaves, delivering the funeral sermon, hailed the "complete life" of Bentsen, who rose early each day and remained active in his agricultural and real estate businesses until he died.

Eaves said Bentsen was a devout Christian and noted various passages Bentsen underlined in a well worn personal Bible the minister showed the funeral gathering.

Eaves, the former interim pastor of Bentsen's church and a professor at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, said the man would be remembered for hard work, devotion to his family, particularly to his deceased wife, Dolly, and "as a life he invested in other people."

"I remember the last rally we had here in McAllen, and he was up on that platform very proud of his son, very proud of the campaign and just a very strong, very good person," Dukakis said after the funeral of the elder Bentsen, who played a prominent role in the Democratic National Convention last summer in Atlanta.

The senator and other members of the Bentsen family attended the funeral, but Sen. Bentsen's press secretary, Jack DeVore, said the family had no comment Thursday.

"He made you feel wonderful to be around him, he was genuinely a generous and loving kind of man," Richards said.

"Mr. Bentsen until the day he died was a trader, a leader an entrepreneur, a person who had a pioneer spirit, and we're all going to miss him," Mattox said.

The senator's father, described by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby Tuesday as "one of the last great patriots of Texas," grew up one of six children of Danish immigrant parents, thrashing wheat and busting wild horses in the South Dakota Badlands.

He came to Texas in 1917, met Dolly in Mission, and started building a South Texas farming, ranching, agricultural, banking, oil and gas and real estate empire in 1920.

He eventually held nearly 50,000 acres of farms and ranches and played a major role in the development of Texas' citrus industry. But later he also recognized the need to preserve the border area's vanishing wildlife habitat, and donated land that became the 587-acre Bentsen-Rio Grande Valley State Park.

He and his wife, who died in 1977, had four children: Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr.; Kenneth, a Houston architect; Don, a McAllen businessman; and Betty, wife of Lower Rio Grande Valley businessman Dan Winn.

Ramiro Rosalez, 22, of Mission, in the other car, was treated and released Tuesday from Mission Hospital. His sister, Margarita, 19, underwent surgery for facial lacerations, and remained in the hospital Thursday.

Trial over jet purchase begins involving legal malpractice suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A partner in a powerful Houston law firm and the central figure in a legal malpractice trial did not think his involvement in a jet purchase from one of the law firm's clients constituted a conflict of interest.

Pike Powers, managing partner of the Fulbright and Jaworski law firm office in Austin, was the first to testify in a trial between the firm and its 20-year client, Mitsubishi Aircraft International Inc.

Mitsubishi attorney Richard Alexander questioned Powers Thursday about his role in the purchase contract for Diamond Air Inc., of which Powers was a shareholder.

"Everybody in the deal knew that I was a partner in Fulbright and Jaworski," Powers said. "Mr. Alexander, what I'm trying to tell you and tell this jury is that we believed that since top (Mitsubishi) management was fully aware of that, there was no possibility for a conflict."

Fulbright has said Powers was acting on his own as a businessman when he asked another Fulbright partner, George Henderson, for friendly, informal advice in drawing up the contract.

Mitsubishi, a subsidiary of Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd of Japan, is seeking more than $10 million in damages against the law firm, alleging Powers and Henderson drew up a contract highly unfavorable to Mitsubishi.

The trial in Travis County district court, promises a host of celebrity witnesses, including former Gov. Mark White. Testimony began Thursday before state District Judge Pete Lowry. The trial could last three to six weeks.

Others who might testify include former Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Jack Pope and former associate justices Robert Maurice Campbell and James Wallace, and University of Texas System Regent Robert Baldwin.

"These big names should not make you feel like you have to do something big in this case," Richard said.

Fulbright attorney Jack Maroney agreed, but added, "There is nothing Fulbright and Jaworski has done improperly."

Mitsubishi is suing Fulbright for breach of contract, negligence and breach of fiduciary duty. The company is seeking refund of 20 years of legal fees to Fulbright, and 1 percent of the law firm's gross profits between 1964 and 1986, when the jet sale and negotiations took place.

Fulbright "failed miserably" to protect Mitsubishi's interests in the jet sale, Alexander told jurors.

Former Gov. White could be called to testify because Diamond Air was created to purchase a jet he could use on non-state business. The state already had purchased a Mitsubishi jet for White's official use.

Alexander said Fulbright betrayed Mitsubishi by not fully disclosing terms of the contract and by performing legal work for Diamond Air against the interests of Mitsubishi.

"This is a representation that we believe never should have occurred," Alexander said. "Fulbright should have realized it was a conflict of interest."

"Fulbright has the burden of proving to you that the transactions they were involved in were fair," Alexander said.

Maroney told jurors that Mitsubishi had lobbied Diamond Air to purchase a jet for the governor and "they got stuck with their own deal and didn't like it."

"There was no lawyer-client relationship between Baldwin and Fulbright and Jaworski under any circumstances," Maroney said.

Regarding the accusations of treason and betrayal by the law firm, Maroney said, "Those are strong words."

"Think about those words as you hear the evidence, and then use your common sense," Maroney told jurors.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

We're still paying for a bad decision

A federal judge deciding a "pirate" radio station operating off New York's coast must get a Federal Communications Commission license or cease operations demonstrates how a bad decision made long ago can keep producing bad results and twisted logic. Federal regulation of electronic communications should be unconstitutional, but an elaborate framework of justifications has been erected to defend a mistake made in the 1920s.

When the first Congress ratified the First Amendment, which declared that "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press," it's a pretty safe bet that by "the press" they did not mean "something printed in ink on paper and nothing else." If the founders had been queried about the possibility of future technological developments in communication, they would surely have responded that "by the press," they meant something like "any means of communication or promulgation of ideas, opinions and information."

But in the 1920s, the new technology of radio was poorly understood. Congress decided it had to step in and create a federal agency to decide which station would be allowed to broadcast on which frequency. By the time the law was actually passed, most of the disputes about frequency allocation had been settled privately and amicably, but by then the die had been cast.

The feds developed the novel and confusing doctrine that the airwaves belonged to "the people" (which in practice meant the government), so the government would decide (through licensing) who would get to use this resource. An elaborate set of criteria about what can be broadcast was developed.

You might suppose that the FCC's mandate was confined to U.S. territory. A station operating from a foreign-registered ship in international waters, sending its programs out over a frequency nobody else is using — so there's no plausible contention that it is harming another station by "stepping on" its signal — should be exempt from FCC regulation, right?

Wrong, says U.S. District Court Judge John J. McNaught of Boston. Radio New York International, which did precisely that, must get a license (which the FCC is almost certain to deny) or not broadcast. Judge McNaught didn't explain how the FCC's mandate can extend to international waters, and flatly stated that "The First Amendment does not grant anyone the right to broadcast by radio."

Properly understood, the First Amendment should do precisely that, just as it tried to guarantee the right to disseminate information by the spoken and printed word. But the country made a historic wrong turn back in the 1920s, and we've been paying for it ever since.

They're howling in pain again

WASHINGTON — It is howling time along the Potomac. Every January is the same. The president sends his proposed budget to Congress and a banshee chorus goes into action.

Reagan recommended a modest cut in farm subsidies. Rep. Kika de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, howled in pain.

The president urged a one-year freeze on cost-of-living increases for military and civilian retirees. This brought a howl from the Retired Officers Association.

Once again the president sought to terminate the Legal Services Corp. The poverty lobby will be heard from. He asked authority to lease offshore drilling rights in Alaska and California, and he proposed a slowdown in outlays for Medicare. Professional environmentalists howl almost as loud as the old folks, and the old folks howl louder than anyone.

So it goes, and after a while the predictable clamor gets to be a bore. Virtually no group evinces the slightest willingness to accept a measure that might adversely affect its own turf. Under present policy, the government — meaning you — subsidizes school lunches for the children of families earning upward of $40,000 a year. Once again, Reagan proposed an end to this nonsense. Listen for the howls to resume.

As usual, the budget evoked hoots, sneers and catcalls about "the assumptions." Of necessity, every budget has to be based in large part upon uncertain projections of income and outgo, and these projections depend upon uncertain estimates of the economy.

If the economy is booming, unemployment rates will stay down and income taxes will go up. The Reagan budget for fiscal 1990, which begins Oct. 1, relies upon assumptions known as the rosy scenario.

Thus the outgoing president assumes a growth in the gross national product of 3.4 percent; he estimates that inflation can be kept to 3.5 percent; he reckons unemployment at 5.1 percent; and he predicts that the interest rate on a 90-day Treasury bill will fall to 5.5 percent.

The Congressional Budget Office is not nearly so rosy. It forecasts higher rates of unemployment, inflation and interest; it assumes growth in the GNP of only 2.2 percent.

At the CBO, things are nearly always going to the borrows, but the truth is that over the past 15 years, both the CBO and the president's Office of Management and Budget have come up with budget estimates that have missed by miles. Their projections may be educated guesswork, but they are guesswork all the same.

In every budget, economic assumptions are accompanied by political assumptions, and the political assumptions are both easier and phonier. The president was able to work the anticipated deficit for 1990 down to an unbelievable $92.5 billion by assuming, for example, that Congress will terminate 82 spending programs.

These paper economies required no more than a brisk stroke of the pen to write them into the budget. But they are fiction, pure fiction. Kill Amtrak? Operate on the Small Business Administration? Forget it. The howls are mighty and they will prevail.

The Senate's new majority leader, George Mitchell of Maine, gave the Reagan budget an instant brushoff. He termed it "irrelevant," and in a sense this is true. This was for Reagan the same song, eighth verse — or as one critic rudely termed it, the last quack from a lame duck.

Mitchell has his ear poised for the "fine-tuning" George Bush has promised for next month. If Bush is to live up to his campaign promises, he will ask Congress for $4 billion in added spending for education, environment and Medicaid.

Bush will have other problems with the Reagan budget. In some fashion over the next four years, Congress will have to find billions for a cleanup of toxic wastes, billions to salvage failing savings and loan associations, and billions to repair old highways and to buy new computer systems. The Reagan budget treats these obligations tentatively. They won't go away.

Many recommendations in the Reagan budget will be approved as written. The president recommends a substantial increase in the space program; he asks for 695 additional air traffic controllers; he would keep the airline ticket tax at 8 percent rather than let it drop to a scheduled 4 percent. Many of his nickel and dime "user fees" may make it to enactment this time. The budget is by no means a useless document.

This is not only the howling time; it is also a waiting time. Congress is waiting on Bush. Once he speaks his piece, the howling will go on — and on, and on.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Jan. 20, the 20th day of 1989. There are 345 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Jan. 20, 1981, Iran released the 52 Americans it had held hostage for 444 days, minutes after the presidency passed from Jimmy Carter to Ronald Reagan.

On this date:
In 1265, England's Parliament, representing districts, cities and boroughs, met for the first time.
In 1801, John Marshall was appointed U.S. chief justice.

In 1887, the U.S. Senate approved an agreement to lease Pearl Harbor in Hawaii as a naval base.

In 1936, Britain's King George V died. He was succeeded by Edward VIII.

In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt became the first chief executive to be inaugurated on Jan. 20 instead of March 4, because of the 20th Amendment to the Constitution.

In 1942, Nazi officials held the notorious Wannsee conference in Berlin.

Moody still brightens Chicago

Bible colleges, generations past, located themselves in pastoral settings with lawns, landscaped campus and tree-lined quadrangle where scholars could commune with God's inspiring creation.

Not D.L. Moody.
Mr. Moody, in 1886, sank roots for what was to become the Moody Bible Institute right where the action was. He was inspired less by nature's grandeur than by human need. His first Sunday School was for the street urchins other churches turned away.

Such was the impact of this Christian educational institution — leading street toughs to become respected citizens — that President Abraham Lincoln visited Moody's ministry personally, applauded it nationally.

A hundred years later that Moody Bible Institute is still blooming where it was planted — in the hurting heart of Chicago — embracing 1,500 students. More than 300 of these students are involved in programs for the urban poor of its own neighborhood.

There are youth clubs, tutoring programs, big brother/big sister programs, clinics and workshops.

Here dedicated young people train for the ministry or for their professions while, at the same time, they are missionaries to those from whom others turn away.

The nearby infamous Cabrini Green Housing Project — low-income housing — has become a dismal gang-run drug-infested hell-hole in the asphalt jungle where even policemen fear to tread.

Moody, mind you, is tuition free; receives no government funds. Yet the Moody "Ministry at Home" has embraced the kids of Caribini Green.

Six thousand Moody graduates are now serving in 108 other countries — while Moody undergraduates learn at home, as missionaries to the Chicagoans whom others shun.

They visit the sick and lonely, the homeless and the elderly.

Today, under President Joseph Stowell, Moody is preparing to expand its resources for community service — contemplating a three-basketball court gymnasium, swimming pool and physical education complex not only to be used by the student body but to be shared by the surrounding community which has no gymnasium, no swimming pool, no decent recreational facilities for youngsters who might thus escape poverty's cycle of despair.

Moody Bible Institute, after 100 years, continues to brighten the corner where it is.

Chicago's late Mayor Harold Washington called MBI "a pillar and model for the entire community," supplying what he called "a desperate inner-city need for demonstrated compassion."

The proposed multimillion-dollar facility, according to President Stockwell, can be a "wellspring for physical and spiritual renewal."

Moody-run basketball, volleyball, swimming and exercise programs will provide an enhanced opportunity for wholesome recreation for area youngsters whose present-best alternative is the gang dive, the pool hall or the head shop.

A former Chicago police chief, Fred Rice, said, "When the Moody students return to campus, it's as though someone on the near north side had turned on the lights."

Moody blooms where it's planted.

Japanese learning to extend their reach

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — "Government relations" offices long have been maintained here by corporations that are anxious to stay on the right side of the politicians and bureaucrats who control the federal government.

Now, however, a new category of companies with a very different heritage also has Washington representation. Included in that classification are Honda and Hitachi, Matsushita and Mitsubishi, Nissan and NEC, Sony and Subaru.

Because these Japanese firms now have substantial investments in this country, they have become increasingly active not only in the political realm but in the economic and social spheres — and their influence is likely to grow.

Japan is hardly the largest foreign holder of this nation's assets. The United Kingdom ranks first with $75 billion worth of investments, followed by the Netherlands with $47 billion, Japan with $33 billion, Canada with $22 billion, West Germany with $20 billion, Switzerland with $14 billion and France with $10 billion.

"But no country has increased its U.S. investments faster than Japan," notes the Congressional Economic Leadership Institute, a non-profit, non-government organization based in Arlington, Va.

"Japanese investments in the United States climbed 611 percent between 1980 and 1987," the institute says in its recent report on "American Assets." Moreover, it projects that, if the trend continues, Japan will surpass "both the United Kingdom and the Netherlands to become the No. 1 cumulative investor by 1990."

At plants in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana, Japanese automakers are expected to produce 1.3 million cars and trucks this year, with that total projected to rise to 2.2 million by 1992. (In some cases the Japanese are partners in joint ventures with domestic firms, but most of their endeavors are independent.)

Japanese investors are among the leading holders of the bills, bonds and notes issued by the Treasury Department to finance the federal government's accumulated debt of more than $3 trillion. In the financial services field, the Japanese have been aggressive purchasers of banks, insurance companies and securities firms.

But in no field has the relatively recent surge of Japanese participation in U.S. economy been more apparent — and more controversial — than in real estate.

Most of the Japanese purchases have been confined to about a dozen cities — Los Angeles, New York, Honolulu, San Francisco, Phoenix, Chicago, Dallas, Seattle, San Diego, Atlanta, Boston and Washington.

According to one estimate, the Japanese last year poured $16 billion into purchasing U.S. real estate. This brought their cumulative total investment up to more than $42.5 billion and gave them ownership of slightly more than 1.5 percent of all the nation's property.

Owners of commercial real estate in this country reap an annual return on their investment of 6 to 9 percent, compared with only 2 to 4 percent yearly in Japan.

Other factors driving the Japanese investment boom include the strength of the yen against the dollar, exorbitant land costs in Japan and excess investment capital in Japan, much of it the product of that country's international trade surplus.

Thus, Japanese investment constitutes an indirect repatriation of a substantial portion of the money lost through this country's international trade deficit. Moreover, the creation of 3 million domestic jobs is attributed to foreign investment.

But foreign ownership of a growing (albeit still relatively small) portion of the nation's manufacturing base, its financial institutions and its real estate poses myriad questions that remain to be satisfactorily answered.

Reagan gives interview in his final hours

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan leaves the White House with an unshaken belief that Americans are the "custodians of freedom for the world" but frustration that he could not obtain that same freedom for his nine countrymen still held hostage overseas.

On the eve of his departure from the White House, Reagan expressed his confidence in both the nation and his successor, calling George Bush "the man who should be in this office replacing me."

Reagan was making a last nostalgic visit today to the Oval Office where he presided as the nation's 40th president, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Afterwards, the president and first lady Nancy Reagan were slated to bid a private farewell to the household staff in the residence.

As their final social duty in the executive mansion, they were treating Bush and his wife Barbara, Dan Quayle and his wife Marilyn, and the members of the congressional inaugural escort committee to coffee and pastries in the Blue Room of the executive residence.

Then, for the last time, Reagan leaves the White House as president, his first lady at his side.

After Bush's swearing-in, the Reagans travel by helicopter from Capitol Hill to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, from where they will fly to Los Angeles.

On the eve of his inaugural, Bush and Reagan met privately for about 10 minutes in the Oval Office, reminiscing about their eight years together. Then the pair went next door to the Roosevelt Room to bid farewell to about 80 senior members of the White House staff, Fitzwater said.

"The president just said he wanted to thank everyone for eight years of work on his behalf," Fitzwater said, adding that Bush paid tribute to Reagan, saying, "I wouldn't be the president if not for my teacher here, and my friend."

Reagan told the group he appreciated Bush's support over the years, quipping, "George never took my pulse once."

The president spent his last full workday doing routine paperwork, giving interviews to reporters, and presenting the Medal of Freedom to Secretary of State George Shultz and former U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield.

Reagan's speech at the event was delivered in the patriotic vein that has marked his addresses for decades.

"There is nothing so precious and irreplaceable as America's freedom," Reagan said. "America's freedom does not belong to just one nation. We are custodians of freedom for the world."

And, he added, "George is the man who should be in this office replacing me."

In an interview with wire service reporters, Reagan acknowledged that he was leaving office frustrated over his inability to free Americans held hostage in Lebanon. "We don't know where they are," he conceded.

Even to the end of his presidency, Reagan said, officials continued to explore "quietly and privately" how to win freedom for the nine Americans. "There hasn't been a moment that this isn't on our minds," he said.

On other subjects in the interview: ■ Reagan maintained that his administration's arms sales to Iran in 1985 and 1986 did not constitute an attempt to trade arms for the hostages. Reagan called that view "a total media distortion," despite his own comments in a nationally televised speech in March 1987 that the weapons sale initiative "deteriorated in its implementation into trading arms for hostages."

■ He said he still believes former White House aides Oliver L. North and John M. Poindexter will be found innocent of criminal wrongdoing in connection with the arms deal. He also said that granting pardons for either man before leaving office would have left them "forever after with that guilt hanging over them."

■ Reagan disputed polls indicating that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's arms-cutting proposals made him a more popular figure with Europeans.

With peace at hand, Miami ready to give a 3-day Super party

MIAMI (AP) — This riot-weary city prepared to kick off a festive Super Bowl weekend today, and police said a peaceful professional basketball game just blocks from the center of the week's violence showed that calm had been restored.

Officials reported occasional gunfire and minor rock and bottle throwing Thursday night, although one gang of a dozen Overtown youths reportedly beat three people. Twelve riot-related arrests were made, and police said they planned to return to normal patrols.

About 100 officers formed a barrier between the Overtown area and Miami Arena, where the Chicago Bulls defeated the hometown Heat in a National Basketball Association game. Some 13,000 fans attended the game, with no reports of trouble. Tuesday night's game against Phoenix was canceled because of the violence.

"The game definitely shows things are under control," said police spokesman Armando Villorin. "It was a test, and we feel great about it."

"We're grateful that the focus has returned to the Super Bowl," said police spokesman Ray Lang.

Raymond Scales, a high school counselor at the game, said it took him only a half-hour to sell 25 T-shirts that read "I survived Miami 1989. It was a riot." Fans snapped up the shirts at $10 apiece.

The fire department estimated damage to buildings from three days of rioting at less than $1 million, although shopkeepers digging out Thursday said their greatest losses were in inventory and equipment that was looted or destroyed.

The rage touched off by a Hispanic police officer's shooting of an unarmed black motorcyclist Monday left one man dead, seven others shot and some 370 people jailed — most of them suspected looters under 18, police said. More than 100 had criminal records, including 17 murders and 198 drug offenses.

Some remained in jail pending the posting of bonds, and that helped maintain the quiet, Miami police Sgt. Michael Mazur said.

For Miami, Sunday's Super Bowl really begins today with an onslaught of parties and performances, fireworks and frivolity. Nearly 75,000 fans are expected at the championship football game between the Cincinnati Bengals and the San Francisco 49ers.

Frank Sinatra, Liza Minnelli, Sammy Davis Jr., Robin Williams, Kenny G, Marvin Hamlisch and the Vienna Choir Boys headline the events. Two huge parties are planned, free to city residents.

Police continued to control access to the largely black Overtown area, but within the neighborhood, businesses lifted their shutters, children attended school and youngsters played pick-up basketball.

As the dust settled, business owners and a black community activist said it was clear black-owned businesses were spared and others were specifically targeted during three nights of rioting.

The rioters were not just youths running wild in the night but people who picked their targets carefully, they said, sometimes even choosing to ransack a store and destroy its cash registers and scales but leave behind large stocks of beer, wine and food.

"Everything was planned and targeted: Protect black businesses and get the white man, the Hispanic and the Arab out of our community," said black community activist Georgia Ayers.

The family of Allen Blanchard, 24, one of the two black men killed in the Monday night incident that set off the rioting, urged calm for his Saturday burial.

School killers were loners and losers

By ROBERT DVORCHAK
AP National Writer

They are enraged loners and losers, emotionally tortured time bombs who attack the helpless as a warped way of getting revenge.

Three times in the last eight months, such societal rejects have taken up guns to slaughter school children. Two of them ended up killing themselves without revealing a motive.

In a fourth case in Wyoming in 1986, a couple took 150 hostages at a school and demanded $300 million in ransom as their way of "showing the system." They perished in the foiled attempt.

"For these people, it is typically their last chance to show society how angry they are," Michael Mantell, chief psychologist for the San Diego Police Department. "Striking out at children is their way of building up their flagging egos... Someone who has given up on life has nothing to lose."

Here is a capsule look at those responsible for the carnage:

Patrick Edward Purdy
A drifter clad in military flak jacket and olive drab T-shirt, he opened fire Tuesday on a crowded schoolyard with a bayonet-equipped, Chinese-made AK-47 assault rifle in Stockton, Calif. He also packed two pistols.

After setting fire to his car, he massacred five children of Southeast Asian refugees and wounded 30 others before killing himself outside Cleveland Elementary School, which he once attended.

"Through his lifetime, Mr. Purdy developed a hate for everybody," said police Capt. Dennis Perry. He said Purdy had "a problem with alcohol, a problem with marijuana and a distinct dislike for everybody — not a particular race, all of them."

Steve Sloan, a former co-worker, said Purdy seethed when he spoke about Vietnamese because he thought they took jobs away from native-born Americans, but he didn't just single out one group.

"He expressed hatred and bitterness and anger toward just about anybody who asked him to do something," Sloan said. "It always seemed like he was on the edge of snapping."

Purdy, who had a long criminal record and was once arrested for firing a semiautomatic pistol at trees, tried to commit suicide in jail in 1987 and was described in a subsequent mental health report as "a danger to his health and others."

Laurie Dann
Armed with three handguns, she killed an 8-year-old boy at Hubbard Woods Elementary School in Winnetka, Ill., and wounded five other children. She also wounded a man at a nearby home before killing herself.

Wearing a shirt with a skeleton on it, she set fire to a house where she was baby-sitting and mailed packages of poisoned food before her deadly rampage on May 20, 1988.

She reportedly made hundreds of harassing, threatening phone calls to her ex-husband and a former boyfriend, hid raw meat under seat cushions, wore knit gloves when she ate and was called "psycho" and "elevator lady" because she rode an elevator day and night in her dormitory.

Once arrested for shoplifting, she had been treated by a psychiatrist for depression and obsessive-compulsive behavior.

James William Wilson
A 19-year-old with a history of psychiatric problems and reportedly a "fan" of Laurie Dann, he killed two 8-year-old girls at Oakland Elementary School in Greenwood, S.C.

Armed with a .22 caliber pistol he took from his grandmother, the reclusive Wilson also shot seven other pupils and two teachers in the cafeteria and a third-grade classroom in the Sept. 26, 1988, rampage.

Wilson, a 10th grade dropout whose parents divorced in 1987, had been hospitalized in the psychiatric ward at Self Memorial Hospital at least three times and was taking a drug for depression, his family said.

He didn't return for more treatments because his family's insurance benefits were exhausted and they couldn't afford hospitalization.

Gladys Wilson, the grandmother, said she gave him a framed picture of himself that he hung on his bedroom wall but removed within a few days.

"I guess he just didn't like himself," Mrs. Wilson said. Wilson is awaiting trial on murder charges.

David and Doris Young
Armed with three gas bombs, nine handguns and four rifles, they took 150 students and teachers hostage at the Cokeville Elementary School in Cokeville, Wyo., on May 16, 1986.

The couple demanded $300 million in ransom. Mrs. Young died when she accidentally set off a bomb, and her husband then shot himself.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

NEW LIFE

Nothing is more interesting than young new life. It represents all that is fresh and innocent, but more, it represents the unlimited potential of the future. How much many of us would give to have some of the vivacity and energy of the young and more yet, to have our future before us.

We can't have yesterday over again, but we can have a new life. We can be born again from above, fresh and new. God wills to give everyone this new life, abundant life, free of fear and anxiety. Go to Church this week and hear of the God who gives new lives for old.

Is something wrong with your life—an inner, restless dissatisfaction? The only from God our Maker. He alone can forgive and restore.
Through the church God has commited the provision and proclamation of His forgiveness and redemption to us. Without a church relation no one is securely related to God.
Everyone should be in the Church and the Church in everyone.

Baptists plan workshop for Christian life

DALLAS — AIDS, the economy, children's needs and poverty are among the topics to be examined under the general theme "Issues of the Nineties" during the 1989 Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission Workshop on Feb. 20-21 at First Baptist Church in Austin.

"The 1990s are pivotal in many ways. The last decade of the 20th century and the springboard into the 21st century, the '90s look backward and forward at once," said Phil Strickland, CLC director.

"While they inherit a myriad of problems from the old century, the '90s hold forth promise for the new. The 1989 annual statewide workshop of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission examines both the problems and promise of the coming decade."

The program will focus on spiritual, ministry-oriented and legislative solutions to the problems of the next ten years. As part of the look at the 71st Texas Legislature, workshop participants will join state legislators for a breakfast meeting.

Workshop leaders include Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby; Robert Theobald, futurist and economist from Wickenburg, Ariz.; Glenn Hinson, professor of church history at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.; and Ray Perryman, professor of economics at Baylor University, Waco.

Registration cost for the workshop, including the opening dinner and the legislator breakfast, is $20. For more information, contact the Christian Life Commission, 333 N. Washington, Dallas TX 75246-1798, or 1-(214)-828-5100.

The Christian Life Commission is the moral concerns and social action agency of the Baptist General Convention of Texas that speaks to, but not for, Southern Baptists in Texas on ethical issues.

New Hope Baptist plans dedication

Rev. Vurn C. Martin, pastor, and members of the newly erected New Hope Baptist Church, 912 S. Gray, are making final plans for the church dedication service to be held at 3 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 29.

Speaker will be Rev. David Williams, moderator of the Original West Texas Baptist District Association and pastor of Eastside Baptist Church in Wichita Falls.

Rev. Martin said "a hearty welcome is extended to every to attend" the special dedication services for the new facilities.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Pleasant words are a honeycomb, sweet to the soul and healing to the bones. (Proverbs 16:24 NIV)

While driving to work one day, I was timed just right to see the morning sun striking the house fronts on the west side of each street I drove.

The glow masked peeling paint, chipped wood, even cracked windows. Houses from the humblest to the most opulent were resplendent in the golden wash of sunshine.

I like to people watch, and my favorite people to watch are married couples whose love shows. I'm not talking about public romantic gestures or pronouncements which are, as often as not, superficial.

I'm talking about a squeezed hand, a shared laugh, an attentiveness, a glance which means nothing to others — little kindnesses done out of sincerity of heart.

The longer I'm married, the greater my appreciation is for the uniqueness of the marriage relationship, words for which are inadequate. It's the process of two beings literally restructuring into one.

A man's "husbandness" is a spiritual quality which communicates to his wife only, and vice versa. No one, not even their children, can come close to fathoming the persons the husband and wife are to each other.

Oneness is built of such bricks as love, passion, dreams; but common kindness is the mortar which cements it and gives it till-death-do-us-part durability.

Just as the sun striking the houses covered the flaws and made the homes beautiful, so does kindness adorn a marriage. An imperfect person becomes beautiful in the glow of his/her mate's gentle spirit.

Norwegian couple want to travel the world to tell of God

By KELLY VARNER EBEL
Guest Religion Writer

The Lord, they say, has given them strength through scripture portions as Isaiah 55:12-13: "You will go out in joy and be led forth in peace: the mountains and hills will burst into song before you, and all the trees of the field will clap their hands."

"Instead of thornbush will grow the pine trees, and instead of briars the myrtle will grow. This will be for the Lord's renown, for an everlasting sign, which will not be destroyed."

Scripture is what Solvei Larsen and her husband, Finn, live by. They strive to do the Lord's will even when the going gets tough because, to them, life isn't the same without God.

As an ordained minister, Finn provides a sermon after Solvei reaches the audience with song and testimony of her life with Jesus. Day after day they bend to His calling to spread the word and reach souls lost to the darkest shadows of life. But it wasn't always this way.

At one point in Solvei's life, she didn't know Jesus and her life was lived to suit herself. Yet she always seemed to know something was missing.

Like many of us she was always scratching, never satisfied and felt she was incomplete. It never occurred to her that she was looking in all the wrong places, letting desires of the flesh lead her.

Solvei's singing career began at the tender age of 3 in her native Norway, and by the age of 12 she seemed destined toward opera. For the next three years, she performed with the Trondheim Symphony Orchestra and was acclaimed as a rising star.

At one point Solvei thought her future was to be opera, but soon she began to wonder if this was what she really wanted to do.

Opera captivated an older audience and she wanted to sing for her own age group, so she joined a seven-man pop group all in their 20's. The group was well established and needed a soloist. After Solvei auditioned, they chose her to fill the gap.

The young, blond Norwegian began living her two separate lives but her heart wasn't in either one of them.

"I had such a longing to do something that came from deep within me, but I didn't know how," explains Solvei.

Solvei's father always told her, "If you sing, sing from your heart; if not, don't sing at all."

Solvei didn't feel that she was singing from her heart. She felt emptiness in her songs and in her life. Her despair went deeper and deeper until one night she couldn't bear it any longer and she cried out to God.

"God, if you are there, if you really are God, you have to change me because I've tried everything and I cannot change myself." Praying with all her heart, she felt God hearing her plea.

She was just about to turn 15 when she returned home from Europe with the group. Her brother met her at the door yelling, "I've met Jesus! I've met Jesus while you were away!"

Solvei had never heard of such a thing as being "born again" and was a little skeptical, but she saw a definite change in her brother.

She continued to monitor his behavior for the next week or so and finally decided that if he could change, so could she. Her brother had new desires and lived a fuller life and she wanted this for herself. She wasn't sure that this would satisfy the emptiness she felt, but she had to try — she was desperate.

Attending church with her brother, Solvei gave her life, all of it, to Jesus. The things of her past life simply faded away, and it was easier than she ever dreamed possible.

Her next step was Bible School, where she wanted to learn all she could about God. She was 17.

While there, she met Finn Henrik Larsen, who later became her husband. Both had received the same calling and so, after marriage, they traveled, touring Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland for 11 years, spreading the fruit of the Spirit. Then they were called to America, where they have been since.

For the first time in Solvei's life, she felt whole. Their lives had meaning and direction and no longer the emptiness that had plagued them before they met God.

Now, she and Finn celebrate victory daily as they let the Lord control their lives like a rudder controls a ship, and they know they are to travel the world.

"We are being molded, tried and shaped as the Lord has special plans for us," explains Solvei.

The Larsens, who have ministered in Pampa, have just completed an album in California with Harlan Rogers as the arranger and producer. Koinonia, a group of six, played back-up and Bill Maxwell played drums.

Their fall schedule was full as they were busy ministering in southern California, Minnesota and Wisconsin. In October they ministered for three weeks in Toronto, Canada.

But the Lord won't stop there. The Larsens are sure of this and they're content to continue, even to churches behind the Iron Curtain.

Solvei's goal is to help win the world for Jesus. She wants others to complete their lives. She wants them to know that, only through God, can the emptiness be fed.

John 6:35 says, "I am the bread of life; he who comes to me shall not hunger, and he who believes in me shall never thirst."

Solvei and Finn Larsen

Panhandle Methodists mark 100th

PANHANDLE — "A Century Behind Us, A Challenge Before Us" is the theme of the First United Methodist Church of Panhandle as it inaugurates its 100th anniversary celebration with special services Sunday morning, Jan. 22.

Former pastors who have retired from the ministry will conduct the services. The Rev. J. Alvis Cooley of Abilene will preach. He will be assisted by the Rev. James Carter of Lubbock.

Other former pastors who have been invited to participate are the Rev. James Boswell of Abilene, the Rev. J.B. Stewart of Midland, and the Rev. Frank Weir of Lubbock.

Following the services, a family dinner will be held where the former pastors will have the opportunity to tell some of their memories of their pastorates in Panhandle.

The services will be held 21 years after the consecration of the present church building, which was held Jan. 21, 1968.

The Rev. David Edwards is the current pastor. Mrs. Frank Simms is chairman of the Centennial Committee.

Throughout 1989, programs will commemorate the 100th anniversary. During the Lenten Season, special services will be held. In the summer there will be a day of "Dinner on the Grounds and Singing All Day Long."

The Sunday following Panhandle's School Homecoming and the Annual Square House Museum Day, Sept. 17, a "Coming Home" for former members is planned. The reader's theatre, Journeys—A History of 95 Years of Panhandle Methodism, which was produced for the bicentennial of Methodism in America in 1984, will be presented again in the fall.

Early records of the first Methodist Church in Panhandle are limited. Pioneer recollections state that church services were held in various locations, including the Courthouse, prior to 1889 when several families became members of the Methodist Episcopal Church North under a Reverend Bassett.

The first church building in Panhandle was erected in 1892 as a Northern Methodist Church and was shared by other denominations, including the Southern Methodist Church, which had been established also.

The first building was paid for with subscriptions from all residents, regardless of church affiliation. Even cowboys and saloon keepers contributed. The steeple and bell tower were the pride of the community.

The two churches were merged in 1919 as the Methodist Church South. The present church building is the fourth to be built by Methodist congregations in Panhandle.

Pampa Chapel

Evergreen will be singing at Pampa Chapel, 711 E. Harvester, at 6 p.m. Sunday. Evergreen is a gospel trio comprised of Janae Harris, Russell Ball and Wendel Christenson. Based in Pampa, the group ministers in churches throughout the United States, singing a wide variety of Christian music, including southern gospel music, classic hymns of the church and other styles. Pastor Howard Whiteley invites the public to attend "this special time of ministry and sharing in song. Young and old alike will be blessed by the ministry of Evergreen," he said.

Jaruzelski wins confidence vote

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's government won a confidence vote after offering to resign as a divided Communist leadership appeared to back its offer to conditionally reinstate Solidarity.

The party's governing Central Committee wrestled during more than two days of acrimonious debate over conditions for restoring legal status to the free trade union movement — Poland's most potent opposition force.

Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski has offered to legalize Solidarity for a two-year trial period on condition it declare itself in support of socialism, observe a strike moratorium and forfeit Western financial aid, which has exceeded $1 billion a year.

Some Solidarity activists have described the conditions as unacceptable, even "laughable", saying a trade union federation must, fundamentally, have the right to strike.

In an unusually candid description of the Central Committee debate, the official PAP news agency reported "accusations that party policy was incomprehensible, faulty and often contradictory of the expectations and view of party members."

The agency said the doubts of Central Committee members were justified by the "bad experiences" of 1980 and 1981, when Solidarity pressured the government with general strike threats.

The accusations prompted Jaruzelski, Rakowski and other members of the party's ruling Politburo to offer to step down, the news agency said, but the 230-member Central Committee gave the leaders a vote of confidence with just four abstentions.

On Wednesday, chief party ideologist Marian Orzechowski said the Central Committee had paved the way for granting the union movement legal status.

"We don't know the reaction of the other side yet," he said on state radio. "But I think that the most important thing has been said. The 'magic word' (legalization) is used in the document. ... The basic barrier that has been blocking all practical steps was overcome."

"It opens the road to restoration of trade union pluralism, including Solidarity, formulating at the same time a number of conditions which have to be fulfilled so the road is not too bumpy," Orzechowski said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the Polish leadership's "stated willingness to relegalize the Solidarity trade union under certain conditions is a step forward. ... Relegalization would be a major achievement on the road to Poland's reform and recovery."

Soviets face rising crime rate

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet crime rate rose nearly 17 percent last year as Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reform programs unwittingly contributed to a rash of assaults, robberies and theft, according to an interview published Thursday.

While final statistics are not yet available, "even without them it is clear that crime in 1988 grew consistently and quickly from month to month," Interior Minister Vadim Bakatin was quoted telling the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

"And as a result, the growth of illegal activities as measure by criminal investigation was 16.9 percent. Robberies, assaults and theft of personal property increased in frequency by more than a third," he was quoted as saying.

Attacks on police increased and street crime rose by more than 40 percent, he said.

Bakatin supervises the Soviet Union's uniformed police. In his first major interview since taking over in October from Alexander Vlasov, he said police themselves were often corrupt and ill-prepared to fight crime.

Vlasov was made premier of the Russian republic and promoted by Gorbachev to non-voting status on the party's ruling Politburo.

Under Gorbachev, officials and the state media have been more open about reporting drug abuse, prostitution and other crimes, including details of criminal investigations. But Bakatin's half-page interview in Pravda was an important admission that reform has brought problems as well.

While making Soviet society more open, Gorbachev's reforms have created "complicated, at times painful processes of self-cleansing, an increase in civil and ethnic self-awareness," he said.

Two republics where ethnic awareness is growing most rapidly, Latvia and Estonia, headed the areas Bakatin named where crime is growing most rapidly. He also cited several times the violence between Armenians and Azerbaijanis, where Interior Ministry troops were called in to restore order.

The interior ministry said many criminals released from labor colonies under legal reforms have been unable to find work because state industries are cutting back their workforces to meet efficiency demands of Gorbachev's economic reforms. Some return to crime.

Soviets plan to withdraw nuke missiles

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Thursday the Soviet Union will withdraw some of its short-range nuclear missiles from Eastern Europe.

Shevardnadze said a security and human rights accord approved Sunday by 35 nations attending a Vienna meeting made the move possible. He said the missiles will be pulled out along with troops being withdrawn from Eastern Europe.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced in December that 50,000 Red Army troops would be pulled out of Eastern Europe over the next two years, but he made no mention of planned missile withdrawals.

Shevardnadze made the announcement to foreign ministers at the conclusion Thursday of the Conference on Security and Human Rights in Europe.

Stephen Ledogar, the U.S. ambassador to new arms talks scheduled to open in Vienna in March, described Shevardnadze's speech as "upbeat" and in general an encouraging sign for relations between NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

In Brussels, NATO spokesman Robin Stafford said, "If this signals that ... the Soviets are now beginning to realize that their potential far exceeds legitimate requirements, we can only find such steps encouraging."

But Stafford added, "Certainly questions must be answered. Which systems will be removed? How many? To where? And what happens to them then? In any event, Soviet superiority seems certain to remain for some time."

Saying that "truth must be visible," Shevardnadze said the Soviet Union should publish by the end of the month a detailed schedule of its armed forces reductions.

Short-range missiles, also known as tactical or battlefield weapons, have a range up to 300 miles and are not covered in the 1987 arms accord signed by President Reagan and Gorbachev. That agreement was to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear weapons, with a range up to 1,500 miles.

In a brief exchange with reporters after his speech, Shevardnadze made clear that only those short-range weapons attached to military units being withdrawn from Eastern Europe will be removed and dismantled without conditions.

Shevardnadze said he could not say what percentage of the Kremlin's short-range stockpile would remain deployed. He called on the West to negotiate removal of the remaining missiles as soon as possible.

Ledogar repeated the U.S. position that negotiations on the remaining short-range missiles should be set only when some progress has been made toward balancing the two sides' conventional forces.

Harry James Orchestra treats concert-goers to big band sound

By BILL HALEY
Guest Reviewer

A parody credited to the men of the armed forces during World War II went: "I want a girl just like the girl that married Harry James." The girl was none other than Betty Grable, a shapely blonde movie star of the early '40s. Their fabled marriage undoubtedly did much to propel both to the top of the entertainment world.

Although James, like Morley, has been dead "these many years," the best dance band that anybody could ask to hear appeared under his name Tuesday night in M.K. Brown Auditorium. Billed by Columbia Artists and Pampa Community Concert Association as "The Big Band

Review

Classic," the evening's fare also featured other (live) notables — Connie Haines, Art Lund and The Lancers, a mixed quartet.

The band, which was the mainstay and backdrop for the proceedings, was of such excellence that it might have carried the entire show. It truly spoke out with clout and bravura. Its brass section filled the large auditorium with sounds which can only be described as pure ecstasy. "I Cried For You" and "I Don't Want to Walk Without You" kept the crowd of possibly 1,000 begging for more.

Art Lund displayed a magnificent voice and sang fairly "straight from the shoulder." The Lancers were lively and entertaining, but they seemed to be having a little "mike" trouble. Their harmonies were not clearly etched.

The sweetheart of the evening was Connie Haines. Dressed in spangles and bright colors, she recalled Ethel Merman in Annie Get Your Gun. She closed her act with a very moving "I Believe" as a testimonial to her victory over cancer.

Returning once again to the band, that it was Harry James' organization is indeed arguable. But on second thought, why argue? What we heard Tuesday night in Pampa could be even better than the original.

Record highs set in 1988 for aid given by Good Samaritan

Three services at Good Samaritan interfaith mission, 309 N. Ward, set new all-time high records in 1988, according to Bill Ragsdale, executive director. The three were food, clothing and medical aid.

Increased needs were also reported for rent aid, transportation aid and lodging.

"The increased needs were largely due to loss of Celanese-related work, and due to needs of construction workers from other areas who were seeking work here," Ragsdale said.

In 1988, food was distributed to 8,636 families, clothing to 3,243 and medical aid to 563. Also during the year, rent assistance was given to 149 families; utility aid to 1,945; transportation, 653; and lodging, 235. Other types of aid were given to 406 families.

In 1983, the mission's first year of operation, assistance totals were food, 889 families; clothing, 430; rent, 20; utilities, 176; transportation, 48; lodging, 61; medical, 59; and other, 80.

There were 1,218 families, or 4,065 individuals, aided in 1983; in 1988, the number had risen to 11,414 families, representing 37,671 individuals.

Average daily intake at the mission has risen from 6½ families in 1983 to 14 per day in 1988.

Expenses for 1988 were food, $1,100.97; clothing, $685.80; rent, $1,610; utilities, $8,428.24; transportation, $1,580.25; lodging, $1,210.29; medical, $833.02; and administrative, $8,705.33.

In 1988, expenses were food, $20,396.10; clothing, $5,842.91; rent, $8,404.88; utilities, $101,135.22; transportation, $10,253.68; lodging, $5,646.97; medical, $9,446.48; other, $1,374.50; and administrative, $27,968.64.

Requests for aid during the month of December 1988 were up 16 percent from the record lows of November. Food requests were up 8 percent, clothing up 64 percent and utility aid up 367 percent above the November all-time record low of nine payments. Most of the clothing increase was for adults; for the three previous months, demand had been heavy for children's clothing.

Of 259 families seeking aid in December, 245 were assisted, with 195 receiving food; clothing, 105; rent, two; utilities, 42; transportation, three; lodging, three; medical, 10; and other, four. Individuals receiving aid totaled 892.

Several requests for utility aid were turned down due to excessive previous requests with no new emergency, Ragsdale said.

Gray County resident families seeking aid totaled 227. There were 17 newcomers, 10 residing outside Gray County but within 25 miles of Pampa, and five transients.

Two were referred by churches, 25 by friends, eight by other organizations or agencies and 224 returns. There were three emergency after-hours calls.

Out-of-pocket expenses for December totaled $2,635.97; November's total was $1,862.95. Of the December total, food costs were $402.50; clothing, $24.99; utilities, $1,573.26; transportation, $164.71; and medical, $230.21.

Homemade doghouse provides stylish way to keep pet cozy

Crafts

By BOB SAWYER

"Love me, love my dog" is an expression a thousand years old.

The first reference to it is in the writings of the medieval Saint Bernard, oddly enough, not the one the breed is named after.

If you're a dog lover whose pets stay outdoors much of the time, a shelter is in order, especially if you have lots of cold and/or wet weather.

The one I built has a raised floor for warmth, a porch suitable for gourmet bone munching, and a removable wall for easy cleaning.

The shingled roof and artificial window add a lot to the style and charm so sought after by the more distinguished breeds.

Our step-by-step plans include a materials list, illustrated cutting and assembly instructions, and woodworking tips.

You might also enjoy building our freestanding treehouse if you have more children than will fit in the doghouse (just kidding). The treehouse compound includes a sandbox, tire swing, slide, jungle gym and raised 4-foot-square clubhouse.

To order plans for the pet shelter, specify project No. 2096 and send $4.95; for the treehouse, specify No. 2086, $6.95. Save a dollar and order both plans for only $10.90.

Mail to: Backyard Builder, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. Add $2.95 for a catalog with discount coupons.

The doghouse has 2x4 framing covered by waterwood or plywood walls, floor and roof sheets. The porch posts and railings are lengths of 2x2 lumber, and the trim is cut from 1x4.

I used pine for the framing and cedar for the trim parts that show. You can stick with pine throughout to save money.

I built a very large doghouse to fit my very large dog. To keep your dog as warm as possible, the house should be built so that the dog just fits inside.

For the floor frame, cut and join 2x4s to form a rectangle the proper size. Add a crosswise brace where the front wall of the house will be, and a centered lengthwise brace between it and the back frame member.

Cut a ½-inch-thick floor the same size as the frame and attach on top. You might want to mark the back end so that you won't have to be peeking underneath later.

Easy-to-build doghouse is stylish and weatherproof. Features include an attached porch, raised floor, removable wall for cleaning and a swinging door.

The wall-and-roof frame consists of four corner posts (at the corners of the house, not including the porch), a collar at the top of the wall area, a roof peak beam and four mitered rafters.

The collar is attached on edge on top of the corner posts. Miter the rafters to fit together in pairs (one pair at the front and one at the back), forming a peak at the top and resting on the collar at the outer ends, flush at the corners.

Attach the peak beam between the pairs of rafters. Place the frame on top of the floor, flush at the back, and toenail into the floor and floor frame.

The walls are cut from ½-inch material and the roofs and gables from ¾-inch. Cut the peaked front wall with a door opening just large enough for your pet. Attach it to the front of the frame. To stabilize the door opening, nail support blocks inside.

The back and side walls extend to the bottom of the floor frame. Attach the peaked back wall first. Attach the removable side wall with nails only, and replace with screws later.

A frame supports the front end of the roof and serves as an anchor for the porch railing. Cut lengths of 2x2 for the posts and lengths of 2x4 for the header and two mitered rafters.

Place the porch frame on the floor, flush at the front, and toenail in place. Cut and attach two roof sheets.

Caulk the roof peak joint (the gap will be covered with shingles). Cut a triangular gable and attach to the upper portion of the porch frame, butted against the underside of the roof.

I added two layers of trim around the edges of the roof, one layer around the doorway and one layer along each corner of the house. Miter the ends to fit and to match the roof pitch.

To finish the roof, use tarpaper as well as shingles to keep the house more weatherproof. Attach the shingles in overlapping rows, starting at the eaves and working upward. Use curved crown shingles along the peak.

For the porch railing, cut lengths of 2x2 for the short posts and the horizontal rails. Miter the rails to fit at the corners. Add a hinged door that swings both ways.

Men resolve to shape up in 1989

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)— Men, more than women, are resolved to improve their physical fitness in 1989, according to a New Year's survey.

Get in shape, lose weight and change appearance ranked first, fourth and fifth among men, while save more money and improve love life were second and third.

For women, saving money came first, followed by more exercise, weight loss, improved church attendance and improved love life.

The telephone survey of 1,000 adult men and women was made by Summit Poll for LifePlanning, a book and television series.

Rumors of unsafe sex could force husband out of closet

DEAR ABBY: OK, here goes: I am a gay man. A few years ago I had a steady relationship with a man I'll call Bruce. Due to pressure from his church group, Bruce married a woman, so I ended our relationship.

About a year ago, Bruce called to tell me he "missed" me and asked if we could resume our relationship (behind his wife's back, of course). I told him, no, we couldn't.

I have since heard from several reliable sources that Bruce has been sleeping around with several men, and he is not practicing safe sex.

Abby, his wife is a wonderful person and she knows absolutely nothing about Bruce's relationships with men. Should I tell her?

MICHAEL (NOT MY REAL NAME)

DEAR "MICHAEL": The rumors may be false, but because you heard them from several reliable sources, let's assume they're true.

Call Bruce and tell him what you have heard. Then urge him to tell his wife immediately. And tell him that if he doesn't tell her, you will. And give him a deadline.

DEAR ABBY: You advise people never to lend money without getting a "note" stating the terms of repayment. But if the borrower is a flake, you'll have a hard time collecting, regardless of a written note — even with a court judgment. In addition to a written note, a smart lender will secure collateral property. People are far less likely to walk away when something valuable can revert to the lender.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

I should point out that many a borrower has every honest intention of repaying, but "times get tough" or other "unexpected bills" pile up. Whether planned or unintentional, a default turns that lender into a donor. Everyone should regard a loan — even to a friend or relative — as a business transaction, and treat it accordingly.

NO SOFTIE

DEAR NO SOFTIE: You are right, of course. A good rule to follow: Lend no more than you can afford to lose. Or, putting it another way: Consider the money you lend a "gift," and if (or when) it's repaid, regard it as a present.

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen anything regarding answering machine etiquette — what kind of message is proper, and what is not. Are there any guidelines? I have heard some rather wild and crazy stuff on answering machines. Some are even X-rated.

CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: On your own machine, resist being clever, cute or original. Simply say, "Hello, you have reached ..." (then state your telephone number). "If you wish to leave a message, please do so — but please wait for the beep."

When leaving a message on someone else's machine, simply leave your name, the hour and day you called, and if you call the party to return your call, leave your phone number.

Curses! Illini may be No. 1

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Illinois coach Lou Henson is a worrier. Now he's worried his team might be ranked No. 1 in the nation next week.

"No one deserves the curse of being number one," Henson said after his undefeated and second-ranked Illini got by Northwestern 75-70 Thursday night.

Of course Henson was worried about the Northwestern game.

"We knew it would be difficult to win," he said. "Everything was set up for an upset. We were coming off the Michigan game and there was an article in Sports Illustrated on us, and that usually does it."

Henson was worried about Northwestern's Jeff Grose, and he had every right to be. Grose scored 20 points, including five 3-pointers.

But Kenny Battle and four of his teammates scored in double figures to lead the Illini to their 16th consecutive victory this season, including 4-0 in the Big Ten. Northwestern is 7-8 and 0-5.

The Illini may move into the top spot because No. 1 Duke lost to North Carolina on Wednesday night.

Elsewhere Thursday night, it was No. 16 Ohio State 102, No. 7 Iowa 91; No. 9 Arizona 97, Southern California 69; No. 10 UNLV 102, Utah State 80; No. 19 Indiana 61, Wisconsin 58 in overtime, and California 75, No. 20 Stanford 64.

Three times Northwestern came within a point of the lead in the closing minutes, but the Wildcats were unable to tie it.

Battle finished with 23 points, Kendall Gill 14, Steve Bardo and Lowell Hamilton 12 each, and Nick Anderson 10 for Illinois.

No. 16 Ohio State 102, No. 7 Iowa 91

Jay Burson scored 26 points and Jerry Francis had 20 as hot-shooting Ohio State crushed Iowa in a Big Ten game.

The Buckeyes, 13-4 and 3-2, jumped off to a 12-0 start and led 54-44 at halftime. They then began the second half with a 13-4 run and never led by fewer than nine points in the game's final 35 minutes.

B.J. Armstrong had 23 points for the Hawkeyes, 13-3 and 1-2.

No. 9 Arizona 97, Southern Cal 69

Sean Elliott scored 19 of his 26 points in the second half and Anthony Cook added 23 points to lead Arizona over Southern California. It was the Wildcats' fourth straight victory and improved their record to 7-1 in the Pacific-10 and 12-2 overall.

Arizona led 42-31 at halftime, then put the game away with an 18-2 run that gave them a 64-38 lead with 12:27 left.

Ronnie Coleman had 20 points and eight rebounds for the Trojans, who fell to 0-5 and 7-9.

Harvesters host Estacado

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Lubbock Estacado was picked in all but one pre-season poll to be in the playoffs this season. However, after Tuesday's 76-70 loss to Frenship, the Matadors have seen their district record dip to 3-5.

Pampa coach Robert Hale is hoping the Matadors don't decide to start living up to their pre-season billing when they meet the Harvesters at 8 p.m. tonight in McNeely Field house.

"Estacado is certainly capable of winning a district championship. They haven't had a great year, but they have some very good athletes," Hale said.

Pampa and Estacado were involved in quite a tussle in the first meeting between the two clubs before the Harvesters pulled out a 69-63 win. The two teams traded leads eleven times in the first three quarters.

"We've been working on combating their press," Hale said. "Estacado has great quickness and we're going to have to do a good job of running our press offense."

Pampa is currently tied with Lubbock Dunbar for second place in district with a 6-2 record. Borger is alone at the top at 7-1 after the 73-70 win over Pampa Tuesday night.

Foul trouble and foul shot misses hurt the Harvesters against the Bulldogs.

"We did get into a little bit of foul trouble, but it was nobody's fault but ours. We had good officiating," Hale said. "If we had hit 70 percent of our free throws, we would have been home."

Pampa missed 10 of 21 free throw attempts, including the back ends of two one and one attempts in the final minute. Borger went to the line only eight times the first three quarters (4 of 8), but made up for it by downing 19 of 22 in the final period.

"Borger hit a bunch of them, didn't they?" Hale said. "It was the type of situation where they were hitting their foul shots and we weren't."

A first-quarter shooting slump when the Harvesters hit only three of 13 field goal attempts helped Borger jump into the lead.

"We got good shots and got the ball to the right players, but it just wouldn't go down," Hale said.

Pampa's top scorer, Dustin Miller, had only four points the first half, but finished with 32 points to put him over the 500-point (518) for the season. The 6-5 senior is averaging 23.6 ppg. Mark Wood, a 6-2 junior, is also averaging in double figures at 11.5 ppg.

The Harvesters will also be trying to snap a two-game losing slump tonight. A 59-53 loss to Levelland last Friday night knocked Pampa out of the district lead.

"We've been playing good and playing hard the last two games, but we just need to hit those good shots and free throws," added Hale.

Pampa's Lady Harvesters will be trying to snap a three-game losing streak when they host Lubbock Estacado at 6:30 p.m. tonight. Estacado defeated the Pampa girls 74-71 in the first game.

Thompson's protest goes deeper than Proposition 42

To the surprise of many, the sun did come up Wednesday morning, despite the Harvester loss to Borger the night prior. And it came up last Sunday morning, to the amazement of Georgetown basketball coach John Thompson, who walked out on his team the night before in protest over a recently passed NCAA Proposition 42 he says will end college athletics for many.

While I disagree, that isn't the important thing. Thompson's protest goes deeper than Prop 42. It clearly points out some major problems in collegiate sports, and explains some other matters.

First, it explains to a great degree why the United States lost the Olympic basketball gold medal again this year. Thompson is too bullheaded to accept the truth; it's his way right or wrong, and most college coaches will tell you his handling of the American team was wrong. Hello, Captain Queeg! The steel balls replaced by a towel.

His demands that athletes, and especially minority athletes, be given special privileges not afforded other students doesn't jibe with the national program which emphasizes equality for all.

It also supports a suggestion made here many months ago: that the annual NCAA convention be moved into summertime. Admittedly, it would be difficult, since only seven cities in the country have the needed exhibition and housing facilities to handle a conglom of such magnitude. And those cities do such big summer tourist business the NCAA would be shut out.

Why change it to summertime? So that all coaches of the two "major" sports, football and basketball can attend and speak to the issues. As it now stands, the January convention falls right in the heart of the basketball season, absolutely prohibiting basketball coaches from attending. Thus, the arguments on issues and ultimate votes are made by football coaches, or presidents upon the advice of their grid leader, who in many cases is also athletic director. Little, if any counsel, comes from the cage sports mentors. And the needs, ideals, and programs differ vastly. Prop 42 will not harm football to the extent it will basketball, it is obvious.

Thompson may be right in his argument, he may be in error. But he is absolutely wrong in walking off the floor and deserting his team. How would you like to be a military man with Thompson as your squadron leader, disagreeing with where a landing was to be made, and deserting his men? Leadership is not about deserting. Nor is an education about sports, X's and O's, or weightlifting. All that is simply to feed a coach's overblown ego, using the athlete, college or high school, as a pawn.

EXTRA POINTS: "That was just one very good high school basketball game," said a still emotional coach Duane Hunt shortly after the final whistle Tuesday night. "The officials missed some, but they missed them both ways and under the conditions did an excellent job." Those identical sentiments were echoed by Harvester coach Robert Hale. "Hale has been invited to discuss "motivation" in an address before the Region I meeting in Plainview Feb. 4. Hunt's son, Rob, is a basketball graduate assistant at Baylor; Dunbar coach Joe McWilliams' son, Greg, is in his senior year as a four-year starter at Sul Ross.

Incidentally, Hunt teaches algebra at BHS, which helps explain the methodical and analytical way he

Pampa high swimmers set meet record at Lubbock Relays

Pampa high's 100 freestyle relay team of Michelle Scott, Pam Morrow, Jennifer Hinkle and Richelle Hill set a new meet record at the Lubbock Swim Relays.

The four-member team was clocked at 52.81 in the event and it was the only record broken during the relays, which were held at the Texas Tech Aquatic Center.

The 400 freestyle and 300 individual medley relay teams also finished first for Pampa.

"Some of the kids had their best split times of the year," said Pampa coach Norma Young.

The Pampa girls finished seventh in the team standings with 62 points. Pampa finished 11th in the boys division with 36 points.

Both teams compete in the Midland Invitational this weekend.

Pampa's results are listed as follows:

Girls
200 freestyle relay — 4. Michelle

Scott, Lisa Defever, Rhea Hill and Jennifer Hinkle, 1:58.18; 13. Shelly Melear, Sandra Arrelo, Jeanette Gutierrez and Wendy Winkleblack, 2:24.95.

Sure it gives you a rush — but what about the addiction?

NEW ORLEANS — If you don't think that you're addicted to caffeine, try to stop ingesting it. Chances are, you'll get irritable, grouchy, have headaches and feel fatigued.

It is estimated that about 72 million Americans consume more than their "fair share" of caffeine a day. About 36 million of them suffer from chronic caffeineism — an addiction that carries the potential of producing a myriad of psychological and medical conditions.

"Caffeine is a cheap and easy rush," says Dr. Andrew H. Mebane, a staff physician in the department of psychiatry at the Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans. "We drink it at the workplace because it makes us more productive. We rely on it to suppress our appetite. We drink it to be sociable. It's an American tradition."

A sure sign of caffeineism is evidenced in the individual who boasts that he or she can drink a cup of coffee before bedtime and fall right asleep. "That's the tip-off," says Mebane. "They're the last to relate any symptoms to caffeine injection."

Typical responses of the body to too much caffeine are irritability, agitation, headaches, insomnia, lethargy, fatigue, yawning, decreased concentration and sometimes depression. Unusual neurological symptoms can be seen, mimicking brain tumors or multiple sclerosis.

These responses often develop over a period of years of moderate to heavy caffeine use and most commonly when caffeine levels drop in a person's blood stream.

Although most people are aware of caffeine's connection

Some colds have a life of their own

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Sniff. Hack. Honk.

If it seems to you that you have the same exact cold as everybody you know — maybe the throat's not too bad, but the sneezing is relentless, or the cough is terrible but the sniffles haven't shown up — you're probably right.

There are "a couple of hundred" viruses that can cause the common cold, according to Dr. Larry Anderson, a virus specialist with the national Centers for Disease Control. "There will be a range, of maybe more than one agent, circulating at a given time — but you also may have one predominant virus."

And a certain virus, he said, "will have certain types of symptoms."

Thus, it's not surprising when everyone in the office is spreading what comes to be known as "the same cold."

"They're likely to have the same virus," Anderson said.

During the winter, a particular influenza strain often comes to dominate the flu season from coast to coast. A particular cold virus, however, doesn't usually spread that far, Anderson noted: "By and large, other viruses don't spread in a national pattern like flu does."

The cold going around "may vary from community to community, or even from time to time within the community," he said. "There can be one, or several types of rhinoviruses causing the colds."

There are a number of government agencies doing research on the common cold — one of the most loathed diseases around, albeit not the most serious.

The CDC and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases study colds. The Food and Drug Administration evaluates cold treatments. Even the National Center for Health Statistics keeps some facts and figures on the disease-related impact of colds.

But with all that, there's no cure in sight — partly because a cure would have to be able to wipe out some 200 specific viruses.

Honesty at work

NEW YORK (AP) — Management's honesty and ethics are more important than job security, according to a survey of office worker attitudes.

Those surveyed also gave priority to pride in the quality of products and services provided by the employer.

"Our research shows that for a large majority of office workers, the more intangible issues such as ethics and personal pride rank top on a list of key job factors," says Louis Harris, chief executive officer of Louis Harris and Associates. "The more tangible issues such as pay ranks ninth and ample opportunity ranks 10th among 17 job factors."

The survey was conducted by Harris and Steinhilber Inc.

with anxiety and panic symptoms, depression and depression-like symptoms are more subtle in their relationship to caffeine, says Mebane.

Caffeine, specifically chronic caffeineism, may mimic a depressive disorder or complicate a condition and its origin. It may also antagonize or adversely interact with prescribed medications given for depression.

Sources of caffeine in today's society can be found everywhere. Not only is it found in beverages — coffee, tea and soft drinks — but it is also in many prescription medications, such as analgesics and cold preparations, as well as over-the-counter stimulants, appetite suppressants and, of course, chocolate.

Sometimes people unknowingly switch from one to the other, thinking they have eliminated the influence of caffeine.

There is little doubt that some people become addicted to the stimulant effect of coffee and experience withdrawal symptoms, most typically a headache, without their usual dose. Mebane calls it the "weekend headache" when people away from the workplace suddenly experience debilitating headaches at home.

"In most workplaces, the coffee pot is a fixture. Workers pour themselves a fresh cup without thinking. But, at home, they consume less or no coffee at all, leading to what can be a major withdrawal situation."

Mebane says one or two cups of coffee or some other form of caffeine normally resolves this condition. A "dose" of caffeine is about 100 mg in an average cup of coffee and about 50 mg in a typical serving of cola or tea.

Because of caffeine's interaction with GABA, a neurotransmitter in the brain, the body's own anxiety-relieving systems are reduced. Caffeine also blocks the brain's opiate receptors, thus preventing the body from properly managing pain.

Unless caffeine intake is reduced, even medicines like anti-depressants or tranquilizers will be ineffective due to caffeine's negative influence.

Basically, three complications may be seen when medicating a patient with undiagnosed caffeineism, says Mebane.

"First, higher levels of medications may be needed because of the directly offsetting, negative effects of caffeine. There may also be a lack of response to the prescribed medications because of these effects. Increased side effects are also a concern when caffeine is combined with certain medications."

Obviously, the secret to offsetting the effects of caffeine in the body is to stop consuming it and switch to non-caffeine substitutes. If not, reduce the amount ingested.

Mebane says that people who are in the "chronic" category should consider a gradual adjustment.

"Start with one or two fewer cups of coffee a day. Each day, increase that number," he says.

Although you may experience some form of withdrawal, be patient. Within a month's time, those withdrawal effects should disappear.
