LaRouche gets 15 years for tax defrauding

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr., political extremist and perennial presidential candidate, was sentenced today to 15 years in prison for scheming to defraud federal tax collectors and deliberately failing to repay more than $30 million in loans from his political

U.S. District Judge Albert V. Bryan Jr. also sentenced chief LaRouche fundraiser William Wertz to five years in prison and an $11,000 fine, and gave LaRouche legal coordinator Edward Spannaus a five-year term and a $10,000 fine.

At the same time, governmnent prosecutors in Boston dropped related charges against LaRouche, six of his associates and five organizations. That case ended in a mistrial last May and had been scheduled for retrial on Feb. 23.

In a document filed in U.S. District Court in Boston today, the prosecutors said that, with the conviction of LaRouche and his associates in Alexandria last month, the law enforcement interests of the United States had been served "from the point of view of both deterrence and punishment.'

In the federal courtroom in Alexandria, four LaRouche fundraisers awaited sentencing by Bryan. They were Michael Billington, Joyce Rubenstein, Paul Greenberg and Dennis Small.

Bryan told LaRouche, who stood facing the judge with arms folded in front of him, that he had been convicted of "a serious crime" and said he rejected LaRouche's belief "that the end justifies the means as resorted to in this case.'

Bryan refused to grant bail to the three main defendants pending appeals.

The judge also rejected as 'errant nonsense'' the defendants' claims that their prosecution by the government was politically motivated.

LaRouche's sentence was considerably less than the maximum penalty on 13 counts of tax and mail fraud conspiracy. The maximum would be 65 years in prison and fines totaling $3.25 million.

Before he was sentenced, LaRouche told the judge that his case "already has done great damage to the United States" and that "it is time for this evil and reckless prosecution to be brought to a halt before further damage is done.

U.S. Attorney Kent Robinson responded that "this is not a political case, this was a case of theft.

Bryan said he was concerned that the defendants never conceded they had done anything wrong, despite their convictions.

But Spannaus said: "Remorse should be felt by those who perverted our judicial system for political purposes and trampled on the Constitution.'

Outside the federal courthouse in this Washington suburb, about 60 LaRouche supporters sang, waved American flags and paraded with bedsheet banners reading "Pardon LaRouche — Kill Satan" and "Stop KGB Frame Up-Murder of LaRouche." A demonstrator wearing a large mask of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and carrying a Soviet flag gestured on the sidelines as the pickets paraded on both sides of the street in front of the courthouse.

A federal trial jury in Alexandria convicted LaRouche and the six associates on Dec. 16 of mail fraud and conspiracy for raising more then $30 million in loans from political supporters without any intention of repaying them. One elderly woman testified she had lost nearly $113,000 in life

LaRouche also was convicted of scheming to defraud the Internal Revenue Service by having all his personal expenses paid by various corporations he controls and claiming he had no taxable income.

LaRouche has not filed federal income tax returns for any year since 1978.

It was the first time in LaRouche's controversial political career that he has been convicted of criminal charges. LaRouche, 66, has run for president in the last three elections as a Democrat or an independent candidate espousing unorthodox conspiracy theories on world issues

Immediately after his conviction in Alexandria, LaRouche told reporters he was the innocent victim of a frame-up by Soviet sympathizers in the State and Justice departments. He predicted he would be killed if sent to

Months of hard work can pay off in show

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Thursday night and today will tell the tale whether the months of hard work will pay off for area youth participating in this week's stock show events.

Judging of these young people's animals will determine whether or not the animals will be sold in the coveted Top O' Texas Sale tomorrow, followed by the less-sought but still important Gray County Sale

Area 4-H and agriculture students have spent the past few months learning the basic lessons of raising and selling stock, all of which culminate in the shows and sale of this week

Some of these lessons can be hard ones. Just like most agriculture endeavors, participants may borrow the money to purchase and care for their show animals. They anticipate a selling price that will not only cover their costs, but also hope to earn a profit on their efforts.

And like most farmers and ranchers experience in their work, the youngsters' profit margin is usually small, and what profit there is is plowed back into next year's stock.

Still, these future agriculturists continue to try to reach for that grand champion status, knowing it will pay off for them in the end. They aspire for their highest goals, and while only a few actually achieve that goal, they are all better for the trying.

Gov. Clements to undergo heart test in hospital next

By PATRICE GRAVINO and MICHAEL HOLMES Associated Press Writers

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, who last summer suffered what doctors described as a mild stroke, today said he will undergo an angiogram heart test next week.

around the arena during barrow judging.

The 71-year-old Clements said the test would be part of a "routine checkup" he will receive at Roberts Hospital, part of the Baylor Medical Center in Dallas, next Friday. In a written announcement, the governor said, "It is not an eye-opening experience, and certainly nothing to lose sleep over."

Clements suffered his stroke last July, and was hospitalized for five nights at Austin's Seton Medical Center. When released July 24, the governor said he felt fine. Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary, said the tests were routine.

"It's a preventative and cautionary measure. The doctors recommended (after last year's stroke) to the governor that he have a full medical examination annually," Bashur said Bashur said Clements "is fine" and has felt no ill-effects from the stroke.

Clements is scheduled to enter the hospital about 7:30 p.m. Thursday for the Friday test, his announcement said.

"Your favorite governor will be admitted into Roberts Hospital in Dallas for a routine checkup," Clements said in his statement to Capitol news reporters, a group he often refers to as "wise owls."

According to Carolyn Hinckley-Boyle, a spokeswoman at Austin's Brackenridge Hospital, an angiogram is a procedure in which dye is sent through the heart vessels so doctors can check for blockage.

Clements emphasized that the checkup and angiogram would be routine.

"In fact it is all routine, and probably the 'wise owls' don't give a hoot," Clements said, "but realizing that trying to keep something quiet around the Capitol is like trying to keep bees away from honey, I thought I'd make this announcement.

"Don't call me. I'll call you," the governor

Bashur said Clements had been planning to undergo the examination and didn't want an outburst of speculation about his health.

"He was going to go in for a couple days, and he felt he would let everybody know." Bashur said. When hospitalized last July, Clements had admitted himself after experiencing blurred vi-

Dr. David Morris, a heart specialist, and Dr. Jerry Tindel, a neurologist, said at that time that tests indicated Clements had suffered from a slight irregularity in his heartbeat.

The doctors said that irregularity could have caused a tiny blood clot to form in his heart before passing through his bloodstream and into his brain, causing the stroke.

Clements was put on the medication digitalis to control his heartbeat, and physicians three days later added Quinidine after an examination revealed that his heartbeat hadn't returned to

Bush to pay visit to South Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush said today he will pay a brief visit to South Korea during his Asian trip next month to Japan and China and also gave his endorsement to a proposed 50 percent pay raise for members of

"The raise is overdue, there's to question about that," Bush id at his first news conference ince becoming president a week

Bush also said an idea to impose a premium on savings numbs to help bail out the ailng savings and loan industry was est one option developed by

'It doesn't bother me for a lot ideas to be debated and consia savings and loans...I don't expect it's all going to be sweetness and harmony and light," he added

Bush fielded questions after telling reporters gathered in the White House briefing room, "It's been a full week since the inauguration and I just wanted to stop by and give you an update."

The president said the stop in Korea would be brief, coming at the tail end of an Asian trip that includes a visit to Japan to attend the funeral of Emperor Hirohito and a subsequent visit to China.

Bush spent more than a year as the U.S. envoy to Peking in the 1970s, and said he and his wife Barbara were looking forward to

He said his visit was not demed to "go one up on Mr. Gorbachev" in terms of superpower relationships. Asked if he was trying to send a signal by visiting China before meeting with the Soviet leader, Bush said he was not one to play one superpower off against another.

"I'm the one who doesn't believe in playing the Soviet card or playing the China card," he said. Bush said his watchword on U.S.-Soviet relations would be 'let's take our time now.''

"Prudence is the order of the day," he said, but then he added: "I want to take the offense in moving this relationship for-

Feds: No deal on Texas' hormone-free beef sale to Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defiant Texas agriculture commissioner is invoking states' rights as he presses efforts to sell hormone-free beef in Europe, although a federal official says Jim Hightower has no business steering into the trans-Atlantic trade dispute.

"There is no purpose to such negotiation," Roger Bolton, a spokesman for the U.S. trade representative's office, said Thursday of Hightower's dealings with the European Economic Community. "It's not going to happen."

Bolton said federal export laws would bar any sale of hormone-free beef from Texas to the EEC, even if the state and the EEC can agree to a certification procedure for hormone-free meat.

The EEC has banned imports of U.S. beef and beef products because the meat, worth about $100 million in sales, contains growth hormones that the EEC contends are a health threat. The United States disputes those claims and retaliated by setting about $100 million worth of higher tariffs on a variety of Common Market products.

Hightower's interference in the trade dispute has infuriated Texas Farm Bureau officials, who are calling for his resignation. They contend Europe is using artificial hormones as an excuse to toss up new barriers to U.S. exports and that Hightower's meddling just undermines the U.S. position, further jeopardizing the state's $6 billion beef industry.

"Mr. Hightower knew before he started he couldn't go through with it," said Texas Farm Bureau spokesman Vernie Glasson, who called Hightower's plans "fraudulent from the beginning" and an attempt to "manipulate the media to his political advantage."

Hightower contends "this is not a matter of scientific 'truth' or ideology," but an an attempt to find a new niche for Texas agricultural products.

"We see no legal ability for them (federal officials) to stop it unless they impose a formal embargo," Hightower said. "We're taking a states' rights position. If Ollie North can go run a private war with the applause of the administration, why are they getting in the way of a few cattlemen who want to make a sale to our very best customers?"

Ella Krucoff, spokeswoman for Sir Roy Denman. head of EEC delegation in Washington, said the EEC was in "active contact with the state of Texas. We are interested in maintaining the trade; we want that trade to be in hormone-free meat.'

Krucoff said the EEC would be willing to accept certification of the meat's purity from Texas authorities if the federal government is not willing to certify the meat as hormone-free. An EEC veterinarian was in Texas this week to explain the EEC's certification standards.

Hightower said the TDA has asked acting Agriculture Secretary Peter Myers to accept a protocol with the EEC to certify beef from Texas and other states for export, but "we've had no communica-contends there is no way Texas can verify the meat as hormone-free, thus effectively prohibiting it from being exported.

All meat exports must be inspected and certified by the USDA, Bolton said, and federal law requires they meet the standards of the importing country, whether the country of destination insists on it or

But because there is no known test to verify cattle have never been given artificial hormones, the USDA can't grant a hormone-free certificate, Bolton said. "In order to be able to certify meat for export to the European Community has not been treated by hormones throughout the (animal's) lifetime, the USDA would be required to supervise production of the meat throughout the lifetime of the animals in question. That is perhaps not impossible, though clearly impractical and prohibitively expensive, and is not a realistic answer to the problem," Bol-

"Beyond which, of course, we are absolutely convinced, and all scientific evidence supports the belief that there is no health basis for the European Community's hormone ban," Bolton said.

Krucoff said it is "odd" that federal officials would try to bar American exports. "I just can't imagine that."

"U.S. negotiators have tried to present the European Community standards as nothing but a trade ploy to cut the U.S. out of its market," Hightower said. "Maybe so, but why not find out? It's like a poker game. European negotiators put some chips on the table and said 'meet our standards or fold. Our team was bluffed and our team folded right then and there. Why not up the ante by saying, 'OK, we have beef that meets your standards, so buy

Wise County Sheriff Leroy Burch said the bodies of the unidentified women were found Thursday morning under blankets beside a cattle guard about two miles east of Decatur.

One of the women was bound at the ankles, and had been partially scalped, Burch said. He said the women appeared to be Asian although authorities said it was possible they were Hispanic.

A baby blanket was found on the body of one of the victims and authorities said both women had either been pregnant or had had children.

The deputy said both children were in good condition and were "adequately clothed" at the time they were found.

No one had called to report children missing late Thursday, more than 12 hours after the first child was found. The girl was found about 3 p.m., she said.

The deputy said it is possible the children are linked to the slayings in Wise County.

'They are possibly related or have been together before," she said, declining to specify what led authorities to that conclusion.

Authorities speculated that the two women were killed elsewhere and dumped at the location near Burch said there was fresh blood on the bodies that would have washed off during rain that fell in the area Wednesday and Wednesday night. The blankets covering the bodies were also dry, authorities said.

Both women were clothed and appeared to be in their 20s to 30s.

The women apparently were killed by blows to the head and face with a sharp instrument, Burch said.

The woman who was bound had a hole in her head about the size of a quarter, indicating she had been hit with a wide, sharp instrument, the sheriff said. She also had a hand wound, the sheriff said.

"It looked like she was trying to defend herself," he said.

There were no reports of missing women in Wise County and Burch said authorities had alerted other counties across North Texas, but did not have any reports of missing women who matched the descriptions of the victims.

A man near the site said he was awakened early in the morning by his barking dogs.

The bodies were sent to the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Office for autopsies Thursday

A magical time — but who cares?

Tuesday was an interesting day. It was my Birthdays are always interesting to those having them. You wonder why other people are just walking around as if this were some normal, everyday sort of day. It's not. It's My Birthday.

I have always held that there are four major holidays. Christmas is on Dec. 25. Thanksgiving is on the last Thursday in November. The Fourth of July is on ... well, I bet you can figure that out. And My Birthday is on Jan. 24.

My wife keeps wanting to celebrate Birthday Day in August, my sister in October and my mom on April 15, of all days.

I keep telling them, "My Birthday is Jan. 24." They say, "Fine, but My Birthday is on ... ' They just don't understand.

Which is the real problem with birthdays. Nobody holds them in reverence like the person hav-I keep thinking, "If it weren't for Jan. 24, I might never have been born. The 24th of Jan. is a very special day indeed!" And yet, everybody reacts to Jan. 24 the same way they do to having mayo on a ham sandwich. They just sort of accept it and go on. No special thought required. This year I celebrated my birthday with four interviews about everything from grass fires to child abuse. That's what you get for having a birthday on a weekday. Life goes on. And the cor non experiences of a work day leer at you for the wnole 24 hours At least when your birthday falls on the weekend you can think to yourself, "Boy, everybody pretty well took the day off in my honor. What a swell deal." The last time my birthday fell on a weekend, it was a Sunday. Superbowl Sunday. The entire National Football League decided to hold their biggest game of the year on My Day. I was full of myself for a week.

If you're wondering, this happened to be the big 2-9. Almost to 30, but not quite. This is the one that's supposed to be magic. The one everbody keeps claiming over and over again: "I'm 29 again ... ha,

There must be something magic about it if everyone things so darn much of it. To anyone in high school or younger, 29 sounds like a foreign trip to some terrible land they hope to never actually visit. Kind of like going to Ethiopia.

These kids hear your age and say, "Boy." Then they make a little whistling noise through their teeth like they are amazed you've made it this far without a crutch or a gurney.

Off Beat

Mills

To those over 29, it is a magical time of youth. The children are still too young to need braces and college tuition isn't staring you in the face yet. It is a time to buy your first home and learn new words like Mortgage and Adjustable Rate Financing.

Pardon my doubting Thomas attitude, but I'm just not sure 29 is all it's cracked up to be, though. Sixteen was supposed to be a magic age. Your first kiss and all that. But I got my first kiss when I was 12 from a girlfriend with the nickname Buggy. After that, 16 seemed rather anti-climactic. Fighteen is supposed to be magic. You get to vote and, when I crossed over to adulthood, you still got

I wasted my vote on a third party candidate named John Anderson and got sick as a dog from consuming too many beers.

Everyone but me has forgotten ole John Anderson. I will newer forget. He got my very first vote. He took my innocence. Then he had the nerve to get whooped like an ugly stepchild.

And the part about getting wasted was not so hot either. I remember spending my 18th birthday kneeling before the great god of porcelain and praying for hours as I crouched at his throne.

For the big 2-9 I got a half dozen Frank Sinatra records and some Lewis Grizzard books on growing old. Frank Sinatra! Maybe I am getting old. I keep seeing myself at 16 saying, "Sinatra? That's grotseque.

But I also see myself at 60 saying, "Do you have to play that so doggone loud? And could you turn up the heat a little? It's freezing in here.' Ah, birthdays. A magical time, indeed.

Vandals attack Houston mosque

HOUSTON (AP) — Vandalism at a mosque that apparently is the result of anti-Mideast sentiments is threatening the efforts of a Pakistani woman who is trying to instruct children in the Islamic religion.

Although vandalism at the Mosque Mohammed began last vear, such incidents have escalated recently, said Saeeda Khan, who opened the mosque with her husband three years ago.

Since New Year's Eve, the mosque has been attacked four times by several white men.

Mrs. Khan's car was turned upside down one time and set afire another. The mosque's windows have been riddled with eight bullet holes and one of Mrs. Khan's daughters was badly bruised when a rock crashed through a

Murder charges dropped TYLER (AP) - Smith County his department "more or less officials have dropped a capital murder charge against a man who gave authorities a confession in the brutal slaying of an elderly woman after learning that the defendant was in a mental care facility in California at the time of the slaying.

The charge against Robert Kevin Bush, 25, was dropped Thursday after authorities learned that Bush was in the California institution when Clarine Ann Jones, 76, was sexually assaulted and murdered.

Assistant Police Bob Bond says dismissal of the charges leaves back to square one."

Bond defended officers who took a three and one-half page, detailed confession from Bush, saving there was no negligence by his staff.

Bush was arrested on an unrelated sexual assault on Oct. 27, 1987, more than four months after the Jones slaying. Bush was charged with capital murder two days later after the confession.

District Judge Bill Coats signed the dismissal order Thursday just five days before jury selection was scheduled for Bush's trial.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Political, economic freedoms related

According to Freedom House, the widely respected non-partisan organization that monitors political rights and civil liberties throughout the world, 1988 saw a higher percentage and a greater number of people living in freedom than at any time since the organization began conducting an annual survey of freedom 17

According to Freedom House, of the world's 5,128 million people, 1,992.8 million, or 38 percent, now live in freedom in 60 countries and 39 related territories. The previous record was 1,942.6 million people in 1987. Major advances toward freedom were recorded in every part of the world, while declines in freedom were scattered - Malaysia, Panama, Brunei, Zimbabwe.

In South Korea, for the first time a new president faces a legislature not under his control, political prisoners have been released and corruption is being exposed. In Pakistan, a hesitant move toward democracy is under way. Nigeria had local elections and set up an indirectly elected constituent assembly.

In Chile, a plebescite rejected the rule of Gen. Augusto Pinochet and set the stage for a democratic election in late 1989. In Mexico, the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, faced significant opposition at the polls for the first time since it was formed in 1928. Freedom House sees slow progress toward liberalization in the Soviet Union, though noting that it remains a totalitarian state in which the Communist Party holds an absolute monopoly of political power.

A new feature in the survey is a social and economic comparison, rating countries by personal income, mortality rates for children under five, adult literacy and womens' advancement. This comparison offers more insights into the necessary underpinnings for economic and social advancement.

With only a few exceptions, the countries with the lowest standards of living and least social progress are also those with the least political freedom. Apparently freedom is more important to social and economic advancement than any combination of foreign aid. foreign investment, and domestic investment and infrastructure.

The survey found that almost all the least-free countries are either in the Communist bloc or countries adhering to some sort of socialist ideology, although a few old-fashioned monarchies or military dictatorships make the list. This fact reinforces the idea that political freedom and economic freedom are intimately related, perhaps two sides of the same coin.

Counting angels on pin heads

WASHINGTON - Pawtucket, R.I., had candy-striped poles along with its creche. The village of Mundelein, Ill., had no candy-striped poles, but it had at least one snowman and two Nutcracker soldiers. All this made Mundelein's Christmas display constitutional, though one circuit judge didn't think so. He was stuck on proximity.

The federal courts, in brief, are at it again. They are construing 10 words from the First Amendment: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." They are construing it in the fashion of medieval scholars counting angels on the head of a pin. What they need is a head linesman.

This is the situation. On Jan. 4, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit handed down its 2-1 decision in the matter of Mundelein, Ill. It appears that for 25 years the village had been displaying a nativity scene on the lawn of the village hall.

It is of critical importance to understand that the display was not in the village hall; it was outside the village hall.

In 1987, after murmurs of discontent were heard from the American Civil Liberties Union, the village prudently added some extras. The Pawtucket case had been decided by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1984. That case turned on symbols other than a creche.

Pawtucket had, among other things, "a Santa Claus house, reindeer pulling Santa's sleigh, candy-striped poles, a Christmas tree, carolers, cutout figures representing such characters as a clown, an elephant and a teddy bear, hundreds of colored lights, a large banner that reads 'Season's Greetings' "— and, of course, the creche. This was enough to satisfy Chief Justice Burger and four colleagues that the Constitution had not been trampled underfoot.

James J. Kilpatrick

Mindful of this cogent reasoning, the village of Mundelein i 1987 added, "a Santa Claus and sleigh, carolers, snowmen, carriage lights, wreaths and two soldiers in the shape of Nut-

Even this did not satisfy the local ACLU types. They sued. The District Court upheld their complaint, but the Circuit Court was now reversed. Where are we? In the view of Judge John L. Coffey and Judge Frank H. Easterbrook, the reasoning of Pawtucket controlled the display in Mundelein. The two jurists emphasized that Mundelein's display, like Pawtucket's, was out-

True, Pawtucket's setup was 300 feet from City Hall, while Mundelein's was practically in the shadow of the building. Further, while Mundelein had no clowns, elephants or teddy bears, "details that would be important to interior decorators do not spell the difference between constitutionality and unconstitutionality.' Now there is a thought for the day.

Judge Joel M. Flaum dissented. He saw Mundelein's display as an official "endorsement of religion." The 300 feet in Pawtucket struck him as vital to a correct decision.

In Mundelein the proximity of the display to the village's main municipal edifice was dispositive. This closeness could create an impermissible identity — a forbidden linkage of church and state, which the First Amendment

"Of course," Judge Flaum added, "the likelihood of such identification diminishes as distance and space intervene.'

That is why a call should go out, in such cases, for a head linesman. And doubtless for a decorator as well. Let us tally up the teddy bears and summon the measuring chains. First down for Jesus, or bring on the punter and kick

The whole business is ridiculous, but ridiculous readings of the Establishment Clause are nothing new. The Supreme Court has been wrestling with the issue since the Everson case of 1947. That involved New Jersey's reimbursement of parents of parochial school children for the cost of bus transportation.

The high court found this OK. It found nothing wrong in Nebraska's employment of a legislative chaplain. In 1970 it approved tax exemption of church property.

But in an Ohio case in 1977, the court rode off in all directions. The state could provide maps and globes for parochial schools, but not field trips. Or vice versa. In was out and out was in, and tax credits were OK in Minnesota but a minute of silence in Alabama was not OK.

Lately the line has been that states must 'accomodate' religion without actually endorsing it. Here is an interpretation the country could live with Who knows what the next befuddlement will be? This term the Supreme Court will hear argument in a Pittsburgh case that again involves a creche at Christmastime. Bring on the linesmen, and considering the context, let us

There is a nice way and another way to say what has happened to modern Americans.

One way is to say that on average, for economic or other reasons, Americans move once every five years.

The other way to say it is that we have become a tribe of vagabonds.

I have lived through one-fourth of the time that our country has been a country. That's long enough to remember when families grew up and grew old in one house which their children then took over.

Or as in the Pennsylvania Dutch country, each new generation would "add on" to the old house some new rooms.

Today, millions of Americans are so fidgety that they live in homes with wheels so that they need never stay put for long.

For better or worse, we are a peripatetic generation, seeing the world, hanging our hats anyplace, belonging no place.

It can be argued that restlessness is not all bad — that it lures men and women to explore new horizons. Perhaps dissatisfaction with things as they are motivates improvement.

But whatever the rationale, frequently uprooted Americans cannot be as secure as those who bloom where they are planted

On my desk in Chicago is a small three-level corner shelf which I think we used to call a 'whatnot'' shelf. The two scrolled sides are rather crudely hand sawed with a coping saw.

The shelves of five-eighths-inch wood — not plywood — are warped enough to pull the small brads which had been hammered into place. Some hammer marks are apparent.

Somebody from Richardson, Texas, named Dan Stoltje recently bought a house in Tulsa, Okla., a house ready to be demolished to make way for "progress." And in the attic of that house he found this "whatnot" shelf.

He was gracious enough to pack it carefully and send it to me. A "signed original," he said, which he was sure my son would want.

For Paul Harvey, as for most Americans, there have been many homes before I was married and a few since. And except for some old photographs, there are few original possessions still with us, few of the sort of things that families used to store in attics for generations.

But I do have one now. A shabby little corner shelf inexpertly sawed and assembled — but saved by a mother who'd thought it was beautiful — and rescued for her and for me by a very nice someone we never knew.

What about George Washington? He was the father of our country. How about Abraham Lincoln? He freed the slaves. Franklin Roosevelt? He gets two sentences. Fought the Depression. Won the war.

Lyndon Johnson? A struggle, still, between two sentences. He got us into Vietnam. He helped the poor and blacks.

Millard Fillmore? James Buchanan? Grover Cleveland? Nothing, nothing, nothing. It was a theory of the late Clare Booth Luce that important presidents were remembered by only a single sentence, occasionally by two. The sentences are terse, sometimes unfair or simplistic, but that's all that one gets from history. Sorry about that. Lesser presidents don't even get that much What, then, about Ronald Reagan? In the past few weeks there has been much written about his accomplishments and failings. He made us feel . better about ourselves. He rebuilt the military. He cut taxes, inflation and regulation. He oppressed the poor. He showed that capitalism worked. He ran up a gonzo deficit. He was lazy, inattentive and presided over a rogue White House. He paid ransom to the dreaded ayatollah. He made peace with the Russians. He cut back nuclear weapons. He started Star Wars.

Sorry, too much. Under Luce's rule that just won't do. One sentence, maybe two. You say that's not realistic? Too bad. That's the rule.

What does Reagan get? Feel better about ourselves? Dubious. Too fuzzy. "We" never felt so bad; anyway, we may start feeling that way again.

Taxes, inflation and regulation? They are important, but they may go back up. Not necessarily a lasting Bashed the poor? The poverty rate is lower.

Lazy and inattentive? Me too. Not. the stuff of history. Ransonned hostages, Iran-contra? Poof! Another

There are only two serious candidates for lasting single-sentence Reaganesque historical simplicity. Both are hostages to history.

One is the deficit. It is big. One can have fun by imagining what Ronald Reagan would say about it if it had been run up by Jimmy Carter.

There are some people, even economists, who believe that we are in for a major crash, crunch, bash or bump. If it happens, it will surely be ascribed to Reagan's promiscuous budget debt. No matter that the relationship between economic apocalypse and national deficit is, at best, unclear. In popular history it will be Reagan's fault. His sentence will then be: "He started the Crash."

I don't happen to think the economic apocalypse is now. I think it is the apocalypse-mongers who are headed for a crash, crunch, bash or bump. Accordingly, I doubt that Reagan will get a bad sentence.

His sentence, and it is a good one, will more likely be in the realm of international affairs. The ones generally offered are too neutral, tactical or factual. No pizazz. Started Star Wars. Cut back on nukes. Rebuilt the military. Made peace with Russians. Too

But something big did happen on Reagan's watch that is fraught with substance. For almost 50 years we have been grappling with the Soviets about the nature of the world. That struggle is called the Cold War. That Reagan was able to participate in it is a debt he owes to two generations of Western statesmen, politicians and taxpayers who hung tough against the Soviets. They kept us in the game.

But it happened to come together on his watch. He helped make it happen. He reacted in the right way. If Reagan is lucky, if the great struggle indeed winds down soon, there will only be one proper sentence for the Gipper, perhaps simplistic, perhaps unfair, but there it is, in big neon letters: "He won the Cold War."

If George Bosh is lucky, and tough, he'll be included: "They won the Cold

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest brutal wave of school shootings is reviving concern about schoolyard security and debate over whether it's possible to protect students from disturbed adults or fellow youngsters with easy access to weapons.

"You would have to build a 10-foot brick wall around all the elementary schools in the United States and they'd have to have barbed wire to prevent people from going up the brick wall and over the brick wall. You'd have to have roving guards and armed police at all times," said Thomas A. Shannon, executive director of the National School Boards Association.

"The real problem is not school security. The real problem is the availability of weaponry."

The nation was jolted last week by the killing of five Stockton, Calif., elementary school students by a man wielding a semi-automatic assault rifle. The latest incident of schoolyard violence occurred Thursday at Wilson High School in Washington. D.C.. where four students were shot by a young man near the school building. None of the wounds was fatal

Other tragedies of the past year: A 19-year-old man killed two 8-year-olds and wounded seven pupils and two teachers in a rampage at Oakland Elementary School in Greenwood, S.C., in September. And last May, Laurie Dann shot and killed an 8-vear-old and wounded five other children at Hubbard Woods Elementary School in Winnetka, Ill., before wounding an adult and killing herself.

Security measures are nothing new at high schools and some middle schools plagued by drug and gang violence. In Detroit, for example, police officers are stationed at high schools and there is a 24-hour hotline for tipsters with warnings about school violence. Student cadets and parent volunteers monitor hallways and grounds, and every once in a while there is a random security sweep using walk-through and hand-held metal detec-

Now some are saying it's time to apply the same precautions to elementary schools. The Stockton shootings "are an indication that all schools need to have some security plans and mechanisms in position," says Stuart Greenbaum, a spokesman for the National School Safety Center in Encino, Calif.

Greenbaum, whose center was started by the Reagan administration and is funded by the Justice Department, said school violence is "to some extent" a gun control problem but maintained there is much schools themselves can do to become

For instance, Greenbaum said, all schools should have security officers or staff members responsible for security, equipped with walkietalkies or some way of communicating what they Asked if that would have helped in Stockton, he replied, "They might have been able to report seeing somebody on or about the campus with a gun, maybe prevented the situation from being as dramatic as it was. Or in fact it may have even deterred the individual from even coming on the campus.

through a gate at the back of the school grounds. "You have to limit access points," he said. "This is not to say make the school a fortress. But if you are obligated to have a variety of access points, they ought to be monitored."

Greenbaum said the Stockton gunman entered Shannon, however, said that truly sealing a school from outsiders would require such extensive modifications that the result would be "unacceptable in terms of school environment, in terms of cost, in terms of everything.

"The only way you could guarantee the safety of elementary schools from the criminally insane would be to build them like penitentiaries," he

Like Shannon, California officials are stressing gun control in their responses to the Stockton incident. Bill Honig, superintendent of the California school system, said after the shootings that "we're going to have to do something to crack down on the availability of automatic weapons" and Gov. George Deukmeijian indicated he is open to some new restrictions.

In the Washington incident, police said at least some of the victims probably knew their assailant. Police believe the shootings were prompted by an argument between students and two young "outsiders" who had entered the school at lunchtime. The outsiders left after the argument, but returned with a gun at the end of the school day.

Washington Mayor Marion Barry said the episode pointed up the need "to take guns out of the hands of people not authorized to use them.

Boskin, a Stanford University economics professor, is the creator of Bush's flexible freeze plan, under which total federal spending would grow no faster than the inflation rate. Bush has claimed that with that constraint, the budget can be balanced by 1993 with no tax increases, an assertion that critics claim would work only if the economy performs at unexpectedly good

Bush has never stated precisely how he would keep spending in check.

"If there are no new taxes, that means there will have to be some massive cuts in the federal budget," said Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who repeatedly asked Boskin to specify "three or four areas" where spending reductions should be made.

Boskin, who emphasized that Bush has not made any final decisions on the budget, said he would personally favor reducing the growth rate of military spending and government-paid health be-

Shellshocked farmers fearful amid a dry and warm winter

By PAIGE St. JOHN Associated Press Writer

Farmers shellshocked by the 1988 drought are worrying anew whether the unusually warm winter will break, sending them the precipitation they need for next season's crops.

"There's a pervading omen, a feeling of ominous concern. I sense it with other farmers, I sense it with the salesmen of agricultural products," said Joe Summer, a corn and soybean farmer in McLean County in central Illinois.

Parts of the county have received 25 inches less rain than average in 22 months.

For the first time in 45 years of farming, Summer is taking out multiperil insurance on next season's crop.

The warm, dry winter had something to do with that decision, he said Thursday, but so did bad crops in six of the last eight years in what used to be the nation's top corn-producing county.

"We're all beginning to get a little paranoid about it," the 62year-old farmer said. "There is no frost in the ground. This unusually warm weather is strange. It is a harbinger of some sort, I of the drought that hit the nation

"At this stage, we're hoping for a terribly wet spring," said Minnesota Farm Bureau administrator Gerald Hagaman. "There's apprehension.'

Farm Bureau officials in Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa say much the same

"Our moisture levels are still down. We don't have adequate moisture in the soil and we could have a problem if we don't have above-average rainfall this spring," said Don Henderson, vice president of the Indiana

Indiana farmers are also worried about the mild temperatures, which have averaged a relatively balmy 34.1 degrees this The northern Great Plains and month. Such weather "doesn't kill a lot of the pests," Henderson said. "That's a major problem to us."

In Wisconsin, "the real question for farmers is how much snow we'll get," said state Farm Bureau President Don Haldeman. "We came off the driest year we've ever had, and they're wondering if we'll have another year of drought."

"It's a major topic of discussion when farmers get together,' agreed Jerry Snethen of the Farm Bureau in Iowa, which saw some of the worst of the 1988

Spring rains will moisten the top inches, but farmers have lost deep soil moisture, their one insurance against drought, said Dennis Vercler of the Illinois Farm Bureau.

"It sets up a scenario similar to 1988," he said. "This is concerning a lot of people, even though it is fairly early. They're edgy about it. We're going into the season needing just the right rain at just the right time."

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

Ve live in a day of crowds...crowds at football games, crowds in many schoolrooms, crowds on the highways every weekend and holiday, crowds rushing to and from work each day, crowds on the sidewalks shopping — crowds everywhere.

Sometimes, therefore, individual persons get the feeling that they are "lost in the crowd," that as individuals they don't count for much and no one pays much attention to them. It's possible to be very lonely in a crowd.

But there is one place in our community where individuals as individuals do count, where every single one of us can be assured that we will be recognized and welcomed and appreciated as a person.

That place is at church, one of the friendly churches in our community. For this is the church's mission and purpose - to minister to and help individuals as they are and where they are, good or bad, rich or poor, old or young, great or small, weak or strong.

There's a church in your neighborhood which is waiting to help you as an individual and to welcome you as a person this Sunday. Why not attend that church - and lose that "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." (Luke 19:10)

Fellowship set for overeaters

The Panhandle Intergroup of Overeaters Anonymous will have a regional meeting at the Presbyterian Church in Dumas from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

This group includes fellowships from various area towns: Borger, Clarendon, Amarillo, Dumas, Pampa and Perryton, Texas; Guymon Okla., and Hugoton, Kan.

The subject of the meeting will be "How It Works: Changing the Inside Will Change the Outside."

The main speaker for the day is a psychologist who is also a member of Overeater's Anonymous. Members will share particular strategies that worked for them, along with finalized plans for a spring retreat in Amarillo on April 7-9 at Holiday Inn East.

The speaker then will be the author of a best selling book on compulsive overeating and a successful user of the 12 step program himself.

Newcomers are welcome. There is no charge for attending the Dumas meeting.

Scripture: In everything set them an example by doing what is good. In your teaching show integrity, seriousness and soundness of speech that cannot be condemned, so that those who oppose you may be ashamed because they have nothing bad to say about us. (Titus 2:7-8 NIV)

My sister, Frankie, works in a museum. One of her duties is to conduct tours of the museum for children of all

While conducting a tour for a group of preschoolers, she gathered them around her to admonish them, "Don't touch." Knowing they were too young to understand the natural oil on their fingertips would damage the artifacts, she played a pocket game with the

"I want everybody to put your hands in your pockets. Let's see if all of you can keep your hands in your pockets the whole time we're in the next room," Frankie challenged.

To add merit to the requirement, she finished with, "As a matter of fact, I'm going to keep my hands in my pockets, too.

With her hands deep in her pockets, Frankie led the group into the next room. Out of the corner of her eye she saw a little hand sneak out to touch the antique organ. She reached and moved the hand away and asked, "Now what did I just say?"

The wide-eyed little girl attached to the hand replied honestly, "You said you were going to keep your hands in your pockets.

Like all children, spiritual children may easily recite Christian principles but often have difficulty putting them into practice. While they may have only vague notions concerning their own behavior, they have very definite and scrupulous ideas concerning those to whom they look for guidance and example.

Christians have an unparalleled opportunity to influence the world for Christ, but to do so we must be prepared to consistently practice in our daily lives what we preach.

Have you ever had this happen? You meet a businessman at church; he professes to be a Christian and talks a high degree of commitment.

Based on your observations at church and preferring to do business with a fellow Christian, you decide to so some business with him only to be shocked and dismayed at his lack of professional integrity.

If we Christians are disappointed when one of our fellows lets Jesus down, imagine the destructive power our stumblings have on others.

Christian, if one picture is worth a thousand words, what are others going to notice most about you?

New Hope Baptist Church to have dedication service

New Hope Baptist Church will have a dedication service at 3 p.m. Sunday for its newly erected building at 912 S.

The church congregation will march from 438 Crawford, where they have held services for the past six months, to the new building.

Rev. J.H. Blakemore, pastor of Bethel Baptist Church in Borger, will preside at the dedication service. Rev. David Hill, pastor of New Hope Baptist Church in Amarillo, will do the presentation.

The dedication message will be given by Rev. David P. Williams, moderator of the Original West Texas Baptist District Association and pastor of Eastside Baptist Church in Wichita Falls

The music will be by New Hope Baptist Church Mass Choir.

At a series of conferences last year, church leaders called for dialogue with government officials on a variety of topics, including human rights, implementation of Soviet-style political reforms, education and alternative military service.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or openness, has been a frequent theme, and church leaders have criticized their nation's conservative leadership for rejecting outright the need for such a reform course.

"I have the impression that in many instances the political leadership is no longer in touch with reality," Leich said.

Leich ran afoul of the communist leadership when he declared recently that socialism in East Germany should show a more human face, in a reference to a term used to describe short-lived reforms in Czechoslovakia in 1968

The church has traditionally sought to work together with the state in resolving problems from within, its willingness to compromise summed up in agreements with the state that defined the role of the "church in

That view guided largely conformative church policy during the difficult decades of reconstruction after World War II.

But Leich said times have changed.

"We have always believed that our church has the task and responsibility of helping to determine and to shape our society and our nation. To do that, one must speak openly.

Growing dissatisfaction over economic and political conditions has led to a record number of applications from East Germans who want to leave the country for neighboring capitalist West Germany.

Holocaust-surviving Torah finds home in Tucson

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN

Associated Press Writer TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A 100year-old Torah which survived the Nazi Holocaust is on permanent loan to a small Jewish congregation in Tucson.

It was obtained from the Memorial Scrolls Trust, a London-based organization which rescued more than 1,500 complete or partial Torahs seized by the Nazis during their occupation of Czechoslovakia.

The Torah is a parchment scroll with the five books of Moses, or the first five books of the Bible, hand-written in Hebrew. It is the holiest symbol and most important document in Judaism.

"I didn't think this was going to happen. It took us several years," says Michael Rosenzweig, a member of the 18-family Congregation Eshel Avraham, which acquired the Torah. "It is, considering what it has been through, in miraculous shape.'

Rosenzweig says after the Torahs were seized, the Nazis removed their coverings, or mantles, and silver ornaments and catalogued and labeled them in a warehouse in Prague.

He says the Nazis, who destroyed thousands of synagogues in Europe in their quest to exterminate the Jews, had intended to preserve the Torahs and other religious artifacts in a museum of an extinct people.

He says the first time they contacted the trust, they were told all of the restorable Torahs were gone. But in August, he says a delegation visited the trust, "and the scribe turned to us and said, 'You know what, I found a scroll

Rosenzweig says the mediumsized Torah, written in "a beautiful, clear, workman-like hand but not very fancy," will be examined in its entirety by a scribe in Tucson, who will restore the text wherever needed

A member who is an artist in textiles is preparing a mantle that will memorialize Prcice, a small town south of Prague where the Torah came from, Rosenzweig says

Once the scribe is finished, he will declare the Torah kosher, or clean, fit for use in Sabbath and holiday services.

Rosenzweig says the congregation donated about $1,000 to the trust. The Torah will cost another $2,000 to restore. But it's still a bargain, Rosenzweig says. A new scroll of similar quality probably would cost $1000 to $14,000.

Soviet, Afghan forces kill hundreds of civilians in attacks

By MOHAMMED AFTAB Associated Press Writer

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet and Afghan forces shelled a mountain tunnel on the highway connecting Kabul to the Soviet Union, then wiped out villages to the south, killing hundreds of civilians, Western diplomats said.

As tensions escalated during the last phases of the Soviet troop withdrawal, Secretary of State James A. Baker III on Thursday ordered the U.S. Embassy in Kabul closed, citing increased turmoil in the Afghan capital. Western diplomats in Islamabad quoted reports from Kabul that Soviet and Afghan forces had launched a major shelling attack on both ends of the 10-mile Salang Tunnel in an effort to reopen the crucial Salang Highway, which is carrying Red Army troops home from Afghanistan. The diplomats, who spoke on condition of anonymity, quoted witnesses as calling the attack a "major atrocity."

A dispatch from Kabul received by one Western embassy quoted reports of witnesses seeing "Soviet tanks rolling over dead bodies of victims" along the highway, which runs for 250 miles between Kabul and the Soviet border.

The tunnel, part of the highway, cuts through the Hindu Kush mountains about 60 miles north of the

"After shelling the north and south ends of the Salang tunnel, Soviet and Afghan artillery obliterated all dwellings and villages south of the tunnel," the diplomats quoted the reports as saying.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said, "There are eyewitnesses who say no dwellings remain and hundreds of civilians were killed.'

The dispatch received by the Western embassy said the report of all houses being destroyed came from three separate sources, including a diplomat who defends the Afghan government.

Afghan media and military officers had reported 377 guerrillas were killed Tuesday along the Salang Highway, where the insurgents fighting the Kabul government have attacked many food and fuel convoys trying to reach the capital.

Heavy snows also have blocked parts of the road, and Kabul has suffered severe food and fuel shortages as the end of the Soviet military withdrawal approaches.

Moslem guerrillas have fought since a Communist coup in April 1978, and Soviet soldiers joined the battle in December 1979. Last May, the Red Army began withdrawing under a U.N.-mediated agreement and all Soviet military forces are to be gone

The diplomats attributed the brutal Soviet and Afghan attack Monday to a desire to intimidate Ahmed Shah Masoud, generally considered the most effective guerrilla commander in Afghanistan.

Masoud controls the Panjshir Valley, through which the Salang Highway runs.

In another developement Thursday, the army tried to counter charges it has dragged young men from their homes to fight Afghan guerrillas by displaying what it said were volunteers — solemn teen-agers and men in their late 30s.

As the Soviet military withdraws, Afghanistan's conscript army desperately needs recruits. Although two years of army service is mandatory, thousands of Afghans have deserted. Many young men have fled the country either to avoid conscription or to join the insurgents.

Col. Abdul Ghani, who commands one of nine training centers on the capital's outskirts, told visiting Western reporters that all his trainees were volunteers.

Assault leader helped to plan Somoza's death

By OSCAR SERRAT Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES. Argentina (AP) — The leader of this week's assault on an army base tried to overthrow the government in the 1970s and helped assassinate deposed Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza, informed sources said.

Enrique Gorriaran Merlo directed the attack Monday on the 3rd Infantry Regiment base in the western suburb of La Tablada that resulted in the death of 38 people, government and security sources said Thursday.

Gorriaran Merlo, 47, once led the now-defunct People's Revolutionary Army, which openly battled the military after it took power in a 1976 coup.

He is believed to have escaped during a 27-hour siege in which army and police forces retook the base, the sources said on condition of anonymity.

Among the dead were eight soldiers and two policemen. One of the policemen died Thursday of wounds suffered in the assault. About 70 others were wounded.

But Gorriaran Merlo was not thought to be among the bodies of 14 armed civilians who remain unidentified, the sources said.

The disclosure came as authorities probed links between the attackers and left-wing organizations. The government claims the assailants were leftist subver-

Police on Thursday raided several houses in Mar del Plata 250 miles south of Buenos Aires, and arrested three people but gave no other details.

Gorriaran Merlo, a stocky former architecture student, was involved in the Marxist People's Revolutionary Army, which was decimated in the late 1970s during a harsh anti-subversion campaign waged by the military leaders.

Gorriaran Merlo, however, escaped and went to Nicaragua. In published interviews, he said he led a team of Argentine and Nicaraguan guerrillas who assassinated Somoza in 1980 on a street in the Paraguayan capital of Asuncion. Somoza had been ousted by Nicaragua's leftist Sandinistas in 1979.

President Raul Alfonsin ordered the prosecution of Gorriaran Merlo shortly after taking office in December 1983. Alfonsin's election ended nearly eight years of military dictatorship.

Gorriaran Merlo was believed to be living abroad. Last year, a leftist human rights lawyer, Jorge Banos, asked the courts to allow Gorriaran Merlo to return and face trial without being imprisoned.

Police said among those killed in this week's assault was Banos. He and at least two other attackajers whose names have been released by police were active in a leftist political group, the Everyone for the Country Movement.

The little-known movement. formed about three years ago, denounced earlier this month what it said were plans for a coup by right-wing extremists in the armed forces. Those elements have led three dramatic but short-lived insurrections against Alfonsin since April 1987.

The army base's attackers carried a written proclamation that said their action was designed to stop a coup and foment civilian resistance to the military.

The incident surprised and chilled Argentines, and prompted Alfonsin to set up a National Security Council to evaluate and curtail the threat of subversion.

The group, composed of the chiefs of the military branches and several government ministers, met for the first time Thursday. Alfonsin presided. No details were provided.

The centrist Radical government, with an eye to the excesses committed by the military during its so-called "dirty war" against subversion in the 1970s, until now has barred the military from a major role in internal security.

I'm thankful we've come so far. Women are much more free now to involve themselves in a range of activities that would have been cause for scandal — or jail — not that long ago.

To make the cart, I used 25 feet of straight 11/2-inch pipe, eight 90degree elbow joints and eight Tjoints. For the axles, I used 4 feet of straight 1/4-inch pipe and four end caps.

The cart frame consists of a base section, a handle section and four connecting pipes. Cut and label the following lengths of 11/2inch pipe (based on a fitting allowance of % inch):

Two 26 inches (A), two 121/4 inches (B), two 251/4 inches (C), two 12¾ inches (D), two 3½ inches (E), four 19 inches (F) and six 11/4 inches (G).

The base section consists of two This handsome build-it-yourself serving cart is another popular PVC project, a mirror-image sides which are made of PVC pipe and plywood.

connected by crossbars. To assemble one side, use a G pipe to connect a T-joint to an elbow joint. Insert an A pipe into the other end of the elbow. At the opposite end of the A pipe, install another elbow, another G pipe and another T-joint.

Assemble an identical side. Insert a B pipe into the perpendicular opening of each T-joint in one of the side assemblies, and install the second side assembly on the opposite ends. Place the base section on the floor with the remaining open ends of the T-joints facing upward.

The handle section also consists of two mirror-image sides joined by two crossbars. For one side, start at the front end and use a G pipe to join an elbow to a Tjoint. The lower end of the T-joint is left open.

Insert a C pipe into the perpendicular opening of the T-joint, and install another T at the other end of the C pipe. Into the top opening of this T, insert a G pipe, an elbow joint, an E pipe and another elbow. This completes Assemble an identical side, making it a mirror image. For the crossbars that join the two sies, use a D pipe at the handle end and an E pipe at the front end. Insert an F pipe into each open T-joint in the base section; then lower the handle section down onto the F pipes, guiding them into the open fittings. To accommodate the axles, you will have to drill four holes slightly larger than the outside diameter of the 1/4-inch pipe. For the rear axle, drill through the outside of the T-joint nearest the floor, on each side of the cart frame. The axle will run through the B crossbar. For the front axle, drill all the way through the corner of the bottom elbow joint on each side of the cart. Cut two 21-inch lengths of 1/4-inch pipe for the axles and insert them.

I made 151/2-inch-diameter rear wheels and 8%-inch front wheels. Each one is a plywood disk with decorative plywood rim, hub and spokes attached to the outside surface. Drill an axle hole through the center. Use the end caps to hold the wheels on the axles

Divorce creates winners and losers, researcher says

EDITOR'S NOTE - A psychologist at the University of California spent 10 years studying 60 families split by divorce and found some unexpected patterns. Now Judith Wallerstein is publishing her findings in a book to be published next month. It seeks to answer the question, "Who wins, who loses, and why?"

By JOHN BARBOUR AP Newsfeatures Writer

Every year, more than 2 million Americans in some degree of desperation seek a "second chance" in life through divorce.

But a new look at this phenomenon finds that things are not necessarily better the second time around, and the chances of success are more elusive than think much about the 1 million or so children a year who are involved in divorce, most of whom sense a loss of protection and fear of the future.

Furthermore, the study shows. the aftershocks of divorce echo through the personal lives of all concerned at least a decade later.

Judith Wallerstein, a psychologist at the University of California and founder of the Center for the Family in Transition, has studied in depth 60 families for more than 10 years.

Her findings are to be published next month in a book. Second Chances — Men, Women and Children a Decade After Divorce, written in collaboration with science writer Sandra Blakeslee. The sub-sub title is even more provocative: Who

And society often forgets to Wins, Who Loses — And Why. Among the findings that Wallerstein discovered as "new, scientific and unexpected," was "that in most instances one person was much better off."

> "One person is very important in life," she says. "But the other member was, on balance, either in the same place or not doing too well. You're looking at a much greater divergence after divorce, and that's entirely new.

Who gets the major benefit of "the second chance" boils down to who wanted the divorce, whether male or female.

Wallerstein says she is not against divorce. "Divorce is much more than the coup de grace of a stressful marriage," she writes. "It is a new beginning that offers people second chances. It is no more and no less than an opportunity to rebuild lives. And there's the rub."

The book tells of the pitfalls, the expectations, the denial and the quiet dramas through the voices of those involved, and Wallerstein has obviously won the trust and the understanding of these people with whom she has been involved these many years.

"In the book there are three major families we built on," she says. "I think those people started off equal...We ask, 'Why did you get married?' Almost all of them tell us they married for love. They thought they were equal. They weren't shotgun marriages because someone got pregnant, although some of them were. By and large they knew each other...

"In some of the marriages that we see, there never was a marriage, however one defines marriages in terms of love, intimacy, friendship. There was unhappiness, loneliness or violence whatever — from the start.

"But in a whole group of these marriages, there was at some point a real marriage, and then it didn't endure for a whole lot of different reasons.'

In investigating the aftermath of divorce, she found that each participant has a different view. even the children, although they are almost unanimous in thinking that the divorce was a good thing for their parents.

Not so for the children. "You're in a mine field of moral issues, because the children feel they are worse off," Wallerstein says. "I'm not sure they were, but they feel they were, and that's an important distinction. I think in many ways they were better off."

Nor is it a passing thing: 'Again this a finding I didn't expect. I was startled when I first looked at it. It crescendoes as they move into young adulthood, as they are looking at an important love affair, an important commitment. That's when they really worry: Am I going to be locked into what happened to my Mom and Dad."

California director to teach master ballet class dent choreographer, he created eight ballets

CANYON — John Clifford, director of Ballet of Los Angeles, will teach a master class at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 14 in West Texas

The class, sponsored by Lone Star Ballet, is open to intermediate/advanced dancers 13 years and older. The class will be 11/4 hours.

Clifford, a native of Los Angeles, made his first appearance with the New York City Ballet as the young prince in The Nutcracker when he was 11 years old. Under a Ford Foundation Grant, he studied at the New York City Ballet's School of American Ballet and began his long association with the noted

An outstanding dancer, he appeared in principal roles in over 40 ballets, and as resifor the company.

In 1973, encouraged by his mentor, George Ballanchine, he returned to Los Angeles, where he founded the Los Angeles Ballet and served as artistic director from 1974 to 1985, during which time he created over 50 ballets for the company.

Since then he has mounted ballets for companies in the United States, Europe and Central and South America, including nearly a year with the Monte Carlo Ballet in Monaco, where he was also Professeur de Ballet.

Back in Los Angeles, he founded the Ballet of Los Angeles to make a national tour in the spring of 1988. The success of that tour led to the present tour with the company, headed by appearing at the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium at 8 p.m. Feb. 14 with Lone Star

Limited space is available for the master class, so student should register in advance at the Lone Star Ballet office.

xams recommended for diabetics

AUSTIN — Diabetes is among the top 10 causes of death in Texas, and diabetic eye disease is the leading cause of blindness in the United States today.

Early detection and treatment of eye changes can reduce the diabetic's risk of blindness or vision problems, according to the Texas Medical Association.

A diabetic is someone whose body cannot use sugars and starches properly. Many diabetics can control their disease with diet, exercise and medications.

Diabetics are at a high risk of developing diabetic eye disease, or retinopathy, especially if they have had diabetes for many years or have high blood pressure.

Fortunately, not all persons with diabetic eye disease become blind. However, clouding of the lens (cataracts), increased pressure on the eye (glaucoma) and paralysis of the muscle controlling the eyeball can affect the di-

Regular eye examinations by a physician can detect these complications at their earliest stages, which is helpful in treating and eliminating diabetic eye disease.

Yearly eye examinations for diabetics should include having the eyes dilated with drops and examined in a dark room (called a sensitive eye examination) at least once a year.

Physicians can detect serious changes in the retina (the part of the eye that is connected with the brain by the optic nerve) and may refer patients with this condition to an opthmalogist (a physician specializing in eye diseases and eye surgery) if necessary.

TMA reminds diabetics to have yearly sensitive eye examinations to help avoid complications associated with diabetic eye dis-

Lendl, Mecir headed for Aussie showdown Bad night for top-ranked teams

By The Associated Press

What a bad night for top-ranked teams past and present

Illinois, which moved into the No. 1 spot this week, was upset at Minnesota 69-62 Thursday night. Former No. 1 Duke fell to North Carolina State 88-73 for its third

'We came out tonight kind of tight and kind of tentative. I don't know exactly what the reason was," Illinois' Stephen Bardo said.

"It's a tribute to our young men and how hard they worked to be number one," Illinois coach Lou Henson said. "But it (being ranked first) certainly doesn't help you win ball-

Willie Burton had 20 points and 13 rebounds and threw three great passes during a 13-0 run in the first half.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 3 Louisville beat Southern Mississippi 95-76, No. 6 Arizona trounced Arizona State 96-71. No. 11 Florida State got past South Carolina 69-67, No. 12 Iowa defeated Wisconsin 78-70, No. 17 Ohio State downed Northwestern 100-68 and No. 19 Stanford whipped Oregon 75-53.

Minnesota turned a 12-11 lead into a 25-11 bulge behind Burton.

Illinois, trailing 33-24 at halftime, scored 10 straight points and closed within 61-59 in the final minutes. But Burton made a jump shot and Kevin Lynch had two free throws to keep Minnesota in control Minnesota is 11-5 and 3-3 in the Big Ten. Illinois is 4-1 in the conference.

No. 3 Louisville 95, S. Mississippi 76 Pervis Ellison and Kenny Payne led a second-half spurt that sent Louisville over host Southern Mississippi for its 14th straight

The Cardinals, 14-2 and 3-0 in the Metro Conference, went on a 22-6 run that made it 65-45 with 11:40 to play. Ellison finished with 26 points and Payne had 19.

Darrin Chancellor scored 28 points for the Golden Eagles, 6-9.

No. 6 Arizona 96, Arizona St. 71 Sean Elliott scored 20 points and Arizona used a 21-4 burst in the first half to beat its intrastate rival for the fifth straight time.

The visiting Wildcats, 14-2 and leading the Pac-10 at 8-1, were ahead 45-27 at halftime. Elliott scored nine points as Arizona went on a 14-2 spree to start the second half.

Trent Edward scored 21 points for the Sun Devils, 9-8

No. 15 N. Carolina St. 88, Duke 73 Brian Howard scored 23 points to lead North Carolina State.

The Wolfpack, 13-2 and 4-1 in the ACC, won for the 11th time in 12 games. The Wolfpack made eight steals in the first half and four more in the final 10 minutes of the game.

Duke, trailing 45-39 at halftime, rallied for a 63-61 lead with 10:15 to go. But the Wolfpack scored six straight points, all resulting from steals, and went ahead for good.

Duke is 13-3 and 3-3. No. 11 Florida St. 69, S. Carolina 67 George McCloud made a 3-point shot with seven seconds left, rallying Florida State in the Metro Conference game at Columbia, S.C. The Seminoles, 15-1 and 3-0 in the league. were held 30 points below their season average. Tat Hunter had 20 points and McCloud finished with 17.

John Hudson scored 18 points for South Carolina, 12-4 and 2-2.

No. 12 Iowa 78, Wisconsin 70 Roy Marble got 24 points and became

Iowa's all-time leading scorer. Marble, a 6-foot-6 senior, surpassed the record of 1,768 points set by Greg Stokes four years ago. Ed Horton added 22 points for Iowa, 15-3 and 3-2 in the Big Ten.

The Badgers closed within 66-62 with 3:42 left. But Horton scored five straight points as Iowa took control

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) -Bill Walsh left coaching on top of the world and gave George Seifert a chance to live a dream.

Seifert, a native of San Francisco, was Walsh's hand-picked choice to take over as coach of the 49ers, winners of three Super Bowls this decade.

Walsh's long-rumored move to the front office Thursday passes the 49ers' reins from an offensive mastermind to a nine-year assistant whose forte is defense and whose reputation is for intensity.

Seifert concocted a shifting zone defense that smothered Cincinnati's no-huddle offense in the Super Bowl last Sunday. Now he'll have to figure out how to succeed a mentor he acknowledged is headed for the Hall of Fame.

Seifert said it is a "lifetime dream" for anyone to grow up in an area and go on to coach its team. "It's a heck of dream come Owner Eddie DeBartolo Jr., presiding over a packed new conference, rewarded the 49-yearold Seifert for his patience with a new multi-year contract and his first NFL head coaching job. He praised him as "the foremost defensive coach in the country" and said he will be "one of the best coaches in history.'

"The players can rest assured there's not going to be a big changeover as far as the system goes," said Seifert, who grew up in the shadow of Kezar Stadium, the 49ers' former home.

DeBartolo had perhaps an even bigger prize for Walsh, who decided it was simply "time to step aside" after 31 years as a coach. The owner turned over the final say in all 49ers' football-related decisions to the man he called the greatest coach ever, and did it without changing his $1.3 milliona-year contract.

Walsh made his resignation official in a meeting with DeBartolo in nearby Pebble Beach on Wednesday, three days after the 49ers gave him his third Super Bowl title in 10 years as coach.

DeBartolo, who stripped Walsh of the team presidency a year ago after a third straight playoff loss, did not try to talk him out of it. But in naming him executive vice president for football operations, he gave Walsh the chance to help mold his team of the '80s into the

"It (the meeting) got emotional a little bit because I don't think anybody likes change ... when things have gone so well and so right for so long," said DeBartolo, who's here to play the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am golf tournament. As part of the 49ers' reorganization, General Manager John McVay will take on the new title of vice president of football administration. But DeBartolo said that Walsh will be in charge of the draft, trades and roster cuts.

"In addition to being new, the black and white color scheme causes a visual problem. Nobody has shot very good in there. Bones (Simpson, Amarillo HS coach) warned me about it, and he was right."

Most other district coaches will say that Pampa is toughest, mainly because of the atmosphere. Dunbar's Joe McWilliams points out the synthetic-surfaced floor is a problem since, being so much harder than wood, players' legs tend to tire and ache more

PEBBLE BEACH. Calif. — Dave Stockton has a new putter, some old habits and absolutely no illu-

"No way," was the answer to his own rhetorical question by the man who describes himself as "a 47-year-old with a bad back.'

'But it was fun. It was a lot of fun,' said Stockton, who found some old habits hard to break in his 7under-par effort at Pebble Beach.

He kept calling this tournament "the Crosby," the title it held the first 23 times he played it.

And he kept making those putts, getting it up and down from some unlikely places, making the birdies when the opportunity arose, just as he did in his golfing prime more than a decade ago.

Stockton was acknowledged as a wizard around the greens — one of the great clutch putters in golf when he won PGA national championships in 1970

And that mastery was very much in evidence Thursday when, using a new putter for the first time, he one-putted 13 times and took a one-shot lead in the first round of the tournament now called the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

He used only 10 putts over the last nine holes He holed putts for birdie or par totaling 54 yards in length. And he saved the best for last.

He finished with three straight birdies, dropping an 18-foot putt "with about 10 feet of break," he said, on the 16th and holing from 20 feet on the 17th and

"I'm not as consistent as I used to be, but on my bad days, my short game is a good as some guy's on their good days," said Stockton, now a part-time performer on the PGA Tour.

Stockton, making his 25th appearanace in this event, took it into the third generation. He once played with his father — "I think it was '74," he said — as his amateur partner. This time, his partner is his 20-year-old son, David.

Foreman posts 7th-round win over Young

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — George Foreman ate an early breakfast of pancakes, with lots of butter and syrup, and sausages to keep his weight up and celebrate his seventh-round victory over Starvin' Mark Young.

"I won't eat like this again until my next win, but if I don't eat now I might lose too much weight and not be able to fight," the pudgy Foreman, who weighed in at 253 pounds, said early today.

Foreman, 40, said he has to keep his weight up around 250 so he can continue the busy fight schedule he's been following since beginning his comeback in 1987, following a 10-year retirement.

He said he plans to fight again Feb. 16 in Orlando, Fla., but he couldn't recall his opponent's name. Thursday night's victory was Foreman's 15th straight since coming back into the ring.

His lifetime record stands at 60-2 with 57 knockouts. The former heavyweight champion stopped

Young at 1:47 of the seventh round after knocking him to the canvas a few seconds earlier with a right hand to the head.

After the Miami fighter, who weighed in at 231, took a mandatory eight-count, Foreman delivered a left and a right, and Young's corner stopped the said Young. Young, 10-12, conceded that he made a mistake and turned the wrong way before Foreman landed the big right hand that knocked him to the canvas in

"All of a sudden a good shot came from nowhere,"

While Foreman was celebrating and looking forward to his next fight, another former world champion on the comeback trail, Aaron Pryor, was wondering about the future of his career.

Pryor, 33, was taken off Thursday's boxing card by New York Athletic Commission Chairman Randy Gordon after a doctor determined that Pryor's left eye was too badly damaged to allow the junior welterweight to fight.

Dr. Robert Vanderlinde, a Rochester opthamologist, said Pryor has at least "a very dense cataract" and maybe a detached retina. Vanderlinde said Pryor will undergo surgery Tuesday.

He said he wouldn't know whether Pryor would be able to fight again until he completes the surgery and can examine the extent of the injury.

Prvor, who won the World Boxing Association's junior welterweight title in 1980, has had a problem with the vision in his left eye for several years. Vanderlinde said Pryor's current condition had developed in the past year.

He reigned as WBA champion until the end of 1983 and also captured the International Boxing Federation's junior welterweight title in January of 1984. But his life fell apart when his wife divorced him and he became addicted to cocaine. His record is 37-1, with 33 knockouts.

Pryor was scheduled to fight a 10-round bout with Rick Kaiser, of Spearfish, S.D.

"I didn't want to let the people down," a dejected Pryor said. "But I figure I can come back from this. At least it won't be a drug comeback."

Popular wheelchair athlete killed

ARLINGTON (AP) — Andrew David Beck battled his way back from a near-fatal car accident to become a champion wheelchair athlete and obtain a degree at the University of Texas at Arlington.

The wheelchair-bound graduate student died Wednesday of injuries he suffered Tuesday when he was struck by a car as he attempted to wheel across a university road that has been described for years as a dangerous spot.

A spokeswoman at Arlington Memorial Hospital said Beck, 35, died of massive internal injuries.

A memorial service for Beck was held Thursday at Greenwood-Mount Olivet Funeral Home in Arlington. His family has asked that memorial contributions be made to the UTA Handicapped Students Association.

Students have long complained about the hightraffic strip that bisects the campus.

"It just makes it so much harder to accept, that he was killed crossing that damn street," said Judi Pontuti, a secretary for UTA's Handicapped Student Services office.

"Andy was a big role model," said Pontuti, pausing to brush away tears.

Witnesses told police that Beck, books stashed at his side and wearing his trademark beret, was wheeling across campus on his way home after class when he entered the intersection without waiting for a green light. He dodged one car and was struck in a southbound lane by a car driven by an 18-year-old woman.

UTA campus police Sgt. James Ferguson said the driver, who is not a student, was traveling within the 30 mph speed limit and will not face any charges in connection with the accident.

Beck was seriously injured in 1983 when when he fell asleep behind the wheel of his car while driving from Dallas to Austin.

"He was a perfect example of the way a person should adapt after suffering a spinal-cord injury," said Dallas Armstrong, 26, an undergraduate student who played with Beck on the university's wheelchair rugby team and was a former room-

"He did exactly what you're supposed to do. You've got to count the pieces you have left and build on them," Armstrong said.

Beck, a native of Bogota, Colombia, earned his undergraduate degree in English last year and had just begun graduate studies.

He was a top athlete, earning letters in wheelchair sports for three years and serving as captain of the wheelchair track team. During the weekend, he and his rugby teammates played in an international tournament in Toronto, where they beat a half-dozen teams to earn a fourth-place award.

Officials bowed to pressure from students and faculty members last year and agreed to jointly fund a $7 million project to lower a mile stretch of Cooper Street and build an overhead pedestrian

"A tragedy of that type points up once again the need for us to move ahead as soon as possible for the Cooper Street" project, said Arlington Mayor Richard Greene. "It's just a hazardous situation for students who have to cross Cooper every day."

The project, which calls for a motorized wheelchair lift at the Second Street crosswalk, is to be completed within two years, Jack Loggins, Arlington's assistant traffic director, said.
