City Commission employs new city manager

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Saying he wants City Hall to be a place where "millionaires and little old ladies on a pension" could feel equally free to voice their opinions, the city manager of Marble Falls accepted an offer by the Pampa City Commission and was hired as Pampa city manager Sunday afternoon.

Jack Chaney, a 39-year-old former businessman with oil and gas experience, was hired by city commissioners after a 5-0 vote Sunday.

The unanimous vote followed a brief executive session between commissioners, Chaney and Assistant City Manager Frank Smith.

"He's super good on economic development as a plant manager and owner," said Commissioner

Ray Hupp. "He's also got good hands-on city management experience."

Since Marble Falls has a population of only about 5,000, Hupp and Mayor David McDaniel said they were careful to check Chaney's references and evaluate his individual attributes as well as those of the city he was leaving.

"We looked at him as an individual and at what he has done. There are always some questions about town size, but that's not paramount," McDaniel said.

He praised Chaney as an excellent communicator who could get along well with the media, citizens and special interest groups.

Chaney holds degrees from Our Lady of the Lake University in San Antonio and the University of Texas-Permian Basin in Midland.

He has served as city manager in Marble Falls and Floresville. Prior to that, he was owner and manager of Alpha Electric in Odessa, a plant manager for Amerigas in Odessa and an employee with Phillips Petroleum.

Chaney is also a veteran of the U.S. Air Force, having reached the rank of sergeant and been in combat during the Vietnam era.

He said the sudden move to a city the size of Pampa will cause him to "move slower than if I'd moved to a town of 10,000."

"I feel very confident with the infrastructure in Pampa. There's a lot I need to learn. But as far as actual management of the city, I'm not worried," Chaney said.

Believing in the old Navy axiom of "whenever you take command of a ship, you never touch the rudder for the first six months," he said he will be spending that time meeting people and learning the ins and outs of the local municipal government.

"I want everyone to feel included. City Hall is a place they can come and be listened to. We want citizens to feel they can talk to their city manager. I'm not here to build a kingdom. I'm not here to serve," Chaney said.

He stated that he believes as a city manager his position precludes him ever becoming involved in local political struggles.

"I will not get into the political arena. I will do what the commission wants me to do," he said.

Hupp said Chaney was recommended to Pampa city commissioners by the Texas Municipal League as an excellent city manager.

Chaney said he will be working to establish excellent rapport between himself and Pampa city employees, terming them the backbone of a successful city.

"I want to stress to the employees of this city the importance of them making suggestions. It's not the city manager who makes municipal government work. It's the people in the trenches," he said.

Chaney's wife Susan is an elementary school teacher who will be seeking employment in the Pampa area. They have three children, Melissa, 20; Lem, 18; and Jim, 4.

Chaney is scheduled to take over as city manager in Pampa the week of Feb. 26. He will be a salaried employee, receiving $48,500 annually as well as a car allowance of $450 per month.

Houston firm set to launch private rocket

HOUSTON (AP) — It's later than expected, but a local company expects to become the first privately funded firm to launch a commercial rocket into space for a paying customer.

Space Services Inc. says it is launching a suborbital, or sounding rocket, for the University of Alabama-Huntsville's Consortium for Materials Development in Space.

The purpose of the March flight is to deliver six materials processing experiments to about seven minutes worth of microgravity near the apogee, or highest point, of the trajectory.

The experiments will investigate the effects of near-weightlessness on electroplating, separation of polymers, production of polyurethane foam, and molecular dispersion of other materials.

A parachute will lower the experiment module to the desert floor of White Sands Missile Range, N.M., about 42 miles down-range from the launch site.

The tab for lofting 625 pounds worth of science experiment materials on a 15-minute, 200-mile high dip into space is $1 million. The cost can be considered a bargain, since it will cost Space Services about $1.2 million to buy the components of the two-stage, solid-fuel rocket and assemble them into a package.

The company, headed by former Mercury astronaut Donald K. "Deke" Slayton, thought business would be lively in 1985, when it announced plans to begin the age of private space ventures by launching human ashes into orbit on behalf of Florida funeral home. Those plans have gone belly up.

Texaco turns back Icahn buyout

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. on Sunday made a truce with its biggest stockholder, Carl Icahn, who said he would not try to buy the oil giant or wrest control from its board.

Texaco, moving toward completion of a restructuring, also proposed paying $1.9 billion in special dividends to shareholders, a step Icahn applauded.

The company said it had signed a seven-year agreement with Icahn that he will not add to his stake in the oil giant, currently estimated at 17 percent, and will not launch or support any proxy fights against management.

Texaco and Icahn also agreed to settle pending litigation. Texaco sued Icahn last spring, accusing him of securities law violations.

Icahn had pressured Texaco management to boost its stock's value by selling assets. Last June, the corporate raider lost a bitter struggle against management for control of the Texaco board. Earlier, the board rejected Icahn's friendly $60-a-share offer to buy the company.

Icahn, who said he signed the agreement near dawn Sunday after a meeting that began Saturday afternoon, said he felt Texaco management had done a good job in getting the most out of recent asset sales, particularly the recent $3.24 billion sale of its Texaco Canada interests.

He said he also liked the idea that Texaco would put the special dividend and any possible changes in its "poison pill" defense to a vote of shareholders. A poison pill is a defensive measure for preventing the takeover of a corporation by making its acquisition prohibitively expensive.

"I think top management at Texaco during the last year has done a good job in making Texaco leaner and more productive," Icahn said in a statement.

He declined to say whether he planned to sell his Texaco stock. Texaco said it plans to pay two special dividends.

Military plane crash kills seven in Alaska

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — A C-130 crashed into a snowbank and split in two during a landing in a thick, icy fog, killing at least seven Canadian soldiers heading to the massive Brim Frost '89 exercises, U.S. officials said.

With the temperature around minus 60 degrees, the Canadian Hercules C-130 was carrying eight crewmen and 10 special service paratroopers from Edmonton, Alberta, when it crashed just short of the runway at Fort Wainwright's airfield, said U.S. Army Capt. Jim Rodgers.

Five of the 18 Canadian servicemen aboard were seriously injured in Sunday night's crash and six sustained minor injuries, said U.S. Army Maj. Jim Tillman.

"The weather was quite bad," said Rodgers.

He said the crash occurred with a thick, icy fog blanketing the runway and the temperature around 60 degrees below zero.

The four-engine Lockheed Corp. turbo-prop aircraft, one of the longest-running planes in continuous production, generally is not designed for the cold weather, said H. David Crowther, vice president of corporate communications in Calabasas, Calif.

"I don't know if the extreme cold could have been a factor, but the I know that the engines are not designed for cold weather," he said early today.

Army Maj. Sherrill Mock said U.S. and Canadian investigators had not determined if weather caused the crash.

"We've been landing aircraft for the past two weeks in the same conditions," said Mock. "The runway, as far as I know, was not icy."

The plane's last contact with the control tower was at 6:47 p.m. (9:47 p.m. CST). There were no distress calls from the plane before it crashed a few minutes later, Mock said.

The plane split in two after the crash and there was no evidence of fire, Rodgers said.

Emergency vehicles careened through the heavy ice fog to reach the crash site southeast of Fairbanks.

The crash killed at least seven, said Rodgers.

The injured were treated at Bassett Army Community Hospital, authorities said.

It was the second of three Canadian planes heading to the exercises Sunday. The first landed safely at Wainwright; the third was diverted to Fairbank's civilian airport.

The plane took off from Edmonton's Namao Base, said Canadian Forces spokesman Maj. Luigi Rossetto in Edmonton.

The soldiers belonged to Force Mobile Command and were part of a 500-man paratroop force that was to support the 1st Brigade, 6th Infantry Division (Light), in a major land battle that is the centerpiece of the Brim Frost ground exercises near Fairbanks.

About 26,000 servicemen, 120 aircraft and 1,000 vehicles from the U.S. Army, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, National Guard, reserve units and Canadian Forces are participating in the cold-weather training exercise. The $15 million exercise began Jan. 20 and is scheduled to continue through Feb. 1.

The giant Lockheed C-130s, which have wingspans of more than 130 feet, is a workhorse of the military fleet and is used to transport troops and equipment. They were first delivered to the U.S. military in 1956 and have been involved in several crashes in recent years.

Young satanists describe their beliefs, practices in cults

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a six-day series of articles on the growing presence of alleged satanic cults in Pampa and surrounding areas. Parents should be aware that some of the details and comments in the series may be fairly graphic concerning practices and rituals described by participants in the satanic cult activities.

Stories from all over the country about teen-agers who, in the name of Satan, have committed the most awful crimes against classmates, strangers and even their own parents are becoming regular reading in the nation's newspapers.

The nation's youngest death-row inmate is an 18-year-old boy from Oklahoma who murdered three people, including his parents, as part of his satanic practices.

This month The Associated Press carried the story of a group of allegedly satanically motivated youth who went on a rampage of death and destruction in the Texas town of Richmond, near Houston.

However, the growing trend of youths who turn toward devil-worship as an outlet for their rebellion is not limited to "other places, but it couldn't happen here."

In the span of two weeks The Pampa News was able to track down six teen-agers in the area, the majority from Pampa, who claim they are involved with local satanic covens.

All of them agreed to talk about their experiences on the condition they were not identified. In some cases, their sex has been changed in the story to mask their identities.

They all expressed fear that other satanists would harm them if it was known they had talked to the press. None of the six were aware that other local satanists had also been interviewed.

"I got into it for the power and ability and the knowledge of things that I have looked on as interesting," said 17-year-old Kerry. "I think there are about 20 or 30 kids at school who are into it."

Kerry said most of the youths he knew who were practicing satanists were "just fooling around. They're curious. But it draws you in and calls you and entices you."

He and several of the other youths displayed a certain eloquence that belied their age and their social background. Police believe many of them may have been coached by older satanists on occult theology.

Wendy, a high school dropout, said she had participated in rituals where she committed sexual acts with the bone of a dead animal.

"I did it on Halloween. The names of the high priest and priestess were written on the bone. I did it to show my loyalty to them," she said.

The animal bone she said was used during the black mass was found under a rock near where she said the coven meeting took place. Scratch marks on the bone seem to indicate someone had tried to write something on it.

She said the meetings were "neat." No trace of embarrassment or shame over her alleged act with the bone could be detected.

Another youth said he had participated in a satanic mass north of Borger recently at an old cemetery. He said during the gathering someone had dug

U.S. embassy closes its offices in Afghanistan as Soviets leave

By SHARON HERBAUGH
 Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — U.S. diplomats lowered the Stars and Stripes and closed their mission in embattled Kabul today as departing Soviet troops headed north in what one Moscow envoy said could be the last truck convoy home.

Afghan troops and Moslem guerrillas continue to fight for control of the Salang Highway, the only road linking the capital and the Soviet border.

Insurgents based in Pakistan said Sunday that Soviet bombing and missile attacks along the 260-mile highway had killed 600 civilians and injured 1,200 in the past several days.

"The mangled bodies are still under the debris," the Afghan News Agency, operating from bordering Pakistan by a guerrilla group, said in a telexed statement.

Official Radio Kabul, monitored in Pakistan, said Afghan troops had carried out "successful military operations" with civilians who want to keep the rugged Salang Highway open.

Just north of Kabul on Sunday, a convoy of Soviet soldiers in armored personnel carriers and trucks loaded with missile launchers cruised through a Soviet bunker checkpoint as helicopter gunships hovered nearby, offering cover.

A Soviet diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, "This could be the last convoy." He refused to elaborate.

Two fighter jets streaked overhead and disappeared behind the snow-covered mountains just beyond the hills surrounding Kabul.

The remaining Red Army troops apparently are leaving on transport planes, completing a withdrawal begun eight months ago under a U.N.-brokered agreement to end the Soviet's nine-year intervention in Afghanistan.

Moscow sent about 115,000 troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 to prop up Marxists who seized power in a coup the previous year. Soviet diplomats in Kabul say the remaining 15,000 to 20,000 Red Army troops could be gone by the end of the week, about 10 days before the U.N. deadline of Feb. 15.

The guerrillas are not a party to the U.N. agreement and have vowed to overthrow the government of President Najib once the Soviets are gone.

At the U.S. Embassy in Kabul, American diplomats said they would return once peace is restored in this war-torn country.

"Today we leave at a moment that is both happy and sad," said the charge d'affaires, Jon D. Glassman, after a flag-lowering ceremony in the embassy's snow-covered compound.

"We are pleased that the people of Afghanistan are going to be relieved of their suffering, but we know their struggle is not over. The people of the United States are with them," he said. "We will be back as soon as the conflict is over."

At the ceremony, three Marine guards took down the U.S. flag, folded it and handed it to Glassman.

The State Department last week ordered the 11-member embassy staff to leave, citing fears the Afghan army may not be capable of protecting foreign diplomats once the Soviets leave.

West Germany, Britain, Japan, France and Austria all have withdrawn or are withdrawing their embassy staffs. Italy and some of Moscow's East bloc allies are considering similar action.

Glassman declined to say when the U.S. staff would leave Kabul aboard a chartered flight to India. The airport was closed today due to snow and fog.

The Afghan government has denounced the embassy closures as unnecessary and aimed solely at encouraging the U.S.-backed Moslem insurgents to intensify their fighting.

Blood bank cited for using banned donors

HOUSTON (AP) — A blood bank that supplies area kidney dialysis centers was ordered to recall two units of blood from donors who tested positive for AIDS antibodies and hepatitis B.

But by the time of the recall, red blood cells taken from each donor already had been given to patients, the Houston Chronicle reported in a copyright story Sunday. The plasma was then recovered and destroyed.

The blood units themselves tested negative in the blood bank's laboratory, but interviewers at the for-profit blood bank, Houston Apheresis Inc., apparently did not check a fail-safe list that identifies donors who had previously tested positive.

The Food and Drug Administration ordered the blood bank to recall the blood last September.

One unit was drawn from a donor who had previously tested positive for antibodies to the AIDS virus and the other from a donor who had tested positive for hepatitis B, the newspaper reported.

After the recall, the FDA sent out by the FDA, I think we are picked on to some degree," he said.

Reimer, a board-certified pathologist, does not deny that sending out the two blood units was a serious lapse. But he said he thinks the previous tests of the two donors were "false positives" and that no one was hurt by the error because the blood units were clean.

Celanese officials on tour

Fourteen officials from the Hoechst Celanese Corp., including several from the main office in Germany, will be touring the city and the local plant tonight and Tuesday.

A reception at 6:15 p.m. today at the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce will begin the activities. Approximately 100 local officials, as well as company executives from Celanese, Fluor Daniel and other local industries, will be on hand for the reception.

Texas Secretary of State Jack Rains will make a presentation to the 14 Celanese officials on behalf of Gov. Bill Clements.

That will be followed by cocktails and dinner tonight at the Pampa Country Club.

Tuesday the company officials will be taken on a tour of the Pampa plant beginning at 9:30 a.m. It will be an opportunity for national and international executives of the company to see the rebuilt facility, following extensive repairs to the plant, which was damaged in an explosion in November 1987.

Federal judge hears testimony in alleged patient dumping case

VICTORIA (AP) — A federal administrative judge is expected to decide whether a local obstetrician violated anti-patient dumping provisions when he ordered a woman in labor transferred to a hospital 170 miles away.

The case centers on Rosa Rivera, then 31, who arrived at Victoria's DeTar Hospital Dec. 5, 1986, to give birth to her sixth child.

Dr. Michael Burditt said he ordered Mrs. Rivera sent to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston because he feared her unborn child was growth-retarded and would need more care than could be provided in Victoria.

Transferring the child in his mother's womb was much better than having him make the trip after birth, the doctor said.

Mrs. Rivera never made it to Galveston.

She gave birth in an ambulance about 30 miles outside Victoria. The government contends Mrs. Rivera suffered from very high blood pressure on arrival at the Victoria hospital and that transporting her posed far more danger to her and her unborn child than delivery at DeTar.

In a hearing last week, Burditt was pitted against the U.S. Inspector General's Office of the Department of Health and Human Services, which fined him $25,000 for violating anti-patient dumping provisions of the Comprehensive Omnibus Budget Review Act of 1985.

"I feel like I have to fight it, not only for myself, but for all the other doctors in the country," Burditt, 44, was quoted in the Houston Chronicle Sunday as saying.

U.S. Administrative Law Judge Charles Stratton said he'll probably make his decision in two to four months after reviewing stacks of written testimony and legal briefs submitted in the case.

The Texas Medical Association said the proper way to decide if doctors violate anti-dumping legislation is through the state's peer review process.

A peer review group at DeTar Hospital found that Burditt acted correctly.

The American Medical Association and the TMA each are paying a third of the cost of Burditt's legal defense.

DeTar Hospital made a $5,000 settlement with the Inspector General's Office without admitting guilt in the case.

Testimony revealed that Mrs. Rivera had not received prenatal care prior to her arrival at DeTar Hospital.

When a "non-aligned patient" — an expectant mother without a physician — arrives at the hospital in labor, nurses summon one of the 11 local doctors who deliver babies.

Burditt was called and told the patient was experiencing irregular contractions and extremely high blood pressure.

"I had to assume this patient had been hypertensive through this entire pregnancy," Burditt said.

"If that was indeed the case, there was a very large chance that the infant would be growth retarded. Further, there was a high risk of stroke to the mother and possibly even death to the mother and infant."

When Burditt ordered Mrs. Rivera's transfer, nursing supervisor Jean Herman told Burditt that anti-dumping regulations forbid the transfer of women in labor.

She said Burditt told her: "Until DeTar Hospital pays my malpractice insurance, I will pick and choose my patients as I do my private ones."

Burditt admits making the statement, but said it didn't affect his decision about Mrs. Rivera's treatment.

Herman also said Burditt had a good reputation as a doctor and was not known as a doctor who dumped patients.

Neighbor's tip leads to identities of children, slain woman

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

DENTON (AP) — An alert neighbor provided authorities with a break that led to the identities of two abandoned toddlers, now determined to be related to at least one of two women found fatally bludgeoned in Wise County.

Authorities said Sunday a man they identified only as Pablo believed he knew the women and children. Pablo told police he had seen the women the night before their bodies were found beaten to death in a rural Wise County culvert near Decatur.

The two women's bodies were found early Thursday and the children were found wandering separately a few hours later in neighboring Denton County locations, about 30 miles away.

Denton County Sheriff Kirby Robinson identified the toddlers as cousins, Damion Medina Gamez, 1, and Silvia Rojas Gamez, 14 months.

Robinson said authorities identified one of the bodies through fingerprints on file with the Texas Department of Public Safety as being that of Damion's mother, 22-year-old Claudia Medina, who was also known as Jenata Medina Baltazar Gamez of Frisco.

The identity of the second woman had yet to be established Sunday night, but officials were checking to see if she is Erlinda Martinez Gamez, 27, the missing mother of Silvia Gamez.

Investigators from the Texas Rangers and the Wise County and Denton County sheriff's departments spent most of Sunday night talking with the children's fathers, who are brothers.

The men, who authorities said were not considered suspects at the time, were sent home Sunday night after being questioned extensively with the help of a Spanish-speaking translator.

"They've been released," said Denton County sheriff's deputy Scott Hill. "They're just the fathers of the kids — that's all they are now. Not suspects."

The two men, who told police they live in Dallas, were identified as construction workers Damion Gamez, 28, and Silvio Rojas Gamez, 21. The two men both said they were separated from their wives and children, Robinson said.

Robinson said at a news conference that investigators began searching for the two brothers on Saturday night after Pablo said he thought he knew the two slain women.

Robinson said the women were seen leaving their Frisco residence in a vehicle, and at least one of the children was seen leaving with them. The women's bodies later were discovered in the culvert by a workman servicing a gas well.

The Gamez brothers surrendered to authorities Sunday afternoon, after learning they were wanted for questioning. The two men told police their wives and small children were missing, Robinson said.

Frisco Police Chief Roger Wingo said authorities searched the Frisco and Little Elm areas for the brothers Saturday because the brothers had listed residences there during previous arrests for public intoxication in his city.

The children have been in foster care since they were found. Caseworker Leigh Ann Pulley, said Damion, who turned 1 year old the day the women's bodies were found, seemed to be in good spirits and was saying "Momma." But, Pulley said, Silvia has been silent since she was rescued.

"The little girl has a funny blank stare," Pulley said. "One doctor is speculating that she was traumatized. You don't know what they saw."

A baby blanket was found on the body of one of the dead women, which led authorities to believe the children were related to the bodies.

A Galveston Police Department motorcycle officer is shot with canned string by a young Mardi Gras spectator as he attempts to clear a parade route. The 1989 Mardi Gras started this weekend with parades and balls and will continue through Saturday. Officials estimate over 300,000 people will attend the 1989 Mardi Gras festivities.

Downtown fire in Jacksonville takes toll on family's business

By JOHN QUINN
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — John B. White watched as firefighters continued to send steady streams of water onto what had been the cornerstone of the family's business.

White was pondering his flagship department store's future after it was destroyed by fire Saturday along with four other businesses in a section of downtown Jacksonville.

"After 54 years (in business), I shouldn't be expected to know what to do right away," White said Sunday. "We've never been burned down before."

White's father, John Jr., opened the store in 1951 and eventually developed a 26-store retail chain throughout East Texas. Locations include Tyler, Nacogdoches, Wills Point and New Boston.

The elder White, 88, brought his family to Jacksonville in 1930. His son said he had not told him about the fire yet. "He's bedridden and I just haven't been able to go over and tell him yet."

White estimated the losses of the store and its contents at $250,000 to $300,000. The store occupied half of what was the first commercial brick building erected in Jacksonville about 63 years ago.

"We have so many options now.

We'll have to get with the other businesses and decide what to do," White said.

The blaze started and spread quickly through the building's second floor and into the stores below and the one next door, officials said.

One firefighter suffered a back injury and the owner of a jewelry store ruined in the building complained of chest pains when she saw the fire and was hospitalized.

An investigation into the cause of the blaze was expected to begin Monday, after hot spots in the brick, wood and metal ruin can be cleared.

"There's so much rubble, we'll have to get each hot spot one at a time," said Capt. Joel Moore of the Jacksonville Fire Department.

"With the damage as extensive as it is, it will be difficult to determine the origin and cause of the fire."

Four other retailers, including a jewelry store and two clothing stores within the building and a smoke shop next door, also were destroyed. Estimates of losses suffered by the other businesses were not immediately available. About 50 people worked in the stores.

An acetylene tank, used in the jewelry store, exploded and sent a fireball 25 feet into the air during the blaze, which was reported shortly before 10 p.m., Moore said. The roof, two walls and aluminum front later collapsed.

An adjacent bakery suffered water damage, but a nearby empty building, which used to house a Beall's department store, was undamaged.

Jacksonville firefighter Ted Hunt injured his back while shifting his weight on a ladder to adjust the spray from a one-man hose, Moore said. Hunt was in stable condition, undergoing tests at Nan Travis Memorial Hospital in Jacksonville on Sunday, officials said.

Darlene Lowell Hudson, owner of Lowell's Jewelry, complained of chest pains after arriving on the scene. She was in the hospital's intensive care unit Sunday in stable condition, a nursing supervisor said.

About 50 spectators watched the clean-up effort Sunday afternoon, but they were blocked from getting too close to the building by a cordoned area.

The fire is believed to be the largest in Jacksonville, a town of 13,000 located 30 miles south of Tyler, since one that involved five downtown buildings about 10 years ago, according to officials.

The blaze was contained within about 45 minutes, but firefighters from Jacksonville, Tyler, Frankston, Rusk, Bullard, Troup and some Palestine reserve firefighters continued to dump water on the structure well into the morning hours.

Second gang rape defendant convicted

SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP) — A man was sentenced to 30 years in prison early Saturday after being convicted of aggravated kidnapping in the abduction and gang rape of a woman who was forced to testify under threat of jail.

Felipe Chew, 29, was the second to be tried and convicted out of 10 men indicted after the 19-year-old woman reported being abducted the night of March 26 and later raped by as many as 20 men. The first was sentenced to 20 years.

District Attorney Heriberto Silva asked the jury to deny probation, saying: "Would you let your daughter go out with him knowing that? Would you let your sister? Would you invite him over to your house tomorrow?"

Chew showed little reaction when the guilty verdict was read shortly before midnight Friday, after 5 1/2 hours of deliberation, nor when the jury returned with the 30-year prison sentence and $6,000 fine about 3 a.m. Saturday.

Court-appointed defense attorney Jaime Garza called the punishment excessive, and said he expects the verdict to prompt plea bargains from the remaining eight defendants, all of whom have pleaded innocent to charges ranging from sexual assault to kidnapping to aggravated kidnapping.

"This is a judgment that for me is hard to digest," Garza told the jurors while asking them to grant probation. "I am far more than an advocate. I firmly believe in his innocence."

He said the victim voluntarily got into Chew's car with Chew and three other men on March 26, and offered herself to multiple sex partners at a ranch where men had gathered for an illegal cockfight. Garza said she fabricated the kidnapping and rape story out of fear of her jealous husband.

"She got herself into a situation that she could not explain to her husband, a very rough situation," Garza said. "She took on a lot of men."

The woman testified that Chew forced her to perform oral sex, helped restrain her and held a light on her while other men raped her on the hood of a car, and that he caught her when she tried to escape.

Two witnesses — including a 12-year-old boy — said they saw Chew holding her down. One man said he saw Chew sexually violate her with a beer bottle.

The woman had asked not to testify Tuesday, saying publicity from the case disrupted her personal life, but she took the stand after the judge threatened to jail her for contempt of court. On Wednesday, she was taken from the courthouse to a hospital, but returned to testify Thursday.

Since the attack, the woman has moved away from this city of about 5,200, located in brush country about 85 miles from the Mexican border, and has been separated from her husband.

One of charges against North stems from inquiry by Texan

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Long before Oliver North's name was synonymous with the Iran-contra scandal, Texas congressman Ron Coleman had misgivings about what the lieutenant colonel was cooking up in the White House basement.

The serious lawmaker from El Paso was ridiculed for his concerns, criticized in direct mail-outs across his district for his "anti-administration" positions, and targeted for defeat by national Republicans in his 1986 reelection.

But now, on the eve of North's criminal trial on 12 charges in connection with the Iran-contra affair, Coleman feels vindicated.

One of the counts against the former National Security Council aide accuses North of obstruction of Congress, a charge that stems from Coleman's queries more than two years ago.

Coleman's involvement in the case began when he read published reports suggesting North was allegedly masterminding a behind-the-scenes operation to secretly help the Nicaraguan rebels during a congressional ban on military aid to the contras.

"My government was accused of doing illegal things. It's my government. If they are doing things that are wrong, they ought to answer them and come clean with the American people," Coleman said last week.

In June 1986, the Democratic lawmaker introduced what is known as a "resolution of inquiry" in the House. He demanded White House documents pertaining to allegations that North set up a "secret network of intermediaries" to provide covert assistance to the contras, including military advice and tactics, in apparent violation of the law.

Coleman wanted, he said at the time, "to crack the wall of silence" erected by the White House.

"Did this allegedly secret White House operation deliberately break the law? If the administration continues its policy of silence, we'll have to get the answer ourselves," Coleman vowed.

"I didn't do it lightly," he said. "I thought it was right and correct for the White House to answer charges being placed in newspaper articles consistently in 1986 that the United States was in violation of its own laws. It is bad for us, for a nation to be charged with that."

At a news conference to announce his resolution of inquiry, a reporter from a major newspaper scoffed, crumpled up the press release, and told Coleman there was nothing to his concerns, an aide remembers.

Within weeks of filing the inquiry resolution, Coleman noticed a dramatic increase in pro-contra activity in his far West Texas district, including direct mailouts criticizing his anti-administration position on military aid to the contras.

An aide said there were strong indicators North had worked on pro-Contra television ads aimed at Coleman and other congressional critics of the administration's Central American policies.

At the same time, the Republican National Committee poured thousands of dollars in contributions into the campaign warchest of Coleman's general election opponent, Roy Gillia. And top leaders of Miami-based contra groups, including Alfonso Robelo and Arturo Cruz, visited El Paso before the November 1986 election, which Coleman won handily.

In the meantime, members of the House, acting on Coleman's inquiry, met with North at the White House, where he denied the allegations. North is now charged with making false and misleading statements in connection with that meeting.

Coleman said later that if the White House had answered the questions, he and other congressmen might have "bumped right into" North's alleged scheme to divert profits from Iran arms sales to the contras.

But the people at the White House, Coleman said, "didn't tell us the truth."

Although theft and conspiracy charges have been dismissed against North, Coleman says he's convinced that "very profound charges remain." He says they get to the heart of whether the three branches of government are co-equal "or can people in the basement of the White House disregard laws passed by the Congress of the United States for what they personally believe is in the national interest."

Clements address 'no swan song'

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, scheduled to deliver his final State of the State address to lawmakers on Tuesday, will offer a blueprint for the future rather than any sort of swan song, aides say.

"He's a charge-ahead individual. He moves forward, always looking to meet the next challenge. The speech will reflect the energy and enthusiasm he has," said Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary.

Clements, 71, is in the last half of what he says will be his last term.

First elected in 1978, Clements was ousted in 1982 by Democrat Mark White. Clements then defeated White in 1986 and moved back into the Governor's Mansion two years ago.

His address, scheduled for a joint House-Senate session at 10 a.m. Tuesday, is "going to reflect the governor's vision of Texas. It's very upbeat, very optimistic."

Bashur told The Associated Press.

"He's going to talk in terms of economic development, education, reforms in criminal justice and about budgetary concerns," Bashur said.

"The speech recognizes that we've been through some difficult times, that the state is still in a period of historic transition. We're making progress, we're making headway, but this is a period in the history of the state in which the decisions made now will reflect on the people of Texas well into the 21st century."

Bashur said the governor likely would call attention to the economic transition Texas is undergoing as well as the transition taking place in its government.

"There's the economic transition (away from a dependence on oil and gas) and at the same time many of the institutions are undergoing challenge and change — prisons, public education, higher education. That needs to be addressed by the Legislature," Bashur said.

One thing the governor doesn't plan to do with his address is lay out a budget of his own, his staff said.

Clements late last month said he was adopting the Legislative Budget Board's spending plan as a "starting point for discussion" rather than preparing a separate executive budget for lawmakers.

Lawmakers today start the fourth week of their 140-day session that began Jan. 10.

Clements has proposed building nearly 11,000 new prison beds and paying for the construction with $343 million in state bonds.

Some lawmakers have criticized that idea, saying it violates the state's pay-as-you-go philosophy. A special House subcommittee, which has been looking at the problem and alternatives to prison construction, is scheduled to issue its report.

Can Bush frighten the gremlins away?

Congressional tax-hikers long have used the federal budget deficit as an excuse for even greater raids on your pocketbook. But President Reagan's fiscal year 1990 budget, submitted before he left office, takes the wind out of their sails. He proposes a budget that trims the deficit from $161.5 billion in 1989 to $92.5 billion in 1990 — without a tax increase. President-elect George Bush says he will make some modifications, and Congress doesn't like the proposed cuts in some of its favorite programs, so it's questionable how long Reagan's proposal will stay afloat. Nevertheless, it's a good starting point. Its basic parameters — a maximum of $1.152 trillion in spending and a maximum $92.5 billion deficit — should be left intact. If Bush can push Congress into reducing one or both figures, that would be great. But the maximum amounts should be kept. And no new taxes should be imposed, period.

The heart of Reagan's proposal is the elimination of 82 wasteful government programs. He wants to cut farm spending by $9.7 billion. Reagan also wants to cut growth in Medicare and Medicaid by $5 billion.

Unfortunately, Reagan also proposes increased spending on several programs. The Reagan budget earmarks $16 billion in 1990 and $9 billion in 1991 for bailing out insolvent savings and loans (it estimates that the total cost of all such bailouts will be $80 billion between 1988 and 1994). There's a better way to help S&Ls than blowing that much taxpayers' money. Bush should drop this proposal and instead recommend a private option, such as allowing large, solvent banks to buy up the insolvent ones. This would involve further decontrol of the nation's banking systems.

The budget makes one crucial assumption: The nation's economy will grow by 3.5 percent in 1989 and 3.4 percent in 1990. This is nearly the rate at which the economy has grown in the past several years, and there's no reason why it can't continue. That is, unless Congress hoodwinks Bush into a tax increase, a spending binge or a protectionist jihad against our foreign trading partners; or unless the Federal Reserve tightens credit too much. Indeed, economic growth could exceed 3.4 percent if Bush's programs win the confidence of the business community.

In other words, everything now depends on Bush hammering down the lid of big government, keeping the gremlins from crawling out and devouring economic growth. Can he do it? We'll know in a few months.

"Yeh, I'm Al, the kinder, gentler loan shark. Whaddya want, pal?"

But the judges have changed

WASHINGTON — Sixteen years have passed since the Supreme Court's controversial decision in Roe v. Wade. That was the decision that struck down the abortion laws of 40 states and wrote into the Constitution a brand-new interpretation of a pregnant woman's "liberty."

Now the bells are tolling. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh has predicted that the decision will be overruled. President Bush has called for an end to a right of abortion.

The means toward that end are at hand. Earlier this month the court agreed to hear argument in William L. Webster v. Reproductive Health Services.

Webster is attorney general of Missouri. He is defending a state law that lays certain requirements on physicians before they may perform an abortion; the act prohibits the use of state funds for "encouraging or counselling a woman to have an abortion not necessary to save her life," and it inhibits abortions in other ways.

Under the act, which was to have become effective in 1986, a physician must explain the risks of abortion to his patient. Another section requires that after the first 16 weeks, all abortions must be performed in hospitals rather than in outpatient clinics. The record contains testimony that a hospital abortion costs $2,500, an outpatient abortion between $350 and $650.

Before the law could become operative, a group of physicians and nurses sued for summary judgment declaring it unconstitutional under the rule of Roe v. Wade.

A U.S. District Court agreed: The law amounted to an impermissible intrusion into the privacy of the doctor-patient relationship. It trampled upon rights of free speech. The 8th Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed, and the state appealed. The U.S. solicitor general, siding with Missouri, has filed a brief saying that if the high court is prepared to reconsider Roe, "this case presents an appropriate opportunity to do so."

In its essentials, the Missouri law scarcely can be distinguished from a similar statute in Pennsylvania — a statute the court nullified three years ago. But since the Pennsylvania case was decided, the composition of the court has changed. What was unconstitutional in June of 1986 may not be unconstitutional in June of 1989.

As court observers many have remarked, more in honesty than in cynicism, ours is in face a government of men, not laws. Roe was decided by a vote of 7-2, with Justices Rehnquist and White dissenting from the opinion written by Justice Blackmun. Of the seven who formed the majority in 1973, only three remain.

Since then the seats that were occupied by Burger, Douglas, Stewart and Powell have gone to Justices Stevens, O'Connor, Scalia and Kennedy. The Constitution hasn't changed, but the judges have changed.

White and Rehnquist have vehemently opposed Roe from the very beginning. White termed the court's 1973 decision "an exercise in raw judicial power." Rehnquist consistently has regarded Roe not as jurisprudence but as legislation.

A few days ago The Washington Post dug out some confidential memoranda from the papers of the late Justice Douglas. Blackmun himself, it now transpires, regarded his own opinion as "arbitrary," and Justices Stewart feared it amounted to "legislation."

It is a fair presumption that Rehnquist and White have not changed their minds. Justice O'Connor dissented in the Akron abortion case of 1983 and again in the Pennsylvania case of 1986. Her objections in the latter case went more to procedure than to the merits, but hers is regarded as a third vote to overrule.

If newcomers Scalia and Kennedy should be persuaded that Roe was a terrible piece of constitutional law, which it was, there goes Roe v. Wade, 5-4.

My guess is that in deciding the Missouri case, a majority will be mustered that will pay some measure of deference to the aging Justice Blackmun. Instead of junking Roe completely, a way will be found to preserve a respectable shell.

The states will be accorded power to discourage abortion and to erect formidable obstacles in its path, but at least in the earliest stages of pregnancy, abortion may not be prohibited altogether.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop took a dismal view of the prospects. If Roe were overruled and control returned to the states, "it will open Pandora's box, because we'll have 50 problems instead of one."

To those of us who believe in federalism, that prospect is not appalling at all. The states are perfectly capable of responding to the wishes of their citizens. Their view of "liberty" is at least as informed as Justice Blackmun's.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Jan. 30, the 30th day of 1989. There are 335 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Jan. 30, 1948, Indian political and spiritual leader Mahatma Gandhi, who had led his country to independence from British rule through his philosophy of non-violent confrontation, was murdered by a Hindu extremist. Before dying, Gandhi blessed his assassin.

On this date:
In 1649, England's King Charles I was beheaded.

In 1798, a brawl broke out in the House of Representatives in Philadelphia, as Matthew Lyon of Vermont spat in the face of Roger Griswold of Connecticut.

In 1882, the 32nd President of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was born in Hyde Park, N.Y.

In 1933, the first episode of the Lone Ranger radio program was broadcast on station WXYZ in Detroit.

In 1962, two members of the "Flying Wallendas" high-wire act were killed when their seven-person pyramid collapsed during a performance in Detroit.

Misinformation deafens public

In newshandling we are learning to be wary of so-called "consumer protection groups" that purport to warn us consumers against potential hazards to our health or well-being.

There are some organizations that promote themselves with warnings based on the most flimsy evidence. Some, indeed, create public anxiety over absolutely nothing.

Feb. 9, last year, a consumer group called on the Food and Drug Administration to stop the use of silicone gel breast implants.

Some 130,000 American women each year have these implants for restorative or cosmetic reasons. They were understandably alarmed.

The FDA summoned a panel of experts to report on the issue — and discovered no health threat.

The American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons and the American Society for Aesthetic Plastic Surgery concur that there is no more cancer among women who've had the implants than in women without implants.

There may be less. A pioneer in the field, Dr. William Taylor of the American Board of Plastic Surgery, cites literature affirming a "negative correlation," fewer breast cancers associated with implants, if only because it is detected at an earlier age.

In the media we are learning which organizations and which doctors are likely to be "false alarmists," unworthy of being quoted on matters medical. But there are always new ones cropping up.

Here are the facts:
Two million American women have received breast implants with a satisfaction rate of 97 percent.

Very few services of products can boast that success rate.

The worst part of reports that unnecessarily cause agitation, even panic, is that they tend to discredit responsible medical sources. Too much misinformation and we deafen the American public to valid warnings.

And there has been too much. There have been irresponsible public indictments of cyclamates, peanut butter, cranberries, saccharin — and the list goes on and on.

And parasitic attorneys are using some of these declarations, however erroneous, as justification for damage suits.

Breast implants are not without risk; no surgical procedure is. But the FDA, having evaluated testimony and evidence from surgeons, researchers, industry and consumer groups and patients has concluded that current data do not warrant removal of the product from the market.

The FDA will conduct a continuing re-evaluation of any new data, a procedure much more considerate of your health than the fear-mongering of the professional alarmists.

Let's keep more heat on Congressmen

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Under the Constitution, all federal expenditures must be approved by Congress, and usually Congress enjoys exercising this mighty prerogative. Spending other people's money, after all, is the average politician's favorite sport.

Only in rare cases — such as the current proposal to raise the salaries of senators and representatives to $150,000 — do our legislators show much fear of the spending process.

So terrified are the members of Congress to be seen voting to raise their own pay that an elaborate stratagem has been worked out and enacted into law to obscure the process. First, Congress authorized the creation of an independent commission to recommend whether there ought to be raises in the salaries of the president and vice president, the members of the federal judiciary, and the Congress.

Once this commission makes its recommendations, these can be approved, modified, or rejected by the president. If he approves any raises, these go into effect automatically — unless one house of Congress or the other votes, within a specified time, to disapprove them.

The result (and it is happening under your nose right now) is that the members of Congress get fat raises, yet there is no point at which Congress can be seen voting for them.

The other great power reserved to Congress by the Constitution — the power to impose taxes — is understandably viewed less enthusiastically by the members. Nobody likes to be seen voting for new or increased taxes.

In this regard, Nirvana was achieved by the Congresses of the 1970s, when inflation was rising year by year. Since tax rates were progressively higher on higher incomes, all Congress had to do was keep the inflation roaring. Peoples' real incomes might remain the same, or even fall, but their nominal incomes rose — and, in the process, lifted them into higher tax brackets, where they could be plucked more voraciously. Yet Congress was never seen voting to raise taxes.

Now, as the 101st Congress convenes and casts about for ways to raise new taxes, Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York has come forward with an ingenious proposal that would have much the same effect as the dodge described above — i.e., it would raise taxes without Congress ever being seen to vote for them.

According to Cuomo, the current requirements for year-by-year debt reductions under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act are simply unrealistic: Faced with the prospect of such savage automatic across-the-board cuts in defense and domestic expenditures, Congress and the administration have already fiddled with the budget targets, adopted unrealistically optimistic scenarios about income, etc.

So, Cuomo proposes modifying the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act. If Congress and the president fail to agree on a budget that meets the Act's requirements for deficit reduction, half of the amount needed to reach the target would still come, in equal shares, from automatic cuts in defense and domestic programs; but the other half would come from (you guessed it) new taxes. Once again, the new taxes would simply appear automatically, as if out of the blue. Congress would never be seen to pass them.

Frankly, I question the constitutionality of all such efforts by Congress to duck its constitutional obligations. But even if the Constitution permits them, they are testimony to a most unbecoming cowardice on the part of Congress.

And incidentally, once Congress discovered that new taxes would be imposed automatically any time it failed to meet the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings targets for deficit reduction, how often do you think Congress's budgets would meet those targets? You can bet that we would have seen the last of any serious effort to reduce the cost of government. On the contrary, an unconscionable budget deficit would be an absolute precondition of an automatic tax increase.

No, let's keep Congress' feet to the fire. If it doesn't meet the deficit-reduction targets, let Gramm-Rudman-Hollings rip.

Psychologists say stress can lead some youths to satanism

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

One area psychologist admits to having seen around two dozens cases of young people involved in satanic activity in the last several months. However, another said he has not seen any he could prove were satanically linked.

For counselors who work with troubled youth, satanism is a new facet to an already complicated endeavor.

"It's usually not presented as a satanic problem," said an area psychologist. "It's usually seen as a drug problem or a behavior problem more than it is devil worship."

Like the youth who are involved in satanism, the counselors who work with them in therapy are insistent their names not be printed.

One said, "If I talk to you, they will quit talking to me. I can't risk that."

A therapist who was willing to discuss teen-agers and demonic cults admitted most area psychologists had received little or no training on dealing with satanism.

"But I would be more concerned with the stress-forces that caused them to get into it than I would the actual behavior. My gut tells me that kids react to stress the best way they know how. They grow long hair and listen to their music and get into satanic stuff. I don't know if it's just stress or really demonic reactions," he said.

Lou Sloat, director of the Texas

Ritualistic Information Network and a former federal agent who dealt with demonic cult activities, said that while he is no psychologist, he does know that satanism is a real threat.

After hearing about alleged satanic activities in the Pampa area, he said, "What you seem to have is a very typical scenario of satanic activity. The girl who masturbated with the bone is not unusual. (Older devil worshippers) use children in sexual ceremonies. It is demeaning, and they can later threaten them with it."

The local counselor offers another explanation.

"She sounds like she could have come out of a sexual abuse situation. Statistics show that one in six girls will be sexually molested. That sets them up to be vulnerable," he said.

He believes that youths who join or even say they have joined satanic cults have other problems which need to be dealt with.

"Kids with good ego strength and accomplishments are less likely to get involved," he said.

There is also the possibility that the young people interviewed have never even participated in satanic rituals, he pointed out.

"Religious delusions are pretty common among the psychotic. If they are delusional, they will probably end up being locked up," he said.

Sloat said he is aware of individuals and groups that enjoy sensationalizing real and imagined demonic exploits, but that police, parents and counselors should still be concerned.

"Unless we find facts to back it up, we can't say it is the occult. There are the dabblers who just mess around with it. But there is also a small group that graduates up to more intricate groups," Sloat said.

He hypothesized that there were adults in the community who were leading young satanists, due to some of the rather intricate information they provided when being interviewed.

"Kids don't know about the Illuminati (a shadowy group of demons who reportedly lead nationwide networks of occultists) and things like that without being told by somebody who knows," Sloat emphasized.

He said several of the young satanists interviewed by The Pampa News seemed to have incorporated aspects of other religious cults such as Children of God and Moonies into their theology.

"Whatever it is they are involved in," the counselor said, "if they begin to be a threat to themselves or others, parents need to be concerned. Look for a deterioration in grades, poor appearance, the presence of drugs, a change in friends, that kind of thing."

Sloat added that parents needed to watch out for books on the occult in a child's possession, as well as any apparently cult-related paraphernalia.

"You can't go on one thing. Look for a pattern to develop when they get involved," Sloat said.

Satanists

up a grave to retrieve bones.

A trip to the cemetery, on private land, revealed that a grave at the site had recently been disturbed. However, there was no proof that it was done in connection with a demonic ritual, other than the youth's word.

"We met around there 'cause there are demons that live in the hills around there. We call them to bring us power," Billy said.

Three of the youths said they were "real" Satan worshippers, and not "publicity hounds" like Anton LaVey.

LaVey is the founder of the Satanic Church of America and author of the Satanic Bible.

The youths contradicted each other on a number of theological points regarding their belief system and satanic practices, indicating they may come from different covens.

"I have drank the blood from a dog before. I did it as part of the thing. You do it for Satan and yourself and for power. See, God is dead, or at least he's losing. Satan is winning. Look around. Where is God? When you look at this world, do you see God? When Satan takes control, you want to be on his side, instead of one of the ones who is punished," Kerry said.

He quoted Revelation 20:7-8 almost verbatim, "When the thousand years are over, Satan will get loose and will go out to the whole world and there will be this big battle. There will be more of us than there is sand."

When asked about the rest of Revelation, in which the Apostle John prophesizes about Satan's final destruction, he answered, "The Bible is wrong."

The only thing the six youths seemed to totally agree on during their interviews were (1) a distaste for all authority figures and (2) associating themselves with the group of students most often referred to as "freaks."

Billy said he was not afraid of Satan because he was "a follower." He accused other people, including a reporter, of being cowards because they did not participate in devil worship.

"Devil worship is real. It is right here. Most of the kids are just fooling around. But not all of them. Some of them get scared and get out. But not the real followers," Kerry said.

Several area youths apparently have been frightened into joining in cult-type activities.

"There are assassins that go around. I think they are from the Temple of SET (a large, highly organized satanic group). They go around the country and see if you are following the rules. You want to work up to join the next group. People are watching you to see if you can move up," one youth said.

All of the youths readily claimed to enjoy heavy metal music and said it inspired their satanic feelings.

"I know it (satanism) is real. I was going to kill a friend because of Satan. It was stuck in my head he needed to die. I couldn't find him, though. The next day I threw the gun away."

"A friend who was into witchcraft knew what I was going to do. She said it was OK. She was the one who got the spell books for me," said Julie.

They all said they had been witness to animal sacrifices, including, in one case, the stripping away of a dog's skin and cutting off its genitals while it was still alive.

"It's hard to explain why we do it. When you get into it, you have no emotions left. Christians don't believe in sacrifice, because Jesus was the sacrifice. But people who do this still have to please Satan. See, I've talked to the devil before," one young satanist said.

However, most of the self-professed satanists denied they had actually participated in animal sacrifices. Most also denied that they would ever participate in human torture or sacrifice, though they did admit some of their friends might.

A youth who said he was once involved in satanism estimated that local covens could turn to human sacrifices "within a year. The best sacrifices are newborn baby girls."

Two of the youths, as well as the teen-ager who said he was no longer involved, said they were aware of violence committed because of satanism in the area. All of them said they could not be specific because they had taken oaths of secrecy.

Julie said after most of the satanic rituals, an orgy would follow.

"They do have orgies in the name of Satan. After a sacrifice, they smear the blood over each other and have an orgy. I've had sex with some of them before, but it wasn't satanic sex," she said.

Asked how she could be sure, she said, "They didn't smear blood on me. I've had sex with several guys at a time before. It's just sex. It really doesn't mean anything. It was fun until this guy got rough and started beating my head into the floor. The other guys thought it was funny." One of the youths, when asked if he really believed the stories of demons and supernatural occurrences he was telling, became highly irrational and very angry.

A satanic cult member claims his group dug up bones from an old cemetery on an area ranch.

"You're just like my g----- parents! If you didn't want to hear this, why the ---- did you ask?" he screamed.

Two of the young people insisted they had had experiences where they had seen actual demons. "I had this book, a book of worship from ancient Samaria. I found a spell to summon a Watcher. I sat there and watched after I did the spell. Nothing happened. Then I said, 'Where are you?'"

The teen-ager began to shake as he retold how a demonic force allegedly opened and closed his bedroom door and sat on his bed.

"I got scared and wet my pants. I swear I really saw it. You could tell where it was sitting on the bed. I told it to leave and it did and then I burned the book," the youth said.

He said he tells the story to people to let them know demons really exist.

None of the teen-agers had clear ideas of what they wanted to do when they became adults. One said he hoped "to become a minister and follow the occult."

The six each expressed different ways in which they became involved in devil worship. All of them said it was ultimately because of friends who were already involved. Two of the youths said they knew of adults who recruited local "freaks" into covens, but they refused to be specific.

"If I tell what I know, they will know I told you," Kerry said. "They know everything because they have magic that tells them."

"I got into it by playing with Ouija boards and calling spirits. It was a game, and I didn't think it was real. When Satan started talking to me, I knew it was. Sometimes I've done stuff that I don't understand or remember. I once carved a pentagram on my arm. I didn't remember doing it until later. I woke up and saw it there," Julie said.

The youths also admitted they each had used drugs in association with their demonic practices. However, all of them denied they were dependent on drugs or that illicit chemicals were their motivation to participate in local covens.

Castro said to have asked Khrushchev to launch missiles

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — At the height of the Cuban missile crisis, Fidel Castro was convinced a U.S. invasion was imminent and urgently asked Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev to launch an immediate nuclear strike against the United States, a key Soviet source reportedly told some American colleagues.

The Cuban leader was said to have sent his message to Khrushchev after spending the night of Oct. 26, 1962 in the bomb shelter of the Soviet embassy in Havana, so convinced was he that war was about to break out.

Castro supposedly told Khrushchev the invasion would come within 48 hours.

The account from the Soviet source was relayed by Pierre Salinger, who was President Kennedy's press secretary at the time of the 1962 crisis. It came from a weekend meeting in Moscow of U.S., Soviet and Cuban participants and scholars who have studied the world's brush with nuclear war 26 years ago.

Salinger would not identify the Soviet official who was said to have imparted the information in a private conversation, and the account was later denied by at least two Soviets who took part in the conference.

Among the revelations for Americans attending the session was a Soviet general's disclosure that 20 missiles and warheads — which he said constituted one-third of his country's nuclear arsenal at the time — were on Cuba at the time. However, he and another Soviet official said the warheads had not been mounted on missile launchers and were not ready for firing.

An American source said, however, that he and other former U.S. officials learned for the first time at the conference that the warheads not only were on the island but could have been mounted and fired within hours. The source asked not to be identified.

The New York Times today quoted unnamed Americans as saying the report about Castro requesting the nuclear strike originated with Sergei Khrushchev, son of the former Soviet premier. It said Sergei Khrushchev subsequently denied making the comment.

The report also was denied by Aleksandr I. Alekseyev, Soviet ambassador to Cuba in 1962.

Salinger, in a telephone interview with The Associated Press and on ABC News, for which he is a special correspondent, said the conference that brought together participants from all three sides for the first time showed the world was "closer to nuclear war than we believed at that time."

Other participants said the discussions also disclosed the Soviet nuclear arsenal was smaller than American intelligence believed at the time and that there were four times more Soviet troops in Cuba than the Kennedy administration thought.

A Cuban official disclosed that 270,000 Soviet and Cuban troops had been ready to go to war with the United States and that 100,000 casualties were expected.

True Confessions Of A Beauty Cream Junkie!

Please don't tell my husband, but I used to be one of those people who thought you had to pay $40.00 or more, to get a first quality face cream - you know, one that moisturizes your skin, fights wrinkles and leaves your face smooth and younger looking. I'm embarrassed to admit it now, but I have been taken in on more than one occasion by those expensive cosmetics ads - the kind with the glamorous picture of a beautiful actress making amazing claims about a skin care product. I even went so far one day as to submit to "cosmetic counter brainwashing" by an attractive young saleslady at my local department store. I walked out of there 30 minutes later - a glazed look in my eye and $170.00 worth of cosmetics under my arm!

Fortunately, for both my marriage and my overstretched credit cards, a friend of mine came to my rescue before it was too late. She gave me a jar of Devio Moisturizer Cream to try. I was astonished. After just a few days of using Devio, my skin felt softer and smoother - wrinkles began to actually flatten out! My skin looked younger than ever before. I loved Devio! My friend explained that Devio Cream is formulated from the finest luxury ingredients - including imported Brazilian Surma, a jungle herb that "plumps up" sagging skin cells thus causing wrinkles to disappear. In addition it is all natural, even its subtle, cleansing fragrance comes from natural herbs so Devio is virtually allergy-free.

O.K., I said to her, how much is this miracle going to cost me? $50.00? $60.00? Well, I nearly collapsed when she told me that I could order a full 2 months supply of Devio Moisturizer for just $14.95! Or a 4 months supply for $24.95! How can they do this, I wondered. But it all made sense when my friend explained that Devio is sold directly by mail order only. They have no high priced ads, no models, actresses, salespeople or stores to pay for. They put all their money into their products' wonderful, high quality ingredients. Period. And as if that weren't enough, everything they sell is offered with a 100% money back guarantee! Just return any unused product for a full refund of purchase price. Devio is so confident that they'll even let you post-date a check for a full thirty days from the date you send your order to them! And if you order the 4 months supply they'll send you a free jar of their fabulous Almond Facial Scrub (a $15.00 value) - is this a great offer, or what?

See for yourself. Order your Devio today! Send your check or money order (plus $3.00 for shipping and handling, please) to Devio, 4642 E. Chapman Ave., Suite 303-D, Orange, CA 92669. VISA, MasterCard and American Express O.K. - send card number, exp. date and signature.

Just one more thing... where do you think I should go shopping with all the money I saved buying Devio?

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason... you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain of awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

American Vietnam veterans meet with former war enemies

EDITOR'S NOTE — George Esper spent 10 years covering the Vietnam war for The Associated Press and has just completed his second reporting visit to the country since the war ended in 1975.

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

TAY NINH, Vietnam (AP) — Former Viet Cong fighters carried legless comrades on their backs and led the blind to welcome American enemies who returned in peace long after the terrible war.

They were faceless to each other on the battlefield, each a possible statistic on the other's casualty report. Now they met, at the Tay Ninh Rehabilitation Center, and spoke of pain and sorrow.

The Americans looked at the Viet Cong guerrillas they had feared and hated, who had killed their buddies. They saw men and women, in or near middle age, learning to live without lost arms, legs, hands or eyes.

"I wanted to shake people's hands and there weren't hands to shake," said Kevin Bowen of Boston.

"Vietnam so deeply affected the conscience of America," said William R. Kimball of South Lake Tahoe, Calif., founder of Vets With a Mission, which brings groups of veterans back to Vietnam.

"It's a place that I don't think you could ever really leave behind," he said. "It was inevitable that America come back, and you're seeing the first trickle of a flood that's going to take place in the next few years."

Four years ago, it was rare to see an American in Vietnam. Now increasing numbers of veterans, relief workers, physicians and surgeons return on goodwill missions.

They build health clinics, perform plastic surgery on disfigured children, deliver medical supplies and Bibles, walk old battlefields to call attention to unexploded shells and mines that remain deadly 14 years after the war ended.

"It took the Vietnam veterans themselves to build the memorial" in Washington, D.C., and "recognize the terrible loss that occurred," said Ralph Timperi, now assistant public health commissioner of Massachusetts.

"It's Vietnam veterans who are taking the leadership to get our country to recognize the terrible loss the Vietnamese have suffered," he said.

Bowen and Timperi represented the Joiner Foundation of the University of Massachusetts, which aids hospitals and the disabled in Vietnam. They met with disabled veterans in Hanoi and Tay Ninh Province.

"By returning and working with the people as friends rather than enemies, we can do the kind of work we thought we were doing to begin with," Timperi said. "We thought we were doing something good when we were in the war. It turned out we weren't. By returning and doing what in our idealistic framework we see as what Americans ought to be doing, it helps us find ourselves again."

A new group of Americans arrives almost every week. Some just come for peace of mind, to put their war to rest.

Five former U.S. Marines revisited bases around which their battalion, the 11th Marines, planted 100,000 mines. They did not remove the mines and unexploded shells that still kill and maim civilians, but will report their findings to the Vietnamese and U.S. governments in hopes of action.

The Marines also unfurled the Stars and Stripes and honored their dead in brief ceremonies at two former U.S. bases.

Nine born-again Christians delivered 5,000 Bibles to the Protestant Church of Vietnam on behalf of Kimball's Vets With a Mission and met some of their former enemies at a reconciliation dinner.

"You're not really going to find a true healing and a true reconciliation until we're able to face our former foe and to shake hands and to find a mutual understanding," Kimball said. "I think that is what is taking place."

Vets With a Mission hopes on future visit to build a rehabilitation ward and repair a therapy pool in an orphanage for polio victims, and to build a Christian day care center.

"It seemed like every corner I turned I bumped into an American," said Bill Johnson of Manchester, Conn., one of the Marine engineers. "I'm really amazed at how many groups are here."

Vietnam has opened its doors to Americans more than at any time since the war. It hopes the United States will extend diplomatic recognition, bringing desperately needed aid and the end of an economically disastrous trade embargo.

Vietnamese officials express optimism that ambassadors will be exchanged within two years. They say U.S. demands that Hanoi withdraw all its troops from Cambodia, which Vietnam has occupied for 10 years, will be met by next year.

Steinberg jury still out

NEW YORK (AP) — The jury deciding the fate of Joel Steinberg, accused of murdering his illegally adopted daughter, finished its seventh day of deliberations Sunday after asking for a clarification on a lesser charge.

Deliberations resumed about 11:15 a.m. after some jurors attended church services. The jury retired Sunday night without reaching a verdict and planned to reconvene Monday morning.

Steinberg, 47, is accused of fatally beating Lisa Steinberg, the 6-year-old girl he and his live-in companion, Hedda Nussbaum, had illegally obtained at birth.

Just after 5 p.m. Sunday, the jury sent out its second note asking for legal definitions relating to lesser charges. The jury asked for a clarification of the definition of "intent" and "serious physical injury," which are elements of the lesser charge of manslaughter.

The note also asked, "If there was no apparent intention to cause injury, but the acts resulted in serious physical injury nonetheless, would that be grounds to conclude intent as spelled out by law?"

State Supreme Court Justice Harold Rothwax instructed jurors several times not to consider manslaughter unless they unanimously acquitted Steinberg of the most serious charge, second-degree murder.

Steinberg, a disbarred lawyer, faces four charges: second-degree murder, first-degree manslaughter, second-degree manslaughter, and criminally negligent homicide.

A similar note from the jurors Saturday prompted one of Steinberg's lawyers to suggest the jurors had acquitted his client of murder and moved on to the second count.

"I can't say it's a strong indication — it does not mean they've acquitted him of murder two, but it's an indication," said Ira London.

Oliver North trial set to begin Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential aide Oliver L. North goes on trial this week on 12 felony charges that have survived months of legal maneuvering following his indictment in connection with the Iran-Contra affair.

Since his indictment last March, North's lawyers won dismissal of four of the original 16 counts — including the key charges arising from the diversion of U.S.-Iran arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

But the retired Marine lieutenant colonel still faces a host of other charges that carry a maximum possible sentence of 60 years imprisonment and fines totaling $3 million. His trial is set to begin Tuesday.

The dismissal earlier this month of charges that North conspired with former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and two arms dealers to finance the "secret war" in Nicaragua with arms-sale proceeds basically leaves allegations that he covered up his activities by lying.

The former National Security Council aide is charged with making false statements to congressional committees in 1985 that were investigating reports he and others were helping the rebels in violation of a ban on such assistance.

Three false-statement and obstruction charges allege that North prepared false responses to written queries from congressional committees.

The letters denying that North or other NSC staffers were improperly assisting the Contras were signed by Robert C. McFarlane, then national security adviser.

McFarlane pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges of withholding information from Congress and is expected to testify against North as a witness for Iran-Contra prosecutors.

North also is charged with obstructing an August 1986 inquiry by the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. He is accused of falsely denying, during a meeting with panel members at the White House, that he helped the Contras.

Four other obstruction and false statement charges stem from actions North allegedly took after the Iran-Contra affair became public in November 1986.

He is charged with obstructing the presidential inquiry ordered by President Reagan by making false statements to then-Attorney General Edwin Meese III and by destroying National Security Council documents while Justice Department investigators were conducting the probe.

The false statements included North's denial that the NSC staff was involved in the diversion of arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras, the indictment charges.

An obstruction of Congress charge alleges that North helped prepare a false chronology of the U.S.-Iran arms sales for an appearance by Poindexter before the House and Senate intelligence panels.

Prosecutors also hope to prove that North personally benefited from his involvement with the Iran-Contra affair.

North is charged with accepting the installation of a $13,000 security fence around his Great Falls, Va., home that was allegedly paid for by arms dealer Richard V. Secord, another co-defendant. The offense carries a two-year sentence.

One of the four charges dropped against North was an allegation that he prepared false documents to obstruct the grand jury's investigation of the fence. U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesel ruled that the charge was legally defective because the alleged obstruction occurred a month before the Iran-Contra grand jury was impaneled on Jan. 28, 1987.

He is also charged with converting to his personal use at least $4,300 of the $90,000 in travelers checks that Contra leader Adolfo Calero gave him to help defray costs of helping the rebels.

That offense carries a 10-year sentence and a $250,000 fine. Most of the other charges carry five-year sentences, including a charge that he conspired to use a tax-exempt foundation illegally to help raise money to arm the Contras.

Purpose of some antique serving pieces is baffling

Antiques

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Who would ever want a small tureen with holes in the bottom and sides? Soup would pour out, vegetables would drip. What could possibly have been the original use of this 18th-century dish?

If you go to a fine restaurant or formal dinner party today, you will see butter served in small cold squares. At home, it is more likely that the butter or spread is served as a bar or in a small plastic tub that is still cold from refrigeration. But homes of the 18th and 19th centuries had no refrigerators, so butter had to be kept cool in a variety of other ways.

An attractive oval butter cooler was made by some English porcelain works before 1800. The dish had a liner that was filled with ice water, which kept the butter firm. Other dishes had holes in the bottom that provided ventilation and helped cool the butter. The tub was kept on a tray to catch any dripping ice water or melting butter.

Problems of storage and service were very different in previous centuries. Many other unusual serving dishes were made that seem mysterious to us today.

Q. My grandfather clock says "Mauthe" or "Manthe" on the face. Does that help to identify it?

A. Frederick Mauthe was a merchant in the Black Forest region of Germany. He imported iron and brass wire, bells and brass.

When it became expensive in 1870 because of high duty charges, he opened a factory and began making his own clocks. By 1899, he was making his own clock cases.

Most of his clocks were sold in England. The factory closed in 1976.

Q. I have a three-quart pot, tray and matching goblet. It looks like a big kitchen teapot or a water pitcher. It is marked "Quadruple plate, Mermod, Jaccard and Co. St Louis Mo., hard White Metal, patented August 27, 1878."

What is hard white metal? How old is the pot?

A. Mermod and Jaccard was a jewelry company in St. Louis that started working in 1845. Your pot with a matching goblet is probably an ice water pitcher. Many were introduced and the designs were patented in the 1870s.

The hard white metal is an alloy similar to pewter.

Q. My daughter collects dolls and was given a doll made about 1970. It is 13 inches high with blond hair. If you twist the left arm, she smiles; lower it and her mouth changes and she pouts and cries. She can be fed water, sheds tears and wets.

Do you know the maker and the value?

A. Your daughter owns "Cheerful Tearful." The doll was made in 1966 by Mattel. They made several similar dolls that frowned and smiled.

Collectors do not pay much for dolls less than 25 years old; there are still a great many available.

Q. My old golf putter's head is marked "Hillerich & Bradsby Co., Louisville, Kentucky." There is a small emblem of a hand and golf club and the words "hand made." The club shaft is wooden with a cork grip. How old is it?

A. Hillerich & Bradsby are still making clubs with the HB logo. They started making golf clubs about 1915.

Most sports memorabilia collectors know the company for their famous Louisville Slugger baseball bats.

Q. Our family has passed down a small "frosted" glass vase about 6 1/2 inches high. They believed that it was Lalique. Last year I discovered it wasn't.

On the bottom are the words "Centennial 1876" with a perfectly shaped hand holding a torch like that held by the Statue of Liberty. Do you know about this piece?

A. There were many glass souvenirs made at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876. You own one.

The vase is actually a holder for wooden stick matches. It was known as "Liberty Torch" in the catalogue of the maker, Bryce Brothers of Pittsburgh. There were several versions in different colors.

The match holder sold well, so it was kept in production for a few years after the Centennial.

Gone with the wind?

Hollywood wanted the magnificence of the Louisiana antebellum home Nottaway, above, to play the role of Tara, Scarlett O'Hara's home, in Gone With The Wind, but its owners declined. Recently opened to the public, this largest of all antebellum homes in the South is a romantic highlight of "Glory on the River"—The Golden Age of Natchez to New Orleans, latest film masterwork from the celebrated Producer-Performers of Travel Theater, Howdee Meyers and Lucia Perrigo. Built in 1859, Nottaway crests the Mississippi at White Castle, La. and was spared shelling by a Union gunboat when one of the officers recalled the gala evening when he had been a guest for dining and dancing in the famed white ballroom. "Glory on the River" will be presented by Pampa Rotary Club at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 31 in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Straying boyfriend upsets women's friendship

DEAR ABBY: I am beside myself with guilt. On the last night of my visit to a childhood friend who now lives in another city, her live-in boyfriend woke me in the middle of the night, and I let him make love to me. As far as I can tell, my friend had no idea (he left her sleeping in their room). I don't know why I didn't stop him — especially since we used no protection and I could have even gotten pregnant! Maybe I was lonely or resented her having someone since I've been unlucky in love. I wouldn't consciously have planned this, yet I responded to him positively.

The next evening, when we were alone for a minute or two, I told him I felt guilty over what had happened. He seemed to feel the same, and told me that he liked me and he enjoyed it, but we should not repeat the occurrence.

I tried to act normal with my friend, but felt miserable inside. I've

Dear Abby

betrayed her trust and don't deserve her friendship. Additionally, I am aware that the man she loves and hopes to marry would cheat on her in such a low way — with her friend, in her house!

Should I tell her? What if he tells her later? What if they decide to marry — shouldn't she know the truth about this man? He played the field earlier in their relationship, but she believes he's true to her now. What if I'm pregnant?

Abby, I am ashamed to admit that I was flattered by his coming to me — but I am more ashamed of having betrayed a friend. I don't want to tell her to hurt her, but I don't want to lose her friendship if she finds out later. What should I do?

FEELING ROTTEN

DEAR FEELING ROTTEN: You can deal with the "what ifs" ("What if he tells her later?" and "What if I'm pregnant?") if and when they become realities. The imminent question at hand: Should you tell your friend that her live-in lover came to your bed in her home, and you let him make love to you?

Obviously you are considering telling her, but I urge you to examine your motives. If you were to tell her, she'd probably kick him out, and end her friendship with you. That would leave him free to come to you, which could be what you (unconsciously) want since you have no man in your life. You could rationalize telling her by saying, "If I were living with a cheating man, I would want to know."

As I see it, you're damned if you do, and she's damned if you don't. Readers, how would you vote on this? ...

Bullets overcome 20-point deficit to drop Cavs

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Once again, Bernard King was unstoppable and the Cleveland Cavaliers were the kind of team that blows 20-point leads.

King scored 38 points, his biggest game since suffering a serious knee injury almost four years ago, as the Washington Bullets rallied for a 122-117 win Sunday over Cleveland, once an NBA doormat but now the league's winningest team.

King, a former scoring champion for New York who missed two full seasons after injuring his knee, joined the Bullets as a free agent at the start of last season.

On Sunday, he scored 10 points in overtime, eight of them from the foul line, including two free throws with 2:14 left to give the Bullets a three-point lead.

"In the clutch I like to see the ball, and fortunately today we were able to put the ball in the hole when we needed to," King said.

The Cavaliers, now 31-9, lost despite a career-high 33 points from Mark Price.

Cleveland center Brad Daugherty missed the game with a suspension for his fight with Detroit's Bill Laimbeer Friday night. Starting forward Larry Nance sprained an ankle in the first half, and did not return.

In other games, it was the Los Angeles Lakers 118, Dallas 93; Boston 121, Miami 103; Detroit 122, Sacramento 97; and Seattle 112, Milwaukee 106.

Cleveland's John Williams (18) shoots over Terry Catledge (33), forward for the Washington Bullets, in Sunday's game.

Daniel, Mochrie resume LPGA play

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

BOCA RATON, Fla. — It was the confident veteran against the young upstart, but Beth Daniel wasn't claiming the advantage over Dottie Mochrie.

The former Furman University students who starred at the school in different decades played four holes of a sudden-death playoff in the LPGA Oldsmobile Classic before play was suspended because of darkness Sunday night at Stonebridge Golf and Country Club.

Daniel, looking for her 15th tour victory but first in nearly four years, looked and sounded like a woman on a mission after overcoming a two-shot deficit on the last hole of regulation.

Still, her competitive side as well as a lack of success since 1985, told her she couldn't dismiss Mochrie, a 23-year-old, second-year pro who lacked experience in a LPGA playoff.

"She had a big year last year," said Daniel, who was 3-2 in sudden-death finishes before this tournament. "She proved she can play golf."

Mochrie won $137,293 as a rookie but had yet to capture her first victory as a professional. She looked like she would get it Sunday before she bogeyed the 18th hole.

"I didn't care that she had a two-shot lead. I felt like this is my tournament, and still do," Daniel said, looking ahead to the resumption of the $300,000 tournament today.

"The adrenalin was pumping, but I wasn't nervous," added Daniel, who made a 6-foot putt on No. 18. "She (Mochrie) made a helluva five (on the last hole) and I made a helluva 3."

Daniel, whose victory in last fall's Nichirei Cup Team Match in Japan isn't recognized by the LPGA, shot 70 in the final round for a four-day total of 9-under-par 279.

Mochrie, who shot a 67 with the help of a hole-in-one Saturday, had a 69 in the last round. She was flawless in climbing past defending champion Nancy Lopez and Daniel, who shared the third-round lead, before stumbling to bogey the final hole in regulation play.

Lakers 118, Mavericks 93
The Lakers won outside Los Angeles for the first time since Dec. 13, handing Dallas its worst home loss ever.

A.C. Green scored 25 points and Magic Johnson added 20 for the Lakers, who were never threatened after outscoring the Mavericks 37-25 in the second quarter. Los Angeles shot 71 percent from the field in the period to take a 67-43 halftime lead.

The Lakers, who beat the Los Angeles Clippers on Jan. 15, hadn't won another road game since Dec. 13 at Cleveland.

Mark Aguirre led the Mavericks with 16 points.

Celtics 121, Heat 103
Boston handed Miami its 20th loss in 21 road games as Kevin McHale led six Celtics in double figures with 21 points.

Robert Parish had 10 of his 14 points and six rebounds in the first quarter as Boston took to a 31-17 lead, then widened the advantage to 67-43 at halftime.

The Heat was led by Rony Seikaly with 22 points and Kevin Edwards with 21.

Pistons 122, Kings 97
Detroit routed Sacramento thanks to a 20-0 second-quarter spree that gave the Pistons a 29-point lead.

Vinnie Johnson scored nine of his 23 points during the spurt, which gave Detroit a 55-26 lead with 4:07 left in the first half.

Dennis Rodman came off the bench to lead Detroit with a season-high 24 points, including 10 straight for his club in the fourth quarter. Rodman also had 16 rebounds.

Kenny Smith scored 19 of his 21 points in the second half for the Kings.

Sonics 112, Bucks 106
Seattle won its sixth in a row and 17th straight at home as Derrick McKey scored 23 points and Dale Ellis 22.

The SuperSonics, who now have the NBA's third-best record, survived 4-for-13 free-throw shooting in the fourth quarter to hand the Bucks their first loss in five road games.

McKey scored 14 points in the third quarter as Seattle built a 88-75 lead at the end of the period.

The Bucks closed the gap to 99-97, but Alton Lister's three-point play and baskets by Sedale Threatt and Ellis gave Seattle a 106-99 lead with 2:30 left.

The Bucks got 24 points from Paul Pressey.

Kelton cagers bound for state basketball playoffs

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

KELTON — Kelton School sits on a quiet farm-to-market road three miles south of Highway 152 and about 10 miles east of Wheeler. It boasts an enrollment of 26 students and, in the absence of a town, the school serves as the hub of activity for a farming community that radiates outward for miles.

Despite the peaceful appearance of the surrounding countryside, big things are going on within the walls of Kelton School's gymnasium.

Under the stewardship of head coach Dave Johnson, the Lions and Lady Lions are forging a reputation for powerhouse basketball. Following Friday's victories over Allison, the Kelton cagers are once again bound for the Class A state basketball playoffs.

Johnson is in his eighth year at the helm of the Kelton athletic programs. He came to Kelton in 1981 and led the Lions to a district co-championship during his first basketball season. At that time, only the first-place team advanced to the playoffs, and the Lions were defeated in the tiebreaker. Since then, he has guided the Lions into the postseason four times in seven years.

Of late, Johnson has had even more success with the girls' program, coaching the Lady Lions to the playoffs for the past five years. In addition, his 1988 volleyball team won the district title and advanced to the area round before falling to Knox City.

Even at Class A schools, it is somewhat of a rarity for one coach to oversee all sports, including high school and junior high. Until this season, Johnson single-handedly coached girls' volleyball, boys' and girls' basketball (high school and junior high) and boys' and girls' track, besides teaching all levels of physical education and courses in Texas history and economics.

But this year, Johnson got some help. The school district hired an assistant, Joey Waldo, who graduated from Kelton High School and played basketball under Johnson during the 1981-82 and 82-83 seasons. Waldo took over the junior high girls' team and assists in all other sports. For Johnson, it was a welcome change.

"I stay awfully busy, but having coach Waldo has helped a lot," Johnson said. "I found out that he helps me a lot more than I realized an assistant would. This way we have two guys sitting on the bench, and he might see something that I don't. And in practice I don't have to walk back from one end of the court to the other."

Of the 18 boys in Kelton High School, 17 of them compete on the varsity and junior varsity basketball teams. After 22 games, the varsity boys are still undefeated, and their 8-0 conference record puts them at No. 1 in District 4-1A with only one game remaining. The Lions' last defeat came in the sub-regional round of the playoffs last season, when they fell to Paducah, the eventual Class A state champion.

Kelton is on-target to defend last season's district title. The Lions host Wheeler, currently the second-place team in the district, on Tuesday, and a win over the Mustangs will guarantee Kelton the top seed in the playoffs.

The Lions handed Wheeler its only conference loss (64-42) this season, thanks largely to the performance Chad Caddel, who tops all Kelton scorers with an average of 26.3 points per game. The 6-1 senior also leads the Lions in total points (551), assists (165), steals (65) and three-point shots made (57).

Kelton's next-leading scorer and top rebounder is 6-0 senior Brett Buckingham, who averages 20.3 ppg, has scored 446 points this season and pulled down 258 rebounds, an average of 12.3 per game.

"Everyone in this district knows Chad and Brett because they've been starters since they were freshmen," Johnson said. "People will overplay them so much, they tend to forget about those other three guys."

Those other three guys — Scott Bodine and brothers Randy and Andy Singleton — round out Kelton's starting five. The Singletons play the post position, where senior Andy has 204 rebounds and 288 points and junior Randy has 145 rebounds and 119 points. Bodine has established himself as a good outside shooter, hitting 30 percent from three-point range and posting 101 points on the season.

The Lady Lions are in a little tighter position when it comes to bench strength. At the beginning of the season, only six girls were enrolled in high school — all of which play basketball — although two new girls were recently enrolled. They are not eligible to play basketball this year.

The shortage of players has not daunted the Lionettes, however. With two regular-season games remaining, they stand at 7-1 in the conference and 19-4 overall for second place in District 4-1A behind Wheeler. The Kelton girls have been defeated only by Booker, Samnorwood (twice) and Wheeler.

Kelton finished second in district last year and advanced to the regional final before losing to Nazareth, which won the girls' Class A state championship. As with the boys, the girls' District 4-1A title will likely come down to Tuesday's battle with Wheeler. A win by Kelton will create a tie for grader.

"She's got good court sense and handles the ball so well. She's just a good athlete. Sometimes after a game, I'll think she didn't play well, but then I realize that she scored 25 points and made 15 rebounds. What more can you ask for?"

Karla Harris, one of only two seniors on the team, averages 9.1 ppg, and sophomore Susan Davidson is next with 8.5. Davidson and teammates Lori Ray and first place — necessitating a tiebreaker — while a loss will leave the Lady Lions the No. 2 seed in the playoffs.

Sophomore Noel Johnson (no relation to coach Dave Johnson) leads Kelton in virtually every statistic after 22 games, including average points per game (30.2), total points (664), steals (147), assists (93), three-point shots made (43), and rebounds (331).

"Noel was in third grade when I moved here," Johnson said, "and I remember she dribbled behind her back and went for a layup. I'd never seen that from a third-

Heather Honeycutt have 186, 147 and 103 total rebounds respectively.

Johnson has had great success this season with a girls' team made up primarily of underclassmen, which bodes well for the future of the Lady Lions.

"Those girls are all young," he said, "and I expect them to get better."

The girls' Class A bi-district playoffs are scheduled for Feb. 16-18, giving them a two-week layoff after the finish of district play. The boys have a three-week break before their bi-district game, which is scheduled for Feb. 23-25.

NFC routs AFC in Pro Bowl, 34-3

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU — Randall Cunningham says he'll be back for next year's Pro Bowl, even if he's not voted into the NFL's all-star game.

"I'm coming back for sure, whether I pay myself or come with the Pro Bowl," the Philadelphia Eagles quarterback said Sunday after winning the Pro Bowl MVP Award in his first trip to the league's season-ending contest.

"Hawaii is great, the weather is nice, the people are nice, there are no negatives here."

In addition to having a fun week, Cunningham completed nine of 14 passes for 83 yards and picked up 49 yards on two rushes to help the NFC to an easy 34-3 victory over the AFC All-Stars.

"I always hoped to be just selected for the Pro Bowl," he said when asked if he had thought about winning the MVP Award.

"I thought Herschel (Walker) had a good chance to win it because he had two touchdowns."

Cunningham doubtless earned some MVP votes with his talent for improvising.

On one busted play, he had the ball knocked from his hand, chased around after it and finally grabbed it, then fired an 11-yard completion to J.T. Smith.

"He's a heckuva athlete, period," said Mike Ditka of the Chicago Bears, the NFC coach.

Walker, of the Dallas Cowboys, scored on runs of 4 and 7 yards.

"We've taken the short end of the stick the past couple of years," Walker said, referring to the NFC's losing the two previous Pro Bowls.

"We were fired up this time." Neal Anderson of the Chicago Bears was another offensive standout for the NFC, accounting for 102 yards. He gained 85 yards on 13 carries and caught two passes for an additional 17.

Ditka said he figured his main job in coaching the NFC All-Stars, who collected $10,000 each to the losers' $5,000 cut, was not to mess things up.

"I just wanted to keep it simple, let them have fun and let them show their talent. With the talent we had, it would have taken a lot of bad coaching to mess it up."

Houston quarterback Warren Moon, in his first Pro Bowl appearance, led the AFC with 13 completions in 20 attempts for 134 yards.

But after going 10-for-11 for 98 yards in the first half of his initial Pro Bowl, Moon was pressured by the NFC defense in the second.

"When you get behind, the defense comes right at you," Moon said. "They know you have to throw the ball."

Marv Levy of Buffalo, the AFC coach, said, "We played a lackluster game. I feel badly. You don't play any game, including an All-Star game, without wanting to win."

"As we didn't make the plays, our enthusiasm waned; as they (the NFC) made the plays, their enthusiasm increased."

Herschel Walker of the Dallas Cowboys scores a touchdown for the NFC during the first quarter Sunday.

Toothless Tigers succumb to Duke

By The Associated Press

Clemson had Hopf — but not much hope. And not much else, either.

Despite missing six players — including two starters and two top reserves — who were suspended for the game for violating study hall rules, the toothless Tigers gave 12th-ranked Duke a battle for 16 minutes Sunday before succumbing 92-62.

With two minutes left, Coach Cliff Ellis sent 6-foot Dennis Hopf, the team's student manager, into the game and told the other players to make sure he got the ball.

"I couldn't believe he said that. That's just the greatest thing he could have done," Hopf said. "To give me a shot like that is just a fantasy. He really made somebody's fantasy come true."

Fantasy soon became reality. With the Duke crowd urging him to shoot, Hopf drove the baseline but traveled. Next, he again drove but lost the ball. Finally, his only shot was partially deflected as the buzzer sounded.

Elsewhere over the weekend, last week's top team in the Associated Press poll, Illinois, rebounded from a 69-62 loss to Minnesota on Thursday with a 75-65 Big Ten victory over No. 17 Indiana Saturday. Illinois dropped to second in this week's poll.

At the Superdome in New Orleans, Ricky Blanton scored during a scramble at the buzzer, giving LSU an 82-80 victory over second-ranked Georgetown Saturday before the largest crowd ever to watch a regular-season college basketball game — 66,144 tickets were sold, the actual attendance was 54,321. The victory helped move LSU into the rankings at No. 19; the loss dropped Georgetown to sixth.

At Louisville, Jay Burson's 29 points led No. 15 Ohio State to an 85-79 upset of Louisville, which lost star center Pervis Ellison to a knee injury just before halftime of Sunday's game. Louisville fell to seventh.

Last week's No. 4 team, Oklahoma, moved up to the top spot for the first time ever. The Sooners beat Nevada-Las Vegas 90-68 as Stacey King scored a career-high 48 points and Mookie Blaylock made a steal with two seconds left. UNLV slipped to three places to No. 16.

In other Sunday games, No. 4 Arizona trounced No. 20 Stanford 72-52, No. 11 Michigan beat Purdue 90-68 and No. 13 North Carolina State whipped Maryland 90-67.

On Saturday, No. 3 North Carolina downed Georgia Tech 92-65; No. 5 Missouri beat Nebraska 89-72; No. 6 Florida State edged Virginia Tech 100-97; No. 10 Seton Hall routed Boston College 108-79, and No. 14 Syracuse defeated Providence 100-66, knocking the Friars out of the top 20. No. 9 Iowa had the weekend off.

No. 15 Ohio State 85, No. 7 Louisville 79

Louisville, which had a 14-game winning streak stopped, was ahead 20-13 in the first half and 51-41 early in the second half. Burson's drive put Ohio State ahead 68-67 with 4:15 remaining and jump shots by Burson and Eli Brewster capped a 13-3 spurt that gave the Buckeyes a 72-67 lead. LaBradford Smith scored 23 points for Louisville.

No. 2 Illinois 75, No. 17 Indiana 65
Illinois, 18-1, overcame a 35-25 halftime deficit. Kenny Battle scored 13 points during a 26-9 burst to start the second half and his rebound basket with 13:15 left put the Illini ahead to stay 43-42. Nick Anderson, whose mother was seriously injured in an automobile accident on Friday, added 21 points for Illinois. Jay Edwards led Indiana with 18.

No. 1 Oklahoma 90, No. 16 UNLV 88

Blaylock, the nation's steal leader, scored 23 points and preserved Oklahoma's second two-point victory of the season over UNLV by intercepting Anderson Hunt's pass with two seconds left.

King scored Oklahoma's final seven points and 13 of the last 18. Hunt led UNLV with 22.

No. 19 LSU 82, No. 6 Georgetown 80

Georgetown rallied to tie the game with 20 seconds left when Charles Smith, who scored 32 points, made one of two foul shots. But after LSU's Russell Grant put up an airball, Blanton grabbed a loose ball under the basket and hit a layup as time expired.

Freshman Chris Jackson led LSU with 26 points and Wayne Sims added 24.

No. 3 North Carolina 92, Georgia Tech 85

Kevin Madden scored 16 points and Scott Williams had 15 for North Carolina, which used a 21-4 spurt to build a 54-40 lead. Dennis Scott made nine 3-point baskets and scored 29 points for Georgia Tech.

No. 4 Arizona 72, No. 20 Stanford 52

Sean Elliott scored 31 points while Stanford star Todd Lichti was held to 11 on 2-for-5 shooting. Elliott was 9-of-13 from the floor, 12-of-15 at the foul line and had nine rebounds. His 2,198 career points are second in Pac-10 history to the 2,325 by UCLA's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

O'Meara wins Pebble Beach

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Two strokes in two tournaments at Pebble Beach have cost Tom Kite $351,000 in the last two months.

He was a playoff loser to Curtis Strange in the rich Nabisco Championships in November.

And he became a runner-up again — a one-shot loser once again — when Mark O'Meara's 10-foot birdie putt found the cup on the final hole of the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am on Sunday.

"This is not a lot of fun," Kite said. "Finishing second the second time around is much tougher," Kite said. "This hurts. It really hurts. I'm very disappointed."

It was clear that he wasn't talking about the money, the $351,000 difference in winning and finishing second in the two tournaments, but was referring instead to another title that eluded his grasp.

"I had my chances," Kite said. "I didn't do what needed to be done and Mark did."

As it does so often in the tournament that formerly was known as "the Crosby," it all came down to the 18th hole. They were tied for the lead when first Kite, then O'Meara came to that picturesque expanse bordered by cliffs overlooking the surf of Carmel Bay.

Kite, who had overcome a string of three consecutive bogeys to regain a share of the lead, could do no better than par. He tallied up his 3-under-par 69, signed his card and was standing by the green when O'Meara played the hole.

O'Meara, who won this tournament in 1985, put his approach some 10 feet from the cup and had that putt to break a four-year victory drought on the American PGA Tour.

"When that sucker was four or five inches from the cup and I knew it was in, I almost had a heart attack," O'Meara said.

It completed a round of 70 and a 277 total, one better than Kite's total. It also provided him with his fourth American Tour victory, and his first since the 1985 Hawaiian Open.

Mark O'Meara reacts as his 15-foot putt drops for a birdie on the 18th hole, giving him a victory in the 1989 National Pro-Am.
