Soviet Union, China to have

BEIJING (AP) — Thirty years ago the communist bloc shattered with the bitter rift between China and the Soviet Union. Today, the world's two largest communist states are picking up the pieces of their long-lost soli-

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze arrives Thursday to advance the accelerating process of political normalization between the two

His visit is expected to lay the groundwork for Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's visit during the spring for the first Sino-Soviet summit since Nikita Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung met for bitterly divisive talks in 1959.

Gorbachev's talks with senior leader Deng Xiaoping and other officials will formally end a freeze on party and government relations that began when the two nations split over ideological and strategic differences in 1960.

Economic and cultural relations have seen steady improvement since the two sides first embarked on political normalization talks in 1982. Trade last year was an estimated $2.8 billion, up from $300 million in 1982.

The two countries will exchange nearly 1,000 scholars this year, compared to 10 in 1983. Sister programs are being formed, joint ventures established and tours conducted across borders once demarcated by barbed wire and bayonets.

China's hard-line stance toward the Soviet Union has softened in the past year as it joins the world trend toward detente and perceives major progress in what it labels the "three obstacles" to normal ties with Moscow

The most important obstacle, Soviet support for Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia, remains the toughest to overcome. But in August the two sides for the first time met face-to-face on the issue and agreed it was time for Vietnam to get out. China, backer of the anti-Vietnam resistance in Cambodia, has welcomed Hanoi's plans to withdraw its troops by September.

Gorbachev, who has actively pursued an end to Sino-Soviet illwill, has taken steps to remove the other two obstacles by pledging to end the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and to reduce by 200,000 men the Soviet troops in Asia — mainly on the tense Sino-Soviet border

Despite the heady progress, the real interests of China as it strives to bring better lives to its 1 billion people remain in furthering its economic, technological and even cultural ties with the

Pampa police kept busy with rash of accidents

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Pampa police were kept busy Friday investigating a rash of six automobile accidents, five with injuries. And early Saturday, an overpass on Loop 171 was closed for about an hour after icy conditions caused several more minor accidents.

Three people were taken to the hospital late Friday evening after a 1980 Subaru driven by Michael Heiskell, 1928 Christy, struck the rear of a 1981 Chevrolet driven by Tony Wayne Barkley, 613 Magnolia, when the Chevrolet stopped to make a left turn onto Lefors Street in the 1100 block of East Browning.

Taken to the emergency room in two Rural/Metro ambulances were Heiskell; his 11-year-old passenger, Seth Heiskell, and a passenger in the Chevrolet, Linda Barkley, 23, of 613 Magnolia. Hospital officials said the child and Mrs. Barkley were treated and released. Heiskell was transported to Northwest Texas Hospital emergency room in Amarillo, where he was treated and re-

Heiskell was cited for no insurance and for allowing a child under 15 to ride without a seat belt. Police said late Saturday that further charges in the accident are pending.

At 11:25 a.m. Friday, a 1979 Ford driven by Keith D. Heiskell, 1116 Perry, went through the railings on the Red Deer Creek bridge in the 1100 block of North Somerville and landed nose first in the creek bed.

Witnesses said they saw Heiskell begin shaking his head and throw up his arms before the vehicle went through the bridge railings. Heiskell told police investigating the accident that he had had an epileptic seizure.

A passenger in the Ford. Leonard Kane, 18, 625 N. Russell, was trapped in the car. Pampa Fire Department personnel used the Jaws of Life to help rescue the traffic victim.

Kane was taken by ambulance to Coronado Hospital emergency room, where he was treated and released. Heiskell was taken by private vehicle. Both suffered cuts and abrasions to the face.

About 6 a.m. Saturday, early morning drivers discovered the See POLICE, Page 2

SATANIC CULTS: PREYING IN THE PANHANDLE

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

A teen-ager in Borger was committed to a mental hospital after he became so obsessed with satanism he could no longer communicate without the aid of a Ouija board.

A grown woman in Perryton destroyed her house and car and blamed it on a devil cult.

In Pampa, a 15-year-old boy claimed to drink animal blood as part of his worship of Lucifer. All around the Panhandle, reports of activity having to do with satanism are growing at an

Local psychologists have expressed a hesitancy to even discuss satanism and the local population. They have said the issue and those involved are so volatile they cannot discuss the matter openly.

One area counselor did admit he had seen over two dozen youths in the last three months who have said they worship Satan. Law enforcement officials around the region have expressed opinions about satanic cults ranging from utter disbelief to absolute certainty that they are operating in the area.

However, rumors and fabrications about the cults have made it difficult, in many cases, to separate fact from fiction.

One local teen-ager who claims to be a satanist said his coven has sacrificed dogs under a bridge north of Pampa. It is also known by police that the site is regularly used by ranchers to dump the carcasses of covotes they have shot.

That leaves police and sheriff's deputies uncertain how to determine when an animal has been sacrificed in that area, since the area is littered with thousands of animal bones and rotting car-

One way or the other, local teen-agers who claim to belong to cults continue to claim the area is used for devil worship. In Perryton, similar puzzles have presented themselves. Ochiltree County Sheriff Joe Hataway said he is fed up with rumors about satanic cults in

'There was this 13-year-old girl who came to school with an upside-down cross on her forehead and '666' on her cheek. She had written them with a pen. When school officials told her to go home and wash it off, that they were not going to have that in their school, she claimed she was a devil worshiper," Hataway said.

In his opinion, though, she was only "a snotnosed kid" who needed stronger discipline. 'Then we had this lady who said a satanic cult broke into her apartment and wrote satanic graffiti all over the walls and then tore up her car and wrote satanic graffiti on it," Hataway said.

He said the Perryton newspaper carried stories about satanism in the area that caused great alarm in local citizens. But further investigation by Hataway indicated the woman had made the story up and done the damage to her apartment

About the series

Over the last two years, the issue of satanic cults has been getting more and more national and regional press coverage.

Some have blamed such stories on an overeager American media looking to exploit a story. Like lemmings to the sea, they pictured the press tripping over each other in an attempt to cover a story with sensational implications.

Many others in the media, including the author of this series, wondered if such accusations might not be true

After attempting to track down several rumors on the local level, reporters from The Pampa News had decided that no story on local satanism could be substantiated.

That recently changed. A counselor in the Panhandle area mentioned, while discussing the subject of drug abuse, that he had seen a dramatic rise in the number of young people who were getting mixed up in the occult.

While he refused to cite specific cases, he did give several leads that would not affect the cases he was working on. In the course of pursuing these leads, several local young people admitted they were satanically involved.

They agreed to discuss this on the record if their names were not used.

This six-part series explores aspects of devil worship on the national, regional and local level. Many of the subjects discussed by those interviewed are abhorrent to "normal" people.

But because this story involves the mental health, and possibly the physical well-being, of people in this area, it is one that needs to be ex-

A resignation letter from board member Jim Olsen was the only sour note in an otherwise up-beat meeting of the Gray County Appraisal District's board of directors Thursday.

Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley proudly informed the board that a total of $45,461.64 would be reimbursed to the 10 taxing entities covered by the Gray County Appraisal District, a total of 10.7 percent of what the entities had paid in to the district during the past year.

"I want to commend the (appraisal district) staff for managing things in such a way to be able to reimburse such an amount," said Board Chairman Ken Fields. "Let's do that every year.

"That's the kind of result we were looking for when we hired you," he added, indicating

Bagley said his office, in addition to the amount being reimbursed to the taxing entities, was also able to retain $20,885 for a depreciation reserve fund for replacement of fixed assets, for a total savings of the year of more than $66,000

"It's a reflection of our goal not to waste money," Bagley said. And though the year ended with a surplus amount, Bagley said the appraisal district was still able accomplish many things the district needed such as purchasing filing cabinets, a table and chairs for the board room, a desk for himself, and some remodeling in the appraisal district offices.

More good news was passed on to board members in an audit report submitted by Lewis Meers, CPA. Referring to the less complimentary audit report from 1987, Meers told board members that the majority of the issues brought up had been taken care of, adding there were a few the staff was still

However, he said, the "important shortcomings" had been corrected. In May 1988, a management letter had mentioned problems with the district's internal accounting control, segregation of duties, budgeting, late payments, inventory and appropriate bond amounts.

This year's management letter specified a few of what Meers termed as "simple housekeeping things." Once more, as in 1987, he recommended the district upgrade their accounting software.

The accountant also suggested making a list of acceptable and unacceptable vendors, marking original invoices "Paid" so an invoice wouldn't be paid twice, moving the computer to a less accessible area, destroying outdated checks and decreasing the number of checks being voided.

"Everything suggested in the management letter will essentially be implemented other than the software," Bagley said. Board members, and Bagley, are reluctant to purchase new software and possibly a new computer system at this time.

"I feel like the report reflects our good work," Bagley commented. "I'm very proud of what we've done.'

Board members also unanimously approved a personnel policy and procedures manual written by Bagley, an item tabled from the December meeting until Fields and Olsen could be present.

"It's a good policy," said board member Bob Curry. "It's detailed enough that we know where we stand and what to do in practically every circumstance.'

"It's fairly conservative as far as personnel policies go," Fields added.

"There were some areas (in the old policy) that the board and myself felt did not protect the district or the employees," Bagley said. In the new policy, for example, employees are now able to accumulate sick leave up to 30 days, he said. This policy allows for a major illness of an employee while still cutting the cost to the district almost in half, he said.

Board Secretary Jim Olsen, who submitted a letter of resignation to the board, was honored by the board members and presented with a wall clock in recognition of his two years of service to the appraisal district.

Olsen cited in his reasons that he had resigned his position as a vice president with Citizen's Bank & Trust and "anticipates a possible move from Pampa.

'We'll miss his financial expertise as well as his good ol' common sense," Fields said. "We regretfully accept his resignation. We'll miss him very much.'

After accepting Olsen's resignation, board members unanimously agreed to notify the appraisal district's taxing entities of the board vacancy.

"It was a very good learning experience," Olsen said of his time on the board. "I appreciate it very much.' According to the procedure outlined by the State Property Tax Code, once the entities have been notified, they have 10 days in which to name a nominee for the board. Within five days of receiving all the nominees, the chief appraiser will then submit a list of names to be voted on by the board with the person receiving the majority vote to fill the vacancy.

Fields was unanimously re-elected to serve as chairman of the appraisal board, while Sam Haynes was picked as the new board

Board members tabled any action on employees' health insurance, while the staff further studied proposals submitted by various agencies.

"I'm extremely pleased with Pat Bagley and the members of his staff," Fields said as the meeting concluded. "The difference between now and last year is black and white. night and day. I believe we have accomplished our goal of getting the appraisal district on a professional footing.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Eliminating FDIC would be bargain

The closest thing to a sensible analysis of the savings-and-loan crisis by anyone in the administration was immediately shot down on Capitol Hill. But that's characteristic. In the topsy-turvy world of Washington, common sense is virtually outlawed.

What happened was that the president's Council of Economic Advisors included in a report on the savings-and-loan crisis a modest suggestion that federal insurance agencies reduce the maximum for which they'll insure individual accounts. The feds insure accounts up to $100,000 now, but before 1980 it was $40,000. The rationale for the reduction was explained in the report, but most news accounts neg lected to mention it while concentrating on crocodile tears shed by various members of Congress.

"This chariman will not allow a reduction in federal insurance for the nation's savers," huffed House Banking Committee Chairman Henry Gonzalez, a Texas Democrat. New York Democrat Charles Schumer was positively maudlin: 'I am appalled at the timing of the Reagan administration, putting the blame for bank management on the backs of depositors, and trying to cut back on their insurance. Nicholas Brady, who will continue as treasury secretary in the incoming Bush administration, immediately announced the Bush regime's intention to be utterly gutless on the matter.

Although the administration, rather typically, did not prepare the way for this proposal with any prior discussions, it's not difficult to see how the federal deposit insurance system has contributed to savingsand-loan problems. With deposits federally insured, S&L managers, especially in institutions that weren't too solid to begin with, had powerful incentives to roll the dice with high-risk but potentially highreturn investments, or to offer unrealistically high interest rates to depositors. If their highwire act paid off, they'd be in clover, and if it didn't, the government would pay off depositors.

That's precisely what a number of S&L managers did in the early 1980s, and many lost the gamble. Now it's almost certain that general taxpayers will be forced to bail them out (rather than letting them fail and go out of business).

People or corporations able to keep $40,000 or $100,000 in a savings account are likely to have the resources needed to monitor the financial health of savings and institutions, improving marketplace discipline, as the Council of Economic Advisors hopes. But a better solution might be to privatize the insur-

A private deposit-insurance company (or companies) could charge higher rates or refuse to provide insurance to high-flying risk-takers. Problems could be discussed and corrected before they got out of control.

That idea might be a tough sell for politicians, but it would be a bargain for the taxpayers.

I'ime to say no to charlatans

John Thompson, Georgetown University's basketball coach, stalked out of a game. Temple University's basketball coach, John Chaney, labeled the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) a racist organization. And a number of high school basketball coaches railed against the NCAA. What did the NCAA do?

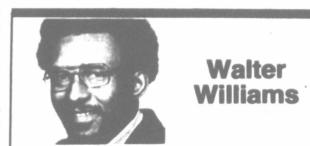

The NCAA's Proposal 42, which goes into effect next summer, says high school athletes must score at least 700 on their Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT), a college admissions test, and hold a 2.0 grade point average in order to be eligible for scholarships and financial aid.

Coaches claim these new "tough" academic standards are racially discriminatory since the SAT is culturally biased against blacks.

The SAT consists of two parts — verbal and mathematics. The maximum score for each is 800 points, giving a total of 1600 points. Therefore, the NCAA's new "tough" requirement is for athletes to score 44 percent on the test and maintain a C average — not too-challenging a requirement, especially when you consider that the average national SAT score is 900

Naturally, basketball coaches are upset with the new requirement because it threatens their ability to recruit and retain star black basketball players because off poor performance on the SAT. Thus, the allegation that the SAT is culturally biased.

Several issues are made apparent by this allegation.

First, any test is bound to be rooted in some kind of culture; there are no such thing as culture-free tests.

Second, blacks do just about as badly on the math part of the test, which can be said to have fewer culture-based questions, as they do on the Third, Asian-Americans have an average SAT score of 926, 25 points above the national average. Why do Asians, America's most culturally different population grouping, do so well on a supposedly culturally biased test?

The debate over the NCAA's requirement for a minimum SAT score of 700 is much ado about nothing in the larger picture. Black students, as a group, scored an average of only 728 on the SAT in 1987 — a 10 percent improvement over 1980. At some of the nation's finer institutions like Columbia, Brown, MIT, Duke and Georgetown universities, over half the student body scores 1200 and above on the SAT.

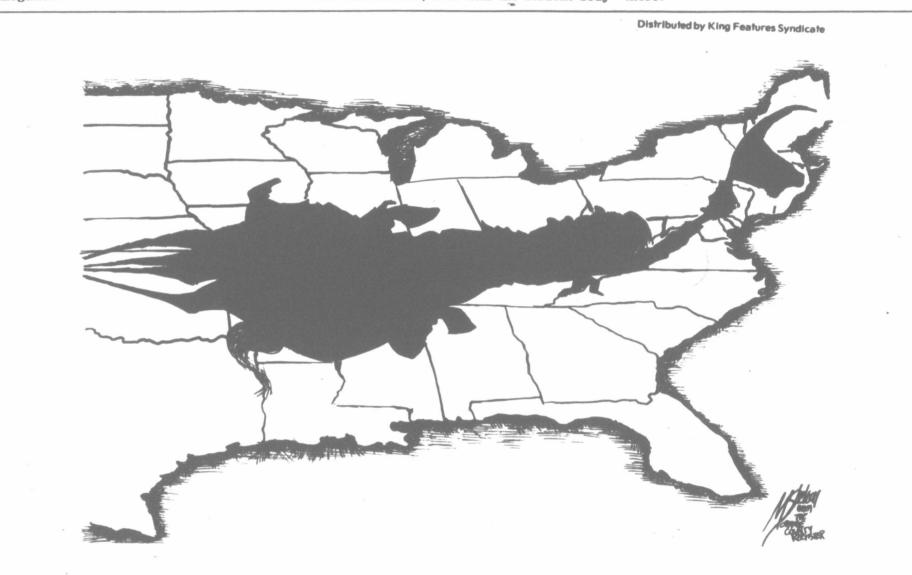

The tragedy is these schools are often at the forefront in recruiting black students. To take any student, black or white, with SAT scores in the 700s and place him in such a high-powered environment is akin to academic genocide. It will be difficult for him to maintain a C average unless he takes "Mickey Mouse" courses.

The academic achievement picture for blacks is more dismal with the GRE (the admissions test for graduate and professional schools). Blacks, after four years of college, still face an enormous achievement gap.

The response of the Education Establishment and civil rights organizations to this tragedy is to blame the tests, call for more busing and more money as they've been doing for years. While this charade goes on, million of black kids' prospects for improvement in their life is snuffed out.

College coaches and administrators are upset over the NCAA requirements, and naturally so, because it threatens the money-making part of their operation. But that's their problem. Black people must have a different agenda — to figure out how to stop black politicians, civil rights organizations, the Education Establishment, and white liberals from fulfilling the Ku Klux Klan's dream of black education.

I pray for the day when black people will rise up to these charlatans, and just say, "No more!"

Decades ahead of the others

It is rare that I agree with anything that appears on the editorial pages of The New York Times

Whatever I believe, the Times seems always to be on the left of it. That's OK. Phil Donahue has rarely said anything I can nod affirmative to either, and I even went against Judge Wapner twice last week in People's Court.

But there was a smashing editorial in a recent Sunday Times. It was signed by Don Wycliff. Don Wycliff is the first person I've read in years who gave this country credit due in the area of civil rights. Listen to Mr. Wycliff:

"The anti-African student riots of the last two weeks have opened a new window on China and the view isn't pretty: black students under attack ... beaten by police ... detained incommunicado ... shocked on the genitals with cattle Continuing: "... The Chinese aren't alone in these attitudes or their uninhibited expression. Russians have long been known for racist com-tempt of the African students in their country. "Amerasian children in Vietnam, especially those whose fathers were black, suffer brutal ostracism. In Japan, senior political officials regularly give voice to insulting stereotypes of American blacks.

"As hopeless as race relations in America occasionally seem, this nation truly is decades ahead of most others. The late Bayard Rustin was right when he said America's civil rights revolution was unique in modern times. ...

Bravo. The official policy of this country the law of the land — for 25 years has been that it is unlawful to discriminate because of color.

Since then, that has been broadened to include outlawing of sexual discrimination, discrimination because of age and, if you will, discrimina-

Don Wycliff is right. "... As hopeless as race relations in America occasionally seem, this nation truly is decades ahead of most others." I know of no country that could have done what this one did — and that was to stare the customs of discrimination and oppression in the eye and declare there would be no more.

We'll never completely rid our society of racist feelings and anxieties, but we've come a million miles since 1964, and such a leap toward brotherhood is unparalleled.

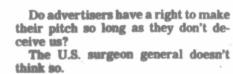

It is that thought — and the thoughts of Mr. Wycliff of the Times — that causes my stomach to turn when I hear of the likes of Rev. Al Sharpton, he of the Tawana Brawley fiasco, he of the "free James Brown" movement.

If Al Sharpton couldn't stir up a little racism every now and then, he'd have to cut his hair and get a regular job. The same goes for Joseph Lowery of the Southern Christian Leadership Council. Give him an issue — any issue whatsoever — and the first thing out of his mouth is "Racism!" Give it a rest, Joe.

.. And what does it say," concluded Mr. Wycliff, "when an African-American quarterback leads a team nicknamed 'the Fighting Irish' to the national collegiate championship?" It says a lot. All of it good.

So, who's afraid of Madison Avenue?

The National Commission Against Drunk Driving doesn't think so, either. Nor do the Children's Defense Fund and a host of other self-proclaimed public-interest groups and watchdogs. They've all decided advertising needs further regulation - and, in some cases, outright bans.

If Surgeon General C. Everett Koop had free rein, he'd outlaw cigarette ads altogether. The commission on drunk driving is less severe, but favors legislation "to regulate alcohol beverage advertising." Children's advocates meanwhile favor a clampdown on commercials targeting kids, such as ads for sugared cereals.

Notice, please, the galling conceit of these regulatory true believers: They alone possess the wisdom necessary for a healthy life. The rest of us are gullible - so much so, in fact, that we cannot be trusted to protect our own interests.

In the true believer's eyes, the average consumer is a passive slug accepting commercial messages with no less awe than if they were engraved tablets handed down from high. Adult consumers are so passive, apparently, that they playishly defer to their kids' demands. If children plead for marshmallows and cola for breakfast, our would-be protectors imply, most parents simply surrender.

Does that sound like reality to you? Nor to me. In the real world, people treat advertising as they do all onesided messages: attentively, but with caution. They rely on advertising to discover (among other things) new products, bargains or the names of shops carrying particular goods. Truth in advertising they rightly ex-pect. But full disclosure of such obvious facts that harflies are not all healthy, happy and handsome? Of course not.

Even men who succumb to ads touting a cure for baldness rarely expect to he sporting a lush growth of hair in a few weeks. They purchase the product as skeptics, praying for a pleasant

Economists have long argued whether advertising creates demand for products or mainly caters to it, but we do know this much about consumers: Neither advertising nor regulation created their growing taste for lean foods, low-calorie drinks and "light" alcoholic beverages. Quite the contrary: Advertising responded to the rational dietary concerns of

Not even the cleverest commercial can sell anything to anyone. No amount of advertising, for example, can persuade most Americans to buy cigarettes, for the simple reason that a majority today rejects smoking as a dangerous, dirty habit. Cigarette consumption dropped dramatically in the past 25 years and will continue to decline with or without a ban on advertising. We are not putty in Madison Avenue's hands

In their book "Advertising and the Market Process," Robert Ekelund and David Saurman remark how "paradoxical and inconsistent (it is) that those individuals who most staunchly oppose government regula-tion of opinion and expression are quite frequently those who ardently favor government regulation of advertising. They hold that the consumer is at once discerning enough to assimilate information and make wise choices but somehow is totally lacking in this ability when it comes to evaluating opinion or expression embodied as advertising. Most of us become more discerning, not less, when confronted with a gaudy advertisement. We know we're on our own in deciding whether to trust it, but the staunch adults among us - an endangered species, admittedly - wouldn't have it any other

Pampa has changed more than expected

To the editor:

Recently my wife and I visited Pampa for over a month due to an illness in the family. Eleven years ago we moved away from Pampa. We have returned to visit several times, but only for the weekend. This time we noticed more of the changes Pampa had gone through.

While there, my wife needed a prescription refilled and went to a pharmacy. With our being from out of town, it was not easy getting it filled. The pharmacist was rude and very unfriendly. He placed a couple of phone calls and told us the phone at the doctor's office was out of order. We know it was working 30 minutes earlier that morning. He acted as if we were being dishonest with the need for the medicine.

Wal-Mart was our next stop. This pharmacist was friendly although she was extremely busy. She made the phone calls to the doctor and verified the medicine. The prescription was filled with no hassle. Wal-Mart should be very happy having her there.

While in Pampa, we did some of our Christmas shopping. The clerks in most of the stores were not as friendly as I had remembered the people being. I didn't see the Pampa Pride as I had remembered.

The town on a whole didn't look as good as I thought it was when we left. Yards with old cars, yards needing cleaning, weed growing around buildings, stop signs and lamp posts. I was filling up my car with gas at a convenience store on Wilks St. and looked across the highway at a house and yard with used bicycles, wagons and other things. It appeared as if an on-going sale was in progress but I didn't see any signs. Seemed like a good place for skunks to hide.

If I had been living in Pampa and saw these changes take place over a period of time. I probably would not have noticed them as much. Sometimes changes are more than we expect. Dale Brown

Wal-Mart, Alco deserve thanks

As a Pampa customer, I would like to take this opportunity to thank Wal-Mart and Alco for their excellent customer service.

It took an incident in the Pampa Mall to make me aware of how lucky we are to have a few stores in town that will stand behind their merchandise.

The incident to which I am referring took place Sunday, Jan. 22, 1989. First, on Jan. 16, my wife purchased a compact stereo which was on sale for $9.99 in one of the businesses in the mall vicinity. That same night, the belt clip broke, so I went to the store with my receipt and they exchanged the broken stereo for a new one, keeping my receipt.

Seven days later, the whole front part of that stereo broke off in her hand while she was inserting a tape. I went to the store to return the item, at which time the store representative refused to stand behind the merchandise, because it was electronic. He became very rude and told me to take my stereo and leave the

We feel like any item purchased should last longer than seven days unless it is abused. which this item was not. We have spent over $350 in this store in the last year and will now take our business elsewhere. We urge Pampa residents to do the same when they don't get satisfaction at a store.

Willing to share another viewpoint

To the editor:

The attached letter is in response to my letter of Jan. 22, 1989 relative to the government deficit. I do not know the writer but feel his/ her views should be known.

Mr. Morgan,

About the letters you write in Letters to the Editor: You seem to know so much (and nobody else does) about the Congress spending so much money. You should know they cannot spend a penny if the president doesn't OK it, and this last president has run up the deficit higher than all the ones before him. So you should see who is to blame for that high deficit. Maybe the new president will work with the Congress and the world will be a better place. Reagan didn't do much but sleep thru it all. The camera was put on him and he was sound asleep. If he hadn't been, he would have known about the Iran scandal instead of lying about it.

How can you say employment is higher? So many plants have closed even in Pampa, and the people are working for less. That's why employment is up.

I don't think the president ever faced up to anything; he was too busy trying to put on a show with his little funny things like he was still in Hollywood, not taking his job like it should have been. He never made anything but B pictures, and not many of them.

So maybe a conservative pundit like you needs to get out of your little perfect world and see how it really is and let the people rest from

What did he do?

To the editor:

What was Reagan trying to do? Break our country so Bush won't have any money to run the country on?

Reagan had more money out on interest he won't have to touch to live on. If he had to live on my measly check, he would know how poor people have to live. They aren't griping. They thank God for what they have and do the best

I'm wondering what our country is coming

Other parts of city need consideration To the editor:

I am a homeowner and taxpayer in the city of Pampa and would like to be shown the same consideration as those homeowners and taxpayers living on the NORTH SIDE OF TOWN!

The reason for my mentioning the North Side of Town is because, for about the past year, I have had to call the city numerous times to complain about trash not being picked up. On one occasion when I called, the person I talked to said the reason my trash hadn't been picked up was because the trash on the NORTH SIDE OF TOWN was being picked up.

Are there not scheduled days for trash pickup throughout the city? I called the city again on Monday, Jan. 23, and as of today, Wednesday, Jan. 25, the trash has not been picked up.

I have had to carry my trash down the alley four bins away from my home to deposit it. If the city is that short on employees, why don't they hire enough to service the entire city properly?

Pay raise should be a voting matter

To the editor:

My name is David Anderson from Pleasanton, Texas, and I am writing to all major newspapers in Texas to try and get people to call their congressmen to force Jim Wright to bring this congressional pay raise issue to a floor vote.

I am incensed that this one man can stop all business in the House of Representatives so this issue will not be voted. I started a petition drive opposing this charade in my home town (the 23rd Congressional District) and garnered 3200 signatures, a news story in the Pleasanton Express, and a news segment on Eyewitness News on the CBS affiliate in San Antonio.

I am making one last plea to voters to call and/ write their representatives. Maybe it will make a difference.

Did project work?

One month in 1987, the alley approach behind the mayor's house was cemented. It was called an experiment.

I was wondering, did the experiment work? If so, when are the other alleys in town going to receive the benefits of this experiment? How much did the experiment cost?

By KELLY VARNER EBEL Guest Columnist

Not long ago, an elderly man lay dying in his hospital bed. His last words were that he would have had a better influence on his children, that he would have made their lives easier, if only they had listened.

These thoughts occur more than most people care to realize, and the blame falls squarely on the young and the walls they have put up, separating themselves from the same people who brought them into the world.

What we don't realize is the elderly have so much wisdom to offer that could make our lives easier, less complex, if only we would heed some of their wellmeaning advice.

Instead, because of the overbearing pride of youth, most of us are left to salvage pieces of our lives that were broken due to our own stubbornness and ignorance, and this includes myself.

We don't understand that we are putting aside the most valuable people in the world, thinking we can muddle through without their help.

The fact of the matter is, their experiences can spare us plenty of unwanted trouble. And their stories of recollections can only add richness to our homes, not to mention the love that is uncomparable to any, for our children.

ournalists learn of reality about growing trend of satanism

EDITOR'S NOTE: In this arti- by an expert on the occult that as cle, other media personnel discuss their findings and reactions concerning their investigations into satanic cults in their areas.

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

In January of 1988 Lisa Antonelli wrote an article in Style Weekly magazine, a regional publication based in Richmond, Va., that grabbed national atten-

It was one of the latest articles in a "respected" journalistic outlet to discuss the reality of a growing trend of satanism in America

After the article was printed, Antonelli said, many of her friends thought she was crazy. Others laughed under their breath that she would write such things

Her story, about two "survivors" of satanic cults, included vivid descriptions of rapes, canniblism, torture and murder committed in the name of

To make matters more explosive, the events described didn't happen in such hotbeds of crime as New York or Chicago. They happened in and around Richmond, Va., a city of about 700,000 with ties to the Bible belt as strong as any here in Texas.

Her story included another staggering matter — an estimate much as 8 percent of Richmond's population is involved in some form of satan worship.

"Law enforcement authorities back up the 8 percent figure," Antonelli said in a recent phone conversation. "They are talking about dabblers all the way up to generational practitioners." families in which satanism has been passed from one generation to another, sometimes for several generations

She said after the story ran, one of her sources found a headless goat (a sign of the devil) floating in her swimming pool.

"My sources tell me there are satanists in very responsible positions. It is very dangerous and very secretive. It's also hard to dabble for too long. You have to be born into it, though, to be allowed into the innermost sanctum," she said.

At first she simply did not believe what the two "survivors" told her, because the stories were so violent and incredible.

"If it hadn't been for a policeman friend of mine who assured me what I was hearing was true, I wouldn't have believed it. From what I understand, the movie Rosemary's Baby is very accu-

"I had (another) policeman tell me that on Halloween he was called to investigate a party where the music was too loud. He said there were people in robes and there was blood everywhere. But what could he do? It's not against the law to worship Satan. He told them to turn the music down and he left," she said.

A Texas reporter, Charles Dukes, who works for the Athens Review, was also initially skeptical about reports of satanic

"Some of the law enforcement people I've talked to have found altars with blood on them. We have tied the satanic activity here to prostitution and bikers,

'I have gotten very afraid of all of this. There is a definite tie between this and

He said he initially heard about satanic covens while working undercover on a story about

"I'm an atheist, so I figured this was all b---s-- when I heard about it. I don't anymore. There's been so much around here that law enforcement believes we have generational satanists at work," Dukes said.

He has gathered evidence over the past several months that 12and 14-year-old girls involved in dabbling with satanism are traveling to Dallas, 90 miles away, on weekends to engage in prostitution

"This is like dope, it's everywhere. We have learned it's really prevalent in the TDC (Texas Department of Corrections) and being spread from there," he

His story, when published, covered four complete pages in the newspaper, without any adver-

"I have gotten very afraid of all of this. There is a definite tie between this and dope. The White Aryans are really into this too. A prisoner with TDC who survives by doing tattoos said 60-80 percent of the tattoos these days are satanic or white supremacist,' he said.

Antonelli said fear is only one of the feelings she has had to deal

"I went through a period of depression after this. You go through your whole life with a certain set of rules. Then you realize there is another layer of life that is so cruel. I knew there were bad people, but nothing like what I was hearing about," she

What she was hearing about were large groups of devil worshipers who would set fire to people as a test of loyalty and would force small children to take part in sexual and criminal activities that would leave most adults sick to their stomachs.

Of the two women Antonelli interviewed, while both were different, the stories were the same, she said

"Sandy was very clear and bright. Sam is symptomatically very ill. She has multiple personalities. They have found of all the case studies (on multiple personality syndrome), all were related to child abuse. The theory is that an abused child seeks an one personality of a 12-year-old boy and 13 others. Some are righthanded, some are left. The woman was brought to me by a police detective who said that if you write about this woman, they will be less likely to kill her.

"The cultists either wanted her 'in' or dead," Antonelli said.

She said that since her story was one of the first in the nation regarding a generational satanic survivor, friends and readers alike wanted to know if she herself was perhaps crazy.

'You go through your whole life with a certain set of rules. Then you realize there is another layer of life that is so cruel.'

"I have felt very vindicated by some of the attention that is coming to all of this. My friends at the daily paper thought I was insane. But it wasn't too much later that one of their writers was doing a story on the very same thing,' Antonelli said.

Dukes terms his work on satanism "very incomplete."

"Law enforcement has hurt. They think to keep it secret is the thing to do. One of the problems is that if a murder has a tie-in (with the occult), a prosecutor is bound to prove conspiracy. It's easier to prove simple murder," Dukes

By coincidence, his comments are almost identical to those shared by a district attorney from the Panhandle when asked why he was not interested in pursuing reports of satanism in his

When asked why people should believe reports, which often seem so unbelievable, about satanic activity around the nation, Antonelli shared what convinced

"Cops are the ultimate skeptics. If you can convince a cop, there must be something there.

She said after the story was published, she had other reasons to believe "I had all sorts of weird stuff going on. I got threatening phone calls and had all sorts of people hanging around my house," she

For several weeks police were worried about Antonelli's safety and posted guards around her and her home.

Due to the tendency of satanists to kill animals, she also warned those who write about them to "keep your pets indoors. I had a dog that ruined my carpet, but I figured better that than to come home and find him beheaded like my source found that goat." Both she and Dukes believe the majority of journalistic work on satanism is yet to be written. They expressed the opinion that as police gain more information on satanists and as devil worshipers continue to become more bold, society will be deluged with a new awareness about a side of life most people thought only existed in movies and nightmares.

and car herself. "Her mother told me that if I believed this satanic stuff, I was a bigger fool than she was," he

He remains convinced that the problem was not that the woman was either obsessed or possessed by demonic forces, only that she was mentally unstable.

"I've had calls from all over Kansas and Oklahoma and Texas about our cults. It's a sore spot with me. I don't think there is a cult. Oh sure, we have some kids who have poured red paint in abandoned houses and told their friends it was blood. But that's just pranks," Hataway said.

Knowing when to differentiate between pranks and real sataniccult activity is something police

One local man said he and a friend made up many of the prevailing rumors about satanic cults in the area as a joke. He said he still laughs when the rumors get back to him. But that does not explain five area youths, three from Pampa, who admitted to The Pampa News that they are active devil worshipers.

Several of the youths attempted to prove their point by naming sites where demonic rites were observed.

Without exception, the landmarks and satanic symbols would be as they described. However, whether that proves they are satanists is still a matter of judgment.

It is a matter that has parents, police, clergy and counselors grasping for answers.

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Soviet planes Saturday flew in emergency food and fuel to the embattled capital, and more countries considered joining the United States in closing their embassies before the Red Army

The planes flew the emergency supplies to Kabul airport, and convoys of at least 112 trucks hauled the food and fuel to silos and gasoline stations, where long lines began forming at dawn.

Some of the fuel trucks headed up the Salang highway, the only land route open from Kabul to the Soviet Union.

The 250-mile highway passes through territory controlled by Moslem guerrillas who have been fighting the Soviet-backed Kabul government the past decade.

In Islamabad, Pakistan, a Moslem guerrilla leader charged Saturday that warplanes from Soviet bases have been bombing dozens of villages in Afghanistan, causing hundreds of casualties.

Western diplomats reported

Thursday that Soviets and the elite Afghan Special Guard bombed and shelled villages on both ends of the highway's Salang Tunnel on Jan. 23. They quoted eyewitnesses as saying that hundreds of civilians were killed in those attacks.

Shortages have eased since the Soviet food airlift began last week. But Afghans, many wearing only light cotton clothing and sandals in the freezing weather, waited stoically in lines for bread and gasoline.

The latest airlift came a day after several more non-Communist nations decided to close their embassies in Afghanistan.

'Lech Walesa is really scared," he said. "The situation in the country is very difficult. But there are terribly difficult and complicated problems and they can't be solved that quickly."

The government and Solidarity leaders announced Friday in a joint communique that talks on re-legalization of the banned Solidarity trade movement and on political and economic reform would begin Feb. 6, according to the state news agency PAP.

The statement also said Friday's session "discussed the problems of trade union pluralism, including Solidarity.

"I am satisfied and very tired," Walesa had told reporters after negotiating Friday for more than 11 hours to set the date for the broader talks. "I made hours of overtime."

After a week's worth of hearings on the subject, the combination of curtailed benefits for debt and a new tax break for dividends seemed to be gaining favor.

Proponents of the two-pronged plan say tightening the corporate interest-deduction provision could balance revenue lost from eliminating the double taxation of dividends. But both remain contentious issues.

While Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan told the Senate Finance Committee he was concerned about the level of corporate borrowing stemming from takeovers, he said he was opposed to any restrictions on the deductibility of corporate interest from loans and bonds.

S&L insurance fund action sought

bers of Congress are urging President Bush to reassure savings and loan depositors by swiftly developing a plan to pump more money into the ailing government insurance fund for S&Ls.

"Public confidence is so precarious today that it is imperative that a comprehensive approach be presented soon," said Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, the secondranking Republican on the House Banking Committee.

"The exact nature is not as important as the fact that a serious package be presented," he said. Bush sought Friday to stem nervousness following scattered reports that some S&L depositors withdrew their money after the president said.

learning that the administration is considering a 25-cent fee on every $100 in federally insured accounts.

"The savings and loan deposits are backed by the full faith and credit of the government and they are sound, they are good," Bush told reporters at the White House. "I want to assure the American people of that and that's not going to change.'

However, Bush said he has made no decisions on a plan for the S&L problem and would not rule out the deposit insurance fee.

"There seems to be some controversy around it, but that doesn't mean that any thinking along those lines should cease,"

Compressor Systems picks regional service managers

MIDLAND — Compressor Systems Inc. (CSI) recently named Lloyd Roberts and Butch Fortenberry to regional service manager positions. Roberts is responsible for CSI's West and South Texas service region. Fortenberry's region includes New Mexico, the Texas Panhandle and western Oklahoma. Both men will have offices in the company's Midland headquarters.

Roberts previously held the position of service manager for CSI. He has worked for CSI for ten years.

Fortenberry has been superintendent of CSI's rental fleet for three years and has worked for CSI for ten years.

CSI is one of the nation's largest skid-mounted natural gas compressor rental, service and maintenance companies. The reorganization of the company's service network is part of a continuing program to streamline operations and enhance CSI's ability to serve its customers.

CSI also named Doug Johnson service manager for its East Texas and eastern Oklahoma service region and Steve Adams service manager of CSI's Mississippi region. Johnson will office in Longview, Texas, and Adams in Columbia, Miss.

"CSI picked four very capable anagers to impleme vice department reorganization," according to CSI Senior Vice President Jim Castner. The new structure enhances CSI's ability to provide the best gas compressor service in the industry. We are able to do any job, from contract maintenance agreements to emergency repairs."

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D. Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee, said in a statement that the Bush administration's disarray on the S&L crisis is contributing to a growing nervousness among depositors.

'Savings and loans are receiving a heavy run of calls from depositors who are confused and concerned about the reports of a new tax on their deposits," Gonzalez said. "In some areas there have been higher than expected withdrawals of funds.

M. Danny Wall, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, disputed Gonzalez' assertion, saying it was based on "an inartful distillation of calls made by somebody on the (committee) staff." However, in an interview a day before, Wall said: "There have been cases where they (depositors) say, 'I don't like what I heard on TV, I'm taking my money out.' "

Bank board spokesman Karl Hoyle said a survey of thrift institutions Thursday night showed "no outflows of any significance that we can attribute to anything that's been said.'

Gonzalez accused the administration of being "extremely careless" in floating the deposit fee trial balloon and called on Bush to "take a personal hand in clarifying the administration's prop-

HEREFORD — The Pampa Lady Harvesters should stencil 'Vengeance is Mine' on their jerseys after Friday night's 50-41 win over Hereford.

Hereford became the second District 1-4A foe the Lady Harvesters have beaten the second time around after losses in the first half of the season. Pampa lost to Hereford in overtime 63-60 back on Dec. 19. Lubbock Estacado is the other team the Lady Harvesters defeated the second half after losing to them in the first game.

"It's a shame we let them teams slip up on us the first time around," Pampa coach Albert Nichols said.

'We played with confidence and we did a good job on defense against Hereford."

Pampa's triangle offense limited Hereford's 6-1 Carmen Brockman to 17 points. "We let her slip in and get a lot of easy baskets on us that first game," Nichols said. Brockman also got into early foul trouble, picking up three fouls the first half. The Harvesters trailed Hereford only once and that was early in the first quarter. Pampa scored nine unanswered points, including a 3pointer by Tara Hamby, in the second quarter and the Lady Harvesters never let Hereford closer than five points the rest of the way.

Senior center Yolanda Brown scored 19 points and ripped down 14 rebounds for the Lady Harvesters, who are 6-6 in district play and 15-9 overall.

"Hereford's guards were coming down and hitting 3pointers on us that first game, but that didn't happen this time," Nichols said.

Hereford didn't connect on a 3-point shot all night.

Nikki Ryan, Crystal Cook and Diane Wood added eight points each for the Lady Harvesters, followed by Hamby with three, Shelia Reed, two, and Christa West, two. Besides Hamby, Cook had a 3point goal for Pampa

Hereford was not only cold from the floor, but were a dismal 7 of 19 from the foul line. Pampa was 8 of 13 from the free throw stripe, which pleased Nichols very much. "We've been shooting our free throws good lately,' Nichols said. Brown was three of four from the line while Ryan hit on four of six tries. The Lady Harvesters host Randall at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday improved ballclub," Nichols "They held Hereford to just 18 points Tuesday night, so that

Harvesters rally past Hereford

HEREFORD — Dustin Miller scored 27 points and teammate Ryan Teague hit a pair of clutch free throws in the closing seconds as Pampa defeated a stubborn Hereford team 49-45 Friday

Pampa raised its record to 8-2 in District 1-4A play and 17-7 in all games. Hereford falls to 2-9, 7-15.

Pampa put Hereford away early, 70-54, in the first meeting between the two teams back on Dec. 19. It wasn't that easy this time out as Pampa could never gain more than an eight-point lead. Hereford never led by more than five points, but were up by three, 38-35, going into the fourth quarter.

Miller, who scored eight points in the final period, tied the score at 41-41 on a driving layup. He swiped the ball on Hereford's ensuing possession and fed Chris Hoganson for the bucket that put Pampa on top to stay

With time running out, Pat Mercer's jump shot drew Hereford within two, 47-45, and then the Whitefaces sent Teague to the foul line with 10 seconds remaining. Teague, who leads the team in free throw percentage, hit both Pampa out of reach. Teague, who finished with 13 points, was a perfect five of five from the line.

"Teague did a great job. Those were big free throws he hit and he shot them with a great deal of confidence," said Pampa coach Robert Hale

The district contest was one of spurts. Pampa ran off eight straight points to start the first quarter, then Hereford reeled off 10 points in a row and went on top 15-12 going into the second quarter. The Harvesters scored eight of the first 10 points in the second quarter enroute to a 24-23 lead at halftime. Midway in the third quarter, Mark Wood's steal and layup gave Pampa a four-point lead (33-29). But Hereford caught fire again and scored nine of the next 11 points to take the lead going into the fourth quarter.

Jason Scott was top scorer for Hereford with 14 points while Keith Brown chipped in nine.

Mark Wood added five points for the Harvesters while Hoganson and Quincy Williams had two points each.

The Harvesters hit only 33 percent of their shots from the floor, foul line.

"We didn't shoot too well from the floor, but we made up for it from the foul line," Hale said. "Hitting 79 percent of your free throws will win most games, and it proved to be so.'

Pampa's fullcourt pressure forced Hereford into 19 turnovers, but the Whitefaces led in rebounds 30-24.

Miller led Pampa on the boards with 10 rebounds. Pampa remains locked in first place in the 1-4A standings with Lubbock Dunbar and Borger. Dunbar downed Randall in double overtime 81-79 and Borger defeated Frenship 76-71 in Friday night games.

Randall, 6-4 in district, comes to town Tuesday night to play Pampa. Gametime is 8 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse.

"It's going to be a great game," Hale said. "Randall has got its back against the wall and this is a game they've got to have." ****

Price grabs share of Pebble Beach lead

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Nick Price came from six strokes off the pace with a 67 and grabbed a share of the lead Saturday in the third round of the $1 million Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

His 5-under-par at Pebble Beach completed a rotation 9ver three Monterey Peninsula courses in 207, nine shots under

Price, runner-up to Seve Ballesteros in last year's British Open, was tied for the lead with Mark O'Meara, who had a 1-overpar 73 in the cold and windy con-

"I guess you could say it was an uneventful day," O'Meara said. "Two three-putts (for his two bogeys) and one one-putt (for his only birdie)."

It was considerably more eventful for Jack Nicklaus, who shot a pair of 69s in the first two rounds. The 49-year-old Nicklaus, who won a U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, hit a shot out of bounds on the second hole at Pebble and went on to shoot an 80, including 42 on the back nine. He just made the cut for the final round at 218. Nicklaus' bad back was bothered by the cold. He appeared to be attempting to disguise a slight limp.

Lopez, Daniel tied for Oldsmobile lead

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) - Defending champion Nancy Lopez was a model of consistency Saturday, en route to a bogey-free 69 to overcome a three-shot deficit and tie Beth Daniel for the lead after three rounds of the LPGA Oldsmobile Classic.

Lopez birdied the 17th hole with a 12-foot putt to pull even with Daniel, who shot even par 72 for a 54-hole total of 7-under-par 209 on the 6,333-yard Stonebridge Golf and Country Club course.

A hole-in-one and four birdies helped Dottie Mochrie come from six strokes off the pace to gain a brief share of the lead. But the second-year pro, looking for her first tour victory, bogeyed the No. 18 to fall a shot behind Lopez and Daniel.

Pro Bowl game today

HONOLULU (AP) - Mike Ditka and Marv Levy both say they want to keep it simple as they guide their All-Star teams into Sunday's Pro Bowl.

"I don't think there'll be any trickery; oh, maybe a couple of reverses," said Ditka, the Chicago Bears coach who'll be serving his second stint as head coach of the NFC squad.

'What we try to do in this game is just make sure that the players can showcase their talent," the Bears coach said.

"I personally think the biggest thing is not to try to give them (his AFC players) too much to do," said Levy, the Buffalo Bills coach who will be making his Pro Bowl debut.

"If I'm going to err, it's going to be on the side of giving them too little to do, not too much.'

Kickoff for the game, which will be marking its 10th anniversary in Hawaii, is 8 p.m. EST at Aloha Stadium.

There is $5,000 at stake for each player, coach and member of the Bears and Bills coaching staff. The winning players and coaches will collect $10,000 each, with the losers getting $5,000.

Although most of the NFL's best players are on hand, the game will be without some of the stars in last Sunday's Super Bowl.

Jerry Rice, the MVP of San Francisco's 20-16 victory over Cincinnati, and Bengals quarterback Boomer Esiason were both voted Pro Bowl starters, but both are missing the game because of injuries.

San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana, on the NFC All-Star squad five of the past six years, wasn't voted in this year.

Houston's Warren Moon moves into the starting job for the AFC in place of Esiason, and Dave Krieg of Seattle will be the backup.

Krieg was a late replacement for Buffalo's Jim Kelly, who himself had taken Esiason's spot on the all-star roster. Kelly had to drop out this week because of ten-

The AFC will be led by Indianapolis running back Eric Dickerson, who topped the NFL in rushing again this year; and running back John Stephens of New England, one of five rookies selected for the game.

Wheeler cagers capture playoff spots

Batton nets 36 to lead Mustangs

By SONNY BOHANAN Sports Writer

BRISCOE — All the Wheeler Mustangs needed to guarantee themselves a playoff berth was a victory over the Briscoe Broncos in Friday's District 4-1A showdown. The Broncos almost saw to it that the Mustangs went home empty-handed.

Indeed, Wheeler trailed almost the entire game before Sammy Zepeda pegged a three-pointer with six seconds remaining in regulation play to knot the score at 59 and send the contest into overtime. From there, the Mustangs outscored the Broncs 6-4 and held on for a thrilling 65-63 victory, assuring Wheeler its fourth playoff appearance in five years.

In the process, Wheeler improved to 7-1 in conference play and 13-12 overall to remain in second place behind undefeated Kelton (8-0, 22-0). Briscoe sank to 3-5 and 10-11 and stayed in fourth place in the standings.

Much of the credit for the Mustangs' come-from-behind victory goes to senior Stephen Batton, who led all scorers with 36 points. including four of the six that Wheeler posted in overtime. Kyle Sword was Wheeler's only other double-figure scorer with 11

"Batton played real well offensively," Wheeler coach Mike Newland said, "and I think he intimidated them some on defense,

"I thought we defensed him (Batton) well," Briscoe coach Ron Van Vranken said, "but we couldn't jump with him. He's hard to stay with when you don't points, while Chad Morgan and Ben Meadows added 10 apiece.

After Zybach's first-half performance, the Mustangs' changed their strategy. "I wanted to put more pressure on him," Newland said. "We switched to a man defense in the second half. I was afraid they would outquick us, and I felt like we had to switch to a man — they were kill-

The change paid off as Wheeler outscored Briscoe 18-11 in the third period and 16-13 in the fourth period. Finally, with six seconds to go, the Mustangs bet everything on Zepeda's threepoint shot, the only points he scored the whole night.

Briscoe went ahead in overtime when Chad Morgan converted both ends of a one-andone, but Batton answered with Briscoe fell to 1-7 and 5-16 for fifth place in the conference standings.

The Mustangettes established their dominance early on, unleashing a 12-point run in the first quarter and leaving the Lady Broncos trailing 22-7 at the start of the second.

By halftime, Wheeler's DeeDee Dorman had already added 16 points and the Mustangettes led 39-18. Dorman finished with a game-high 20 points, while teammates Bobbie Kuehler and Tera Henderson contributed 17 and 16 points respectively.

"I thought we played a good game," Wheeler coach Jan Newland said. "They concentrated better on their shots than they have been. There's some things we need to work on defensively, but I thought they hit the boards well."

Wheeler scored 18 points to Briscoe's seven in the third period, but both teams were scoreless for the first five minutes of the last quarter. In that period, the Lady Broncos were limited to two points, scored by Mandy Ferguson, who paced Briscoe with 10. Nikki Scott was next with eight.

Wheeler converted 10 of 18 free throws for 56 percent.

The Mustangettes travel to Kelton Tuesday night to take on the second-place Lady Lions (7-1, 19-4). A win there will give Wheeler its eighth consecutive district win.

More area teams clinch basketball playoff berths

By SONNY BOHANAN Sports Writer

The Wellington girls and Quanah boys earned playoff spots by winning the first half of District 2-2A play last Tuesday. Friday night's area basketball games tightened the races in the other districts as four more teams clinched berths, while two others moved within one game of postseason play.

With two games still remaining in the District 4-1A regularseason schedule, the boys and girls of both Kelton and Wheeler assured themselves trips to the playoffs with victories Friday night.

The Kelton boys defeated Allison, 57-49, to run their undefeated streak to 22 games and stay atop the conference standings with an 8-0 record. The Kelton girls remained in second place by beating Allison, 48-40, improving their season marks to 7-1, 19-4.

The Mustangettes of Wheeler continued their dominance of the league and climbed to 8-0 and 17-7 with a 69-27 romp over Briscoe. The Wheeler boys made their playoff hopes a reality with Friday's 65-63 overtime victory over Briscoe, improving to 7-1, 13-12 in the process.

Monday's edition of the Pampa News will feature the Lions and Lady Lions of Kelton, while Tuesday's edition will feature the boys and girls of Wheeler.

District 6-1A, the Tigers and Tigerettes of McLean have moved within one victory of the playoffs. The Tigers routed Hedley, 81-53, Friday night to boost their season record to 7-0 and 15-8, two games ahead of Silverton. If McLean defeats Valley Tuesday night, the Tigers will be bound for the playoffs.

The Tigerettes retained their one-game lead in the standings with Friday's forfeit victory over Hedley, improving to 7-0, 16-7. A win against Valley on Tuesday will likewise assure the McLean girls a playoff berth.

Things are still knotted up in the girls' division of District 3-1A. Lefors and White Deer are tied for first place with 2-1 conference

We all tried to play up to one hundred percent of our ability, and none of us quite made it, but Bart came the closest. On July 7, 1988, Bret Starr, 24year old son of Bart and Cherry Starr, was found dead in his home in Tampa, Florida, the result of an eight-year battle against drug abuse. TARGET, a drug and alcohol education and prevention center sponsored by the National Federation of State High School Associations, conducted an interview with Cherry as she shared the struggles and pain of experiencing her son's drug dependency and eventual death, in the hope that others may learn from her family's experience. TARGET has given me full permission to reprint that interview, edited for space purposes.

1. Did Bret participate in sports?No, he did not. He was more interested in music. Although he worked with the Packers while he was in high school, he did not compete athletically. We never pushed him into athletics because Bart and I both agreed that had to be his decision. Different children have different interests.

and we supported Bret in his interests. He did play golf and was pretty athletic, he simply wasn't competitive.

2. When did you discover that Bret was using drugs? We did not know until he was 18. Bret loved animals and always had all kinds of unusual animals around the house. Someone came to the house one day to pick up an animal Bret had that was on the endangered species list. When the person came to the house, Bret handed me a book and told me to put it in the bedroom. After the person left, I opened the book and there was a large hole cut through the center of the book and marijuana cigarettes were stuffed in the hole. This was a total shock to Bart and me. 3. How did Bret become involved in drugs? Apparently, his first exposure to drugs was at the age of 16 when he joined a musical group, a hard-rock band. Bret loved music, so we bought him a guitar. He became lead guitarist in this group, but he was a member of this group for about two years before we realized he was into drugs. As far as we know, the main drug during these years was majijuana.

4. Did Bret use alcohol first? No. he did not have a drinking problem. He did drink beer occasionally, but I never saw Bret intoxicated. His first drug problem was marijuana.

5. When did Bret become involved with cocaine? We encouraged Bret to go to college, and he went to the University at Madison

Warren

6. How did you respond to his first encounter with cocaine? We took Bret to Hazeldon in Minnesota, but the people there said he wasn't a good candidate because he wasn't good in group therapy. he needed one-on-one assistance. We arranged for private psychiatric care in Green Bay. He responded well to that for about a year. He was working with the Packers and had a responsible job. Then, however, he decided to move to Tampa with two other friends to open a pet store. After about a year in business, he perience we'd had at that point. I couldn't believe what drugs

(cocaine) had done to his body in just six months. We brought him home, and he never went back to money. The business was in trouble, and he was into drugs again. He went to work managing another pet shop but was still having problems. We put Bret under the care of the drug therapist for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Dr. Klein. He went to him for about a year and liked him very much. He identified with him. But then he stopped

7. Did he ever have a reversal after becoming addicted to cocaine? He had moments, and he truly wanted to end his addiction to drugs; but it is very hard, next to impossible, once you get addicted to get away from that scene. He called me one day crying, saying he saw Dr. Klein on television, and said, "I want to go back to him. I want to get his problem out of my life." We took him back and for 18 months he was fairly clean. We bought him some exercise equipment. He would exercise for hours every time he felt the urge to use drugs. He said it was a daily struggle. Many times he would leave the house, begin driving to a place for drugs, stop and return home and begin exercising

8. What was the actual cause of kept asking for more and more Bret's death? We saw him at Christmas (1987). He had developed a cough, which persisted for several months. His mood had changed significantly, however. He was going out more. His communication had improved. He came to Milwaukee in June and had a great time, but his cough was worse than ever. He coughed all night. I set up an appointment for him in Tampa, and I believe it was scheduled for July 12, but he never made that appointment. After not hearing from him for awhile, Bart flew to Tampa and found him dead. He didn't actually die of drug overdose; he died of cardiac arrythmia. Drug abuse cost him his life and led to the serious lung infection. He did have cocaine in his system at death, but only in minute quantities. But in his condition, he was probably using crack, it was enough to kill him. 9. Did peer pressure have anything to do with Bret's initial use of drugs? I'm not sure. Obviously, the musical group he was with had a big influence in his introduction to marijauna. But even Bret said, "Mom and Dad, you're the best parents. I don't know why I got into drugs.

10. After your experience with Bret, how do you feel about marijuana's addictive nature?Marijuana is not strictly a recreational drug. Very few people who develop problems started with cocaine. More than likely they started with marijuana. Cocaine is the most possessive drug in the world, especially crack, and it is so available. I believe cocaine addiction is much worse than 11. In retrospect, would you have done anything differently? It is still a mystery to us. We look back and wonder what we could have done differently, but I don't know what it would be. We never stopped loving him and trying to help him. We did the typical family things. Bart was a good father. He spent quality time with Bret when he was home, and Bret absolutely adored his father. 12. What advice whould you offer parents? The lesson I learned is that no matter the situation, no matter how good you think your kids or your home life is, don't assume anything. By the time kids are old enough to enter school, parents should begin to warn them of the dangers of drugs. Every child out there is a candidate. This subject should be talked about openly at home. I know many parents probably have said, "Well, that would never happen to one of my kids." Let me tell you, if it can happen to us, it can happen to anybody. When the many, many people who knew the qualities of Bart realize that this can happen to good parents, I hope it wakes them up to begin the educational process at an early age. Bret was in so much pain. I wanted him to have a better lifestyle, but drugs destroyed his body. And the drug pushers are out there, even in the grade schools. My final advice I guess would be that in addition to loving your child, love them enough to warn them about the possible consequences of using drugs ONE time.

District 1-4A athletes did themselves proud. During the past season, the district crowned four state champions — Pampa in girls' track, Randall, boys' cross-country; Levelland, girls' basketball, and Dumas, volleyball. Did any other Texas' district have as many as four state champions? By ROGER MUNNS Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — It's Buddy Holly time again in northern Iowa, time to put aside modern day problems for people who remember when rock 'n' roll was young.

Some 2,000 18-year-olds trapped in middle-aged bodies, determined not to let the music die, will gather Feb. 3-4 at the Surf Ballroom in Clear Lake where Holly performed his last concert 30 years

"You can forget about the federal deficit, crime or whatever bothers people the rest of the year," said Darryl Hensley, who has taken the annual event from a money-losing spoof to a sold-out

"They got wife problems? Kid problems? They come here and they're 18 again, and they have no

ual Buddy Holly bash in northern Iowa sold out again

problems. And you know they want to come. Hey, this isn't Phoenix, Ariz, This is Clear Lake, Iowa, in winter," Hensley said.

As usual, all 1,600 tickets for the two-day event at the Surf have been sold for months. The other 400 tickets are controlled by the ballroom, a local radio station and Hensley, with many reserved for performers, press and security.

After their concert 30 years ago, Holly and fellow rockers J.P. "Big Bopper" Richardson and Ritchie Valens decided to fly to their next gig rather than take the tour bus.

Their small chartered airplane crashed into a frozen field shortly after takeoff. There were no Hensley, a radio personality who prefers to be known as the Mad Hatter, said there are no special plans for this year's concert. Holly's relatives have attended before, but none has accepted invitations

"There's no reason to change it or add anything. I got the right combination for the thing. People from 30 to 50 or 60, they're reliving 1959. Don McLean wrote that song ("American Pie") about the day the music died. I think he was premature. Buddy Holly is still living today, bigger and better than ever," the Hatter said.

On Feb. 3, the event begins with the Mad Hatter's Tea Party, an all-night sock hop featuring '50s and '60s favorites. The next night, Bobby Vee, the Diamonds and Freddy "Boom Boom" Cannon will recreate their hits, along with warm-up groups the Rockin' Ricochettes of Minneapolis and Bill Dewey and the Blazing Broncos of Clear Lake. The $45 ticket provides admission to both nights.

Bobby Vee took over Holly's scheduled appearance the night after the crash.

Hensley first hosted the concert as personality and owner of KZEV radio in Clear Lake, now owned by his ex-wife Diane Hensley.

"I was just doing a spoof on the radio show," he said. "I was brand new in Iowa, and I explained that we had built the studio by mistake in a time warp. Buddy and Elvis talked to me each morning. I used a couple of my alter ego voices. Buddy thought it was strange that nobody put on a concert in his memory, and Elvis said, 'Yeah, man, we got to do this for Buddy. "Then some guy from AP called and asked if I was really going to do it. So we did," he said. "It's been sold out every year, although I bought most of the tickets the first years. I lost my rear end in the beginning."

Hensley, who now lives in Burlington where he owns radio KDWD, said the event is primarily a promotion for KZEV.

Lewis: Prison bonds can be paid off early

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis, predicting the Legislature will approve building 11,000 new prison beds, says there may be a way to achieve early repayment of the construction bonds that worry some lawmakers.

Lewis said the Legislature could make prison bond repayment a first priority if the state's income grows.

"If the economy rebounds as we all anticipate that it will ... that surplus will go toward retiring those bonds," Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said.

"And if we do that, that would give us another plus as far as our bond rating. I think we would have no problem at all under those circumstances with a (prison) bond package," the speaker

Several lawmakers have expressed fears in recent days that Gov. Bill Clements' plan to expand prisons with $343 million in bonds would be a form of deficit financing. "I think probably it's only fair to say that bonding this kind of service stands as the chicken way out. We're saying that the 10,000 beds are not worth raising taxes for, but what we can do is sell bonds," said Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston.

"It's not just the bonds. It's the future liability," added Rep. Ric Williamson, D-Weatherford. "If we know there are alternatives that are more cost-effective, it's the fiscally responsible thing, it's the conservative thing to invest in those alternatives.

State Treasurer Ann Richards joined those voicing concern about the bonds.

Testifying to a House subcommittee, Richards said lawmakers should consider numerous alternative programs that would help reduce the rate of repeat offenders.

"I can't look the taxpayers of Texas straight in the eye and tell them that building more prisons is a cost-effective corrections strategy," said Richards, who is considering a bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

"We cannot build our way out of this mess. We cannot buy our way out. We are going to have to think our way out. We have to ask two important questions about any corrections strategy or program we propose: Does it work? How much does it cost?"

Richards stopped short of directly challenging Clements' plan, saying she wanted to tell lawmakers "that building these prison beds is a very costly business. And while it's easy to say we're going to issue bonds for $343 million, the real cost — depending on the life of the bonds is either going to be $700 million or $900 million" with financing costs added on.

Responding, Clements' aides defended the bonding plan as essential to expand an already overcrowded prison system.

"Bonding should be used very cautiously and very conservatively. Bonding is not used for day-to-day governmental expense, but certainly for prisons that are going to be used for many decades it's logical," said Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary.

He said the governor, who will deliver his state-of-the-state address this week will propose a number of prison "alternatives" to deal with the rising tide of crime. But Bashur said Clements believes the 11,000-bed construction program is needed now. "The state of Texas has not been engaged in prison construction for several years. This is an action to make up for that," he said.

Marines salute holiday correspond

DEAR ABBY: The cost of freedom is all too often measured by how high the national debt is, or how much the Defense Department spends, but for the record, the real cost of freedom doesn't involve money. It's the month after month, holiday after holiday, that service members around the globe spend separated from their loved ones. Most of these service members (average age 19) are away from home for the first time, yet they are prepared to go wherever their country sends them.

Through the readers of your column, we have received thousands of letters, photos, poems, Christmas cards, packages of cookies and children's drawings from wonderful people all over the United States. Their thoughtfulness is not taken lightly, as they conveyed the true meaning of Christmas: giving, and more important, the assurance that people back home really care. Abby, we want to thank you, and all of them:

To the woman from Omaha — the cookies were great!

To the mother from Tyler, Texas, who lost her only son in Vietnam and offered to adopt all servicemen — we accept!

4-H SPEAKS UP FOR BETTER COMMUNICATION

More effective communication may be one solution to closing, or at least narrowing, the generation gap.

4-H young people from 9 to 19 in the 4-H public speaking program are working to establish better rapport with adults — and with peers

Through learn-by-doing activities, these 4-H'ers become skilled and confident in presenting their ideas formally to an audience. As a result, they are better able to get their message across clearly and convincingly in informal, everyday situations.

The 4-H public speaking program teaches 4-H'ers to: Choose an interesting topic, research it thoroughly, organize carefully, then write an outline. — Speak clearly and loudly enough to be heard throughout the room and avoid nervous mannerisms

— Capture audience attention: open with an anecdote, startling statement or quotation.

— Cover no more than three to five main points in the body of the speech.

— Stick to the time limit. Close with a summary of major points and an effective quotation, surprise statement or appeal for ac-

To recognize the accomplishments of 4-H'ers, Union Oil Company offers medals of honor to outstanding members in each county and an expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago for each state winner.

Six national winners receive college scholarships.

Winners are selected by the Extension Service on the basis of their records of accomplishments, with special emphasis on growth and development in 4-H public speaking activities

The Gray County 4-H Council will hold a communication workshop Feb. 3-4 in the Gray County Annex. We will begin at 6:30 p.m. on Friday and finish about 8 a.m. on Saturday. This will be an excellent opportunity to sharpen your communication skills.

PINE TREE APHIDS

Normally, we don't see any tree insects during December and January. However, this season we do have scattered infestations of pine tree aphids.

The visual symptom is a shiny, honeydew appearance on the needles and limbs. Upon closer inspection, you can see the darkcolored aphids on small limbs. Apparently weather conditions have been right for a buildup of these aphids

Several insecticides are labeled and approved for aphid control, including melathion, diazinon and dursban. Try to pick a warm day for spraying as these insecticides are not very effective when temperatures are below 50 degrees.

ing and cooling is becoming a major concern.

Perhaps homeowners should once again take a look at possible solutions offered by nature.

We could keep our homes cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter with a lot less help from hardware. How? Often with common-sense landscaping.

Typically, our homes get hottest late on a summer afternoon. The sun has been shining all day, heating up the home's exterior and the ground around it.

Solution? Deciduous shade trees planted to the west of the house. These trees will shade your west windows and the western side of the home. They will also shade the ground and keep it from heating up.

Planting trees can lower the temperature around the home as much as 15 degrees on a hot summer day. They will also cut down on dust and noise, making it more pleasant to open windows for

During the winter, these trees will drop their leaves and allov the sun to shine through.

Winter's chilling winds and storms blow in out of the north and northwest. A thick planting of evergreens to the north and northwest can buffer these winds. In a Nebraska study, researchers found a windbreak of trees could reduce winter heating costs by as much as 30 percent. Winters in most of Texas are comparatively mild, yet our summers are long and hot. Major landscape concerns should concentrate on making the summer landscape more livable.

The dormant winter season is the ideal time for selecting and planting trees

Small, fast-growing trees such as red bud, Chinese tallow and river birch may be used in close areas near patios, drives and west walls and windows where immediate shade is desired. Large trees such as oak and pecan are slower growing and require time to form needed shade. The combination of large and small deciduous trees is the best landscape solution. In Texas, most of the cooling summer breezes come from a southern direction. If you want to take advantage of this cooling airflow, do not block its path.

Now, during the winter season, is the time to plan for and plant trees for summer shade and to consider natural cooling effects. Perhaps open windows and swings on screened porches shaded by Texas trees will once again become popular and comfortable in Texas.

Conventional cooktops offer a very quick heating and cool-down and are the least expensive type of electric cooktop. However, cleanup after spills is difficult.

under a solid, cast iron disk. Each disk is sealed in place on a porcelain or tempered glass range surface. Spills flow onto a cool area of the range and do not cook on.

The cast iron disk covering the element is relatively heavy and is slow to heat up or to cool down. Cast iron is also subject to rust and may need treatment.

Most solid element types do not get as hot as coil elements. Cookware must be flat on the bottom to provide even, efficient heating. There are three solid element types: protected — automatic heat cutoff when 900 degrees F. is reached; unprotected — slow start-up heating and cool-down because it does not have an automatic cutoff; and thermostatically controlled — a temperature setting is selected and the element provides full power until that temperature is reached. Then the heat cycles off and on to maintain the temperature.

Induction Glass Ceramic Cooktops. The cooking utensil itself conducts heat to the food. An induction coil beneath each cooking area creates an electromagnetic field above the surface of the cooktop. When a utensil of magnetic material such as steel or iron is placed in this field, an electric current flows through it, producing heat.

The cooktop surface is heated only by conduction of heat from the pan. The surface will never get hot enough to burn spills on. Turning a control up or down immediately changes the heat produced so there is no start-up or cool-down delay. When a pan is removed from a cooking unit. heating stops.

Halogen Glass Ceramic Cooktops. A Halogen heating element with a reflector beneath the filaments directs heat through a glass ceramic cooktop surface.

This method of heating is very responsive to changes in control settings and offers fast start-up, heating and cool-down. The cooktop will be easy to clean unless spills are burned on. Flat-bottom utensils are important for even heating.

■ Radiant Heat Cooktops. Like induction cooking, radiant heat concentrates energy directly in pots and pans. But it utilizes a new type of glass cooktop surface which allows more of the energy to go into the utensil for faster response and a cooler cooktop.

This unit provides fast heat-up. In addition to speed cooking operations like boiling and frying, the radiant module will work well with pan bottoms which are not entirely smooth.

■ Gas Cooktops. Gas units are known for their reliability, flexibility and instant, even heat. Gas units are also generally more economical to operate than electric ones.

Pilotless ignition systems reduce the gas needed for cooking by 40 percent and keep the kitchen cooler. Thermostatically controlled units are also available. Flat-bottomed pans are necessary to activate.

The program features Larry White and J.F. Cadenhead, both Extension range management specialists. They will be discussing the benefits from long-range ranch planning and how this can impact future profitability of an operation.

They will also be discussing a few short-term practices that can offer more immediate benefit.

The topic of rangeland weed control — primarily Goldmaster — will be discussed by myself. I will be presenting the results of over 10 years of demonstration work in the area on Goldmaster control and the economic be-

CLAYTON YEUTTER

What will be the outlook for agriculture under the leadership of Agriculture Secretary Designate Clayton Yeutter?

According to an economist in marketing and policy with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Yeutter may well be in the most qualified position for Secretary of Agriculture in the 126-year history of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Ron Knutson said Yeutter has a background in Nebraska beef farming, with a Ph.D in agricultural economics and a law degree, both from the University of

"This orientation toward Midwest agriculture was a desirable political stroke for a Bush administration which lost the Iowa primary vote to U.S. Sen. Robert Dole," Knutson said.

Knutson said, "Yeutter also is well-wired politically, having served as executive assistant to the governor of Nebraska in the 1960s, a member of the Committee to Re-elect President Nixon. and in two previous USDA posts."

He said Yeutter's past experience as the administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Service and assistant secretary in charge of marketing and nutrition programs makes the secretary designate knowledgeable of the interworkings of the USDA.

"Yeutter also carries private sector experience, having served on the board of several agribusiness firms and as chief executive officer of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The letter position provided firsthand experience with the may factors that determine farm prices," Knutson said.

He said Yeutter's strongest asset — and political liability includes his eight years of service to President Reagan as the U.S. trade representative.

"This position, located in the Executive Office of the President, is the key trade policy officer in government. As trade representative, Yeutter has spent a major share of his time preparing for and leading GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) negotiations," Knutson

The economist said Yeutter has been the major factor in framing the U.S.-GATT negotiating strategy of giving up our farm subsidies if the rest of the world, particularly the European Community and Japan, are willing to do likewise.

"It is this free trade stance that could be viewed as either an asset or a liability," Knutson said.

He said some producer commodity groups, such as cotton. dairy, beef and peanuts, have serious reservations about the ability of their producers to compete under free trade conditions.

Knutson said that in any event, Yeutter's former trade representative slot likely will make USDA's role in the trade negotiations stronger than they have been in the past.

"Yeutter's other major challenge could be sorting out the appropriate Bush administration position on the 1990 farm bill, while the GATT negotiations are proceeding.

"The relatively high subsidy levels of the 1985 farm bill placed the U.S.-GATT negotiations (Yeutter) in a strong position to bargain for multilateral concessions on the part of other countries such as the EC and Japan." Knutson said.

He said that, in other words, the U.S. carried a big stick into the agricultural negotiations.

'The price for the United States of the 1985 farm bill was farm program expenditures that, at times, exceeded $20 billion annually," Knutson said.

Some Bush administration spokespersons desire to make substantial outs in farm program spending. Knutson said that such unilateral cuts would undermine the GATT negotiating strategy supported by the 1985 farm bill.

Joe VanZandt Research: No-tillage can slow erosion

search with several cropping systems promises to alleviate wind and water erosion in the two areas of Texas where the problems are the most severe.

So said Dr. Allen Wiese, weed scientist from Texas, during a notillage symposium on Jan. 15 at the Southern Weed Science Society meeting in Nashville, Tenn.

The 1000 member society held its 51st annual meeting to discuss weeds and how to control them.

Wiese, who has conducted research for over 30 years at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Bushland, said, "Notillage systems not only control erosion but are more profitable than conventional tillage.'

During his presentation, Wiese described research from Temple and College Station in central Texas where water erosion is a problem, and from the High Plains at Lubbock and Amarillo where wind erosion is severe.

Drs. Mike Chandler, Tom Gerik and John Morrison are using a team approach to develop no-tillage systems for the Blacklands at the USDA Research Laboratory near Temple.

Johnsongrass is the most serious weed in this area and all attempts to develop no-tillage systems failed until Chandler devised successful controls.

Using a three-year sorghumcotton-winter wheat rotation, Johnsongrass was controlled by spraying Roundup in the fall along with a persistent herbicide to control winter annual weeds. Atrazine was used with Roundup in the fall when sorghum was the next crop. Surflan was mixed with Caparol when cotton followed in the rotation.

The next spring, paraquat or Roundup was used to control both Johnsongrass and annual weeds. A tank mix of propazine and Dual was sprayed preemergence in sorghum, and Caparol mixed

BUSHLAND — No-tillage re- with Dual was used preemerg- 2,4-D and Dalapon were the only ence to control annual weeds in cotton. At College Station, Dr. Frank Hons compared yield of soybean using conventional tillage and notillage in three rotations. Tillage did not affect soybean yield in sorghum-wheat-soybean or wheat-soybean rotations. Conventional tillage gave the highest yield in continuous soybean. Drs. Wayne Keeling and John Abernathy developed several profitable no-tillage systems for cotton at the Texas A&M Research Center at Lubbock in the southern High Plains.

Conventional and no-tillage were compared in continuous cotton, and no-tillage was used in terminated wheat-cotton, sorghum-cotton, wheat-fallowcotton, and fallow-cotton rotations. The rotations were evaluated under both dryland and irrigated conditions.

In 1987, irrigated continuous cotton produced about 800 pounds per acre of lint with either tillage system, according to Keeling. When no-tillage cotton was produced in a field of wheat killed with Roundup, or in sorghumcotton and wheat-fallow-cotton rotations, yields were 150 to 200 pounds per acre more than with continuous cotton. The fallowcotton rotation produced low yield.

With dryland, continuous cotton produced without tillage yielded 800 pounds of lint per acre, which was 140 pounds per acre more than conventional tillage. The three no-tillage rotations produced the same as notillage continuous cotton.

Keeling said, "The cropping systems that yielded most were the most profitable.'

No-tillage research was started on the northern High Plains of Texas about 30 years ago at the USDA Research Laboratory near Bushland when herbicides available.

According to Wiese, yield with no-tillage was as good as with sweep plowing when weeds were controlled. "However, until better herbicides like atrazine, propazine, paraquat and Roundup came along, weeds were seldom controlled," Wiese said.

After about 10 years, Wiese was joined by Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Economist Wyatte Harmon and USDA coworkers Dr. Paul Unger, Ron Allen, Reggie Jones and Jack Musick

Together this team developed practical no-tillage systems for wheat-wheat, wheat-double crop sorghum, wheat-fallowsorghum, sorghum-fallowwheat, wheat-fallow-wheat, wheat-fallow-cotton, cottonfallow-wheat, and two-year rotations of irrigated wheat-fallowdryland sorghum, and irrigated barley-fallow-dryland cotton.

In addition, they determined the effect of crop mulch on soil water conservation. Two tons of wheat straw mulch per acre on the soil surface increased soil water storage about three inches during an 11-month fallow period.

This in turn increased sorghum yield 1000 pounds per acre and cotton lint 100 pounds per acre. After making economic analyses of the two systems, Harmon said, "No-tillage increased long-term profits over conventional tillage by $100 per acre for sorghum and $80 per acre for cotton."

Wiese concluded his presentation by pointing out that research in Texas for 30 years has resulted in many no-tillage cropping systems that control erosion. In addition, the new systems are more profitable than convention-

Milk output to edge higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dairy farmers are still feeling cost effects of last year's drought, but Agriculture Department analysts say 1989 milk output could still edge higher to another

"Drought-caused increases in feed costs probably will have some effect on milk output in the first half, but 1989 milk production is likely to total about the same or slightly higher than the year before," the department's Economic Research Service

Milk production rose to a record level of 145.3 billion pounds in 1988, due entirely to a boost of almost 3 percent in milk output per cow. The number of cows declined by 1 percent to a record low average of 10.2 million head during the year.

'Any production rises should be easily absorbed by a 1 percent to 3 percent rise in commercial use," the report said. "Government purchases probably will decline to 5 billion to 7 billion pounds, milk equivalent, from 8.8 billion in 1988."

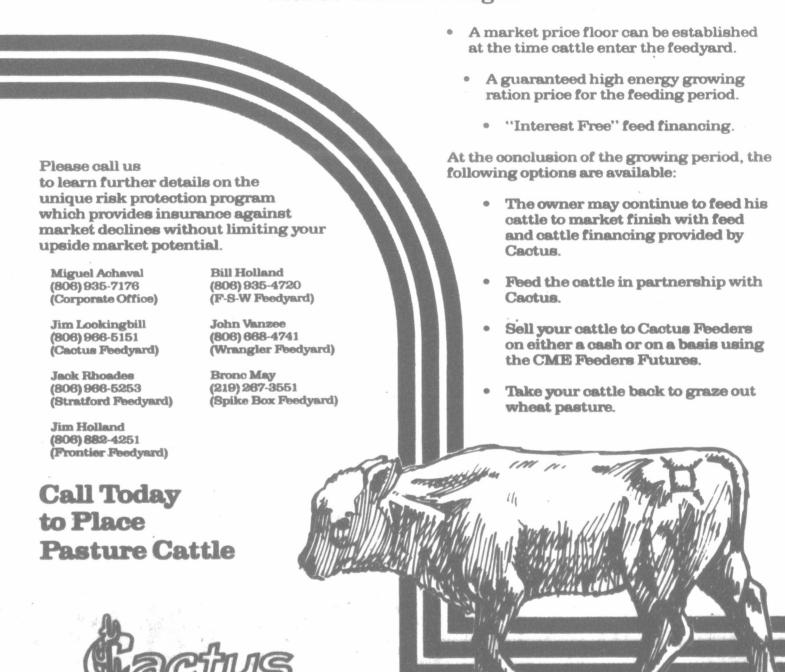

The department buys surplus cheese, butter and non-fat dry milk to support the price of milk paid to farmers by dealers.

Retail dairy prices rose in December and are higher than they have been in recent years at this time, the report said. Over all of 1989, retail prices of dairy products are expected to gain an average of 2 percent to 4 percent, compared with last year's 2 percent

"A late-1988 surge in domestic commercial use of milk and dairy products is combining with a vigorous export demand for nonfat dry milk to create strong dairy markets in early 1989," the

"Buddy wrote and wanted his music to be received in a positive way and for people to enjoy it and for people to be inspired by his music and his determination to make it out there," says Mrs. Holly, 57.

"And that's where I come in with the youngsters. I feel that through the letters, it has done that. Anything that is a positive thing received from Buddy Holly's music, it makes me happy. It pushes me out there to continue putting his name out there and keep it there."

But she's not making Holly available to the public without some personal benefit.

In 1987, Mrs. Holly successfully lobbied Texas lawmakers to approve legislation giving her full rights to Holly's name, voice,

Not only does the law keep Holly's name and face off beer cans, as one entrepreneur proposed, but it also allows her to profit from the Buddy Holly music boxes, posters and T-shirts that

Besides a few posthumously bestowed music awards and a few photos of Holly, Mrs. Holly keeps his Gibson J-200 acoustic guitar and his black, plasticframe glasses. The glasses were found long after the crash, stored in an Iowa sheriff's files.

Holly's Fender Stratocaster and other belongings are in Lubbock with his family, which is negotiating with Mrs. Holly to divide the items.

Mrs. Holly, who said she believes a person's spirit "stays around" after death, said she can feel and sometimes see Holly in her home.

She partly blames Clovis, N.M., producer Norman Petty for Holly's death. The late Petty first recorded Holly's hits "That'll Be The Day" and "Maybe Baby."

Petty hoarded Holly's money, Mrs. Holly says, and Holly performed at the ill-fated Winter Dance Tour at the Surf Club in Iowa partly because they needed money

The four awardees and seven finalists included activists from South Africa, Cambodia, Chile and the United States.

"For me it was a very beautiful acknowledgment. It was like a dream. I felt very proud, and very happy," she said.

Daniel A. Katz, the former Proyecto associate director who nominated her for the prize, said her life is an example for all. "She's an example of very selfless concern for individual rights combined with a broad understanding of how the human rights of a single person affect the rights of all," Katz said.

Katz said there were countless detainees, especially women, who relied on her legal, as well as personal and emotional, support while they were imprisoned.

Rodriguez said she certainly can empathize with refugees, specially those from El Salva-people. Her family fled El Salvador when her brother-in-law, a trade union leader, was captured and held for several days. Only the outcry of the labor unions from around the world saved him from being tortured and from later disappearing, she said.

'What many people don't understand is that we have a war, a huge danger in (El Salvador), and growing repression against the civilian population," she said.

Her brother-in-law's union had organized a strike, demanding better wages and benefits, she said. "But to do this in El Salvador is to be called a terrorist. It's ridiculous, because I think every human being has the right to want to improve themselves."

Rodriguez and her family fled to Mexico, and her brother found political asylum in Canada. Though she only had a ninthgrade education, she began working at Proyecto as a paralegal in

Brubeck joins in Big Band Hit Parade

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

"The Cincinnati Symphony has a long history of playing music that they call pops," says jazz pianist Dave Brubeck. "They've been exposed to playing with all kinds of artists, where they had to have a feeling of playing with a jazz beat.

So Brubeck agreed when Cincinnati Pops conductor Erich Kunzel asked him to participate on a Big Band Hit Parade recording. After a brief rehearsal, guest soloists and the Pops performed the music in an outdoor concert one August night and recorded it the next day at Cincinnati's

"There were 11,000 people there," says Brubeck. "It was about 120 degrees on the bandstand. (Clarinetist) Eddie Daniels was in sandals. We were wringing wet. Cab (Calloway) was magnificent. He was doing the moonwalk. Everything went just wonderfully.

'The orchestra can swing, and (bassist) Ray Brown and (drummer) Ed Shaughnessy certainly helped make them swing. Symphonies usually have a high-note trumpet man. Certain symphony guys don't want to hurt their lips and play above a high C or D. Doc Severinsen is so phenomenal. Yet they pulled out a guy from the trumpet section to do a duet with "Orchestras that we (the Dave Brubeck Quartet) play with are more and more to the point where you don't have to worry that they only have a legit background. More and more orchestras are hiring people with both backgrounds.'

The Big Band Hit Parade is on Telarc Records. Brubeck plays on "Take the A Train," the Ellington Band theme song, and When the Saints Go Marchin' In." Severinsen, Daniels and baritone saxophonist Gerry Mulligan are on Glenn Miller's "In the Mood." Trombonist Buddy Morrow plays on "Sentimental Journey," the Les Brown hit. Calloway sings "St. James Infirmary." Of the 16 Swing Era tunes, Tommy Dorsey's "Well, Git It!" is probably the least familiar today. Brubeck and Kunzel go back to 968. Brubeck says first pops concert. He was assistant to music director Max Rudolf. Max wanted him to do pops concerts and he asked me and I said sure

"While he was at my house talking about the concert he saw all this music on my piano. He said, 'What's this?' and I said, 'I don't think you'd be interested in that. It has nothing to do with pops concerts.' It was 'The Light in the Wilderness,' my first sacred piece, in progress. He said, 'When you finish this, I want to do it with the Cincinnati Symphony.

"We did it first with organ and percussion, and a few weeks later we did it in Cincinnati with Erich, with 500 people in the ecumenical chorus behind the orchestra and 100 in a choir from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. I played piano. Time magazine reviewed the performance with organ and percussion and called it 'a minor masterpiece.'

Brubeck was asked by Rabbi

Brubeck

Charles Mintz to do a piece based on the Old Testament prophets and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. for an ecumenical conference in Cincinnati. It was called The Gates of Justice. "Since King's birthday started being observed," says Brubeck, 'we've been performing it a lot.'

The piece "was commissioned at a time when there were difficulties between the Jewish and black communities. My assignment was to show the similarities between these two peoples, that they had both been slaves, they had both been dispersed and persecuted all over the world. The King message is so 'Old Testament.' I used his 'We must live together as brothers or die together as fools.' Isn't that beautiful?'

Brubeck, who was 68 in December, has composed nine sacred works. The newest is Lenten Triptych. The one performed most often is La Fiesta de la Posada, a Christmas choral pageant. The St. Paul Chamber Orchestra recorded it for Columbia. The longest is The Voice of the Holy Spirit, about the time after the Resurrection.

Brubeck has made four recordings with Kunzel and the Cincinnati Symphony. His newest record is Moscow Night on Concord Jazz. "It's from the TV show we did in Moscow in 1987," he says. "The whole 2-hour 15-minute sound track was made available. Russia is putting it out as a joint venture with the U.S. Theirs is on Melodya.

The current Dave Brubeck Quartet includes Bill Smith, who played clarinet in Brubeck's octet in 1946; son Chris Brubeck, bass and trombone: and Randy Jones, drums. "We're traveling more, I think. We're going all over. Jazz is still the most that we do. Fifty percent of the year is the jazz quartet. Ballet and sacred music and playing with symphonies make up the other 50 per-Adds Brubeck: "We play what they ask for. We played Elementals (which Brubeck composed for jazz band and symphony) with Leonard Bernstein at the Brandenburg Gate. With the Scottish National Orchestra we played one night of pops and the next night we did the Mass, To Hope! A Celebration."

Son Darius Brubeck has been teaching for six years and has an integrated group, Klosa Tribe, in South Africa. "They're Zulu, Africaner, English, Indian. Alan Paton's grandson, Rick, plays soprano sax. If you don't think this makes a statement before you blow a note! Their music is a mixture of township and jazz. I listened to his new record three times last night."

Danny Brubeck, who has lived near Woodstock, N.Y., for 10 years, has two groups: the Digital Dolphins, fusion, and the Brubeck-La Verne Trio with Andy La Verne and Chris Brubeck "I just recorded with Danny," Brubeck says. "He said, 'Come up and record with me. I'll hire the studio. I just want to get you on record.' I said, 'That's a nice compliment. I'll be right up.' It's mostly things I'd written with Danny and Chris. We don't know who'll take it. Somebody will graduate in cello, lives in San Francisco and is on call with five symphonies in the area. Brubeck says: "My daughter, Catherine, raises Elana Joy Yaghsizian, her daughter. She quit playing music. Good for her. She's being a great mother. Michael trains horses and plays piano.'

Brubeck has five grandchildren. Brubeck and his wife recently finished words to "Blue Rondo a la Turk," a Brubeck tune that was released on record in 1959 with Paul Desmond's "Take Five." The Dale Warland Singers are premiering it in February in Minneapolis.

There is also a version with words by Al Jarreau, which Jarreau performed, earning him a Grammy. Brubeck says: "Bette Midler's words to it were wonderful. Hers never came out: I wish it would. There's one about Christmas shopping and traffic. And there's a great version in France by Claude Nurago about a robber being chased by police. Mine deals with me on the street
