Court upholds some drug tests

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in its first decision on testing for drug and alcohol abuse in the American workplace, ruled today that some workers in sensitive government jobs and some entrusted with public safety may be forced to undergo such tests.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices upheld mandatory blood and urine tests for railroad workers involved in accidents. By a separate 5-4 vote, they upheld urine tests for U.S. Customs Service employees seeking drug-enforcement jobs.

The court said tests for the railway and Customs Service workers do not violate privacy rights, even when there is no evidence in advance of individual drug or alcohol abuse.

The rulings do not directly affect private employment, although the decisions likely will encourage private employers who impose or plan to impose such tests. Today's rulings also do not deal directly with random drug tests.

In the railway workers case, Justice

Anthony M. Kennedy said for the court, "The government interest in testing without a showing of individual suspicion is compelling. Employees subject to the tests discharge duties fraught with such risks of injury to others that even a momentary lapse of attention can have disastrous consequences."

In his opinion for the court in the Customs Service case, Kennedy said the nation's fight against drug smuggling demands that customs workers be healthy and not likely to be bribed by offers of money or drugs.

"The government has a compelling interest in ensuring that front-line interdiction personnel are physically fit and have unimpeachable integrity and judgment," he said. "This national interest in self-protection could be irreparably damaged if those charged with safeguarding it were, because of their own drug use, unsympathetic to their mission of interdicting narcotics."

Joining Kennedy in upholding the tests for the railway workers were Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and John Paul Stevens.

Justices Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan dissented.

In the Customs Service case, Marshall and Brennan were joined in dissent by Scalia and Stevens.

Marshall, in a dissenting opinion in the railway workers case, accused the court of being "shortsighted" in allowing "basic constitutional rights to fall prey to momentary emergencies."

"History teaches that grave threats to liberty often come in times of urgency when constitutional rights seem too extravagant to endure," he said.

Scalia, in his dissenting opinion in the Customs Service ruling, said there is a crucial distinction between the tests for that agency's workers and those involved in rail accidents.

"The demonstrated frequency of drug and alcohol use" by railway workers "and the demonstrated connection between such use and grave harm" makes those tests reasonable, he said.

By contrast, Scalia continued, the evidence to support the tests for Customs Service employees is lacking.

"The Customs Service rules are a kind of immolation of privacy and human dignity in symbolic opposition to drug use," he said.

Shadows of Pampa High School students stretch across the glistening snow that fell Monday night.

You can tell it's spring by snow on the ground

From Staff and Wire Reports

It's springtime in Texas. There's no doubt about it.

Snow in the Panhandle, sleet in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, hail around the state and thunderstorms scattered over the state are all sure indications that it's spring in Texas.

Gray skies, chilling winds and the first real snowfall since December welcomed Pampa area residents Monday as spring made its lackluster debut.

Monday's high was 43 in Pampa, reached early in the morning before the cold front swept through the area and dropped temperatures below freezing by mid-morning.

The snow arrived in the evening, bringing 2 inches of accumulation. But the snow cover brought little moisture to the dry fields, yielding only 0.12 inch of moisture content.

Pampa's forecast calls for clear and cold tonight with a low of 22 and south winds at 5 to 15 mph. Wednesday will be mostly sunny and warmer with a high near 60 and southwest winds at 10 to 20 mph.

Elsewhere in the state, forecasts called for the possibility of some sleet in the Dallas-Fort Worth area today, one day after the mercury hit the 83-degree mark on Monday.

Snow fell during the night and early today across the Panhandle, extending eastward into the Wichita Falls area. Snow flurries were reported at dawn in Lubbock and light snow fell at the same time in Midland.

A winter storm warning was in effect for the southern portion of the Panhandle as fast moving winter storm brought snow, blowing snow and cold temperatures into the area. Amarillo reported 4 inches of snow on the ground this morning.

Snow began falling in the area just west of Wichita Falls about 2 a.m. today and was spreading rapidly eastward, forecasters said.

A winter weather advisory was in effect for western portions of North Texas. The area included in the advisory is west of a line from Montague to Palo Pinto to Lampasas.

Forecasters warned of the possibility of one to two inches of snow in Abilene, Coleman and Brady and of one inch of snow in Wichita Falls, Jacksboro and Throckmorton.

Golf-ball size hail was reported during the night at Seguin in South Central Texas and dime-size hail fell at Lorena.

Thunderstorms were widespread across North Texas and the eastern portions of the Concho Valley at dawn today.

Forecasts called for decreasing cloudiness and cold across West Texas tonight with warmer temperatures expected Wednesday. Southern and eastern sections of North Texas may get some sleet tonight. A few snow flurries are possible in the Hill Country tonight while the rest of South Texas will have showers and thunderstorms along with windy conditions and much colder temperatures.

Lows tonight will be in the mid 20s and low 30s over most of West Texas except in the Big Bend area where readings will be in the 40s.

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half the country's school systems have failed to meet a federal deadline to inspect school buildings for cancer-causing asbestos and develop cleanup programs, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

The EPA said that as many as 21 percent of the public school districts and private schools nationwide already are in technical violation of the 1986 asbestos cleanup law and could be fined as much as $5,000 a day if they do not come into compliance.

Many others obtained extensions, but those run out next May.

Congress in 1986 required all school buildings to be examined by EPA-approved inspectors and school officials were supposed to submit formal cleanup plans to state authorities by October 1988.

Only about 40 percent of the school officials nationwide met the October deadline, according to information provided by the states to the EPA.

Another 39 percent avoided violating the federal law by receiving an extension from state officials, but must finish inspections and submit cleanup programs by next May or be in violation of the law, officials said.

The figures released Monday by the EPA provided the first indication of how well public and private schools are handling the asbestos problem, which raised widespread concern several years ago and prompted Congress to order inspections and cleanup efforts across the country.

Asbestos, which was used for years as an insulating material, later was found capable of causing chronic lung disease and various forms of cancer when its microscopic fibers are inhaled.

The 1986 federal law requires schools to hire inspectors approved by the EPA to determine if there is an asbestos danger in school buildings and, if there is, to submit to state officials a detailed cleanup program.

Even if the school officials that received official extensions are counted as being in compliance with the federal law, performance is uneven from state to state.

In 10 states, better than 95 percent of the public school systems and private schools either met last October's federal deadline or received an official extension until May. But in six other states, fewer than 60 percent were in compliance.

The agency provided no state-by-state breakdown on how many school systems actually met the October deadline.

Although the EPA also had no complete figures breaking down compliance rates between public and private schools, a spokeswoman said that generally the public school districts have a much better compliance record.

For example, in Connecticut, New Jersey and Virginia, more than 90 percent of the public school systems were in compliance, compared to only about half of the private schools.

EPA spokeswoman Alicia Tenute said the agency had received no information from the states on how many of the school systems that had been granted extensions are expected to meet the May deadline.

Under the 1986 federal law, school officials are supposed to have asbestos cleanup efforts under way by this July.

He's the only one without a secret ballot

ATLANTA (AP) — There's no such thing as a secret ballot when Walter Johnson goes into the voting booth.

He's the only voter in his precinct, so when election workers tally Precinct 5J it's all Johnson.

"I knew I was the only one on that book, but I didn't know why it was like that," said Johnson, 66.

"Unfortunately we are not able to ensure him a secret ballot," said Mac Dennis, director of registration and elections for Fulton County. "Anyone can get the precinct results."

Dennis said county officials have been unsuccessful in trying to get lawmakers to readjust the lines, but Johnson may get a secret ballot soon.

"We're going to realign some of the precincts this summer for the 1990 census so we don't split a piece of geography off into small precincts like that," said Linda Meggars, director of reapportionment services for the state.

Continental attendants have trouble getting support for strike

By JEFF AWALT
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A union claiming to represent 6,800 Continental Airlines flight attendants today enters its second day of a strike against the Houston-based carrier, an action that so far has had little apparent effect on airline operations.

The strike called by the Union of Flight Attendants was announced suddenly Monday morning against the sister carrier of strikebound Eastern Airlines, catching many of Continental's flight attendants by surprise and drawing few away from their jobs.

As of Monday afternoon, only 35 attendants were participating in the walkout and would be "permanently replaced," said Lewis Jordan, executive vice president and chief operating officer of the airline. No flights had been canceled due to labor problems, he said.

However, union President Carla Winkler said she believes that could change as more attendants become aware of the strike and have time to consider their options.

"People are just now finding out about it. We haven't even gotten pickets set up in every city yet," Winkler said during a Monday afternoon news conference.

"I'm sure there may be cancellations and there may be delays," she predicted. "If we shut down flights, that will be to our advantage to resolve this ... but I doubt we'll be shutting down the airline."

The union is striking despite what Continental officials described as a $19 million wage and fringe benefit increase that took effect Jan. 1, and which the airline said brought attendants' salaries in line with "comparable industry rates."

The union, which has not had a contract with Continental since the carrier filed for bankruptcy protection in 1983, has been seeking a three-year deal that would boost the lower end of a salary scale by 5 percent and the upper end of the scale by up to 35 percent.

A Continental spokesman said the carrier had plenty of reserve flight attendants ready to replace any striking workers, and Winkler said she understood that some replacements already were being called in by the airline.

She rejected the idea that striking workers will lose their jobs. "I've been 'permanently replaced' three times, and I'm still here," she said.

About 10 Continental attendants set up picket lines at the carrier's main Houston hub shortly after 9 a.m. Monday, and numerous others walked past their striking colleagues and pledged to continue working. Other major Continental hubs had fewer pickets, including two at Denver's Stapleton Airport.

Airline officials said only about 5 percent of Continental's attendants, which they numbered at 6,500, are members of the union, and while Winkler discounted the percentage as too low, she declined to provide a number.

Some union officials said the strike, which was approved last November but delayed by promises of more negotiations, was not linked to the ongoing Machinists strike at Eastern Airlines. Others, however, said the timing was designed for maximum exposure while Eastern's labor problems are receiving heavy media coverage.

Both Eastern and Continental are owned by Houston-based Texas Air Corp.

"This is not like most other strikes where you go out and you don't come back until you get a contract," said attendant Barry J. Liss. "This is a strike designed to attract the attention of passengers and the public at large that we are dissatisfied with our working conditions."

Several flight attendants, including Liss, said Monday they understood that the walkout was authorized by the union for only 96 hours, ending Thursday, and that an extension would require a vote of all union members. That task, said one, would take at least a week.

But Winkler said the attendants would continue their walkout as long as necessary and that a deadline had not been set. Asked why others were using the figure, she replied: "I'm not going to divulge strategy or internal matters of the union."

Most attendants at Intercontinental on Monday said they planned to continue working, and those who would discuss their motives said the decision came down to money.

"I have bills to pay and I have things to take care of, and I have to have income to do that," said one flight attendant. "If I'm out there on the (picket) line, I'm not going to have income."

Spurrier to seek Ward 1 post

Dolores Spurrier, a Pampa businesswoman, has decided to run for the Ward 1 City Commission post currently held by Ray Hupp.

Spurrier

Spurrier said her decision to run was based on the conviction that it is time for a change in leadership on the commission.

"The industrial foundation has been in effect for some time now and there are no definite prospects for Pampa," Spurrier said. "I believe it is extremely important to bring new business to Pampa, but I also believe that businesses already here need help."

She said she does not think the current commission is representing all citizens fairly.

"When people talk, the commission should at least have the courtesy to listen," she said. "When petitions are brought to them they must respond, not turn their backs on issues with which they do not agree. I know how to listen and will do my best to represent all citizens to the best of my ability."

She noted that in Amarillo the industrial foundation was put into effect one day and "they have a business signed the next day that will employ 250 people."

Spurrier also defended dissenting attitudes on the current commission and said they do not represent negative attitudes, but rather that everyone is entitled to their own opinions.

She and her husband Pete own One Hour Photo. Spurrier was recently named to the board of directors of the Hobart Street Merchants Association.

Among the credentials the 54-year-old candidate lists are secretary/treasurer for the Lone Star Squares and treasurer for the Top O' Texas Kennel Club, as well as working "in the background" on several campaigns in the past.

Incumbent Ward 1 Commissioner Hupp has also filed to re-see the position. Also filing to run for city office have been incumbent David McDaniel and Ward 2 Commissioner Richard Peet for the position of mayor.

Incumbent Joe Reed has filed to run again for his Ward 3 seat. Through press time today he was unopposed.

In the school board races, two places are up for a vote. Incumbents Jim Duggan and Sherry McCavit were both still running unopposed through press time today.

The deadline for filing for a City Commission race is 5 p.m. Wednesday, with the deadline for a school board race set for 4:30 p.m. Wednesday. By state law, no filings can be accepted after that time, according to city and school officials.

Filing for a City Commission race must be done through the city secretary's office at City Hall.

To file for a school board race, a candidate must file through the business office at the district's administrative offices in Carver Center.

Consumer prices rise moderately

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, despite a huge jump in gasoline costs, rose a moderate 0.4 percent in February, the government said today in a report that helped calm inflation fears that had gripped financial markets.

The boost in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index followed a 0.6 percent January increase that had been the largest monthly advance in two years.

Despite the moderation in February, consumer prices in the past two months have risen at a compound annual rate of 6.1 percent, sharply higher than the 4.4 percent increase turned in for both 1987 and 1988.

That acceleration has economists worried that inflation, which has been tamed for the past seven years, is starting to get out of control again.

Financial markets, however, took today's report on consumer prices more calmly than they did last Friday after the government reported that inflation at the wholesale level shot up by 1 percent in February.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose by more than 14 points in the first half-hour of trading today, with advancing stocks outnumbering losers by a 4-1 margin. It remained in plus territory later in the morning. Some economists said the report on consumer prices showed that while inflation will be higher this year, the country is not in danger of entering another inflationary spiral.

"There is evidence that the jump in food prices resulting from last year's drought is now tapering off and energy prices are unlikely to go higher," said Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers. "Fears of inflation accelerating out of control appear to be premature."

Glenn Forman, an economist for the WEFA Group, an economic consulting firm, said retail prices will be climbing higher in coming months as the increases at the wholesale level flow through to consumers.

"Inflation has ratcheted up a notch, but it hasn't moved into the inflationary spiral that a number of people were concerned about," Forman said.

The consumer price increase last month was held back by a better performance for food costs, which advanced by 0.5 percent in February, down from a 0.7 percent gain a month earlier.

However, gasoline costs shot up by 1.7 percent last month, the biggest increase since a 1.8 percent rise last August.

Economists were braced for even sharper price advances in coming months as the effects of recent rises in world oil prices filter through to motorists. Crude oil prices, reflecting the success of petroleum producers to restrain output, have risen to a 17-month high of $20 per barrel.

The slight moderation in food costs reflected price declines for poultry, fish and eggs and smaller increases than in January for beef and pork prices.

Beef prices rose by 0.5 percent, following a 1.2 percent January increase, while pork prices rose 0.4 percent, after also being up 1.2 percent in January.

Labor Department price economist Patrick Jackman said meat prices would probably continue to rise for several more months, reflecting the herd reductions that occurred last summer during the severe drought.

But Jackman said the drought's impact on other food costs has already passed through to consumers, with further increases not expected.

Also helping to hold back consumer prices in February was a 0.2 percent dip in clothing costs, as a 0.7 percent drop for men's apparel offset a 0.9 percent jump for women's garments and a 2.8 percent increase in infants' clothes.

DPS troopers arrest two for selling drugs

SHAMROCK — Department of Public Safety troopers arrested two men suspected of selling drugs at truck stops along Interstate 40 and also recovered 39 grams of cocaine valued at $4,000 after stopping the suspects' vehicle near Shamrock Sunday.

Earlier that day, Amarillo authorities had received a report that someone was selling narcotics at a service station in Amarillo, said Donna Brown of the Pampa DPS office.

Officers received a consent to search and, after checking the suspects' vehicle, found no drugs. However, she said, the driver said he could not find a key to the vehicle's trunk, so the trunk could not be opened.

Later that day, Amarillo authorities received a report that the suspects were again selling narcotics at a service station and the trunk lid of the car was open, Brown said.

Acting on a report of the incident, Shamrock DPS Trooper Kevin King, assisted by Trooper John Waite, stopped the suspect vehicle at the T&M Truck Stop, 10 miles west of Shamrock, at about 11:20 p.m. Sunday, she said.

After receiving a consent to search, the officers discovered 39 grams of cocaine, valued at $4,000, in the trunk, Brown said.

Two men traveling in the vehicle were taken into custody at the scene and placed in Wheeler County Jail. Names of the two men were not released on the teletype sent out by the Shamrock DPS office, Brown said.

Trooper King was not available for comment by press time today.

Cholesterol tests missing children

By LEE SIEGEL AP Science Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Guidelines spelling out who should get cholesterol tests fail to identify two-thirds of children who really have unhealthy amounts of the fatty substance in their blood, a study suggests.

The findings bolster arguments that all youngsters should be tested to determine which face an increased risk of heart disease, said Dr. Dennis Davidson, director of preventive cardiology at the University of California, Irvine.

"We found that using the existing guidelines for (cholesterol) screening, we identified only one-third of the children with blood cholesterol already at a level undesirable for adults and certainly undesirable for kids," Davidson said Monday during the American College of Cardiology's annual scientific session.

"With universal screening, we would detect all children in the upper ranges of high cholesterol and help families change their diet to lower the risk to the children," he said.

The American Heart Association and American Academy of Pediatrics now recommend the test of blood cholesterol levels for children only if they have a family history of early heart attack or excess blood cholesterol.

Pediatricians have argued that mass testing of children for high cholesterol could spur overly severe use of diets and cholesterol-lowering drugs, perhaps harming normal growth and development.

Cholesterol is a waxy substance that can contribute to clogged arteries and heart disease depending on what type of fatty proteins carry it through the blood.

Davidson and his university colleagues studied 612 fourth-graders in the Westminster, Calif., school district. The children took home forms to be filled out with information about heart disease among their parents and grandparents. The students also had a small amount of blood withdrawn to test their cholesterol levels.

Of the 612 children, 123 had cholesterol levels above 200 micrograms per deciliter of blood — the level considered "borderline high" in adults and well above the 176 deemed high in children, Davidson said.

Yet only 42 of the 123 reported a family history of heart attack or high cholesterol, meaning the other two-thirds wouldn't be tested under the guidelines.

"It's certainly something we'd look at with great interest," American Heart Association spokesman John Weeks said of the study in a telephone interview from Dallas.

Dr. Arthur Garson, pediatric cardiology chief at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, said the study was among the most significant presented during the cardiology convention, which attracted about 20,000 doctors, researchers and others.

A study of 10,000 people in Bogalusa, La., found signs of future heart disease can be detected in babies, according to findings released in January. Dr. Gerald Berenson, who heads the Bogalusa study, previously has urged screening all school children for high cholesterol.

Pediatricians now recommend a low-fat diet for prepubescent children older than 2 with blood cholesterol over 176, Davidson said.

The Heart Association says that in adults, cholesterol levels above 240 are high, while those under 200 are desirable.

Forty percent of the Westminster students either were Vietnamese or had Spanish surnames, and they reported a family history of heart disease only half as often as non-Hispanic whites.

Sometime between Thursday, Jan. 26, at 5 p.m. and Friday, Jan. 27, at 7 a.m., several vehicles in the northeast section of Pampa were burglarized. Items taken ranged from citizen band radios to a Winchester shotgun.

Crime Stoppers of Pampa will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this crime.

If you have information about this crime or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222. Rewards are available for other crimes not in this announcement.

The board of directors of Crime Stoppers urges citizen involvement in reporting crimes in our community.

Legal wrangling keeps Adams in jail despite release order

By SUE FAHLGREN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Randall Dale Adams, whose 1977 conviction for killing a Dallas policeman was overturned, remained jailed today after hours of hectic legal wrangling in which his on-again, off-again release was the focus of hot debate and confusion among prosecutors, defense attorneys, judges and jailers.

Adams, whose conviction was questioned in the film The Thin Blue Line, waited for afternoon word today that could mean freedom after more than 12 years behind bars for a slaying he has steadfastly maintained he did not commit.

He came close to walking from prison a free man Monday after state District Judge Larry Baraka ordered his release on a promise to appear in court.

But bond was reset later in the day at $100,000 by state District Judge Ron Chapman after the Dallas County District Attorney's office filed a motion requesting Judge Baraka's removal from the case due to bias.

The two judicial orders left Dallas County Sheriff Jim

Bowles with conflicting commands regarding the release of Adams, whose conviction was overturned March 1.

Chapman said 54th District Judge Carl Anderson of McLennan County would hear the motion to remove Baraka at 1:30 p.m. today.

Adams has served more than 12 years in a Texas prison for the 1976 slaying of Dallas police officer Robert Wood. Originally sentenced to death, Adams' sentence was commuted to life in 1980, after he came within three days of execution.

If Anderson rules that Baraka should continue presiding over the case, then Adams could be released under the $50,000 personal recognizance bond that Baraka set for him Monday. The bond requires no cash up front.

Adams remained jailed Monday night because he was not to have the 10 percent necessary to post bail on the $100,000 bond, said his defense attorney Randy Schaffer.

Chapman, presiding judge for the region, said he was merely ruling on a matter of law in overruling Baraka.

"Once the motion to recuse is

filed, Judge Baraka has no other authority to do anything further on the case," he said. "Although it seems one Dallas judge is ruling on the actions of another Dallas judge, that's not the case. It's merely in the system."

Baraka, who met with Schaffer late Monday after Chapman's ruling, said he was upset by the development. "I don't think he was proper in doing it, but that's something Judge Chapman and I have to decide," Baraka said after a closed door meeting with Schaffer.

Schaffer said Baraka even called Sheriff Bowles during their meeting to order him to release Adams.

"The sheriff says he has two different orders from two judges and he doesn't think he can release him," Schaffer said.

And he said Baraka also tried to reach Chapman to discuss the case, but got his answering machine.

The legal wrangling began Monday afternoon when Assistant District Attorney Winfield Scott failed to appear for Adams' bond hearing in Baraka's court after the judge ordered him to be present.

When he began Monday's hearing, Baraka said, "Let the record reflect that I ordered Mr. Scott to proceed to the courtroom. He would not come down until Judge Chapman comes down. They filed a motion to recuse the judge, but they did not file it within 10 days of the hearing."

The prosecutors asked that Baraka be removed from the case due to bias. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on March 1 unanimously overturned Adams' conviction after reviewing the case at the recommendation of Baraka, who said Adams did not receive a fair trial.

After the motion was filed, District Attorney John Vance told reporters, "I don't think Randall Dale Adams ought to be out on the street. I think anybody that's indicted for killing a police officer is a danger to society."

Schaffer said he was disgusted with the prosecutors' actions.

He accused Scott and the district attorney's office of shopping for a judge who would rule in their favor.

Schaffer also said he believes they deliberately failed to appear in Baraka's court and waited until late in the afternoon to seek Chapman's reversal so that there would be no chance for an appeal to a higher court and have Adams released by Monday night.

Meanwhile, prosecutors said for the first time late Monday that they were prepared to retry Adams.

"We are ready for a trial right now," Scott said.

Former preacher says he'll honor subpoena

DALLAS (AP) — Walker Railey, once a prominent Dallas minister before a brutal attack on his wife in April 1987 left her comatose and him the prime suspect, said he will honor a subpoena requiring him to answer attorney's questions about his assets.

No criminal charges have ever been brought against Railey, but his wife's parents, William and Billie Jo Nicolai won a default judgment of nearly $18 million in a civil case against him last year. Railey said he was broke and has never paid any part of the judgment.

Railey quit talking to the media and moved to Northern California as investigators made no secret that they thought he was responsible for the attack that left Peggy Railey in what doctors call a persistent vegetative state.

He was issued the subpoena last weekend when he returned to Dallas to celebrate the March birthdays of his young children, who have been living with friends since he left the state.

Bill Arnold, attorney for Mrs. Railey's parents, said the subpoena requires Railey to appear at 10 a.m. today at his law office for a sworn deposition about his assets.

Arnold said that he would ask the court of issue an arrest warrant if Railey fails to appear. Railey's attorney, Doug Mulder, phoned Arnold to reschedule the deposition for a more suitable time. But a spokeswoman from Arnold's office said the deposition remained scheduled for Tuesday morning.

In an interview with Dallas television station KDFW Sunday, Railey said he would return to California to pick up financial records.

"I don't carry two years' worth of financial records in my suitcase," Railey told the station.

Mrs. Railey was found choked, unconscious and near death on the garage floor of her Lake Highlands home April 22, 1987. She has never regained full consciousness, and her parents take daily care of her in a Tyler nursing home. They brought the civil suit against Railey to pay for their daughter's medical care.

Railey has said he was working late the night of the attack and returned to find his wife near death. But there were several inconsistencies in what Railey told police about his whereabouts on the night of the attack.

Eight days after the attack he took an overdose of pills on the morning police wanted to question him. He wrote a note saying he felt besieged by demons.

Railey, then pastor of the First United Methodist Church in Dallas, eventually surrendered his church credentials, citing increasing stress from the attack and the investigation. Later, he turned guardianship of the couple's two children to friends and moved to California.

When called before a grand jury in July, 1987, Railey invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self incrimination 43 times.

During the grand jury investigation it also was disclosed that Railey had been with a former Methodist bishop's daughter, Dallas psychologist Lucy Papillon, with whom he had been having an affair.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

U.S. Gov't. Approves Patent Claims for New Diet Pill

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claim for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"
Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body
The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated, "Automatically" Lose Fat
According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone 'automatically' reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public
If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W902, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free 1(800) 523-9700, ext. W902.

North waves to photographers at trial.

Prosecutors claim North motivated partly by greed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecutors say Oliver North was partially motivated by greed in the Iran-Contra affair, and they want to introduce evidence about a $200,000 death benefit set up by co-defendants for his family.

Associate independent counsel David Zornow argued Monday that information about the financial arrangement is relevant to the prosecution's case. North's lawyers are trying to prevent the evidence from being introduced in the trial.

Information on the insurance fund could be used to rebut defense suggestions that North accepted a $13,800 security system at his home solely due to fear of terrorists. Co-defendant Richard Secord, whom North enlisted to run arms to the Contras, paid for the security fence.

Testimony on the insurance fund also could be used by the prosecution to suggest that when North was allegedly lying to the attorney general in November 1986, he hoped to avoid exposing crimes involving personal gain.

Security expert Glenn Robinette, an ex-CIA officer, is scheduled to testify today how he was hired by Secord to install the security system. Robinette told Congress in 1987 that it was Secord, not North, who paid him.

The defense has said North had the security fence installed after press reports that terrorist Abu Nidal had placed him on a "hit list" and after North was told the U.S. government would not pay for a home system.

Zornow said the prosecution should be entitled to present evidence suggesting another motive for North's actions: greed.

Zornow wants to present testimony from Willard Zucker, a U.S. citizen and former Internal Revenue Service lawyer who worked for another North co-defendant, Albert Hakim. Zucker moved money supporting the Contras and the Iran arms initiative.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell said he would rule shortly on whether Zucker's testimony about the $200,000 is admissible.

North lawyer Barry Simon argued that there was "no indication that the $200,000 ... was known to North."

At Hakim's direction, Zucker transferred $200,000 as a benefit for North's family in the event of his death, according to Hakim's testimony to Congress. Hakim produced a fiduciary agreement showing that the money was being held by Zucker for "B. Button." When shown a handwritten note by Zucker referring to "Mrs. Betty Button," Hakim admitted that it was the code name for Mrs. North.

Hakim said Zucker telephoned North's wife and told her he was representing an anonymous admirer of her husband who wanted to help her family financially and that he wanted to meet with her in Philadelphia.

North sent his wife to Philadelphia on March 6, 1986.

San Antonio base sends medics to Korea

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Brooke Army Medical Center has dispatched a team of specialists to South Korea to treat servicemen injured when a U.S. Marine helicopter crashed during maneuvers.

BAMC spokesman Ray Dery said Monday that the some of the injured men will be sent to the hospital's burn center.

On Monday, a Sikorsky CH53-D Sea Stallion helicopter crashed in a mountainous region near the southeastern port of Pohang, killing 19 Marines and injuring 16.

It was the second fatal U.S. helicopter crash in South Korea in four days.

Both choppers were participating in the annual "Team Spirit" military exercises, which include about 200,000 U.S. and South Korean troops.

"This is nothing unusual, though we don't usually send this many people," Dery said Monday night.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Maybe the system is also a problem

Just as the ayatollah elevated a two-bit author to best-seller status, so top Republicans have given a two-bit Louisiana politician more fame than he could have achieved on his own and far more attention than he deserves. The rush by GOP leaders to distance themselves from former Ku Klux Klan Grand Wizard Duke is only brought them closer.

Duke, who narrowly won a seat in the Louisiana legislature as a Republican, was virtually ignored until a few days before the election. That's when polls showed he actually had a chance to win his virtually all-white district. Suddenly, the Wiz that was was driving Republicans into apoplexy.

Both President George Bush and former President Reagan endorsed Duke's opponent. After that failed, Republican National Committee Chairman Lee Atwater threatened to have Duke censured and barred from using the GOP name. All of which only served to focus more attention on the man who was swearing before anyone who would listen — and some who wouldn't — that he had abandoned his racist ways.

"I repudiate any racial or religious intolerance," Duke told a press conference shortly after his win. "Any group — racial or religious — has nothing to fear from David Duke."

But it is a political group that seems most fearful. One of GOP chairman Atwater's primary goals is to woo blacks away from the Democrats, a task made more difficult earlier by the selection of Ron Brown — a black — to head the Democratic National Committee. In a battle waged by symbols, the prospect of Duke in his camp scared Atwater sheetless.

Has Duke really changed his ways? Perhaps. His recent statements sound down-right Republican: "I'm for getting the government out of our personal lives. The right not to associate is just as precious as the right to associate." Ronald Reagan, who changed his ways from Democrat to Republican, often voiced the same sentiment, to loud applause.

Even if the former Wiz still clings to the views he espoused a decade ago, his influence on national politics should be minimal. He caused barely a ripple when he leaped into the presidential pond in 1988 — running first as Democrat, then, after that party barred him from its headquarters, as a Populist.

As one of 18 Republicans in the 105-member Louisiana House, he's even less noteworthy. Rep. Peppi Bruneau of New Orleans, Louisiana GOP caucus chairman, has it about right: "We will see if Mr. Duke is what he says he is or what the media says he is. If he's what he says he is, he has no problems. He got to the House the same way everybody else did." Maybe that's the problem.

Some will pay those costs

Stephen Chapman

The trouble with Congress is that it thinks too small. Our elected representatives take perfectly commendable ideas and water them down until there's hardly any point to enacting them.

If lawmakers are serious about the problems they claim to be addressing, they can start by passing a $25-an-hour minimum wage.

A Senate committee voted to lift the wage floor from the current $3.35 an hour to $4.65, and President Bush has said he'll go along with some increase. Meanwhile, the House has a bill in the works that would force employers to provide workers with unpaid parental leave.

If these proposals pass, another idea can't be far behind. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Rep. Henry Waxman (D-Calif.) are pushing a concept recently endorsed by a commission on health care — requiring employers to furnish all workers with basic health insurance.

But why such half-hearted measures? If we truly want to help the working poor, an extra $1.30 and hour is awfully puny. After the increase, a full-time worker would still make less than $10,000.

Likewise, the parental leave looks pretty stingy. It obliges businesses to provide no more than 10 weeks every 10 years. Worse still, it's available only to those parents who can afford to skip a few paychecks.

Basic health insurance is OK, but it doesn't cover all expenses. There's always a big deductible, not to mention co-payments for even essential services. If you want treatment that's out of the mainstream — say, acupuncture or herbal therapy — you probably have to pay the entire cost.

These timid ideas need some serious juicing up. Start by setting the minimum wage at $25 an hour. That will ensure that every American with a full-time job makes at least $52,000. Why just lift workers out of poverty when we can make them all rich?

Then let's fatten those parental leaves. Give every worker with a new kid up to six months a year off — at full pay. Oh, heck — let's give everyone six paid months off every year whether they need it or not. Why should we all have to toil 50 weeks a year?

Finally, make firms offer health insurance that covers not only major ailments, but all medical costs. It's only fair to define those, to encompass anything that may improve health — not just acupuncture and herbal therapy but vitamin pills, blood-pressure monitors, diet cookbooks, tennis club memberships, jogging shoes. An ounce of prevention, you know.

By now you have probably concluded that either (a) I'm insane or (b) my plan is too good to be true. The correct answer is (b). If employers have to pay everyone $52,000 a year, they'll try to hire as few people as possible, or go bankrupt, or both. Likewise if they have to give workers half the year off. Ditto for financing extravagant insurance benefits.

In the process of requiring all these things, we would also turn the economy into a replica of San Francisco after the earthquake.

But what is true at these preposterously high levels is also true at much lower ones — like those envisioned in the serious proposals on Capitol Hill. Anyone can see the folly of a $25 minimum wage. But the difference between that amount and the one likely to be enacted is one of degree, not kind.

Obviously raising the minimum wage to $4.65 will affect only a small number of workers — those who now earn less. But it's sure to make many of them too expensive for their employers to keep, or to hire in the first place. The mandatory leaves and health insurance will affect a broader range of employees. If they don't produce layoffs, they will certainly force cutbacks in other employee benefits.

All these changes are the functional equivalent of a neon sign saying: "Fire everyone you can possibly do without, and don't hire anyone new." They provide big new incentives for businesses to slash employment.

Some employers will find that labor-saving machines that once were too expensive are now profitable. Some will move abroad. Others will buy goods from foreign firms instead of making their own. Businesses that can't buy their labor force any other way may do it by closing down.

It would be nice if everyone had the skills needed to find a job with good pay and benefits. But wishing won't make it so. Workers with few skills are better off in a $3.35-an-hour job they can get than in a $4.65-an-hour job they can't. Even a lousy job may offer a chance to learn skills that will lead to something better.

Forcing employers to do more for their workers is appealing to politicians because it enables them to provide benefits to constituents while pretending that no one will have to pay for them. Someone will, and probably those who can least afford it.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, March 21, the 80th day of 1989. There are 285 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 21, 1963, the Alcatraz federal prison island in San Francisco Bay was emptied of its last inmates at the order of Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, after three decades of housing some of America's most notorious criminals, including Al Capone and George "Machine Gun" Kelly.

On this date:

In 1685, composer Johann Sebastian Bach was born in Eisenach, Germany.

In 1804, the French civil code, the "Code Napoleon," was adopted.

In 1918, during World War I, Germany launched the Somme Offensive, hoping to break through the Allied line before American reinforcements could arrive.

In 1945, during World War II, Allied bombers began four days of raids over Germany.

In 1946, the United Nations set up temporary headquarters at Hunter College in New York.

"This little item here under expenses — 345,000 chicken eggs — just exactly what is it you do with all those eggs, Mr. Bunny?"

Willard Scott's just one of us

You can't get away with trashing a guy like Willard Scott. America won't stand for it.

We like people like Willard. He's a television star, but we figure he's sort of one of us.

Willard's a little overweight, and sometimes he dresses funny, but that's part of his appeal.

You figure you could see Willard Scott on the street and walk up to him and he'd be pleasant.

You could say, "Hey, Willard, my great-grandmother is going to turn a hundred next week? Will you show her picture on TV?"

And Willard would if he could. But Bryant Gumbel. The guy's a snob. He pays too much for his suits, and he probably lays out his clothes the night before.

Can you imagine sitting down and having a beer with a guy like Bryant Gumbel?

Of course not. He probably doesn't drink beer anyway.

I don't know if Bryant Gumbel drinks at all. But if he does, he probably has a lot of after-dinner drinks. Courvoisier, maybe. Or maybe he drinks white wine, which is even worse.

Never trust a guy who drinks white wine when he's not having it with dinner.

A guy like that will smile at you and then stab you in the back, which is exactly what Bryant Gumbel tried to do to Willard Scott.

You already know the story. Bryant Gumbel wrote a memo to his boss at NBC and said Will-lard Scott has no business on the Today show, which Gumbel hosts. Somebody leaked the memo to a newspaper.

Lewis Grizzard

Gumbel also nailed Gene Shalit and David Horowitz of the Today show, but let somebody else defend them. I'm just dealing with Willard the Weatherman here.

What else we like about Willard is he's got a great smile. Notice it the next time you see him on television. When he smiles, he shows his front teeth and his eyes take on a mischievous look, like he was a big bald-headed chipmunk.

We like Willard's voice, too. It's reassuring at 8 in the morning. We've made it through another night and Willard is there on the tube to make it official.

I always hated television weather shows. They go on for too long. Just tell me whether or not it's going to rain. I don't care for a detailed conversation regarding upper air disturbances in Costa Rica, and I still don't know if I should dress one way for high pressure and another way for low.

But Willard's weather forecasts are pretty much to the point:

"Blue skies in the Northeast, thundershowers down South, it's going to be freezing in the plains and just plain wonderful out West."

That tells me everything I need to know.

Network television could do with a little more down-home like Willard Scott delivers.

When Willard talks about somebody's great-grandmother turning a hundred in Arkansas, or about a fig festival, wherever it is they grow figs, I get the feeling NBC has some human beings after all instead of just a bunch of suits who have forgotten there is life outside Manhattan.

Just before Gumbel came out with his "our Today family is intact and still smiling," I was hoping he'd issue an ultimatum to his superiors and say, "It's either him (Willard) or me. Take your pick."

Today can find another pretty face in an $800 suit to sit there and act like he's doing us all a big favor by being up at that hour.

But Willard Scotts don't come in droves.

We want Willard. Bryant Gumbel can go to hell — or to CBS.

Women should be prepared for danger

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Women are abducted, raped and killed so often that sometimes I think we are numb to the suffering, that is, unless it happens too near our own assumed safe harbors. We read, we might feel momentary outrage or grief, but it's forgotten almost by the time we've finished the paper.

Kelli Patricia Hall's death was one that stayed with me. She was abducted in St. Charles, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis, on Feb. 9. They found her nude body almost two weeks later; she had been strangled to death, and tests may determine she was also raped. She was 17 years old.

St. Louis is 200 miles away from where I live, so Kelli's death didn't really threaten my safety zone. But I can't seem to shake the horror of her death any easier than I can forget her abduction, and for the same mystifying reason: The night Kelli was taken, she was minutes from getting off work at the Mobil station where she was a cashier. Her boyfriend was waiting nearby in a warm car for her to finish her final task of the night: checking the tanks to see if they needed to be refilled. A few yards in the other direction was the station, and customers. Just a scream, a dash away. Yet witnesses saw Kelli get into a Chevy Blazer with two men in it. Why?

Police speculate that one of the men held a gun on Kelli. If that is true, chances are very good that if she'd run toward the station or her boyfriend's car, screaming bloody murder, the would-be abductors would have jammed it in drive and taken off.

How many times do you hear of someone with a gun shooting an intended victim from a car because they WON'T get in?

Even though Kelli Hall didn't have the presence of mind to reason through her situation and take the route that would have saved her life, very few women do when we see a gun pointed at us. We see a gun, we freeze. We do what we're told. Would a 17-year-old boy have gotten into a car, that close to safety, just because a gun was pointed at him? Not any of the ones I know.

Since Kelli's death, I've been asking other women what they would do in her situation. Most of them said their reaction would have been to do what they were told, out of fear they'd be shot if they didn't. They couldn't get beyond that point in their thinking process, unless pressed. The only woman who gave me a quick "Not on your life!" was a friend who teaches awareness classes in conjunction with a local rape-victim support group. Then she gave me a little quiz about what I'd do if faced with a few hypothetical threatening situations they talk about in her classes. All I could do was stammer, "Well, I guess I'd..."

She knew exactly what she'd do; they were actual plans of action that are second nature to her now.

We make a great hoopla out of the possibility that we may sometime need to administer CPR to someone. We sponsor classes at our workplaces, and re-certify ourselves periodically. I've had three CPR classes in my 37 years, and I've never known anyone personally who has ever had to use it. I've never had a class in basic safety awareness for women; yet four women I know quite well — my niece, my best friend, a college roommate and a co-worker — were all assaulted. One of them was raped.

We don't have to scare ourselves to teach reality: "You might find yourself in a dangerous situation, and here's what you should do. Here's hoping you don't, but an ounce of prevention..." Men seem to learn in this society how to run, yell, fight, anything but go gently to the slaughter. Women don't. We owe it to our female children to teach them how to save their lives.

China government announces new tax hikes, more austerity

By JOHN POMFRET
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — Government leaders today said they were slapping new taxes on China's thriving private sector and raising taxes on such items as cars and color televisions in an effort to encourage austerity and limit extravagance.

Top leaders, continuing their theme of economic and political retrenchment, also told China's legislature that they were eliminating loans to private and collectively run enterprises.

They unveiled a number of cost-cutting measures and said all Chinese will be expected to file tax returns. They predicted a $2 billion deficit this year out of a $79.2 billion budget.

The speeches by Vice Premier Yao Yilin and Finance Minister Wang Bingqian marked a continuation of the somber line presented Monday by Premier Li Peng in his opening speech to the National People's Congress.

Yao and Wang emphasized the need for centralizing China's economy, a contrast with calls during last year's congress for bold efforts to move the economy away from rigid central planning.

The leaders told the 2,768 congress delegates in the Great Hall of the People that what China needs now is more control, not more economic freedom.

In his report on the economy, Yao called for huge cuts in construction projects, loans, industrial growth and consumer demand.

He said even successful and necessary projects might have to be stopped "if they surpass the capabilities of financial and material resources."

The speeches come at a time when China is facing severe economic troubles. Inflation has hit a record 36 percent and sparked panic buying and bank runs.

In September, China began a program to tackle the price rises and to slow reforms initiated a decade ago that aimed to introduce elements of a market economy into China's state-run system.

Both speeches today hit hard at China's fledgling private and collectively-owned sectors, the most active part of the economy even though they exist outside the state plan.

Yao announced an end to loans for these enterprises. He also said all projects outside the state plan would be halted until July unless they were absolutely necessary.

Wang said that collectively and individually owned enterprises would be hit with an additional 10 percent surcharge on their after-tax profits. He also slapped a consumption tax on color television sets and automobiles and said every Chinese would be required to report his income.

Tax evasion in China is rampant and a 1987 law requiring people who make more than $81 a month to pay taxes is routinely ignored.

In his speech, Yao called on Chinese to tighten their belts.

"In the past few years, there have been widespread and serious extravagance and waste," he said. "All this has not only seriously conflicted with China's economic level at present, but also tarnished our fine traditions and encouraged reprehensible social conduct."

Chinese people should adopt the principle of "doing everything industriously and thriftily," he said. "Only by determinedly practicing austerity for a few years will it be possible to" reform the economy.

While austerity measures are sweeping, education and agriculture will receive budget increases.

On Monday, Li announced a 15 percent increase in the education budget, to $10 billion; and a 10 percent increase for agriculture, to $4.7 billion.

Defense also is to increase, from $5.8 billion to $6.6 billion.

Government wages also will be raised. Corruption has spread throughout China because government salaries have not kept pace with the rest of society.

Demos threaten ethics charges against Gingrich

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats are threatening to file ethics charges against Rep. Newt Gingrich, the Georgia Republican whose ethics complaints against Speaker Jim Wright helped propel him into the race for the No. 2 post in the House GOP leadership.

Democratic Reps. Barney Frank of Massachusetts, Martin Sabo of Minnesota and Lawrence Smith of Florida sent Gingrich a letter Monday asking a series of questions about an unusual promotional deal for his 1984 book, Window of Opportunity.

The three Democrats said the questions "bear upon compliance with the rules of the House, financial disclosure requirements, the Federal Election Campaign Act and matters relating to the Internal Revenue code."

House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said Gingrich should expect to face an investigation by the House ethics committee, in part because of his role in initiating the Wright investigation.

"He should anticipate somebody filing charges ... and he'll have to live by the same standard he has set for others," Coelho said.

Gingrich called a news conference late Monday to deny any wrongdoing in the promotional deal, in which business people and Republican political activists paid a total of $105,000 to a limited partnership that then promoted his book.

Questions about the arrangement put Gingrich on the defensive just two days before House Republicans are scheduled to choose a new minority whip to replace Dick Cheney of Wyoming, who resigned from the House to become defense secretary.

Gingrich, who has promised to make the GOP more aggressive in challenging the House Democratic majority, is running against Rep. Edward Madigan of Illinois, an insider who has climbed steadily through GOP ranks.

In all, 21 investors put up $5,000 each to the limited partnership in exchange for a promise of half the publisher's profits from the Gingrich book. The publisher lost money on the book, however, and the investors ended up with a tax writeoff.

Publishers typically pay for book promotion, and Gingrich acknowledged that the limited partnership was unusual. But he said it was "much like the arrangement used for producing and promoting a Broadway play."

Gingrich promised to provide a full accounting. His wife, Marianne Gingrich, who co-authored the book, said she received less than $10,000 of the $105,000 for arranging the deal and coordinating the promotional effort. She also received a $26 tax benefit for 1988, Gingrich said.

"We'll check with our attorney and get it all out into the open,"

Gingrich said. "We have nothing to hide."

Gingrich said his book deal was much different from the 55 percent royalty arrangement Wright had for his privately published book, Reflections of a Public Man. Questions about the royalty arrangement were part of ethics complaint Gingrich filed against the speaker.

Gingrich said his book was "a real book, 272 pages long, with real ideas, not a collection of House floor speeches and memories," and it was sold in regular bookstores.

Asked about Gingrich's book deal, Wright first declined to comment, but then said: "People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones."

Mrs. Gingrich, who appeared at the news conference with her husband, said the House ethics committee was consulted before the partnership contracts were signed. She also said their earnings from the book were fully disclosed as House rules require.

Groups call for changes in ag department

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

WACO (AP) — Two Texas agricultural groups, frequently at odds with Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, have adopted policies calling for the abolition of the elective office and putting the department under the direction of an appointed board.

The Texas Farm Bureau, the state's largest farm group, and the Independent Cattlemen's Association of Texas both took actions Monday to begin work to change the way the department is organized.

In Waco, 790 delegates to a special convention of the Farm Bureau overwhelmingly adopted a change in the organization's policy, saying, "We support a change in the leadership of the Texas Department of Agriculture. We prefer that the elected commissioner be replaced by an agricultural commission."

Meanwhile, the cattlemen's group sent a letter to Gov. Bill Clements asking Clements and the Legislature to eliminate the commissioner's position, and replace it with a nine-member board and appointed executive director.

Hightower said the Farm Bureau's vote, "though intended as a slap at me, is really a slap at the people of Texas and at their right to choose who will direct a major state agency.

"I am disappointed, but certainly not surprised, that a small minority of Texas Farm Bureau members would vote against the best interest of all Texas farmers and ranchers," Hightower said.

But bureau officials, while not disguising their dislike of Hightower, took pains to say the move should not be seen exclusively as an anti-Hightower action.

"Farmers and ranchers are a minority and can no longer elect the commissioner as we could 50 years ago," Executive Director Warren Newberry said.

"The cities of Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Austin can elect the commissioner by themselves. You see an urban public doesn't look at down-ballot races very carefully and does not always understand the agricultural issues, which means name recognition or 'cute, one-liner politicians' may get elected."

The cattlemen's group said Hightower has transformed his position from a spokesman for agriculture into a base to build his political ideology by attempting to grab headlines.

The association said it feared that Hightower has caused irreparable damage to the image of Texas agriculture and possible damage to domestic markets.

Meanwhile, the Texas Farmers Union, a much smaller group than the Farm Bureau, held a number of news conferences around the state Monday to rally against making the commissioner's post appointive.

The Farm Bureau delegates defeated several attempts to be more specific in their resolution, following speakers' urgings that the organization's lobbyists be given a free hand in developing a consensus recommendation for a newly structured department.

The agricultural groups are trying to take advantage of the regular, 12-year review of the Agriculture Department.

Earlier Monday, the state Senate passed on a voice vote a bill that would continue operations of the department for the next 12 years.

The bill now goes to the House, where agricultural interests are stronger. Vernie Glasson, the Farm Bureau's chief lobbyist, told the delegates Monday, "The chances are better than good for a change in the House."

Reacting to the Senate vote, Hightower said, "State senators voted today for the public's interest and for good government. It is also an endorsement of democracy — allowing the people of Texas to maintain their right to vote directly on statewide officials."

Farm Bureau President S.M. True said the 326,000-member organization would urge Clements to veto the Sunset bill, should it make it to his desk intact.

True said the farmers would work with other agriculture organizations, such as cattle and commodity groups, and with Clements to devise a new Agriculture Department.

Monday's vote reverses a policy last voted on in December at the bureau's annual convention in Corpus Christi, when 1,208 delegates narrowly voted to support an elected commissioner.

At the time, bureau leaders said, they believed Hightower would not run for re-election in 1990, but he later announced he would seek the office a third time.

"Not one time in this eight-page political position paper (announcing Hightower's decision) did he mention the full-time farm and ranch families who produce 90 percent of the food and fiber in this state," Newberry said. "Not once did he mention the men and women who drive the tractors and take the risks."

Hightower also angered farmers by proposing stringent pesticide regulation.

Gardens teach children respect for living things

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're planning a garden this spring, try to enlist the help of your child, a grandchild or a neighborhood youngster.

"A garden is a place where a child can begin to learn respect for growing things," says Joan Dye Gussow, an expert in nutrition and gardening.

Gussow is chairman of the board of the National Gardening Association and professor of nutrition and education at Teachers College, Columbia University.

Even before going into a garden, toddlers can begin to learn about the growth of plants indoors by watching roots and tiny plants sprouting from the seeds of radishes, cress and alfalfa placed on damp towels in a shallow tray, Gussow says.

"The roots appear in a few days," she says. "When shoots emerge, they can be put in the sun to turn green. Children can even pull and eat them, roots and all, or with the help of a grown-up, make their own salads."

When the weather warms, young children can join an adult for a tour of other gardens in the neighborhood to see what kinds of plants grow well where they live.

And children as young as two or three can have gardens of their own.

Gussow suggests, however, that children not plant their gardens in tidy rows because little feet have trouble walking between them. Instead, a child's garden should be planted in one or more squares, each small enough so that he can easily reach into the center.

Boundaries around the garden should be well marked, Gussow says, because "young children often can't tell the difference between walking on nice, green grass and walking on nice, green spinach."

She suggests surrounding the garden beds with a straw or hay path for the child to follow.

In their own gardens, children should grow plants that offer "almost instant gratification," Gussow says. For example, cherry tomatoes can be bought as plants that "will be ready as delicious mouthfuls quickly."

Lettuce also is good for a child's garden, especially different colors of lettuce growing together. In addition, Gussow recommends bush beans because the plants are hardy and durable.

She particularly likes growing sweet potatoes because the potatoes can be placed partly in water like avocado seeds until roots begin to grow from them. Shoots follow quickly and, when the shoots are from two to three inches long, they can be broken off the potato and put into water where they quickly grow their own roots.

"These rooted shoots can be planted in early summer and will quickly grow a beautiful vine," Gussow says.

In the fall, the child can help dig for sweet potatoes.

"When you dig for sweet potatoes, it's a little like mining for gold," Gussow says. "When the child finds the potato, you can talk about the roots that sprouted from the earlier potato. It introduces the child to the complete cycle of nature."

Finally, children should work in their gardens with real tools built on a smaller scale.

"Don't give them toy tools," Gussow says. "Let them know you take their gardening seriously."

Evergreens need watering

* WATER PINE- EVERGREEN TREES

With our continued lack of real beneficial rain, growing plants are needing water.

Therefore, if you have pine or any type of evergreen trees or shrubs, they need some extra water again. Also, any bluegrass or fescue lawns are also needing watering and fertilizing.

Our dormant bermuda grass and deciduous trees are not needing a lot of extra water yet, but as soon as they leaf out, then their water use increases greatly.

When watering trees, use a hose or drip irrigation to allow water to soak down deeply into the soil where the trees root zone is located. This will help your tree to be in a healthy state and be more resistant to disease and insects.

* START VINING VEGETABLES INDOORS

Vining vegetables may do better if you give them an early start indoors. Cucumbers and other vining vegetables, such as cataloupes, pumpkins, squash and watermelons, can be started indoors about two to three weeks before the expected last spring frost.

Plant the seeds in peat pellets or peat pots filled with a good commercial growing mixture three to four seeds per pot. About 3-inch diameter pots are best. The peat pot must be filled with potting mixture before planting seeds.

For Horticulture
Joe VanZandt

After planting, water the pots thoroughly and set them in a warm place to germinate. After the seeds germinate and the plants come up, keep them moist and in a well lighted area. When the weather is warm and sunny, place the plants outdoors for a few hours each day.

When the plants are about 1 inch tall, thin the seedlings to two plants per pot. It is best to pinch or clip the extra plants off rather than pull them off. This reduces the chance of damaging the roots of the remaining plants. Seeds can be planted directly in a peat pellet.

When it is time to set the plants out, water them thoroughly an hour or so before planting. Be very careful to avoid damaging the roots of the your vining vegetables during planting.

Do not remove the plants from the peat pots or pellets. Unlike tomatoes and certain other crops, vining vegetables cannot stand rough handling and will not survive if the roots are damaged.

Set the peat pots or pellets about one inch below the soil surface and fill around the plants with loose soil. Leave a slight depression around the plants to hold water. Allow more space for pumpkins and watermelons, than for squash, cantaloupes and cucumbers.

* SOIL INSECT CONTROL IN VEGETABLE GARDENS

As vegetable gardeners prepare for spring planting, their first step should be to control soil insects.

Soil insects can reduce vegetable quality and yields if left uncontrolled.

For effective control, mix insecticides into the soil at a depth of 4-6 inches at least two weeks before the garden plot is planted.

Among destructive soil insects are wireworms, white grubs, seed corn maggots, cabbage maggots, mole crickets, sowbugs, slugs, snails and cutworms. Some destroy plant seeds, roots, tubers and underground stem parts while others cut off young plants at or near the soil surface.

Poisoning possible at any age

DEAR ABBY: I first wrote to you four years ago about the importance of child-resistant caps on medicine containers. They have helped reduce aspirin deaths in children by 88 percent!

During National Poison Prevention Week, March 19-25, I hope you will once again run your valuable tips on how to poison-proof your home. In addition, please let your readers know that children aren't the only ones exposed to poisons. Adult poisonings account for more than 24 percent of the calls received by poison centers nationwide. In fact, more than 90 percent of all accidental poisoning deaths occur to people 15 years of age and older.

Thank you, Abby, for letting your readers know about this important information.

ELIZABETH BENNETT,
SEATTLE POISON CENTER

DEAR ELIZABETH: Thank you for your letter and for bringing to my attention the problem of accidental poisonings in adults. As it is the responsibility of adults to poison-proof their homes for children, we must also practice poison prevention for ourselves. Here are some important poison prevention tips:

- Never store potentially poisonous substances in unmarked containers or containers associated with eating and drinking. Never mix cleaning products together.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

- Always read and follow label instructions when working with all poisonous substances. Never use industrial products in the home.

- Wear protective clothing and goggles, and ensure adequate ventilation when working with hazardous substances.

- Never take old or outdated drugs. Follow label directions on all over-the-counter and prescription medications and don't exceed the recommended dose. Remember that non-prescription drugs can be as poisonous as prescription drugs. (Check the expiration dates on your medications.)

- Develop a system to remind yourself when to take your medicine.

- Don't share your prescription drugs with others or take someone else's.

- Be sure to keep drugs in their original containers.

- Never take medicine in front of children. They love to imitate adults. Also, never call medicine "candy."

- Store all cleaning supplies out of sight and out of reach of children.

Here's a checklist of potential poisons found in the home. These products should be locked up or kept out of reach of children.

KITCHEN: aspirin, vitamins, furniture polish, detergents, cleansers, ammonia.

BEDROOM: all medications, cosmetics, perfume.

LAUNDRY: bleaches, detergents, disinfectants.

CLOSETS/ATTIC/STORAGE PLACES: rat and ant poison, mothballs.

FIRST AID FOR POISONINGS: Keep ipecac syrup on hand in your home, but do not use it except on the advice of your poison center or physician. (Call information now for your local poison center's 24-hour hot-line number and keep it on or near your phone.)

Poison prevention is the best antidote for poisonings, but accidental poisonings can occur in any home. The natural impulse is to act at once, but the wrong treatment for poisoning is often more harmful than none. So, call your poison center or physician for advice immediately.

Pete Rose

Rose being investigated

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

PLANT CITY, Fla. — Pete Rose is being investigated by major league baseball over "serious allegations" that, according to a source, could result in a suspension for the Cincinnati Reds manager.

Rose's gambling reportedly is the subject of the investigation, revealed Monday in a statement by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and Commissioner-elect A. Bartlett Giamatti.

"The office of the commissioner, which was founded to preserve the integrity of the game, has for several months been conducting a full inquiry into serious allegations involving Mr. Pete Rose," the statement said.

The statement made no mention of any possible action against Rose, noting major league baseball's investigation isn't complete. But a baseball source, who asked not to be identified, said a suspension is a possibility.

John M. Dowd, a trial lawyer with the Washington firm of Heron, Burchette, Ruckert & Rothwell, is leading the investigation as special counsel to the commissioner. Dowd, 47, headed a Justice Department organized crime task force from 1972 to 1978 and led investigations of the FBI and of former Pennsylvania Rep. Dan Flood.

Dowd said Monday he has been investigating Rose for about a month. He said he didn't know how much longer the inquiry will last.

"It's dictated by the facts and circumstances. I have no idea," Dowd said. He would not discuss the nature of the investigation.

The statement from the commissioner's office said that when the investigation is finished, "the commissioner will consider the information presented and take whatever action is warranted by the facts."

Rose and Reds general manager Murray Cook declined comment on the investigation.

Rose, normally outspoken, answered all questions about the investigation with "no comment," then apologized for being tight-lipped.

"Sorry, I know you're just trying to do your job," Rose told reporters in his office. "I appreciate that."

"If something happens, when it happens, I'll talk about it then."

Game postponed

The District 1-4A baseball game between the Pampa Harvesters and the Randall Raiders, originally scheduled for this afternoon at Randall High School, has been postponed due to last night's snowfall.

The game has been rescheduled for 4:30 p.m. Thursday at the Randall High School field, weather permitting.

Rangers keep winning

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Bobby Meacham's two-run double in the top of the eighth broke a tie and gave the Texas Rangers a 4-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox Monday night.

The exhibition win was the ninth in a row for the Rangers, 10-7. Mike Jeffcoat, 1-0, pitched three innings for the victory.

After a 55-minute rain delay with one out in the bottom of the fourth inning, the White Sox scored twice off Drew Hall. Billy Joe Robidoux singled to left and Ivan Calderon walked before Daryl Boston doubled to right field, scoring Robidoux and sending pinch-runner Mark Davis to third.

Carlos Martinez followed with a sacrifice fly, scoring Davis. The Rangers scored a run on the top of the sixth when Cecil Espy and Geno Petralli singled, Ruben Sierra walked and Chad Kreuter was hit by a pitch that scored Espy.

Texas tied the score in the seventh when Meacham led off with a walk and scored on a single to right field by Andre Robertson.

Missouri playing with confidence

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Norm Stewart, recovering at his home from cancer surgery, says some of the best medicine he's received is watching his Missouri Tigers on television and seeing their confidence grow with each NCAA tournament win.

He's hoping his Tigers are now confident enough to pay back Syracuse, which beat them in the championship of the Big Apple NIT back in November. The teams play Friday in the NCAA Midwest Regional semifinals.

Illinois and Louisville meet in the other Midwest semifinal at Minneapolis.

Stewart said he's feeling better health-wise and tournament-wise after watching the Tigers' 108-89 victory over Texas Sunday.

"Now that I've had a little time, feel a little stronger, it's fun to watch the games," he said by telephone from his home in Columbia to radio station KCMO in Kansas City.

"Now that they've gotten a couple of wins under their belt in the NCAA, they know they can play with anybody," said Stewart, who has frequently talked with interim coach Rich Daly by telephone.

Sixth-ranked Missouri 29-7 suffered an 86-84 overtime loss to No. 7 Syracuse in the Big Apple NIT final early in the season.

Syracuse, 29-7, beat Colorado State 65-50 in Sunday's other second-round NCAA Midwest game at Reunion Arena.

Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim agreed with Stewart that the Tigers are more dangerous than they were early in the season.

"Missouri's a veteran, solid team and very improved from when we played earlier," he said.

Colorado State coach Boyd Grant picks Syracuse to win again.

"Missouri has the athletes who can play with Syracuse, but if Derrick Coleman is well, I can see Syracuse in the Final Four," Grant said.

Coleman, who sat out a first-round game against Bucknell because of a back injury, scored 12 points and had seven rebounds and two blocks against Colorado State.

"Obviously his offensive timing and rhythm weren't on, but his defense was there," Boeheim said.

Spartans post second-round NIT victory

By The Associated Press

The battle-scarred Michigan State Spartans are prospering outside the Big Ten.

Michigan State beat Wichita State 79-67 Monday night in the second round of the National Invitation Tournament. Coach Jud Heathcote believes the rugged style of the Big Ten is helping his team in the NIT.

"After getting beaten on in the Big Ten, it's easy to get down and lose your confidence," said Heathcote, whose team was 6-12 in the conference, 9-1 outside it. "But the clubs we're playing right now maybe aren't as tough as the Big Ten, and they don't know us as well, so we can surprise them with some of the things we're able to do."

The biggest surprise to Shockers coach Eddie Fogler was the play of Todd Wolfe, who led Michigan State with 18 points.

Wolfe has endured two ankle injuries and a separated shoulder this season and has averaged only 5.5 points a game since he was injured against Wisconsin on Feb. 2.

"Wolfe shot the ball extremely well, especially in the first half,"

Fogler said. "We were really a little more concerned with (Kirk) Manns, to tell you the truth."

So while Wichita State, 19-11, overplayed Manns, Wolfe took charge.

"I think Todd's back in sync," said Heathcote, whose team plays at Villanova on Wednesday in the quarterfinals.

"My ankle felt much better tonight, which helped," said Wolfe, who hit all four 3-point attempts.

Elsewhere, Villanova beat Penn State 76-67, defending champion Connecticut edged California 73-72, Ohio State defeated Nebraska 85-74, Alabama-Birmingham was a 64-61 winner at Richmond and St. Louis ousted Wisconsin 73-68.

Tonight, Oklahoma State is at St. John's and Pepperdine visits New Mexico.

PHS golfers place third at Brownwood

The Pampa High boys golf team warmed up for the first round of District 1-4A play by placing third in the Bluebonnet Classic last week in Brownwood.

The Harvesters had a two-day total of 650 and just missed second place by three strokes. Brownwood won the tournament with a 635.

"I was pleased with our results, but I was a little disappointed with our second day of play. We had some problems with the short game, but I feel like we'll start coming around when district starts," said Pampa coach Frank McCullough.

The opening round of district will be played Thursday at Plainview, starting at 9 a.m.

At Brownwood, Ryan Teague was the leading Harvester golfer with a 157 (79-78), followed by Mark Wood, 79-80 (159); Mike Elliott, 82-82 (164); Dax Hudson, 86-84 (170) and Russ Martindale, 91-89 (180).

Jays Cerutti blanks Astros

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — John Cerutti continued his outstanding spring by pitching a three-hitter over five innings as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Houston Astros 4-0 Monday, improving their exhibition record to 14-4.

In 13 innings pitched this spring, Cerutti, 3-0, has given up just one run on nine hits.

Tom Henke, David Wells and Mark Eichhorn completed the shutout before a sellout crowd at Grant Field. Bob Knepper, 0-1, allowed eight hits and three runs, one earned.

Jesse Barfield and Bob Brenly each had two hits and a run batted in for Toronto. Louie Meadows had two of Houston's five hits.

Pat Borders hit a solo homer off Knepper and Nelson Liriano, who also made several standout defensive plays at second, had an RBI single.

Houston shortstop Rafael Ramirez committed two errors in the second, helping Toronto to its first two runs.

Fred McGriff reched on one error, stole second and scored on Barfield's single. Ramirez erred again, allowing Barfield to move to second and score on b Brenly's single.

Young Celtics on the rise

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The green-and-white uniforms are awfully familiar, but who are these wild young guys inside them? They run like crazy, soar like birds and have names like Pinckney, Kleine and Upshaw. They're also winning like they haven't been all season. They are the new Boston Celtics, transformed from a struggling, aging club that relied on a halfcourt offense and its starting five. Now they have the personnel to do what they did Monday night. Boston beat the San Antonio Spurs for the 20th consecutive time, 119-108, with strong contributions from substitutes. Ed Pinckney had 22 points and 11 rebounds, Kelvin Upshaw had eight assists and Joe Kleine played 19 solid minutes and allowed starting center Robert Parish to rest for 24. Pinckney is the only Boston substitute to reach double figures in points and rebounds in the same game this NBA season. The last time a Celtic substitute had eight assists was Dec. 29.

"We have options now, options we didn't have a few weeks ago," Boston coach Jimmy Rodgers said. "We have the ability to try different combinations and that allows us to do different things. With our depth, we now have the opportunity to find the answers over a 48-minute period. 'We're a little bit more athletic than we were.' Boston obtained Pinckney and Kleine from Sacramento in a trade Feb. 23. Upshaw was playing in the Continental Basketball Association when he signed with the Celtics March 9. They are 9-3 with Kleine and Pinckney and 4-1 with Upshaw. "The Celtics are so flexible. They have quality depth and inside strength," Spurs Coach Larry Brown said. Before the trade, the Celtics were 24-28 and 5½ games behind Philadelphia in the battle for the seventh of the Eastern Conference's eight playoff berths. Now they are 33-31 and 1½ games behind the 76ers. They also are three games ahead of Washington, which is in ninth place in the conference.

And they no longer are blowing leads down the stretch. "We're now a fourth quarter team, where we were a three-quarter team not too long ago," Rodgers said. Pinckney scored nine points in a 15-4 run that gave Boston a 92-80 lead, who lost a club record doing a great job pushing the ball up the court. Upshaw, a point guard cut by Miami in January, loves to run. "He makes excellent decisions," Rodgers said. "He gets the ball to the open man." The Spurs, who lost a club record 12th straight game pushing the ball up the court. Upshaw, a point guard cut by Miami in January, loves to run. "He makes excellent decisions," Rodgers said. Schramm finds missing link

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

PALM DESERT, Calif. — Tex Schramm, who has lobbied for four years to keep his instant replay dream alive, thinks he's finally discovered what he calls "the missing link" to retaining it permanently. An electronic whistle. An electronic whistle that reproduces an asterisk on videotape when a whistle is blown. An electronic whistle that demonstrated to NFL owners Monday that a disputed call that may have decided the Houston-Cleveland AFC wild-card game was wrong on two counts. The owners are expected to vote either today or Wednesday on keeping instant replay — perhaps making it permanent. And, as it has been for the past four years, the 21 votes it needs from the 28 teams is only a maybe. Enter the whistle, which places on the monitor of the replay official an asterisk at the exact time it is blown. That allows the replay official to know when the play has ended and, in Schramm's opinion, will eliminate long delays that have plagued the system. "It takes away one of his options," said Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys and chairman of the league's competition committee. "Now he knows when the whistle blew. It's very unsatisfying to have to sit and wait to know when he blew the whistle." To demonstrate the system, Schramm and Miami Coach Don Shula showed a tape of the key play in the Houston-Cleveland game, which came with the Oilers leading 14-9 in the third quarter. Warren Moon dropped back to pass, threw the ball backward to running back Allen Pinkett, who dropped it at his own five, where Cleveland's Clay Matthews recovered. The replay showed the pass was clearly a lateral, but after five minutes of review at the game, it was ruled that the whistle had blown — when the ball was dropped — by an official who believed the pass was forward. The experimental whistle, in use at the game, showed, however that the whistle didn't blow until after Matthews had recovered. So instead of Cleveland getting possession, Houston retained it and went on to win 24-23. "This was the missing link in the whole system," Schramm said. "Now we can unequivocally say what happened." Opponents, however, weren't satisfied. "Change? Hah!" said George Young, general manager of the New York Giants and an opponent of replay from the start. "The game should be decided by the officials on the field. The officials are there to officiate and that's what they should do." Monday's meeting was devoted to a state of the league speech by Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who strongly urged teams to hire more blacks for front office and coaching jobs.

Landry to throw out first pitch

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The ceremonial first pitch on opening night for the Texas Rangers will be thrown by former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry, Rangers chairman of the board Eddie Giles says. Giles said Monday that he is wrapping up the final details of Landry's appearance, but said that Landry, who coached the Cowboys for the first 29 years of their existence, has agreed to be on hand for the April 4 game against the Detroit Tigers. "It's not set in concrete," Giles said. He said he has been working out details with Landry's secretary while the former NFL coach is in Palm Springs, Calif. "But he has said he'll be here and he'll throw out the first ball." Giles, who is in the process of selling his majority ownership of the American League team to a group headed by George W. Bush, the president's oldest son, said he and Bush would probably escort Landry to the field, allowing fans to pay their respects to Landry. Landry was fired by new Cowboys owner Jerry Jones last month after Jones bought the team and brought longtime friend Jimmy Johnson from the University of Miami to Dallas as coach. "Tom and I haven't communicated directly, but I think it's going to work out all right," Giles said. "I've known Tom for a long time. He's one of my good friends."

Oklahoma president says Switzer must improve team's discipline, academics

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — University of Oklahoma interim president David Swank blamed society's emphasis on sports as the underlying cause of problems plaguing the Sooners football team, and said head football coach Barry Switzer has about a year to shape up his team in discipline and academics. Swank, speaking to Texas newspaper executives on Monday, expressed confidence that Switzer could turn around the football program that has been at the center of controversy. "If he cannot, then we will have to find someone who can," Swank said. He told members of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association that Switzer must implement stricter discipline and a recruiting system that emphasizes academic as well as athletic achievement. "I think actually within this next year we have to see signs of major changes in the program, or changes will have to be made," he said. Problems began for the Sooners in December, when the NCAA placed the Oklahoma football program on three years probation for recruiting violations. In January, a football player was accused of wounding his teammate in a dorm shooting. Three football players have been charged with an alleged gang rape in a dorm, and starting quarterback Charles Thompson has been accused of selling cocaine to an undercover FBI agent. The incidents have cast the university into "dark days," Swank said. "An idol has been toppled from its pedestal," he said. Swank said the easiest reaction would have been to fire Switzer, who has coached at OU for 23 years, the last 16 as head coach. His teams have won three national championships and 12 Big Eight conference titles. "There are changes that will need to be made, but that does not include Coach Switzer at this time," Swank said. Swank said society in general has placed too great an emphasis on sports, but he also blamed himself and other administrators at the school for the problems in the athletic department. "There has been a lack of discipline in our football program off the field." Swank said he initially refused to read a book by former Sooners football player Brian Bosworth, which detailed accounts of wrongdoing on the part of football players while coaches looked the other way. "I thought it was a book of fiction. Now I know that I should have read it," Swank said. Switzer's response to the team's problems could help other schools facing similar woes, Swank said. "I believe that because of Barry's reputation, he can actually be a guide for improvements, not only at the University of Oklahoma, but across the nation," Swank said. "If he can't, then we're going to have to do something else."

TENSION HEADACHES

If you're bothered by headache that seems to have its origin at the base of your skull, you may be suffering from tension headache.

Tension headaches can be caused by an irritation of the nerves in the area of the spine immediately under the skull. These are called the suboccipital nerves. They pass through small openings in the spinal column to muscles in the surrounding area. Any abnormal pressure or dysfunction of neck and muscles can irritate the nerves, causing tension.

The tension doesn't cause the headache. To treat this form of headache, attention should be paid to the bone and muscle structures. They should be returned to normal balance so they can function properly again.

Medication is not the answer to tension headaches. Aspirin and other painkillers may give you temporary relief-but they won't solve the problem. Once the source of the problem is found and treated, THEN you can get the relief you need.
