By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

The great-great grandson of the Top o' Texas Kid Pony Show originator Homer Taylor was among the 47 participants of the 43rd annual show opening Monday night at the local rodeo arena

Curtis Taylor Pritchett of Dallas-Lancaster not only appeared in the grand entry, he also placed second in the boys golfette and was a participant in the boys barrel race, as well.

Pritchett's great-greatgrandfather was among the area residents who began the Kid Pony Show in 1946, said Bob Caddell, announcer for the evening.

The youngest participant was Taylor B. Reeves, 16 months, son of B.B. and LaJona Reeves of Pampa. With his mother leading his pony Bobo, Taylor rode the boys golfette course. However, young Taylor's golf ball fell short of the pail and he was left with no time. Starting this early, though, he should have lots of years left to perfect his technique.

Mrs. Reeves, an accomplished horsewoman herself, said her son first began riding horses when he was 4 months old, riding in front of his mother.

When she thought Taylor was big enough, Mrs. Reeves said she began to sit her son on his own horse on a tiny saddle she had bought 10 years earlier in the hopes that one day she would have a little one to fit it.

Bush praises Solidarity on trip in Poland

By TERENCE HUNT AP White House Correspondent

GDANSK, Poland (AP) - President Bush today made a dramatic pilgrimage to the birthplace of the Solidarity labor movement and told cheering thousands their struggle had produced "a time when dreams can live again.'

"For those who say that freedom can be forever be denied, I say let them look at Poland," the president said in the emotional climax of a two-day visit.

"Poland is not alone. America stands with you," he said, renewing his pledge to provide assistance for Poland's economic reform

The president was introduced by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, who said he hoped the visiting American realized "our country should and deserves to be helped. ... God Bless America. May God bless our homeland," Walesa said.

Bush made the trip to the Solidarity Workers Monument outside the main gate to the Lenin shipyard after a private lunch at Walesa's home.

The president said Walesa had asked for private investment assistance in their talks. "I can give strong support for that standing right here in his yard," Bush said

On Monday, Bush had outlined a program of $115 million in U.S. aid and proposed easier repaynent terms for Poland'

American flags fluttered in the air as the president arrived at the monument to Polish workers killed in an uprising in 1970 during the birth of the labor movement. Thousands lined the route of his motorcade, then massed at the monument to hear Bush's pledge to stand with Poland.

Bush stressed that hard work and sacrifice are still ahead for Poles as they try to rebuild their economy.

But his main message was one of help and hope that their 40-year struggle - first against the Nazis, then against Communist suppression - will realize the 'ancient dream'' of freedom.

"Today the world watches the inevitable outcome of that struggle. Today to those who think hopes can be forever suppressed, I say, let them look at Poland."

"It is here in Poland where we can work to end the division of Europe. It is in your power to help end the division of Europe," Bush said. "The people of Poland can show the world what a free people with commitment and energy can accomplish."

Walesa and the crowd seemed reluctant to let the president go.

He urged Poles to stay in their country and help with rebuilding, rather then emigrate as so many thousands have done over the years. "Stay with us. Stay with us." came back the reply.

Standing in Walesa's backyard after lunch, Bush said, "I clearly Though Taylor was younger, his experience far outweighed that of Hulsey Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Flavious Smith of Pampa. But no participant could match Hulsey's dogged persistence.

Bystanders said Hulsey and his brother Peyton, grandsons of area rancher Bill Arrington, had ridden horses for the first time earlier this week. Though Hulsey might have been a greenhorn to the Kid Pony Show business when he started last night, he finished the evening quite a bit more knowledgeable.

Riding a large gray appaloosa. he competed in boys flag race, boys golfette and boys barrel race, bringing cheers from the crowd as he completed the events. He also rode in the calf riding.

Brother Peyton also competed in several events, winning a third-place buckle in the boys golfette for his first time out.

Following are the results from the Kid Pony Show, Group I (ages 5 and under) and Group II (ages 6 and 7). Belt buckles were awarded to the first, second and third-place winners.

City manager topic of executive session tonight

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners may decide the fate of City Manager Jack Chaney tonight during an executive session scheduled as part of the regular 6 p.m. City Commission meeting.

Chaney said last week he had been asked to resign. However, he later told reporters that com-sought his resignation. The matter is scheduled to be settled tonight. Mayor Richard Peet said last week the "chemistry" between Chaney and the commission did not seem to be working. Chaney described it as a failure to "click." However, commissioners have declined to publicly state what problems exist between the commission and the city manager. In an interview last week.

Chaney said the commission had yet to reprimand him on anything and he was unsure why they were displeased with his performance. An announcement on the city manager's position will follow the executive session, according to the official agenda.

Also scheduled for the executive session is a discussion on the vacant chief of police position, currently being filled by Deputy Chief Ken Hall.

the position could be filled by mid-July. However, this morning he said city staff were not ready to make a recommendation on the position.

Stolen plane crashes on residential street today

ARLINGTON (AP) - A stolen singleengine plane crashed early today on a street near a residential neighborhood, killing its 24-year-old pilot who had been on an apparent joyride, authorities say.

The victim, identified as William Stacy, took the aircraft from the same flight training facility where he had flown another plane on a joyride in October 1987, said Arlington Police spokesman Dee Anderson.

"We had had a case of this kid stealing a plane from the same place before. He had taken flying lessons from these people before," Anderson said.

On both occasions, Stacy unlawfully took a plane from Cothron Aviation Inc., according to officials. Anderson said he believes that after the 1987 incident federal authorities sought to ensure that Stacy could never obtain a pilot's license.

The Cessna 152, which had taken off from Arlington Municipal Airport with authorities in pursuit, crashed at 1:41 a.m. south of Interstate 20 after striking high-tension power lines. Stacy died of massive injuries.

"I could tell at the time it took off it was a stolen aircraft. I chased it down the field. It was going down the taxiway," said Tom Penalver, airport night manager who said the man had been flying around the facility for about one hour before the crash.

The Arlington pilot made several unsuccessful attempts to land at the airport, he said. Penalver said he was checking out runway lights about 1 a.m. when he noticed a car driven behind a hangar and he called police to the airport. "A few minutes later, the aircraft taxied out" he said. "It drove down the taxiway, adjacent to the runway, and we followed him as he took off."

An Arlington Fire Department crew, police and representatives of the Federal Aviation Administration were at the crash site. The National Transportation Safety Board was expected to arrive later today, said Anderson.

Residents said the plane crashed on a city street southeast of the airport, about 100 vards from houses at Newport Village, Phase

"I don't think I'll ever fly again," said Penalver. "I'm tired of seeing people killed. He wanted to fly. He learned how to fly the hard way. He had fun - for awhile."

Texas Senate approves two anti-flag burning measures

By JACK KEEVER Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has adopted two proposals against burning the United States flag, although a senator said he let one go through only because he had proved that the Constitution is more important than the flag.

A resolution that was approved was portrayed as reflecting the sentiment of the Senate. A bill, which also passed on voice vote, would make law. It was sent to the House for a vote.

A resolution petitioning Congress to pass a constitutional amendment to exempt desecration of the U.S. and Texas flags from protection of freedom of expression was approved after the threat of a filibuster disappeared.

Sen. Craig Washington, who temporarily blocked approval of the measure with a 12-hour filibuster last week, backed off Monday, saying Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby had persuaded him that "I had made the point that needed to be made, especially from the outpouring that I received all over the state.'

Washington, D-Houston, said as a result of news reports of his filibuster, he received congratulatory hand-delivered messages, telegrams and

Missing women suspect fights extradition

DALLAS (AP) — Taking his attorney's advice, a 28-year-old itinerant painter decided to fight extradition to Missouri and Kansas where he is wanted for questioning in one slaying and the disappearances of at least three women.

Richard Grissom Jr., who was arrested Friday at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport will remain in a Dallas County jail until a warrant from the governor of to 60 days, said James Benningfield, a fugitive extradition officer with the Dallas County sheriff's office.

Authorities in Kansas City, Mo., want to question Grissom about the disappearances of three suburban Kansas City

Molone received the scholarship from Leonard Horne, president of the Miss America pageant system, who gave her the award in the form of a big check during the televised pageant Saturday night. The daughter of Dan and Paula Molone of Pampa, Valerie said her application, as state winner, will also be going on to national competition with the possibility of earning more scholarship money

Mrs. Molone said her daughter has "done a lot of volunteer work during summers.

Molone, who said she hopes to be in future pageants, will be attending Southwestern Assemalmost 200 telephone calls.

Washington said in his filibuster that he opposed flag burning but did not want to tamper with the Constitution.

"I think not by what I've done, but what the people have done in responding ... politicians are going to be a little bit more careful about jumping on the bandwagon, because this demonstrates that there is not unanimity that it's all right to trample on the Constitution, because this is a hot, juicy, nice-sounding political issue," Washington told reporters

The bill sent to the House was described as a faster method of protecting the flag.

Both measures were approved on voice vote, and the only recorded test vote - on the resolution was 25-2.

The bill by Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, would make it a misdemeanor, punishable by up to one year in jail, to mutilate, destroy, deface or burn the United States flag.

Parmer said a recent Supreme Court decision in a Texas case did not declare the state law unconstitutional but said the statute was unconstitutionally > women last month. He has not been linked to any crimes in the Dallas area, authorities said.

Grissom's court-appointed attorney, Paul R. Shunatona, advised him not to sign extradition papers that would have sent him to Kansas immediately. Kansas officials now have 90 days to send a warrant to Gov. Bill Clements requesting Grissom's extradition, Investigator Benningfield said.

A hearing is set for Aug. 9 before a magistrate to determine whether a warrant from Kansas is in order.

Grissom was convicted at age 16 in the bludgeoning death of a 72-year-old Lansing, Kan., woman. He is being held without bail at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center.

No trace has been found of three missing suburban Kansas City women — Joan Butler, 24, of Overland Park, and roommates Theresa J. Brown, 22, and Christine A. Rusch, also 22, of Lenexa. The body of Terri Maness, 25, of Wichita, with whom Grissom had a date the night she was strangled and stabbed, has been recovered, Keller said.

Credit cards, jewelry and other belongings of at least one of the missing women were recovered from Grissom's car, and he matched the description of a prowler near a woman's apartment complex, said Kansas City Metro Squad Detective Larry Keller. Grissom has not been charged in the slaying or disappearances.

Clements favors mandatory workers' comp

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements vowed to call lawmakers back into a special session if they fail to change the state workers' compensation system, and said he favored mandatory workers' comp coverage, one of the major stumbling blocks between House and Senate proposals.

'I think that mandatory coverage would be good and I'm all for mandatory coverage," Clements said Monday

Although mandatory coverage is favored by the Senate, Clements blasted the senators, saying they were to blame for the impasse over how to compensate workers who are accidentally injured at work.

"They haven't put forward, what I would call, a substantial or significant bill that is required for Texas to get into the modern times," Clements said of the Senate

He said he was willing to force legislators to work on workers' comp until his term expires in 1991. "I have 18 months left, and I have no place to go," he said. The current special session ends July -19

Texas is one of three states that does not require employers to buy workers' comp insurance. Approximately 100,000 of the state's 300,000 employers do not carry workers' comp insurance, according to the Industrial Accident Board.

Nearly 800 Texans died in on-the-job accidents last year to lead the nation.

House and Senate conference committee members tangled Monday over the issue of job safety in the workers' comp system.

House members said the safety provisions should apply only to employers that purchase workers' comp insurance, but Senate conferees said all employers should follow the same rules. "If we really want to get a handle on comp costs, we need to get serious about safety," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur,

But Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, said the proposed overhaul should deal only with employers who purchase workers' comp insurance. "That's another issue," he said of Senate plans to make all employers follow the job-safety guidelines, and require all employers to purchase workers' comp insurance.

Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, said, "We do have a rather abysmal record in safety. What is wrong with doing something about the people who are getting hurt today?

The conferees failed to agree on the issue, but did agree to a plan to identify hazardous employers, whose record of worker injuries is above the industry average.

Under the proposal, hazardous employers would have to implement a safety plan and would face penalties if they violate that plan. The conferees also agreed to a provision to keep records of hazardous employers confidential

Joe Gagen, chairman of the Industrial Accident Board, said the board has requested an attorney general's opinion to determine whether records filed with the IAB concerning claims are confidential

Emergency farm loan applications accepted

Applications for emergency farm loans for losses caused by tornadoes, flooding and severe storms which began May 4, 1989 are being accepted at the Farmers Home Administaration (FmHA) office in Wheeler. FmHA County Supervisor John D. Wolf III said.

Hemphill and Roberts Counties are two of 60 in Texas recently named by Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng as eligible for loans to cover part of actual production losses resulting from the storms.

Wolf said farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 80 percent of their actual losses of the operat-• ing loans needed to continue in business of $500,000, whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit form private commercial lenders, the interest rate is 4.5 percent.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for an FmHA emergency loan," the supervisor said. Farmers participating in the PIK or Federal Crop Insurance programs will have to figure in proceeds from those programs in determining their loss.

"Applications for loans under this emergency designation will be accepted until Feb. 26, 1990 but farmers should apply as soon as possible. Delays in applying could create backlogs in processing and possibly over into the new farming season," Wolf said.

FmHA is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is authorized to provide disaster emergency loans to recognized farmers who work at and rely on farming for a substantial part of their living. Eligibility is extended to individual farmers who are U.S. citizens and to farming partnerships, corporations or cooperatives in which U.S. citizens hold a majority interest.

The FmHA office is located at 112 West Oklahoma in Wheeler and is open from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

City staff said this morning that the circumstances surrounding the selection of Peat Marwick were discussed in executive session and are not yet public record. Therefore, they could not comment on why the matter is being brought back before the commission.

Commissioners will also be updated on the prison survey which was conducted in The Pampa News. Residents have until Friday to return the survey to any of several locations printed on the bottom of the sheet, including the Grav County Clerk's Office.

A spokesperson for that office said this morning that survey results have not been counted yet, but that public response has been excellent. The poll is being jointly conducted by the city, county, Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce and Industrial Foundation

Famed actor Laurence Olivier dies at 82

By MATT WOLF Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) - Laurence Olivier, the foremost actor of his generation and leader of the giants of the English-speaking theater, died today. He was 82. He died "peacefully in his sleep," surrounded by friends and relatives, said his agent, Laurence Evans. The cause of death was not given. Olivier's last professional appearance was in the 1988 movie War Requiem, based on the oratorio by composer Benjamin Britten.

He was to be buried in a private funeral service, with a public memorial service to be held later, Evans said.

Knighted, ennobled and universally revered by the film and theater world, he was Lord Olivier when he died, one of the very few Britons to be given a seat in the House of Lords for his acting prowess.

He gave the world its definitive Hamlet, Henry V and Richard III, as well as, at age 76, a matchless King Lear for television. He set a new standard for film hero in Wuthering Heights and embodied the whole painful experience of aging in The Entertainer on stage and A Voyage Round My Father and Brideshead Revisited on television.

At the same time, with ferocious will, he fought cancer, pleurisy and a muscle disease that made even handshakes agony. He endured two miserable marriages and years of paralyzing stage fright, contemplated murder and suicide, and battled his own rages, guilts and drinking.

Olivier

On his 80th birthday tributes flowed during a ceremony at the National Theater, which he founded in 1963.

"Awe and wonder, you gave us awe and wonder," actress Dame Peggy Ashcraft told him at the time. Director Peter Hall called him "the genius performer." For Olivier, life and acting were inseparable. "I have to act to breathe," he said. By turns, he loved and hated his craft - but never would contemplate retiring from it. Acting simply consumed him. He was forever searching for new ways to broaden his range and reach the hearts of his audience. For instance, seeking to conjure up as abject a cry of despair as has ever been heard on stage, he would imagine the cry of the arctic seal when it licks the salt laid down by its hunters and its tongue sticks to the ice.

Whatever sex drive he had, Olivier wrote in his 1982 autobiography Confessions of an Actor, went into his acting. "You can't be more than one kind of athlete at a time. A sexual athlete is not likely to find sufficient energy for work of another athletic kind.'

Born May 22, 1907, in the town of Dorking southwest of London, Laurence Kerr Olivier was the third child of an Anglican clergyman who encouraged him to try acting

He was forever searching for new ways to broaden his range and reach the hearts of his audience.

His first stage was at home, with footlights made of cocoa⁻ cans. At 10, he was Brutus in a school performance. At 15, he donned women's clothes to play Katherine in a Stratford Festival boys' production of The Taming of the Shrew.

After studying acting in Birmingham, his first professional role was in 1922 in a sketch in a small touring company. In his first London role, in Alice Law's 1924 Byron, he tripped over a doorsill and fell on his face.

His first marriage, to actress Jill Esmond in 1930, produced a son but ended in divorce. Meanwhile, his career was soaring through Noel Coward's Private Lives in London and New York, and Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, in which he and John Gielgud alternated playing Romeo and Mercutio.

With Gielgud and Ralph Richardson, fellow knights-to-be, he formed a partnership that remade English theater.

Olivier played a dazzling succession of Shakespearean triumphs — Hamlet, Henry V, Macbeth. Movie stardom came in 1939 when he moved to Hollywood and made Wuthering Heights.

In that same year, Olivier appeared with Vivien Leigh in a New York production of Romeo and Juliet. After nearly two years of clandestine love, he obtained a divorce and the two were wed.

That marriage, glamorous in public, was another debacle. Leigh soon fell out of love, had a series of affairs and descended into manic depression that tormented Olivier. He had crippling bouts of stage fright and contemplated suicide.

They finally were divorced in 1961, and Olivier wed actress Joan Plowright, with whom he finally found happiness. They had a son, Richard, and two caughters, Tamsin and Julie-Kate. All three are either studying, or working in, the theater.

During World War II, he made the three films that sealed his reputation as the finest Shakespearean actor in film: Henry V. Hamlet, for which he won a best-actor Oscar in 1949, and Richard III.

He also played in popular movies late in his career, including The Boys From Brazil and Marathon Man. In 1979, he received a special Academy Award for his film work.

Downtown vandalism

Louise Box of Michelle's works on replanting flowers in a planter on the south side of the building at Kingsmill and Cuyler on Monday morning after employees found the flowers had been torn from planters at the front and side of the building. Box said the vandalism had probably occurred sometime Sunday since the flowers had withered on the sidewalk from exposure to the sun. She is hoping the roots will retake in the planters so the flowers can survive. Other downtown merchants have experienced similar problems with their planters, though Box said this is the worst example she has yet seen.

Hunts' attorney denies partnership was scam

By JENNIFER DIXON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Hunt brothers, heirs to one of the world's greatest fortunes, are now in court defending a partnership created to repay debts they didn't have the cash to cover when the silver market collapsed nine years ago.

Once Texas billionaires, Nelson Bunker and William Herbert Hunt are each contesting some $150 million in taxes the Internal Revenue Service says they owe from the partnership's dissolution in 1982.

A third brother, Lamar, is contesting $500,000 in taxes in a non-jury trial expected to last up to a month before U.S. Tax Court Judge Jules G. Korner III.

In a windowless room in U.S. Tax Court illed with box after heavy box of documents, mate business and not a "colossal sham" as the IRS appears to assert.

"The suggestion that 10 or 12 of the largest banks in the United States would knowingly participate in structuring such an elaborate sham must be viewed as far-fetched," said Michael Henke, an attorney for Bunker and Herbert Hunt.

While the 1982 tax year is the sole subject of the trial, government attorneys have said the outcome could affect other IRS claims against Bunker and Herbert in preceding and subsequent tax years.

Those claims, totaling $1 billion in taxes and interest, exceed what the Bunker and Herbert say their assets are worth in U.S. Bankruptcy Court documents filed in connection with their Chapter 11 reorganization.

And because the IRS is a priority creditor in Bankruptcy Court, the outcome of the tax ase," Henke said.

Henke said testimony would reveal that the precious metals trader and chemical manufacturer "threatened a lawsuit to pierce the six trusts owning Placid" to collect its debts. Under the disputed partnership agreement, Placid contributed cash and notes totaling $824 million, obtained through a $1.1 billion loan from a consortium of banks.

The Hunts contributed silver, gold stocks, coal properties and other assets that Henke said had an "aggregate gross value of more than $1 billion and a net contribution value of approximately $408 million.

While Henke claims the Hunts contributed coal properties worth $294 million in 1980, the IRS claims those properties were worth $16 million. And when the partnership was dissolved, the IRS claims the coal properties were worth $6 million, compared with Hunt claims the coal properties were worth $262 million charts and a team of lawyers on both sides, the brothers and their wives listened Monday as the IRS argued the partnership was a taxable financial arrangement to restructure debts from a silver-buying binge.

"The partnership was created to provide financial relief to the petitioners at a time when they needed it very badly," IRS attorney Deborah Butler said in opening arguments.

But an attorney for the Hunts claimed the partnership, set up in an "atmosphere of panic" to repay debts after the silver price collapse in March 1980, was indeed a legititrial could determine the size of Hunt settlements with other bankruptcy court creditors. Lamar is not in bankruptcy court.

In his opening arguments Monday, Henke said the Hunts formed the partnership with Placid Oil Co. after a New Jersey company threatened the family's flagship business, founded in 1935 by their father, the legendary Texas oil wildcatter H.L. Hunt.

"The Hunts' silver problems came to a head at the end of March 1980 when Bunker and Herbert Hunt were unable to come up with $434 million to pay Engelhard (Corp.) for silver they had agreed in January to purch-

Henke said the issue for the court to decide is not the precise fair market value of the coal properties in 1980, but whether the value assigned them was reasnable.

Henke said after the court session that the brothers were in a "rush-rush" atmosphere to repay their debts because brokerage houses faced going belly up and the price of silver could have fallen further.

"There was a great feeling that the financial system of our country was threatened," he said.

House committee approves bill to repeal law on crime victims

By PEGGY FIKAC Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Police would no longer be allowed to withhold the names of felony crime victims, but the information could not be used to solicit business, under a bill approved by a House committee

The State Affairs Committee on Monday approved a substitute to a Senate bill that simply would have repealed the new law permitting police to withhold felony victims' names. The substitute bill adds the solicitation section.

The confidentiality law was protested by news organizations after a number of law enforcement agencies began withholding information they previously made public.

The law was passed in the regular session that ended May 29.

"Texas Media believes the public has a right to know of crimes committed in their neighborhood and community. If the public is denied that information, citizens who are unaware that a crime had occurred would not be able to take precautionary steps to protect themselves," said George Irish, San Antonio Light publisher, representing Texas Media before the committee.

Texas Media is a First Amendment and freedom-ofinformation coalition of seven Texas news media organizations. The committee approved the measure 12-0, allowing it to be scheduled for consideration by the full House. The House committee version, in addition to the repeal, would prohibit using crime victim information obtained from law enforcement agencies to solicit business from the victim or a family member of the victim. The law would apply to victims who were physically injured in a crime or whose home was illegally entered.

The bill would give the attorney general power to sue under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act to stop such use of the information. Violation of the law would be punishable by civil penalties totaling up to $10,000 and the payment of court costs and attorney's fees.

The repeal would be immediate, and the solicitation section would take effect Jan. 1.

'Certainly, given the time that we had to work on this bill, I'm satisfied," said Rep. Fred Blair, D-Dallas, who sponsored the original confidentiality measure with Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas.

Leedom said he also favored the substitute, and that he would move to concur with the changes if they are passed by the full House.

Bee County angry at neighbor's prison bid

BEEVILLE (AP) — Bee County officials are mad as hornets after learning Nueces County also intends to seek a state penitentiary that Bee County has been chasing.

Bee County's economic development director, Grady C. Hogue, has been working more than a year to persuade the Texas Department of Corrections to choose the South Texas county ·for a new maximum-security prison next November, according to the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

The county and Beeville have spent $30,000 on Hogue's plan, including $8,000 in land options. Officials estimate the prison would generate a monthly payroll of $1.3 million and add at least 450 jobs to the area.

Beeville Mayor Jesse DeRusse Jr. lashed out at Nueces County officials Monday after learning that the more prosperous county to his south also is seeking a state prison.

"I am appalled at the efforts of Nueces County to put a cog in our efforts," DeRusse said in a press conference Monday. "We have always worked together, and I question the ethics of initially receiving their support for our proposal, and then deciding to study it themselves."

Last fall, Nueces County went on the record as a supporter of Bee County's effort to win the prison.

Corpus Christi Mayor Betty Turner said that support has not changed, but it is still in Nueces County's best interest to also consider competing for the facility. "The county needs every economic opportunity available." Mrs. Turner said.

Mrs. Turner said regional cooperation will be important no matter which site the TDC chooses.

The deadline for presenting bids to the TDC is July 31.

The Texas Department of Corrections is soliciting proposals for a 2,200-bed maximumsecurity prison. Applicants are asked to include a donation of 300 acres on which to construct the $64 million facility.

The state also is accepting proposals for a $22 million, 1,000bed medium-security prison that would employ a staff of about 260 with an average monthly payroll of $461,000.

EVER STRIVING FOR'THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion HUD's scandals reveal problems

Democrats aren't the only ones suffering from scandals. According to reports in The New York Times, a 1984 government audit accused Housing and Urban Development regional administrator Geraldine McGann and other officials in Island Park, N.Y., "of rigging the distribution of HUD subsidized houses to favor politically connected villagers and to exclude blacks." Some HUD houses were bought for $40,000 to $64,000, then sold for as much $270,000. That's like buying a house in Gray County for $40,000 from the government, then selling it at market rates.

Those who reportedly received preferential treatment include a son of McGann and a cousin of Alfonse D'Amato, the Republican senator from New York. D'Amato lives in Island Park and is McGann's political mentor. He denies all connection to the project. But last year D'Amato successfully lobbied HUD to spend $1 million in taxpayers' money to build a swimming pool at the project. Island Park officials appreciated that so much they named one HUD-project street D'Amato Drivce.

Things have become so bad that HUD Secretary Jack Kemp has ordered a new investigation into Island Park housing projects. And he placed McGann on administrative leave for the investigation's duration; she will continue to collect her $68,572 taxpayer-funded salary.

Kemp also barred senior HUD employees from serving on "any state or local government agency board or panel that does business with any part of the department or whose work or activities are in any way related to the programs of the department. It's about time such rules were implemented. Kemp is new to the job, so we can hope for more actions to clean up his department. But the real problem is that government has no business building houses and swimming pools. Why should Gray County taxpayers fund a $1 million swimming pool in the city of an influential New York senator? Even if his actions are not technically illegal, D'Amato should be ashamed of his part in taking our money. And it's even worse that Gray County residents must subsidize a scheme that lets New York speculators buy cheap government houses, which are than sold at a huge profit. HUD programs are supposed to help poor people find adequate housing. But, as always happens when government imposes itself on the basic activities of life, the poor are hurt while swindlers and hustlers end up with the booty. HUD urban-renewal projects have left behind acres of slums and vacant lots, as one can see driving through such big cities such as Detroit. The poor have had their tax money seized to fund government projects that tear up their own neighborhoods. Kemp should be commended for working to end influence-peddling and corruption at HUD, but the only real reform would be to abolish HUD itself. The poor will find housing if we let them keep their tax dollars while protecting their property rights.

It looks good at first glance

The U.S. Senate has just approved a measure allotting large sums of money for child care, and American parents should welcome it - just as a child should jump at the chance to take candy from a stranger. An offer that looks generous and benevolent at first glance turns out to be something quite different.

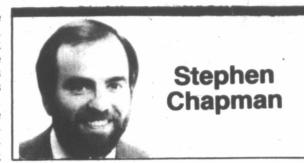

"The purpose of the Act for Better Child Care Services of 1989," say its advocates, "is to increase the availability, affordability, and quality of child care throughout the nation." That isn't the real purpose, and it won't be the result. Just the opposite: The program is guaranteed to make child care scarcer and more expensive, without necssarily improving it.

Let it be noted, however, that every family with small children will get something. A small minority will get help in paying their day-care expenses. The great majority of parents will get the bill.

Despite the lofty promises of its authors, the proposal has two real purposes. The first is to push families toward the decisions about child rearing that the federal government thinks they should make, regardless of their own desires. The second is to extend government control over an industry that has been regulated largely by the preferences of parents.

The bill provides about $3.5 billion in tax credits to parents and subsidies to day-care centers. Equally important, it requires states to regulate child care; the stricter the rules, the more money they would get.

But notice that all child care is not created equal. If you put your child in a large, institutional day-care facility, you'll get federal help. If you put your child with a neighbor who looks after a few kids every day in her home, you'll get zilch.

Not all families are created equal, either. If you're part of an affluent two-career couple, you'll be better off under this program. If you're part of a couple making painful financial sacrifices so that Mom (or Dad) can stay home to take care of the kids — well, tough luck for you.

This bias is no accident. Congress clearly didn't want to help all families with children. If it had, it would have simply given a tax credit to McClure had fallen into a well in her backyard all of them, letting them spend the extra income as they choose.

The choice might be defensible if most American couples preferred to pursue dual careers and let licensed day-care workers do much of the work of raising their kids. In fact, a large majority of couples with small children have made exactly the opposite decision.

We are informed by supposed experts that the old "Ozzie and Harriet" family is as extinct as the brontosaurus. Not true: Most mothers with preschool kids don't work outside the home, and many of the rest work only part-time. Only one out of three mothers with small children is employed full-time. And only 11 percent of preschool kids are in formal day-care facilities.

It's true that a lot more mothers work today than 20 years ago. And the government has no a better America, the ABC bill is for you.

business trying to reverse that trend. But it's hard to see why it ought to be trying to accelerate it, which is what this measure does. Some 88 percent of mothers, after all, say that if they could afford it, they would stay home with their children.

It's also hard to see why Washington should be bribing families to put their kids in institutional facilities instead of informal day care, with relatives, neighbors or baby-sitters. The bill's supporters reply, in effect: Formal child care is the only good kind. They cite scare tales of the dangers of informal care — like Jessice McClure of Midland, Texas, who fell into a well at an unlicensed facility.

The charge that many facilities are unhealthy, unsafe and generally bad for kids rests on the idea that parents who are perfectly capable of raising their children are incapable of selecting other people to help them. If Jessica while in her mother's care, would senators propose to license mothers?

By generating tough regulations, the law won't guarantee an adequate supply of safe, healthy day-care facilities. All it can do is drive out the ones that don't meet its dubious standards, which are generally cheaper. That will leave some parents without any affordable option at all.

But with all its flaws, the bill allowed members to say they've addressed the child care problem. When their constituents figure out that they aren't getting what they expected, Congress will have an excuse to expand the program - and to further expand its claim on our wallets and its control over our lives. If more tax collectors and bureaucrats are your formula for

They won't admit liking grits

A nationwide competition ended the other day when Sears announced that it's moving part of the company to a Chicago suburb. Previously, the company had considered moving 6,000 of their employees from Chicago to Charlotte. At that point, an anonymous comedian concocted a two-page "Application to Live in North Carolina" and circulated it amongst Sears' employees in Chicago.

There was a section where the applicant was asked to identify his or her "Daddy." That was followed by, "If unknown, attach list of three suspects.

There were blocks to identify the applicant's neck color, and there was also a section that asked the applicant to put how many teeth were exposed in a full grin.

What the application amounted to was an exercise in trite Southener stereotypes that indicated all Southerners were illegitimate, toothless, ignorant rednecks.

The application went on to ask how many empty beer cans were on the floor of the applicant's truck. The applicant was asked to define such terms as "chitlins" and "fatback," and to name favorite vocalists from Donna Fargo to Conway Twitty.

There also was a section asking whether the applicant could count over 10.

application, which was published in the Charlotte Observer.

Those who sent the copies all asked I write a rebuttal to the application and "defend the South.

I really don't think the South needs any defending just because some yahoo in Chicago thinks Southerners don't know who fathered them.

And if Sears had moved some of its people out of Chicago to Charlotte it wouldn't have taken them long to realize we now have paved roads and indoor plumbing, and nobody marries his sister

But, because I am a strong believer in getting even, I would like to offer a listing of a few things North Carolina residents might have expected My office has received dozens of copies of the of Sears' employees from Chicago if they had been transferred south. Stereotyping is such fun:

• They dress funny. A favorite summer outfit of Northern men tends to be a pair of knee-length Bermuda shorts, a pair of sandals and black stretch socks they attempt to pull all the way up to their armpits.

• The women have fat, hairy thighs.

• Someone ought to open a reptile farm. Yankees love to actually pay to go inside one. They all talk louder than you do.

• They tend to be on the obnoxious side, and whenever they become confused, they all say, "This ain't duh way we did it back in Chicaga."

• They eventually will like grits once somebody points out grits are actually very good if you put cheese and butter on them.

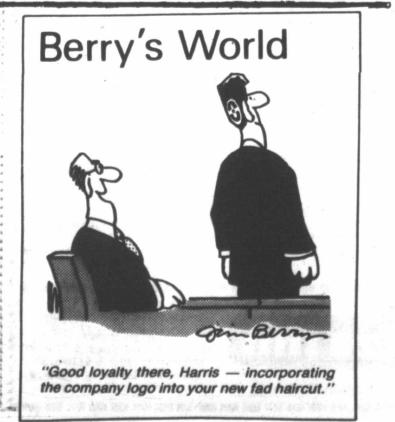

• But they won't admit it.

- They pick their noses in church.
- They have greasy hair.
- They don't use deodorant.
- They belch loudly in public places.

• They never have heard of Richard Petty. • They do not believe it when you tell them Michael Jordan was a North Carolina Tarheel long before he bacame a Chicago Bull.

 They do not believe it when you tell them it was two guys in North Carolina who invented the airplane.

And they would never go back to Chicago.

Think before you burn our flag, please

By SARAH OVERSTREET

The Supreme Court has ruled that flag-burning is protected by the Constitution's free-speech guarantee. I agree with their decision, and I think President Bush's call for a constitutional amendment outlawing any flag-besmirching is ill-advised.

Either all expression is guaranteed by the Constitution, or none is. With the exception of speech or action that treads on someone else's constitutional rights, we can't go around outlawing expressions we don't agree with.

Nevertheless, the particular expression that the Supreme Court upheld this time makes me sick. It makes me sick just like any other stupid act that purports to protest one person or group by desecrating something that is sacred to other people as well. Usually, the symbol the protesters attack means little or nothing to the actual targets of their ire.

I doubt if you could find a better example of this misplaced symbolism than the burning of a flag. Protesters usually say they're protesting government leaders or those leaders' policies. But that's lunacy. They're not burning a symbol of the men or women who run the government any more than burning a school letter is an effective protest against the superintendent or the school board.

What protesters are burning - or walking on or making into a pair of trousers or whatever else they decide to do to the American flag - is a symbol precious to people who have nothing to do with government leaders or policies.

I'm not sure when I became conscious that the American flag meant something so fundamentally impor-tant to me. I suspect the whole concept was pretty murky until I was way past the age when some of these flag-burners took up the sport.

But I do know the realization hit me in small increments. I remember the first time I traveled overseas and how overjoyed I was to see the flag flying above the airport when I got back. There's nothing like poor, jam-packed socialist countries to make you appreciate middle-class America.

And there was the time, standing for the national anthem at a majorleague ball game, when I was suddenly struck with how much I enjoy because of the ideals that flag represents. I have no idea why the realization crystallized for me at that point, but I know that, for most of my adult life, my widening knowledge of other countries and governments has put me in awe of what we have accomplished in this imperfect but wonderful democracy.

And at this stage of my life, I am increasingly aware that my thinking sometimes differs from how other eople would like me to think. Perhaps that's what I think of most when I see that flag flapping against the blue sky - we have managed to protect freedom of thought and expression for 213 years through some pretty scary challenges.

So, flag-burners of the world, you may continue your juvenile, misplaced "protests" with no fear of punishment. One thing that flag stands for is your freedom to burn it. But I just wish that the next time you're tempted to strike a match you pick something that really means something to the leaders you hate. Burn a copy of "Winning Through Intimidation," for example.

Or, if you can't think of a symbol that would really mean something to the guys you're unhappy with, ask yourselves who you'll really be hurting by defiling a flag - good, common people who love that flag for as many reasons as there are freedoms and opportunities here; people whose loved ones died to preserve those freedoms. People like me.

PAMPA NEWS-Tuesday, July 11, 1989.5. Two killed as tornadoes smash through states in Northeast

By JOHN DONNELLY Associated Press Writer

Tornadoes smashed through the Northeast, hurling a trailer through the air, flinging a small plane off a runway and ripping roofs off dozens of homes. At least two people were killed, dozens injured and hundreds left homeless.

The twisters, rare in the area, touched down Monday evening in four states and left thousands without electricity.

A heat wave, meanwhile, scorched the Midwest and at least three cities opened "cooling centers?' to give residents an escape from temperatures that hovered around 100 degrees Monday.

No relief was in sight, and officials in Illinois worried about drought. Heat was a factor in one death in St. Louis.

In the Northeast, tornadoes roared from northern New Jersey to central Massachusetts. Hardest hit were coastal Connecticut and two southeastern New York towns and a Long Island village.

Scattered thunderstorms boomed over southeastern New York, southern Connecticut and northern New Jersey. In a halfhour, 4.4 inches of rain poured in Oxford, Conn.

with glass. In Waterbury, Conn., the storm tore off roofs, uprooted trees on the city green, and bent the tip of a flagpole. Streets were littered Mayor Joseph Santopietro imposed a 10 p.m. curfew.

John Calamo, deputy director of civil preparedness in Hamden, said 40 to 60 homes suffered heavy damage but no major injuries were reported. The storm also did major damage to an industrial park, a 16-unit townhouse condominium and an auto body shop and the 25 cars inside. 'There's probably three-quarters of a square mile of devastation," he said.

Brian Johnson, a tenant at the condominium, said the tornado demolished his kitchen and sent kitchen knives flying into his livingroom. "My neighbor found her refrigerator in her living room," he said.

Thirty-seven people were treated in New Haven hospitals for minor injuries, and 27 people were treated at Waterbury Hospital for mostly minor injuries, although several people suffered broken bones, officials said.

More than 112,000 people in northwestern and southern Connecticut were without power, said spokesmen for Northeast Utilities and United Illuminating.

Fifty miles north of New York City, a tornado overturned cars and damaged homes in Carmel and Southeast township. Officials declared a state of emergency for all of Putnam County.

At a condominium complex in Carmel, 70 units were damaged, half of them severely, said the county's public information officer, Ken Lott. Dozens were left homeless.

No serious injuries were reported.

On Long Island, a tornado roared through Spadaro Airport in East Moriches, hurling a trailer into the air and dropping it in pieces across the airfield, witnesses said.

A man inside the trailer, which served as a skydiving school, was blown out and treated for cuts at a hospital.

The wind picked a small plane off the runway and dumped it upside down away into woods 100 feet away. Several other planes also were damaged.

In Massachusetts, a series of 'mini-tornadoes'' - small twisters 50 to 100 feet in length knocked out power and telephones, felled trees and damaged homes in the Princeton, Steling and West Boylston areas.

Most of the damage was in woods, said the National Weather Service.

In New Jersey, twisters left behind downed electrical wires and fallen trees, but no injuries were reported.

The Midwest's heat spurred officials to open cooling centers, or large air-conditioned rooms, in Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati.

Two firefighters die during battles against fires in the West

By ROGER PETTERSON Associated Press Writer

Improved weather helped fire crews defeat several timber and brush fires across the West on Monday, but flames still kept hundreds of people away from homes and campgrounds.

A firefighter was killed by a falling tree in California's scenic Big Sur country, and a firefighter died after being struck by lightning while fighting a blaze in Arizona's Tonto National Forest.

In Colorado, archeologists accompanied fire crews to prevent damage to artifacts near Indian cliff dwellings.

More than 11,500 firefighters were on the lines in the Western states, up about 1,500 from Sunday, said Ann Finkelstein of the federal Interagency Fire Center at Boise, Idaho.

Finkelstein said that as of mid-Monday, 44 fires burned uncontrolled, covering about 167,000 acres, an increase of about 50,000 acres from Sunday cabin was destroyed by fire. "It's wilderness, 120 miles south of San like someone took a bomb and dropped it on the cabin.'

Some residents, evacuated from their threatened homes, were allowed back under escort Monday to get valuables, but forced to flee again when wind turned the fire back on already burned areas

About 300 firefighters were on the lines, and five 20-person crews from Kentucky were being dispatched, said Dave Steinke, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman. The edge of the fire was six miles west of downtown Boulder.

Sheriff Brad Leach said the fire was started Sunday by a resident.

"We know for sure where the fire started and that it was from somebody's trailer," Leach said. "We're questioning that individual to try and determine whether he knew he did it or whether it was an accident."

Francisco, a falling tree killed a prison inmate Sunday night and six members of his crew were injured, including two with broken bones, said state forestry department spokeswoman Karen Terrill

"It's steep and rocky and slick," said forestry department spokesman Bill Jones.

The fire had blackened 2,655 acres and was 50 percent contained Monday night, Jones said. In Nebraska, firefighters used aerial attacks against fires that burned dry pine trees and grassland over an area 22-by-8 miles in the state's northwest corner.

Up to six planes at a time each dumped 300 gallons of water on the flames The blaze, which officials estimated had charred about 50,000 acres since Saturday, was partially contained.

In Arizona, lightning

Firefighters battled a halfdozen blazes in the Colorado mountains including a 1,900-acre fire that destroyed at least 49 homes near Boulder and another burning near the ancient Indian cliff dwellings of Mesa Verde National Park.

"It's like a war scene," said Jonathan Trent, whose mountain

At Mesa Verde, site of the ancient Anasazi cliff dwellings, archaeologists flagged ruins so work crews digging fire lines would not damage them.

"We're not going to compromise the archaeology of the area to put a bulldozer line in," said Paul Hefner, a firefighter from the Bureau of Land Management.

Soviet police want more funds to fight crime

MOSCOW (AP) — The government doesn't spend enough to fight crime, which is up 40 percent this year, the top Soviet law enforcer said in appealing for funds to raise salaries and put more and better equipment on the streets.

Interior Minister Vadim V: Bakatin told the legislature, or Supreme Soviet, on Monday that his department, which runs the national police, doesn't have the resources to stop crime.

Bakatin spoke shortly before the 542-member Supreme Soviet voted to retain him as interior minister, a post he has held since October.

He was subject to confirmation along with nearly 60 other officials appearing before the new legislature, which has rejected several candidates for the Supreme Court and Cabinet.

Does your broker have all the answers before you ask any questions?

It's possible. Many brokers work for firms who sell their own brand of investment products. The sad fact is, they are highly motivated to sell these particular products. With that in mind, is it any wonder that these "house brands" can become the answer, before you ask the question?

This lack of objectivity is one of the most compelling reasons to consider making a change to a Linsco or Private Ledger financial consultant. Professionals who have chosen to work as independents, free from the conflicts posed by "house brands" and quotas.

These brokers know that no single investment product can always be the right answer for their clients. So, they use the powerful research capacility of Linsco or Private Ledger to sift through well over a hundred investment possibilities before presenting clients with the topperforming choices.

Voice of Bugs Bunny and other Looney Tunes legions dead at 81

By WENDY E. LANE Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Mel Blanc, "The Man of A Thousand Voices," including the legions of Looney Tune stars such as Porky Pig, Daffy Duck, Tweety Pie, Elmer Fudd and that mischievously silly wabbit Bugs Bunny, has died. He was 81.

The originator of such lines as Bugs' "Eh, what's up, Doc?," Sylvester the Cat's "Thufferin' thuccotash!," and Porky's "Th-th-that's all, folks" died Monday from complications from heart disease and other ailments.

By his own count, Blanc estimated he had mastered at least 900 different accents and dialects during a career spanning more than 50 years.

Working in an age without high-tech sound effects, Blanc was a human synthesizer, a verbal computer. It has been estimated that more than 20 million people hear his voices daily.

He invented the voices of such characters as Woody Woodpecker, Speedy Gonzalez, Pepe Le Pew, Tasmanian Devil, Road Runner, Foghorn Leghorn, Heathcliffe the cat, Speed Buggy, Yosemite Sam and that Oscar-winning rabbit Bugs Bunny and broke through to the child in all of us.' Longtime friend Mickey Rooney said: "The reservoir of Hollywood legends is extremely low, and Mel Blanc's passing is a deep personal loss.' Born in San Francisco on May 30, 1908, and raised in Portland, Ore., Blanc discovered his vocal skills while in grammar school.

Blanc a man "whose talent transcended all ages

He started his career in 1927 as a musician and radio perfomer.

In 1928, Blanc — who played the bass, violin and sousaphone - was hired by the NBC Radio Orchestra in San Francisco.

In 1937, he joined Warner Bros.' cartoon studio, which produced one short feature subject each week

His first Warner character was a drunken bull in the Looney Tunes short Picador Porky. As legend has it, the actor playing Porky in that short did stutter. A few months later, Blanc took over in Porky's Duck Hunt, stuttering intact, and created Daffy Duck.

Blanc introduced Bugs in the 1940 short A Wild Hare, giving the character a combination Bronx and Brooklyn accent. Bugs won an Oscar in 1958 for Nighty Night Bugs.

CIA denies bungling defector case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency says a defector from the Soviet Union's KGB is free to go if he doesn't like it here.

In a rare public statement, the agency on Monday denied it had mishandled the case of Victor Gundarev, 49, former security chief of the Soviet Embassy in Athens.

The CIA said it "welcomes an inquiry by the intelligence committees in Congress" into its handling of Gundarev.

According to an article by David Wise in The Sunday New York Times, Gundarev defected from the KGB in February 1986.

Wise, who has written extensively about the CIA, said Gundarev wrote him, "I came to the conclusion after three years in U.S.A that those people who would like to defect with the help of CIA should think twice," and was seeking an interview at the State Department with Soviet officials to discuss going home.

Wise compared the case to that of Vitaly Yurchenko, head of North American espionage for the KGB, who defected in Rome in 1985

Yurchenko retreated to the Soviet embassy in Washington less than three months later and held a specatular press conference to the embarrassment of the CIA

Gundarev, wrote Wise, has written CIA Director William Webster that he and his wife and son were promised "a normal way of life as free citizens in a democratic country," but his belongings were searched, his telephone tapped and his letters opened.

"From the beginning they treated me as a dangle (a false defector), another Yurchenko, specially sent," Wise quoted Gundarev as saying.

The CIA statement said, "The allegation that the CIA invades the privacy of individuals, as described in The New York Times article, is false. So, too, is the charge of mishandling.

The agency said it and the FBI had tried hard to smooth Gundarev's transition to U.S. residence, had resettled him in an undisclosed location and had paid him "a substantial amount of money" for his information.

"As with all individuals residing in this country legally, Mr. Gundarev is free to travel to any country he chooses," the CIA said.

Wise said Gundarev's information had proved less than topnotch in some instances.

John Bothwell, a former CIA agent and submarine captain, was arrested in Britain on the basis of Gundarev's report that Bothwell was an agent he ran, but charges against Bothwell later were dropped.

Last week, she remembered and pointed the finger at her exhusband.

Police arrested George Gurney, 52, and charged him with first-degree murder, kidnapping and attempted murder. He is accused of killing Roger Whittemore, 52, of Swampscott, Mass., and taking his ex-wife prisoner on Feb. 16.

State Attorney General John Arnold said Gurney, of Newburyport, Mass., had been a suspect from the outset.

Gurney denies the shootings and is fighting extradition from Massachusetts. But New Hampshire authorities are confident he'll be in their custody soon. At a district court hearing Friday in Lawrence, Mass., Gurney pleaded innocent to being a fugitive from the New Hampshire charges.

Gurney said he was at home ill with a sinus condition the night Stoltz-Gurney claims he burst into her bedroom wearing camouflage fatigues and leather boots. He also denies owning camouflage clothing.

"Everybody believes her story because she's the heroine," Gurney said in a jailhouse interview with the Lawrence (Mass.) But Gurney characterized the relationship as platonic.

He also did voices for Elmer Fudd and numerous other characters he performed on 850 cartoons for Warner Bros.' Looney Tunes and Merrie Melodies.

He was the babbling Barney Rubble and the hyperactive, yammering Dino, Fred Flintstone's pet dinosaur on the popular Hanna-Barbera series: Mr. Spacely on The Jetsons, and the Frito Bandito.

"Those voices were part of him, and he loved every moment of it," said Blanc's son, Noel. "When the kids would come to the door or in the studio, he became those characters."

His final cartoon contribution came with 1988's popular animation-live action film, Who Framed Roger Rabbit, in which he did the voices of Daffy, Tweety, Bugs and Sylvester.

The film's director, Robert Zemeckis, called Blanc eventually became known as "The Man of a Thousand Voices." But the most Warner ever paid him was $20,000, and the studio retained rights to the phrases Blanc invented.

In addition to working in animation, he was a regular on radio's The Jack Benny Show, playing Professor LeBlanc, Benny's violin teacher, and the train dispatcher who announced the stops of "Ana-heim, A-zusa and KOOK-amunga!"

Blanc also made the wheezing sounds of the timeworn 1924 Maxwell automobile owned by Benny's skinflint comedy character.

He reprised many of the roles when Benny moved to television.

In addition to Blanc's son, survivors include his wife, the former Estelle Rosenbaum. Funeral services were pending.

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney Jo Ann Howard said she is anxious to begin her new job on the State Board of Insurance.

"I understand the need for a lot of work and a lot of calm deliberation with the important issues," Mrs. Howard, 50, of Austin said Monday after Gov. Bill Clements appointed her to the board that oversees the state's $30 billion insurance industry.

When contacted, Mrs. Howard, an associate in the law firm of Clark, Thomas, Winters & Newton, said she had not yet been notified by the governor's office.

"This is news to me. I have been feeling like a girl ready for the prom and hadn't been picked up," Mrs. Howard said.

The position currently pays $64,612 annually, but board members will receive a salary boost to $68,000 on Sept. 1.

The governor's action finishes a complete turnover of the board since earlier this year.

The Insurance Board was at the center of controversy following a record number of insurance company failures and several legislative investigations that in addition to a number of top executives in the agency. The third board member's term expired.

Clements' other appointees to the board are chairman Paul Wrotenbery, 54, a former Clements staff member, and Richard Reynolds, 60, a former state representative.

Mrs. Howard has served on the Governor's Task Force for Women and Minorities.

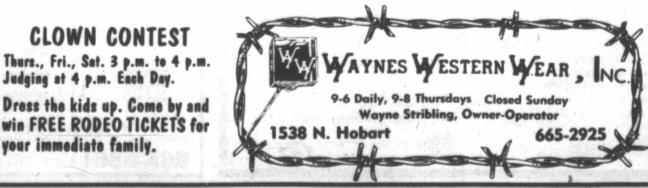

Before moving to Austin with her husband, former state Sen. Ed Howard, she served as a board member on several civic organizations in Texarkana.

Violence mars cooling-off period in strike

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A bombing and an attack on a nonunion mine early Monday marred the start of a cooling-off period called by the head of the United Mine Workers union in an effort to ease tensions in a wildcat walkout.

About 150 people, some wearing masks and camouflage paint on their faces, appeared at the entrance to the Appalachian Mining Inc. mine at Boomer, southeast of Charleston, overturning two trucks and a car and injuring several security personnel, said Cliff Nuckols.

"They sneaked through the weeds. You can't see them. They come through the weeds and the woods and all of a sudden you're just looking at them," said Nuckols, head of Cincinnati-based Nuckols and Associates Security Inc., which handles security at the mine.

He said shots were fired from a picket line outside the mine. Security personnel fired no shots. Nuckols said the workers' injuries were minor. He said he didn't know who the attackers were.

At Castlewood, Va., two bombs exploded early Monday, one damaging a Pittston Coal Group Inc. office trailer and another going off on a private yard, state police reported. No injuries were caused and no one was arrested, Virginia state police Sgt. Mike Frank said.

A woman who answered the phone at UMW District 17 headquarters in Charleston said union officials were unavailable for comment.

More than 37,000 miners have been on industry-wide wildcat walkouts since June 12 in eight states, protesting Pittston's refusal to sign a national contract negotiated by the UMW and other companies that are members of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

Pittston's miners, without a contract since Feb. 1, 1988, have been on strike since April 5. Miners say the wildcat strikes are being staged because Pittston is not dealing fairly with the union. Pittston officials have denied that.

PAMPA NEWS-Tuesday, July 11, 1989^T7

The violence came three days after UMW President Richard Trumka called for all UMW members east of the Mississippi River to stay away from work for a three-day memorial period in an attempt to "calm the volatile situation in the coal fields."

Trumka joined U.S. Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., and Gary White, head of the West Virginia Coal Operators Association, in New York Monday for talks with the head of Japan's Nippon Steel. Nippon is the world's largest steelmaker and uses West Virginia coal.

In an interview with the (Charleston) Sunday Gazette-Mail, Trumka said he sees no quick solution for the Pittston strike, which has idled 1,900 miners in West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky.

Trumka also told the newspaper he wouldn't be surprised if he's jailed for his part in the labor action.

Administration considers new energy policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department is preparing a new strategy to win public acceptance of expanded nuclear power, more oil exploration and other energy goals pursued — but never attained — by past administrations.

Those who formulated the plan say it will rest on a foundation of figures compiled by computer to spell out how much energy the nation will need, where to get it, what it will cost, and how it will affect the environment.

"They've never done that before," Henson Moore, deputy energy secretary, said in an interview. As a result, he said, the underpinnings of energy policy have been overly vulnerable to public challenge. "Our credibility is not what it ought to be because we've not really done this right in the past," he said, adding that the department wants to set a "credibility standard" that will be accepted by energy producers and consumer alike.

Scientists from the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, Calif., will design the computer programs. A special panel of the National Academy of Sciences has agreed to review the results and the final analysis, Moore said.

"We will have something that's generally recognized as ... not being slanted," said Moore, a former congressman from Louisiana who wanted to be President Bush's energy secretary but was persuaded to take the No. 2 job.

Moore said details of the new approach will be announced before the end of July, although the energy policy eventually developed from the data base likely won't be ready for at least another year. He said the department probably will hold public hearings this fall on policy options.

The department chose Linda Stuntz, 34, an attorney and former minority staff director of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, to direct the policy development.

Calls for a new national energy policy have intensified amid in creased public attention to prospects for a renewed oil squeeze caused by falling U.S. production and rising consumption, and a possible electricity crisis in the 1990s.

When he took over as energy secretary in March, James D. Watkins said he was surprised to see that while past administrations produced mountains of studies and analyses of the energy problem, none mapped out a way of solving it.

Watkins ordered the department to develop an "action plan" based on a consistent body of facts about all aspects of the energy picture, including the environment.

Japanese party wants Cabinet minister fired

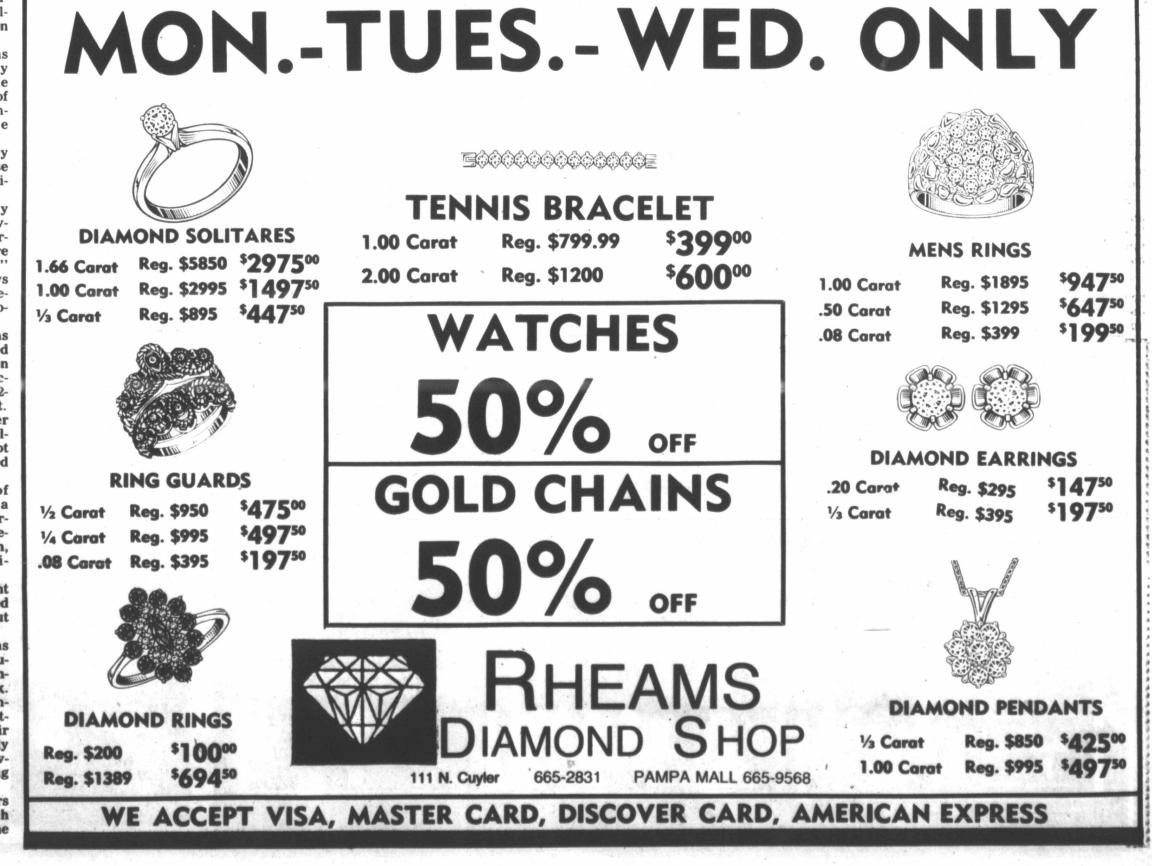

By KOZO MIZOBUCHI Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — An opposition party Monday demanded the ouster of a Cabinet minister who called women "useless" in politics, and six women from another party went to the prime minister's office to lodge their protest.

The Japan Communist Party said Hisao Horinouchi should be fired as agriculture, forestry and fisheries minister for "trampling on fundamental social princity official salu The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the party also called on Prime Minister Sousuke Uno, who has been in office only a month, to resign because of the controversy. All 44 Communist Party members of Parliament presented the request to Chief Cabinet Secretary Masajuro Shiokawa, Kyodo News Service said. The Communist Party said in a statement that "it is intolerable to the Japanese people that the government of a nation is being handled by these people." Meanwhile, six woman from the Japan Socialist Party, the nation's main opposition group, called at Uno's office, speaking on condition of anonymity. "The quality (of Horinouchi) as a Cabinet member is severely questioned," he quoted Asae Uemura, a Socialist member of the Tokyo Metropolitan Assembly, as saying in a message meant for Uno. The six women were told they could not meet with Uno because of his "tight schedule," the official added. In a campaign speech Friday for fellow members of the governing Liberal Democratic Party, Horinouchi said women are "useless in the world of politics." In a nationally televised news conference on Saturday, he retracted the remark and apologized. Local news reports said he was urged to do so by Uno, who feared the impact of the remark on women voters in the July 23 elections for half the seats in the 252seat upper house of Parliament. Uno himself has come under attack from women's groups following allegations that he kept paid mistresses. He has denied doing anything immoral. Meanwhile, the "Group of Women Building Tomorrow," a 3,000-member pro-Socialist Party organization in Ishikawa prefecture in northwestern Japan, issued a protest over Horinouchi's remarks, Kyodo said. It quoted the group's statement as saying the remarks "insulted not only Japanese women, but also women of the world." The governing party also has been hurt by a widespread influence-peddling scandal and an unpopular new 3 percent sales tax. In Tokyo Metropolitan Assembly elections July 2, Socialist-backed candidates tripled their strength in the 128-member body from 12 seats to 36 while the governing party lost 20 seats, leaving it with 43. The turnout of women voters surpassed that of men, which analysts attributed partly to the mistress scandal.

U.S. Marshals trying luck at horse racing been many years since U.S. Marshals in Texas had to worry full time about horses, but now they have no choice.

The U.S. Marshals Service is maintaining a stable of expensive racehorses after the ranch where they were being kept was seized from a drug suspect.

Ranch owner Mario Alberto Salinas is accused of buying the 88 horses with profits from illegal sales of drugs.

The marshals service has been taking care of the 200-acre Salinas ranch near Floresville since March 17. The government also seized the ranch's rambling house, two horse barns, bunkhouse, jockey's quarters and landing strip.

Thirty mares have been bred to deliver quarter horse thoroughbreds. Seven horses are in a racing program at Los Alamitos, Calif

"We're doing what he (Salinas) was doing, but doing it better," said Chief Deputy U.S. Marshal Jim Brown.

Classy Classanova, a 3-yearold gelding registered in the service's name, won $10,000 at Los Alamitos California Derby on May 12. He won $158,218 last year. Still in the stable is Shawnes Favorite, who won about $400.000 last year. He is scheduled for three races this year.

The marshals service contracted with Capstone Real

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - It's Estate Service, Inc. to run the ranch. Herb Carroll serves as Capstone's ranch foreman.

A 62-year-old horseman from San Antonio, Carroll said, "It's our charge to see that the property and horses are in as good or better shape when the case is over as when they were seized.

"If you don't race race horses, they lose their value," Carroll told the San Antonio Light. "If you don't breed mares, they lose their value.'

Earnings will go into an interest-bearing trust fund that will offset the $30,000-a-month bill for feeding, training and racing the horses, Brown said.

Another $200 in average monthly income from an oil well on the ranch also is going into the fund.

"If we had just let them stand here, they would have gotten sick and the government would be out a lot of money," Brown said. Though the racing operation is in the hands of the government, it cannot be sold unless Salinas is convicted of the dope-dealing charges against him.

The indictment against Salinas alleges that he used the ranch as a staging point for distribution of tons of marijuana and cocaine he is alleged to have flown in from Mexico aboard a Lear jet.

From the ranch, the indictment alleges, Salinas and 33 other drug transporting specialists moved the contraband to California, Illinois, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Florida.

Cleopatra would have been in her element

By JOAN BRUNSKILL The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Purveyors of fine jewels, like those of haute couture, enjoy introducing their latest fashions, and Cartier, like the venerable house of Chanel, tends to assemble an updated collection based on an old motif.

While Coco's motifs included gilt chains, faux pearls and the quilted leather handbag, Cartier's is the panther, the panther and the panther. This time around, the panther is worked into an ancient Egyptian theme called "Jewels of the Nile.'

"The panther is the flagship of the house," says Cartier's Philippe Bessis, a specialist in antique pieces and enthusiastic jewel historian. He and design manager Corentin Quideau were in

Kids should make their Club News own haircut decisions

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't believe the letter about the 8-year-old boy who wanted a Mohawk haircut and his parents said, "If that's what he wants, he can have it.

What were those parents using for brains? Since when do responsible parents let an 8-year-old kid get a hizarre haircut because he "wants" one? I thought parents were supposed to guide their children and help them make responsible choices. What if this spoiled brat decides that he wants to go to school naked? Should his parents let him? "Curious" asked you how parents could permit such a thing, and you meekly replied, "They must have their reasons." You sure weren't much help, Abby.

New York from Paris for the Golden World of Tanis," mounted launching of the collection, which is now available in New York and Los Angeles.

Here in the collection's characteristic pale "champagne gold" are panthers marching in relief around a heavy collar reminiscent of something Cleopatra might have worn; panthers dancing in miniature from one of today's favorites, the charm bracelet; and panthers ready to clamp a wrist in versions of the by-now perennial Cartier bracelet, lacquer-spotted, emerald-eyed.

The collection also incorporates falcon and scarab motifs, neither of which is new in Cartier jewelry. Both men stress continuity in the company's work, and tell of research through extensive archives before new designs are made.

"We think we have the most important and extraordinary archives in the world of jewelry," says Bessis, estimating that there are some 350,000 items. These include drawings, photos and mock-ups and records of stones, metals, sales and repairs that document individual pieces of jewelry.

Then there's the "Cartier museum,'' notable jewelry pieces in a permanent collection; pieces made, sold and bought back in the interest of history. Some of these items will be on show this fall in Paris' Petit Palais, in an exhibition to be titled "L'Art de Cartier," to run from Oct. 20-Jan. 28, 1990 jewelry, watches, objets d'art and silverware.

The idea for the new collection came from an exhibition, too: one of Egyptian antiquities, "The

'We were really very impressed by the modernity of the jewels exhibited, their colors, shapes and balance," says Quideau. 'They had the spirit of what has been through the centuries the essence of the beauty of jewelry. That inspired us to make this col lection.'

The designers kept in mind Cartier designs of the 1920s, among other sources, using Egyptian decorative themes, drawing on historical and architectural motifs.

"Cartier was the first to use archaeological fragments to build jewelry around - ceramics, antique scarabs," Quideau adds.

Bessis points to the most famous of all such pieces, a brooch about 6 inches across. centered around an ancient smoked-quartz scarab with emerald cabochon eyes, wings of antique blue faience and pave diamonds, set in platinum, made in 1924

That's a priceless item, not for sale - it's to be the centerpiece of the Paris exhibition. A panther bracelet from the new collection could cost $43,000; a panther collar with pave diamonds about $113,000, and a charm bracelet $6.000

Quideau says there's a recognizable house style in jewelry like that of an individual painter or composer. In Cartier, he says, it's based on continuity of tradition, culled from the archives. handed down from craftsman to craftsman, all within the company

DISAPPOINTED IN ABBY

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Not all my readers were disappointed in me. Here's one for my side:

DEAR ABBY: I applaud those parents who let their 8-year-old son have a Mohawk. I believe p rents should let their children make some nonlife-threatening decisions when they're young. If they are ridiculed by their peers, it will be a good learning experience. Better a kid should fall on his face as a child when he has his parents there to comfort him than to fail as an adult and be faced with some major financial or family problems with no problem-solving skills

Hair will grow back. If the boy wanted a tattoo, that would have been a different story

The point is: Let your kids make some decisions themselves. If they make a mistake, they will have learned something from it. If you make all their decisions, they will lack confidence in their own judgment and will not only think they're incapable of making a decision, they'll be afraid to try.

OPEN-MINDED IN DEXTER, MO.

DEAR ABBY: A tragedy recently occurred in our neighborhood, and I hope you will pass this information on to the general public.

A beautiful 5-year-old girl suffocated in her family's new automobile. The irony of this terrible tragedy is that one of the "safety features" that was supposed to protect children actually contributed to her death. The vehicle had child-proof locks on the rear doors — designed to keep children from opening the doors while the car is moving. Unfortunately, while the vehicle was parked in her parents' front yard. unbeknown to them, the child went into the car looking for something, and the door closed behind her. She was too unfamiliar with the new car to get the door open, or to sound the horn to attract attention.

In less than 30 minutes the child sufficated in the heat of the Missis⁴ sippl summer. (Police estimated that the temperature inside the car was between 120 and 140 degrees.)

She was a precious child, and the kind of youngster anyone would love to have for a daughter. We dearly niss her.

GRIEVING NEIGHBORS. OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR NEIGHBORS: Because you took the time to write, other parents will realize that if this could happen once, it can happen again. My thanks to you, and my heartfelt condolences to the child's parents.

DEAR ABBY: I know I'm not alone: There's one in every family. I take my camera to all the family gatherings. I often hear, "Oh, Lord, there she is again with that camera!'

My relatives think I am a pain because I'm always taking pictures. Don't they understand that I'm not just taking pictures for the fun of it; I'm recording memories we can all look back on with fondness.

Please print this for some of those sourpusses who run away or cover their faces with their hands every time they see me with a camera. What's the harm in capturing some priceless moments on film? DALLAS CAMERA NUT

DEAR CAMERA NUT: The "harm" in capturing some "priceless moments on film" lies in how the subjects feel about being "captured."

Do you ask permission before taking a picture? Or do you just click away, invading the privacy of your subjects?

Not everyone wants a "fond memory" of himself yawning, snoozing or eating corn on the cob while a few kernels cling to his nose and butter drips from his chin. Please ask first

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Mrs. G. in L.A." not to shoot herself - shoot her husband instead. (Only kidding.) She said her husband, age 72, was having a delayed mid-life crisis and is divorcing her. I know how she feels. My husband of 20 years walked out on me shortly after our daughter turned 16. He said he was going to "find himself." (He also took along his 30-year-old girlfriend and her teen-age son!)

I have (mentally) shot him, poisoned him and strangled him at least once a week since he took a hike. I realize I am only fantasizing, but it helps me cope with the anger, hostility and stress I feel.

Tell Mrs. G. to hang in there. Counseling helps — individually, in a group or both. Also, don't shut out friends who want to help but cannot find the words. Keep busy, volunteer, take classes at a local college or trade school. Most of all, remember, time heals - and the pain does diminish.

Thanks for giving me a chance to unload.

Sports 49ers

coach resigns

NEW YORK(AP) - Bill Walsh. the former coach who led the San Francisco 49ers to three Super Bowl championships, has resigned as the team's executive vice president to become an NBC football analyst.

"It should be a great challenge for Bill, something he seems to be in need of as the 1989 season' quickly approaches," team owner Edward J. DeBartolo Jr. said in a statement released by the team Monday night.

"Bill and I have had lengthy discussions on the subject and he leaves the team with all of our blessings and my best wishes." DeBartolo said in the statement. "Simply put, NBC made him an excellent offer in an area of great interest to him.'

Walsh, 57, who led the 49ers to NFL titles in the 1981, 1984 and 1988 seasons, quit as coach last January to move into the front office, leaving the coaching job to George Seifert.

In a statement from the network, NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol and executive producer Terry O'Neil "confirmed that Bill Walsh has resigned as executive vice president of football operations for the San Francisco 49ers to join NBC sports as the No. 1 football analyst, working with play-by-play man Dick Enberg.

NBC wouldn't comment on the status of Merlin Olsen, who has been Enberg's partner on NFL telecasts. Olsen also is an actor and has indicated he might drop his announcing duties to pursue acting fulltime.

The network said further details of the Walsh hiring would be announced Saturday during a news conference at Los Angeles. "He needs a challenge and misses coaching," Stephen Kay, Walsh's lawyer, said Monday in an interview with KGO-TV of San Francisco.

Walsh's relationship with De-Bartolo began to sour in 1987 when Walsh was stripped of his title of team president after San Francisco lost in the first round of the playoffs for the third straight season. "This is not General Motors, Ford and Chrysler," Walsh said at the time. "There are 28 competing teams, all mobilized and reasonably well-coached, so you should go to the Super Bowl about once every 14 years. Owners and others have to recognize the fact they can't just, by their own will, demand their team win. ... Just to be in the playoffs, you have survived a war of attrition." Although DeBartolo never said Walsh's status as coach was in danger, Walsh began feeling the heat when the 49ers slipped to a 6-5 record late last season. The 49ers won four of their last five games and then surged through the playoffs. beating Cincinnati in the final minute of the Super Bowl.

Possible starter?

Walsh among five quarterbacks in Cowboys' minicamp

By ARNIE STAPLETON Associated Press Writer

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys maintain they picked quarterback Steve Walsh without a trade in mind, saying they want him to compete with Troy Aikman for the starting job.

Whether possible starter or just prime barter, Walsh said that when he takes the field Tuesday he will forget about the company line, contract negotiations and what city he will play for come September.

The second day of drills in the Cowboys' two-week quarterback school marks the first time that Walsh, the No. 1 pick in the supplemental draft, will practice with Aikman, the top pick in the NFL regular draft.

"There'll be butterflies, I'm sure," Walsh said Monday after a 30-minute workout in which he threw passes to wide receiver Michael Irvin and running back Mike Lowman, also chosen in the July 7 supplemental draft.

"But I'm just going to go out and learn the Cowboys' system,' Walsh said. "I think they're going to sign me, possibly by next week.'

Walsh will need to be under contract in order for him to attend the Cowboys training camp July 23 in Thousand Oaks. Calif.

"That's really the only way to be fair," Walsh said. "They say they want Troy and me to compete. Then it's got to be on equal terms. And equal terms means getting to camp on time, with a contract.'

Walsh said he's seeking a twoyear deal with an option for another two years.

Several teams have indicated an interest in Walsh, including Minnesota, Green Bay, Miami and Detroit, all places that Walsh said he would like to play.

But for now, at least, Walsh is a Cowboy. And he's back with coach Jimmy Johnson, whom he played for at the University of Miami. In two years as a starter, Walsh led the Hurricanes to a 23-1 record and a national championship in 1987 Johnson said that while at least four teams are serious about acquiring Walsh, "we drafted him to be with the Dallas Cowboys.' When asked for how long, John-

Less than a week later, Walsh resigned as coach, but made sure DeBartolo selected Seifert as his replacement.

"I look forward to my new career." Walsh said when he moved into the front office. "It's been 10 great years. ... It was a 31-year (coaching) career, and there's a time for everybody at some point to step aside.

Now Walsh has completely stepped away from the 49ers. His record with the 49ers was 102-63-1. He also was head coach at Stanford and an assistant coach with the Cincinnati Bengals, Oakland Raiders and San Diego Chargers. season of any pitcher in the

All-Star Game a homecoming of sorts for Nolan Ryan.

Ryan reaching new level of stardom

Bv JIM DONAGHY AP Baseball Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Even the All-Star Game seems too small a spectacle to showcase Nolan Rvan.

He seems to be reaching a new level of stardom

Think about it.

Ryan is on track to end his career with more than 300 victories and 5,000 strikeouts. To equal that total in a 15-year span, a pitcher would have to win 20 games a season with 333 strikeouts.

He signed as a free agent with Texas this season and seems to be flirting with a no-hitter every other week.

At 42, Ryan still is popping his fastball at 95 mph and doing nasty things with curve balls.

Oakland's Dave Stewart starts tonight's 60th All-Star Game against San Francisco's Rick Reuschel, 40. Ryan was the sentimental choice to start, but Tony La Russa went with his man.

"I thought long and hard about Nolan," La Russa said. "But I think Stewart is having the best American League."

For Ryan, 10-4, it's a homecoming of sorts. He played for the California Angels from 1972-1979, pitching four no-hitters. In 1981 for Houston, he threw a record fifth nohitter.

Last Thursday night, Ryan pitched in Anaheim and threw a three-hitter with 12 strikeouts in beating the Angels.

All-Star Game

"The other night here was one of those special times in a professional athlete's career," Ryan said. "And it was certainly one of the highlights of my career. It really made me feel good that after 10 years the fans have not forgotten me and that they did appreciate my years here.

There's a lot to appreciate about Ryan's career.

In addition to his five nohitters, he has 11 one-hitters and 19 two-hitters.

On 189 occasions, he has struck out 10 or more in a game. Against the Angels on Thursday, he pitched his 56th career shutout, tying Bob Gibson for 12th place on the all-time list.

Earlier this season at Toronto, he came within two outs of his sixth no-hitter.

"You never know about those things," Ryan said. "The one in Toronto was the most disappointing one, when you get that close and don't get it. ... But hopefully that opportunity will arise again.

The other All-Stars look at Ryan differently, too.

"I'd like to get his autograph," said Kevin Mitchell, who leads the majors with 31 homers and 81 RBIs.

While La Russa's staff is rested and healthy, Tommy Lasorda may have to go to the bullpen early and often.

Houston's Mike Scott was a late dropout due to a strained hamstring and will be replaced by Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe. Orel Hershiser threw in relief on Sunday at Wrigley Field.

After Reuschel, the only rested starter is Atlanta's John Smoltz, 22. In relief, Lasorda can call on Tim Burke, Mark Davis, John Franco, Jay Howell and Mitch Williams.

The American League's bat-

Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets and Jose Canseco of Oakland were elected to the starting teams but will not play because of injuries. Mike Schmidt, who retired in May, was elected as the NL's starting third baseman and has been replaced by Johnson son stammered and laughed. "Funny guy," he said. "Funny guy.

Walsh should catch on quickly. having learned Johnson's offensive system at Miami. "But I wouldn't say anybody has an edge," Johnson said. "I'd say the job's open.'

The Cowboys have five quarterbacks attending the minicamp, including Walsh, Aikman and talented second-year man Scott Secules. But only 37-yearold Danny White and welltraveled Babe Laufenberg have ever taken an NFL snap.

Last year's starter, Steve Pelluer, hasn't signed a contract for the 1989 season and has asked to be traded. Johnson said the Cowboys haven't gotten any calls about Pelluer.

With such an abundance, it seems certain the Cowboys will unload one rookie quarterback. Aikman has a one-year, no-trade clause.

Walsh has indicated that team owner Jerry Jones should open up the wallet as he did with Aikman, who got a six-year, $11 million deal.

Jackson swayed by Jordan magic

NEW YORK (AP) - Stu Jackson believes his experience as an assistant coach for the New York Knicks is more important than his lack of experience as an NBA head coach.

Jackson, 33, became the NBA's youngest coach on Monday when the Knicks gave him his first head coaching job at any level.

"I may lack years of experience, but having spent the last two years with this team, I feel I'm experienced enough with this team," Jackson said.

Jackson was a Knicks assistant the last two years under Rick Pitino, who resigned in May to become coach at Kentucky.

"One of the big factors in Stu's favor is that he's been here," general manager Al Bianchi said. 'He has as much experience in the pro game as Rick had when he became head coach. It's an easier transition when you take a man who is already here. No one was coming in here that I didn't know. There are going to be no more surprises."

To offset the inexperience factor, Bianchi hired Paul Silas and Ernie Grunfeld as Jackson's assistants.

"We've surrounded Stu with 30 years of NBA experience and if he has a question, all he has to do is ask," Bianchi said.

Silas and Grunfeld played a combined 25 years in the NBA, and Silas was coach of the San Diego Clippers for three years. Grunfeld played for the Knicks for four seasons before becoming their radio analyst two years ago.

"I will rely heavily on Paul's experience and Ernie is well-liked," Jackson said. "I think we will have one of the most outstanding staffs in the NBA.'

Jackson said his biggest adjustment as a head coach "will be my relationships with the players. My personality won't change, but now I'll be making decisions instead of suggestions. Sometimes those decisions won't be taken favorably.

He said the team doesn't need wholesale changes because it has won 97 games the last two years. He indicated he will concentrate more on half-court offense and defense, but not to the exclusion of a running game.

"In order to be an NBA championship team, you have to be prepared in all areas, be it a running game or a slowdown game," Jackson said. "You can't play one way."

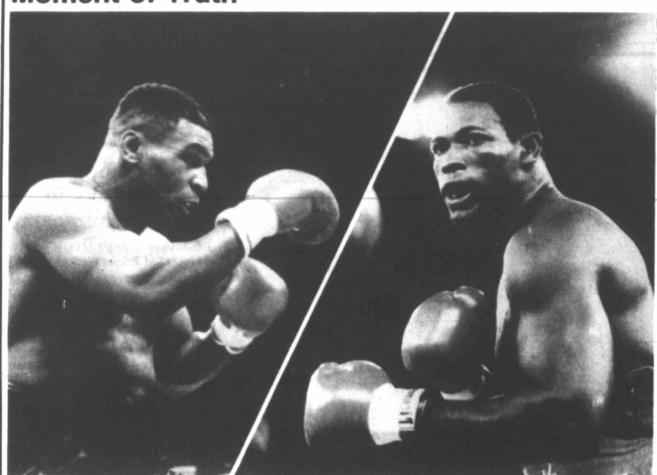

Jackson played at Oregon for Dick Harter, now coach of the NBA's Charlotte Hornets, and was a graduate assistant under Jim Haney for two years beginning in 1981. He later was an assistant at Washington State and Providence.

"I'm certain he'll do fine," Harter said. "He has a good knowledge of the game."

Nuggets to stay in Denver

By JOHN MOSSMAN AP Sports Writer

DENVER — Bertram Lee and Peter Bynoe, the new owners of the Denver Nuggets, want to be judged on their business acumen and their ability to field a winning product, not on the color of their skin.

But as breakers of new ground — they're the first black owners of a major professional sports franchise — they are aware those judgments may be inseparable Previous Nuggets owner Sidney Shlenker on Monday confirmed the transaction to the Chicago-based businessmen for $65 million. The franchise will remain in Denver.

Shlenker, who made a handsome profit on the sale, said Lee and Bynoe were "minorities in a more important way than the color of their skin. They are minorities in their code of ethics and their code of integrity that I wish everyone in this country could have. They'll make Denver a better place for having been here.

Shlenker called the agreement, which is subject to approval by NBA owners, a historic occasion.

Lee, 50, owns television and radio stations in Washington, D.C., Utah and Nebraska and also is chairman of BML Associates Inc., an investment holding company in Boston.

Bynoe, 38, is the $125,000-a-year executive director of the Illinois Sports Facilities Authority, which is responsible for building the new home of the Chicago White Sox "We're mindful of what this event means," Lee said. "But color is not an issue we're trying to downplay or play up. We carry a heavy responsibility. We'll probably be looked at more closely than if the circumstances were different. But it's a challenge we accept."

Lee said he disagreed with black sociologist Dr. Harry Edwards, who has warned that blacks should seek ownership of franchises in conjunction with whites to avoid facing the no-win situation of receiving no credit for success and all the blame for failure

"I don't think the color of our skin will be the standard against which we will be principally measured," he said. "I think this is a positive. The diversity in this country is something we should celebrate. It's something that has made this country great.

Added Bynoe: "It is clear to us when we look in the mirror each morning who we are. But we've never used it as an excuse or carried a chip on our shoulder. If we become role models --- if we manage to set a standard for performance - we'll be very satisfied.

Lee said he wants an efficiently run and profitable club, and Bynoe said the surest way to make money was to win a championship. Both acknowledged that some changes with the Nuggets must be made. although coach Doug Moe's job appears safe for the time being.

They announced one change at Monday's press conference, installing former Utah Jazz executive Dave Checketts as the club president in charge of the day-to-day business end of the franchise. Checketts also becomes a minority owner.

16 Tuesday, July 11, 1989-PAMPA NEWS ormer FBI agent forms association to train fraud hunters

By KIRK LADENDORF Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — Former FBI agent Joe Wells has investigated fraud, consulted about fraud and lectured about fraud for nearly two decades. Now he's trying to make fraud sleuthing a specialized profession.

Wells has created the National Association of Certified Fraud Examiners to standardize both the teaching and practices of white-collar crime investigation and prevention in private industry.

And there is plenty of fraud to investigate. Although precise figures are not available, experts estimate that business, government and individuals lose about $200 billion a year to fraud. Nearly 70 percent of all fraud against businesses is committed by company insiders: employees, managers and directors.

"Companies have problems controlling fraud," said Wells, whose business is based in Austin. "They realize they have a very significant problem, and the only way to accomplish something is to try to control it from within.'

Wells has been a fraud investigation and prevention consultant since leaving the FBI in 1979. One of his businesses, Wells & Associates, has handled investigations for a variety of clients, including financial institutions. A related business, the Institute for Financial Crime Prevention, is the nation's leading producer of videos and training seminars for the prevention of white-collar crime.

His latest venture is designed to bring some cohesion to the thousands of professionals working for businesses and government agencies whose primary job is to detect and prevent fraud.

Part of the job, he believes, is making sure those in the field have the training and knowledge to successfully investigate fraud cases.

"People have done fraud investigation for years, but there's been no standard for the work," Wells said. "This program establishes standards. We all need to be marching to the same drummer, we all need to know essentially the same things."

A good fraud buster is part accountant, part cop, Wells said.

"The whole accounting profession does not want to deal with fraud," he said. "They see potential liability, and they don't have the skill or training.' A certified fraud examiner, Wells said, is someone who should be able to investigate an allegation of fraud, examine documents, interview witneslaw enforcement authorities to quickly take the case to trial.

Wells, an acknowledged fraud expert, investigator and consultant, has spent the past year creating a program to certify fraud examiners. That has meant establishing the parent organization, editing an 820-page fraud examiners' manual and recruiting potential applicants.

So far, about 2,000 people are in the process of being designated certified fraud examiners based on their experience. The organization, however, is approving only about one out of five applications it receives. Wells said.

A first round of examinations also has been scheduled for this fall to qualify other professionals interested in obtaining certification. The goal is to ensure that those with the CFE designation are able to thoroughly investigate allegations of fraud from beginning to trial preparation, while also knowing how to testify at a trial as an expert witness and make sound recommendations to a business about fraud prevention procedures.

Wells' group conducted its first comprehensive five-day training symposium this month for 160 professionals. The course dealt with fraud audit-ses, gather evidence and write reports that allow ing, investigation, criminology, law and ethics. Candidates for certification must have at least a college degree, a minimum of two years of professional experience in the field and three references detailing their expertise. The examination fee of $150 is designed to help the organization be selfsustaining.

Wells already has established an extensive schedule of training seminars next year for those wanting further education in the field.

Although Wells' company administers the National Association of Certified Fraud Examiners, the actual certification work is done by a largely independent board of regents that includes Wells and other experts in the field.

Wells also acknowledges that certifying the competence of others can be a risky business. He has his business liability insurance policy paid up.

Some of the professionals who have earned CFE designations say the program is long overdue.

"I've been looking for something like this for about 10 or 15 years," said Gordon Heckner, manager of internal auditing for USAir Inc. in Pittsburgh. "It's been a long time coming."

He says, partly in jest: "We're going to fight crime and wreak vengeance on the forces of evil."

Stealth bomber tested

By DENNIS ANDERSON Associated Press Writer

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP) -The B-2 stealth bomber conducted its first full-power engine tests Monday, emerging from its super-secret research hangar and rolling out onto a desert runway for the first time under its own power.

The sleek, bat-like bomber, the most advanced in the Pentagon's arsenal and capable of penetrating enemy radar defenses without being detected, taxied onto the runway shortly after sunrise and began a series of engine tests at various power settings.

As the tests began, the engines changed in pitch from an eerie whistle to a low roar. The aircraft then moved from a station near its secure hangar at a stately pace of about 10 mph for about two miles down the runway at Air Force Plant 42.

"I love it," said Air Force spokeswoman Capt. Tess Taft, who waved a small American flag.

For about two hours the sinister-looking bomber was put through its engine tests, then moved to the far end of the runway adjacent to Sierra Highway. where it was visible to passing traffic and gave the public its first unobstructed view of the menacing flying wing since it was first displayed on Nov. 22, 1988.

"You've got a lot of firsts here today. You have the first time under its own power, you have it turning. All this has only been done before on computer simulations," said Maj. Pat Mullaney.

"So it's real. It's not a hoax," said Air Force spokesman Don Haley. "It's good to see something happening.'

At 4:45 a.m. Monday, the engines on the prototype of the bomber, which is expected to cost the Air Force about $500 million each, began warming up. At 6:25 a.m., the black, boomerangshaped aircraft, which is designed to drop nuclear bombs and cruise missiles, rolled ponderously onto the tarmac.

Half an hour after sunrise on the Mojave desert, the sinisterlooking flying wing, capable of penetrating enemy radar defenses without being detected, taxied slowly from its hanger at Air Force Plant 42.

After the low-speed taxi tests, the plane will make high-speed taxi tests and then make its maiden flight sometime within the next two weeks, said Taft.

"So, it's real." Air Force spokesman Don Haley said. "It's not a hoax. It's good to see something happening.

Monday morning's test was the first time that the radar-evading bomber had been shown to the public since its unveiling on Nov. 22 to a small group of reporters, aerospace industry representatives and Pentagon officials.

Congressional critics have complained that the plane is too clostly, with an estimated cost of $70 billion dollars for 132 aircraft.

But Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney has defended the nation's newest and most sophisticated bomber, saying that the sleek, all-wing bomber is an important technological breakthrough, using composite fuselage materials to absorb enemy radar waves.

The bomber is designed to avoid a variety of detection methods. It generally would be quieter than other strategic aircraft and because of its shape and the cowling that masks its engines it would be able to avoid infrared detection in addition to radar.

Sitting near a pair of B-1 bombers, the aircraft in profile appeared less than half as long. In fact, the fuselage length of the B-2 is only about as long as an F-16 fighter plane.
