Wright received from partner By JIM DRINKARD

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee resumed deliberations today in the case of Speaker Jim Wright, concentrating on whether Wright improperly accepted gifts from a business partner and whether he evaded limits on outside income through sales of a book he published, according to sources.

The committee is considering whether benefits Wright received from Fort Worth developer George Mallick, roughly valued in the range of $100,000, amount to unreported gifts intended to buy influence over legislation affecting the savings and loan industry.

A key to that question, as the panel resumed closed-door discussions after a two-week Easter break, was whether Mallick had a direct interest in legislation dealing with S&Ls when he paid the benefits to Wright and his wife, Betty.

Committee Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., said he expected the panel could reach some conclusion on the Wright case next week. "We're making progress, and I'm satisfied with our progress," Dixon said.

A Democratic House source confirmed today that the panel already has decided to drop three of the six counts against Wright brought last June when the investigation began.

Those include Wright's intervention with federal banking regulators on behalf of troubled savings and loans; his intercession with government officials on behalf of a Texas oil and gas company; and his use of a government-paid staff aide to compile parts of a book.

Remaining before the panel are charges that Wright used bulk sales of the book, Reflections of a Public Man, to evade limits on outside income from speaking fees, and the issues arising out of Wright's dealings with Mallick.

Mallick, Wright and their wives were partners in a small investment corporation, Mallightco, from 1979 until last year. During that time, Mallick gave Wright the use of a Fort Worth condominium for only a nominal fee, the use of a 1979 Cadillac and until 1984 paid Wright's wife, Bettv. $18,000 a year in salary for part-time investment advice.

Sources familiar with the investigation have said the panel's outside counsel, Richard Phelan, has been highly skeptical of the benefits that went from Mallick to Wright and doubted whether Mrs. Wright had done any substantial work in return for her

It was unclear whether the ethics committee — six Democrats and six Republicans — agrees with Phelan's assess-

"The standard that is to be applied (to the Wright-Mallick relationship) is obviously one that has to be discussed," Dixon said.

Further complicating the situation is a $2.2 million loan made in 1985 to Mallick's sons, Stephen and Michael, and cosigned by their father, to develop a small shopping center.

The loan, first reported on Tuesday by the Wall Street Journal, has since been foreclosed and the Mallicks are being sued for $1 million in losses suffered by the lender, Interwest Savings Association, which later was taken over by regulators.

Mallick testified in a deposition in the case last May that he knew the loan was going bad early in 1986, and blamed the problem in part on pressure on S&Ls by federal regulators.

"Many of the institutions were under the supervision of the regulators," Mallick said in the deposition. "They weren't able to be flexible with their borrowers in order to maneuver and work things out.'

Mallick organized a meeting later in 1986 at which area developers and lenders complained to Wright about the heavyhandedness of regulators, and he prepared a report on the subject at Wright's request.

Judge rejects request for Poindexter video

By PETE YOST Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge today rejected Oliver North's request to show at his trial videotaped segments of testimony by his former boss. John Poindexter, in congressional hearings

'Admiral Poindexter's testimony selected for presentation distorts the record from the congressional proceedings," said U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell.

Defense lawyers had said portions of Poindexter's prior testimony are "critical to the defense, particularly on the issue of official knowledge and authorization of Lt. Col. North's activities.

North had asked to show three to four hours of Poindexter's videotaped testimony which he gave on Capitol Hill to the committees investigating the

Iran-Contra affair. "The limitation on North's right to present evidence in his defense must be balanced against the effect this would have on the ability of the independent counsel to present the full facts to the jury," said Gesell Poindexter has asserted through his legal counsel that if called to testify, he would invoke his constitutional rights and refuse to answer ques-

Poindexter, a co-defendant charged with North in the Iran-Contra affair, is to be tried separately later this year.

Poindexter is charged with conspiracy, theft of government property, obstruction of Congress and making false statements to a congressional committee. North is accused of lying to Congress and the attorney general as well as altering and destroying documents.

Poindexter was given limited immunity from prosecution when he testified before Congress. Gesell said there "can be no dispute that the videotape is hearsay" and that it may be admitted as evidence only under a narrow exception "given to former testimony.

Federal court rules carve out a narrow exception, saying that the party against whom the testimony is offered, in this instance the government, must have had an opportunity to question the testi-

Gesell stated that "the independent counsel is not the Congress; indeed, the independent counsel did not have any chance to develop the testimony

The judge noted that independent counsel Lawrence Walsh tried to persuade Congress against granting immunity to the Iran-Contra participants to prevent testimony from being given to the congressional investigation. "Congressional examination was shaped in part by the demands of television and electoral politics. rather than by the rules of evidence and the norms of a fair adversary proceeding," said Gesell. Poindexter made a number of statements in his televised congressional testimony that could benefit North. Poindexter said he regretted not having personally looked into North's concerns about his family's personal safety following a death threat by terrorist Abu Nidal. North eventually accepted free of charge a $13,800 security system at his home from codefendant Richard Secord, who North had enlisted to run arms to the Contras. In testimony Tuesday at North's trial, a former National Security Council aide said North's colleagues were concerned that his role in helping the Contras would hurt the intelligence community.

A CIA official said "he thought that whatever Ollie was doing he was bound to get us all in a lot of trouble ... and he wanted to stay far away from him," Vincent Cannistraro recalled Tuesday.

The NSC's executive secretary, Rodney McDaniel, "was concerned that Ollie ... was harming the NSC and the national security adviser," said Cannistraro.

Cannistraro also recalled gesturing to North that he wasn't preparing truthful answers for Congress about his Contra role in the summer of 1985

Cannistraro acknowledged that he put his hand up to his nose and moved his hand out several inches to signify to North that he was like Pinocchio, whose nose grew when he told a lie.

PHS choirs gain sweepstakes

The Pampa High School Concert Choir and Concert Women's Choir were both awarded sweepstakes honors at the Region I University Interscholastic League contest at West Texas State University Tuesday evening.

The Concert Men's Choir won a first division in sightreading.

To win sweepstakes, a choir must make a first division in both concert and sightreading.

The Concert Choir performed "Sing Unto God" by Fetler, "Vere Langreores" by Vittoria and "Sing We Merrily Unto God" by Shaw.

The Concert Women's Choir performed "How Excellent Thy Name" by Hansen, "Sanctus" by Diemer and "Nightingale" by Butler. The Concert Men's Choir performed "Brothers Sing On" by Grieg, "Charlottown" by Taylor and "Rovin" by Wagner.

The Mixed Choir made a second division in sightreading, which is labeled as excellent. They performed "Il E Bel E Bon" by Passareau, "Weep Oh Mine Eyes" by Smith and "O Bella Fusa" by

The Pampa High School Concert Choir was the only 4A choir to make sweepstakes, according to Fred Mays, choir director. He said this is the third consecutive year the concert and women's choir have been honored with the sweepstakes title.

"I am extremely proud of the choir students at Pampa High School," Mays said. "It takes a lot of dedication, hard work and talent to accomplish what they did. They have upheld a very strong tradition that is matched by only a few choirs in the whole state of Texas."

Cooley says regulations hinder advances in heart transplants

Associated Press Writer •

HOUSTON (AP) — Twenty years after he performed the world's first implant of an artificial heart into a human, Dr. Denton A. Cooley says further medical advances have been hindered by ethical doubts and regulatory interference.

But despite the modern difficulties, Cooley said on the anniversary of the historic surgery that he expects still greater achievements over the next 20 years.

"The heart is truly a remarkable organ and developing a perfect substitute is going to be a challenge not only for this generation, but for generations of researchers to come," Cooley said

"I think that we are now in an era where we can make some progress," he said. "Research institutions and investigators throughout the world are challenged by this project, and I think that we will see an acceptable, totally implantable permanent device within the next 15 to 20 years.

It was April 4, 1969, when Cooley and his associates at the Texas Heart Institute created a storm of excitement and controversy by implanting a totally artificial heart into the chest of Haskell Karp, a 47-year-old printing estimator from Skokie, Ill.

Karp lived for about three days on the device and then received a human heart transplant, but died a little more than a day later when infection and tissue rejection set in.

The proven human use of an artificial heart which earlier had shown promise in research animals - caused elation among the surgical team, but drew a harsh reaction from some medical professionals and the public.

"What surprised me the most about the whole event wasn't that we chose to use the (artificial) heart or that it was successful," recalled Dr. Robert D. Leachman, one of four members of the original surgery team who met Tuesday with re-

"What surprised me was the response of the public. There were editorials in newspapers around the country saying we shouldn't have done it, and all the questions of ethics were aroused."

Cooley had first attempted a surgical repair of Karp's heart, but the organ was too badly damaged and it was clear he would not survive, the

"The patient is on a life-support system during the surgery and if we can't get the heart to start again the surgeon finally has to say, 'Pull the plug,' Cooley said. "This was the first time that we decided we weren't going to pull the plug, but that we were going to give this man that remote chance of survival.'

Karp had feared he was near death and asked his doctors daily when his surgery could be performed, Cooley recalled, but donor hearts were rarely available in 1969 and there were doubts he would survive the surgery.

The first heart transplant had been performed less than two years before, and public reaction had been largely unfavorable, particularly because of ethical questions and a high failure rate due to tissue rejection.

"The public was pretty much opposed to the whole thing," Cooley said. "They found it really inconceivable that a human being could take the heart out of one person and put it in the service of another."

After the pioneer surgery on a Good Friday in 1969, public opposition grew. Cooley himself was censured by the Harris County Medical Society for "publicity," which meant violating the society's guidelines about having a physician's name appear in a newspaper in connection with the name of a patient.

"All the theoretical objections really almost killed the transplant program; that, coupled with the high incidence of tissue rejection, which brought a lot of bad news to the profession," Cooley said.

Since then, however, the antirejection drug cyclosporine came into use and advanced artificial hearts have improved survival until donor hearts can be found. And greater public acceptance has made donor organs more plentiful.

'With the progress of medical science, we're pushing back the barriers of certain theoretical objections to taking drastic measures to save one human life," Cooley said.

However, new obstacles have emerged, including burdensome federal regulations that limit the application of medical research, said Dr. O.H. Frazier, who directs the cardiovascular surgical research lab at the Texas Heart Institute.

"I'm not sure today if that first step wasn't taken in 1969 how we would take it today," Frazier said. "I would say that it would be very, very difficult that it would be done in America. It would probably be done in Europe because of all the restrictions that we have in this country.

Cooley agrees that regulations make research applications more difficult today, but he believes the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is not directly to blame.

"I know that the individuals at the (FDA) who are responsible for these restrictions are people who are well motivated, but they are responding basically to what the public seems to want," Cooley

"I don't believe we ought to live in a completely unregulated society, but I think that our restrictions should be liberal enough that progress can be

Willie testifies in support of keeping Hightower's job

By MICHAEL HOLMES Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN 'AP) — He's played everywhere from beer halls to concert halls, but Willie Nelson was singing a new tune in a new place — the Legislature.

The singer and Farm Aid organizer appeared before a House committee Tuesday to testify in favor of keeping the agriculture commissioner's job — currently held by his friend Jim Hightower — an elected office.

"I'm real concerned when people try to take away our rights to do anything in the state of Texas. And to try to take our voting right away on an office as important as the Department of Agriculture is unheard of and shouldn't happen," Nelson said.

Hightower, the two-term Democratic commissioner, has come under fire from the chemical industry over strict pesticide regulations and from the Farm Bureau over his efforts to sell hormone-free beef to Europe.

Since the agriculture commissioner's job the only statewide post not protected by the Texas Constitution, Republican Gov. Bill Clements has the power to veto it out of existence. GOP lawmakers have enough seats in the House to uphold a veto if they would vote as a bloc.

With that political battle raging, the typically routine sunset review process has gained added significance this legislative session and the House Government Organization Committee's hearing on it was jammed with more than 300 spectators, forcing its move to the House chamber.

Defending the agriculture department were a long list of witnesses, including former congresswoman Barbara Jordan.

consumer and environmental

But Nelson was clearly the star, getting billing after only Hightower himself.

The singer told the committee his concern about chemical use was raised while rabbit hunting a few years ago with his cousin, who blamed the lack of rabbits on pesticides. A friend recently blamed pesticide use for the lack of horned toads, which eat ants, Nelson said.

"So I'm here today to represent the rabbits and the horny toads," he told laughing lawmakers and applauding spectators.

Among those testifying in favor of changing the elected commissioner's post was Debbie Gillan, a Farm Bureau member and rancher from Llano County. She told lawmakers the Farm Bureau prefers to replace the elected commissioner with an agriculture commission.

"Rural Texas composes only 1.5 percent of the population, yet we are the second-largest contributor to the Texas economy. Because of that role and the special needs of our industry, we deserve adequate, fair and equitable representation in state government," Gillan said.

"Political reality tells us that it is necessary for an elected agriculture commissioner to appeal to the 'consumer' or 'big city' vote," she added.

At a news conference before his testimony, Nelson said Hightower had helped him in 1986, when he organized his Farm Aid II concert in Austin.

"The Texas Agriculture Department has been a good friend to the farmers and the ranchers. They have done all they can do to help Farm Aid," he said. Nelson also said his testimony was a first — and maybe a last. "I've been here (in the Capitol) before, but not to testify," he said. "I have no interest at all in politics. IRS should collect — not seize — tax

The IRS may have seized more of your money than it was supposed to have, and kept it without telling you. Appearing before the House Ways and Means oversight committee, acting IRS Commissioner Michael Murphy admitted that in the past the IRS had a policy of keeping tax overpayments.

If too much was withheld from your paycheck, and you didn't notice but the IRS did, well, too bad. The government kept your money. Murphy said that, until last December, some tax credits were "not picked up" by IRS reviews of tax returns. He added that it's "possible that taxpayers did not get the refund they were entitled to.

One IRS employee told the Associated Press that an IRS handbook prohibited telling a taxpayer that a deduction was missed, often overcharging the taxpayer between $100 and $1,000. An IRS official in Washington said, "We were told the taxpayers had to find their own mistakes." And the IRS is supposed to be a "service" that, it insists, deals with "cus-

Well, at least Murphy has now (we hope) corrected the problem. We might recommend that he order his minions to go back and correct past mistakes, but that would mean re-investigating everyone's old tax returns. Given the IRS's mentality, which has not changed despite this small reprimand, that could lead to even greater harassment of taxpayers. Still, if you're worried that the IRS cheated you (more than usual, that is), you might check your old returns. Or if the overly-complicated forms are too difficult, have someonw who knows the system check

This new revelation shows that what's really at work here is not some bureaucratic foul-up, but the IRS's seizure mentality. Theoretically, the IRS should be an impartial agency that only applies the tax laws, assessing taxpayers what is due, refunding to them what is not. But the IRS has become a typical bureaucracy interested primarily in increasing its

Until last year, when the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights finally was passed by Congress, IRS agents displayed signs reading, "Seizure Fever — Catch It!" The mentality is that all money you earn belongs to them, and a fraction is returned to you — to feed, clothe and house your family — only because you have outwitted the IRS agents.

This should stop. Taxpayers need much greater protection than the limited rights passed last year. Two things should be done, for starters: Give each taxpayer the presumption that he's innocent until proven guilty. Under current edicts the IRS considers you guilty, and seizes your money, until you prove yourself innocent. End withholding, a bad policy that was imposed only as recently as World War II. Let each taxpayer pay his assessment in one lump sum on April 15. You should hold your money — all of it — and pay tax, not have it "withheld." The IRS should collect tax that you give them, not seize it from your

Join in ripping off Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON — Hey, there! Want to make a fortune in gold? Want to make a killing in copper? Arizona and Nevada are waiting for you. Bring your pick, your shovel and your lawyer, and see how you too can rip off Uncle Sam.

The General Accounting Office has just filed a report bearing the bland title "The Mining Law of 1872 Need Revision." The contents may be old hat to Westerners, but to those of us in the effete East, the story boggles the mind.

It apears that back in 1872, Congress passed an act having two purposes. The first was to help promote the discovery of valuable resources. With some modification, the law is still on the books. It works this way

First, as a U.S. citizen, you locate a piece of federally owned land that might conceivably have deposits of gold, silver, uranium, bentonite or oil shale. This isn't tough. Roughly 479 million acres of land are available.

Second, you stake a claim to whatever mineral deposit attracts your fancy. You file affidavits that you have spent at least $500 in developing the property. Then comes the only tough part.

You must satisfy the Bureau of Land Management that the claim may be mined economically. The task may be difficult, but obviously it is not impossible: More than 65,000 claims have approved, you pay the government $2.50 or $5 an acre, and you take fee simple title to the land.

Now comes the interesting part. You don't actually have to go into the mining business. The land is yours, and you may sell it for what- till on. The GAO visited two gold mines in the in settling the wild West; the second was to ever the traffic will bear. GAO inspectors reviewed 20 patents issued since 1970. The owners paid the government $4,500. The property was valued in 1988 at somewhere in the neighborhood of $48 million.

> The GAO report is filled with eye-opening examples. In 1988, claimants took title to 17,000 cares of oil shale land. Three weeks later they sold the property to major oil companies for $37 million.

GAO inspectors visited three sites near Phoenix and two sites near Las Vegas. The properties were being actively mined for sand, gravel and granite, but this was peanuts. One Phoenix site of 15 acres had been patented for $38; another, comprising 19 acres, had been patented for $47.

Their current fair market value approaches been patented under the law. Once a patent is $4 million. The third site, near Mesa, had been purchased for $2.50 an acre in 1983; each of the 40 acres now is valued at $40,000.

History tells us of the gold rush in 1849 to the Mother Lode country of California. The rush is area, a 12-acre parcel near the retirement community of West Point, and a 34-acre parcel near Sonora. Both are inactive. The former was patented in 1982 for $62, the latter in 1985 for $170. Current fair market falue: $125,000 for the one, $510,000 for the other.

Do the ski slopes of Colorado beckon? Near Keystone, close to the ski runs, some smart fellows patented 160 acres in 1983. They paid the government $400. To this day, no gold ever has been mined on the property. Forty-four acres were up for sale when the GAO took a look. The asking price was $11,000 an acre, or $484,000 for the parcel. At that rate the property would have a market value of $1.8 million.

Among pending patent applications in Colorado were two claims for 60 acres in a scenic section of the Arapaho National Forest near the Breckenridge ski area. If the whole 60-acre parcel goes under patent, the government will get $201. The developers have a prospect of turning it over for $12 million.

Metaphorically speaking, if this isn't highway robbery, it is something remarkably close to it and it is all legal.

The GAO recommends an end to the windfalls. The law should be amended to eliminate the patenting system altogether; if bona fide miners want to go for gold on federal lands, they should pay royalties on what they extract. Under present law, the government gets nothing at all for whatever minerals are produced.

At a time when the government is annually running enormous deficits, this folly cannot be condoned. If there's gold in them thar hills, let the taxpayers have their share.

What he wants, he may not get

What a president wants is not necessarily what a president gets from a Congress of the other party

What he is proposing is not a "reduction." He is seeking to retard the runaway expansion of the Medicare budget. From $84 billion this year it will go to $92 billion next year.

Medicare, as is, benefits not only the elderly but the sons and daughters and nephews and nieces who traditionally cared for their own ail-

Without pretending to fix blame for soaring costs. it is true that Medicare payments to doctors are rising three times faster than Medicare payments to hospitals. Policy professionals protest that doctors "run too many unnecessary and ecpensive tests." Doctors respond that the threat of malpractice lawsuits mandates such a policy.

And it is true that our litigious society has saddled medical doctors with an enormous burden that somebody has to pay. A million dollars' worth of malpractice insurance for an obstetrician or a gynecologist may cost a premium anywhere from $12,000 a year in Oklahoma to $168,000 in Florida.

The logical first step in rolling back medical costs would be to put a ceiling on malpractice awards.

If we do nothing ... if we continue to allow the escalation of costs ... within 25 years we will be spending more money on Medicare than on Social Security and defense combined.

The American Medical Association recommends phasing in a system whereby Medicare benefits would be paid only to taxpayers who have benefits regardless of their job history.

Here's right way to investigate

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The debate that is now about to open concerning the actions of House Speaker James Wright is bound to be long and complex, and it will be well to lay down at the outset some guidelines as to how it is to be conducted. Fortunately the recent long and diligent inquiries into the activities of Ed Meese and other officials of the Reagan administration are available as precedents. Those who designed the investigatory sword now in vogue in Washington are about to have the pleasure of feeling its sharp edge

In the first place, there must be no nsense about withholding the full texts of relevant documents. This is already being attempted in the case of the most important document of all: the report of the special counsel appointed by the House ethics comnittee to look into Wright's conduct. It is being argued that this report, ring upward of 450 pages, ought to be kept confidential in perpetuity, and that only such portions of it as the committee may endorse and specify should be made public.

But that presumes far more public confidence in the House ethics committee (all of whose Democratic members were hand-picked by Wright) than there is any reason for the public to feel. America is entitled to know everything the special counsel uncovered. Just what are Wright's defenders afraid of in those 450 pages? Second, new lines of inquiry that open up as the investigation proceeds must be fully explored. It is common, in these inquiries, for the answer to a particular question to "raise more questions than it answers." These new questions must be explored and answered just as fully as the original ones - and so, in turn, must any further questions that these answers themselves raise. Third, and even more important, Wright's defenders must not be allowed to restrict the discussion to a narrow inquiry into whether Wright has committed some specific crime, or broken some specific rule of the House. To be sure, he may well have done exactly these things. But the speaker of the House of Representatives, who by law stands second in the line of succession to the presidency, must surely be held to a higher standard of behavior than the mere avoidance of outright rule-breaking or common criminality.

It is entirely possible that, in Wright's case, the whole of his conduct will, cumulatively, prove even more offensive than the sum of its parts. Perhaps his interventions on behalf of Texas savings and loans were, by themselves, only marginally dubious. Maybe there are half-decent explanations for his wife's limousine, and his silent partnership in that Florida real estate deal, and his office's pressures on Amtrak to sell federal land. Conceivably even his scheme to rake in king-sized royalties from selling to lobbyists a book written for him by somebody else can be excused (though I can't imagine how) as a mere peccadillo. But can any rational man or woman swallow the whole package and still smile?

And one final point. As Paul Weyrich has pointed out, there exists contrary to the generous doubts expressed in the last paragraph above serious reason to believe that this arrogant caucus boss has committed specific violations of law. That being the case, no "special counsel" employed by and beholden to Wright's own ethics committee, no matter how objective and thorough he may have been, can possibly meet the need.

What is required is a special prosecutor, armed with an ample staff and budget and given all the necessary time, to look deeply into the record of James Wright. The honor of the House of Representatives is on the line, and anyone who has traduced it must be made to pay - in full.

Tapes: Bribe money took care of 'little pets' in Washington

By JAMES ROWLEY Associated Press Writer

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Unaware that the FBI was eavesdropping, a defense consultant in the government's "Ill Wind" investigation of Pentagon procurement fraud joked with a business associate about what would happen if ordinary Americans discovered their bribery scheme.

"If the farmers in Indiana knew what you sons of bitches were doing with their money, they would come up there and kill you with their pitchforks," Fred Lackner told defense consultant William L.

Parkin on a tape of their telephone conversation. The tape was played Tuesday by prosecutors at the first trial resulting from the two-year investigation.

Lackner's comment, recorded by one of four FBI bugs placed on Parkins' home and office telephones in 1987 and 1988, was on two hours of tapes

Electronics Inc. executives accused of participating in a bribery scheme to get a $24 million Navy contract.

Lackner's remark drew hearty laughter from Parkin.

Both men pleaded guilty last month to participating in the scheme to bribe Navy procurement official Stuart E. Berlin to obtain inside information for the California-based company.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica said he expected the prosecution would rest its case by

Parkin was expected to testify today, and prosecutors planned to play another two hours of tape recordings

The tapes included numerous conversations between Lackner and Parkin, detailing their efforts to obtain confidential bid information that would help Teledyne in its negotiations with the Pen-quests for such information by Eugene R. Sullivan. one of the three Teledyne executives on trial in U.S. District Court in this suburb of Washington.

During a conversation June 19, 1987, Lackner furnished Parkin with details sought by Sullivan about how much the Army, Navy and Air Force were prepared to spend to procure hand-held radar testing devices.

"The deal is just a tad over $4.2 million," Lackner reported. "Always helpful to know when you're negotiating," he said with a laugh

After Teledyne negotiated the contract, Parkin pressured company executive George H. Kaub, another defendant, to make good on Teledyne's promise to pay Parkin a $150,000 consulting fee. During a conversation July 8, 1987, Parkin told competition so that the company would qualify as a 'sole-source provider' of the military equipment. "Since it's sole source, you should have much more than enough to take care of our little pets,"

Kaub that he had helped eliminate Teledyne's

Parkin told Kaub, referring to his contacts in Washington who helped get information.

Kaub said he wasn't sure the contract was that lucrative but concluded by saying: "I under-

Complaining also to Sullivan that the money had not been paid. Parkin threatened to use his influence to get the Defense Department to cancel its options to buy additional equipment.

'The only thing we can do is cancel next year by making sure it's not exercised," he told Sullivan. Parkin remarked that his friends, whom he never identified, were "getting goosey" about not getting paid.

They have finessed this thing an awfully long way," he told Sullivan

The defense contends that Sullivan, Kaub and Dale Schnittjer, the third Teledyne executive on trial, did not know that Parkin was engaged in illegal activity after he was retained by Teledyne to help it get the contract.

Protecting computers from hackers crucial for business, experts claim

By JOHN A. BOLT AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Although hackers have been popularized in the movies and media as bright, glamorous "Wunderkinder," in reality they are terrorists threatening the computer networks of the businss world, experts say.

Mark Leary, a senior analyst with International Data Corp., complained at a Tuesday roundtable discussion that the legal system has not responded to the computer hacker threat.

Many computer hackers "are given slaps on the wrist," Leary said. "The justice system has to step up ... to the fact that these people are malicious and are criminals and are robbing banks just as much as if they walked up with a shotgun.

Other panelists complained that hackers, because of their abilities at breaking the system, are even given jobs, sometimes as security consultants.

spend money on security, however, after last year's celebrated invasion of a nationwide computer network by a computer virus allegedly unleashed by a graduate student, the experts said.

"The incident caused us to reassess the priorities with which we look at certain threats," said Dennis Steinaur, manager of the computer security management group of the National Institute of Standards and Technology.

But computer security is not only a matter of guarding against unauthorized entry, according to Max Hopper, senior vice president for information systems at American Airlines

Hopper said American has built "a Cheyenne Mountaintype" installation for its computer systems to guard against a variety of problems, including electrical failure and natural disaster. Referring to the Defense Department's underground nerve center inside a Colorado mountain, he said American's precautions even include a threeday supply of food.

"We've done everything we can, we think, to protect the total environment," Hopper said.

Hopper and Steinaur said that despite the high-tech image of computer terrorism, it remains an administrative problem that should be approached as a routine management issue. But the experts agreed that the greatest danger to computer networks does not come from out-

Companies are more willing to side hackers. Instead, they said, the biggest threat is from disgruntled employees or others whose original access to systems was legitimate.

> While screening of potential employees is useful, Steinaur said, it is more important to build within computer systems ways to track unauthorized use and to publicize that hacking can be found out and traced.

> But Steinaur said growing computer literacy, plus the activities of some non-malicious hackers, helps security managers in some respects.

Expanded knowledge "forces us as security managers not to be dependent on ignorance,' Steinaur said.

"Security needs to be a part of the system, rather than a 'nuisance addition," "Steinaur said, "and we probably have not done a very good job of making management realize that security is an integral part of the system.'

IDC's Leary said the organization's surveys of Fortune 1000 companies surprisingly had found a significant number of companies who were doing little to protect their systems.

The discussion, the first of three planned by Network World, was held because computer sabotage "is a real problem that people aren't aware of," said editor John Gallant. Many business people believe sabotage cases "are glamorous incidents that happen to sophisticated net-

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard M. Daley, scion of Chicago's venerated "Boss," reclaimed the mayor's office his father held for 21 years and promised blacks that City Hall's "doors will remain open.

In ending six years of black control of the nation's thirdlargest city, Daley defeated black Alderman Timothy C. Evans, who ran as an independent and was backed by Jesse Jackson.

Republican Edward Vrdolyak also ran in Tuesday's courtordered special election to complete the final two years of the late Mayor Harold Washington's second term.

Daley, 46, used overwhelming white support, low black turnout and the shoe leather of precinct organizations whose efficiency recalled the political army controlled by his father, the late Richard J. Daley.

Honey-applesauce cake is always in season when you make it with applesauce and raisins for a festive touch, glaze and top with whole walnuts.

Applesauce Cake with raisins and walnuts

By Nancy Byal Better Homes and Gardens Magazine Food Editor

Maybe there's no such thing as a healthful cake, but this one comes close. Even better, the ingredients that make it good for you — whole-wheat flour, applesauce and raisins — also make it taste great.

HONEY-APPLESAUCE CAKE

21/4 cups whole-wheat flour 1/4 cup non-fat dry milk powder 11/2 teaspoons baking soda

1/4 teaspoon baking powder ½ teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon

1/4 teaspoon ground cloves 1 cup honey

½ cup shortening 2 eggs

1 cup applesauce

1 cup raisins 1 cup chopped walnuts

Glaze Walnuts (optional)

Grease and flour a 10-inch soda, baking powder, salt, cinnamon and cloves. Set aside. In large mixer bowl beat honey together flour, milk powder, and shortening with electric mixer on medium speed until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. On low speed add flour mixture and applesauce alternately to beaten mixture, beating just unti combined after each addition. Fold in raisins and nuts. Pour batter into prepared pan. Bake in 325-degree F oven 40 to 45 minutes or until cake tests done. Invert onto wire rack: remove pan. Cool completely.

Glaze: In a small mixing bowl stir together 3/4 cup sifted powdered sugar, 1/4 teaspoon vanilla and enough milk to make of drizzling consistency (about 2 teaspoons). Drizzle over cake. If desired, garnish with walnuts. Makes 16 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 296 cal., 6 g pro., 46 carb., 12 g fat, 35 mg chol., 197 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 10 percent fluted tube pan. Set aside. Stir thiamine, 12 percent phosphorus.

Passover favorites good anytime By CAROL DEEGAN foods eaten during the eight days of Passover differ from those of AP Food Writer A section on wine by kosher

NEW YORK (AP) — Passover recipes are handed down for generations. But that doesn't mean that every recipe stays the same. Many families add their own variations to traditional dishes.

As Judy Zeidler explains in "The Gourmet Jewish Cook" (Morrow, $22.95), the holiday "gives us a chance to try some different foods — old and new Passover favorites.'

For example, Zeidler has created a special "California-style" haroset to hand down to her children as a family tradition. "Our recipe uses the avocados, lemons, almonds, oranges and dried fruits for which California is famous.

"Passover food is boring only if you permit it to be," she says, and "although the Passover pantry sounds very complicated at first, it really isn't much of a hardship. There are no restrictions on fresh fruits or most vegetables, and all kosher fish, meats and poultry are permitted.

Among the ideas offered in her cookbook for Passover: a California Passover Seder for 12, an Italian Passover Seder, and an Ancient Persian Seder.

'The Gourmet Jewish Cook" contains over 600 recipes, including a large section on celebrating Jewish holidays throughout the year. Some of the new twists on old favorites: California-style brisket, low-cholesterol hamantaschen, potato pancakes a la francaise, Concord grape wine ice, whitefish with zucchini sauce, and cucumber pasta.

Traditional Passover recipes, including those for haroset, matzo balls and matzo brie, can be found in "The Complete American-Jewish Cookbook, 3rd Edition," by Anne London and Bertha Kahn Bishov (Harper & Row. $12.95).

According to the cookbook, the rest of the year because of the prohibition of all leaven. Foods containing baking powder, baking soda and yeast are forbidden, as well as such legumes as dried peas and dried beans, and grains. The usual flours are replaced with matzo meal, matzo meal cake flour (finely ground matzo meal) and potato flour.

More than 3,500 up-to-date, tested kosher recipes are included in "The Complete American-Jewish Cookbook," which Harper & Row says has sold more than 30,000 copies since it was first published in 1971.

1/2 teaspoon salt 1/3 cup butter or margarine

2/3 cup granulated sugar 1 large egg 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel ¼ cup milk Powdered sugar

Trim and peel pineapple. Cut 6 slices, 1/2-inch thick, and cut fruit into wedges, removing cores. Prepare Streusel and set aside. Resift flour with baking powder and salt. Combine butter, granulated sugar and egg, and beat until well blended. Stir in lemon peel, and about half the flour mixture. Blend in milk, then remaining flour. Turn into well-greased and lightly floured 8-inch spring form pan (or baking pan 6 x 9 x 2 inches). Sprinkle with half the Streusel. Arrange pineapple wedges over top and sprinkle with remaining Streusel. Bake in moderate oven (350 & F) 55 to 60 minutes, until cake tests done and edges begin to pull away from pan. Remove from oven wire rack and let stand 10 to 15 minutes, then remove from pan. Sprinkle with a light siftig of powered sugar. Serve warm or cool. Makes 8 servings.

Is winter really over?

Lack of frost signals the beginning of a safe period of growing vegetables such as beans, corn, cucumbers, eggplant, Southern peas, peppers, squash, tomatoes and watermelon. All of these vegetables are very sensitive to frost conditions and must not be planted until all danger of frost is past, unless some sort of frost protection is provided.

Average length of these frostfree periods is relatively stable in most areas. The problem arises in determining when these periods begin and end. Meterological information collected for many years indicates the "average first frost-free date." The term "average" is misleading.

Average means that which has occurred most often or normal. As most Texans know, normal weather is the unexpected rather than the expected occurrence. Unfortunately, extremes are also averaged in. For instance, mid-April is the beginning of the average frost-free period in the spring for the Texas Panhandle and, normally, the first frost of the fall occurs in mid-October.

For Horticulture

Yet many farmers remember when frost has occurred as late as May and as early as September. These same farmers also remember years when the first frost-free day occured in March and the first frost of the fall was in November. You can now begin to appreciate the farmers' situa-

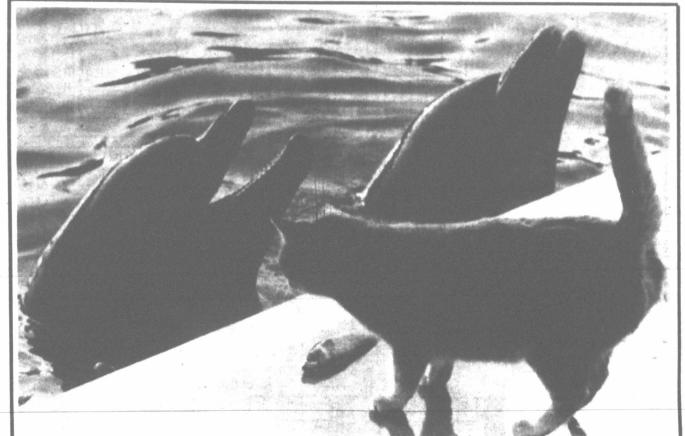

Any time one tries to outwit Mother Nature, it is a tremendous risk. Yet successful gardening depends on just that. For instance, if one waits until well past the average first frostfree date to insure success with such tender crops as tomatoes and beans, a complete failure The failure will be caused by the later bloom date due to later planting. Tomatoes blooming during hot temperatures have improper fruit set and reduced

The answer to this dilemma is to plant frost-susceptible crops according to the average frostfree date, but remember to protect them if a late cool period occurs. Home gardeners can cover plants with cans, blankets, a cage-garbage bag system or boxes on frosty nights.

Do not plant Southern peas (black-eyed peas), sweet potatoes and okra until well after the first frost-free date.

It is also very important that cool-season, frost-tolerant crops be established well before the first frost-free date. This is especially important in the spring as cool-season vegetables do not grow well in the hot temperatures which follow soon after the last

These vegetables include beets, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, chard, collards, kale, lettuce, mustard, onions, Irish potatos, radishes, spinach and turnips.

Baby glasses bring public curiosity into irritating focus

DEAR ABBY: I have a young child who has worn glasses since she was 4 months old. She is not to be pitied. We consider it a blessing that the problem (strabismus) was diagnosed and corrected at such an early age. Perhaps in time her glasses will not be such an oddity.

Abby, I am finding it increasingly difficult to be gracious to every wellmeaning soul who wants to engage me in conversation about my daughter's eyes and treatment while I'm shopping, dining out, etc. Then there are the rude remarks: "Look at that baby!" "How old is that child?" And, "Poor thing what else is wrong with her?"

These comments come not only from strangers but from our extended family and friends as well although those familiar to us tend to use the not-so-subtle, "Will she always have to wear those glasses?'

Certainly I do not mind talking about it with people I know, but when I'm out running errands with two young children in tow, must I give my undivided attention to strangers just to satisfy their curiosity? How I wish they would keep their questions and comments to themselves.

LOSING PATIENCE IN ST. PAUL

DEAR LOSING PATIENCE: You have written a very important letter. Young children, on seeing something unusual, will ask questions to satisfy their natural curiosity. But adults should know better.

This is a plea for everyone who is old enough to read: Please refrain from gawking or inquiring about those who are "different" because they wear braces, use crutches, walkers, wheelchairs or some kind of device to help them function better.

Texas Historical Commission has notified the Carson County Historical Commission that the book, "Roots of Faith - The Story of the Sacred Heart Parish, White Deer, Texas," has been selected as the winner in the organizational history category of the 1988 T.R. Fehrenbach Publications

"Roots of Faith" was published on the 75th anniversary of the Sacred Heart Parish. It tells the parish story from its beginning in 1913 until the present time. Sacred Heart Historical Committee researched the material and solicited stories and photographs from family members. Many descendants of original families are still members of the parish. Carolyn Rapstine edited the material.

An official awards ceremony will be held at the Annual Historic Preservation Conference in Dallas at the noon awards luncheon April 28. an engraved plaque will be presented to each winning author. Publishers and nominators will be recognized, also.

The book was nominated by the Carson County Historical Commission by Mrs. J.B. McCray of Panhandle, chairman. Fifty-five books in six categories were submitted from throughout Texas in the contest.

Walsh enters draft

IRVING (AP) — The announcement that Miami Hurricanes quarterback Steve Walsh will enter the National Football League draft gives the Dallas Cowboys another option as they decide how to use their No. 1 pick in the upcoming draft.

Walsh, who played quarterback for new Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson at Miami, his final season of college eligibility and enter the NFL draft later this month.

And the announcement that Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State will also be available in the draft opens up even more possibilities for the Cowboys, who qualified for the No. 1 draft choice with a 3-13 finish, worst in the NFL, last season.

Johnson said Tuesday night that Walsh will become a productive player in the NFL, but stopped short of saying he would consider using the team's No. 1 choice to draft Walsh.

The Cowboys earlier appeared to be leaning toward signing UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman, but Tuesday they had the additional options of Walsh or Sanders.

Brown going to Michigan?

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Arizona State. Antonio Spurs coach Larry Brown had expressed interest in the head coaching position at Michigan, the San Antonio Express-News reported Tuesday.

An unnamed source cited by the newspaper said a coach close to Michigan athletic director Bo Schembechler told him Brown expressed the interest when the Spurs were in Detroit last month.

The source said Brown called the coach close to Schembechler and told him he was interested in the Michigan job and asked the coach to recommend him to Schembechler.

Michigan assistant coach Steve Fisher took over the Wolverines head coaching reigns March 15 after Bill Frieder was hired by Schembechler has yet to offer Fisher a contract for next season. Brown, who has had disagreements with Spurs owner B.J. 'Red'' McCombs several times this season, denied that he is interested in the Michigan post.

"I haven't shown interest in anybody or anything since I came to SAn Antonio,'' Brown said Monday. "I haven't talked to one college or pro coach this season, except for (North Carolina coach) Dean Smith, and I talk to him all the time.

"That is probably the most ridiculous thing I have heard," he McCombs said he does not believe Brown would seek the Michigan position.

Buddy Bell got his 2,500th major league hit on a seventh-inning

By SONNY BOHANAN Sports Writer

The Pampa Harvesters like the sensation of living dangerously. It's been their trademark for the past two games.

On Saturday, the Harvesters rallied from an 8-0 deficit to clinch a 9-8 victory over Levelland in the seventh inning. They staged a similar comeback Tuesday, scoring two clutch runs in the seventh en route to a 3-2 defeat of the Dumas Demons in District 1-4A action at Harvester Field.

"I got a funny feeling in the fourth inning that they were just waiting for the seventh inning to start," Pampa coach Rod Porter said. "I don't think there was a doubt in their mind that they were going to beat Dumas.'

Catcher Tory Peet provided Tuesday's storybook ending. David Doucette led off with a single, then scored the tying run off Chris Roden's double, a blooper over first base. Peet stepped to the plate and smashed a two-bagger to center field, sending Roden home and clinching the Pampa victory. Before Peet could get back to the dugout, he was mobbed by teammates chanting, "Two in a row, two in a row.

"It wasn't any surprise after we did it on Saturday," said Peet, who hit 2 for 3 on the day. "I knew it was tied, 2-2, and we had a guy on second base. All I was trying to do was put the ball in play.

Pampa climbed to 4-3 in district, 8-6 overall, and moved from fifth place into a thirdplace tie with Lubbock Dunbar. Dumas, fourth in the conference standings, fell to 3-3-1, 5-6-1 on the season

Quincy Williams started on the mound for Pampa, although he lasted only 2 1-3 innings, yielding 2 runs on 3 hits. In the first frame, Dumas center fielder Jeff Baker, who hit 2 for 2 to pace the Demons, reached base on a single. Cleanup hitter tarrett Newton followed and we in Dumas' only runs whe are pounded a two-run homer over the left field fence.

Losing pitcher Jess Watkins cruised through the first three innings, allowing ten Pampa batters two hits, singles by Brandon Knutson (2 for 3) and Peet. Pampa collected seven hits on the day.

The Harvesters scored their first run in the fourth when Billy Wortham (2 for 3) singled, stole second, reached third on an overthrow and went home on a Dumas error. The Demons committed three consecutive errors before retiring the side with the bases loaded.

James Bybee, who relieved Williams in the third inning, struck out three and gave up three hits to improve to 5-3. Porter experimented with the positions in the field Tuesday, moving Chris Roden from third to second, Mark Aderholt from second to shortstop and Brandon Knutson from left to right field. Matt Brock moved from catcher to right field when Bybee took the mound, and Peet came in behind the

"We've really come a long way since last season," Porter said. "I've got twelve guys I feel comfortable starting. Chris Roden wasn't even a starter two weeks ago. Tory Peet wasn't a starter at the beginning of the season and he had a clutch hit for us today. And I have every confidence that McDonald (just after Peet in the lineup) would have done it if Peet hadn't."

Sammy Franklin passed up his chance to get in the game when Porter asked him to pinch hit for Chris Roden in the seventh inning.

"Sammy was at the plate and I said, 'I need a bunt,' Porter said. "He said, 'Coach, let Roden do it. He's a better bunter than me.' I'm very proud of him for that. This squad is really starting to show some maturity. They're playing as a team, and that's why we pulled the game out in the seventh inning.'

The Harvesters will battle Lubbock Dunbar for sole possession of third place when the two teams meet at 2 p.m. Saturday at Harvester Field.

Pampa's Kerry Phillips battles a Tascosa player for control of the ball. Final Four still greatest spectacle in college athletics

It's still the Greatest Spectacle in College Athletics!

The stellar performances of the universities of Michigan, Seton Hall, Illinois and Duke in the Final Four verified again that good coaches, working within the NCAA guidelines, can produce exciting champions, and provide bundles of big bucks for their institutions, too. You didn't have to be a "basketball wacko" to appreciate the immense excitement and emotion slam-dunked into Monday night's title contest. And thanks in great part to CBS-TV for a magnificent production by all involved, from the superb on-camera Musburger-Packer team to their behind the scenes dedicated co-workers who provided the close-ups of participants' families, the world got to be a part of one of sports alltime great contests. CBS effort was perhaps the greatest comeback of the post-season tournament, based on the dismal initial effort in the network's opening round of regional telecasts. But the athletes who provided the action were the stars. Their huge, tireless talents overshadowed the whining coaches complaining about Proposition 48, Prop 42, the quality of officiating, and NCAA decisions avoiding any home-court advantages. Sorry General Knight, No Gold son and Upset Tubbs, but the game is still greater than each of you.

al Four action recouped much of the respect for college athletics which was eradicated by the actions of several marquee universities, one major conference, and Warren several non-student athletes concerning football. Restoration of Hasse that integrity is especially important with the skyrocketing costs of athletic programs at all levels.

In that respect, athletics directors are going to get the undivided attention of their institution president when they walk in carrying checks. Less than 10 percent of the Division I schools will NOT realize some financial reward from the tournament, according to Lou Spry, former West Texas State athletic employee who now has added the title of NCAA Associate Executive Director to that already worn hat of Controller. Spry approves and signs those checks, and here is a partial breakdown. The Big Ten and Atlantic Coast Conferences will receive checks of $4.5 million each; the Big East $3.75, the Big Eight $2 million. Six other leagues will get over $1 million, including the Southwest Conference. No wonder Bo Schembechler was smiling. Succeeding the inimitable Don Canham as AD at Michigan, he has quickly discovered that basketball is a much more financially lucrative sport than his lifelong romance with football. Football, with larger stadia, has been pulling the wool over administrators' eyes all these years, blinding them from the massive costs for the fall sport which eradicate and neutralize income. Even alert public school boards are awakening to that fact. Schembechler can smile for another reason: he made the decision to turn the tournament reins over to assistant coach Steve Fisher when veteran Bill Freider announced a coaching move to Arizona State next season. Fisher's perfect 6-0 mark took the heat off Bo. And the Michigan success proved that an interim coach can go all the way, Bill Hodges having fallen one step short in 1979. Hodges was the aide who took over the Larry Bird-led Indiana State team when head coach Bob King suffered a heart attack at season's start. Hodges led the Sycamores to the Final Four (including three wins that year over WTSU), but lost to Magic Johnson's Michigan State Spartans, the last team from the car-making state to reach the high octane game.

On the other bench was P.J. Carlesimo, thanks to the support of Chancellor Msgr. John J. Petillo. It was the CEO of SHU who stood behind the young coach last year when students, alumni and fans were calling for his dismissal when the program was building, and losing. Administrators at West Texas State in Amarillo ISD should pay attention. If there was any blemish on the event, it was the fact The Hall had two international players, one each from Puerto Rico and Australia, obviously recruited for basketball playing abilities. It was all legal, however, and that loophole in collegiate recruiting should eventually be closed by the

It was a fantastic conclusion to a fantastic season. That oneeyed, basketball wacko Dick Vitale expressed it best of all. Not with his normal enthusiastic, high-decibel tonsils, but with silent body language. On the ESPN post-game show Vitale was obviously depressed, sapped, enthusiasm wilted. Not because his alma mater, Seton Hall had lost but because the college cage season was over.

ALSO NOTED: The Big 10 has produced the most Final Four teams, 30; the Pac-10 provided 26, the Big Eight and ACC 22 each. The SWC only 13 over the 51 year span...Duke students jeered Georgetown Cocah John Thompson, the USA basketball team coach, with chants of "Where's our gold?"...P.J. Carlesimo's dad, Pete, also headed up the National Invitational Tournament for years for the sponsoring Metropolitan Basketball Coaches Association of New York City, and was an exceptionally close friend of the Missouri Valley Conference. He was present at most of the annual preseason tipoff meetings and always extended MVC tournament bids...By coincidence, Rich Grawer had the St. Louis Billikens playing in the tournament's early rounds the same day Ron Ekker was fired as president/coach of the CBA La Crosse Catbirds. Ekker preceeded Grawer at St. Louis.

Utah Jazz overcame a first half of "running in the mud" and have ended the Dallas Mavericks' twogame winning streak in the Salt Palace.

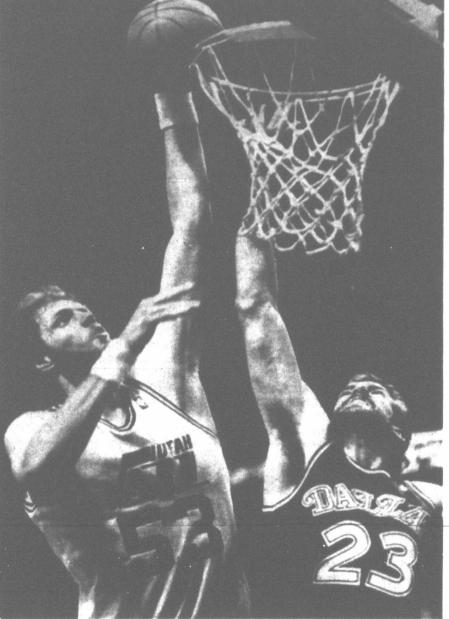

But Utah, which maintained its five-game lead over Houston and Denver in the Midwest Division, can't rest easy after a 95-80 victory over Dallas Tuesday night. There's tonight's Western Conference showdown against Phoenix, which is only one game ahead of Utah in the race for playoff seeding.

"Phoenix, first of all, is a very. very good team," said Jazz coach Jerry Sloan. "We haven't won (in) Phoenix in a long time. We can't go over there being tired and thinking we're tired.

The Jazz looked tired in the early going of the game against Dallas. The Mavericks started with an 8-2 spurt and controlled the tempo for three quarters.

Utah didn't take charge until a 10-0 run, sparked by one basket and three assists from John Stockton, to start the fourth quarter put Utah ahead 76-61 with 8:17 left in the game.

The Jazz, who had 22 points from Karl Malone, 18 from Thurl Bailey and 13 from Stockton, all in the second half, snapped a twogame Dallas winning streak in the Salt Palace, even though the Mavericks held Utah to fewer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — With no shot at the NBA playoffs, the San Antonio Spurs have found a new source of motivation for the final month of the season.

Report claims Rose bet on baseball games

CLEVELAND (AP) — A person court documents refer to as "G-1" but identified by newspaper sources as Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose bet $8,000 to $16,000 daily on games during a stretch of the 1987 season, The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer reported today.

The newspaper said three sources close to the case indicated the bets had been made on baseball games. It also quoted government informants as claiming the document said the bets were placed through Ron Peters, a Franklin, Ohio, cafe owner who has said he was Rose's prin-

Although Rose is not referred to by name in the IRS document, the paper said it had been told by federal sources that the code name "G-1" means Rose. The paper also reported the document says that Paul Janszen, a friend of Rose, repeatedly urged Peters to pay a $50,000 gambling debt the bookie owed the Cincinnati manager and U.S. District Court records show Janszen became an FBI informant and began wearing a wireless microphone in April 1988, the newspaper said, and federal agents taped at least four conversations about the debt. The IRS said the betting done by "G-1" occurred early in the 1987 season, according to the paper. Rose has denied betting on baseball and using bookies. He has admitted he frequently bets at racetracks.

ger would not comment on the report. Peters has an unlisted home telephone number and did not immediately return a telephone message left at his restaurant in Franklin early

Rose's attorney, Reuven Katz, said this morning the mana-

Janszen is a federal informant serving a six-month sentence for tax evasion involving the sale of steroids. The IRS document mentions bets made on the Reds, but they were made by another gambler, not Rose, at $200 per According to the Plain Dealer, the document says the following happened in May 1987:

the newspaper said.

Club Course.

"During the first or second week of May 1987, G-1 (Rose) and S-1 (Janszen) together won approximately $25,000 from Peters. S-1 (Janszen) met Peters in Franklin, and in S-1's car, Peters gave him currency in stacks of $5,000 each.

'The following week, S-1 (Janszen) took several thousand dollars to Peters, which was for losses of G-1 (Rose). "Beginning in June 1987, G-1 began winning his bets with Peters. However, in June 1987, when S-1 (Janszen) went to Franklin to collect, Peters told S-1 that his wife 'had gone crazy on him, and that she took $150,000 of his money.' Peters told S-1 he could not pay at that time, but would pay S-1 soon," the Plain Dealer reported the document as saying. The IRS affidavit seeking a search warrant for Peters' home and business was sealed last Aug. 17 by a federal magistrate in Dayton. It contained sensitive information about a secret federal investigation into illegal sports betting,

The baseball commissioner's office began an investigation of Rose's alleged betting habits last month. If he is found to have bet on baseball games, he is subject to a one-year suspension. If it is discovered he bet on games involving the Reds, he could be banned for life.

declined comment when asked about the IRS affidavit. "We're not commenting on the investigation at all," Levin On Monday, Peters, 31, admitted in federal court that he was a bookmaker and cocaine distributor. In return, he will receive an 18-month sentence on charges that could have put him in jail for 23 years and cost him $1.25 million in fines. Also identified in the IRS document, the Plain Dealer said, were two others who have associated with Rose: Thomas Gioiosa, a self-described professional gambler and former roommate of Rose's, and Janszen.

Gorbachev: There will be no Soviet nukes in Latin

By GEORGE GEDDA Associated Press Writer

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) -Mikhail S. Gorbachev, responding to longstanding U.S. concerns about Moscow's intentions in Latin America, says the Kremlin will refrain from putting military bases or nuclear weapons in the region.

With President Fidel Castro sitting nearby, the Soviet leader said in a speech to the National Assembly Tuesday that Moscow supports the creation of a "zone of peace" in Latin America and an end to all outside military aid to the region.

Gorbachev's comments were made during his first diplomatic trip to Latin America and seemed directed largely at Washington, whose hemispheric policy for years has been based on concerns about Soviet influence in the re-

The Soviet president was to end his 63-hour trip and leave for London this morning following a hectic day of activities Tuesday highlighted by his late afternoon speech.

It was a day for sightseeing by Gorbachev at local points of interest and also a day in which dissident sources reported the arrest of seven people who had planned to lead a pro-Gorbachev demonstration at the Soviet Embassy.

The planned demonstration. canceled after the arrests, intended to seek Gorbachev's support for liberalizing moves in Cuba similar to the ones he is carrying out in the Soviet Union.

Castro introduced Gorbachev to the National Assembly, delivering a fiery 50-minute address in which he blasted U.S. policies across the board, particularly Washington's support for anti-communist insurgencies.

He criticized Western reporters for saying Gorbachev's reforms have produced a rift between the two.

Castro pointed out that the two countries have immense cultural, economic and historical differences, and it is only natural that they would follow different ideological paths.

Still, Castro has indicated in the past that he was troubled that Gorbachev would embrace some aspects of capitalism as part of his sweeping policy shifts.

At a news conference after his speech, Gorbachev also dismissed as "inventions" Western media portrayals of him and Castro "almost as enemies."

As proof of the durability of the \mathcal{O} Soviet-Cuban alliance, Gorbachev and Castro signed a 25year Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation on Tuesday.

Gorbachev did lend credence in his speech to widely reported

Castro, left, and Gorbachev hold a joint news conference Tuesday after they both had addressed the National Assembly in Havana.

Soviet unhappiness with Cuban use of Soviet economic aid, estimated at $5 billion annually. Economic ties between the countries, he said, "should be made more dynamic, more efficient and mutually productive."

He called for "stricter accountablity and more discipline to ensure timely and proper compliance with obligations mutually assumed." The remarks were interpreted as Soviet displeasure over protracted delays in development projects to which Moscow has contributed.

On hemispheric issues, Gorbachev insisted that his country has limited ambitions. The Soviet Union, he said, "does not seek for itself political, strategic or military advantage in the Western Hemisphere.

"We consider that this hemisphere and all others must not be an arena for East-West confrontation.'

He said the Soviet Union favors strengthening the existing nonnuclear status of Latin America and proposed establishing a "zone of peace" in the region.

Gorbachev said his country "does not have any intention of having in Latin America naval, air or missile bases or to place there nuclear or other weapons of mass extermination" - a clear allusion to the Kremlin's placing of nuclear missiles in Cuba in 1962 that were withdrawn under U.S. pressure.

The Soviet leader said both his country and Cuba oppose "the export of revolution or counterrevolution, and all forms of foreign interference in the affairs of sovereign nations."

But he said Soviet military aid to Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government would continue as long as U.S. military assistance to other Central American countries continues.

When an American reporter invited Gorbachev to attack the Bush administration's military spending policies as indicating a lack of interest in arms control, Gorbachev ticked off the long list of disarmament negotiations under way, leaving the impression that he had faith in American goodwill.

Walesa says Solidarity approves historic pact

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa said Solidarity leaders today approved a historic pact that would legalize the banned union movement and clear the way for the first free elections in Communist post-war Poland.

He said Solidarity had achieved its primary goals during its two months of talks with the government on ending the country's social and economic crisis.

The Solidarity chairman made the remarks after a meeting of the Solidarity Executive Commission, which gathered today to decide whether to approve the sweeping agreement with the government that resulted from the talks.

State radio announced that the final accords would be signed in a ceremony at the Council of Ministers palace, where the talks between the government and the opposition began on Feb. 6. Parliament could meet as early as Friday to enact the accords.

Two major agreements were reached Tuesday and the main remaining obstacle is a dispute between Solidarity and the official trade union federation OPZZ over a formula to peg workers' compensation to inflation.

These key agreements were reached late Tuesday ■ Solidarity's legal status will be restored and people fired for union activities after the 1981 crackdown that quashed Solidarity will be reinstated. Political reforms will include bringing the opposition into parliament as a minority party, creating a freely elected Senate and establishing a powerful pres-

Jacek Merkel, a Solidarity negotiator, said Solidarity could become legal before the end of April.

Also under the agreement, the opposition would participate in June elections to the Sejm that would guarantee the Communist Party and its allies 65 percent of the 460 seats. That ratio would apply only this year with subsequent elections to be more democratic

A presidency and a Senate of about 100 members would be created. The Senate would be elected by open competitive vote and probably would be controlled by the opposition.

The Senate would advise the Sejm and exercise veto powers over its bills.

The president would be elected this year by the Sejm and Senate for a six-year term. Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Communist Party leader, would be expected to win.
