Panel says Wright violated rules of conduct

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee charged today that House Speaker Jim Wright violated official rules of conduct 69 times by not disclosing thousands of dollars in alleged gifts and by skirting rules on speaking fees through bulk book sales.

The committee — six Democrats and six Republicans — unanimously approved the statement of alleged violations, announced the chairman, Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Calif.

The charges, divided into five counts, and an accompanying report by Richard Phelan, the attorney who conducted the committee's investigation, could jeopardize Wright's future as speaker.

The statement "represents a determination by the committee that in 69 instances, there is reason to believe that Rep. Wright violated the code of official conduct and other House rules which apply to him as a member of Congress," Dixon said.

He emphasized that the committee's action is similar to an indictment — based on a comparatively low standard of proof — and not a conviction.

"The speaker of the House has not been found guilty of any violations but from a review of the evidence the committee has found a reason to believe" violations may have occurred, Dixon said.

"We have not reached any final conclusions on the matters that are still under investigation," he said, telling reporters that, for further proceedings, the standard will be "clear and convincing evidence."

The committee, under its rules, will next allow Wright to respond within 21 days — a period the speaker has indicated he would like to abbreviate.

After that, the committee has 30 days to decide whether to hold a "disciplinary hearing" on whether Wright indeed violated rules and what punishment, if any, it should recommend to the full House.

The panel cleared Wright of several accusations filed against him last year when the inquiry began, including alleged use of a staff member to write the book, improper use of campaign funds and improper lobbying on behalf of constituents.

Dixon said the committee was continuing its investigation into another allegation surrounding the investment in an oil and gas well by Wright and Mallick. The committee has issued subpoenas in that case, he said.

"I am prepared to appear as early as Monday afternoon, but certainly the committee should be able to schedule a hearing within seven days," Wright said in a letter sent to the committee Sunday night.

But Dixon told a news conference the committee had just received the letter and did not know when Wright would appear.

As for the 69 charges, the committee determined that apparent gifts from Wright's business partner, George Mallick, appeared to be improper because the Fort Worth, Texas, developer had a direct interest in legislation and had not been properly reported to the House.

"The nature and extent of the apparent gifts from Mr. Mallick indicates that Rep. Wright did not exercise reasonable care to avoid even the appearance of impropriety, which is the hallmark of the House gift rule," Dixon said.

The committee said the $145,000 in gifts included free or cut-rate use of a condominium in Fort Worth, an $18,000-a-year salary paid Wright's wife, Betty, and free use of a car.

Dixon said the committee also charged that Wright skirted House limits on speaking fees through the sales of his book, Reflections of a Public Man.

"In the committee's view, seven bulk sales of the Rep. Wright's book ... demonstrated an overall scheme to evade the House outside earned income limit because (speaking) honorarium payments were recharacterized as royalties."

The House will ultimately be Wright's jury.

Even if the committee votes against sanctioning the speaker, GOP leaders have promised to keep Wright a political issue.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., has said he would use House rules to force a vote on the committee report. Republicans would try to use that to portray themselves as anti-corruption.

Don't forget — tax forms due before midnight

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — IRS employees put in overtime, post offices set up special mail drops and demonstrators made their cases as the nation prepared to end another federal tax return filing season at midnight tonight.

Internal Revenue Service spokesman Frank Keith said the IRS had no way of knowing how many taxpayers were waiting until the last minute to file. But the agency expects to receive 18 million returns this week, including those filed over the weekend, he said.

The deadline is one day later in New England and most of upstate New York because today is Patriot's Day, a legal holiday, in Massachusetts, site of the IRS center which processes returns from taxpayers in those states.

The IRS expects to receive more than 109 million returns this year, many of which will come in well after the deadline.

About 6 million couples and individuals are expected to get an extra four months to file — but not to pay any taxes due — by mailing Form 4868 before midnight.

Many of the 650,000 Americans who live and work abroad are likely to take an automatic two-month extension. And, as usual, some taxpayers simply will miss the deadline and face a late-filing penalty.

In Pampa, Postmaster Richard Wilson said postal service employees would be working late tonight to take care of the expected last-minute mailings.

Tax forms must be mailed at the Post Office location, inside the building, to receive a postmark. And the forms must be mailed before midnight, he said.

"We have a special box marked 'Internal Revenue Service only' in the Post Office lobby, Wilson said.

If that box is full, then taxpayers can place their tax form envelopes in the regular mailing slots inside the building, he said, again noting that the forms must be mailed before midnight.

Wilson said the service windows will be open only until 5 p.m., though anyone still standing in the line at 5 p.m. "will be worked out."

In many IRS offices, employees planned to continue offering advice tonight as long as taxpayers were asking for it.

Bush announces U.S. aid to Poland program

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

HAMTRAMCK, Mich. (AP) — President Bush today announced new U.S. economic help for Poland, praising the Warsaw government's move toward reform and saying "we can and must answer this call to freedom."

Bush traveled to the Polish-American city of Hamtramck, which is surrounded by Detroit, to extol the communist government's agreement to reinstate the Solidarity trade union movement and to hold the first free elections in Poland since 1948.

While the president announced a series of steps aimed at helping Poland restore its battered economy, Bush said continued aid would depend on consistent moves by the communist government toward reform.

"We will not act unconditionally," he said. "We will not offer aid without requiring sound economic practices in return. We must remember that Poland is still a member of the Warsaw Pact. We must take no steps that compromise the security of the West."

The concessions could open the way for a flow to Poland of up to $1 billion in new loans, loan rescheduling and trade and investment relief, according to administration and international monetary sources.

Administration officials, who declined to be identified, also said Bush may travel to Poland in July, immediately before or after the seven-nation economic summit in Paris.

The trip would underscore U.S. support for Warsaw's landmark April 5 steps restoring the legal status of the union Solidarity and scheduling the first open elections in the communist-run country since 1948.

Bush said the new agreements by the Polish government with the Solidarity movement that it banned in 1981 should help Warsaw arrange new loans from multinational lending organizations such as the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

The sources said in advance of Bush's speech that could amount to rescheduling up to $700 million in existing loans in an effort to help Poland make a dent in its $39 billion international debt.

Bush's package also called for a lowering of tariffs on selected Polish imports through the Generalized System of Preferences, a move that requires congressional approval.

This system of preferential tariffs traditionally is used by the U.S. government to assist less-developed nations.

Bush also announced that he will seek congressional approval for a program of U.S.-guaranteed loans, through the Overseas Private Investment Corp., to stimulate private investment in Poland. He also said he would propose negotiations that could lead to joint ventures between U.S. and Polish businesses.

Swedish student finds life different here

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

When Camilla Karlsson thought about America, she pictured dozens of happy, tanned young people drinking sodas and having endless hours of fun in the sun.

The Swedish foreign exchange student got that idea straight from the most American influence of all — Coke commercials on Swedish television.

After almost a year in the United States, her image of life in America has changed drastically.

She said in Sweden young people are given more freedom and fewer rules. She also has questions about a strange custom known as dating.

"American guys are much more polite," she said. "In Sweden no guy would hold the door for you or buy you a Coke. You buy your own Coke."

"We don't have dating in Sweden. I went on one blind date (in Pampa) and was almost embarrassed at how polite he was."

She said that while the difference in cultures has been hard to adjust to, she has stayed in close contact with friends in

'I went on one blind date (in Pampa) and was almost embarrassed at how polite he was.'

Sweden, a country where male-male and female-female friendships are more valued than boy-girl relationships during the teenage years.

One American she has made a close friendship with is Princess, the cocker spaniel owned by her host family, Jerry and Lela Harris.

This is the natural result of having a mother who raises show dogs and a father who raises trotters in her home country.

"I'm always busy there going to trotting races or dog exhibitions. It makes me sad seeing all the homeless dogs wandering around over here. We don't have that at home," Karlsson said.

One of her favorite parts of American life is the school spirit of Pampa High School, something American youth tend to take for granted.

"It's fun. Even though I'm not into sports — you don't have sports in school in Sweden — there is school spirit here," she said. "You fight for your school, like BEAT BORGER! I thought it was great with all the bands and drums and pep rallies."

'You fight for your school, like BEAT BORGER! I thought it was great with all the bands and drums and pep rallies.'

However, for the Swede there were other things about life in West Texas that were so different from her homeland they were harder to adapt to.

"I was amazed when I got here and they had their shoes on in the house. At home you take your shoes off when you come in the door. If I ever walked into my mother's house with my shoes on she would be mad," Karlsson said.

"Also, they dress old-fashioned here a little bit."

But more than dressing old-fashioned, or conservatively, as it is referred to by the locals, people in West Texas dress western.

"I don't like country music and I wouldn't ever think of going to a George Strait concert or wearing cowboy boots. I don't happen to like it," she said. "My friends back home would laugh at me if I ever wore cowboy boots."

She also had to get used to weather that includes tornadoes and hail the size of tennis balls, neither of which are heard of in Sweden.

Karlsson has gone on vacations with her hosts to Red River, N.M., Wyoming and San Antonio. She also traveled to the nation's capital and is preparing to go with the PHS band to Florida.

She also went on a trip with her host family's church to the Guadalupe Mountains.

For Karlsson, the emphasis on church participation is another drastic change from her country.

"Everybody here goes to church," she pointed out. "But it's not in our culture to go to church in Sweden."

She said a year of going to church each Sunday with the Harris family has changed her outlook on religion, but not her view of Christianity.

'Everybody here goes to church. But it's not in our culture to go to church in Sweden.'

"It's been a look at a different religion, but it hasn't changed me. I'm not active," she said.

Karlsson summarizes her year in Pampa, which will conclude on June 14 when she returns to Sweden, by giving Americans a compliment that is perhaps unintentional.

"You have a picture of America from Falcon Crest and Magnum. But it's not like that. You are just normal people. That's what I have found out."

That's pretty high praise coming from someone who had to get used to tornadoes, country music and cowboy boots.

Cleanup methods encouraging, but gooey oil makes it tougher

By PAUL JENKINS
Associated Press Writer

BLOCK ISLAND, Alaska (AP) — On this tiny piece of real estate in Prince William Sound, gooey crude oil from the nation's worst oil spill is puddled ankle-deep in some places.

Beaches are slathered with it, and a black line across rocky outcroppings marks the reach of high tide and the border between life and death.

With Alaska's brief summer approaching, Exxon is faced with the task of cleaning the shoreline here and in dozens of other places before mid-September and the first signs of winter.

The company must clean about 300 miles of remote and rugged beaches and shoreline within 150 days.

"It's going to be very, very tough," said Coast Guard Adm. Paul Vest, who is heading the operations at President Bush's direction.

Exxon this weekend handed Yost a shoreline cleanup plan he had demanded, and on Sunday the company assembled officials of state and federal agencies and the news media for a technological show and tell on a heavily oiled beach here.

For hours in a cold drizzle, Exxon displayed on 75 yards of gravel beach techniques for removing oil. They included things like vacuums and a $3,000 gun capable of spewing 2 1/2 gallons of steaming hot water a minute, an environmentally risky method because it sterilizes the beach.

"Different combinations of these will be necessary in different situations," said Bob Castle, a San Francisco-based Exxon consultant.

Landing craft hauling heavy equipment butted up to greasy rocks on the normally quiet beach. A small skimmer slurped up oil in an area surrounded by bright yellow booms.

About 60 oil-smeared workers in rain gear and hard hats wrestled with grimy firehoses, generators and other gear — stopping and starting with the arrival of new batches of visitors clad in bright orange float suits.

One technique used irrigation and fire hoses to rinse the beach with cold water. It removed more than half the oil in one spot during a brief demonstration and had to be halted occasionally so that late-arriving officials — Yost included — would get to see it in action.

Details of Exxon's cleanup plan have not been made public. Ed Owens, an Exxon technology consultant, said the cost of cleaning Prince William Sound beaches could run to $200 a linear foot.

The 987-foot tanker Exxon Valdez dumped 10.1 million gallons of crude oil in the sound on March 24 after hitting Bligh Reef some 25 miles northeast of Block Island.

The company has picked up about 840,000 gallons from the sea. Shoreline cleanup has been nil, and Exxon has drawn increasing fire for its lack of response. Because of the criticism, Yost was put in charge of the effort.

Block Island actually is part of Ellinor Island. An uplifting of the sea floor joined the two during the 1964 Good Friday earthquake, 25 years to the day before the Exxon spill. Controlled by the U.S. Forest Service, it is home to Sitka black-tailed deer, land otters and various birds. It also contains at least one archaeological site.

Steve Haavig, a Juneau-based Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation ecologist, and Fred Stroud, an Environmental Protection Agency official from Atlanta, spent much of the day checking the depth of the beach contamination. In some places, the oil had soaked in only an inch. In other places, it was found several inches deep.

"They're never going to get it all," Haavig said. Stroud agreed.

"I'd like to see them get up all the gross contamination," Stroud said. "But you're going to have a sheen coming off for years."

Moody to defend self in fraud trial

HOUSTON (AP) — Galveston financier Shearn Moody Jr. could serve another five-year prison term if convicted of charges of bankruptcy fraud at the end of a trial that began today.

The trial, expected to last a week, pits the former millionaire heir of a prominent Galveston family against prosecutors intent on a second conviction.

Moody, 55, who filed for bankruptcy in 1983, was sentenced in October to five years in prison for defrauding his family's foundation of $1.27 million.

In today's trial, Moody is charged with bankruptcy fraud stemming from the sale of Seaside Lanes, a Galveston bowling alley owned by Seaside Lanes Partnership, a Moody family real estate venture.

The indictment charges Moody and longtime aide Norman Revie with withholding $201,000 in proceeds from the sale from creditors in the Moody bankruptcy case and converting it to their own use.

The funds allegedly were converted to cashier's checks and funneled through a Canadian bank in an attempt to launder them.

U.S. District Judge Kenneth M. Hoyt last month bowed to Moody's wishes and allowed him to fire Marian Rosen, his defense attorney for several years. But Hoyt refused to appoint a new attorney in the case, saying he believed Moody could afford to pay for his own defense.

"I don't believe that he'd be able to represent himself that well, but if that's his choosing, then, with the proper admonitions, I will let him proceed pro se," Hoyt said in open court.

Moody, who argues that his money is tied up in the ongoing bankruptcy proceedings, has accused attorneys of mishandling his bankruptcy and criminal cases, charging inflated fees and revealing confidential information in violation of the attorney-client privilege.

Moody has filed numerous motions in the various civil and criminal federal cases against him, listing allegations against prosecutors, his bankruptcy trustee, his former attorneys and the federal judges presiding over the cases.

Sammons adds new channel

The local manager of Sammons Communications has announced that subscribers with cable-ready televisions or converter boxes will now be able to receive the newest Ted Turner station, TNT.

John Mason said the station, owned by Turner Broadcasting, which also owns CNN and WTBS as well as the Atlanta Braves and Atlanta Hawks sports teams, is available on channel 15B.

"We're very glad to present TNT, which we think is sure to become a favorite network of cable viewers," Mason said. "It offers a variety of programming that our customers have been requesting."

TNT, which stands for Turner Network Television, offers colorized and black and white versions of classic movies as well as original programs and children's viewing. The network is also the home of the very popular children's show Fraggle Rock, which was created by Jim Henson, the man behind Sesame Street and the Muppets.

School board to meet Tuesday

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet in regular session Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the administrative conference room at Carver Center.

Among the items on the agenda are a superintendent's report regarding a possible drug dog contract with the city, an alternative high school program and the school calendar for 1989-90.

The drug dog contract is a proposed agreement between the city of Pampa and PID for the purchase of a drug-sniffing dog that will serve both entities.

"They (the Pampa Police Department) would provide the staff and we would provide the purchase of the dog," Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of schools, said.

He estimated the cost at $4,000 for the dog plus $150 to $200 for annual veterinary bills, as compared to the $10,000 the district is now spending annually for contracting out drug dog visits from a detective agency.

"It would be a substantial savings," Griffith said. He pointed out the board would not be asked to vote on the idea until the May meeting and that the report would only serve to make them aware of the possibilities such a contract would provide.

Currently the city must call in a drug dog team from other parts of the Panhandle when it conducts a narcotics raid. The drug dog would be used for such raids as well as random checks of the high school and middle school for drugs in lockers, cars or public areas.

Griffith said the discussion regarding alternative high school programs will revolve around a federal grant application the district has made for an educational program geared to drop-outs, those with behavior problems and teenage pregnancies.

The courses would be highly individualized and have a strong emphasis toward vocational education, Griffith said.

The trustees will also hear a report on the district's asbestos management plan and will consider bids for a new tractor.

Cities feuding over school signs

RICHARDSON (AP) — The mayor of this Dallas suburb has ordered city officials to replace school zone speed limit signs and uncover warning lights they concealed last week because of a feud with nearby Buckingham.

"I think the system broke down," Richardson Mayor Charles Spann said Saturday. "It's a black eye. It should never have happened."

Richardson officials, unbeknownst to Spann, removed the school zone signs and covered two warning lights late Wednesday after letting the city's emergency service contract with Buckingham expire amid a dispute between the cities.

"I think it was the right decision," Shirley Leichenring, Buckingham's town secretary, said of the about-face. "It was a wrong decision to do it (remove the signs) in the first place."

Spann said he opposed removing the signs, adding that the action was taken without his knowledge. Spann said he called City Manager Bob Hughey and insisted that the signs be replaced.

Spann said some city officials thought Richardson might be held liable in case of an accident while the signs were posted because motorists would think Richardson police were still enforcing the speed limit.

Youth advocacy groups criticize new law applied to teens

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press Writer

PAMPA (AP) — Two boys aged 13 and 14 have spent more than two months inside an Amarillo juvenile detention center, going to classes and participating in recreation activities along with other youths at the center.

But unlike most juveniles, who may be detained for theft or other non-violent offenses, the two junior high students are there because on Feb. 8, after telling classmates they were going to kill their parents, the two fatally shot the adoptive father of one of the boys, authorities said.

But the pair — never indicted or charged in connection with the death — will not stand trial, nor will their guilt or innocence be determined by a judge or jury. They will, however, go through an adjudication procedure which has drawn praise from prosecutors and opposition from youth advocacy groups.

The procedure serves to set specific sentences, at the Texas Youth Commission and Texas Department of Corrections, for adjudicated juveniles, introducing elements of the adult criminal justice system into an adjudication procedure, the traditional emphasis of which has been rehabilitation rather than incarceration.

The two Panhandle teen-agers, whose names have not been released because they are juveniles, were to go before a Gray County jury here on Monday which will decide their fate under the Determinate Sentence Act, passed in 1987 to address the issue of how to cope with juveniles who commit serious crimes.

The circumstances of the case that so far have not been made public will be presented in separate public hearings for each teen-ager.

According to authorities, officials at White Deer Junior High School phoned the father of one of the boys and told him they had word his 13-year-old adopted stepson had threatened to kill him. After going to the school to talk with administrators, the stepfather returned to his home in the nearby community of Kingsmill, where authorities said his stepson and a friend were waiting.

Gray County Sheriff Jimmy Free discovered the body of the man, shot several times at point-blank range with a .22-caliber pistol, later that day.

Amarillo police later took the teen-agers into custody after apprehending them at a K mart parking lot with a car belonging to the dead man's wife and mother of the 13-year-old.

The crime, which authorities say was planned in advance, stunned the communities of White Deer and of Kingsmill, made up of only a handful of houses and a grain elevator, and prompted Gray County District Attorney Harold Comer to pull out his law books to study the new juvenile justice statute.

"This is totally new to us," he said.

Prior to September 1987, juveniles under 15 years old who committed serious crimes were sent to the Texas Youth Commission and released when they reached 21, often even earlier, say juvenile justice experts.

"The law as it existed was just inadequate to meet the needs of the public," said Comer, who is prosecuting the youths.

But youth advocacy groups such as the Texas Coalition on Juvenile Justice say determinate sentencing may put youths into the Texas Department of Corrections that could be rehabilitated by less costly means.

"We all know the adult criminal justice system doesn't work, so why put a kid for 30 years in a system that doesn't work?," said Cynthia McKenzie, spokeswoman for the coalition. "We're concerned about the weakening of the philosophy of rehabilitation. Those kids are going to be lost in a penal system and denied the opportunity for good assessment and rehabilitation."

Under the current law, prosecutors can decide to use the determinate sentence procedure in cases where juveniles have allegedly committed capital murder, attempted capital murder, murder, aggravated sexual assault and deadly assault on a police officer.

The prosecutor must refer a petition alleging misconduct to a grand jury, which doesn't issue an indictment but approves the petition and certifies it to the juvenile court, paving the way for an adjudication hearing where evidence is presented by prosecution and defense.

When the jury deliberates, it decides not whether the juveniles have committed any offense, but whether to commit the youth to the Texas Youth Commission and later the Texas Department of Corrections or give him or her a maximum one year's probation.

In the first 16 months after the legislation's enactment, Texas prosecutors referred 53 cases to grand juries under the Determinate Sentence Act, and sentences were handed down in 27 of those cases, according to a study done by University of Texas law professor Bob Dawson. Only 12 of the cases dealt with capital murder or murder.

Across the state, Dallas County has utilized the procedure the most, Dawson said, seeking determinate sentences in 33 of the 53 cases. However, only nine of the cases resulted in determinate sentencing of December 1988, according to Dawson's survey.

"We have been among the most aggressive in our use of the law," said Janic Warder, chief of the Dallas County district attorney office's juvenile division, adding that she believes the law is underused. "It allows us the extra option of asking the court to give the juvenile a determinate number of years."

While the number of determinate sentence cases through the end of last year indicates that the proce-edure has not fully gained acceptance with prosecutors, sponsors of the 1987 legislation have introduced a new bill to toughen the law further.

Sen. Frank Tejada, D-San Antonio, has filed legislation that would make all felonies allegedly committed by juveniles subject to determinate sentencing and allow judges to mandate specific rehabilitation guidelines for the TYC to implement.

The Texas Coalition on Juvenile Justice thinks the law's effects to date should be studied before any changes are made.

"We have not seen any research that shows long sentences deter juvenile crime or rehabilitate young offenders," said McKenzie. "I'd like to see a study on what kind of crimes these juveniles have committed, what their backgrounds are and what kind of rehabilitation programs they are undergoing," she said.

The TYC also has expressed caution about Tejada's bill, saying including all felonies could overcrowd their facilities and place a heavy burden on their rehabilitative programs.

"There is a large fiscal implication," said TYC spokesman Gary Fuchs. "And if you had all judges dictate that all youths (with determinate sentences) must have certain programs, that could take resources away from other youths."

While only a handful of juveniles given determinate sentences have actually been transferred to the TDC to date and the effects of determinate sentencing on juveniles hasn't been assessed, anticrime forces will continue to press for harsher treatment for juvenile offenders and expand the list of offenses for which determinate sentences can be given.

"Some of the most dangerous juveniles we deal with are going around robbing fast food stores," said Warder. "We shouldn't have to wait until they kill somebody."

Search still on for winery worker in rampage of murder

By JENNIFER McNULTY
Associated Press Writer

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — A winery worker sought in the killings of his wife, two daughters and four other people was an angry, jealous man who spied on his wife and had threatened "to blow her head off," a friend said.

Ramon Salcido, 28, was so possessive of his wife that he drove home from work several times a day to check on her, said Richard Clark, Salcido's next-door neighbor in Boyes Hot Springs and friend.

Authorities on Sunday concentrated their search for Salcido north of San Francisco and alerted the U.S. Border Patrol, fearing he could head for his native Mexico.

"The cost of this is substantial, but we'll pay anything to get this man into custody," said Sonoma County Sheriff Richard Michaelsen. "His acts are those of a totally insane person."

On Sunday, the owners of the Grand Cru Winery where Salcido worked as a forklift operator offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to his capture.

"These atrocities have caused fear and terror to invade an area known for its beauty and hospitality," Walter and Bettina Dreyer said in a statement.

On Friday, officers discovered the bodies of Salcido's 24-year-old wife, Angela, at their home; his mother-in-law and her two young daughters at their home in Cotati; and a winery co-worker. The girls had been raped and sodomized, and one was nearly decapitated, authorities said.

The next day, the bodies of two of Salcido's daughters were found at a dump with their throats slashed. The throat of his 3-year-old daughter, Carmina, also was cut but she survived and told police her father had done the slashings.

On Tuesday, only three days before her death, his wife learned he had been married before and had another child born only a short time before their own oldest daughter, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

After learning of her husband's other life, Mrs. Salcido said she wanted to leave him, the newspaper said.

"Now I can get an annulment," next-door neighbor Steve Nielsen quoted Mrs. Salcido as saying.

Salcido also was a regular seller and user of cocaine and possibly amphetamines, the Times reported, quoting several of his acquaintances it did not identify by name.

On Thursday night, Salcido stayed out drinking until 2 a.m., then snorted cocaine with a friend, the newspaper said.

Sheriff's investigators said detectives had no information that Salcido sold drugs.

Clark described Salcido as being extremely jealous. "Anybody who was higher up than him or if he had a nicer car than he did — he didn't like that. He wanted to be No. 1," Clark said.

He also said the Salcidos had recently begun arguing loudly.

"I could hear them yelling. ... I guess I knew (the killings) were coming. I heard him say, 'I'm going to blow your head off,'" Clark said.

Salcido also was upset recently because he was served papers ordering him to pay nearly $6,000 in overdue child support and to make monthly payments of $511 for a 4-year-old daughter in Fresno, Clark said.

Despite reports of Salcido's having problems at work, his boss, Dreyer, remembered him as "very cooperative" and "quick to please."

Money and gifts poured into a hospital where Carmina was recovering from surgery.

"I've been told she'll make a full recovery. It was reported to me her vocal cords were not cut," Michaelsen said.

Dallas policeman killed in domestic dispute

DUNCANVILLE (AP) — The fatal shooting of Dallas police Sgt. Larry Wise by a suburban police officer shocked neighbors and Wise's supervisor, who thought the domestic problems that appeared to have led up to the officer's death were over.

Wise, 39, was killed early Sunday morning as he tried to enter his home in this Dallas suburb while brandishing a gun. He and his wife, Cindy, had argued Saturday night at a country and western nightclub where they were celebrating her birthday.

Cindy's sister, Brenda Smith, stopped by the Duncanville police station early Sunday and asked for officers to accompany her to the Wise home, where the couple's 13-year-old son, Larry Jr., and a friend were staying. Ms. Smith told police she feared for the teen-ager's safety, said Duncanville police spokesman Dan Robertson.

Duncanville Sgt. Glenn Repp III and officer Stacy Holden arrived at the Wise home just before he died about 3:15 a.m., Robertson said. Wise spotted the officers and pointed his gun at them, but then lowered it and moved toward the front door of the house, the spokesman said.

The officers, who had sought cover behind their car when Wise raised his gun, began to approach him. Standing about 20 feet apart, Repp and Wise fired their weapons, but Robertson said police weren't sure who fired first.

However, Dallas police spokesman Hollis Edwards said he was informed by Duncanville police that Wise fired the first shot, and that Repp had returned fire in self-defense.

Wise died at Charlton Methodist Hospital about 50 minutes later, Robertson said. The Duncanville officers were not injured.

"When I got the call at 4:30 this morning, it was just disbelief," Seguin said.

Wise joined the Dallas Police in 1969 and became a sergeant in 1980, Seguin said. He led a sector of 10 patrol officers as well as a special car-theft task force created last year.

"They lost a very good supervisor," Seguin said.

The Wises had separated for a time, but reconciled, Seguin and friends of the family said.

"Cynthia told me a week ago everything was fine," said Steve Smith, a Duncanville resident who went to high school with the couple.

"The marriage seemed very solid" after the reconciliation, Seguin said. He said he noted the couple was very close when two of the officers Wise supervised were killed during a high-speed chase of a car theft suspect in January.

"I saw her (Mrs. Wise) as a great source of strength for Larry during that time," Seguin said.

The couple have three children, including Larry Jr., Carrie, 18, and Lacy, 5.

Wise's father and grandfather recently died, and his grandmother is recovering in a hospital from a stroke, said family friend Smith. Saying that such a series of events would be hard on anyone, Seguin said Wise had scheduled some extra days off recently.

Wise's body was taken to the Dallas County medical examiner's office for an autopsy, Robertson said. Dallas police internal affairs officers will join the Duncanville department's investigation of the shooting.

Repp and Wise knew each other on a "professional basis," Robertson said, adding Repp repeatedly ordered Wise to "Drop it Larry."

Ah, wonderful spring — ahchoo!

I have always heard that spring is a time when love is in the air. I don't know about love, but hayfever is running rampant.

The signs of the season are everywhere: Kleenex, Sinutabs, phlegm, runny noses.

When I was young I used to think of spring as a time when I would fall in love and live happily ever after. I now think of it as a time when I fall in bed and breathe steam from the vaporizer while praying I don't choke to death on my own body fluids.

Another problem with spring is Daylight Savings Time. For children (definition: anyone still young enough to not be wiped out by Daylight Savings Time) the extra hour or two of light means more time to ride the skateboard down busy streets or beat up the neighbor kids.

But for us old folks (definition: anyone who takes four months to recover from a one-hour jump ahead each spring) it only means more time to pull weeds or change the spark plugs in the Ford. What fun.

When I was younger, I loved spring and the extra opportunities provided by more daylight. Now I am old and weak and like for it to be dark when I go to bed at 9:30.

There is one good thing about spring — baseball. The beginning of major league baseball each April is reason enough to endure months of hayfever and dodging skateboarders at 9 p.m. on my way to the store for more Kleenex.

Baseball is the ultimate combination of skill, talent and strategy. It is the finest single sporting event in the world, bar none. Of course, while the Texas Rangers are on their way to what could be their first American League pennant, where am I?

I'm 10 hours from Arlington Stadium in a city with more per capita dust to aggravate bad sinuses than any city in Texas.

Spring is traditionally the time for cleaning, which is another thing sure to spawn an allergic reaction in most people.

Everytime I get hunkered down on the couch to watch baseball on cable, my wife lets out the traditional cry of spring.

"Hoooooney, are you buuuuusy?"
"Yes, dear."
"How long will you be?"
"They're only in the second inning."
"I thought you said you were busy."
"I am. I'm watching TV."

Off Beat

By Bear Mills

This, of course, is not "busy" to a woman. Busy is scrubbing toilet bowls, washing windows and beating rugs against the side of the house.

"Dear, could you possibly tear yourself away from that terribly interesting bit of cultural viewing and your beer, which I'm sure has less calories and tastes much better than a glass of iced tea, and help me for a minute?"

At this point, it is best to go quietly. Arguing will only prolong the time away from the ballgame and the brewski. However, be aware that you have been lied to. In my case, my wife said she needed me for "a minute."

"What do you need, hon?" I asked, attempting to appear good-natured.

"I've made a list. [uh-oh] All I need for you to do is vacuum the house, take out the kitty litter, take out the trash, dust upstairs, Endust the wood in the kitchen and dining room, air the rugs, clean the mirrors and windows upstairs and down, change the light bulbs in the big bathroom-and back and front porch, change the filter on the air conditioner and give the cat a bath."

"Is that all? Nothing else? Are you sure?" I asked. "Golly, that shouldn't take more than a minute. I probably won't miss more than a batter or two."

This kind of sarcasm is a mistake. "Well, Mr. Beer And Baseball, while you've been improving your mind I have been ..." And off she went on the list of chores she had done and those left unfinished.

This little tirade, which I admit was my own fault, lasted for an inning and a half. It only stopped when I was hit by the latest round of Allergy Wars, which sent her ducking for cover as I sneezed.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Can the Soviets live not by lies?

"Live Not by Lies!" is the apt title of a short essay by Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn published in the February issue of Twentieth Century and Peace, a Soviet journal. The essay, only 1,000 words long, packs the main message of his philosophy of freedom, and it is the first work by Solzhenitsyn, who now lives in exile in Vermont, officially published in the Soviet Union in 20 years.

The journal has a small circulation of 100,000 copies at home, with another 50,000 circulated abroad. But its publication of the Solzhenitsyn essay is the first major sign that glasnost, Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of openness, may have something to it. Historically, government organs, when they are not printing turgid, party prose, publish comparatively minor works, heavily censored.

In contrast, "Live Not by Lies!" shoots like an artillery shell through the bunker of Soviet lies and propaganda. Solzhenitsyn writes that an honest man "does not raise his hand to vote for a proposal that he does not sincerely sympathize with, does not vote either openly or in secret for a person he believes is unworthy or doubtful." This is the key to Solzhenitsyn's belief in personal, not collective, action and responsibility. Each person must stand up for the truth even if it means suffering torture or death. If enough people stand up the system of oppression will crumble.

Why has Gorbachev allowed this to be published? Well, in the early 1960s, the last major Soviet reformer, Nikita Krushchev, used Solzhenitsyn's great novel, One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich, to discredit the Stalinist past. Gorbachev may be using this 1974 Solzhenitsyn essay to criticize Leonid Brezhnev, whose reign Gorbachev himself has attacked as an "era of stagnation."

In the essay, Solzhenitsyn writes of Soviet reality: "The unnecessary boasting about outer space when at home there is desolation and poverty; the propping up of distant, savage regimes; the kindling of civil wars. ... They put on trial anyone they choose, and normal people are locked away in lunatic asylums."

He laments that the Soviet people can't even revolt, because the system of oppression is itself the result of a revolution gone berserk: "Now that all the axes have done their work and all that was sown has sprouted, we can see how misled and intoxicated were those young and headstrong people who thought they could make the country a happy and just one through terror, bloody rebellion and civil war. No thanks, fathers of enlightenment! Now we know for sure that vile methods spawn vile results."

Strong stuff. The question now is: What next? All past Soviet blooms of reform have been ground into the dirt. Indeed, last year Novy Mir, the country's major literary journal, was preparing to publish parts of The Gulag Archipelago, Solzhenitsyn's magnum opus on communist terror, which traces the ideology's poison back beyond Stalin to Lenin and Marx. But Badim A. Medvedev, the Kremlin's top ideologist, silenced it. So the struggle continues. In the end, the Soviet people themselves will decide whether they heed the words of their prophet and live not by lies.

Can justice prevail for North?

James J.
Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Outside Courtroom No. 6, the straggling line of hopeful spectators were forming last week. It was time for the cross-examination of Oliver North, and reporters expected to see blood on the courtroom floor. The trial is winding down.

Most criminal trials have moments of high drama. This trial has seen very few, and for a good reason: Except in a narrow legalistic sense, this is not a criminal trial. It is a political trial, in which the true defendants are Ronald Reagan, George Bush and William Casey. None of them is in the dock. Casey, the former CIA director, is dead; Reagan is in California; Bush is in the White House.

The decor in this antiseptic courtroom is what used to be called "moderne." Even the clock is moderne. The dock, so to speak, is occupied solely by the slight and weary figure of a retired officer in the Marine Corps. North stands accused of lying to Congress, destroying government documents, obstructing the course of justice and accepting illicit favors. These are the formal charges, spelled out in a bristling indictment.

The underlying charge is something else entirely. Stripped of citations of the criminal code, the charge is that North obeyed orders. From the beginning to the end of the Iran-Contra affair, he sought earnestly, ingeniously, constantly to serve his commander in chief. If this be a crime, he is most certainly guilty as charged.

North took the stand in his own defense a little after 1:30 p.m. Thursday a week ago. He returned for more hours of direct examination on Friday and then again at the beginning of last week.

It is curious how different observers may see the same things. A correspondent for The New York Times characterized North as "defiant" and "cocksure." I was there. I saw no traces of defiance or arrogance.

I saw an honest man who was telling the truth about his unhappy role in a melancholy drama. All that Oliver North wanted in 1983 was to command a Marine battalion. Instead he wound up, obedient to orders, in the shadowy mazes of the National Security Council (NSC).

There North fell into a battle between a stubborn president and an indecisive Congress. Reagan was absolutely determined to help the anti-communist freedom fighters of Nicaragua. Congress shilly-shallied, now supporting, now opposing. During the critical period that began in October 1984, Congress was cold and Reagan was hot. North's orders, sometimes explicit, sometimes implicit, were to aid the Contras.

The assignment was top secret. Reagan meant to get funds for the Contras wherever he could find them — from foreign governments or from private sources, or as it turned out, from diversion of profits from the sale of arms to Iran. In conducting the covert operation, the NSC may not have violated the letter of the law — that issue is in sharp dispute — but it plainly was violating the spirit of the law.

North knew this. It was painful to listen to his acknowledgement that, yes, he had lied to Congress; he had prepared deliberately misleading letters; in a desperate effort to preserve the essential secrecy of the operation, and to protect the lives of intelligence sources, he had destroyed documents.

At this point in his testimony, North's even and unemotional voice faltered. He sensed that what he was doing was wrong. He did not think it criminal.

The government reportedly has spent $2 million bringing this faithful officer to trial. One has to wonder why. What possible benefit to society could be achieved by sending Oliver North to prison? The pat answer, the smug and self-satisfied answer, is that "no man is above the law."

But the law of this case is an elusive kind of law. The prosecution sees a criminal conspiracy; the defense sees a covert operation ordered by the president of the United States. "I was a pawn in a chess game played by giants," said North. The metaphor is right on target.

It is hard to sense what a jury thinks of all this. Throughout North's testimony the 14 jurors seemed attentive, but from the beginning of the trial much of the evidence must have gone over their heads. Nicaragua is a long way away, and the events were a long time ago. What are the jurors to make of the sultan of Brunei? What do we know of Honduras?

Another few days should bring a verdict. I look closely at Oliver North in this bleached blond courtroom, and I see no criminal there. I would vote instantly to acquit. If justice is to prevail, the jury will vote the same way.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, April 17, the 107th day of 1989. There are 258 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 17, 1961, about 1,500 CIA-trained Cuban exiles launched the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in an attempt to overthrow the government of Fidel Castro. The invasion failed, and the survivors were captured.

On this date:
In 1492, a contract was signed between Christopher Columbus and Spain to seek a westward ocean passage to Asia.

In 1521, Martin Luther went before the Diet of Worms (wohrms) to face charges stemming from his religious writings.

In 1524, Giovanni da Verrazano discovered present-day New York harbor.

In 1790, Benjamin Franklin died in Philadelphia at the age of 84.

In 1861, the Virginia State Convention voted to secede from the Union.

In 1941, Yugoslavia surrendered to Germany in World War II.

In 1964, Ford Motor Company unveiled the "Mustang."

In 1969, Sirhan Sirhan was convicted of assassinating Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

'Orchestra in a box' revived

As the father of a musician, on the near-periphery of that most beautiful world, I have envied its inhabitants and cherished its traditions.

It is sad that concert pianists, even the best of them, cannot make a living at it anymore. The few remaining performers have to support themselves otherwise, usually by being on faculty somewhere.

Part of the problem is the impracticality of providing, moving and maintaining the sensitive instruments.

With my son and his colleagues I have enjoyed some long afternoons listening to them test and compare what's left of the "great pianos."

Once-honored piano makers' names are less honored anymore. Grand pianos are less grand. Electronic substitutes are tantalizingly close to reproducing the long-string sound on a portable instrument.

Now I learn that two young men in Seattle believe they have duplicated the quick action, flexible facility and sonorous keyboard of a grand piano — housed in the body of a 1909 model Steinway upright!

At the recent California State Piano Technicians' Guild Convention, hundreds of pianists, technicians and exhibitors listened with awe as the big sound came from that little instrument. The young men are Darrel Fandrich and Chris Trivelas.

Paul Harvey

Fandrich, a pianist obsessed with the instrument, a trained piano tuner with a college engineering degree, was never satisfied with the wimpy sound of an upright, where dynamic range is severely cramped.

Even more distressing to the serious pianist is the limitation of the action in achieving rapid repeated notes.

Fandrich and his pianist friend, Trivelas, went into semi-seclusion for weeks to redesign the piano action of an upright in an effort to overcome the shortcomings of that instrument.

The vital sound-producing part of the new Fandrich action uses a piece of wire that looks something like a safety pin, thus to return the hammer and other parts of the action into place immediately. Counterbalancing weights are designed to give their new piano's keys the characteristic heft and responsive quality of the grands.

Steve Brady, a piano technician at the University of Washington, maintains the Bosendorfers and the Steinways. He says Fandrich has accomplished "the single most important achievement in vertical piano design in this century."

Pianist Walter Wagner calls the new piano "better than most concert grands."

It may not be too much to hope that these young men have opened the door at least to a renaissance of interest in the "orchestra in a box" which once occupied an honored place in the living room of most any family with children.

But what makes William Buckley run?

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

If you know anybody who owns and edits a fortnightly magazine, writes three syndicated newspaper columns a week, tapes a weekly television program, lectures for pay about 30 times annually, and writes an average of two books a year, it's a safe bet that he is one of your busiest friends.

If he nevertheless finds time to spend a couple of months every year skiing in Switzerland (while hobnobbing in Gstaad with the exiled royalty there), and generally manages to squeeze some transoceanic cruise on a private sailing vessel into his summer, he can only be William F. Buckley.

In Buckley's case, though, we have thus far touched only on what must be called his routine activities — his drab annual round, as it were. What does he do for excitement?

Well, in September 1987 he went two miles down into the North Atlantic in a French exploratory vessel, to prowl the wreck of the Titanic. Last month he flew a plane load of friends from New York to Louisville to watch the out-of-town tryout of his first play, based on his popular novel "Stained Glass."

And at the moment he is circumnavigating the globe in a supersonic Concorde, accompanied by 75 people who paid $40,000 apiece to go with him. He will tape television programs and give lectures en route, and the whole trip will take just over three weeks. About a dozen point-to-point world speed records will be broken in the process.

I know, I know. You want to know what Buckley does with his afternoons.

I was Bill Buckley's closest business associate for 31 years until I stepped down as publisher of National Review last December, and you might suppose that by now I would be accustomed, even inured, to his pace. On the contrary, after three decades it still flabbergasts me.

It certainly puts an end to the laughable theory that all men are created equal, in any but some purely juridical sense. Buckley is, of course, a workaholic — he wouldn't know how to slow down if he wanted to — but that isn't the whole story. I know plenty of workaholics, and Buckley runs Gothic figure-8s around all of them. He simply has far more energy than all but the most exceptional people.

Of course, this astonishing man has his flaws (I even know one or two things he isn't terribly good at), and he has also encountered a certain amount of criticism. There are those who ask what all this frenetic activity actually adds up to.

Well, for one thing it brings in a whole lot of money — and that is important, for Bill is a man of expensive tastes. (Like Churchill, he is easily satisfied with the best of everything.) Far more important, however, is the fact that most of Buckley's ave-some energies have, for 40 years, been at the service of the kind of intelligent conservatism that has only recently come to dominate world politics. Indeed, it can be argued — conclusively, I think — that Buckley's battle for his beliefs had a lot to do with their ultimate triumph.

Across 30 years, the memories come flooding back. Some are of Buckley with various major but less well-known pleasures of his life: his harpsichord, his dogs. Some are of Bill engaged in activities that interested him only transiently: on his motorcycle, at his easel, running for mayor of New York. But — always — brimming with wit and laughter.

He is one of the great originals of our time. No doubt, as Emerson observed, "It is as easy for the strong man to be strong as it is for the weak to be weak." But that is no reason why we shouldn't rejoice in excellence when we encounter it.

Tralee Crisis Center sponsors Awareness Week

Tralee Crisis Center in conjunction with the Texas Department of Health, Sexual Assault Prevention and Crisis Services Program and Texas Association Against Sexual Assault are co-sponsoring the Sixth Annual Sexual Assault Awareness Week April 16-22.

Tralee Crisis Center, under the direction of Dauna Wilkinson, assists women and children who are victims of domestic violence and/or sexual assault. The center has a 24-hour hotline for emergency calls from victims, a shelter for abused spouses and children, victim advocacy in the legal system, accompaniment of victims to the courtroom, and other supportive services.

Linda Stevenson is the coordinator of the Victim Advocacy and Outreach programs at Tralee. In addition to moral support at the hospital and in court, Stevenson and other volunteers provide counseling for rape victims.

During this week efforts will be intensified to promote public awareness of the problems of sexual assault; to emphasize the need for citizen involvement in efforts to reduce sexual assault through public education and changing public attitudes, rather than reliance on punishment of offenders; to publicize services available to victims through the Tralee Crisis Center; and to increase community support.

The theme "Anytime, Anyplace, Anyone - Shattering Myths About Sexual Assault" highlights a fact that advocates for sexual assault survivors have noticed for a long time - that sexual violence is surrounded by myths and misconceptions. There are myths about the motivation of the rapist, the appearance of the survivor and the likelihood that an acquaintance can be raped. In reality, rape is a crime of aggression and violence played out in a sexual context. The survivor does not contribute to the assault by what he or she wears. More sexual assaults happen between acquaintances than strangers.

Tralee Crisis Center serves a five county area of the Texas Panhandle and has an outreach office in Borger.

The Crisis Center Hotline for local calls is 669-1788. For out-of-town calls the center has a toll-free number 1-800-828-2891. For more information regarding the center and its activities the office number is 669-1131.

Doctor says herpes sufferers should be safe and not sorry

DEAR ABBY: I commend you for addressing the topic of genital herpes in your column. However, you recently provided some advice that is incorrect and potentially dangerous. You stated that "if there are no symptoms, sores or active lesions, your partner is not infectious." This is clearly NOT true, and heeding this advice could result in couples disregarding precautions necessary to avoid transmission of genital herpes to the uninfected partner.

While asymptomatic intervals carry a decreased risk of transmission, infected persons are still capable of transmitting the virus. In fact, more than half of the infected sex partners discussed in one journal article denied having symptoms they recognized as herpes at the time they transmitted infection.

When symptoms or sores are present, sexual contact with the involved area should be avoided completely. Because of the risk of asymptomatic transmission, condoms should be used with each sexual act. Bluntly put: There is always SOME risk, although condoms will serve to decrease this risk.

WILLARD CATES JR., M.D., M.P.H., DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED DISEASES, CENTERS FOR DISEASE CONTROL

DEAR DR. CATES: Thank you for your timely and enlightening article. The professional medical experts who advised me on this issue obviously had a different opinion. I'm sure I'll hear from other experts on this topic. Readers: Stay tuned.

DEAR ABBY: This is a message from the land of the Ocklewaha band of Seminole Indians.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

On behalf of the principal chief, Little Dove Ghigar Buford, her husband, Principal Sub-Chief Running Buck Buford, her daughter, Princess Flaming Star, and her son-in-law, Soaring Eagle DeLong, the parents of Singing Spirit DeLong and the rest of our tribe, we wish to thank you for putting in your column the name of the wonderful organization that makes possible corrective surgery for children with birth defects.

Because you let us know about the National Craniofacial Foundation, little Singing Spirit is now on her way to Dallas with her mother, to begin her series of many operations.

"Wan Dan" (thank you), Abby. May "Yowa" (God) walk with you in your moccasins down the trail of life.

CHIEF THREE BUFFALO WILLSON, COX-OSCEOLA INDIAN RESERVATION, ORANGE SPRINGS, FLA.

DEAR CHIEF: Wan Dan (thank you) for letting me know that little Singing Spirit will soon reap the benefits of this fine organization. May Yowa (God) bless her. I wish her well.

Readers: The National Craniofacial Foundation is a non-profit organization that exists to provide corrective surgery for those who were born with birth defects. For information, write to it at: 3100 Carlisle, Suite 215, Dallas, Texas 75204, and enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Or telephone the toll-free number: (800) 535-3643.

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old daughter, "Sara," was assigned to read your booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," for her phys-ed course on hygiene and homemaking. I thought you'd get a kick out of what happened when Sara overheard her older sister telling her father and me that she was going to announce her engagement soon.

Sara rushed to her room and grabbed your booklet to advise us of our "responsibilities." Then she proceeded to read aloud: "The groom's parents provide the bachelor party, pay the minister, etc. The bride's parents provide the torso."

Panhandle Piecemakers Quilters Guild

Panhandle Piecemakers Quilters Guild met on March 23, 7 p.m. at the Hobby Shop. Vice-president Susie Edwards presiding

A progress report was given on the donation quilt being made by the Guild. Plans were made for basting the quilt and quilt days were set for April 14 at the home of Martha Hadley and April 20 at the home of Carol Vines. Nine patch friendship blocks made for Alma Goodner were collected. Trudy Davis of Howardwick passed out a Dresden Plate pattern for her blocks.

Debbie Davis of the Creative Quilt Shop, Amarillo, gave a program on hand piecing with stripe fabrics.

There were 14 members present, 4 visitors, and one new member Elaine Rogers of Wheeler, welcomed to the Guild.

Show and tell items included a Dresden Plate quilt pieced by Madelyn Jones' mother-in-law in 1930 and quilted by Jones in 1980. Donna Reynolds showed an appliqued "Four Seasons" wall hanging she had recently completed.

Hostesses for the meeting were Edwards and Betty Baxter.

The next meeting is April 27 at 7:00 p.m. in the Hobby Shop.

Progressive Homemakers Extension Club

Progressive Homemakers Extension Club met on April 12 with 10 members present for a regular meeting.

Helene Hogan was the hostess and Pauline Dorman a guest. Barbara Shaw read the coming events. Fay Harvey reported on the district meeting held in Dumas April 11. The by-laws were read and accepted.

Hogan presented a program on baking chocolate sponge rolls.

Shaw was elected the state voting delegate to Corpus Christi. Harvey was elected nominee for the TEHA committee.

The door prizes was won by Geneva Dalton, Betty Baxter and Fay Harvey.

The next meeting will be May 31 and Marilyn Butler will entertain.

Republican Women's Fashion Show

Janie Steele models a spring dress at the Republican Women's Fashion Show last Saturday at the Pampa Country Club. About 100 men and women attended the show which raised money for the Republican Women's Club. Jane McDaniel acted as commentator. A painting by Kathleen Hipkins was given as a door prize. Former Congressman Beau Boulter and his wife Rosemary were also in attendance.

INA MAE JOHNSON
Avon cruise winner

Pampa resident wins cruise to Bahamas

Ina Mae Johnson of Pampa recently returned from a cruise to Nassau, Bahamas and two days at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

Johnson was one of 400 Avon sales representatives qualifying for the prize in a four-week sales competition last summer.

Themed "Avon's Wheel of Fortune," the five-day trip culminated in a chance to play a special, non-televized version of the game show "Wheel of Fortune," with appearances by Vanna White and Rolf Benirschke.

Johnson, winner of numerous awards for sales achievement, attributes her success to perseverance.

"You can't just sit back and wait for opportunity to strike," she said. "There are potential customers everywhere — homes, offices, factories, schools, hospitals. You have to take the initiative."

"We congratulate our outstanding sales representatives who've earned this trip," said Paul B. Markovits, president, U.S. Direct Selling Division, Avon Products Inc. "They personify what can be accomplished by identifying a goal and working hard to achieve it. As independent businesswomen, they know they can write their own ticket to success."

"Unquestionably, running your own business is a lot of responsibility," Johnson said. "But if you're organized and willing to work hard, the opportunities to earn are virtually unlimited."

Teacher Job Fair scheduled at WT

One of the Southwest's largest teacher job fairs will be held on the campus of West Texas State University on Monday, April 24, from 2 p.m. in the Ballroom of the Henson Activities Center.

Eighty-six school districts from all over the southwest will be present to visit with prospective teachers for positions they anticipate having available in the Fall of 1989. It is open to anyone wishing to apply for a teaching position. They do not have to be graduates of West Texas State. Applicants need to bring as many copies of credentials or resumes as the number of schools they wish to visit. There is no fee or charges.

SHOOTING PAINS

If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excruciating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Work hard in the year ahead to achieve your purposes, but, by the same token, try to lead a balanced life. If you keep everything in proper perspective, it'll enhance your chances for success.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't let it be said of you today that you were only nice to people who could do something for you. If you want to keep your image and popularity intact, equality in all of your relationships is essential. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Commercial or financial involvements should work out rather well for you today, but you could experience complications in your social relationships.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you want to make some changes or adjustments today to suit your own needs, that's well and good, but it isn't advisable to switch things around for others without first getting their approval.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Base your judgments today upon information you gather first hand instead of what is told to you through an intermediary or a second source. Their versions could be distorted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you might receive some good news that will have a direct effect upon a decision you're about to make. It may cause you to make a major revision.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In career matters at this time, your greatest strides are likely to be made by using traditional methods. Gambling on unfamiliar tactics could set you back.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Something extremely fortunate may happen for you in this time frame and even though you'll want to talk about it to others, it's best you keep it to yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Negatively judging situations in advance today could work against your best interests. You're actually in a lucky cycle, so relax and think positive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A condition that has kept you boxed in recently is about to be alleviated. Someone with whom you're closely involved will play a role in its demise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A co-worker about whom you've been dubious may prove a true friend today through actions taken on your behalf to protect your interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Guard against tendencies today to do things in ways that will make what you hope to accomplish much more difficult than it actually is. Don't work against yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Success in your endeavors is likely to today, even the objectives you fail to achieve with first efforts. Use challenges to stimulate your initiative, not subdue it.

Rangers boost winning streak to eight games

(AP Laserphoto)

Detroit's Matt Nokes (right) doesn't get the ball in time to tag out Geno Petralli (behind Nokes), who was able to come home on Pete Incaviglia's single in the third inning. Meanwhile, Rick Leach (left) of the Rangers gets out of the way.

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT — Texas knuckleballer Charlie Hough, who's old enough to know, thinks Detroit manager Sparky Anderson might be living in the past.

The Rangers, with their weekend sweep of the Tigers, are riding baseball's best winning streak—eight games—while the Tigers' 2-7 record is baseball's worst.

Anderson has been playing down the Tigers' slump, saying the season doesn't really start until June.

"You're always saying things like that when you're losing," Hough said. "And you believe 'em, too."

"Our club is pretty good. I think we've proven that."

Hough, 2-0, pitched 5 1-3 innings, giving up five runs on five hits as the Rangers beat the Tigers 9-6 Sunday.

Detroit's Jack Morris, 0-3, lasted only 2 2-3 innings. He was hammered for eight hits and four runs and his ERA soared to 8.16. "I'm going to run Jack out there thirty some times. That's all you can do," Anderson said, dismissing any more questions about his pitching ace.

Pete Incaviglia homered and drove in three Texas runs and Rafael Palmeiro and Steve Buechele also homered for the Rangers who are out of the gate with a 10-1 record, the best start in the 17 years since the franchise left Wisconsin.

Last year, the Rangers were 8-13 over the first month of the season, and the most they've ever won in April was 13 games in 1974.

"On an individual basis, I don't know if this is a better club, but the ability to produce is better," Hough said. "We're getting clutch hits. When we get guys on base now, we're not hitting into double-plays."

"Our pitching has been good, too, but I like the way our offense has taken advantage of it."

The Tigers are getting neither hitting nor pitching. The team batting average is .215 and the ERA is 5.13. Detroit has produced only 15 extra-base hits.

The Rangers, by comparison, are hitting .272 with a 2.34 ERA and 32 extra-base hits. And they've just swept all six games on a two-city road trip.

The Rangers have scored 63 runs, the Tigers just 28.

"It wasn't exactly drawn up this way on the blueprint," Anderson said. "We've got to get a couple of games where we get some runs and get our pitchers off the hook. It'll come, I hope. Otherwise, it'll be a long summer."

The Rangers lead the American League West by 3 1/2 games.

"This can bring excitement," Incaviglia said. "This is important to us. I think it's important to Texas. We think it's our turn, and we have the horses to do it."

So, what happened to the Tigers?

"There's just no excitement here," Incaviglia said. "This used to be such a noisy place. A lot of their big guys are gone. Walt Terrell, Dan Petry, Kirk Gibson, Lance Parrish. None of those guys are around."

"Alan Trammell's going to hit .300, but you need some guys around him. I don't think they have a bad ball club. They could catch fire like we've done right now and win 10 or 12 games real quick."

Nothing was quick Sunday. The game took 4 hours, 7 minutes, the longest nine-inning game either club had ever played. Eight pitching changes added to the boredom.

Ruben Sierra singled home a run in the first and Buechele drove home one in the second to give Texas a 2-0 lead.

Palmeiro hit his second homer in the Texas third then Geno Petralli doubled and scored on a single by Incaviglia for a 4-0 lead, chasing Morris.

Morris has 156 wins in the 1980s, most of any current pitcher, but he struggled to a 15-13 record last year. He left without talking to reporters.

The Tigers got two in the third on a throwing error and passed ball by Petralli and one in the fourth on Dave Bergman's first homer.

Texas made it 6-3 in the fifth when Buechele hit a two-run homer, his second, off Charles Hudson. But the Tigers made it 6-5 in the sixth when Kenny Williams had a two-run homer, his first.

Incaviglia's two-run homer off Frank Williams in the Texas seventh made it 8-5 and Julio Franco singled home Palmeiro in the eighth to make it 9-5.

Matt Nokes led off the ninth with his third homer for Detroit. Al Pedrique doubled and Torey Lovullo walked before Jeff Russell came on for Guante and retired Keith Moreland and Kenny Williams, earning his fourth save.

SCOREBOARD

BASEBALL

WOLFFORTH — Pampa upped its record to 11-6 Saturday with an 11-5 District 1-4A baseball win over Frenship.

Pampa scored seven runs in the first inning and were leading 10-2 after three when coach Rod Porter started sending in reserves.

"It was the kind of game where we got the early lead and then just sit back on our heels," Porter said. We played pretty well defensively, making only three errors, but we were just a little flat."

Righthanded sophomore Quincy Williams started on the mound and went four innings to pick up his third win without a loss. He struck out two and walked two. James Bybee and Brandon Knutson finished up on the mound.

Billy Wortham led Pampa hitters with a double and single. Bybee's double was the only other extra base hit for the Harvesters, who won their sixth straight game.

The Harvesters, 7-3 in district, host Randall at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday afternoon at Harvester Field.

Wheeler Mustangs outdistance Booker to win seventh straight district championship

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

BOOKER — The Wheeler Mustangs outscored the Booker Kiowas, 159-147, to clinch their seventh consecutive district crown at Saturday's District 2-1A meet at Kiowa Stadium. The Mustangs posted 143 points to finish second in the team standings, 22 points behind Booker, the defending champion.

The Wheeler boys and girls each qualified seven athletes in nine different events for the upcoming Region 1-1A track meet, slated for April 28-29 at Levelland.

"After the running prelims, I didn't think we could win," Wheeler boys' coach Ronnie Karcher said. "We had some kids do better than I thought they would in the finals, and Booker didn't do as well as they could have. I knew it would come down to depth and who could pick up the fourth, fifth and sixth places."

In fact, if point totals were tallied only for the top three finishers in each event, the Kiowas would have won the meet, 126-122. But Wheeler made up the difference by outscoring Booker 37-21 in fourth through sixth places.

Booker qualified for regionals in 11 events, two more than Wheeler, although Karcher would not trade places with the Kiowas.

"I'd rather win the meet," he said. "Seven years in a row we've won it, and I think the kids have that in the back of their minds." Chad Bentley paced the Mustangs by earning regional berths in three events, including the 800, 1600 and 1600 relay. He clocked a 2:07.15 in the 800 to finish second behind Sid Brass of McLean, who won the event in 2:05.09.

"Sid ran a good race," McLean coach Jerry Miller said. "Bentley beat him at Miami the only other time they ran together."

Bentley also took the silver in the 1600 in a time of 4:49.72, two seconds behind Jason McGhee of Follett.

Bentley and relay partners Kelly Aderholt, Michael Kenney and Mack Marshall tied Booker for first place in the 1600 relay, finishing in 3:42.41. McLean clocked a 3:45.81 to take the bronze.

Aderholt, a Wheeler sophomore, picked up another gold in the 400 (53.98), while freshman teammate Ike Finsterwald was second in 54.92.

Wheeler's 400 relay team, consisting of Shane Guest, Aderholt, Finsterwald and Shawn Bradstreet, became the new district champion with a time of 4:56.38.

Kenney cleared 6-6, his best leap of the season, to win the high jump, while Guest hurled the shot 41-0 1/2, also his best all year, for second place. Bradstreet picked up yet another silver for the Mustangs with a 10-6 vault.

"The vault was the key event that won it for us," Karcher said. "We finished second, third (Kenney) and fifth (Aderholt) and picked up 15 points. I wasn't counting on that. Gruver didn't get a single point and they usually do."

Todd Stump of McLean won the vault with a personal best 11-0 and was a member of McLean's third-place sprint relay.

"Todd was vaulting pretty good, but he didn't attempt any higher than 11-0," coach Miller said. "He'd been at it two hours or so and decided to stop and get ready for the hurdles and the sprint relay."

In all, the McLean Tigers qualified four athletes for the regional meet and finished third in the team standings with 92 points.

Stump and Brass each picked up gold medals, while teammates Donald Harris and Tres Hess, both juniors, were silver-medalists.

Harris, in his first-ever 3200 race, clocked a 10:45.39 to pick up the silver medal. He ran a 4:46 in the 1600 at last year's regional meet, although he was hindered by a head cold Saturday and finished third in the 1600 with a time of 4:59.11, still his best time all year.

Hess will make his first appearance at regionals after finishing second in the 100 with a time of 11.67, a personal best.

Chad Caddell, one of two Kelton athletes who will travel to Levelland, soared 21-10 1/2 to win the long jump. Noel Johnson, a Kelton sophomore, won gold medals in three events, including the 1600, 3200 and high jump.

She held off Miami's Alane Dinsmore in both the distance events, finishing the 1600 in 6:23.29 and the 3200 in 13:56.86, while clearing 5-2 in the high jump.

Dinsmore was second in both the 1600 and 3200 with 6:35.29 and 14:04.67 clockings, respectively. She is Miami's lone regional representative.

The McLean Tigerettes qualified two athletes in the same event. Darla McAnear and Misty Coleman finished 1.2 in the 100 hurdles with times of 16.93 and 18.00.

McLean compiled 44 points to finish fourth overall, followed by Miami with 39 and Kelton with 34.

Tammy Helton paced the second-place Wheeler Mustangettes, qualifying for regionals in five events. She set a school record and won the gold medal with a 35-2 1/4 leap in the triple jump and sailed 16-9 1/2 to win the long jump as well. She jumped 17-0 1/2 to set a school record in that event last week at Booker.

Helton cleared 5-0 to take second behind Johnson in the high jump and anchored both of Wheeler's second-place 400 and 800 relays.

Lori Vanpool, Liz Stiles and Jennifer Walker each qualified in three events. Stiles and Walker were members of all three relays, while Vanpool took second in both the 400 and 200 and anchored Wheeler's winning 1600 relay (4:26.46).

Bobbie Kuehler (400 relay) and Kelly Chadwick (800 relay) each qualified in one event. Mitchie Loyd was second in the 800 (2:49.40) and provided the third leg of the 1600 relay.

"If we could have got a few more kids to come out for track, I think we could have won it," Wheeler girls coach Jan Newland said. "We were leading going into the running events, but we just don't have the numbers to beat Booker."

Groom set two school records last weekend at the District 1-1A meet at Sunray. Daniel Hinson, a senior, tossed the discus 155-10, which also won him the gold medal in that event and qualified him for the regional meet.

Karen Bohr, who earned a trip to Levelland in three events, set the school record in the 200 in Friday's prelims with a time of 26.44. She scratched from the finals after suffering a thigh injury in the 100, which she won in 12.69.

Bohr also won the long jump (16-1 1/2) and finished second in the triple jump (33-5).

Teammate Jenni English took the gold medal in the shot with a toss of 32-8.

Groom's 400 relay team, consisting of Kevin Kerlee, Jay Britten, Stoney Crump and Brice Ruthardt, clocked a 45.53 to garner the silver medal.

Ruthardt also finished second in the 400 (53.39) after leading the race for the first 200 meters. He was passed by Damon Tank of Vega, who won the event, on the final curve.

In all, Groom qualified seven athletes for regionals, five boys and two girls.

Carrie Watson of Lefors will compete in two events at Levelland after placing first in the discus (100-10) and second in the shot (30-10). She scored all 18 of the Lady Pirates' points in the meet.

McLean's Tres Hess, right, and Mack Marshall of Wheeler battle at the tape in a preliminary heat of the 100-meter dash. Hess clocked 11.67 in the finals to earn second place and a regional berth.

Stewart shoots 268 to win Heritage Classic

Bradley captures Centinela Classic

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP)—Payne Stewart, who skipped the Heritage Classic for four straight seasons before coming back this year, plans to be back next year.

After all, he'll be the defending champion.

"Oh yeah, I'll be back," he said. "It's a great thing about winning; you always want to come back and defend your title because you are the only defending champion that week."

Stewart, who either led or shared the lead through all four rounds, won the Heritage Classic with a 16-under-par 268, which broke the tournament record of 270 set by Tom Watson in 1979 and matched by Nick Faldo in 1984.

Stewart pocketed $144,000 for the victory on Sunday, his fourth in his PGA career that began in 1981. It was also his first victory since the 1987 Bay Hill Classic.

The 32-year-old Stewart maintained at least a 3-stroke lead throughout the final round at the Harbour Town Golf Links. But he never let up, and he virtually clinched the victory with a 25-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole. That gave him a 5-shot lead with three holes to play.

Kenny Perry, who had never finished higher than fourth in his three-year PGA career, was second at 273 after shooting a final-round, even-par 71 on the 6,657-yard course. Perry won $86,400. Fred Couples, with a 65 on Sunday, tied Bernhard Langer for third at 277. Langer, a former Heritage champion, had a final-round 71.

Three players tied for fifth at 278 — Lanny Wadkins, Craig Stadler and Kenny Knox. Knox did not really get close to winning but set an all-time PGA Tour putting record. He used only 93 putts on Harbour Town's tiny greens, eclipsing by one stroke the record for 72 holes, set by George Archer on this course in 1980.

Stewart, now eighth on the money-winning list with $306,710, shared the lead with Perry over the first two rounds, then pulled away to a 3-stroke advantage when third-round play was halted by darkness Saturday night after a 3½-hour rain delay.

CENTINELA CLASSIC
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Pat Bradley, one of the LPGA's most dominant players over the last decade, was beset by a health problem and a grave personal loss during the past couple of years, and by the self-doubt that goes with failure.

"It's ironic, but last year just after this tournament was when I was diagnosed (with hyperthyroidism, an imbalance in the thyroid gland)," Bradley said. "My fight to come back began."

Bradley, who hadn't won a tournament in two years, made it back to the top Sunday when she shot a closing 5-under-par 67 to win the $450,000 Ai Star-Centinela Hospital Classic by one stroke over Nancy Lopez and Hollis Stacy.

Bradley said she hit a professional low at this tournament last year. "I missed the cut," she recalled. "I sneaked out of here, didn't want anybody to see me."

"And here I am a year later on the top of the world again."

Bradley finished the 54-hole tournament at 8-under-par 208. Lopez, the defending champion, shot a final-round 69 and Stacy had a 68.

While Bradley was happy to win again, she also felt sadness because her father, who died last year, couldn't be on hand.

"This is the first time I've won and not been able to call and talk with him about it," she said. "I wish he could have shared in this. I'm glad my mother (Kathleen) was able to be here."

Payne Stewart, who sat out the Heritage Classic for four seasons, bettered the old course record by two strokes.

Mavericks totter on brink of elimination

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Dallas kept Houston out of the NBA playoffs a year ago, and it appears the Rockets have returned the favor.

Rallying from a 22-point deficit, Houston beat Dallas 114-112 in overtime Sunday and clinched a fifth consecutive winning season.

The loss put the Mavericks on the brink of elimination from the NBA playoffs for the first time since 1982-83. Any combination of a Portland victory or a Dallas loss would put the Trail Blazers into the eighth and final spot.

"The strange thing about this team is that when we are faced with extreme adversity we seem to respond. Still, it drives me nuts," said Houston coach Don Chaney.

"We can't get into the playoffs and expect to bury ourselves then get back into the game."

Otis Thorpe hit a basket with 1:36 to play for Houston's win, its fifth over Dallas in six games this season. Dallas' chance to send the game into a second overtime failed when Brad Davis' driving layup at the buzzer rimmed out.

Akeem Olajuwon, who had 34 points, hit a shot with 34 seconds left in regulation that tied the game 104-104, forcing overtime.

He said the Rockets never thought they would lose.

"Dallas was playing way on the mountain and we were rock bottom but we still knew we could come back if we played our game," Olajuwon said.

Dallas coach John MacLeod couldn't believe the Rockets' comeback.

"We played the heck out of them, but they still got the ball to Akeem and that was the difference," MacLeod said. "We couldn't stop him."

Dallas was led by Roy Tarpley, who scored 28 points, and Derek Harper, who added 27.

Tarpley had 14 rebounds and Olajuwon captured 19.

Harper hit four 3-point baskets and scored 21 points in the first half as Dallas took a 64-50 lead to the dressing room.

The Mavs scored the game's first 13 points, built the lead to as much as 22 points, and led by 42-26 at the end of the first quarter.

Major league baseball roundup

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Expos 5, Pirates 4
Sunday's 11-inning loss to Montreal has Pittsburgh flirting with last place in the National League East. Injuries have plagued the Pirates' lineup, which was missing center fielder Andy Van Slyke, first baseman Sid Bream and bullpen ace Jim Gott.

Now, add catcher Mike LaValiere, who suffered an injury to his left knee that will sideline him for at least three weeks.

Montreal's Nelson Santovenia singled home the tying run in the eighth inning off Pittsburgh's Bob Walk, then doubled in the 11th off Jeff Robinson and eventually scored the winning run on pinch hitter Hubie Brooks' sacrifice fly. Brooks was the only position player left on either team's bench.

Cubs 5, Phillies 3
Rick Sutcliffe won his third straight game and drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single as Chicago won its seventh straight.

Sutcliffe allowed six hits in 8 1-3 innings and Mitch Williams got his sixth save in as many opportunities.

Cardinals 5, Mets 3
Ozzie Smith had three singles and drove in two runs, Tom Brunansky homered and Jose DeLeon pitched a four-hitter. Two of the Mets' hits were solo homers by Darryl Strawberry.

The Cardinals fell behind 2-0 but scored in the third on Smith's RBI single, tied it in the fourth on Brunansky's homer and took a 3-2 lead against Bob Ojeda in the fifth on Terry Pendleton's RBI single.

Reds 5, Padres 0
Herm Winningham and Jeff Reed hit consecutive homers in a five-run first inning and Rick Mahler pitched his first shutout in more than two years for his first victory with Cincinnati.

Mahler retired 13 straight batters in one stretch.

Dodgers 2, Astros 1
Tim Lery pitched a five-hitter and Mike Marshall extended his hitting streak to nine games with his third home run in four days.

Lery took a two-hit shutout into the ninth but yielded a run on singles by Ken Caminiti, Rafael Ramirez and Billy Hatcher.

Braves 7-1, Giants 2-6
In the first game, Atlanta's Gerald Perry drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a single and Tommy Gregg added three RBI with a single and sacrifice fly.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Blue Jays 15, Royals 8
The Toronto Blue Jays rode to victory on Kelly Gruber's cycle.

Gruber became the first player in Toronto's 13-year history to hit for the cycle Sunday, driving in six runs as the Blue Jays rallied from a six-run deficit to beat the Kansas City Royals 15-8.

Gruber homered in the first, doubled in the second, tripled in the seventh and singled in the eighth.

"That was the toughest at-bat I can remember having," Gruber said of his final plate appearance. "Anytime you have to come up there looking for a single, there's extra pressure. Do I go for two if I have the chance, or do I stay on first and look silly?"

The Royals scored six runs in the first inning off Dave Stieb, who had thrown one-hitters in three of his previous four starts. The Blue Jays bounced back to take a 9-7 lead in the fourth on Jesse Barfield's three-run homer.

Twins 9, Yankees 4
Minnesota's Gary Gaetti drove in six runs with two homers and a single.

Gaetti hit a three-run homer in the third inning, singled home a run in the fifth and hit a two-run shot in the seventh.

Allan Anderson, 3-0, gave up one earned run on seven hits in seven innings.

Athletics 3, White Sox 2
Walt Weiss, returning to the lineup after missing three starts because of the flu, singled in the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning.

Terry Steinbach singled with one out in the ninth and pinch-runner Lance Blankenship went to third on a single by Stan Javier before Weiss greeted reliever Donn Pall with a run-scoring single to right.

Reliever Dennis Eckersley, 1-0, pitched the final 1 2-3 innings to pick up the win. White Sox starter Eric King, 0-3, took the loss.

Brewers 4, Indians 3
Glenn Braggs' bases-loaded single in the 10th inning gave the Brewers a three-game sweep of the Indians.

B.J.Surhoff led off the bottom of the ninth with a single off Keith Atherton, 0-1. After Gary Sheffield popped out to shortstop, Robin Yount doubled, sending sending pinch-runner Mike Felder to third.

Investigations open into stadium crush that killed 94 people

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

SHEFFIELD, England (AP)— Lawmakers and sports officials demanded a ban on anti-riot barriers and standing-room sections in stadiums as the city of Liverpool mourned 94 soccer fans crushed to death behind a steel fence in Britain's worst sports disaster.

Most of the 24 victims so far publicly identified were under age 20. They included a 10-year-old boy who was trampled and two teen-age sisters who died before their father's eyes.

Of the 170 injured, 56 remained in hospital with 17 in intensive care, police said today.

Calling it "a disaster of immense proportions," Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said an inquiry would try to determine the cause of the human crush at Sheffield's Hillsborough stadium minutes into Saturday's cup semifinal between Liverpool and Nottingham Forest.

Details of the probe were to be unveiled in Parliament this afternoon by Home Secretary Douglas Hurd.

Buckingham Palace said Prince Charles and Princess Diana would visit injured survivors in Sheffield later today.

Sixty-five miles away in Liverpool, mourners jammed the Roman Catholic cathedral Sunday for a requiem Mass for the victims — most of them residents of the northwestern port city. The Anglican cathedral's bell tolled 94 times.

Lawmakers, sports officials and survivors on Sunday demanded changes in stadium designs, including the abolition of standing-room sections, known as terraces, and the anti-riot barriers around them.

"We have been saying for a long time that standing room must be converted into seating space," said Gerhard Aigner, general secretary of UEFA, Europe's soccer authority. People "should have been able to escape off those terraces" and "were killed needlessly," said Liverpool's Liberal lawmaker, David Alton.

He said the fences should come down immediately, a demand echoed by Sheffield Labor lawmaker Joe Ashton, and Denis Howell, a former Labor sports minister.

Bert Millichip, president of the English Football Association, said regulations require fences, in part to prevent rowdiness.

Police in Sheffield, whose crowd-control measures will be at the core of the inquiry, handed over a police investigation to the neighboring West Midlands police.

Authorities will likely want to determine why thousands of fans were still outside as the match began and why police decided to open a 16-foot-wide gate to allow many of them to surge en masse into one end of the stadium shortly after the kickoff.

The last-minute arrivals poured into a central standing-room-only section, pressing those already inside against the steel mesh fence. Investigators also were expected to examine allegations that many entered the sold-out stadium, which has a capacity of 54,000, with forged tickets or without any tickets at all.

Grief-stricken survivors described watching children die and people hit each other in the frenzied fight to survive.

The sturdy 10-foot fence, angled in at the top to stop people from scaling it, prevented fans from escaping to the field. Some were crushed to death and others suffocated or were trampled trying to fight their way out of the crowd or when the barrier finally collapsed.

South Yorkshire's chief constable, Peter Wright, said a senior officer decided to open the gates "to save people's lives and to relieve the crush outside."

It was the third major soccer tragedy in four years involving English teams.

Ivy League admissions drops benefit Texas private schools

HOUSTON (AP)— Some Texas private universities are seeing surprising increases in freshman applications despite mounting tuition costs and a reverse trend at other more expensive private schools, officials said.

"The percentage rise this year is certainly more than we anticipated. It's a pretty big jump, especially in view of demographics," said John Lind, vice president for admission at Southwestern University in Georgetown. Lind cited projections of fewer 18-year-olds in the population than earlier in the decade.

"We compete against very good schools," Lind said. "We're considered one of the best buys."

Officials from Southwestern, Southern Methodist University and Rice University report applications for 1989's fall freshman class arrived in unprecedented numbers.

"We thought we would have some increase, but this far exceeded our expectations," said Andrew Bryant, dean of admissions at SMU, which recorded a 24.1 percent increase in applications this year.

Freshman applicants at Southwestern rose by 17.2 percent by March 31 and by 17.6 percent at Rice.

Applications to Trinity University and Texas Christian University dropped by 5 percent and 7.5 percent, respectively, but officials say the amounts are insignificant.

The Texas application count — even the decreases — contrasts with sharp drops at Ivy League schools. At Dartmouth, for example, 18 percent fewer applications were filed than last year — 8,300, compared with 10,000 for fall 1988. And the University of Pennsylvania received 13.7 percent fewer applications — 11,300, down from 13,100 last year.

At Southwestern, 637 of the 1,004 freshmen who applied for the 1989 fall semester have been admitted, boosting admissions by 7.6 percent. The increase marks the eighth consecutive year at Southwestern, which recorded an all-time high of 1,171 students last fall.

SMU received 4,429 applications by April 1, compared with 3,569 at the same time last year. Rice received 5,180 applications, up from 4,406 applications last year, marking the university's fifth consecutive record-breaking year, said dean of admissions Ron Moss.

Bryant said SMU expects freshmen to number about 1,400 this fall — about 50 more than last fall when the class increased for the first time in three years.

Trinity in San Antonio has accepted 1,550 of its more than 2,100 applicants overall and expects a class of about 600. TCU received about 3,100 applications and expects a freshman class of 1,150 to 1,200.

"We don't call that significant, not by any means. It's a fairly typical year," said Michael Yost, director of institutional advancement and assistant to Trinity's president. He said that each year universities experience 5 percent to 10 percent application increases and decreases for no specific reason.

TCU's associate dean of admissions, Janet Herald, said her university's decrease comes on the heels of a 13.5 percent increase in applications last year, when a record 3,350 applications were received. It marked the fifth consecutive year the number of applications increased.

Officials say price is a major factor in the census increases.

"We are seeing a stronger price resistance this year than we have seen in 10 to 20 years," Lind told the Houston Chronicle. "There is a philosophy or sense that enough is enough, and some people have said, 'There is no way I can handle the $20,000-a-year cost.'"

Still, most of the schools are increasing their tuition.

Southwestern is increasing its tuition to $7,600 this year, pumping the overall costs to $10,900 per semester. Last fall's tuition, $6,950, coupled with room and board, left students with bills of $10,186 to $10,820.

At SMU, tuition increased to $9,880 from $8,040 last year. Overall costs — tuition, room, board and fees — increased to $14,378, up from $13,307 last year. Students at Rice next fall will pay $10,475 for room, board and tuition, compared with $9,500.

Mexican police find more bodies suspected as cult slaying victims

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP)— Mexican federal police believe two men found buried on a communal farm were killed by the same cult suspected of performing human sacrifices on 13 men whose bodies were discovered last week at a nearby ranch.

The two bodies discovered Sunday afternoon were buried one atop the other in an orchard clearing on Ejido Santa Librada, about two miles south of Rancho Santa Elena. Police believe that ranch, about 20 miles west of Matamoros, was where a bizarre cult of drug traffickers performed sacrifices and other rites to protect their smuggling business from police and rivals.

The 13 bodies found at the ranch had been dismembered, and their hearts, brains and other organs had been removed and used in bizarre rituals, police said.

The two bodies found at the communal farm had not been dismembered, said Martin Elias Salazar, a federal judicial police group chief who supervised Sunday's exhumations. A sheriff's deputy in Brownsville, a Texas city across the Rio Grande from Matamoros, said the men apparently died in a drug deal gone sour.

Police positively identified one victim and tentatively identified the other Sunday. Salazar said police had long suspected the men of being narco-traffickers. That suspicion, plus the proximity of the men's grave to the ranch, led Salazar to believe they had done business with the cult before it turned to committing human sacrifices.

Four suspects in custody in Matamoros for the 13 cult slayings had not been questioned about the two newly found bodies, Salazar said. He added they would be interrogated about the new bodies following an appearance before a judge scheduled for this morning. After that, Salazar said, police would determine whether a search would resume for more bodies.

The men — Serafin Hernandez Garcia, Elio Hernandez Rivera, Sergio Martinez and David Serna Valdez — were to be formally charged with murder, kidnaping and drug and weapons possession in their appearance before the judge.

The sect's leaders, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, 26, and Sara Maria Aldrete, 24, remained at large Sunday, police said. Constanzo ran a marijuana-smuggling ring that sneaked a ton of the drug weekly into the United States, officials have said.

Federal police in Mexico City said Sunday they were investigating possible links between the cult killings near Matamoros and recent murders in Mexico City, but had found nothing yet.

On Friday, federal police searched Constanzo's luxurious house 19 miles north of Mexico City, as well as the apartments of two associates who are fugitives. They found a couple of marble altars, but no signs of human sacrifice.

Neighbors said three to five young men suddenly fled the house in late-model luxury cars early Tuesday, the same day the first 12 bodies were found at the ranch. One of the four suspects captured that day led police to a 13th body Thursday.

Like most of the victims found at Rancho Santa Elena, the two men found Sunday had been struck in the back of the head with a machete, said Jose Delgadillo, an employee at the Matamoros funeral home where the bodies were taken.

Delgadillo had watched while a doctor examined the remains Sunday night.

"The bones were whole. They were not dismembered," Delga-dillo said. "One can't tell if the hearts and other organs were removed, because the bodies were decomposed. It's pretty revolting."

Delgadillo performed the task of digging up the bodies as police stood around, took pictures and cracked jokes. The bottom body was clad in black pants and snakeskin boots. A pants pocket contained a U.S. $5 bill and 3,000 Mexican pesos. Little was left of the remains but bones.

Salazar said he would have a better idea of what to ask the suspects once autopsies were completed, probably sometime this afternoon.

One body was identified as that of Moises Castillo Vasquez, 53, of Ejido Jose Maria Morales, west of Matamoros, Salazar said. An ejido is a Mexican communal farm.

Mexican police shovel dirt from grave where other slaying victims were found Sunday.
