Youth sentenced to 20 years for Kingsmill man's murder

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Kenny Don Jones, 14, was sentenced to 20 years confinement in the Texas prison system Monday for the Feb. 8 murder of Dickie Lee Bennett of Kingsmill.

Disposition hearing for another juvenile charged in the shooting has been postponed until 9 a.m. Wednesday after the boy's mother was hospitalized over the weekend.

District Judge Grainger McIlhany, acting as juvenile judge in this case, had the boy stand as he pronounced the sentence. McIlhany explained that Jones would serve the first four years of the sentence at Texas Youth Commission in Austin, and would then be transferred to serve the remainder of the sentence at Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville.

Jones and his parents, Donald Jones of White Deer and Debra Ann Jones of Lubbock, consulted with the boy's court-appointed attorney, Gene Thompson, who then said his client did not wish to appeal the sentence at this time.

Jones, who pleaded guilty to the charges, was the only witness in the hearing Monday at 10:30 a.m. in the District Courtroom of Gray County Courthouse.

"Is it true that on Feb. 8, 1989 you did intentionally and knowingly cause the death of Dickie Lee Bennett by shooting him with a deadly weapon, to wit a handgun?" District Attorney Harold Comer asked the young man.

"Yes, sir," he answered. Comer asked Jones if he was under the influence of drugs or alcohol at the time he shot Bennett.

"No, sir," the boy responded.

"Well, then, why?" Comer asked.

"Because Cody asked me to," Jones answered.

"Do you now or did you ever belong to any satanic cult that advocated the killing of humans or animals of any kind?" the district attorney asked.

"No, sir," the boy answered.

After Jones waived his rights of self-incrimination, Comer read a statement of facts given and signed by the boy.

In his statement, Jones said that on Feb. 6 he told Cody Bennett that he was going to leave home and go to California or Florida.

On Feb. 7, the two talked again at school, he said. Cody told Jones he wanted to go, too. Jones said Cody told him if they killed Cody's parents, they could get $3,000. Cody had seen his parents' car and Jones' car.

"Cody wondered if I could kill his parents, and I said I probably could," Jones said in the statement.

The next day, Jones said Cody came to him and said that he wanted to leave now, that he had had problems with his parents the night before and that he was angry with his mother.

The two boys persuaded a third friend to drive them to the elevators in Kingsmill, across the highway from where the Bennetts lived, Jones' statement said.

Hiding behind the elevators, the boys watched Dickie Lee Bennett go from the yard of the residence into the house. A short time later, Bennett got into his truck and drove away.

After the elder Bennett left, Jones said the boys entered the house. Cody took a butcher knife from a kitchen drawer, he said. They also took a .22 caliber revolver from Bennett's drawer and found $300 in a check book, two $100 and some $20 bills.

The boys then got soft drinks from the kitchen and watched for Bennett from the front window, he said. When they saw him drive up, Jones said they ran to hide in closets.

Jones said he hid in a closet in the Bennett's bedroom, but Bennett came into the house and saw Cody standing in the hall. Jones said Bennett grabbed Cody and took the butcher knife from the boy.

Jones said he shot Bennett for the first time from the closet right after the man took the knife from Cody. He said he shot Bennett two more times, adding "I think I hit him every time."

Bennett fell face down on the floor, the boy said. When Cody told him to "shoot him again," Jones said he went through the living room, around the kitchen and shot Bennett once more standing from about six feet away.

According to the autopsy report by Dr. Ralph Erdmann of Amarillo, this last shot caused "mandatory and immediate death" by destroying the brain center of the central nervous system. Two other shots that struck Bennett in the chest and neck would not necessarily have been fatal, the pathologist's report stated.

Jones said after the last shot Cody reached in Bennett's pocket, took $12 from his wallet and threw the wallet on the kitchen table as they were leaving. The boys also took the keys to the Bennetts' Ford Tempo.

Chief Eberz resigns

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A long-running feud between the chief of the Pampa Police Department and city administration culminated in the resignation of Chief Robert Eberz late Monday morning.

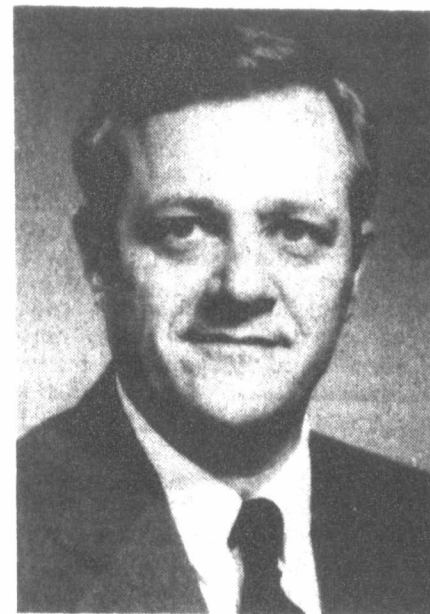

Eberz said he walked off the job after what he termed months of being undermined in his attempts to run his department.

He said the final confrontation came Monday when he returned to work from a weekend convention and learned one of his detectives, Sgt. Ken Neal, had been transferred out of the police department and into the newly created role of city training coordinator.

"I went away last weekend to an accreditation meeting and came back to find he (City Manager Jack Chaney) had pulled one of my sergeants," Eberz said. "I was a little upset since no one even consulted with me."

Chaney said Eberz had been consulted on the possibility of some realignments of personnel, but said the transfer of Neal was made without Eberz's direct involvement.

"I gave a presentation this morning (Monday) on the drug dog," Eberz continued, "and when I got to the structure (of the department) they cut me off. They want to move Jeanne (Gould) down and put (Lt. Roy) Denman in charge of police services. There's a guy (Chaney) who has been here 30 days making assessments and decisions when the police force is under my supervision."

Eberz

Chaney

Eberz said Chaney, along with City Secretary and Personnel Director Phyllis Jeffers and Assistant City Manager Frank Smith, want to make Lt. Jess Wallace, who currently oversees the Criminal Investigation Division, the supervisor of the patrol division and promote Det. Sgt. Charlie Love to supervisor of CID.

Chaney said the city is considering such a plan, but that it is "not a done deal." He said the moves, along with other readjustments of city employees, could save Pampa around $50,000 annually.

"But that's just a guess," Chaney said.

Eberz pointed out that when Chaney arrived in Pampa, he said he would not "touch the wheel of the ship for the first six months."

"He said he would not interfere and department heads would be allowed to run their own departments. Quite obviously that is not true," Eberz said.

"We're moving quicker than I wanted to," Chaney countered. "When I made that statement, I didn't realize there were the needs that there were. We are getting back to motivation and organization. If some of the changes I'm discussing work out, we'll have more officers on the street."

Chaney said the police department was not losing any positions with the transfer of Neal and he was not trying to undermine the authority of the chief.

Jody Been, 8, third-grade student at Horace Mann Elementary, puts finishing touches on his chalk drawing of spring tulips on the sidewalk in front of the school. Mann students spent Monday afternoon in a "Chalk Walk" to add a personal touch to their school environment as part of a dual celebration of spring and the end of Metropolitan Achievement Testing. Sidewalks became a kaleidoscope of design and color as the young artists applied colored chalk to their original designs. Students were encouraged to "Think big, draw big and talk big" by faculty and Mann Booster Club members. Randy's Food Store joined in the fun with the donation of Popsicles for the participants.

Authorities say apparent suicides of woman, man related

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
and BEAR MILLS

Authorities today say the apparent suicide of a 22-year-old Pampa woman, killed by an eastbound freight train Monday morning, and a second suicide discovered this morning on South Finley Street are related.

Lysinda Lee Leggett, 22, 1220 S. Finley, was pronounced dead by Justice of Peace Bob Muns shortly after 11 a.m. Monday after she was struck by a train near the Dansiger Crossing, east of the city at Loop 171.

Russell Don Brewer, 38, also of 1220 S. Finley, was discovered dead in the garage of the frame home on Finley Street at about 8:30 a.m. today. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of Peace Wayne Roberts, who ordered an autopsy be done by Amarillo pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann.

Pampa police detectives investigating Brewer's death said the man left a suicide note on the dash of a Nissan pickup parked in the tiny garage of the residence.

In the note, Brewer reportedly said he could not live without his "Sin-Sin." The note said she was alone wherever she was and he was going to be with her, police said.

"She lived a full life and without the three of us, I can't go on," the note read, referring to an apparent love triangle between Brewer, his wife Karen, and Leggett.

Ironically, investigation shows that Brewer apparently changed his mind about suicide, but was overcome with fumes before he could leave the garage. He was found near the right side of the truck door with a 55-gallon drum on top of him.

Police theorize that Brewer tried to escape from the garage by climbing over the drum, but the effect of the fumes made him fall and the drum fell on top of him.

"He got in there and got pretty well down on carbon monoxide. At the last moment, it looks like he changed his mind but he didn't make it out of the garage," Det. Charles Love said.

Following the discovery of Leggett's suicide Monday, Brewer had posed as her husband to Department of Public Safety troopers, police said today. Investigating officers also found a number of photographs of the three in the home, along with a wood burning in the shape of a heart saying, "Sindy, Russ & Karen."

An investigation of the train death Monday showed that at about 10:50 a.m. Leggett drove her 1981 Toyota onto the Dansiger Crossing, Trooper Johnny Carter said Monday.

Leggett turned the vehicle's engine off and then walked west 150 yards where she apparently waited for an eastbound train, Carter said.

Leggett waited until the Santa Fe train, traveling from 60 to 70 mph, was approximately 150 yards from her when she laid across the tracks, the trooper said.

The woman apparently died instantly when she was struck by the train, which then continued to travel east. The train hit the parked Toyota and carried the vehicle about 0.4 mile east before finally coming to a stop, 1 1/4 miles from the first point of impact.

Lysinda "Sindy" Leggett was a lifelong resident of Pampa. There will be no funeral services.

She is survived by her parents, Butch and Teri Leggett of Pampa; two sisters, Leslie Ann Leggett and Nickie Leggett, both of the home; her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ivon Williams of Amarillo and Mr. and Mrs. Lee C. Leggett of Okeene, Okla.; and her great-grandmother, Fleta Hill of Pampa. Obituary information on Mr. Brewer was not available at press time today.

"There were things that needed to be done from a budgetary aspect or we had programs that necessitated changes," Chaney said. "I don't think the changes have been wholesale. In each case, I've talked with the directors involved. We've just moved people around and saved money doing it."

"I've lost my authority," Eberz said. "I've got to call my CID lieutenant and tell him he lost a sergeant and he wanted to know why. I had to say they went around me."

Chaney said that after Eberz resigned, another department head questioned him on his pledge not to make decisions regarding departments in the city for six months. He said his answer was the changes had to be made to most effectively utilize personnel and save the city money.

"Other department heads may not say publicly what's been going on, but they know," Eberz said. "This is not just since the arrival of Chaney. The assistant city manager and personnel director will sit up there and distort the facts. They want to run the city."

"He (Chaney) says I'm not a good supervisor," Eberz said. "It's my department and I'm the police chief. The bottom line is I refuse to demote my only female supervisor (Gould, who currently supervises police services such as dispatch and records) and demote Denman to services and Jess (Wallace) to patrol."

Eberz admitted some morale problems existed, but blamed them on administration's refusal to give the officers a pay raise or approve overtime, which he said was necessary because of personnel shortages.

"The officers are tired and seriously underpaid. Bob Hart (former city manager) said after his $10,000 raise that he refused to write a police raise into the budget," Eberz said.

He blamed Jeffers and Smith for "feeding false information, Monday morning quarterbacking and second guessing my every decision."

"She (Jeffers) said I'm losing people because of morale, but with the exception of one officer, they left for more money," Eberz said.

He claimed that the Pampa Police Department is the lowest paying agency of any department of equal size in the state and that it has one of the lowest officer-to-citizen ratios.

"I was told their salaries are in the ballpark. My response is that so is a foul ball," Eberz said. "I'm tired of getting ridicule from the bureaucracy over my methods."

Eberz commended his department for doing well in spite of low pay and "every officer I've got is just about burnt out." He also claimed Chaney was attempting to provoke him into quitting.

"He (Chaney) said he was looking for a new police chief. No matter what facts I presented, it came back to them saying, 'You haven't convinced me,'" Eberz said. "I cannot work in an environment where I become a puppet."

Chaney insisted none of his decisions were made to pressure Eberz to resign.

"It was Chief Eberz's decision to resign," he pointed out. The city manager also discounted claims by Eberz that there was a conspiracy on the part of Jeffers and Smith to manipulate city government.

"I see no conspiracy, unless it is a conspiracy to make things work more efficiently," Chaney said. "The assistant city manager is not even in town and was not approached on this issue (the transfer of Neal). I have worked with the directors and not around them."

Man sentenced for assaulting woman

A man accused of assaulting a 79-year-old Pampa woman was sentenced to 20 years in the Texas Department of Corrections in 31st District Court Monday.

Daniel Davidson, 32, of Phoenix, Ariz., pleaded guilty to assaulting Madeline Rowntree in her home on March 8, District Attorney Harold Comer said today.

Judge Grainger McIlhany pronounced the 20-year sentence and Davidson was returned to Gray County Jail to await transfer to the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville.

City of Pampa police were called to Mrs. Rowntree's residence at about 9 p.m. March 8. Mrs. Rowntree reported a man had entered her home and attacked her. The assailant had been employed by her to do yard work, she told police. The assault victim was taken to Coronado Hospital, where she was admitted for treatment of injuries she suffered in the attack.

In the pleading Monday, Davidson said he was under the influence of drugs when he attacked Mrs. Rowntree and he recalled going into the house and hitting her, but did not remember how many times he hit her.

Davidson left the city following the assault. A Gray County grand jury indicted Davidson for the attack on Mrs. Rowntree on March 14. He was later arrested by law enforcement authorities in Phoenix, Ariz. He was returned to Gray County to face the assault charges.

Crash foils helicopter escape attempt

MIAMI (AP) — A helicopter pilot's inexperience and poor choice of aircraft may have been the difference between a daredevil prison escape of a drug kingpin and the tangled wreckage lying inside the compound.

Moments after former powerboat champion Benjamin "Barry" Kramer leaped onto the small helicopter that swooped into the exercise yard Monday morning, the craft's rear rotor became tangled in the 12-foot fence surrounding the Metropolitan Correctional Center.

"Had he not hit the fence, he would have escaped," said Warden John Clark.

They were taken to Jackson Memorial Hospital, where they were listed in guarded but stable condition today. Although Stevens once spoke of his love for working in a hostile environment, he was known to regulars at nearby Tamiami Airport as a nervous airman with a student pilot's license.

"He was very squirrely on the helicopter," said Paul Barth, president of Biscayne Helicopters Inc. "We sort of stayed away from him."

Other experienced pilots wondered about Stevens' selection of the two-seat Bell 47-1A helicopter to try to snatch Kramer, who is serving life without parole for distributing half a million pounds of marijuana throughout the Midwest.

"In my opinion, that would not be the kind of bird to use," said airport patrolman Rich Fisher. "That's an observation helicopter. It's no work horse. It's a light-duty, slow-moving machine."

Calvin R. Coady, a flight instructor for Aris Helicopters Ltd. of San Jose, Calif., said Stevens paid him $35,000 in cash for the 37-year-old helicopter Dec. 17.

"I remember it very well — the majority of the money was $100 bills, with a few 50s," Coady said, adding that the large amount of cash made him suspicious but that he didn't ask Stevens about its source.

Most of the 1,000 prison's inmates are awaiting federal trial. The 36-year-old Kramer was being held in a special high-security area because he was considered an escape risk.

"We are not surprised to hear of the attempted escape. After all, Mr. Kramer is a man of tremendous wealth facing a life sentence," said Tom Cash, special agent in charge of the Drug Enforcement Agency in Miami. "But we never anticipated the method."

Youth

After the shooting, the boys drove to White Deer to get Jones' clothes. Then they drove back to the Bennett residence to get Cody's clothes. Jones said he thought Bennett was still alive because he was making a "snoring noise."

The boys had agreed to wait for Bennett's sister to come home from school for lunch, but decided to drive on to Amarillo, where they visited a friend of Jones'. After staying there for awhile, the two boys decided to go to K mart, where they were detained by police.

Before McIlhany pronounced the sentence, Thompson spoke about juvenile law, entreating the judge to see that his client receive treatment for what Amarillo psychologist Dr. Gerome Kleinpeter termed Jones' "serious socialization problem."

"I want to recommend that this child receive long-term counseling and treatment ... rather than mere punishment," Thompson said. "He'll have to carry the reality of this event for the rest of his life."

"The court finds this child is in need of rehabilitation and the public is in need of protection," McIlhany commented before pronouncing his judgment.

The boy's father, Donald Jones, asked to give a statement to the court after the state presented its evidence, saying:

"I don't believe he meant to shoot the guy until Mr. Bennett attacked the boy and tried to take the knife away," he told McIlhany.

Final arguments begin in North trial

By PETE YOST Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that "government by deception is not a free government," a prosecutor today accused Oliver North of lying to Congress and the attorney general in the Iran-Contra affair.

"Telling the truth is something you learned at your mother's knee," prosecutor John Kecker told the jury in final arguments following eight weeks of testimony in the trial of the former White House aide.

"Government by deception is not a free government," Kecker said. "Government by deception is not a democratic government. Government by deception is not a government under the rule of law."

The prosecutor said that in defending himself, North "blames other people. McFarlane made me to it. Casey told me to do it." He was referring to former national security adviser Robert McFarlane and the late CIA Director William Casey.

Kecker said such suggestions are "no more a defense" than "the devil made me do it."

But while serving on the National Security Council staff, North "described himself as a man of great power," Kecker said.

He said North "did not hesitate" to abuse that power by saying, "This is the White House calling," whether the call was to Cabinet officials "or a car dealer."

Keker's reference was to testimony last week focusing on North's purchase of a used $8,000 GMC Suburban. North insisted to the jury that he paid for the vehicle with cash he kept in a metal box at home.

The prosecutor suggested that Iran-Contra co-defendant Richard Secord helped pay for it.

Asked last week whether he got cash from Secord the same day he had paid off the vehicle, North said he couldn't recall.

North is accused of 12 criminal charges including obstructing Congress and making false statements to Congress and the attorney general. The charges focus on an alleged attempt to cover up various aspects of a secret Reagan administration operation to aid the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Central to North's defense were the series of revelations about President Reagan and then-Vice President George Bush that spilled out in eight weeks of testimony.

Reagan approved a secret plan to slip more than $110 million in extra aid to Honduras in exchange for that country's support for the Nicaraguan rebels. Reagan also telephoned the Honduran president to free up a secret load of Contra-bound arms.

Texas Democrats say evidence against Wright won't hold up

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)— Texas Democrats say an ethics committee report charging Speaker Jim Wright with numerous violations of House rules appears to be based on fragments of evidence that won't stand up to scrutiny.

The Democrats said the report actually strengthens Wright's position as he tries to hold on to the nation's third-highest office.

"It should stop the rumors, the leaks and the innuendos that have been occurring, that would be pretty tough for anyone to stand up to," said Rep. Charlie Stenholm, a Stamford Democrat.

Texas Republicans, however, moved cautiously Monday after Fort Worth politician was charged with 69 violations, saying they would wait to see how Wright responds.

"It's now his turn to tell his side of the story," said Rep. Joe Barton, an Ennis Republican. "He holds his future in his own hands. He is well qualified to determine his own fate."

"There are three kinds of politics in Washington — Republican, Democratic and Texas politics. I think that Republicans in the Texas delegation will give the speaker every chance to defend his honor," Barton said.

Rep. Charlie Wilson, a Lufkin Democrat, said a "war room" would be operated out of Wright's Capitol office as the speaker moves to defend himself against the ethics charges.

"At some point we've got to start figuring out who's on our side and who's on the other side," Wilson said, predicting Wright would win on the House floor, "losing a few cowardly Democrats and picking up some brave Republicans." The House ethics committee's vote charging Wright with the violations sets in motion a series of steps in which Wright can defend himself and the panel must prove with "clear and convincing" evidence that the violations occurred.

That is likely to ultimately throw the matter before the full House.

After a 10-month, $1.5 million investigation, the committee of six Democrats and six Republicans voted unanimously to issue a report finding "reason to believe" Wright violated House rules requiring reporting of gifts, barring acceptance of gifts from persons with a direct interest in legislation and limiting outside earned income.

"I know in my heart I have not violated any of the rules of that institution," Wright said. He asked "very urgently, very earnestly" for a quick meeting with the committee "to confront them, to confront the allegations head-on, face-to-face."

Rep. Jim Chapman, a Sulphur Springs Democrat, said he does not believe the allegations will meet the "clear and convincing" standard to prove wrongdoing occurred. Chapman said the charges appear based on an "absolutely tortuous" interpretation of the House rules "that in my judgment will not stand up to scrutiny."

Chapman said the "reason to believe" standard means charges could be based on the tiniest bit of evidence.

"I am confident if there is any fairness or justice he will survive," Chapman said. "The speaker deserves a fair hearing and if he gets a fair hearing I think he'll be just fine."

Rep. Ron Coleman, an El Paso Democrat, said that after scanning the report he did not find it "as damning as some people thought might be the case. It was a very, very weak report. I just think the speaker's stronger as result of that report to date than he was during this whole 10-month process."

Wright addresses a building trade union convention Monday in Washington, D.C.

"Wright should feel better today than he's felt throughout the whole process," Coleman said.

Texas Democrats were briefed Monday afternoon on the charges by Wright's attorney, William C. Oldaker, Chapman said.

Rep. Albert Bustamante, a San Antonio Democrat, predicted that if the allegations against Wright stand up, "it will be the beginning of what's to come for everybody else. The measures instituted against the speaker would have to be carried forward against everybody else."

"This glass house here holds many, many that could be alleged to have violated rules. I don't think anybody escapes from that type of a cloud," Bustamante said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Texas Democrat, declared his support for Wright.

"Jim Wright is my friend. I've known him and worked with him for many years. He is a man of integrity and a powerful force for Texas. I hope he'll be able to put this behind him quickly and continue serving as speaker of the House for many years to come," Bentsen said.

Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, said "we need to be thoughtful" in considering Wright's predicament.

"I just don't think that we should precipitously jump out there and declare someone guilty and take that kind of an extreme position until we know the facts," Clements said. "And I don't know the facts. I think we need to be cautious about how we jump to these conclusions. And I'm just not going to do that."

Clements said he was "somewhat disgusted" by the events surrounding Wright.

House OKs bills on killer bees, child support

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill tentatively approved by the House would provide an emergency $100,000 allocation for research on killer bees, which are migrating northward and could hit South Texas late this year.

The bees, also known as Africanized bees, are prone to mass attacks and are inefficient honey producers and pollinators, stated a House Research Organization report. The undesirable traits dominate after a few generations when they breed with domesticated bees.

The funding, given preliminary House approval Monday, is for such research projects as the development of insecticides to kill or sterilize non-commercial bee colonies, according to the report.

The bees are migrating northward from South America and now are in Mexico about 560 miles south of Brownsville. They are expected to cross the border late this year or early next year, according to current projections, said Rep. Renato Cuellar, bill sponsor.

The research money is needed this fiscal year because "this may be the last time they swarm before they come in," said Cuellar, D-Weslaco. He sported a fuzzy yellow and brown bee on his lapel and distributed such fake bees to other members.

The killer bees will swarm from March through May, he said.

Gov. Bill Clements has designated the funding for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station to conduct research as an emergency matter.

Another House vote is needed before the bill could be sent to the Senate for consideration.

In other action, the House gave preliminary approval to a bill that would prohibit courts from considering the income of a person's spouse when setting the amount of child support that person must pay.

Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, expressed concern about the measure. He said if a father remarries after divorcing his child's mother, the father's payments for such items as rent may go down and that should be considered when looking at his ability to pay child support.

Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Pollock, bill sponsor, said there are "a lot of people living out of wedlock to avoid this extra income being considered."

Gov. Clements gets bill on pre-release prisons

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)— A bill authorizing the construction of pre-release facilities for state prison inmates will now go to Gov. Bill Clements for consideration.

The Texas Senate on Monday voted 30-1 in favor of the measure that would authorize the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles to build pre-release centers for certain non-violent prison inmates who are within six months of being eligible for parole.

"We're going to review the bill," said Clements' deputy press secretary Jay Rosser.

Sen. Gene Green, D-Houston, cast the lone dissenting vote, saying many residents fear such centers would not be secure.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said that if the state operates the centers like prisons or halfway houses, the facilities could become subject to federal scrutiny under the lawsuit that monitors state prison operations.

"We're kind of walking on eggs," Glasgow said. He said the facilities would be surrounded by a fence, but added that could mean a chain-link fence or picket fence.

"They're not penitentiaries. They're not halfway houses. They're something in the middle," Glasgow said of the proposed centers.

He said the measure, which was negotiated in a House-Senate conference committee, is needed to provide relief to the overcrowded state prison system which has backed up about 8,000 state inmates in county jails.

'They're not penitentiaries. They're not halfway houses. They're something in the middle.'

If signed into law, the bill would free up $3 million to build the centers. The facilities could house up to 1,200 inmates, Glasgow said.

In other business, the Senate sent to the House on a 31-0 vote a bill that would allow luxury hotels to put mini bars in rooms. Mini bars are essentially refrigerators stocked with beverages, mixers and snacks.

"This is an economic development bill. It's not a wet and dry issue," said Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso. Currently, 27 states allow hotel room mini bars, according to a legislative analysis of the measure.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, received final approval of his bill that would prohibit teachers and principals from paddling a student whose parents had filed a written objection with the school district.

The bill received tentative approval Thursday and was sent Monday to the House after a 19-11 vote.

Under other bills passed by the Senate:

■ Persons caught or attempting to go into a secure airport area with a weapon or illegal knife would face up to a $2,000 fine and one year in jail, or both. Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, said the bill would "simply strengthen Texas laws within the confines of a secure area."

■ Service stations in areas of less than 5,000 population could store up to 2,000 gallons of diesel fuel in above-ground storage tanks. Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Roby, said small operators need this measure because they cannot afford underground tanks or the necessary insurance coverage.

■ Appellate courts would have wider discretion in setting the amount of security bonds. The changes arose out of an interim committee report prompted by the $10 billion bond required in the Pennzoil-Texaco dispute.

■ The Higher Education Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System would provide higher funding levels for public colleges and universities that use tenured faculty to teach lower division courses.

Woman protests polygraph use in sexual assault case

AUSTIN (AP) — It is "an insult" to victims for law enforcement agencies to require a lie detector examination before pursuing a sexual assault complaint, a lawmaker says.

Rep. Juan Hinojosa on Monday discussed a bill he said would prohibit law enforcement agencies from making a polygraph test a prerequisite for taking a sexual assault complaint.

"We should not put people who are victims through such a traumatic experience," he said.

His bill cleared its first hurdle when it was given 9-0 approval by the House committee on criminal jurisprudence Monday night.

Hinojosa, D-McAllen, said he has found many law enforcement agencies require a polygraph exam before taking a complaint. He said the "vast majority" of such cases involve sexual assault.

"We feel this is an insult, and it's an attitude of blaming the victim," said Hinojosa, an attorney. He said the polygraph exam is not reliable.

One woman told a news conference she felt "on trial" during such an exam.

"I am a victim of sexual assault, and this is wrong to have a victim take a polygraph test. It is so wrong," said Susan Gillis, her voice breaking.

Gillis said she was assaulted in Flatonia a year and a half ago, and she subsequently took a polygraph exam that was performed at the Department of Public Safety in Austin.

"To ask someone to take a polygraph test and try to remain in a composed nature ... I can't do it a year and a half later. To expect someone to do it right after they've been sexually assaulted is ludicrous," said Gillis, 22.

Gillis, who is from Dallas, said the exam lasted four hours and that she "cried through the whole thing."

"I really did feel like I was the one on trial. The results were inconclusive," she said. "It's very frustrating to know that the officials that are supposed to be working with you will not do anything until you have taken this polygraph test."

Chief Deputy Gary Reaves of the Fayette County Sheriff's Department, which worked on Gillis' case, said the department only occasionally uses polygraph exams.

Reaves said officers are told not to demand such exams but in some cases ask if complainants would be willing to take one. The exams are not confined to sexual assault cases, he said.

Such an exam would not be admissible in court and is used as an investigatory tool, he said.

"Her case is still open. We did pursue the case," Reaves said. "Everything we got hold of was checked out. It's just unsolved."

The polygraph exam is not crucial to the department's work, he added. "We could probably make it just fine without it."

John Boston, executive director of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, said his group opposes Hinojosa's bill because it sees the polygraph exam as a tool.

"It's a screening tool. It can help in the case of a false outcry," Boston said. "It tells the prosecutor something if the alleged victim refused to take it without having some other good reason for refusing."

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Private enterprise aiming for space

Private enterprise may have advanced another light year in rocket technology with the recent launching of the first private space ship from White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico. The rocket, Conson 1, flew a 15-minute suborbital flight for Space Services Inc.

One must admire the persistence of these space entrepreneurs. They had to wade through the bureaucratic red tape of 18 government agencies. Amazingly, they even had to get an export license from the State Department because the payload landed in international waters in the Gulf of Mexico. Indeed, the hardest thing about the launch was not the technology or financing, but blustering through government roadblocks.

The key element was a decision made by President Reagan, in the wake of the January 1986 Challenger shuttle disaster, to smoothe the way for private space initiatives. For once putting his free-market rhetoric into action, Reagan realized that space exploration is too important, and too challenging, to be left solely to government agencies such as NASA.

The Department of Transportation now has a special department on space exploration that employs 22 bureaucrats. It's funny how so many people have to be employed just to let private businessmen do their jobs; Space Services employs only 14 people. But this is government. And, in this case at least, the bureaucrats are used to counter, or at least lessen, the obstructive actions of other bureaucrats.

Private space companies still must use government launch facilities. But three states — Virginia, Florida and Hawaii — are looking into building spaceports. But a better way would be for private companies to build their own space ports. Let's hope that that, too, will come in time.

For now, several other companies are planning private space launches, including EPrime and Conatec, which are rather small firms, as well as such aerospace giants as McDonnell Douglas, Martin Marietta and General Dynamics.

Roadblocks remain: "NASA is the outfit that did everything they could to ruin any kind of private, domestic rocket business," says science journalist Jerry Pournelle. Now NASA has been pushed back, but no huge government agency can be expected to remain neutral.

Yet the door has been pushed open a crack, and through it will rush the irresistible force of private initiative. The final frontier will soon become the next permanent outpost of freedom.

Tax codes punish the elderly

Stephen Chapman

If you're one of those people plagued by a hungry mailbox, starved for lively personal correspondence, I offer a simple remedy tested by personal experience.

It consists of three steps: (1) Write a published article, with your name and preferably your address attached, about the new catastrophic health care program for the elderly; (2) take as much space as you like criticizing it; and (3) say anything — anything at all — nice about it.

Oh, I almost forgot (4), which is to immediately proceed to higher ground so you won't be buried alive in the avalanche of mail from furious senior citizens. It worked for me.

The program, I hasten to emphasize, is defective on several grounds: It costs too much for too little, it preempts a competitive private market for a monopolistic government program and it ignores cheaper alternatives. My original column mentioned all these flaws, but it was nonetheless interpreted as an exuberant defense of the new system.

Besides, it seems, these weren't the right flaws to point out. Only two features of the program seem to bother most of my new pen pals. The first is that the program isn't free to the beneficiaries. It's financed by two different taxes on the elderly. The second is that it doesn't pay for all their potential medical needs. Most notably, it excludes long-term care in or out of nursing homes.

The prevailing attitude among my new pen pals is: No benefit is too good for the elderly, and no cost is too high for working people. Considering the huge expansion of Social Security and Medicare payments over the last 20 years, the staggering increases in payroll taxes, and the outsized return today's retirees get on their past contributions to the trust funds, this attitude is a little hard to take.

But the elderly do have some good reasons to gripe. In recent years they've had to shoulder an increasingly insufferable tax burden — at the same time that tax rates on other Americans have been drastically dropped.

Since 1981, the maximum tax rates on most people have been slashed from as high as 70 percent to no more than 33 percent. People who used to keep only 30 cents of each additional dollar they earned now get to keep 67 cents. The change was based on the reasonable theory that if you raise the rewards for socially valuable activities like working and investing, you'll get more of them.

In its treatment of the elderly, though, the tax code has become more punitive than the Iranian judicial system. Some older employees face marginal tax rates as high as 102 percent — meaning that if they earn an extra dollar, their net income actually falls. For the elderly self-employed paying state and local income taxes, the marginal rate can reach 122 percent.

Older people who aren't doing their jobs for the pleasure of the boss's companionship may wonder why they aren't home tending to their tulips or playing with their grandkids.

A lot of them have stopped wondering: In recent years, more and more of the elderly have been chucking their jobs. Some 83 percent of men over the age of 65 have fled the world of work, as have 92 percent of women.

A recent study by John Goodman and A. James Meigs for the Dallas-based National Center for Policy Analysis outlines the problem. Under the Reagan administration, two major new taxes were imposed on retirees. The first, enacted in 1983, made up to half of Social Security benefits taxable for retired couples earning more than $32,000 a year. The second, which was part of the catastrophic care program, levied a surtax on income tax payments.

The two changes together, says this study, mean that "elderly taxpayers now face the highest marginal tax rates ever imposed on middle-income Americans in the nation's history." No wonder they're touchy.

Fortunately, the damage can be easily undone. Goodman and Meigs note that the catastrophic coverage could be paid for with no increase in the payroll tax by modestly raising Medicare deductibles and co-payments. Treating half of Social Security benefits as ordinary income for tax purposes would mean that the elderly would face the same low marginal rates as other taxpayers.

These changes would improve the welfare of older Americans without dumping any new burdens on the rest of the populace. In fact, the rest of us would benefit from giving the elderly new incentives to stay in the labor force and keep earning their way.

The only drawback I can find is that many of them would have less time to write letters to newspaper columnists. It's a sacrifice I can live with.

The climate's good for crime

Lewis Grizzard

In an effort to improve its suffering image, Washington, D.C., officials did a study which pointed out that Atlanta, not Washington, was the Number One-ranked crime city in the nation.

A large number of Atlantans were upset by the Washington report. Atlanta's city officials, such as the police chief, refuted the statistics and said, "Blah, blah, blah," which is what a city official says when he really means, "I'm into it up to my ears this time."

As for me, however, I took some measure of pride in finding out I live in the top-ranked crime city.

Residents in other cities celebrate winning Super Bowls and World Series. But Atlantans gave up on such things happening to them years ago.

We have the Falcons, the joke of the National Football League. We have the Braves, annually one of the worse teams in major league baseball.

The Falcons are so bad that when the owner threatened to move the team to Jacksonville, there were bumper stickers around that read, "Goodbye, Falcons — and Take the Braves With You."

We have the Hawks, who again look like an early casualty in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

They did show some improvement last season, and this was to be their year. At this writing, they are next-to-last in their division.

But crime? Want to get murdered, raped or held up? Atlanta, according to the stastics, is the place to be.

What we must do with all this in Atlanta is to look on the bright side. What does it say when Atlanta is called the crime capital of the country?

It says we have a great climate. Do you know why Chicago doesn't have Atlanta's percentage of muggers? Because it's too cold in Chicago about half the year to be out on the streets.

It says we have a healthy economy. If nobody had any money in Atlanta, there wouldn't be anything out there trying to steal it.

It says we're not a sleepy little Southern city anymore, which is probably what people in places like New York still think we are.

They are wrong. You can't be sleepy in a place where people are murdering other people at such a rate. Keep alert, pal, and be prepared to duck.

It says we can get away with doing a lot of things people in other cities can't. We can jaywalk, litter the streets and ignore no parking signs. The cops are too busy chasing down murderers, rapists and thieves to bother with such relatively minor violations.

It says we have intelligent leadership. The City Council has mostly ignored the crime thing while deciding how much of a raise it wants to give itself. That's plenty smart. Who's got time for crime when there's a real issue that must be dealt with?

It says we deserve a television show. There's Miami Vice and L.A. Law. Why not Atlanta Crime or Peachtree Pursesnatchers or Dead Designing Women?

It also says we need a new slogan to replace the frayed "Atlanta: The City Too Busy to Hate." How about "Atlanta: You Have the Right to Remain Silent..."

I have seen my civic duty and now I have done it.

Fraud is flooding those telephone wires

By SARAH OVERSTREET

When I began a new job two years ago as a television consumer reporter, people in my area were just beginning to get a curious new sort of junk mail.

Since the station I work for also runs a telephone consumer helpline, I was soon besieged with requests from consumers who had answered this mail. So I kind of grew up with this newest kind of consumer fraud, the "telemarketing scam," which was suddenly inundating mailboxes all over the country. It's called "telescam" instead of "mailscam" because this junk mail is only the bait. The crime is consummated over the victim's telephone, with the crime set up so the victim even initiates the call.

"You have been selected a winner in our give-away sweepstakes," the typical victims' postcards read, "and have definitely won one of the following four prizes: Chevy Blazer, $5,000 in cash, a complete home sound system or a $1,000 series EE bond." Afterwards comes a long-distance number to call; sometimes the bait is made more appealing by a toll-free number.

The make of the car and size of the cash awards sometimes differ, but you can count on one thing: at least one of the prizes is virtually worthless. The "complete home sound system" is a boom box with two small detachable speakers, the "French fur coat" is mangy rabbit at best and the "matching man's and woman's diamond watches" are $2 plastic digital jobs with $1 industrial-grade stones sloppily glued onto their dials.

On the other end of the line is the friendliest, folksiest, most convincing liar you're ever likely to meet; I know, because I have talked to hordes of them. Their basic lie is almost always the same: "Yes, you have definitely won one of the four prizes. All you have to do to receive it is to buy ($300, $400, $500) worth of (vitamins, water purification system, skin cream), but you'd really pay much more on the retail market, so you'll be getting a bargain anyway."

You might find it hard to believe that these thieves can cheat such a wide spectrum of victims — even sophisticated businesspeople have fallen victim to fake securities deals over the phone. I don't think you would wonder if you heard some of them. In my conversations with them, they've asked where I'm from and what I do and made small talk about common ground: theme parks in my state, my job, the St. Louis Cardinals baseball team.

They're good, and they're convincing: "This is just a promotion we're running to attract customers. We're just breaking even on this offer, but we're hoping once you see the quality of our products, you'll become a regular customer..."

In most cases, I couldn't help the victims who called me for help. By the time my viewers had realized their mistake, the "company" — a group of hired crooks in front of a bank of telephones set up in a rented room — had usually taken the money and run before authorities could find them.

And the authorities were hampered, too, to escape detection by local law enforcement officials, these telescam crooks usually solicit targets in other states. Only when local officials were alerted by victims in other states were they able to track down the swindlers.

In addition, fraud laws were written before this kind of practice was anticipated, and they just aren't adequate for this easy, ingenious new crime.

A few states have passed legislation to inhibit telemarketing scams, and more is on drawing boards across the country. But for now, the only sound advice when that phone rings and you're offered a deal that sounds "too good to be true," is "don't."

Believe me, it is.

Police arrest another cult slaying suspect

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Federal authorities have arrested one man and issued warrants for two more in connection with a cult of drug smugglers that reportedly slaughtered 15 people near the border city of Matamoros, Mexico, an official said.

In Mexico, officials suspect that a female leader of the cult may have been killed in Mexico City because she knew too much, a newspaper reported. The man arrested Monday in Houston, Serafin Hernandez Rivera of Brownsville, belongs to a family suspected of involvement in drug trafficking for at least 12 years in this border area, said Oran Neck, chief U.S. Customs agent in Brownsville.

Also named in the new warrants were Martin Quintana and Malio Fabio, two Mexican citizens believed to have participated in the sacrificial slaying and mutilation of University of Texas student Mark Kilroy, one of the group's 15 unearthened victims, Neck said. "Anybody that's involved in human sacrifices either directly or indirectly ought to be feared," Neck said, adding that Fabio and Quintana also are wanted on the same drug charges as Hernandez.

The three new warrants bring to 11 the number of U.S. warrants issued in the case. Four are in custody in Mexico, including Serafin Hernandez Garcia Jr., 20, son of Hernandez, and Elio Hernandez Rivera, 22, brother of the senior Hernandez.

Juan Benitez Ayala, the commander of the Federal Judicial Police unit stationed in Matamoros, told the Houston Chronicle that a purse and other belongings of Sara Vilareal Aldrete were left at a residence in Mexico City, where an occult altar was discovered.

Benitez told the newspaper that police found evidence that Aldrete did not accompany the cult's "godfather," Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, and two others who flew from McAllen to Mexico City, and then to Miami last Tuesday.

Constanzo and his two companions were identified by authorities as Alvaro De Leon Valdez and Quintana.

Neck said the trio took a Continental flight from McAllen to Mexico City the day before 12 mutilated bodies were discovered on the Santa Elena ranch 20 miles west of Matamoros. Aldrete was not with them, he added.

Benitez said the men may have killed her because she knew too much about the drug operation.

Federal Mexican charges were expected to be filed today against four men in custody in Matamoros.

Benitez said the men may have killed her because she knew too much about the drug operation.

Serafin Sr. is not believed to have been involved in the cult activity, only in drugs, officials said. His father, Brigido Hernandez — not accused in the case — owns the Santa Elena Ranch, U.S. and Mexican officials said.

Saul Hernandez Rivera, brother of Serafin Sr. and Elio Hernandez, was machine-gunned to death last year in Mexico, in what Mexican officials attributed to a drug-related execution, Neck said.

In the Santa Elena Ranch killings, some of the drug ring members practiced human sacrifices, influenced by the Palo Mayombe religion, in the belief the slayings and mutilations would bring magical protection to the illicit business. A movie, The Believers, which deals with a violent cult, influenced the sect's members, according to confessions, officials said.

Actor Martin Sheen, who starred in the movie, said Monday, "I am too shocked and deeply upset that anything I'm involved with could be so misinterpreted and lead to such a heinous crime."

Sheen, who also is known for his peace activism, starred as a police psychiatrist investigating the cult in the John Schlesinger film.

Two bodies of suspected drug traffickers missing since May were unearthened Sunday on a collective farm two miles south of the Rancho Santa Elena.

The newly discovered victims, Moises Castillo, 52, of Houston, and Hector de la Fuente, 39, of Edo San Francisco, west of Matamoros, did not appear tortured or mutilated like the other victims, officials said.

Castillo's father, Hidalgo Castillo, 76, of Brownsville, said he found $70, a pair of eyeglasses and a passport in his son's pocket when he unearthened the bodies.

Moises disappeared on May 30, 1988, the same day de la Fuente dropped out of sight, officials said.

Castillo said he first suspected his missing son might be at Ejido Santa Librada after children told him they saw something suspicious there while rabbit-hunting.

"They said, 'Look over there. There's a hand sticking out of the ground,'" Castillo said.

But Castillo added that he avoided digging it up until after the 13 bodies were discovered last week at Rancho Santa Elena, about a mile south of the border and 20 miles west of Matamoros.

"I was afraid the police might detain me," said Castillo, who feared that he somehow might be arrested if he told anyone about the body.

The two new victims were drug traffickers executed in a drug deal that went bad, Neck said.

Committee report: Education woes threaten U.S. economy

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Failure to improve the U.S. educational system could saddle America's economy with "enormous long-term costs," the congressional Joint Economic Committee said today in its first bipartisan report since 1980.

America is falling behind the rest of the world in promoting literacy and job skills even though it already spends more money per student than any other country in the world, the committee said.

While the panel did not break any new ground in recommending solutions to education problems or others facing the economy, it was able for the first time in nine years to issue a bipartisan report, supported by both Democrats and Republicans on the 20-member committee.

During the Reagan years, the panel of senators and House members became a battleground of warring economic ideologies with Democrats and Republicans unable to reach any common ground.

Members of the panel gave credit for the show of unity to Rep.

Lee Hamilton, the new chairman of the committee. Hamilton pushed hard for a joint report as the proper congressional response to President Bush's calls for a bipartisan effort to address the huge federal budget deficit and the country's other economic problems.

Hamilton, D-Ind., said members of the committee agreed that the most crucial thing Congress and the administration need to do is address the federal budget deficit.

"Realistic and prudent budgeting should be our top economic priority," Hamilton said.

The report, however, did not provide any specifics on how the gap between revenues and spending should be narrowed.

On education, the report cited statistics showing that the country has an overall dropout rate of 25 percent, with rates for blacks hitting 40 percent and for Hispanics exceeding 50 percent. Partly as a result, approximately 13 percent of 17-year-old Americans cannot read, write or count, the report said.

The committee said "education is perhaps the most prominent area where our nation's shortcomings threaten to impose enormous long-term costs."

"If we are to keep up with the rest of the industrialized world, we must do much better in promoting literacy, job skills and reducing the rate of elementary and secondary school dropouts," the panel concluded.

During the Reagan administration, the Democratic portion of the report stressed the country's plunging international fortunes, citing huge trade deficits and the emergence of the country as the world's largest debtor nation as evidence that Reagan's economic policies were not working. The Republicans on the panel would counter that Democrats were being unduly pessimistic in failing to give Reagan's policies credit for the longest peacetime expansion in history, a recovery from the 1981-82 recession which is now in its seventh year.

Among the economic problems which should be addressed, the report cited rising inflationary pressures, the pace of productivity increases, the financial problems facing the savings and loan industry, the Third World debt crisis and rising levels of debt.

FBI join in Salcido manhunt

GLEN ELLEN, Calif. (AP) — Authorities said they found a note asking God's forgiveness inside a man's blood-splattered car hours after he killed five people and shortly before he slit the throats of his three young daughters.

Other new details also emerged about the bloody rampage in which seven people died, including allegations that winery worker Ramon Salcido had tried to kill the wife of a co-worker but his gun jammed.

Salcido continued to elude authorities today as a 5-day-old manhunt stretched from Canada to Mexico.

The note written in Spanish was found inside the car along with a .22-caliber semi-automatic pistol and Salcido's Social Security card, according to documents filed Monday in federal court in San Francisco.

"Forgive me God, but this law made me do it. We could live better, me and my children but what can I do," said the note filed in support of an FBI request for a warrant charging Salcido with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. A magistrate granted the warrant. Officials did not say what "this law" meant, but Salcido reportedly was upset by a court order last week to pay nearly $6,000 in overdue child support and to make monthly payments of $511 for a 4-year-old daughter in Fresno.

Police found the car Friday afternoon in a San Rafael alley, about 15 miles south of Petaluma, near where his daughters were found Saturday.

Police believe two of the girls were slain Friday night and left at a trash dump. Salcido's 3-year-old daughter, Carmina, survived despite having her throat slashed from ear-to-ear.

Murder charges were filed Monday in Sonoma County against Salcido in connection with the slayings of his wife, Angela, 24, and daughters Sofia, 4, and Teresa, 1, and of co-worker Tracy Toovey.

The court papers said 33-year-old Kenneth Butti, who survived an attack outside his ranch Friday, told a detective Salcido had tried to shoot Butti's wife but the gun malfunctioned.

No charges have been filed in the three other slayings, of Salcido's mother-in-law, Marian Louise Richards, 47, and her daughters, Ruth, 12, and Marie, 8. Authorities believe they, Mrs. Salcido and Toovey were killed Friday morning.

Although photos and descriptions of the 5-foot-9, 180-pound Salcido have been circulated at California airports and border guards, Sonoma County Sheriff Richard Michaelson speculated Salcido hasn't strayed far.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

U.S. Gov't. Approves Patent Claims for New Diet Pill

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special) — An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors' claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone 'automatically' reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W992, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free (800) 527-9700, ext. W992.

Saudi Arabia arms dealer arrested in Marcos case

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Police today arrested Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi on a warrant issued by a U.S. judge in a racketeering case involving Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos, the Justice Ministry announced.

A ministry statement said Khashoggi was charged with "illegal property dealings" including with real estate owned by the former Philippines president and his wife and valuable paintings that disappeared from Manila's Metropolitan Museum after Marcos went into exile in February 1986.

Khashoggi was arrested at a Bern hotel and taken to the district jail in downtown Bern, police said.

The reputed broker of the arms deal at the heart of the Iran-Contra scandal was indicted in October in New York on racketeering and other charges in a case centering on the Marcos' alleged theft of $103 million from the Philippines treasury to buy art and real estate in New York City.

Khashoggi, 54, who has lived in Paris, is accused of submitting a false document to French officials who were seeking evidence at the request of U.S. in-

Khashoggi investigators.

He also posed as the owner of valuable paintings and New York property secretly held by the Marcoses, prosecutors have said.

The Swiss justice ministry statement said a warrant for his arrest was issued March 24. Under the terms of a U.S.-Swiss extradition treaty, U.S. authorities will have to formally request Khashoggi's extradition within the next 60 days.

Khashoggi has 10 days to file an appeal and request his release, the announcement said.

Chinese students demand more democracy

BEIJING (AP) — Hundreds of students mourning the death of reformist leader Hu Yaobang staged a sit-in early today at the Great Hall of the People, the seat of government, to demand more democracy and funding for education.

About 2,000 students marched for four hours from Beijing University and People's University to Tiananmen Square and about 300 sat outside the Great Hall, refusing to leave unless authorities agree to meet with them and publish their grievances.

In Shanghai, more than 1,500 students marched during the night chanting pro-democracy slogans.

The student marches were the largest in China since 1986-87 pro-democracy protests that resulted in Hu's forced resignation as Communist Party chief.

They reflected not just grief at Hu's death but students' unhappiness with their living conditions and bleak career prospects.

After today's march in Beijing, student representatives were allowed inside the Great Hall, which adjoins Tiananmen Square, to present their demands to officials of the national legislature.

The students demanded repudiation of past official campaigns against liberalism, freedom of speech and of the press, more money for education and abolition of Beijing regulations against street demonstrations.

They also demanded that senior leaders reveal their incomes and that the Communist Party reassess its 1987 ouster of Hu, who was accused of being too tolerant of student demonstrators and of liberalism.

Hu died Saturday after suffering a heart attack. Students in Beijing and Shanghai first put up posters mourning Hu and expressing dissatisfaction with his opponents, then took to the streets.

Students had marched to Tiananmen on Monday to lay a wreath for Hu.

March leaders today placed a 15-foot banner in Hu's honor on a monument in Tiananmen to revolutionary heroes.

One student climbed onto the monument and demanded the resignation of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo, a 22-member body. The students cheered wildly, and also cheered his call for a reassessment of Hu and a government apology for past unspecified mistakes.

A few police stationed around the square made no attempt to interfere.

Several hours after they began their protest under a hot sun, the head of the legislature's visitor's department, Luo Xiaozha, came out and told the students their demands "are too big for one person to decide on right away." He promised to report them to members of the legislature's standing committee.

Beijing University Vice President Luo Haocai urged them to return to campus "and rest." The students booed both officials and said they would disperse only if authorities agreed to publish a full account of their grievances in the state-run media and arrange a meeting for them with the legislative standing committee.

Dispelling myths of child abuse one aim of Awareness Week

I woke up gagging. I threw up. Then I screamed. He was gone and I was alone in my room in the darkness. Tomorrow would be my fourth birthday.

My mother came into the room. I was lying in bed. I was wet and sticky. She started screaming at me. She said I was a bad, wicked girl. I told her it was not my fault, it was Daddy. She hit me again and again. Finally, she stopped. She changed my sheets, she put me back into bed and left my room.

I still felt wet and sticky. I remember thinking that I must be a bad girl to get my bed all wet and sticky.

When I woke the next morning, my grandmother was sitting beside me. I tried to get up but I could not. I asked her what had happened to me. She patted my hand and said, "It'll go away child. Just pretend it didn't happen." So I forgot.

The effects of Janie's molestation were 40 years of physical and emotional problems. Now she remembers. She has begun the healing process that is so important to survivors of incest or rape. She now understands that all of this caused the problems she has had all of her life.

Dispelling the myths surrounding child sexual abuse is one of the aims of Sexual Assault Awareness Week co-sponsored by the Tralee Crisis Center and the Texas Department of Health, Sexual Assault Prevention and Crisis Services. The center assists women and children who are victims of domestic violence and/or sexual assault.

Myth: Sexual abuse only happens to girls.

Fact: Sexual abuse happens to girls and boys, however, only about 10% of reported victims are boys. Recent research has stated that child molesters report that 2/3's of their victims are male. This indicates a very high degree of underreporting by male victims. It is known that the average offender of boys molests almost 200 boys, the average offender of girls molests about 23 girls.

Myth: Sexual abuse rarely happens to children.

Fact: Research has shown that 38% of all females will have a "hands on" sexual offense committed against them by age 18 with 28% of all females having a "hands on" offense committed against them by age 14 years. Studies on boys vary from one in three to one in ten boys being molested by age 18 years.

Myth: Sexual abuse only occurs in low socio-economic homes with crowded living conditions.

Fact: Socio-economic status, race, religion, or educational level are not factors in sexual abuse. Sexual abuse can occur in any socio-economic level. However, upper and middle class families may be able to hide the abuse more easily than lower income families.

Myth: Child molesters are "dirty old men" that hang out at playgrounds.

Fact: Many child molesters are respected members of the community, regularly attending church, and supporting their families. Many have jobs that give them easy access to children, and are people that parents trust. Child molesters usually begin molesting as teenagers, and most are under age 35 years.

Myth: Strangers are most likely to molest a child.

Fact: Most molesters are known to their victims prior to the abuse. In fact, almost half of all children are molested by family members. Approximately 85% of all offenses involve someone known to the child prior to the abuse.

Myth: Child abuse is usually violent and always involves penetration.

Fact: Most sexual abuse of children does not involve overt violence. Children are more likely to be bribed, verbally threatened or tricked into sexual abuse. Sexual abuse occurs any time there is sexual contact between an older person and a child. This includes fondling of breasts, genitals, and/or the anus, oral penetration, as well as genital penetration by any means. Exposing the genitals to a child is also considered sexual abuse and a felony offense under Texas law.

Myth: Children frequently lie about being sexually abused.

Fact: Children rarely lie about being sexually abused. Children are more likely to not report abuse, or to minimize the abuse. It is very difficult for many children to tell about abuse.

Myth: Teenagers are more likely to lie about abuse to get out of other trouble or to seek revenge against a step-parent.

Fact: There is no indication that teens are more likely to lie about abuse. Most teen runaways, drug and alcohol addicts, and prostitutes have suffered abuse from which they are escaping. Many children are not even aware that the sexual abuse in their home is abnormal until adolescence, at which time they begin using various defense strategies that may cause them to be seen as troublemakers.

Myth: Allegations of sexual abuse during divorce are generally false.

Fact: Allegations of sexual abuse should be taken seriously at any time. Again, there is no indication that there are more false reports of sexual abuse during divorce. Divorce can be a result of a parent discovering sexual abuse by the other parent. Divorce can also be a safe time for children to reveal sexual abuse. Divorce can lead to parents revealing abuse known prior to the divorce because of fears of unsupervised visitation. An experienced investigator and/or therapist can usually tell when a child is lying or being prompted to lie.

Myth: Once a child has been sexually abused, they will never recover.

Fact: A child will almost always remember, but that doesn't mean they won't heal or recover from the abuse. The child who is believed, supported and protected after revealing the abuse has the groundwork laid for recovery. Also, many adults who were molested as children are now coming forward to reclaim themselves, and heal from abuse that may have happened many years ago. Healing is always possible with right counseling and support.

Myth: Prevention programs scare children.

Fact: Prevention programs are generally designed to empower children and teach them safety skills. We teach our children skills such as fire and street safety and this does not usually scare them. Prevention programs teach awareness of body safety.

Thirty-five years a long wait for public vindication

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the boy who falsely accused a girl of stealing, found out he was wrong, then sent flowers to her in a classroom brought back memories. Flowers are nice, but had I been that girl I would have preferred receiving his apology publicly in a crowded lunchroom — the same place he accused her of stealing.

I was in a new job and was in charge of all current filing cabinets. About 15 co-workers and I had our desks in an open area without walls — not even glass partitions. The No. 1 boss asked me to bring him a certain file. I couldn't find it. He had a visitor with him who wanted to see that file. I looked for that file and couldn't find it. I knew I had it in my filing cabinet, but it was gone!

The boss loudly ridiculed me for my inefficiency — in the presence of my co-workers. I wanted to die. About an hour later he called me into his office. I expected to be fired.

Instead I got a quiet and very formal apology in the presence of nobody! He told me that the purchasing agent had taken the file from the cabinet during my lunch hour and neglected to tell me. The purchasing agent had heard him chewing me out, but didn't say a word until the visitor had left. Then he told the boss. He never did apologize to me for taking that file without telling me — or failing to speak up while my boss was humiliating me. My respect for both men was destroyed that summer day in 1954.

If you choose to publish this, please do use my name.

(MRS.) FRANCES CRUM, SEARCY, ARK.

DEAR FRANCES: Thirty-five years is a long time to wait for public vindication. I hope a few witnesses to that incident read this. Have a nice day, Frances.

DEAR ABBY: Help! I will be getting married in July. Presently, my fiancée and I each have our own homes, so we do not need any of the usual wedding presents — small appliances, silverware, crystal, glassware, pots,

Dear Abby

pans, dishes, etc. However, we could use cash gifts that could be combined to purchase larger and costlier items. A large number of guests are expected from out of town, and we will not be able to return gifts to the stores.

How can I tactfully state this to our invited guests? Please print this as soon as possible so that I may have your response before ordering wedding invitations. My fiancée and I agree to abide by your recommendation.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: If you are asked if you prefer cash for a wedding gift, by all means, say yes. But under no circumstances should you request cash. I presume those who are invited to your wedding are aware that both you and the groom have your own homes and are not in need of household items, so it would seem plausible that a gift of cash would be offered.

However, if you were considering including a suggestion of "cash" with your wedding invitations, please don't. It's tacky.

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for telling your readers about the book "Flying Without Wings," by Dr. Arnold Beisser (Doubleday). Excellent! My husband has severe emphysema and is on oxygen full time. We got the book, I read it aloud, and we enjoyed and discussed it.

It gave me a totally new respect and feeling for my husband's condition. He could identify with the author, who was severely disabled because of polio.

Again, you have helped many. MRS. GERALD O. TRUDELL, MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR ABBY: I recently started dating a physician who has genital herpes and belongs to a herpes support group. I have oral herpes (cold sores). He has told me that when he does not have any lesions, he is not contagious and he refuses to use a condom at these times. My girlfriend says that this is not true — that genital herpes is less transmissible when there are no visible lesions, but it is transmissible at all times, and he should use a condom during every sexual encounter.

My doctor/boyfriend says his herpes is no more contagious than my cold sores. Abby, since I rarely get breakouts and have never transmitted my cold sores to anyone, I fail to see how genital herpes could be any different.

I want to believe the doctor, but what my girlfriend told me is confusing. Should he wear a condom at all times? Who is correct? Are there any good books on the subject?

CONFUSED IN TORONTO

DEAR CONFUSED: Your girlfriend is mistaken. Herpes is not transmissible at all times. For a person to be infectious there must be active herpes virus present. If there are no symptoms, sores or active lesions, your partner is not infectious. One of the best books on this subject is "Herpes: Cause and Control," by William C. Wickert, M.D. Although it's now out of print, the book is available in libraries. It's written in language that is easily understood by people who are not medically trained.

SHOOTING PAINS

If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excruciating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In career situations today do not bank too heavily upon people who have proven to be lukewarm allies. These are the individuals who could prove to be your stiffest opposition. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-34-28. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Duties and responsibilities that you leave unattended today will weigh heavily on your mind. Instead of being plagued by guilt, do what's expected of you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be better off today passing up a social arrangement where you'll have to cater to a big shot's wife or clients you don't appreciate. Your presence isn't apt to be missed.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If entertaining at home today, don't put your guests in an awkward position where they have to arbitrate a domestic squabble. It could ruin the affair.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Usually you are courteous and thoughtful in dealing with people from all walks of life. Today, however, you might treat subordinates in a demeaning manner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be careful today that you do not get involved in something where you have to risk a lot in order to gain a little. Gambles that are structured in this way may not be worth the returns.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There's a possibility a family member might resurrect an old problem today that will cause dissension in the household. Do your best to bury it quickly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone who tends to gossip may tell you something today about a mutual friend that is detrimental to this person's reputation. Subdue inclinations to pass it on until the facts are verified.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Unless you are careful today there is a chance that the folly of a friend could end up costing you money. Don't let an undisciplined person make any financial commitments for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In order to achieve two important objectives today, you will have to divest yourself of wishy-washy tactics. Success will be dependent upon boldness, focus and tenacity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There's a possibility that you haven't learned the lesson you should have from a painful past experience. Today you might make a similar type of mistake.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is not a good day to seek favors to help further your ambitions. If you are granted what you request, chances are it will have strings attached.
