Absentee voting light in both city, school trustee elections

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Absentee voting in Pampa city and school board elections ends today, but barring last-minute voters, the absentee turnout will remain light in both city and school elections.

City Secretary Phyllis Jeffers said 392 registered voters had cast ballots in city elections through this morning. That puts this year's absentee voting at just over half of 1988's city election absentee voting.

Last year 607 persons voted prior to the general election.

At stake this election is the majority of seats on the City Commission. Incumbent David McDaniel is running against Commissioner Richard Peet for the mayoral position. Both candidates have stated they believe this election will be a clear decision between two very different approaches to city government.

Incumbent commissioners Ray Hupp, a vice president of IRI International, and Joe Reed, owner of Sir Plus and several trucks which he leases, are running against Delores Spurrier and Robert Dixon, respectively.

Voting in the city election will begin Saturday morning at 7 a.m. and run through 7 p.m. Sites for voting will be: Ward 1, Travis Elementary; Ward 2, Austin Elementary; Ward 3, Lovett Memorial Library Auditorium; and Ward 4, Horace Mann Elementary.

City officials said ward maps will be posted at each voting site to help voters know which ward to vote in.

"Voters need to please bring their voter registration card," Jeffers said, "and have it available to hand to the clerk when they get to the table. This makes the lines go more rapidly and the whole thing speeds up."

She said in years past Wards 1 and 2, located in the northeast and northwest sections of the city, have had the largest voter turnout.

Elections for the two unopposed school board seats currently held by Jim Duggin and Sherry McCavit will be held in the music building at Pampa High School from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

"We've had 49 or 50 absentee voters," said Jerry Haralson, district business manager. "I suppose no contests is the reason for the low turnout."

Haralson said absentee voting in the two races would go through 4:30 p.m. today at Carver Center. Absentee voting in city elections closes at 5 p.m. today.

House panel approves ag bill keeping elected commissioner

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — After a House committee approved a bill that would keep the state agriculture commissioner's post an elective one, Gov. Bill Clements declined to say whether he would veto the measure.

"I understand the House is considering a bill and until I see what's coming out I'm not making any decision on my own," Clements said Monday.

The House Government Organization Committee approved continuing the Agriculture Department, including an elected commissioner, by an 8-0 vote. The legislation already has passed the Senate.

Clements, a Republican, has said in the past that the idea of an appointed agriculture commissioner "might be an idea worth pursuing."

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, a Democrat, has been criticized by some farm and chemical groups for enforcement of pesticide regulations and an attempt to sell hormone-free beef to European countries.

The Texas Farm Bureau recently urged that the elected post be abolished and a commission of gubernatorial appointees be placed over the department.

The bill approved by the committee would maintain the department as the lead agency in pesticide control. It would increase penalties for pesticide law violations, but not as much as previous proposals.

State Rep. Lena Guerrero, who is sponsoring the measure, said that after House passage of the sunset bill, the Agriculture Department's fate will be in Clements' hands.

"We've got the votes to pass this bill in its current form," said Guerrero, D-Austin.

Rebecca Lightsey, of the Texas Consumer Association, said the reduction in pesticide penalties was "a great disappointment."

"It could conceivably be cheaper to poison people and pay the fine than it would be to comply with the law," Lightsey said.

The bill would cap civil fines at $15,000. Fines currently are $1,000 per day of violation, and proposals had been made to raise the level to up to $10,000 per day with no cap.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, said the cap is needed.

"Not everybody is a corporate farmer. You start talking about $10,000 a day, and you're going to break them," he said.

County decides to wait for jail plan response

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Despite Commissioner Ted Simmons' efforts to start action on the county jail problems during the Gray County Commissioners' Court meeting Monday, the rest of the commission opted to wait for a response from the Texas Commission on Jail Standards architect.

"We need badly to get to work on this thing," Simmons said. Simmons proposed that the commission appoint a committee of commissioners, citizens and Sheriff Jim Free to hire an architect and start a feasibility study.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy reported that he had written a letter to the TCJS architect but had not received any response from the letter.

"Since we already wrote a letter (to the TCJS architect), I think we owe it to them to at least wait until we get an answer before we get ahead of them," Commissioner Jim Greene, Precinct 2, pointed out.

Commissioner Joe Wheeley, Precinct 1, said he would like to visit other jails, both those built brand-new and others located in renovated buildings.

A jail of 96 prisoners or less would be best for planning purposes, Kennedy said, since one jailer is needed for every 48 prisoners.

"We should think not only of a maximum security facility but also a minimum security," he said. "The majority that come before county court do not need maximum security, but they do need to be in jail."

"We don't need them to thumb their nose at us and say, 'Ah, ha, you can't lock me up,'" he added.

Kennedy warned that the new jail facility will increase the county's operating budget "immensely," adding not only will jail costs be higher, but also all the related costs.

"If the public hasn't already realized it, I'm saying it now. There'll be an increase in taxes," Kennedy said.

Sheriff Free told commissioners that he was looking at possibly renting a building on the edge of town for minimum security prisoners.

"Let's let them get out there and do some work on county roads," Free said.

Simmons

Simmons asked Free to come up with cost estimates of implementing his plan.

Justices of Peace Bob Muns and Wayne Roberts brought another problem before the court Monday — increasing costs for autopsy services.

Commissioners budgeted $7,000 for autopsy services for 1989. By April 17, $5,869.50 had been spent on autopsies and two more autopsy bills were waiting to be paid.

Autopsies cost the county $800 each, $500 for the autopsy itself, $300 for Lefor Ambulance Service for transporting the body. Additionally, the county pays a $100 per month retainer to Dr. Ralph Erdmann of Amarillo for pathology services.

Commissioners solved the immediate problem by transferring $3,000 from the Highland General Hospital fund to pay for the present budget overrun.

But after speaking at length with Muns and Roberts about autopsies and when an autopsy was needed, commissioners agreed to look at finding a medical examiner for the county. To be a medical examiner, the person must be a medical doctor and be licensed by the State Board of Medical Examiners.

Muns said autopsies are always required in the case of suicide or homicide. Investigative purposes or the good of the community are also reasons for autopsy, he said.

"If a doctor can't give you a (cause of death), then you have no choice but to call for an autopsy," he said.

Recent changes in state law now require a specific cause of death, the JPs said. "They won't take heart failure, cardiac arrest or respiratory arrest as a cause of death anymore," Muns said.

County commissioners also took the following actions at the meeting Monday:

- Transferred $10,700 to the State Health Nurse's budget to cover office rent not budgeted for 1989, after signing a lease agreement for office space in the Hughes Building.

- Granted a request from Commissioner Greene to transfer $5,000 from his fuel budget to his labor budget.

- Allowed Sheriff Free to put $2,000 in prisoner medical fund and $500 in the uniform fund from his contract labor budget.

- Signed a resolution allowing the Adult Probation department to seek an approximate $10,000 grant for a computer system through the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

- 57 County Attorney Bob McPherson was provided $4,100 from the Court House and Jail Fund to offset a shortfall in the insufficient check collection fund used for remodeling his offices.

- Paid $237,392.24 in salaries and bills.

No action was taken on the following agenda items:

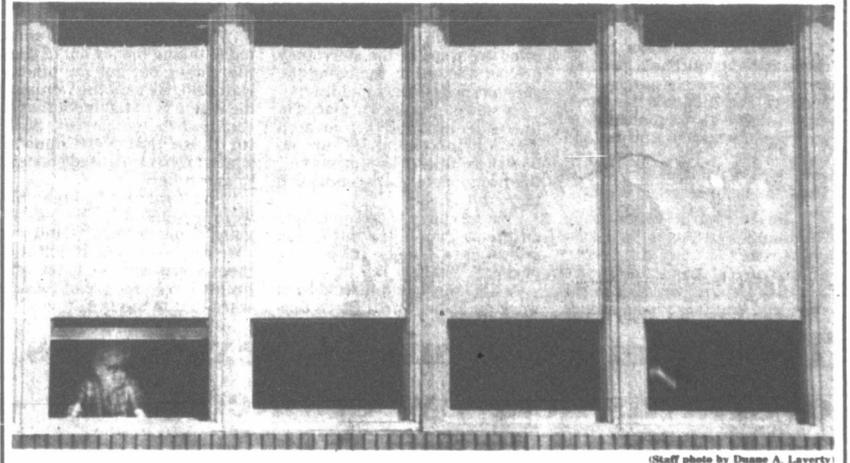

- A request from Tralee Crisis Center for office space. Commissioners tabled the request until they know more of what the agency specifically wants and needs.

- Commissioners tabled action on a letter from ASCS regarding office lease agreement as they continue to come to terms with federal paperwork involved.

- Commissioners discussed the county's policy for payment of workmen's compensation claims but took no action since Commissioner Gerald Wright was ill and not present at the meeting. Wright had brought the matter before the commission earlier.

The next Gray County Commissioners' Court meeting is set for 9:30 a.m., May 12, in the second floor court room of Gray County Courthouse.

Release of document used in North trial argued in court

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jury deliberations at Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial resumed for the 10th day this morning, a day after the presiding judge said a court challenge by the news media threatens the proceedings.

The panel, which had met for nearly 46 hours in the nine previous sessions, has given U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell no notes in a week.

While the nine women and three men went about their work Monday, attention in the courtroom focused on a dispute in which 10 news organizations want access to a trial document that summarizes highly secret intelligence intercepts of a CIA-assisted shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran.

The government says national security would be jeopardized by disclosing the stipulation, which is part of the evidence before the jury, and Gesell says the matter could force a mistrial.

It is highly unusual to supply documents to the jury which are not part of the public record in the case. Gesell has already ruled against releasing the document, and Monday's proceedings were designed to create a record so that an appeals court could review his decision.

"If you prevail in this matter," Gesell told a lawyer for the 10 news organizations, "one possibility is I must discharge the jury."

The judge did not elaborate on how forced disclosure could lead to the mistrial.

But one possibility might be a protest by the Justice Department that national security secrets were about to be disclosed. That would force Gesell to withdraw the document from the jury's consideration, which in turn could lead North's lawyers to say he could not get a fair trial.

After the court session, lawyer Timothy Dyk told reporters that "the jury has no security clearance, the jury's free to discuss it, then the rest of the country ought to see what the jury has."

Under the Classified Information Procedures Act, the government may file an affidavit with the court if it fears disclosure of a classified document would harm national security. That act can lead to dismissal of the indictment or the specific charge affected by the information.

The stipulation of facts agreed to by the government and North summarizes messages intercepted by the National Security Agency on the shipment of Hawk missiles in November 1985 from Israel to Iran with the help of the CIA.

North is charged with claiming in a false chronology that no one in the U.S. government knew until January 1986 about the missiles. Part of his defense is that then-CIA Director William Casey and national security adviser John Poindexter knew about the missiles from the intercepted messages but perpetuated the false story. North also said former national security adviser Robert McFarlane orchestrated the false chronology.

The news organizations' disclosure motion was rejected by Gesell on April 22 on grounds that the stipulation "is a classified document."

The ruling was appealed and the higher court sent the matter back to Gesell for a hearing on national security issues involved, saying it could not make a decision without having such a record.

The media organizations involved in the case are The Associated Press; Cable News Network Inc.; Capital Cities-ABC Inc.; CBS Inc.; Dow Jones & Co. Inc.; National Broadcasting Co. Inc.; National Public Radio; The New York Times Co.; the Times Mirror Co.; and The Washington Post.

New odometer statements required

AUSTIN — Beginning April 29, people selling vehicles in Texas must complete a new type of odometer statement. Vehicle buyers must acknowledge the seller's representation of the odometer reading on the statement.

Other changes to the odometer disclosure form, required with vehicle title transfers, are warnings to the buyer and spaces for the addresses and printed names of both parties.

The new form, which has been sent to county tax assessor-collectors by the Highway Department's Division of Motor Vehicles, must be used beginning April 29 or the title transaction could be rejected.

Changes are being made under the federal Truth In Mileage Act of 1986 which aims to unify buyer protection in title documents from state to state.

A warning has been added to the form that incomplete or false information may result in fines, imprisonment or both. If the odometer does not reflect actual mileage, the seller must check a box stating that fact.

The form need not be used in the sale of private vehicles 10 years old or older, commercial vehicles that carry two tons or more, or vehicles that are not self-propelled.

The new disclosure statement, Form 40, is available from county tax assessor-collector offices and regional offices of the Division of Motor Vehicles of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. Other forms may be used as long as they meet the new federal standards and have a notary block.

Salvation Army thefts investigated

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

A volunteer at the Salvation Army Thrift Store, 406 S. Cuyler, has been accused of three thefts at the store Monday involving purses belonging to other volunteers and employees.

Police said the woman, whose name is being withheld pending the filing of formal charges, told officers she mistook the three purses, owned by volunteers Augustina Silva, 545 S. Barnes, and Maria Silva, 723 S. Ballard, and employee Alicia DeLeon, 624 N. Frost, as being donated items.

However, local Salvation Army commander Lt. Don Wildish said employees' and volunteers' purses and personal items are stored in a special location in the store and that there is no excuse for anyone rummaging through them.

"The person who was picked up was not an employee," Wildish said. "She was a volunteer who helped bag up clothes and do sweeping and mopping. She knows no one is allowed (in the area where the purses are kept.)"

He said each volunteer is oriented on areas in the store they are not allowed in, including the one that houses personal items.

He said the purses are placed in the secure area and then covered with a blanket to make sure no one is tempted to "mistake" them for donated items or disturb them in any way.

"We will have to do something different. This is the third time we've had thefts involving purses," Wildish said.

He said the volunteer had been working at the Thrift Store during each of the previous two incidents involving purses, but did not know if she was a suspect in either of the other thefts.

Acting Chief of Police Ken Hall said police were beginning an investigation into the matter and would forward their information to the district attorney.

"We have a suspect who admitted to taking money out of one of the purses but not the others," Hall said. He said the woman indicated in her statement that she confused the employees' purses for those that were donated, which probably caused police not to arrest her.

"She said she thought they were donated and she was just going through them," Hall said.

"We will be looking at that statement along with what the other people have to say and then forward that to the D.A."

Truck carrying military explosives overturns near Sweetwater today

By WENDY E. LANE Associated Press Writer

SWEETWATER (AP) — A truck loaded with military explosives overturned on Interstate 20 near this West Texas town early today, prompting authorities to consider an evacuation before determining the explosives were disarmed.

Local authorities said the truck carried 48 rocket pods containing 644 M-77 grenades and a quantity of Class B rocket fuel.

After the trailer flipped, the casing on one of the rocket pods was bent one inch from a detonator, which was packaged separately, said Trooper Don Ranefeld of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

An evacuation order to move all residents within 3,000 feet of the accident scene was lifted after an investigator inspected the truck. One person in a house about 200 yards from the accident site was temporarily evacuated.

Explosives experts from Fort Sill and Fort Hood in Texas inspected the accident site about two miles east of Sweetwater and determined there was no danger, officials at the scene from the DPS and Dyess Air Force Base at Abilene said.

"They inspected the scene and told us everything was fine and there was no danger," said Sgt. Don Willingham of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The seven-mile stretch of interstate was expected to be closed into the afternoon and traffic rerouted as the explosives were loaded onto trucks for transfer to Dyess, about 40 miles east of Sweetwater, where they were to be examined further.

Officials at nearby Dyess were called in as advisers because the accident dealt with a military payload, said Col. Bob Richards, a combat support group commander from the base.

Armed guards from Dyess kept the curious away from the site around the overturned truck.

Byron Dale Robertson, the driver of the truck, said a deer crossed his path as he drove down the interstate.

"All I know is I saw a deer and I swerved to miss it," said Robertson, of Fouke, Ark., who was treated at a local hospital for minor injuries and released.

Robertson's passenger, his father, Jimmy Robertson, was not injured in the accident.

I-20 traffic was rerouted through the city of Sweetwater, said Sue May, a dispatcher with Sweetwater Police Department.

State Highway Department spokeswoman Lona Reeves said traffic was being rerouted from I-20 several miles around Sweetwater, on State Highway 70, back to U.S. Highway 80.

Officials said the truck was en route from Camden, Ark., to Concord, Calif., from where the explosives were to be transported to Korea.

The rockets were manufactured at LTV Corp. in Camden. Deaton Inc., the owner of the truck is based in Birmingham, Ala.

Bill would prohibit sex-selective abortion

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Bills that would prohibit abortion on the basis of the fetus' gender and require parental consent for minors to have abortions "are really designed to confuse the public," says a pro-choice activist.

"The bills actually are blatantly bad for women in the long run, and yet on the surface they seem very, very reasonable," Phyllis Dunham, executive director of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League, told reporters Monday.

The measures were before the House State Affairs Committee.

The president of Texans United for Life said in testimony prepared for the committee that aborting a fetus based on sex is "the most frivolous use of abortion yet invented."

'The bills actually are blatantly bad for women in the long run, and yet on the surface they seem very, very reasonable.'

Bill Price distributed newspaper articles, including one saying national surveys indicate the percentage of geneticists who approve of prenatal diagnosis for sex selection rose from 1 percent in 1973 to nearly 20 percent in 1988.

"It is deeply distressing that the abortion mentality in our country has resulted in such a trivializing of the value of human life that even that tiny unborn baby's gender is now enough reason, in some people's minds, to kill her," Price said.

Dunham said that women who have abortions after tests such as amniocentesis, which may be used to determine the sex of the fetus or the presence of disease, are "dealing with severe fetal abnormalities or severe health problems."

"What this bill would mean is that that handful of women, and it's only a handful each year in this state, would be subjected to justifying to the state their motives for having those abortions," she said. "Women don't seek these kinds of abortions and physicians don't perform abortions on the basis of gender selection. It just doesn't happen."

Price said in his testimony that "maybe there are only a few unborn babies being killed for the most frivolous reason ever invented, but let me ask you, how many of these sex-selection killings would I have to document to get your support?"

Of the parental consent measure, Dunham said at least 80 percent of minors already involve at least one parent in the decision to have an abortion. Those who do not, cannot for such reasons as incest or violence in the home, she said.

"You're talking about kids hurting themselves, self-inducing, throwing themselves down stairs, using knitting needles or going across the border," she said. "The bottom line is it's going to hurt some kids and possibly kill some."

Price said a Texas Poll survey showed 70 percent of Texans support parental consent legislation.

"Frankly, I am surprised that we are still debating the issue of parental consent," he said. "This Legislature has shown no reluctance to enact laws in other areas for the special care and protection of minors."

Another measure before the committee asks Attorney General Jim Mattox to withdraw his signature from the friend-of-the-court brief he signed in support of the Roe vs. Wade decision. The U.S. Supreme Court is considering a case that could overturn that 1973 ruling, which legalized abortion.

Jury rules abortion doctor has right to privacy at his home

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A jury has awarded a local physician $810,000 in damages, ruling that his right to privacy outweighs the rights of pickets to assemble outside his home to protest his abortion practice.

The jury of seven women and five men voted 10-2 Monday that the picketers should pay Eduardo Aquino $810,000 in damages.

"I believe in the right to picket, and I am an advocate of the First Amendment to the Constitution," Aquino said after the verdict, "but anyone who abuses those rights should be penalized."

Outspoken abortion opponent Cliff Zarsky, one of two lawyers who represented the defendants without a fee, said he will move for a new trial, and if that fails, he will appeal the verdict.

Jurors ruled that the protests, characterized by both sides as peaceful, caused mental anguish to Aquino, his wife Mercedes and their four children.

The damages included $140,000 in past and future suffering of the couple, $170,000 in past and future suffering of the four children, and $500,000 in punitive damages for gross negligence in picketing the family home.

Defendants in the case were Eliseo Valenzuela Jr., Charles W. Bolton, Carol Setliff, Sara Hood, Wade Pritchett, Lynn Pritchett, T.C. Chedden, Dawn McGee, David Martinez and South Texans for Life.

Judge Jack Hunter scheduled a hearing today to hear arguments on whether to issue a permanent injunction against future picketing by the defendants. "I feel my family will be left alone now," Aquino said. His wife said, she was "very much relieved" as she wiped away tears.

Saying he was "not really interested in the money," Aquino said he feels the verdict says that those who abuse one's right to privacy "will be punished."

The trial ended at a time when the U.S. Supreme Court is considering a case that could cause it to reconsider its 1973 ruling, Roe vs. Wade, that women have a constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

The question before the Supreme Court is a dispute over a Missouri law that limits abortions in that state.

Aquino said he has been performing abortions since 1978 and anti-abortionists had picketed his office since 1982. They began picketing at his home in March of 1988, the same month the suit was filed.

The physician testified that his wife suffered from depression and ulcers, that one son had been institutionalized and that his three school-age children suffered academically after the picketing began at his home.

In closing arguments to the jury lawyer Tony Bonilla, who represented the Aquino family, said the defendants' actions constituted "an invasion of the privacy of his home... they were trying to impose their views on his family."

Zarsky argued that the pickets were peaceful, broke no laws and felt it was their "duty to protect unborn children."

Wright episode typical of 'Record' inserts

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright's use of the Congressional Record to plug a home video product made by his wife's employer follows a long Capitol Hill tradition: Just about anything can be printed, and is, at taxpayers' expense.

For more than 100 years the Congressional Record has provided an uncritical compilation of remarks said — and unsaid — by members of Congress.

It is printed five days a week, every week, and runs 200 or so pages on average. It costs $18 million a year, and is produced by some 2,000 government employees working around the clock.

"It's like producing the Sunday New York Times, five times a week," said Duane Nystrom, editor for the Congressional Publications Office. "It is not a small project."

The embattled speaker, already fighting allegations he violated House ethics rules, was the object of fresh reports Monday in The Wall Street Journal about remarks he had included in the Congressional Record of Dec. 9, 1985.

His 350-word statement amounted to an effusive endorsement of the Pacific Institute's family video series.

"Marvelously useful," Wright gushed. And available "at a nominal price within the range of most American families."

Wright didn't mention the $36,000 a year annual salary that the company was paying his wife, Betty. Her job with another company is the basis for some of the ethics charges now facing the speaker.

The Seattle-based Pacific Institute said it didn't ask for Wright's remarks. But it reprinted them later in promoting sales of the tapes at $34.95 each or $400 for a full set of 21.

The revelation can't help Wright in the fight for his political future, but no one is suggesting this is the first time the Congressional Record provided an official-looking plug.

Nor is it the first embarrassment involving the Record.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., can vouch for that. In 1986, Helms inserted into the Record a legal brief filed by a group opposing "dial-a-porn" telephone services, Citizens for Decency Through Law.

That issue of the Congressional Record became a bestseller. Included in the brief, and printed in the record, was the full, X-rated text of one of the tapes. "Hi, I'm Nellie from High Society," it began.

Both episodes were possible because of the way the Record is edited. It isn't.

Or at least, it isn't edited for content. Copy is edited for errors and grammar, but little else.

"There is virtually no censorship of comments put on the record," he said. "The only thing that would be excised from the record would be obscenities."

Content, he said, is governed by the rules of the House and Senate. The Record prints what is said on the floor of the House or Senate, and members are free to submit additional statements. Remarks that violate the rules, such as attacks on another member, would be edited out.

In an effort to make the Record more faithfully reflect what was said, Congress a few years ago decided to have remarks that were edited or added later appear in a different typeface.

But inserts can be as lengthy as a member of Congress wants. Much of the Pentagon Papers, for example, was included.

The Record is printed through the night and available the next morning, and it is also available electronically by computer. It has a press run of 24,000 copies, and Nystrom figures it costs about $500 per page to print.

Congressional rules generally bar members from receiving benefits as a result of improperly exerting their position, and guidelines caution lawmakers against becoming so "affiliated with a particular enterprise" that it creates an appearance of impropriety.

Wright declined to answer questions Monday about his video plug. But Nystrom says he doubts Wright's use of the Record was unique.

"If there was something wrong with that, every member of Congress would be guilty of doing that," he said. "Everyone uses the Record to promote or call attention to some activity within their district."

"I would see it as a matter of degrees," he said.

Teaching's a learning experience

There have been few moments of out-and-out bravery in my life. I've never rushed into a burning building or jumped in front of a locomotive to pull a baby to safety.

But last week I did something really brave — I worked for a whole afternoon as a substitute teacher.

I rank teaching right up there with being a policeman or a tax collector when it comes to professions where you lay your life on the line.

Last Wednesday I risked everything. I stepped in front of a class of third-graders without even wearing protective gear. I hadn't been in the classroom two minutes when one of the children raised his hand.

"Yes?"

"Can I, you know my teacher lets, my Momma said that, and, see I have to, 'cause if, well, see, and I gotta, 'cause there is this, and so, can I?"

"Huh?"

The child grabbed his crotch and repeated the entire soliloquy. The sign language got to me before the words sunk in. "Do you need to go to the bathroom?"

"Yeah, 'cause see, I had to, there was this, my daddy said I couldn't, uh, my teacher had to, I gotta, 'cause, see, when I was a baby I had, yeah."

"Go to the bathroom. Go and hurry back."

The child started for the door. Ten other children raised their hands.

"Can we, see we need to, our teacher said, and we have to, my stomach, see, for lunch we..."

I walked the entire class to the bathroom, knowing I had been licked before I hardly got started. The same thing happened when one child needed his pencil sharpened at the beginning of science. It took him longer to ask permission to sharpen the pencil than it would have to cut down a tree and whittle a new one.

And when I allowed the child to sharpen his pencil, suddenly the entire class was faced with the threat of somebody else having a pencil that was sharper than theirs. Science started 15 minutes late, but every child in the class had a sharp pencil.

I led them in a stirring discussion of eclipses that was capped with an experiment I remember from my own days of serving time in Stalag Third Grade.

I took a flashlight and fixed its beam on a globe. I

Off Beat

By Bear Mills

then took a tennis ball and held it so its shadow fell on the "earth."

"How does this kind of eclipse look to people on earth?" I asked.

"Like a giant holding a tennis ball out in space?"

"Like the batteries in the sun are low?"

"Like the moon needs to shave because it's too fuzzy?"

It was time to cut my losses and move on.

Math class was the time I had been dreading all day. To mention third grade and math in the same sentence is like talking about snakes AND a shot at the doctors.

My own third grade my teacher was named Mrs. Finksterwald. She hated children, which is why she became a teacher — she wanted to wreak havoc with as many young minds as possible, punishing us for something some third-grader had done to her a long time ago.

She wrecked me in math class. In first and second grade I was a straight A student. In Mrs. Finksterwald's room I was a math dirt-for-brains. I never recovered and I dislike math to this very day.

But I was determined that for the hour I was a third-grade math teacher it would be more fun than I remember my own class being. We laughed and took our time and never got too serious about it when somebody didn't understand.

Know what? I — the math idiot — taught them some multiplication. Know what else? Years after Mrs. Finksterwald, I quit hating third grade and math all in one math lesson.

I don't know what the kids got out of my after-noon as a teacher, but I got the education of a lifetime.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

We should welcome them as contributors

Government agencies seldom come right out and ask for absolute, unaccountable power to do whatever they please to whatever victim they choose. No, they talk of efficiency and discouraging frivolous actions that take up the valuable time of dedicated public servants.

As C.S. Lewis noted in a preface to The Screwtape Letters, most of the evil in this sorry century has been perpetrated or initiated by people with clean fingernails who wear suits and ties.

Thus the Immigration and Naturalization Service has drafted a plan that would let INS personnel conduct informal proceedings to consider any foreigner's claim for political asylum. It would "provide for summary exclusion of aliens who seek asylum at ports of entry who fail to make a credible showing" of eligibility. Immigrants would have no right to request a hearing before an immigration judge or any other judge. The INS would be judge, jury and executioner.

Under the present system, denial of asylum by an INS functionary can be appealed to the INS district director, to an immigration judge, to the Board of Immigration Appeals, and then to a federal circuit court. This can be time-consuming, but it sometimes corrects hasty judgments.

No doubt the system is sometimes used by people who are not qualified for asylum under present rules to stay a few months longer before being deported. But that's a small price to pay for an ongoing check on the universal human tendency to abuse power.

The INS proposal is to amend current law; congressional approval would be required. That undermines once again any claim that the agency simply enforces laws but doesn't make them. The INS is actively working to change the law to the sort of law it would prefer.

If the law on political asylum is to be changed, it would be preferable to eliminate the invidious distinction between "political" and "economic" refugees. Current law permits asylum for refugees who can demonstrate a well-founded fear of persecution because of race, creed or political opinions of activities. Thus we often hear applicants dismissed scornfully: "They aren't in danger of persecution at all. They just want to escape poverty."

If being denied the right to even try to make a living — to do what human beings in a world of scarce resources must do to survive — isn't persecution, it's hard to know what is. For poverty in repressive regimes is hardly ever mere happenstance. It results from a systematic denial of political and economic rights, often exacerbated by civil war or specific repression campaigns.

Those with the foresight and grit to try to escape such conditions before being singled out for individual persecution shouldn't be turned away because "their only problem is poverty." They should be welcomed as people who can contribute to any new homeland fortunate enough to attract them.

Lotteries fleece fools for fun

CHICAGO — A fool and his money are soon parted, so I guess it's just as well that a lot of the money recently separated from fools here in Illinois went into the state lottery pool instead of being squandered on something else.

After all, as we were reminded by state officials rationalizing this seamy spectacle, the betting frenzy brought on by one of the biggest jackpots in American history provided a handsome windfall to the noblest of causes, namely education.

Spurred by lust for a grand prize of $69.9 million, Lotto customers spent nearly $96 million on tickets. Under state law, $38 million of that pot went straight into the school fund.

So losing bettors got to comfort themselves with the knowledge that their money would go to improve Illinois education. Judging from the lottery fever, the improvement is desperately needed.

Lotto, after all, is about the worst gamble you can find. For the mid-April drawing, the odds against picking the winning numbers were 13 million to 1. That's about equal to the chances of getting a date with Debra Winger by running a personal ad in the Egg and Poultry News. Yet on one day alone, $15 million in tickets were sold.

The mystery is why people of outwardly sound mind line up to be fleeced. The state pays out a pitiful 51 cents for each dollar bet — which means that a habitual bettor is virtually guaranteed to lose half his money over time. You'd get a better deal from the Mafia.

If you don't like dealing with legbreakers, there are plenty of legal gambling operations which make Lotto look like strong-arm robbery. For a typical dollar bet at an Illinois horse-racing track, 83 cents is returned to bettors in winnings. A Las Vegas casino pays out at least 74 cents on the dollar. Though most gamblers don't make money in those venues, the odds are they'll lose a lot less.

The state lures the naive by grossly overstating the possible rewards. The $69.9 million awarded last month isn't worth $69.9 million. The proof is that the state has to spend only $33 million to meet its obligation. That covers the first payment plus the government securities it buys to fund the 19 yearly payments to the winners. In economic terms, the prize adds up to less than half the advertised amount.

Still, the question of why Illinoisians accept the state's invitation to blow their money isn't hard to answer. The urge to gamble is as natural to human beings as griping about the in-laws. Any outlet will do in a pinch. Other types of gambling are better bets, but they're also less convenient.

If you want to test your judgment of horseflesh, you have to make a trip to the track, or to the nearest off-track betting parlor. If you want to spin a roulette wheel (at least a legal one), you have to catch a plane to Atlantic City or Reno, casinos being primly forbidden in the Land of Lincoln.

It's a lot easier to stop at the corner grocery on the way home. People in most other states sponsoring lotteries face equally formidable obstacles.

That's no accident. By making themselves the biggest bookie in the area, state governments acquire a big stake in limiting the competition. Money bet on cards and craps is money siphoned away from the lottery. So cards and craps are strongly discouraged.

Like other monopolists, these have trouble seeing the merits of unfettered competition.

The brazen hypocrisy is part of what makes the whole scam so smelly. On the one hand, the state of Illinois treats gambling as morally abominable, socially destructive and economically wasteful — something to be denounced, outlawed and punished.

On the other hand, it shells on TV, radio, newspaper ads and billboards for the biggest ripoff in town.

If gambling is an evil, the state shouldn't participate in it. If it's not, the state shouldn't waste money, court time and jail space prosecuting those who indulge.

My view is that gambling, like other forms of peaceable activity, ought to be up to the free choice of consenting adults. People are free to risk their money in stocks, oil wells and baseball cards. Why not dice?

But you don't have to agree with that view to see that right now we've got the worst of both worlds. Lotto tempts the vulnerable to blow the rent money on a long shot, while the law deprives them of betting opportunities that would reduce their risk.

Yet plenty of people who wouldn't cheat a parking meter are happy to have their taxes reduced by the proceeds from this exploitation.

Illinois and other states ought to either open up the gambling business or close it down entirely. If we can't do one of the two, we should at least have the good taste to be embarrassed.

Elect only the green people

A story in the papers said certain blacks in Chicago were quite alarmed that a white man, Richard Daley Jr., has been elected mayor of the city.

Their reaction seemed to be that now that a white man has taken over down at City Hall, Chicago blacks can expect to be rounded up, put in chains and sent out to work on the Dan Ryan Expressway while a bunch of white guys named Billy Earl, Buck and Bobby Clyde use shotguns to see to it they don't loaf or talk back.

Of course, many whites have had the same reaction when blacks have been elected mayor. How, whites ask, can a city remain progressive and safe to live in with a black as a mayor?

This sort of thing doesn't manifest itself in only municipal politics. We've even seen it on the presidential level now.

■ Jesse Jackson for president? My God, the republic wouldn't last a week.
■ Jesse didn't get the nomination. It's obviously the work of white racists.

There must be a way to halt such deviousness in our electoral process, and I may have thought of it.

We need to make a law saying only green people can hold public office.

That way whites and blacks can't vote along color lines and they might even find themselves working for the same candidate. How refreshing.

I realize there are also red people and brown people and yellow people, but you get the same sort of fear and suspicion when somebody like that runs.

But when you think about it — and I have — there aren't any stereotypes of green people nor any animosities toward them. And green people have no documented history of discrimination against others who aren't their kind.

The primary reason for that, of course, is there aren't any green people on our planet. One occasionally sees a person who appears to be green, but that is just somebody who is suffering from a hangover, the flu, a stomach disorder or has painted his or her face green for a St. Patrick's Day parade or a Notre Dame football game.

But there might be green people on other planets. We all have dealt with the fantasy of little green people from Mars. We spent billions on our space program, and now there's a real reason to spend even more.

This country should make a vigorous effort to begin exploring space to find green people to bring back to be our politicians.

These people likely would be highly intelligent and could learn our governmental system quickly. We could stress to them the fact we believe, at least in theory, that all of us are created equal, so green people should consider all of us the same.

"Our colors may be many," we could tell them, "but we're all in the same rainbow."

I'm serious here. A green president would see only Americans, not white Americans or African-Americans or Eskimos. A green mayor wouldn't court simply the white business power complex while ignoring a coalition of black ministers and former civil rights heavies.

A green Supreme Court could debate minority business partnerships without any preconceived notion or deep-seated prejudices.

A green sheriff could distribute justice equally. A green city council would have no reasons to aspire against any particular group of citizens.

And Jesse Jackson could go back to preaching.

And George Bush would have plenty of time for hunting and fishing. And Richard Daley Jr. could get a job selling programs at Cubs games.

If any green people from outer space read this, let me know if there is any interest on your part, and as long as you don't try to get in our country clubs, we should get along quite well.

North's bosses were in it up to elbows

By SARAH OVERSTREET

A viewer phoned Washington Post reporter Haynes Johnson just before Johnson went on a recent PBS "Washington Week in Review" program. Johnson read the viewer's message on the air, and I was sure glad he did. Now I don't feel like such a dupe.

"Doesn't the (Oliver) North trial show what dupes and dopes the administration made of the Iran contra committee, the establishment press and most of us watching this?" the viewer asked Johnson.

Dupe describes the feeling, all right, especially the day the "admissions of fact" were read into the trial record. This damning document, acknowledged by the government to be true, and also the only way all parties could agree to introduce certain sensitive documents into evidence, first left me stunned — and then, yes, feeling like the last person at the party to find out I'd been wearing a sign that says "kick me."

Oh, back during the Iran contra hearings, I had all the normal suspicions anyone would when both former President Reagan and then-Vice President Bush denied knowing almost anything about the giant subterfuge carried on by top members of their own staff.

And I can't say I had any innate trust of either man; I just couldn't believe they would lie if they had any inkling the truth could leak out sometime. I thought it would have been too humiliating and discrediting for them to be proven liars later; so if they were lying, I believed their stories were so good they would stand the test of time.

Then, when the wheels of justice moved too slowly to put North on trial before the election, I wanted to believe it had nothing to do with giving Bush a chance to get into the White House before the truth broke. I still want to believe that, more than ever.

But the North trial revelations certainly strain credulity.

Now we know that in 1985, Bush sent North a handwritten Thanksgiving message that read, "...one of the things I am thankful for is the way you have performed... in handling the hostage thing and Central America."

Now we know that in February 1985 Reagan personally approved Bush's mission to Honduras to get military aid for the contras.

Now we know that Reagan, like a child putting his little brother up to an act his parents told him HE could not do, took an active role in cajoling other countries to do for the contras what Congress said he could not do.

Imagine how Bush's 1987 disavowal in a press conference on the Iran contra scandal, would play today: "I didn't know any of those details... and I'm not sure I know the facts to this day."

What we know, finally and by the government's own admission, is that Reagan and Bush were not sitting on the sideline with their heads turned the other way while Ollie North ran a covert, illegal operation in Central America. They were in it up to their elbows.

Will that knowledge cause the prosecutor to file charges against Reagan or Bush, or any of the other 38 officials named in the admission of fact? The reporters, summing up North trial goings-on in "Washington Week in Review," thought not. Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles Times said he thinks their credibility will be damaged, but doesn't believe the American people — or Congress — has any more stomach for impeachment or driving a president out of office. Once every 15 years is too soon, he says.

Maybe he's right. Maybe even I don't have the stomach for it. But neither do I have the stomach for letting the highest officers in the land break the law and thumb their noses at us, whatever the cost.

Scientists question heat, neutron calculations in fusion claim

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Utah scientists who captured worldwide attention with their claim to have achieved cold nuclear fusion were probably fooled by faulty calculations, researchers from two of the nation's most prominent science institutes say.

Researchers from both the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the California Institute of Technology are challenging the cold fusion claim made at the University of Utah.

Nathan Lewis said Monday that he and other Caltech researchers conducted the most precise effort yet to duplicate the Utah experiment and found that no fusion took place. He said the Utah scientists calculated a gain in heat, but that precise measurements at Caltech showed no such gain.

Papers prepared by MIT researchers for presentation today at the American Physical Society meeting also reported that verification experiments conducted over a five-week period failed to detect any fusion reaction.

Richard Petraso of MIT's Plasma Fusion Center said the amount of neutrons, another fusion byproduct, emitted by the Utah experiment was probably much lower than the Utah scientists thought. He said the claimed flow was "inconsistent" with other data reported from the Utah experiment.

"We're asserting that their neutron emission was below what they thought it was, including the possibility that it could have been none at all," Ronald R. Parker, director of MIT's Plasma Fusion Center, said in a telephone interview Monday.

The international physics community has spent millions of dollars over the last quarter century attempting to achieve fusion using massive machines filled with plasma heated to temperatures of up to 100 million degrees.

University of Utah chemist B. Stanley Pons and his collaborator, Martin Fleischmann of England's University of Southampton, sent shock waves through the scientific world March 23 when they said they had achieved nuclear fusion using a simple electrochemical cell at room temperature. Pons and Fleischmann said the cell used an electrode of palladium and one of platinum that were immersed in a flask of deuterium oxide, or heavy water. The researchers claimed that when an electrical current was applied to the electrodes, deuterium nuclei were jammed into the crystal lattice of the palladium until the nuclei fused.

When the fusion occurred, Pons and Fleischmann said, the device produced four times more heat than was required to operate the experiment. They later said the ratio of heat produced to heat expended could be up to 8-1.

But Lewis said Caltech researchers found a number of problems with the Utah apparatus. "These problems may lead to errors large enough to cast serious doubts on published determinations of excess heat," said Lewis. "When these errors are avoided, we obtain no evidence for excess heat production."

Pons and Fleischmann, Lewis said, have admitted that their report of a 4-1 energy return was based on mathematical calculations and not on actual measurements. He said the Utah researchers evidently used incorrect assumptions to make their calculations.

He said errors were easily made, for instance, if the heavy water was not stirred to distribute heat evenly from the electrical current. When the measurements were made correctly, said Lewis, it was obvious that the total heat from the reaction was less than the energy used to operate the experiment.

Parker, meanwhile, said MIT researchers have been working for weeks to verify the Utah experiments, but the results didn't hold up when measured against a standard known as a Neutron Capture Gamma Spectrum.

"If (fusion) occurred at all, it was far below what they deduced from their measurements," Parker said.

Lewis said the Caltech experiments used detection equipment 100,000 times more sensitive than devices used in the Utah experiment. He said Caltech used instruments to detect and measure any product of fusion, including neutrons or gamma rays, tritium or helium, and any rise in heat.

All such measurements, when performed correctly, were negative, Lewis said.

PLO official wounded

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Issam Salem, the PLO's senior official in Lebanon, was shot and seriously wounded today in an ambush in this southern port city, police said.

Police said Salem, Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat's personal representative in Lebanon, was driving along Fakhreddin Street when masked gunmen raked his car with gunfire at 1:05 p.m. "Salem is wounded in the head. His chances of survival are very slim," said a police spokesman who cannot be identified under standing rules.

Salem was rushed to Ham-moud Hospital, the spokesman said, adding police had no clue to the identity or motive of the gunmen.

On Saturday, Zeid Wehbi, the official spokesman in Lebanon for Arafat's Fatah guerrilla faction, escaped assassination when a rocket-propelled grenade was fired at his Sidon home.

Two passers-by were wounded by shrapnel in the attack, police said.

There was no claim of responsibility for the attack today or the attack on Wehbi.

In Paris, where Arafat met with President Francois Mitterrand of France, a PLO official said the PLO chairman had been told of the attack on Salem.

"Mr. Arafat knows. We informed him," said Alassan Riyad. "At present it is difficult for him to make a statement and he will say something later."

Wildfire danger to be high in Southwest

SEATTLE (AP) — Most of the West can expect a nearly normal fire season after five years of drought-fueled infernos, but there is still a "great potential" for fire in the parched Southwest, officials say.

"We're not in bad shape right now," Steve Brown, staff meteorologist at the Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho, said Monday. "I don't think we're going to see much until we get into the actual summer."

Increased precipitation has relieved drought conditions in many areas, including parts of the Rockies that were ravaged by fire last year, Brown said in a telephone interview. But uncertain prospects for more wet weather in coming months still cloud the fire outlook, he said.

Weather forecasters "tell us that from May to July we have equal chances of above-normal or below-normal precipitation and above-normal or below-normal temperatures," said Rob Harper of the Washington state Department of Natural Resources. "That basically says it's unclear what the outlook is."

Ironically, the improved precipitation could heighten the danger of range fires in many areas by promoting the growth of grass that could serve as fuel later, Brown said.

Brown, who is responsible for outdoor fire danger forecasts nationwide, said he was compiling data for a report due to be released late this week.

The biggest danger area is the Southwest. Much lower-than-normal winter snowfall and spring rains pose a fire threat in Arizona and New Mexico and southern parts of California, Utah, Nevada and Colorado.

"There's not much question (of) a great potential right now" for wildfires in those areas, Brown said. "The fuels are already drying out."

Soil and debris on the forest floor in parts of northern Arizona are as dry now as they were in August, he said.

The next greatest fire potential is in the intermountain region — northern portions of Utah and Nevada, southern Idaho and parts of eastern Oregon and Washington — where the snowpack is melting rapidly and the long-range forecast calls for warm temperatures, Brown said. Scott Kaiser of the National Weather Service in Boise said the snowmelt in Idaho was "10 to 14 days ahead of normal," reducing a snowpack that was normal as of mid-April to 80 percent to 85 percent of normal now.

Despite four small forest fires during a warm, windy spell last weekend in Washington, the outlook for the Pacific Northwest, Northern California Northwest and the northern Rockies is near normal, Brown said.

The largest blaze, a 308-acre fire on Washington's Olympic Peninsula, was stopped dead by cooler, damper weather Monday, said Warren Hartman of the U.S. Forest Service. Containment was expected today.

U.S., Panama exchange expressions of hostility

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — As election day draws near, expressions of hostility between Washington and Panama's leaders are on the rise.

On Monday, Panama's military accused U.S. forces of spying on its bases and the U.S. Army accused Panamanian forces of holding some of its soldiers and their families at gunpoint while searching their apartments.

U.S. policy toward Panama has become a major issue in the campaign for Sunday's presidential election.

Washington has tried to oust Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the leader of Panama's armed forces and the power behind the government, through economic sanctions and support of the political opposition.

A communique Monday from Lt. Col. Aristides Hassan, an officer in the Panamanian Defense Forces, said the U.S. Southern Command had been told to "abstain from snooping in a suspicious and covert manner around military installations of the Defense Forces of Panama."

This activity, the communique added, "constitutes a violation of the Torrijos-Carter Treaties."

The treaties, signed in 1977, regulate relations between the two countries and their militaries until Dec. 31, 1999, when the Panama Canal is to be transferred to Panamanian control.

Maj. Edgardo Lopez, spokesman for the Defense Forces, said U.S. jets "consistently make treetop-level flights over areas around military installations."

"They also send people dressed as civilians in rental cars with cameras to watch military bases, and they have set up electronic surveillance just off the coast," he said.

The Southern Command denied all the charges.

He added that several weeks ago the Panamanians arrested a U.S. officer who was birdwatching with a camera and field glasses near a military installation. The officer, who was new to Panama, was released after a short detention, the spokesman said.

For its part, the Southern Command complained Monday that Panamanian security forces had entered apartments of several U.S. service members and held them at gunpoint while saying they were searching for weapons.

No one was reported injured or arrested in the incident.

Panamanian police declined comment.

In the election, the government is backing Carlos Duque, a close associate of Noriega.

Rodriguez elected president in Paraguay by large margin

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Gen. Andres Rodriguez, who ousted strongman Alfredo Stroessner three months ago, was elected president by an overwhelming margin and his party kept control of congress, unofficial returns showed today.

The leaders and presidential candidates of four opposition parties denounced what they said were "shameful irregularities" in Monday's voting and did not concede defeat.

Foreign observers and diplomats agreed that there were irregularities, but said the balloting was reasonably fair and that victory clearly belonged to Rodriguez, who had been Stroessner's No. 2 man.

"We promise our people that we will carry Paraguay on a bright path to its destiny of greatness and happiness," a grinning

Rodriguez said in a champagne toast to party members late Monday at his chateau-style mansion.

His Colorado Party has ruled this landlocked country of 4 million people since 1947.

Domingo Laino, the presidential candidate of the Authentic Radical Liberal Party and a former exile, finished second.

In initial official returns released early today Rodriguez tallied 22,201 of the 29,293 votes for president, or 75.8 percent, and the Colorados garnered 19,883, or 68.4 percent, of 29,064 votes for congress.

The Colorados said their partial count showed that of 1,048,299 votes for president, Rodriguez received 778,479, or 74.3 percent. Official and unofficial tallies gave Laino about 20 percent of the vote.

The Colorados received 741,583 votes of 1,007,548 cast for congress, or 73.6 percent, according to the party's count.

Rodriguez, left, and wife Nelly show ink-stained fingers confirming their votes.

Tallies by the Christian Democratic Party and a coalition of sociological research firms had lower totals, but also showed one-sided counts in favor of Rodriguez and the Colorados.

Rodriguez, 65, deposed Stroessner in a coup on Feb. 3 and sent him into exile in Brazil, promising broadened civil liberties and pledging to move the country toward democracy.

Stroessner, who seized power in a 1954 coup, had arranged to be elected every five years through patronage and intimidation.

The voting Monday was to replace Stroessner and the 36-member senate and 72-seat chamber of deputies that were to have served through August 1993.

By law the Colorados, as the winning party in the congressional elections, would receive 24 of the 36 Senate seats and 48 of the 72 seats in the Chamber of deputies.

The partial Colorado vote count represented about 45 percent of the 2.2 million people on official voter registration lists.

The opposition had claimed the list was dated and bloated, and even the Central Electoral Board said it might contain as many as 600,000 duplicate or fake names.

"From the first moment of voting, serious difficulties and grave fraud occurred, which offend our civic culture and test our tolerance to the limit," said Laino.

Euclides Acevedo, president of the Revolutionary Febrerista Party, accused the Colorados of stealing his party's ballots at some voting places.

Juan Ramon Chaves, chairman of the Colorado Party, accused Laino supporters of doing the same to his party.

"Yes, there were irregularities, but how significant they were, I'm not sure," said British Ambassador John Grant McDonald. "I think it was a very good attempt at something they have never done before."

Women's rights groups praise workplace ruling

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women's rights advocates are hailing a Supreme Court ruling they say will lower a "Catch 22" barrier to advancement in the workplace.

Women often have had to be assertive to win promotion, they say, but at the same time not offend employers by sacrificing femininity. They said Monday's ruling is an important step in limiting the impact of such sexual stereotyping.

The court said employers must bear the burden of proving they did not discriminate illegally once there is evidence bias played a part in personnel decisions.

Sarah Burns of the National Organization for Women Legal Defense Fund said the ruling is an important victory for women's rights.

"In these situations there is substantial doubt who is going to win," she said. "Now that we're going to see a shift in the focus, it's sufficient for a plaintiff to win."

Burns said the decision will help overcome a dual standard she labeled a Catch 22 that has held women back.

"It's been that you had to have the attributes of an assertive manager but also all the attributes of a passive, feminine non-assertive woman," she said.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices ordered further lower court hearings in a suit against the accounting firm Price Waterhouse by a former employee, Ann Hopkins.

Hopkins said she was denied partnership because of "macho" attitudes that, in effect, demanded she behave more like a lady.

The firm said other factors — such as her failure to get along with others — were decisive.

Monday's decision may leave some questions unanswered because only four justices agreed on the standards that should govern such "mixed-motive" discrimination cases. There were three separate opinions by the six justices in the majority.

"This may not clarify things because of the split decision," said Douglas McDowell of the Equal Employment Advisory Council that sided with Price Waterhouse.

But Judith Winston of the Women's Legal Defense Fund said, "Although this is not a complete victory, we consider it to be in the win category. We are gratified that the court said that once a woman proves gender was a factor, the burden shifts to the employer."

Price Waterhouse, in a statement, said it expects to win against Hopkins when the suit returns to federal trial court. Hopkins is seeking back pay and possibly reinstatement to the firm with promotion to partnership.

The ruling is based on an interpretation of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, banning discrimination based on race, religion and national origin as well as gender.

Hopkins, formerly a senior manager for Price Waterhouse here, quit the firm after she was denied partnership and later became a consultant to the World Bank.

While she was under consideration for the promotion at the accounting firm, critics and supporters said she sometimes was overly aggressive, too harsh, impatient with her staff and very demanding.

She said one partner who supported her for promotion told her she would stand a better chance of advancement if she would "walk more femininely, talk more femininely, dress more femininely, wear make-up, have her hair styled and wear jewelry."

In other action, the court agreed to consider blocking the partial merger of Detroit's two daily newspapers. The court will hear a challenge to former Attorney General Edwin Meese's decision allowing a joint operating agreement of the newspapers.

Shuttle technicians replace faulty liquid recirculation pump in Atlantis.

Shuttle Atlantis flight now set for Thursday

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Electricity flowed into Atlantis today, beginning a new countdown toward a Thursday afternoon blastoff after crews fixed fuel system problems that caused a last-minute launch postponement.

The shuttle is to carry into space five astronauts who are to propel a robot spacecraft to explore the planet Venus.

The countdown began on time at 8 a.m. when a test director summoned the launch team to work stations.

NASA said the new launch plan was "optimistic," but officials were confident enough to move ahead.

Liftoff was scheduled for 1:48 p.m. Thursday, with the 64-minute launch opportunity extending until 2:52 p.m.

The countdown, which normally lasts more than three days, is being compressed by 24 hours this time by eliminating some work done in the first count that need not be repeated.

The astronauts, who had returned to their training base in Houston after the scrub, were to fly back here late today after a practice session in a shuttle simulator.

Commanding the mission is David Walker. The pilot is Ron Grabe and the mission specialists are Mary Cleave, Mark Lee and Norman Thagard. Lee is the only one who has not flown a previous shuttle flight.

Scientists monitoring the Magellan spacecraft in Atlantis' cargo bay reported it was healthy. The astronauts are to release the $550 million probe toward Venus to map the planet's cloud-veiled surface.

The two bad parts that forced Friday's postponement were a hydrogen fuel pump that short-circuited and a 4-inch-diameter fuel line that sprung a small leak. Small metal particles found in the pump may have caused the short-circuit, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

The speedy fashion in which the parts were replaced prompted the agency to set a Thursday launch date. Officials had said Sunday they did not expect to be able to try again before Friday.

The delay meant a loss of valuable days in starting Magellan on its voyage. Because of the shifting positions of Earth and Venus, there is only a 32-day period when the spacecraft can be launched toward Earth's sister planet.

If the shuttle can't get off the ground by May 28, the mission would have to be put off two years.

Savings bonds earning highest rate in 3 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over the next six months, U.S. savings bonds will be earning the highest rate of return in three years, the government says.

The new rate, which took effect Monday, will be 7.81 percent, up from the rate of 7.35 percent that had been in effect over the past six months. The new rate is the highest return for savers since the bonds earned 8.36 percent for the six-month period ending in April 1986.

Interest on savings bonds is adjusted twice a year on May 1 and Nov. 1 to reflect open market rates. The rate is based on 85 percent of the yield on five-year Treasury securities, which have averaged 9.19 percent over the past six months.

Since the government switched to market rates for savings bonds in November 1982, the rate of return has averaged 8.29 percent. Investors who hold their bonds for at least five years earn the average of the half-year rates. Jerrold B. Speers, executive director of the savings bond program, called the new rate "terrific news for savers."

"When looked at in combination of the other benefits of bonds — including tax advantages, complete safety against loss, ease of purchase — it is clear that this new rate makes savings bonds an unbeatable deal," Speers said.

Investors are guaranteed a minimum interest rate, regardless of what the market rates do. That minimum guaranteed rate is currently 6 percent. But for bonds purchased before Nov. 1, 1986, the minimum is 7.5 percent.

Since market rates for bonds were introduced, the rates have ranged from a high of 10.94 percent for the six months beginning in November 1984 to a low of 5.84 percent for the six months beginning in May 1987.

Shanghai students march

BEIJING (AP) — Nearly 6,000 students calling for democracy and press freedom marched today in Shanghai, and students in Beijing threatened to march in the capital again unless the government recognizes their union in 24 hours.

The Shanghai students set out in the early afternoon from Fudan University and East China Teachers University and marched to the downtown People's Square.

The official Xinhua News Agency said they carried banners reading "Give us democracy and freedom," "Oppose privileges" and "Media must tell the truth." It said they planned to present a petition to local officials.

In Beijing, a delegation of 65 students from 33 schools delivered an ultimatum to China's legislature, Cabinet and the Central Committee of the ruling Communist Party.

The students are demanding the government recognize and hold talks with independent associations they have set up during their 2-week-old pro-democracy campaign. They want a free press, freedom of assembly and publication, and an end to official corruption.

Wang Dan, a student leader from Beijing University, said the government had agreed to respond by the deadline, noon Wednesday.

Beijing students already have defied police warnings and marched five times since April 17 to Tiananmen Square, the country's symbolic seat of power. About 70,000 students at 41 colleges also have been boycotting class since April 24.

After a march on Thursday drew cheers and applause from tens of thousands of bystanders, the government held a series of meetings with invited students.

However, most of the invited students have been members of officially established unions that student protesters have rejected since the demonstrations started.

Representatives of the United Association of Beijing Universities, an umbrella group for the new student groups, said their ultimatum listed 12 conditions for a dialogue.

Battle over owl focus in dispute over logging

By LES BLUMENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not since the 1970s, when the snail darter took a run at a dam on the Little Tennessee River, has the Endangered Species Act been the focus of a dispute as acrimonious as that surrounding the northern spotted owl.

The Tellico Dam was eventually completed, but only after a lengthy and bruising battle over the darter — a tiny fish — that reached the U.S. Supreme Court, Congress and the Carter White House.

At stake in the spotted owl showdown is the fate of some of the oldest forests on earth and the role of logging, so rich a part of the heritage of the Pacific Northwest, in the economic future of Washington state, Oregon and northern California.

A medium-sized, mostly nocturnal bird, the spotted owl is fiercely territorial and nests almost exclusively in the cathedral-like ancient forests of the Northwest. The trees in these stands average 500 years in age with some of the giants up to 1,000 years old.

When the first settlers arrived in the early 1800s, more than 20 million acres of old-growth forest dominated the landscape. No one is quite sure how much remains with estimates ranging from 2 million acres to 6 million acres.

But if current levels of logging continue over the next half-century, the only suitable spotted owl habitat remaining may be in wilderness areas and the national parks.

Environmentalists have used the owl as part of a campaign aimed at halting logging of these virgin stands of timber, the bulk of which are on federal land.

Old-growth timber is among the most coveted by the industry and dozens of one-mill towns in the Northwest are economically dependent on logs cut in federal forests.

The National Forest Products

Association claims that protection of the owl could result in the elimination of 280,000 direct and indirect jobs in the Northwest.

Conservationists say those estimates are "hysterical" and peg the job loss at about 2,300. They also insist that if all the remaining spotted owl habitat is protected the timber harvest on federal lands would be reduced no more than 25 percent over the next 50 years.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, reversing a Reagan administration decision that congressional investigators found was based more on politics than biology, proposed last week that the owl be protected as a threatened species under the Endangered Species Act.

The agency found that about 1,500 breeding pair of owls remain and that without protection their numbers could be cut in half by the year 2050.

A species is considered threatened if it is "likely to become an endangered species in the foreseeable future throughout all or a significant portion of its range."

The agency now has up to two years to decide whether to actually list the owl. But once the recommendation is published in the Federal Register in the next few weeks, federal agencies will be required to consult with the Fish and Wildlife Service before taking any action that would affect spotted owl habitat.

Such actions could presumably include timber sales in the national forests and logging of billions of board feet of timber already under contract.

Although they are pleased by the listing, conservationists are still reserving judgment on the Bush administration's claim to environmental respectability.

"From a political point of view this was inevitable," said George Frampton, president of the Wilderness Society. "Based on the scientific evidence they had no choice. There would have been an uproar if they hadn't."

anonymity. He said at least 100 people have been treated for diarrhea.

"Decomposing bodies lying in pools and ponds have polluted the water," said relief worker Mohammad Nasim.

At least 300 wells have been drilled in Manikganj district to supply safe water and another 100 will be sunk in the next few days, officials said.

Meanwhile, Britain announced aid of $85,000 for tornado victims, the government-owned news agency Bangladesh Sangbad Sanstha reported. And Pakistan is sending a plane with relief supplies, it said.

The tornado, accompanied by hailstones and showers, came hours after President Hussain Muhammad Ershad led nationwide prayers for rains to ease a two-month-long drought.

The drought threatened to destroy half the 5.6 million ton spring crop in the ground, Agriculture Ministry officials said. Agriculture, almost entirely dependent on rainfall, is the mainstay of most of the nation's 110 million people.

Bangladesh, one of the world's poorest countries with an average annual income of $160 a person, alternates between flood and drought.

Recording studio attracts West Texas artists

By LAURA LUDEWELL
The Odessa American

MIDLAND (AP) — From outside, it more closely resembles a deserted farmhouse than a Grammy-nominated recording studio. But when the front door swings open, it is a different world.

Filled with state-of-the-art recording and musical equipment, the studio draws musicians from across West Texas. The studio is No Mountain Recording and is owned and operated by Midlander Nick Carlton.

The self-described "halfway songwriter" has been interested in music all his life. He started out recording in a garage on a four-track machine and later went on to an eight-track.

A few years and a multitude of equipment later, Carlton now runs a 24-track studio complete with high-tech recording equipment, studio musicians and the latest in instruments.

On a 24-track system, musicians can put different sounds on 24 different numbered tracks. For example, Track 1 might hold the sounds of a snare drum while Track 7 could hold lead vocals or a bass guitar.

"The equipment is the top of the line and is nose to nose with what you would find in Dallas," Carlton can supply anything from a grand piano to the sound effects of a tambourine or the congas. An album often takes 80 to 130 hours in the studio to record.

Most of Carlton's clients are aspiring musicians who want to get a cassette tape or compact disc of their music to promote themselves. Carlton also often writes advertising jingles for businesses along with his studio musicians.

A wide variety of musicians record at the studio. Spanish groups, country groups and heavy metal groups have cassettes bearing the name "No Mountain."

During a recent session, Carlton offered advice to an Odessa country and western group, tuned instruments and listened for any irregular sounds.

"It's amazing the way he can pick up little noises or sounds that shouldn't be there," said

Jerry Dugan, lead singer of West-Wind.

Dugan cited Carlton's expertise and price range as reasons for recording at the studio. No Mountain's rates are about half that of most Dallas recording studios.

Carlton spent a lot of time with the group offering suggestions.

"I can really hear a fiddle in here," he suggested after hearing a song.

Feds seeking buyers for repossessed oil rigs

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — During the boom days, oil companies were grabbing all the offshore rigs they could find, but in recent years the government has found itself buying back repossessed rigs at auctions that attract no buyers.

Today, rigs sit silent on the bank of Sabine Pass, a spot that once was only a brief stop between the shipyards and the open gulf.

The Sabine I, designed to float out and stand on three long legs to drill for oil in 200 feet of water, is the latest of a dozen offshore drilling rigs repossessed by the U.S. Maritime Administration since a downturn in the oil industry.

The federal government, which guaranteed loans for the Sabine's construction in 1979, now is searching for a bargain buyer.

In 1939, the Maritime Administration Act set up government guarantees of loans for U.S. construction of ships being bought by U.S. companies. The idea was to put shipyards and shipping companies to work.

In the 1970s, the energy crunch led the government to extend the guarantees to shipping used in the search for offshore petroleum.

"You know how when you set these programs up and take into account the worst case scenario? Well, I think this is the worst case," Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Kopf said.

Functioning much like FHA-guaranteed home loans, the Maritime Administration-backed loans guaranteed up to 80 percent of the construction costs of offshore rigs and the supply boats that serviced them.

When the Sabine I went on the auction block in a marshal's sale recently, only an assistant U.S. attorney and Maritime Administration Marine Surveyor Warren Hilton were on hand.

The Maritime Administration sold the rig to itself in a bit of bureaucratic paper shuffling that got it off one set of books and onto another.

"We got it for $100,000," Hilton said, "but I was authorized to bid much more."

If there are other bidders, the administration bids to buy the craft if it sells for less than is owed on it.

During the past three years, none of the repossessed rigs has been purchased at auction. But some of the rigs have sold after the government buys them back.

when buyers know how much the rig and equipment are worth.

Kopf has handled the government's side of lawsuits seizing more than 30 offshore supply vessels. Most of those boats sit now in two rows in the Neches River just downstream of Beaumont in the government's reserve fleet.

Like the offshore rigs, supply boats are offered for sale at marshal's auctions, but with no greater success than the rig auctions. "We don't want to dump them on the market too cheaply," Kopf told the Houston Chronicle. "Doing that would give the vessels unearned advantages over other vessels, he said.

A supply vessel that might have cost $6 million when new might sell for $1 million to $1.5 million, he said. A drilling rig that cost $40 million to $50 million to build may sell for a paltry $6 or $7 million.

At least one supply vessel is being converted into a fishing boat, and others have become coastal, shallow-draft cargo carriers. A few have even gone back into the oil business.

But alternative uses for drilling rigs is even tougher.

One drilling rig, the Apache, was converted into a crane barge. Another company is considering buying a rig to make a roll-on, roll-off ship loading dock for a Florida port.

Rigs would also make excellent platforms for offshore radar installations, Hilton said, and are being suggested to help in anti-drug efforts.

A research group is considering using one as a platform for oceanographic research projects.

The Sabine I, like most of the other rigs, will probably just be mothballed until it's needed to drill oil wells again.

"The oil companies may decide tomorrow to drill at 200 feet again," Hilton said.

Tornado toll passes 800

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — The death toll from the tornado that ripped through central Bangladesh passed 800 Monday when searchers found 14 bodies in the ruins of houses and two other people died of injuries, officials said.

They said the bodies were found in the district of Manikganj, 25 miles northwest of Dhaka, which bore the brunt of the storm.

At least two people critically injured by the tornado died in Dhaka's Medical College Hospital, officials at the Tornado Control Room said. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

The deaths increased the number of people killed to 802. At least 12,000 people were injured and 130,000 left homeless after the tornado raged through Manikganj on Wednesday night, sending people, houses, trees and electric poles flying.

Residents say the storm caused more than 1,000 deaths because 400 people officially listed as missing are feared killed.

Survivors face shortages of drinking water, food and medicines, rescue officials said.

"Diarrhea may spread in an epidemic form unless supply of pure drinking water improves," one official said on condition of anonymity. He said at least 100 people have been treated for diarrhea.

"Decomposing bodies lying in pools and ponds have polluted the water," said relief worker Mohammad Nasim.

At least 300 wells have been drilled in Manikganj district to supply safe water and another 100 will be sunk in the next few days, officials said.

TREATMENT FOR STIFF NECK

If you're suffering from a stiff neck, don't wait for it to take care of itself when treatment is available to correct it.

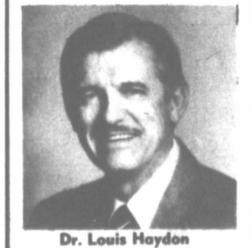

Of all the bones in the spinal column, none are more easily injured or more vulnerable than the seven vertebrae in the neck. None are moved more often. We are constantly turning our heads to look at people and things.

Neck stiffness can have many causes, from sudden and violent accidents to such simple activities as painting a ceiling or just sitting reading a book for a long time. But there's nothing simple about the pain.

A careful examination will reveal the source of the pain and how best to treat it. Any misaligned vertebrae in the spinal column should be properly adjusted so there will be no abnormal pressure on your nervous system. Treatment may also include exercises for the cervical muscles such as gently rotating your head in all directions. This can help restore muscle strength and tone.

Gingrich finds transition to statesman is not easy

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newt Gingrich seems to be taking out his frustrations on the pavement as he sets off on a 6 a.m. walk down Washington's Mall.

The morning newspaper includes a poll showing that two-thirds of Americans aren't paying much attention to the ethics problems of House Speaker Jim Wright and just 37 percent know that he's a Democrat. Gingrich, the newly elected No. 2 leader of House Republicans, is annoyed.

"My party is simply not an aggressive, tough competitor compared to the Democrats," he says, in full stride in hiking boots and a sweatshirt as the sun begins to rise on the dogwoods and azaleas on the Capitol lawn.

"Given a comparable problem at any given moment, Republicans are slower and softer and vaguer. We are not in the habit of going out and being tough. We're in the habit of being a minority."

What should the Republicans be doing in the case of Jim Wright, who has been charged by the ethics committee with 69 violations of House rules?

"Here's a chance to say over and over again, 'It's sad, but you can understand after 35 consecutive years of being in power why the Democrats are having a hard time,'" Gingrich says, making his favorite link between power and corruption.

"Republicans have a chance to communicate what's wrong with

Officers in West taking to bicycles

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — In true urban cowboy fashion, police officers in the West are taking to the streets on mountain bikes to combat crime.

"We've found (bikes) to be quite the urban crime fighter," said Officer Paul Grady.

Grady and his partner, Pete Rossen, pioneered the use of bikes two years ago. As of June 1, Grady said 20 Seattle officers will be on two-wheelers rather than behind the wheel of a patrol car.

"You see (criminals) at the end of an alley, and they disappear before you can always get to them. We thought of using bikes when it seemed there just had to be a way to get at them faster," Grady said. "And on a bike, criminals don't know when or where you might appear on your beat."

Others apparently agree. Police departments in Los Angeles, San Diego, Palo Alto, Calif., Fort Worth, Texas, Olympia, Wash., and Victoria, British Columbia have started their own bike detachments.

Seattle's bikers wear a modified police uniform, including unnap8made into bike shorts with a padded seat, a helmet, bike gloves, a nylon gunbelt and protective g'lasses, Grady said.

The idea is a money-saver. The start-up cost is about $1,000 per officer, and equipping Seattle's 20-man unit cost less than two squad cars, he said.

Lt. Paul Wooten of the Tacoma police said his department plans to put two officers on bikes in the downtown area later this month.

"The officers will be able to ride up and down stairs, over sky bridges and through parking garages. Boy, when you see an officer coming at you on a bike you won't forget it," said Wooten.

Fraternities adopt 'no grades, no parties' rule

By TIM KELLY
Associated Press Writer

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Scott Leffel straddled a motor scooter behind the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house and reflected on a future prerequisite for fraternity parties at Washington State University: good grades.

"I'm not too happy with it, actually," said Leffel, a sophomore. "It seems like the university is continually working against us rather than with us."

But the "no grades, no parties" rule that will take effect next year wasn't the brain-storm of a scheming college dean trying to rid the campus of an "Animal House."

The Greeks, often considered synonymous with parties, imposed this rule on themselves to bolster their image and academic standing.

Beginning next spring semester, a fraternity will have to forgo parties for two weeks for every 0.05 point that its grade-point average for the preceding fall semester falls below the average GPA for all male undergraduates.

The rule, believed to be the first of its kind for an entire campus fraternity system, was adopted by the Intrafraternity Council on a 22-1 vote of chapter presidents. The 16,000-student school has 25 fraternities with a total of 1,400 members.

Council vice president Tom Gallagher said his fraternity, Lambda Chi Alpha, would have been pinched if partying penalties had been imposed based on last fall's grades. But that hasn't dampened his enthusiasm for the rule he helped develop.

Gallagher and council president Gary Downing said the policy attracted much interest at a Western regional conference of fraternities they attended recently in Oakland, Calif.

"The IFC leadership wanted to send a message that kind of flew in the face of the stereotypical perception of Greeks, that all they're here for is to party," said Jack Burns, fraternities coordinator for the Residence Life and Housing office. He said he wasn't aware of a similar campus-wide rule anywhere else.

Some fraternity brothers question the correlation between grade point average and keggers, though.

"Maybe the problem isn't just with the partying; maybe it's with the teachers and staff, you know?" said Leffel of Sig Ep. "I mean, a lot of my TA's (teaching assistants) are from foreign countries, and when I go in there to try and talk econ' I can't even understand this guy."

"You can party as much as you want and still make good grades," said a member of Alpha Gamma Rho who was among a group soaking up sunshine on the fraternity's lawn recently. "It's just a matter of budgeting your time."

Some fraternity members claim the university pressured the fraternity council to adopt the rule, with some suggesting that President Sam Smith is bent on making the campus dry.

Smith dismisses those suggestions, although he praised the council for its move.

"If we tried to put in a rule like this, it would be fought," Smith said. Under the new system, even a fraternity whose members get straight F's won't have to abandon all merriment. The rules set a maximum penalty of 10 party-free weeks. Penalized houses will get to pick which weeks they'll spend on the social sidelines.

Detective obsessed by unsolved killing

HOUSTON (AP) — Joseph Leal was already calling friends in search of his missing girlfriend on April 8, 1988, when detective Marcel Dionne got an early morning call that a woman's body had been found in northwest Harris County.

What Dionne found would shock veteran investigators and intertwine the lives of the sheriff's officer and 23-year-old Leal for months to come.

The mutilated body of a woman sprawled face-down behind a store was Jacqueline Michelle Graham — Leal's on-again, off-again girlfriend.

Still unresolved after more than a year, Dionne admits he is obsessed with a "gut feeling" that Leal committed the gruesome crime, and has endured sleepless nights in pursuit of a key to the case.

But at least one other investigator is not so sure, and Leal says he has been hounded by authorities who refer to him as "the slasher," who ask to be seated at his table at the restaurant where he is a waiter and who once handcuffed him at work before taking him in for questioning.

Leal is candid about being tagged as the prime suspect, but continues to say he didn't do it. Asked about Dionne, he told The Houston Post: "I hate him."

Sgt. John Gessner of the sheriff's department said he questions whether Leal was involved because he has stuck to the same alibi during numerous interrogations.

"You can't be that consistent ... You can't play with fire for that long and not get burned," Gessner said, adding that he believes the 19-year-old woman may have been attacked randomly by a stranger.

Dionne, a 10-year veteran of the sheriff's department, disagrees.

"The anger that was demonstrated against her indicated it was someone who had cared about her," Dionne said. But despite exhaustive investigation, he has not found the evidence to file charges against Leal.

Leal stands firm. "Why would I want to kill my girlfriend? I loved her ... We were a team."

She was last seen alive during an argument with Leal at a bar. But he said the argument, caused by jealousy, was unimportant. "So what if we had fights. Everybody does."

Investigators who found Ms. Graham's body the next day said she had been stabbed and slashed at least 15 times, run over by a car, and was so sexually mutilated that it was impossible to tell whether she was raped.

"In all the times I had worked homicides, I'd never run into anything of this nature," Dionne said.

Leal said that since the slaying, he has felt that he was "being watched all the time." He was stopped by police for walking on a freeway, repeatedly questioned and took several polygraph tests, the results of which were described by investigators as "inconclusive."

This proposed application will affect approximately 2,487 residence customers who presently subscribe to toll restriction. It is estimated that the proposed rate schedule will reduce the Company's annual revenues from this service by approximately $298,000, which is less than one percent of the Company's total intrastate revenues. If the application is approved, the effective date of the rate reduction will be set according to the Commission's Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A deadline to file motions to intervene has been set for May 30, 1989. ## Four children keep single father out of doubles match

DEAR ABBY: I've been writing this letter off and on for two years — and I'm finally sending it. Many times I've read about women who have been left to raise their children alone. What about men whose wives have deserted them? I'm the third one I know of in my town. Is this a new trend?

My wife left me with four children to raise. I would like to have companionship, but when a woman hears that I have four children, she says, "Four children — you must pay a lot of child support!"

I say, "No, I have custody." Then she says, "That's too much for me to handle. Goodbye."

Abby, I love my children, and if it means giving them up in order to date, I'll stay single. I wonder how many other men out there are in the same boat?

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

FULL-TIME FATHER IN COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR FATHER: Have you never heard of Parents Without Partners? There must be some single mothers in your area who wouldn't mind joining forces with you.

To locate the PWP group nearest you, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Parents Without Partners, 8807 Collesville Road, Silver Spring, Md. 20910.

Then get a sitter and go to those PWP meetings. You sound like a high-quality man. Don't be discouraged. A woman who would count you out because you have children probably would have been a poor mother for your motherless quartet. Keep looking.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married and on our own for seven years. We have two children. My husband has a large family — lots of aunts, uncles and cousins. We were just invited to the wedding of one of his cousins. We didn't actually receive an invitation — on the invitation his parents received was a handwritten message: "Please ask Gary and his wife to come along, too."

I think it's a tacky way to invite people to a wedding. If they can't take the time and effort to find out what our address is (all they would have to do is ask Gary's mother), I really don't feel like going. My husband wants to go.

Maybe if you print this, they'll see it and realize how out of line they are. And just in case they don't see it, please tell me how to handle such invitations.

SECONDHAND INVITATION

DEAR SECONDHAND: This is indeed a tacky invitation. Either these people are trying to save the price of an invitation and/or the postage, or they just don't know better. Write them a note of thanks for the invitation, and add, "By the way, we have a home of our own now" and include your address and both your names.

DEAR ABBY: There is a fire hazard your readers should be aware of. If you have a paperweight or figurine positioned where direct sunlight can strike it — move it.

The glass paperweight on my desk was blistering the wooden finish in three spots when I noticed the streaks of smoke a foot high! I am just thankful that I was home and saw it before more damage was done.

WANDA IN ROCK STREAM, N.Y.

DEAR WANDA: Thanks for an important item. I called this seemingly improbable fire hazard to the attention of my readers several years ago, but it's worth mentioning again.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your continued stand against using live animals in research. As you and some of your readers have expressed, a great deal of this research is duplicative, useless and just plain cruel. Our money could be far better spent on the research alternatives already available, and developing yet more. Let's hope it won't be long before animal research is seen as being as barbaric and backward as slavery.

LYN ROSEN SPRINGUT, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR LYN: I am well aware that there are areas of medical research where, for the sake of mankind, the use of live animals is absolutely necessary, and I have no quarrel with that, provided there is no other alternative and the animals are treated humanely.

But I abhor the use of live animals to test cosmetics and household products.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN — WHICH MEANS ALL OF US: Federal spending on the elderly has nearly doubled since 1960. In 1986, $270 billion (or 26 percent of the federal budget) was of direct benefit to older Americans. About 81 percent of this amount was for Social Security, Medicare or Medicaid benefits.

First post office location was an old stage stand

Museum Mementoes
Eloise Lane - White Deer Land Museum

Before the first post office in Gray County was established at Eldridge (later moved to Alanreed) in 1886, the location was an old stage stand on the Concord mail and stage route. Part of this route ran from Clarendon through Eldridge to Mobeetie, then west by present Lefors to Spring and Dixon Creeks and on to Tascosa. Early day carriers traveled by horse and buggy or sometimes only on horseback.

Four head of horses were kept at the stand and meals were served. The stand was in operation about 1885 because Charles Shelton, father of Joe, purchased it from an Englishman in 1886.

Bones Hooks, the famous black cowboy, came to Clarendon in 1886 and was working on several ranches in the area.

Henry Bell Lovett, who had been in the area previously as a buffalo hunter and wood cutter, came with his wife, formerly Mrs. Fannie Hopkins Long, to Mobeetie in the fall of 1886. Their only child, Mattabel, who was born February 16, 1887, was a baby when the railroad came. The Lovetts spent their summer at Eldridge. In November Henry purchased a half section of land on Grapevine Creek at two dollars an acre.

James Ewing "Jim" Williams, who came from Decatur to Mobeetie in 1885, was working for the Diamond F in 1886 when the Franklyn Land and Cattle Company became insolvent and was reorganized as White Deer Lands. Williams then worked for the Quarter Circle Heart and later for the Z-Z where he was allowed to start a herd of his own. He filed on land south of present Lefors.

Georgy Tyng, who became manager of White Deer Lands in 1886, was living at the ranch headquarters near the present town of White Deer. A.A. Holland, John R. Henry and others, possibly including J.L. Stroope, were also at that location.

By 1887 several families had settled in northeastern Gray County near present Laketon. Ben F. Williams came in 1885 and his brother-in-law, John Austin Paris, followed a year later. Frederick William Jahns, a Polish immigrant who came in 1885, had begun the first farming on the plains.

William Thomas "Bill" Lard came in 1881 to Fort Elliot where his wife, Catherine, became well known for helping the sick and needy. In 1887 they moved to Chicken Creek on the Canadian River in Roberts County.

Henry and Amanda Jane Lard Ledrick came with their two sons, Lee and Claude, from Young County to Chicken Creek in 1886.

Christian Jacob and Marion Anderson Walstad, immigrants from Norway, lived first on Wolf Creek in 1886. They moved to the flats in Ochiltree County and then to Roberts County.

Matthew Alexander Lewis, whose family came to the Panhandle in 1887, spent the first year at Miami where he became well known as a lobo wolf hunter. His daughter, Leona, married John Frank Meers who came from Mangum, Oklahoma, to work on Ben Masterson's ranch north of Miami.

Timothy Dwight Hobart, a native of Vermont, was sent to the Panhandle in 1886 as general agent for the New York and Texas Land Company. In 1887 he was sharing an office at Mobeetie with lawyer Temple Houston, youngest son of Sam Houston.

Many of these families were to become a part of the early history of Pampa, which, in 1887, was only a dot named Glasgow on a map of the route of the Southern Kansas Railroad.

First three towns in the Panhandle

"If you have any life left in you, head for Mobeetie or Tascosa," a cowboy in 1879 advised a newcomer to the Texas Panhandle. "And we have one more town. If you're ready to kick the bucket, you might want to head for Saint's Roost." Cowman's Country by Robertson and Robertson.

New Doctors Discovery
Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S. Gov't. Patent
'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors' claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone 'automatically' reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W992, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) ## Sports Afield

Area athletes at the top of their fields

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

After last weekend's Region I-1A track and field meet at Levelland, it's clear that the strength of the eastern Texas Panhandle this season lies in the field events.

In a region that encompasses close to half of the geographic area of the state, it seems more than a coincidence that the gold medal winners in every boys' field event live within 100 miles of each other.

Just take a look. Bart Thomas of White Deer captured the gold in the pole vault and the silver in the long jump, while Daniel Hinson of Groom won the discus. Both hail from District 1-1A.

And from District 2-1A come high jump winner Michael Kenney of Wheeler, long jump gold medalist Chad Caddel of Kelton, and Booker's Dustin Miller, who finished first in the shot.

So what gives? Do Districts 1-1A and 2-1A have an inside track to the state meet?

"I hadn't thought about that," said Wheeler coach Ronnie Karcher. "In the past we've dominated the shot and discus, but the pole vault had never really been a strong event in this area. I think White Deer coming into this district helped to strengthen it. But it was a good year for this area overall."

For White Deer coach Gary Richardson, the extremely windy conditions last weekend at Levelland, coupled with a good dose of talent, may have accounted for this area's strong showing in the field events.

"I don't think it's anything in the drinking water," he said. "There's just a lot of talent in this district. That shows up in football, too, with two state champions in the same district for the past two years. And some people may not be used to competing in windy conditions. Our kids may not like it, but they work out in it every day."

In what was the most hotly contested field event of the meet, Caddel and Thomas battled to within one-quarter inch of each other in the long jump, recording leaps of 21-13/4 and 21-1/4, respectively. While both have jumped considerably better in past meets, it was not a day for establishing personal bests, and they were content to grab a state berth and worry about the rest in two weeks.

"We both waited for a crosswind so the wind wouldn't be right in our face, and we both ended up scratching twice in the finals," Thomas said. "I think we'll do a lot better down at Austin without any wind."

Another close contest developed in the high jump. Kenney, the eventual winner, needed all three tries to clear 5-10 and 6-0, and four other jumpers were still in the hunt at 6-2. Kenney finally cleared it on his second attempt, while the others came up short three times. But once again, Kenney's winning 6-2 jump was far from the 6-6 he cleared the week before at Elk City.

"I wish I'd jumped like I did last week, but the wind kind of messed me up," said Kenney, in what became a common refrain on Saturday. "I had several misses on the lower levels, and I never could get my feet right. I finally settled down, though."

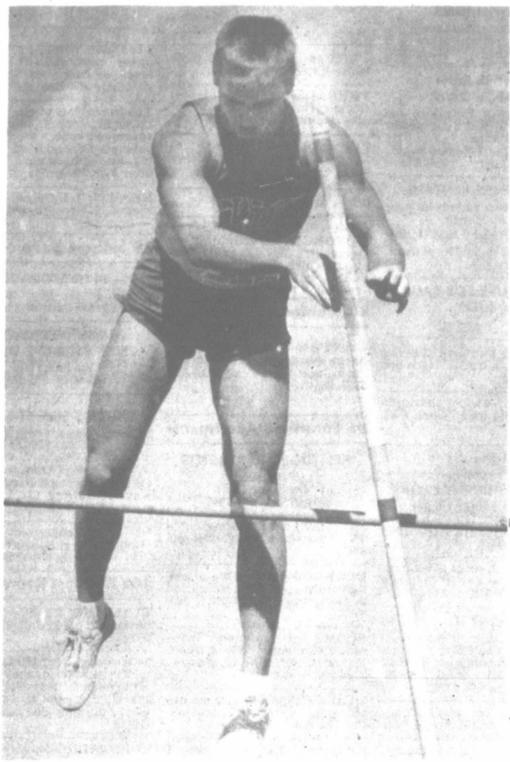

Troy Cummins of White Deer, who officially jumped 6-0 to finish third, was the only other competitor to clear 6-2, although he did it in a jump-off for third place. Chad Moore of Petersburg took the silver medal on fewer misses.

"That's tough, because you only get one chance," Richardson said. "When it's time, you've got to do it."

Thomas was virtually unchallenged in the pole vault. He waited until the bar reached 12-6 to make his first vault, and only two other competitors managed to clear that height. Thomas won it at 13-0, then cleared 14-1 to set the regional record. He failed three attempts at 14-7, although the gold medal and a spot in the record books were already in his grasp.

Hinson similarly dominated the discus. His 154-2 toss, though 1 foot, 8 inches shy of his personal best, was good enough to outdistance second-place finisher Tim Kendall of Motley County by eight feet. And after three consecutive regional berths, that throw was the culmination of the Groom senior's high school track career.

Miller of Booker hurled the shot 51-9/8, exactly one and one-half feet further than Shannon Nail of Sands, the silver medalist. Miller also sailed the discus 132-0 to take sixth place.

Area athletes (clockwise from top left) Bart Thomas of White Deer, Michael Kenney of Wheeler, Chad Caddel of Kelton and Daniel Hinson of Groom dominated their respective field events at last weekend's Region I-1A track meet at Levelland. They will compete at the UIL state meet May 12-13 in Austin.

Detroit's Morris can't buy a win

By The Associated Press

The winningest pitcher of the 1980's can't get a win in 1989.

Jack Morris became the first Detroit pitcher in 36 years to start the season 0-6 as the Seattle Mariners beat the Tigers 5-3 Monday night.

Alvin Davis' sacrifice fly snapped a seventh-inning tie and Jeffrey Leonard followed with an RBI single.

Morris never had lost more than four straight decisions before this year. He allowed 10 hits, struck out seven and walked none in 6 2-3 innings.

Morris wouldn't talk to reporters after the game. However, his manager thinks he's still pitching well.

"His only luck has been bad," Sparky Anderson said.

The last Detroit pitcher to lose his first six decisions was Ted Gray, who began the 1953 season 0-9.

Morris worked out of several jams. His teammates gave him a lead for the first time this season, but the 34-year-old right-hander was his own worst enemy.

Leading 3-1 in the sixth, he threw a wild pitch over the head of catcher Matt Nokes, allowing Omar Vizquel to score.

He mishandled Vizquel's sacrifice bunt in the seventh when Seattle scored three runs, two unearned.

"For a guy, 0-5, he's tough, especially with men on base," Seattle manager Jim Lefebvre said after the Mariners added another loss.

In other games, Chicago beat Milwaukee 6-0, Boston beat Minnesota 13-6 and Cleveland beat Texas 11-1.

Bill Swift allowed seven hits, three runs, struck out one and walked two in his first start and second appearance of the season.

Dennis Powell, 1-0, pitched two hitless innings and Mike Schooler finished with two-hit relief for his third save. Detroit is 1-5 on its eight-game road trip.

WHITE SOX ..... 6
BREWERS ..... 0

Jerry Reuss pitched a four-hitter for his 39th shutout and Ron Kittle hit a three-run homer as Milwaukee lost its fourth straight in Teddy Higuera's first start of the season.

Higuera, 16-9 last season, had surgery on Jan. 20 for a herniated disc. He made 77 pitches, gave up five runs and seven hits, walked four and struck out one.

Reuss, 3-2, struck out three and walked none. It was his first shutout since June 21, 1987, against Kansas City when he was with California.

RED SOX ..... 13
TWINS ..... 6

Boston scored seven runs in the first inning as Jim Rice hit a two-run double, Dwight Evans a two-run triple and Wade Boggs a two-run double.

After Boggs struck out to open the game, seven straight Red Sox reached base against Allan Anderson.

Dennis Boyd, 2-1, allowed four runs over seven innings for his sixth straight victory against Minnesota. He gave up seven hits, struck out two and walked one.

Anderson, 4-2, who entered the game with a 2.03 earned-run average, lasted just one-third of an inning, allowing seven earned runs.

INDIANS ..... 11
RANGERS ..... 1

Jerry Browne, a former Ranger, drove in four runs and Rich Yett and Keith Atherton combined on a six-hitter as Texas lost for only the sixth time in 23 games.

Yett, 2-2, allowed one run and four hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Warner-Finney opens with win

Warner & Finney opened the Rookie League (7-8 years old) baseball season with a 14-9 victory over Titan Monday evening at Optimist Park.

Titan struck for five runs in the top of the first, four of them driven in by Brent Story's in-the-park grand-slam homer. Warner & Finney moved back within three with a two-run effort in the second inning, then scored four more in the third to take the lead for the first time, 6-5.

But Titan went back to work in the fourth. With two runners on, Shari Albus pounded a triple, then scored on a single by Brent Story to put Titan back on top, 8-6.

In the bottom of the fourth, Warner & Finney collected seven hits, including a homer by Brandon Hill, for a total of seven runs to put the game away for good. Each team scored one more run in the fifth inning before time ran out.

Brandon Hill paced Warner & Finney with a homerun and a triple, while teammates Jason Harlen and Adam Keller each collected triples. Josh Franklin hit two doubles. Defensively, Brian Doss, Josh Franklin and Amos Valmore were standouts for Warner & Finney.

Titan was led by Brent Story, who hit a homer and a single. Shari Albus connected for a triple and a single, while Lonnie Henshaw and Jason Hall each had two one-baggers.

BABE RUTH LEAGUE
Energas defeated Lions Club, 17-11, in the opening game of the Babe Ruth Baseball League (14-15 years old) Monday night.

David Johnson picked up the mound win for Energas, issuing four runs, three hits and seven bases on balls, while striking out eight. Phillip Sexton surrendered seven runs and two hits in relief to get the save.

Sexton also rapped three singles to pace Energas at the plate. Teammates Jimm Fossett and Tarin Peet had two singles apiece.

Jesse Hernandez allowed seven runs on two hits and three walks and was credited with the loss. Buddy Plunk and Jeff Tidwell both came on in relief.

Tidwell and Hernandez hit one double apiece, and Cedric Wilbon had a single for Lions Club.

The Optimist Club Opening Day Barbecue is scheduled for Saturday, May 13, from noon until 5 p.m. at Optimist Park. The ceremonies are set for 3 p.m.

DeLeon shuts out San Diego, 6-0

NL

By The Associated Press

Despite pitching his second shutout in his last three starts, Jose DeLeon had very little to say — about himself that is.

But he was plenty talkative about his St. Louis Cardinals teammates.

"I've never played on a team like this one," DeLeon said after pitching a six-hitter Monday night in a 6-0 victory over the San Diego Padres. "This is a good team. If you keep the ball inside the ballpark and it's not in the gap, somebody is going to catch it."

DeLeon, 5-1, allowed six hits, struck out eight and walked one in his 50th career victory.

The Cardinals scored five runs on six hits to pull away in the sixth, just in the nick of time as DeLeon saw it.

DeLeon was nursing a 1-0 lead going into the bottom of the fifth when the Padres loaded the bases with one out.

He helped create the jam when he threw away Hurst's sacrifice bunt for the first Cardinal error in 60 innings. But DeLeon saved himself and possibly the game when he got Roberto Alomar to ground to shortstop Ozzie Smith for an easy double play.

REDS ..... 19
EXPOS ..... 6

Chris Sabo had four hits and four RBIs, Paul O'Neill drove in five runs and Jeff Reed had five hits as Cincinnati amassed the most runs ever scored against Montreal.

The Reds had 21 hits. The 19 runs eclipsed Montreal's record of allowing 17, set in a 1972 loss to Houston.

Second baseman Tom Foley was Montreal's fourth pitcher. He relieved Joe Hesketh, who gave up nine runs and six hits in 1-3 innings, and allowed a two-run homer to Reed in the eighth. Foley then got Ron Oester to ground out to end the inning.

METS ..... 3
BRAVES ..... 1

Dwight Gooden raised his record to 5-0 by allowing six hits in seven-plus innings as New York handed Atlanta its seventh straight loss.

Roger McDowell pitched the last two innings for his fourth save.

The Mets' took a 1-0 lead in the third on Howard Johnson's RBI double. Johnson has hit in eight straight games, going 14-for-33.

DODGERS ..... 1
PIRATES ..... 0

Pinch hitter Mickey Hatcher scored Mike Davis with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the ninth inning as Los Angeles ended a four-game losing streak.

Davis, who earlier broke out of a 2-for-17 drought with a pair of singles, drew a leadoff walk against starter Doug Drabek, 1-3.

The victory went to reliever Jay Howell, 2-2, who escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the top of the ninth.

WILLIAMS & WEBB AUCTION

AUCTION
SELLING ONE HALF SECTION OF GRAY COUNTY FARM LAND (INCLUDES SOME MINERALS)

OWNER-PAUL E. & ROWENA V. SARGENT TRUST

10:00 A.M. - WEDNESDAY - MAY 10

PROPERTY SELLS AT ABSOLUTE AUCTION WITH NO MINIMUM PRICE BEING REQUIRED

SALE LOCATION: THE AUCTION WILL BE CONDUCTED ON THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF THE PROPERTY, FROM PAMPA, TEXAS, GO WEST ON U.S. HIGHWAY 60 TO FARM TO MARKET ROAD 2300 (WHICH IS THE ROAD ON THE EAST SIDE OF THE HOECHST CELANESE CHEMICAL PLANT), THEN GO TWO AND ONE HALF MILES SOUTH OF HIGHWAY 60 ON FARM TO MARKET ROAD 2300 TO THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF THE FARM ON THE EAST SIDE OF THE ROAD. (FARM TO MARKET ROAD 2300 IS ONE AND ONE-HALF MILES EAST OF KINGSMILL, TEXAS).

INSPECTION: THE FARM MAY BE INSPECTED ON A DRIVE BY BASIS AT ANY TIME. ADDITIONAL INFORMATION MAY BE OBTAINED BY CONTACTING THE AUCTIONEERS.

THE FOLLOWING DESCRIBED FARM WILL BE SOLD AT ABSOLUTE AUCTION ON SITE 10:00 A.M.-WEDNESDAY - MAY 10
NO MINIMUM PRICE IS REQUIRED.

LEGAL DESCRIPTION: The West 1/2 of Section 156, Block 3, I&N Survey, Gray County, Texas together with all minerals and production owned by seller, minerals owned by parties other than owners are excepted, property to be sold subject to oil and gas leases, and easements visible or of record, and rights to tenant in possession.
COMMON DESCRIPTION: A farm property containing approximately 320 acres more or less of land. This farm is located 2 1/2 miles south of U.S. Highway 60 on Farm To Market Road 2300 in Gray County. This paved Farm To Market Road runs the one mile length of the property along the west side, a caliche road borders the north boundary for 1/2 mile, and a dirt road parallels the south boundary for 1/2 mile also.

The land lays very level except for a small portion located near the southeast corner of the farm, which contains a small depression. The soils on the property are consistent with those observed on adjoining properties and they appear to be very productive types. All of the land is in cultivation except for the small depression in the southeast corner, which is in grass. The following improvement descriptions and information is believed accurate and is included here to aid in your analysis of the property.
Well: It is believed that underground irrigation water is in relatively short supply and the farm is presently operated as a dry land unit. An irrigation well situated on the property has been converted to an electric submersible pump in order to supply livestock water. Underground tile along the west boundary is also not presently utilized and some of it has been removed. The well is presently pumping into two livestock tanks that are not included with the sale of the farm.

Fences: The farm is surrounded by three and four strand barbed wire fences on steel and wood posts.
Oilfield Equipment: Four oil wells are apparent on the surface of the land. Additionally, two tank batteries and associated equipment are located on the property. There is also a gas well located near the meter run house which is located near the east property line.

The oil wells are believed to be white oil wells and are not presently being produced and the future of these wells is unknown at the present time. The gas well is unitized with surrounding acreage and is currently being produced. None of the equipment utilized in the production of oil or gas is included with the sale of the land except for the percentage of ownership in such equipment afforded the land owner through ownership of mineral rights which are to be conveyed.
Utilities: Natural gas is piped to the location of the well which now has the electric submersible pump. Electrical power lines are in place on the perimeter of the farm except for the east side. All electrical power to the oilwell pumps is buried underground, apparently deep enough not to interfere with farming operations.
A.S.C.S. Information: The farm is signed up in the 1989 farm program. Government records indicate the following information:
Total Base Acres 311.1
Wheat Base (18 bu. Yield) 227.1 (Includes 10%)
Sorghum (37 Bu. Yield) 84.2 (Includes 10%)
Balance in Grass
Tenant Information: Mr. Dean Burger is presently renting the land on a 1/2 crop basis. He anticipates retaining possession of the land through the harvest of any crops he plants this year. He has signed up for the program and intends to farm in compliance with it. Any other arrangements for possession will need to be negotiated with Mr. Burger. All monies due landowner after date of closing to become the property of buyer.
Taxes: The 1989 taxes are to be prorated to date of closing.
Minerals: All minerals owned by the Paul E. and Rowena V. Sargent Trust will be conveyed to the buyer as a part of this sale. Subject to legal interpretation to the contrary, it is represented that 1/2 of the Mineral Rights are vested in the seller (trust). Existing leases and consolidation agreements for different portions of the land have resulted in various divisions of interest in both dry gas rights and in oil and casinghead gas. However, it appears that a 1/2 landowner royalty has been maintained in these agreements. Additional detailed information is available for inspection in the office of the auctioneers.
TERMS: The herein described land will be sold to the highest bidder without any minimum bid being required. The property will be conveyed in its "as is" condition with no warranty being made regarding any representation of fact contained in this brochure or any other advertising, even though they are believed to be factual. The seller requires all cash for the property, twenty percent (20%) of which must be escrowed with the auctioneers at the time of the auction, with the remaining eighty percent (80%) balance being due at closing. The seller will provide a policy of title insurance in the amount of the sale price as determined at auction. Current taxes to be prorated to date of closing and closing is to be within thirty (30) days unless delayed by title objections. All rents due landowner after closing to become the property of buyer. Survey, if desired, to be at buyers expense. All mineral rights owned by seller to be conveyed to buyer and possession of the property to be at closing subject to the rights of the tenant. Buyer will be required to enter a standard earnest money contract reflecting the advertised terms at the time of sale. Please contact the auctioneers for additional information.
