School officials warn students about cutting classes on Skip Day

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

For Pampa High School students planning to cut classes on May 19, unofficially known as Senior Skip Day, the school may have a rude awakening for them, according to Vice Principal John Kendall.

Kendall said Skip Day is not recognized by the district and will be treated like any other unexcused absence.

According to state attendance laws, that means any student who collects his sixth unexcused absence of the semester on Senior Skip Day could lose credit for courses. For seniors, that might mean no graduation.

"The parents need to understand it will be an unexcused absence," Kendall said. "If it goes over what the state allows for unexcused absences, then it's possible the kid will fail. Some of the kids tell their parents we are sanctioning it and we're not. It will be treated like any other unexcused absence."

Kendall said what started out as an unauthorized holiday for seniors has become an excuse for students of all grades to cut class.

"Last year we had 150 in D-hall (detention) and that was just underclassmen," Kendall said of the discipline that awaited those who were involved in Skip Day.

"The main thing the kids need to realize is it is unexcused and if a kid is close, that could mean losing credit and that could mean no graduation."

He added that such talk was more than hypothetical since there were seniors who did fall into the category of having all the absences allowable by the state without losing course credit.

Seniors are well known for trying a variety of tactics to turn Skip Day into an excused absence, Kendall said. Among the ploys commonly used is "a parent calling to say the kid won't be here, but it wasn't really the parent who called," Kendall said.

"What we're going to do this year is make all the parents come in to verify the absence or get a hold of them," he added. "That will mean a lot of work for us, but we will do it."

The vice principal said he realized such enforcement of policy will not eliminate Senior Skip Day.

But, he said, he did not want any student or their parents to say they weren't warned in the

Deng, Gorbachev clasp hands

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Deng Xiaoping today normalized relations between the world's two Communist giants while outside their meeting hall tens of thousands of people chanted for democratic reform.

"We can take this opportunity to publicly announce the normalization of Sino-Soviet relations" after 30 years, Deng said to applause from Soviet and Chinese participants in the meeting.

The 84-year-old senior Chinese leader welcomed Gorbachev in the red-carpeted Eastern Hall of the Great Hall of the People as "comrade" but did not give him the bear hug he reserves for close friends and allies.

In the opening minutes of their 2½-hour meeting, he told the 58-year-old Soviet president that the world's "key political problems" have arisen from Soviet-American Cold War tensions.

That confrontation, he said, had helped prevent Sino-Soviet reconciliation but now "there may be a turning point in competition" between the two superpowers and "the situation is changing from confrontation to dialogue." The United States and China normalized relations in 1979.

Outside in Tiananmen Square, tens of thousands of students, teachers, journalists, workers and onlookers reminded the leaders of momentous change of another sort.

The students, who consider

Gorbachev a hero for the political reforms he has championed at home, issued appeals for him to take up their cause for democratic reforms with China's leaders.

Their three-day occupation of the square, China's symbolic center of power, forced officials to move an official welcoming ceremony for Gorbachev on Monday as he arrived for a four-day visit.

A planned wreath-laying ceremony was canceled today and the protesters later surrounded the Great Hall, halting traffic and forcing Gorbachev's afternoon meeting with Premier Li Peng to be moved to a guest house several miles away. More than 3,000 students have staged a hunger strike on the square since Saturday.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing said Deng and Gorbachev did not discuss the student demonstrations.

He said Gorbachev acknowledged that the Soviet Union had made "some errors" in its past stance toward China but the two leaders agreed "that bygone are bygone. What is important is to look forward and do more tangible things."

Li said the two leaders discussed Cambodia, where Moscow-backed Vietnamese troops are fighting Beijing-backed resistance forces. "They shared some views but did not reach complete agreement," he said.

The Gorbachev-Deng summit brought together Soviet and Chinese leaders for the first time since a frosty encounter between Nikita Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung in 1959.

Relations have since been mar-

City Commission seeks Ward 2 post applicants

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners will be seeking names and background information on Ward 2 residents who are interested in being appointed to the vacant City Commission seat.

Applications will be taken through Sunday, May 21.

The position was left empty after Ward 2 Commissioner Richard Peet defeated David McDaniel for the mayor's post on May 6.

"We are still in the process of looking at the appointment procedure as outlined by the (City) Charter," Peet said after an executive session of the commission Monday evening.

"If they are interested, they should contact the mayor or a city commissioner" by Sunday so the commission will have the names and background by their Tuesday, May 23, meeting, Peet said.

The executive session Monday evening lasted just over an hour and a half, during which commissioners discussed the filling of the vacant position.

School meeting on Thursday

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet Thursday evening, instead of tonight as incorrectly reported in a Page 1 story in Monday's edition of The Pampa News.

The meeting has been moved to Thursday at 6 p.m. in Carver Center, instead of the usual Tuesday meeting date, due to a Panhandle area school training meeting being held tonight at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Peet said no final date has been set for naming a commissioner to the position, which will be up for re-election in May 1989. If the position is not filled by appointment, a special election will be called to fill the post.

The Pampa News regrets any inconvenience this error may have caused.

Haynes, Williams top McLean graduates

McLEAN — Dollie Lee Haynes has been selected as valedictorian and Karen Williams salutatorian of McLean High School's 1989 graduating class.

McLean High School graduation exercises have been set for 8 p.m. May 26 at First Baptist Church of McLean.

Haynes, the daughter of Linda and Sam Haynes of McLean, completed her high school career with a 96.75 average.

She centered her high school activities around marching and concert band and academic pursuits. She served two years as the band's drum major and was an All-Region trumpet player for three years. She has also been named to the Southwestern Oklahoma State University Honor Band. She qualified for state in small ensemble competition and was named Outstanding Bandsman her junior year.

Scholastically, Haynes has participated in UIL ready writing and spelling at a regional level for four years. She also helped organize UIL events for the school.

She has received awards for 96 and above average for each of her four high school years and has been named student of the year in physical science, biology, English II, Spanish II, American History and English III. She served on the yearbook staff, Student Council and Future Farmers of America.

An active member and pianist at United Methodist Church, Haynes is one of 40 teens to travel to Poland and Russia this summer on a four-week Mission For Peace. She is a member of the church's Administrative Board and UMY.

She was recently awarded the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizenship Award and is a semi-finalist for Coca-Cola Scholar, one of 1,500 chosen from 50,000 applicant.

She works as a junior volunteer at Coronado Hospital, Lions Club Journey for Sight, and the Pampa Labor Day Chautauqua Run to benefit the United Way.

Williams is the 18-year-old daughter of Charles and Ann Williams of McLean. She has attended McLean schools for 13 years.

She has participated in UIL spelling, number sense, calculator, news writing, feature writing, accounting and typing. She has been named a regional qualifier in UIL journalism events for three years.

Williams is a recipient of academic awards in English, algebra, geometry and history. She has also received awards for maintaining an average of 96 each of her years in high school.

She has participated in Future Farmers of America, where she was a member of the livestock judging team her sophomore year. She was in Pep Club her freshman and sophomore years and was chosen as Most Courteous her sophomore year.

Severe weather, rain in forecast for area

Pampans should be prepared for more severe weather and heavy rain for as long as three days, according to local weather forecaster Darrell Sehorn.

"We're locked in to more of the same for the next 24 hours," Sehorn said today. "We should get heavy rainfall and more in the way of severe thunderstorms."

"Every element favors a real concentration of activity over the Panhandle for the next three days," he added.

Sehorn, staff meteorologist for KGRO-KOMX radio, said the humid, unstable weather conditions the Panhandle has experienced for several days are a result of an influx of surface Gulf air injected from above with moist Pacific air brought by the Jet Stream coming across the area.

"For another three-day period we'll keep getting additional thunderstorms and very heavy rain," Sehorn said.

Normal rainfall for May is 3.34 inches, he said. So far, Pampa has received 2.60 inches for this month.

"In the next 24 hours I expect it to get above the May normal," he said.

Prior to the recent rainy spell, Pampa's moisture totals were running below normal, a total of 4.93 inches for the year, according to Sehorn.

In January, Pampa recorded 0.49 inches, 0.60 inches for February, 0.92 in March, and 0.32 in April, which was way below normal, Sehorn said.

"We should be well ahead of normal by the time this is over," he said.

Present conditions are so unstable that severe weather could break out at any time, Sehorn said, adding that most thunderstorms will probably occur in the late afternoon and evening.

A heavy line of thunderstorms was forming across the north-west Panhandle early today and should be entering the Pampa area later this afternoon, he said.

Gusty winds will continue to come from the south-southeast, he said, at 20 to 25 miles per hour. Sehorn predicted wind speeds will be much higher with the thunderstorm activity.

As the storm systems entered the Pampa area last night, temperatures quickly dropped from the mid 70s into the low 50s, he said.

"I doubt if it gets above 65 today," Sehorn said, adding that he would be watching the weather as it develops through the day.

"We've got a really unstable air mass with the possibility of severe weather and heavy rains," he said.

Cult suspects indicted; bail refused

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The alleged high priestess of a sacrificial cult and four members of the bizarre gang face up to a year in prison awaiting trial on murder and other charges stemming from the death of their "godfather."

Indictments were returned Monday against Sara Aldrete Villarreal, Omar Francisco Orea Ochoa, Alvaro de Leon Valdez, Juan Carlos Fragoso and Jorge Montes.

Judge Bernardo Tirado Gutierrez of the Mexico City 58th Penal Court refused to allow bail because of the severity of the charges. Murder carries a 50-year sentence in Mexico.

Under Mexican law, the court now has a year to hand down a judgment in the case.
 All five suspects were charged with homicide, two counts of criminal association, coverup and resisting arrest.

In addition, de Leon Valdez was charged with illegal use of firearms and wounding a law enforcement officer and Orea Ochoa was charged with violations of burial laws.

The charges stem from the death of the cult's godfather, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, not from the ritual slayings. Authorities say Constanzo and Ms. Aldrete, 24, were the leaders of the cult.

Authorities say de Leon Valdez turned a submachinegun on Constanzo, a 26-year-old Cuban-born American, and his right-hand man, Martin Quintana Rodriguez, on May 6 when police began closing in on the Mexico City apartment where they were hiding out.

According to police and prosecutors, Constanzo ordered his own death and Aldrete urged on de Leon Valdez when he hesitated. She denies the charges.

The group has been on the run since early April, when police began digging up mutilated bodies on a ranch near Matamoros. One of the sacrificial victims was Mark Kilroy, 21, a university student from Santa Fe, Texas.

Aldrete has testified that Constanzo told her some of the victims were killed in ritual sacrifices and the deaths of others were related to drugs. She said she never took part in any human sacrifice.

Aldrete, de Leon Valdez and Orea Ochoa are all charged in the deaths of Constanzo and Quintana.

Strike has taught East Texas town valuable economic lesson

ATHENS, Texas (AP) — When workers struck Harvey Industries, employees at the television manufacturing plant said they did it for economic benefits.

Now three months later, Athens has learned all too well what it means to lose funds from the city's largest employer.

"By the time I pay my bills and my gas and my electricity, I don't have hardly any money to buy groceries," said Sarah Overton, the mother of two who is subsisting on $55 a week paid by her union. "I can't buy what I need. I just buy what groceries I can get."

Others among the more than 300 Harvey employees who are striking for better wages say they have lost their electricity and water because they have been unable to pay their bills.

Still, union members say they will not give up. "These people will not give in," Bill Newman, a shop steward who has worked at the plant for 26 years, told the Dallas Times Herald. "No employer should make $60 million in sales and cut people 40 cents an hour. I'd rather lose my job forever than see us do that."

Union officials point out employees make an average weekly wage of just under $225 — less than they made seven years ago at the plant when it was owned by Curtis Mathes and about $3 an hour less than fellow TV manufacturers in America and Japan.

But company officials contend they cannot afford to give raises. "We are in an extremely competitive business," said Georgia Melton, vice president of industrial relations. "The large imports from the Far East have about killed us. And we're a small company that doesn't reap the benefits of large purchases," like its far larger competitor, Zenith Electronics Corp.

Harvey Industries joins Zenith as the only U.S. companies that make television sets in America. Harvey Industries, founded by former Curtis Mathes sales executive Ray Harvey, took over the Curtis Mathes operations after the company announced it would leave the community in July 1982.

At that time, employees agreed to reduced vacations and pensions to reduce costs and keep their jobs.

"At that point, we all thought he was a fine fellow — he was going to save our town and our jobs," Newman said.

But now, employees are seeking a new contract with better wages and are organizing a national boycott of Harvey-produced equipment.

The current contract would have provided workers a 19-cent-an-hour raise in August. In January, they opened contract negotiations with a demand for a 35-cent hourly raise. The company offered a 25-cent cut, then modified that to a 20-cent cut. Management also sought to eliminate the August raise.

But when that offer was rejected by workers, Harvey officials have made no more.

"How can we keep going backward when the price of everything else is going forward?" asked Welton Bailey from the picket line last week. "Most of the people who work in there, they can't afford to buy the TV sets they build."

But inside the gates, where workers who cross picket lines maintain production, management equally is determined. "We plan to continue operations," Melton said.

"If it wasn't for Harvey, we wouldn't have a plant here," Melton said. "You try to tell people that, but sometimes they don't understand."

Since Harvey is a private concern, it does not make its balance sheets public. But a top Harvey executive told the Athens Rotary Club last fall that the company had annual sales of $60 million.

Still, The Athens Daily Review reported last month that Harvey Industries and Curtis Mathes owe more than $500,000 in local property taxes. Last week, local authorities said Curtis Mathes still owed $230,000.

Study: Eggs have lower cholesterol

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — New testing methods and improved farming practices have led government researchers to conclude that eggs have 22 percent less cholesterol than previously believed.

A study released Monday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the industry-supported Egg Nutrition Center found the average large egg has 213 milligrams of dietary cholesterol.

The government has said since 1976 that eggs contained 274 milligrams.

Extra large eggs have about 230 milligrams of cholesterol, and medium eggs about 180 milligrams.

The study was welcomed by the egg industry, which has seen sales plummet $1 billion during the past five years after warnings about the risks of heart disease associated with the fatty substance.

"It confirms what we've been saying all along, that eggs are an important source of nutrients and should not be eliminated from diets," said Cathy McCharen, vice president of the Egg Nutrition Center in Washington, D.C.

The change is due to better testing methods and different feed, husbandry and breeding practices, according to Gary Beecher, chief of the USDA's Nutrition Information Service. The new figures will be included in updated versions of the USDA's handbook on the nutrient composition of foods.

The fat content of the eggs also was slightly lower than previously reported, with an average of 5 grams total fat per large egg.

The study also confirmed that eggs are a low-calorie source of protein, Vitamin A, riboflavin, Vitamin B-12, iron, zinc, phosphorus, calcium, potassium and other nutrients. The average large egg had 75 calories.

"All the world and myself could see new content in your policy. Before that we didn't have a new way of thinking," Deng said.

Gorbachev responded, "Before that we did not have a new political order."

He said it had taken three years for a summit to take place, "one year for each obstacle."

The Chinese have long said there were three obstacles to better relations with Moscow — the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan, Soviet troop deployment along the Chinese border and Kremlin support of Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia.

Skip Day

event a senior doesn't get to graduate because they participated in an unauthorized Skip Day that sent them over the limit of absences.

On the state level the Texas Classroom Teachers Association is fighting to revise absentee rules so that such unauthorized activities as Senior Skip Day can be virtually eliminated.

Jeri Stone, president of TCTA, said during a recent visit to Pampa that she was aware of incidents around the state in which parents would even host Senior Skip Day parties at their home for several dozen students and then write a note to the school saying their children were absent due to an illness.

According to Stone, if the State Legislature passes an amendment TCTA is proposing, students will be required to attend class at least 80 days each semester.

Any student who is not present the 80 days, for whatever reason, will be forced to come before a district review board with their parents to present documentation they were really ill, according to the TCTA president.

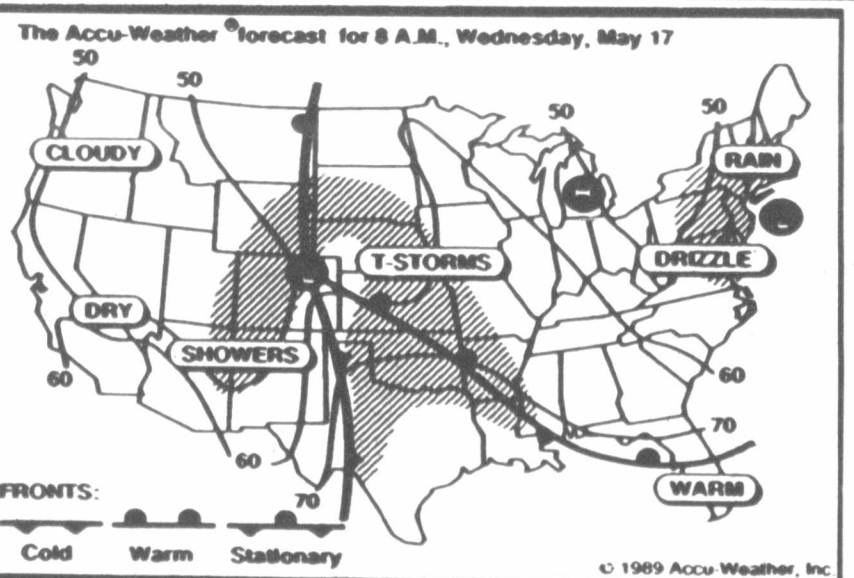

"This will take care of situations" such as Senior Skip Day, Stone said.

Highs Wednesday in the 50s and 60s mountains and north, mostly 70s elsewhere. Lows tonight from 30 to 45 mountains, 45 to 55 lower elevations.

Man arrested on weapons charge calls ringleaders 'idiots'

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man who exerts "a not very benign influence" over people is an alleged ringleader of a group of Texans arrested in a hotel room stocked with high-powered weapons, an attorney claims.

The attorney, who represents one of six Texans now awaiting trial on a series of misdemeanor weapons charges, told a judge Monday that his client quit his job to follow the group's alleged leaders but now the man "is not going to follow those idiots anymore."

In seeking John Barnhart's release from jail pending trial, his attorney, James Maloney, said a Rowlett couple were the leaders of a "hierarchy" of the group of Texas, who were believed to have been planning to defect at the time of their arrests.

Maloney said Richard W. McEwen and his wife, Billie Joy McEwen "decided for their own strange reason that something done by the United States caused them to go to Paraguay or the Soviet Union."

McEwen, 40, exerts a "not very benign influence" on people, Maloney said.

McEwen's attorney told District of Columbia Superior Court Judge Mildred Edwards that McEwen is afraid for his safety and chooses to remain in the D.C. Jail, rather than fight his $50,000 bond.

McEwen "feels safer in the D.C. jail right now," said his attorney, Ferris Bond. After Monday's hearing, Bond refused to disclose the source of McEwen's fears. He said McEwen is being held in administrative custody, segregated from other inmates.

Bond also said McEwen was exposed to Agent Orange while serving in Vietnam and requires a daily shower to manage his problems from the potent defoliant.

The attorney for McEwen's wife, Billie Joy McEwen, also did not contest her bond and asked to have her placed in protective custody.

Barnhart and the McEwens are among five Texans jailed on misdemeanor weapons charges stemming from a raid on the EconoLodge Motel in which a cache of weapons was seized, including a grenade launcher and machine guns. A sixth Texan, Reuben Anzaldua, faces misdemeanor weapons charges stemming from his arrest by the Secret Service a day earlier outside the Soviet Consulate. Each is jailed on $50,000 bond.

A local man also arrested at the EconoLodge has been released to the custody of his father.

A search warrant indicates member of the group were planning to defect. Also, officials of the Paraguayan Embassy are investigating whether the group attempted to sell arms to an embassy official.

Officials have said Mrs. McEwen is a licensed arms dealer, and an attorney for Anzaldua indicated at the hearing that his client also has "various appropriate federal licenses" and at least eight were seized when he was arrested.

In arguing for Barnhart's release, Maloney said the McEwens "were the prime movers in this case."

Maloney said Barnhart, 33, of Rowlett quit his job and decided to "follow a couple of lunatics," but "he's not going to follow those idiots any more, with all due respect."

Even if "the only intent of the ringleaders was perhaps to sell these weapons to Paraguay," Maloney argued the bond was nevertheless too high for Barnhart.

Edwards refused to reduce bond or release Barnhart, saying evidence suggests he "cast his lot with this group; that he is a man on the run, a man in hiding, a man I can't rely on to return to court."

"Clearly, he cast his lot with a group of people who severed their ties with their home state, Texas, and had clearly been traveling; clearly traveling with a view of possibly severing their ties with their country. These people are in flight. They quit their jobs, packed up and hit the road."

Senate passes bills on AIDS, colleges

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Fear and prejudice must be put aside if Texas is to have any chance at winning the battle against AIDS, according to senators who approved a bill designed to do just that.

The bill, which has widespread support among many on the front-line against the deadly virus, was sent to the House on voice vote Monday with little opposition.

The Rev. Chris Steele of Houston, chairwoman of a legislative task force on AIDS, said, "If this is any indication of the direction that our state is going to take, then we just might have a chance of getting out from behind the 8-ball."

The Senate on Monday also approved a measure that would change upper-division universities at Dallas and Odessa to four-year schools and would upgrade Pan American University at Brownsville to an upper-division, degree-granting institution.

Sen. Chet Brooks, chairman of the Health and Human Services Committee, set the stage for passage of the AIDS bill, which was hailed by Ms. Steele as "sound public health legislation."

Steele, an Episcopal priest, said the Senate proposal was much better than the bill approved by the House, which has been criticized for its emphasis on law enforcement.

As of May 5, Brooks said, 6,547 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome had been diagnosed in Texas, and 4,008 people — or 61 percent — had died.

The projected number of cases by 1992 is 45,000, with 27,000 deaths.

Texas ranks fifth nationally in the number of people reported to have AIDS. Houston leads 45 states and Dallas 42 states in the number of people with AIDS, a viral disease that attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to a wide variety of infections.

Brooks, D-Pasadena, said AIDS is perhaps the "most major health care issue facing our state, the United States and the whole world."

He said a legislative conference committee had earmarked $18.3 million for AIDS, with about half of the money set aside for treatment and 25 percent each for counseling and education, but none for research.

Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, said AIDS, like any other viral disease, can be conquered. But she added, "We cannot do it if we function with a great deal of fear, ignorance and prejudices."

"The most difficult part of this problem is the hysteria that it presents, unbridled fear," Brooks said.

The bill makes the state health department the lead agency in Texas for AIDS education and prevention, and establishes medication, grant and technical assistance programs.

It prohibits discrimination against people with AIDS-related illnesses; establishes education and workplace policy requirements; restricts the release of AIDS test results; limits testing without first obtaining a person's consent; and provides for AIDS testing by insurance companies, with the state, counties and hospital districts authorized to pay premiums for poor AIDS victims.

The bill makes it a felony, punishable by up to 10 years in prison, to knowingly expose another to the AIDS virus with intent to harm. It also requires distribution of AIDS educational materials upon issuance of a marriage license.

The college bill cleared the Senate 19-10, after Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, described it as "the worst action of this Legislature this year. It's the worst policy that we've adopted this session."

The bill would elevate the University of Texas at Dallas to a four-year school, emphasizing natural sciences, mathematics and engineering in the freshman and sophomore years. Another upper-division school, UT-Permian Basin, could become a four-year institution in 1991, if approved by the state higher education board.

It also would include Pan American-Brownsville as part of the UT system as an upper-division school, which would be renamed UT-Brownsville.

Caperton complained that the bill had not been reviewed by the higher education board, and is "just not good legislative planning."

Sponsoring Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, said the bill "did not go through the procedure, yes, but that does not mean that there's not ample reasons to do this under the narrow circumstances which the legislation proposes."

Convicted murderer earns a degree after her parole

DENTON (AP) — Two years to the day she was paroled from a Texas prison, Judith Pearson walked across a stage and picked up her college diploma.

"She wrote a term paper about her experience. It was pretty eye-opening," said Bert Hayship, a psychology professor at the University of North Texas. "It takes a lot of guts to relive that. I think her graduation was quite an accomplishment."

Pearson, 40, served 10 years of a life sentence for murder. She refused to disclose details of the murder conviction, preferring instead to focus on Saturday's accomplishment — a bachelor's degree in sociology from North Texas.

"I was always told that I was dumb and couldn't do it," Pearson told The Dallas Morning News. "So many times, people get out of prison and feel they can't do anything. They can't focus on her future and not her past, but she added the crime was a "horrible tragedy" that she will never forget.

"Although I know I'm forgiven, I'll never forget it," she said. "I was responsible and I can't alter the past. It will always be with me."

Pearson said she began taking college sociology courses while still in prison in hopes of becoming a social worker after her release.

During her two years at UNT, she said she never received a grade lower than a "B," earning her membership in two honor societies, including vice presidency of the local Golden Key National Honor Society.

Even in prison, she received one C — on a Spanish test during her first semester of study — and "it broke my heart."

Pearson said there were tough times. "I frequently thought of giving up," she said. "I remember taking algebra last semester and asking myself what in the world was a 39-year-old woman doing taking algebra."

"But I've learned not to give up when the going gets rough," she said. "I've learned to dig my heels in instead."

Pearson said a strong faith in God and a realistic outlook with helping her attain her degree. But she says it won't be the end of her studies. In August, she will return to UNT to begin master's degree work.

"I was told that a master's is necessary in my field," Pearson said. "Won't it be nice if I graduate on the fourth anniversary of the day I left prison?"

U.S. asking Latin nations to withdraw envoys

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The United States is asking Latin American nations to withdraw their ambassadors from Panama in a bid to force the ouster of military strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, diplomatic sources say.

The sources, who spoke Monday on condition of anonymity, said Washington is circulating a petition among the region's leaders in anticipation of an Organization of American States meeting on Wednesday in Washington.

A diplomatic withdrawal would be part of a general condemnation of the Noriega-backed government, which nullified the May 7 presidential elections.

International observers have said that opposition candidate Guillermo Endara clearly won the election. Endara and one of his running mates were beaten with metal pipes by Noriega supporters last Wednesday.

The United States, Venezuela and Mexico have already recalled their envoys and one diplomatic source said Venezuela would ask the OAS to demand that the Panamanian government immediately recognize the results of the elections.

The opposition is demanding it be declared the winner. Government candidates have accepted the decision of the Electoral Tribunal and have refused to make any other public comments.

The OAS meeting was called to discuss the case and the opposition has called for a general strike in Panama to coincide with the gathering.

men to try to kill one of the opposition leaders, second vice presidential candidate Guillermo Ford, in Wednesday's assault.

"I leave Panama with a heavy heart, but with great hope," Davis told a news conference before leaving from Howard Air Base, a U.S. military installation near Panama City.

There's nothing funny with drugs

I was watching the 10 o'clock news the other night when it was announced that country singer Keith Whitley was found dead in his Tennessee home. The cause: drugs and booze.

An Associated Press story said Whitley died after drinking the equivalent of 20 glasses of alcohol and taking cocaine and a sedative.

Whenever I hear about someone buying it with drugs, I think back to my younger days as a member of a rock band playing around Dallas/Fort Worth.

Those were the days when teenagers would sing along with you on Eric Clapton's "Cocaine." Our band, Short Change, did several songs about drugs including "Cocaine," "White Rabbit" and "One Toke Over the Line."

I was always terrified of drugs, but I got used to being around them. Why? At the time I told myself I was being a liberated thinker and nonjudgmental of others.

Now I know I was only an irresponsible young fool, afraid to stand up to the pressure of THE GROUP.

What made me finally grow some guts was a bartender friend who snorted methamphetamines like I drank Dr. Peppers — all the time.

Never once did I tell her what she was doing was wrong. Hence, I became a co-conspirator in her effort to kill herself. But before she could wreck her own life, she discovered someone else's.

One day she discovered she was pregnant. She made a vow to give up drugs "just until the baby is born."

Eight months later she delivered. I am told when the baby began to show, the doctor ordered my friend put to sleep immediately. When she awoke, one of the first questions she was asked was, "Do you take drugs? We believe you do and need to know the truth."

She had denied all drug abuse, but suddenly the evidence of her stupidity was right before her eyes — the baby was born with its spine on the outside of its body.

I was told my friend had to be sedated for a couple of days before the hysteria subsided. She then became suicidal and was eventually committed to institutional care until she could come to grips with what her drug use had done to her baby. The last time I heard, the baby was still alive. It will face a life of deformity and institutional care because of the extreme nature of the problems. Problems that were caused, the doctor said, from my friend dumping poisons in her body while the baby was forming in her womb.

Off Beat

By Bear Mills

Because of this incident I finally decided to stand up to those who do drugs. See, I can't help but think I contributed to the baby's deformity. Why? I never once told my friend that I loved her as a person and was concerned about her health. I never tried to find out what void she was trying to fill with drugs. I never asked her to get help.

Today I am older and wiser. My spiritual beliefs now play a major role in my stand on drugs. But it was because of this incident that I began to ask the Big Guy in the Sky about not only drugs but other things as well.

Everytime I hear about somebody dying of drugs or alcohol I die a little too. I think about that baby and how I never stood up to my friend. I wonder if Keith Whitley had friends who never stood up to him.

I know when I write an Off Beat a lot of people look for humor columns. This one wasn't very amusing. But I can't think of one single humorous thing to say about drugs ... not when I think about that baby.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Inducements more risky to taxpayers

It's too early to tell if what's happening in Poland and other Eastern European countries that were incorporated forcibly into the Soviet bloc after World War II is really a reawakening of democracy, as President Bush and others wish to believe. But something significant is happening. The relegalization of the labor union Solidarity and other political reforms in Poland, for example, could signal more extensive liberalization, though it may be a token move to appease critics while strengthening the hold of the ruling Communist Party.

The U.S. response is a mixed bag of appropriate and inappropriate moves. Clearly the U.S. response to what may turn out to be the inevitable decay of the communist experiment needs refinement.

President Bush announced that the United States will change policy in several ways, hoping to reward reform and encourage further democratization by pumping Western dollars into the Polish economy. He will ask Congress to reduce tariffs against Poland, request private banks to reschedule some of the $39 billion Poland owes in foreign debt, and support new loan packages by the International Monetary Fund and World Bank (with loans of $300 million and $550 million, respectively, now pending).

The tariff reductions are welcome. The United States should not have erected artificial barriers to Polish goods anyway. By the same token, it should not be offering artificial inducements (financed by taxes) either for American businesses to invest in Poland or for Polish businesses (state-owned or otherwise) to do business here.

Such attempts at fine-tuning for political purposes skew economic development away from what consumers want, and are never as effective as hoped at encouraging reforms. Some forms of government-to-government aid strengthen foreign despots and delay the emergence of a market economy independent of government control.

World Bank and IMF loan packages are particularly notorious for propping up creaky, centrally-directed economies, providing a life raft to those responsible for wrecking the economy in the first place. "Encouragement" and "requests" to private banks by the government did much to create the international debt crisis.

The overarching question of the next few years may be how the Bush administration and the West in general deal with the first stages of the collapse of traditional communism. Removing trade barriers is a legitimate and prudent response that has a chance to help encourage the few independent businesses. Artificial inducements are more risky to taxpayers, and may keep the despots in power longer than they would have stayed without them.

Berry's World

"Could you tell us how to get to 'The Gravy Train' and 'The Pork Barrel'?"

Wake him when it's all over

Sunday a week ago, a poor country of 2 million people and no military power endured a fraudulent election engineered by a corrupt tyrant.

In the Third World, that's the rule, not the exception. But when it happens in Panama, in an otherwise dull week for news, it somehow qualifies as an international crisis.

I generally agree with Thomas Jefferson's view that he would rather have newspapers without government than a government without newspapers. But it would be interesting to try the latter for a while just to see if we'd have quite as many foreign policy emergencies as we have now.

Just as it tirelessly provides an environmental scare of the week, the press feels obliged to register fresh alarm every few days at the disastrous developments in some malarial outpost that most of us couldn't find on a map.

In the case of Panama, the Bush administration, Congress and the teams of U.S. observers (which included former presidents Ford and Carter) did their best to help, dutifully treating Gen. Noriega's dishonest plebiscite as a matter of the highest urgency.

The White House press secretary announced ominously, "Our policy remains that Noriega must go." Both of the U.S. senators from Florida, one a Democrat and one a Republican, publicly suggested that the United States consider military action.

Other politicians urged that we light a match to the Panama Canal treaty. President Bush, meeting with the observers upon their return, refused to rule out any option.

Cooler heads may prevail in the end, but the frenzy is alarming nonetheless. The historian Ronald Steel once wrote that if you scratch an American, you find an interventionist. Americans tend to rise to any bait designed to lure them into trying to solve the world's problems, regardless of whether those problems are of any real consequence to Americans.

Stephen Chapman

They're especially eager if the corrective action promises to be brief, inexpensive and relatively painless. Remember Grenada? Lebanon? The air raid on Tripoli?

The latest threat comes from a country of only slightly greater significance. Panama sounds important because it sits astride a certain large ditch, but that's no excuse for all the belligerence.

With 10,000 U.S. troops guarding the canal — twice as many as the entire Panamanian army — Noriega isn't about to try to seize the canal. We can assume he's seen enough Clint Eastwood movies to recognize a "make my day" offer.

In addition, the treaty we signed in 1977 gives us control of the waterway until the year 2000. That gives us plenty of time to wait Noriega out. In the next decade, his people may rise up and overthrow him, or his military may decide he's too embarrassing to tolerate.

But if he manages to hang on, there's no reason the United States shouldn't be able to work out some arrangement to protect its interests.

Noriega, or any Panamanian ruler, will have strong incentives to cooperate. An agreement attached to the treaty mandates that the canal remain open and neutral. It also gives the United States the "right to act against any aggression or threat directed against the Canal or against the peaceful transit of vessels through the Canal."

If he were to shut down the canal, he would be begging the United States to invade — with the full backing of international law, no less.

That's one advantage of being a superpower. You may not be able to force out every pipsqueak military dictator who annoys you, but if he ever causes any real problems, you can squash him quicker than he can hum the Marine Corps hymn.

Noriega has done a good job of defying the gringos, but he's smart enough to know that the first time he really threatens the important U.S. interests will also be the last time.

So there's no need to panic about the scandalous election theft that occurred, unfortunate though it was for the long-suffering Panamanian people. The United States should certainly encourage efforts by other Latin American countries to pressure, isolate and condemn Noriega. It should also continue to pay Canal operating fees to his regime.

But we ought to stop right about there. Imposing new economic sanctions would hurt the people we're trying to help. Enlarging our military presence would needlessly inflame a tense situation. Shredding the treaty would infuriate a lot of people in Panama and the rest of the hemisphere for no good reason.

Most of all, we should keep in mind that the situation is neither urgent nor critical. This is one of the episodes where it might be wise to emulate Ronald Reagan, who occasionally slept through an international crisis.

Wake me when it's over.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, May 16, the 136th day of 1989. There are 229 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
Sixty years ago, on May 16, 1929, the first Academy Awards were presented during a banquet at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel. The movie Wings won best production; Emil Jannings and Janet Gaynor were named best actor and best actress, not for any one picture.

On this date:
In 1763, the English lexicographer, author and wit Samuel Johnson first met his future biographer, James Boswell.

In 1770, Marie Antoinette, 14, married the future King Louis XVI of France, who was 15.

In 1866, Congress authorized minting of the 5-cent piece.

In 1868, the U.S. Senate failed by one vote to convict President Andrew Johnson as it took its first ballot on one of 11 articles of impeachment against him.

In 1905, actor Henry Fonda was born in Grand Island, Neb.

In 1920, Joan of Arc was canonized in Rome.

Update on Asian connection

Some months back I wrote of my friend Tim Jarvis, who read an article in a magazine about American men connecting with available Asian women. He decided to give it a try. This is an update on how things turned out.

Tim was on the brink of 40 at the time. He'd been divorced with no children for 10 years, and his efforts in the singles scene — which is some kind of scene — hadn't been fruitful.

Tim wanted to meet and, perhaps, marry, a smart, young, thin, attractive woman.

"In the first place," he said to me, "there aren't that many young American women interested in 40-year-old men. Throw in smart, thin and attractive and that limits the field even more."

"Plus, so many of the women I met — not all, but many — really weren't impressed with much of anything. They'd already seen it all or done it all. That turned me off, too."

Tim read of an organization called Asian Presentations. From that organization he obtained a list of women in the Philippines who were interested in meeting American men. With the help of his home computer he began writing to some of these women.

He sifted through the replies, then wrote back to those he felt were the most interesting.

He continued to narrow the list, and in December he flew to the Philippines to meet with a young woman with whom he had corresponded for some time.

She turned out to be what he wanted, and he turned out to be what she wanted, and the other afternoon in San Jose, Calif., Tim Jarvis married Rosel Siazon. I was the best man.

The reason the wedding was held in California is that Tim's parents, now retired, live in San Jose, and Rosel has relatives in nearby Vallejo.

Rosel is tiny. She weighs maybe 80 pounds. She looks like a doll. She is shy and her eyes are big and bright and her smile wins over a stranger in a heartbeat.

When I first wrote of Tim's plans, much of the reaction I received was negative.

"Why does he want a young woman?" began one letter. "I'm 42, but I know more about how to take care of a man than some child. Give him my number."

Another woman wrote, "How can you marry somebody you meet through the mail?"

If Tim wanted a younger woman, that was his business. And where's a better place to meet a future wife? In the mail? Or in a bar? Rosel is 24. She has a college education. She is a nurse. She is fluent in English.

Rosel is an old-fashioned girl. She hasn't seen or done even close to all that is available. The thing that has impressed her most about America so far is the Kroger store.

To anybody who still has doubts, I saw Tim and Rosel together, and I saw some major league happiness that left very few dry eyes at the wedding.

I saw a man in love with a precious woman-child who looked at him in a manner that said, unmistakably, "I adore."

Tim Jarvis went halfway around the world to get his woman. He battled scores of bureaucrats to get Rosel her visa, and he did enough paperwork to wear out Fawn Hall.

He said to those who were negative, "It's my life and I'll fun it the way I want to."

And if he and Rosel don't live happily ever after, my surprise will be industrial strength. As for me, yeah, I cried a little at the wedding, too. An old veteran of weddings like me. What do you think about that?

Logic won't resolve the abortion crisis

By SARAH OVERSTREET

This won't be the hardest column I will ever write, but I don't expect another one will ever be as hard to prepare for.

This one took years, and I'm still not completely ready. But time has marched past me, and I have no more of it. The attorney general of my state, Missouri, recently argued a case before the U.S. Supreme Court that will affect American abortion laws if the panel concurs.

To what extent is unclear, but some believe that if the court upholds Missouri's law declaring "life begins at conception," birth-control devices that work just after conception, instead of before, may be in jeopardy. I am terrified by the thought that these reliable methods might become illegal.

Yet Attorney General William Webster has argued that every state should be allowed to require doctors to make tests to determine when a fetus is viable. On that one point, I can't logically fault him.

Why? Because over the years we have all wrestled with this ethical dilemma. Neither side's logic — all or nothing, either abortion without restriction or none at all — has seemed sound to me at all. The abortion debate is a tough one for a logical person. By using the same deductive reasoning you usually rely on, you don't come up with either the classic pro-choice or anti-abortion position.

Take, for example, the classic pro-abortion reasoning that after conception there is no more than the potential for life until a fetus is able to sustain life without its mother. The logical mind then goes searching for a point of viability and comes up with some contradictory information: While science develops ways to keep younger and younger fetuses alive, some clinics abort fetuses of the same age.

Or take the wrenching stories of women who have placed their lives at the mercy of butchers. These women are desperate because of the lack of support our society provides while, at the same time, requiring that they bear these children — whether they are up to the challenge or not. While these stories can break your heart, they can't complete an equation for the logical mind that considers both mother and viable child.

But take the anti-abortion contention that no baby has to be unwanted, that for each baby there is an infertile couple longing to become parents. The mother may not be able to give up the child, even though she's horrendously ill-prepared to nurture it. She may bend to the considerable societal pressures and keep it, with she, the child and the rest of us all the worse for it. Or she may bend to other societal pressures to give it up, and spend the rest of her life regretting the decision while the child wonders why his own mother wouldn't keep him. No happily logical conclusion here, either.

The roadblocks I've hit while trying to find a logical answer to the abortion question are probably as much responsible for my pro-choice position as anything I've heard from either camp. Given my own confusion, I can't make that decision for anyone else.

At the same time I feel betrayed by the most vocal pro-choice advocates — the ones who get any press, that is. For the most part they have refused to deal with the issue of how fetal development should affect if and when abortions are performed, as if setting any conditions under which abortions may not be performed puts the whole process in jeopardy. And here again, the old logical mind can't help but wonder: If fetuses that could be viable with assistance are aborted, is the next logical step recognizing a mother's right to infanticide?

I'm not sure I have enough information to make a logical decision, because some of the debate has never been invited into the forum.

EAGLE PASS (AP) — Four congressmen visiting a colonia on the Texas-Mexico border tipped through mud puddles and observed an open pit where the neighborhood sewage is dumped.

The congressmen, who trekked through the poor neighborhood Monday, also took a sick infant to a doctor because her family could not afford medical treatment.

About 200 families live in the 45-acre area that has dirt roads, few street lights and no gas or sewer service. The neighborhood is among 600 colonias, clusters of unincorporated subdivisions outside city limits that lack such amenities as running water, electricity or sewage systems.

More than 150,000 people live in colonias along the Texas-Mexico border, according to the U.S. House Select Committee on Hunger. The committee is looking into problems at Texas colonias.

Four committee members, who also heard testimony Monday from community leaders about the colonia problems, toured a Kickapoo Indian neighborhood and another colonia called "Las Quintas Fronterizas," one of about 32 such areas outside the city limits.

The congressional panel's hearing comes as the Texas Legislature considers a bill that would provide $500,000 over a five-year period for infrastructure and road construction in the state's colonias.

During a visit to one of the homes, Texas congressman Mickey Leland, chairman of the committee, carried a sick 10-month-old girl out of a dilapidated shack and took her to a hospital after her mother said she could not afford treatment for an inner ear infection.

"It hurts me very much to see something like this," the Houston Democrat said. "A baby shouldn't have to suffer because her parents can't pay a bill."

The little girl, Maria Esther Hernandez, and her mother, Zenobia Hernandez, were taken to the United Medical Center's clinic where the child was given medication for the ear infection. The infant already had contracted and recovered from the measles without seeing a doctor.

George Kypuros, administrator of the non-profit clinic, said the child's mother was confused a month ago when she asked about the cost for the treatment.

The woman left the clinic after she was told her bill would be about $30, including a past-due charge of $15, Kypuros said. The woman thought she had to pay the bill before the girl could be treated and she decided not to take her to a doctor, he said.

"It's not that she was denied an appointment, but if people leave with the impression that they can't be seen without paying, that's maddening," Kypuros said. "We try to collect as much as we can, but we won't turn people away."

The child's lack of medical attention underscores one of the many problems colonia residents face.

Most residents are unskilled, uneducated, seasonally employed migrant workers with no health insurance and who make an average annual income of about $6,000 per family.

Also, many infants die at birth or at a young age because their families cannot afford medical treatment and are forced to seek cheaper, but many times inferior, medical care across the border in Mexico, Leland said.

Also contributing to the problem are students living in colonias who drop out of high school because they lack self-esteem and are forced to work to help the family, said committee member Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi.

"I want my son, Ricardo, to do good in school so that he can get a better job and not have to live like we do," said Anna Maria Carlos, whose three-bedroom cement home was visited by the congressmen.

Maverick County officials have said that tight budgets have restricted them from providing basic services for the colonias.

"It is so unnecessary that conditions should continue to be as they are," the Rev. Bernard Doyon, pastor of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, told the committee during an afternoon hearing. "In a country of so much wealth and so much opportunity, our people — particularly so many children — are forced to live in such dire conditions and deprivations."

"It is unjust, it is appalling and it is a disgraceful waste of human potential," Doyon said.

The congressmen, also including Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, and Eni Faleomavaega, D-American Samoa, said they hoped to bring the colonia problems to the attention of Health and Human Services Secretary Jack Kemp and other cabinet members.

Treasury losing billions on 'contractors'

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Treasury is losing billions of dollars because employers — including the government itself — fail to withhold taxes from the paychecks of workers who are erroneously designated as "independent contractors," the General Accounting Office said today.

GAO placed a good share of the blame on Congress, which, in an effort 10 years ago to curtail the Internal Revenue Service, made it more difficult to crack down on employers who violate the withholding provisions.

Paul L. Posner, a GAO associate director, said in testimony prepared for a House Government Operations subcommittee that the failure of workers designated as independent contractors to report some or all their income is at the root of the revenue loss.

In turn, GAO found, employers are not complying with requirements that they file reports with the IRS on payments made to individual contractors.

Even when auditing business tax returns, the report said, the IRS is not identifying businesses that fail to file such reports.

"The importance of employers filing required information returns on payments made to independent contractors cannot be overemphasized," Posner said.

"IRS officials estimate that billions in taxes are lost because independent contractors do not report all income," he said.

Posner told the subcommittee on consumer affairs that in 1984 alone, the IRS estimated it lost $1.6 billion because about one of every seven employers misidentified employees as independent contractors.

Independent contractors are companies or individuals who supply services to a business or government agency but do not have an employee relationship with the business or agency.

There are numerous tests to determine whether a worker is an employee or independent contractor, including who controls working hours.

If a supplier is classified as an employee, a business must withhold income and Social Security taxes from his or her paycheck and pay an employer's share of Social Security taxes.

However, if that supplier is said to be an independent contractor, the business withholds no tax and pays no employer's share of Social Security tax.

The Treasury loses again when the contractor claims business deductions.

The law requires that payments for services supplied by independent contractors that are partnerships or sole proprietorships be reported to the IRS, but not those supplied by corporations.

The independent-contractor issue is not new. The IRS has been battling in the courts for years in an effort to require sellers of goods and services, such as some distributors of Amway products, to pay taxes as employees.

The bulk of the report from GAO, an arm of Congress, focused on the failure of government agencies to file IRS reports on payments to independent contractors.

The report cited a finding by the Treasury Department that 12 of 14 federal agencies surveyed failed to report $9 billion in payments to independent contractors in 1984 and 1985.

GAO conducted its own spot survey of state and local governments, and found 16 of 17 state agencies checked and 7 of 10 local units were not in full compliance.

"In reviewing $9 million in payments to independent contractors (by the sampled government units) that were subject to information reporting, we found that $8 million had not been reported," Posner said.

Many state and local officials did not fully understand the reporting requirements, and IRS has not done enough to clear up the confusion, GAO concluded.

Cowboys owner's daughter works for father's debtor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 22-year-old daughter of new Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones is making $60,000 a year as an aide to a congressman who lists a personal loan of at least $100,000 from Jones among his liabilities.

Less than a year out of Stanford, Charlotte Jones holds three titles on the staff of Rep. Tommy Robinson, D-Ark.

Her father has been a friend of Robinson since childhood and a financial backer of the congressman's political career. Jones became a multimillionaire in the insurance, oil and gas businesses.

According to Robinson's 1987-88 financial disclosure form, he and Jones are partners in a farm in Arkansas. Robinson listed among his liabilities a personal loan from Jones of between $100,000 and $250,000.

Jones' daughter said Monday she did not know how much Robinson still owes her father but that monthly payments on the loan are being made.

She conceded in an interview that her father's relationship with Robinson was instrumental in getting her a job on the congressman's staff as a $31,000 constituent caseworker after graduating from Stanford last June with a degree in human biology.

"I cannot deny that I'm here because of my father," she said. "But it's not the money, it's the motivation that he encouraged in me."

Ms. Jones described her meteoric rise since then to the three-title position she now holds — administrative assistant, office manager and press secretary — as more of her own doing.

"I have a different kind of access to him that makes it easier for me to interrupt him or intervene with him on behalf of somebody else," she said of Robinson. "I think he feels secure with me being here."

"We've had a close, honest friendship since I was in high school and did a paper on him when he was sheriff. He knows that when he's not here that I or somebody in the office is not going to go off and do something he doesn't approve of or that gets him in political trouble."

First day of strike cripples LA school district

By LOUINN LOTA
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first day of a teachers' strike crippled the nation's second-largest school district as more than 20,000 teachers abandoned chalkboards for picket lines five weeks before the end of the school year.

Although the school board met in a seven-hour session that lasted into late Monday and both sides held informal talks, the walkout entered its second day today.

"We've been on the brink of settlement before," Catherine Carey, spokeswoman for the United Teachers-Los Angeles union, said Monday night. "We're cautiously optimistic because lines of communication are open and we're anxious to settle."

"However, we expect we're going to be on a full blown strike."

School Board President Robert Weintraub said the seven-member board would meet again today.

"I'm hopeful that it won't go more than two or three days," union president Wayne Johnson said of the strike. "There's still a possibility that might happen, but that depends on the board."

The union represents 22,000 of the district's 32,000 teachers, nurses and counselors. Johnson, who joined striking teachers at Hamilton High School, said more informal talks would take place, but no formal negotiations had been set.

The union claimed that 25,000 teachers did not show up for work Monday, 4,000 more than the district's estimate.

Monday morning attendance showed that 430,000 of the 590,000 students were in class but hundreds left junior and senior high school campuses after becoming bored. School officials said they would not be punished for truancy.

"All we're gonna do is sit and vegetate," complained Maureen Lim, 15, a Hamilton High freshman.

The schools were being overseen by 12,650 substitute teachers, aides and administrators. The board had increased substitute teacher's pay to $165, up from $137.

It was the first strike since 1970 for the 600-school Los Angeles Unified School District.

A so-called "fact-finder" from the state was to present a report

Wednesday regarding the unsuccessful 16-month contract negotiation.

The teachers are demanding a two-year 21 percent pay increase, relief from unpaid duties such as playground patrol, and greater control in choosing curricula.

The district most recently offered a 21.5 percent pay increase over three years.

The strike deadline was pushed up two weeks, from May 30 to May 15, when Superintendent Leonard Britton refused to authorize pay for teachers who failed to turn in final grades.

Teachers in the district annually earn from $23,440 in beginning salary to $43,319 for those with doctorates, 98 extra course units and 19 years' experience.

To all customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company:

Public Notice

On March 14, 1989, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas an application which proposes to revise its Toll Restriction Tariff in Section 21 of the General Exchange Tariff. The Commission received the application as Docket No. 8700.

The application proposes to reduce the monthly rate for Toll Restriction residence service from the current $15 a month to $5 a month per residence access line. This proposed application will affect approximately 2,487 residence customers who presently subscribe to toll restriction. It is estimated that the proposed rate schedule will reduce the Company's annual revenues from this service by approximately $298,000, which is less than one percent of the Company's total intrastate revenues. If the application is approved, the effective date of the rate reduction will be set according to the Commission's Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A deadline to file motions to intervene has been set for May 30, 1989. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas at 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Information Office at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

More students join hunger strike in China's central square

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of students, journalists and workers converged on China's central square today in what appeared the most serious challenge yet to a government reeling from a month of pro-democracy protests.

The crowds, a mingling of the curious and the committed, filled Tiananmen Square, stopped traffic on a six-lane avenue and nearly surrounded the adjacent Great Hall of the People, which was protected by hundreds of troops and police.

Embarrassing China's Communist leaders, the protesters have refused requests to cease during the first Sino-Soviet summit in 30 years. The added attention due to Mikhail S. Gorbachev's visit seems to have encouraged them.

A scheduled meeting in the Great Hall between Gorbachev and China's Premier Li Peng was hastily moved to the state guest house about 3 miles away as entrances to the hall were clogged with students and onlookers.

Because of the student occupation, officials already had to move the official welcoming ceremony for Gorbachev from the 100-acre square on Monday and cancel a wreath-laying ceremony today.

"Government — how long will you allow the students to starve?" read a banner carried by journalists of the conservative state-run Guangming Daily, one of thousands of red-and-white banners lofted by marchers.

The banner was referring to the nearly 3,000 students who have been on a hunger strike in the square since Saturday.

Protest groups from at least eight newspapers, emboldened by the students' demand for freedom of the press, joined the march on the square. Another group of 800 from the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences was led by a trumpeter. "We are giving the government a push toward a more democratic state," said Zhang Yong, who reads the nightly English-language newscast on nationwide television. Zhang, who wore sunglasses and gave autographs, said his colleagues were "very, very embarrassed" by coverage of the protests censored by officials. Workers, including factory laborers and coal miners, were prominent in the crowds, and employees of at least three government ministries also marched. One group of 60 museum workers dramatically entered the square from underneath the huge portrait of Mao Tse-tung that hangs above the gate to the adjacent Forbidden City.

They carried a huge yellow banner reading, "Forbidden City workers" and chanted, "Democracy, democracy."

Oil-injured otters returned to Prince William Sound

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Seven otters pulled from oily Prince William Sound nearly two months ago have been returned to the waterway tagged with radar clips for monitoring.

The otter release came as commercial fishermen opened the halibut season Monday and a day before today's start of hearings into the nation's worst oil spill.

The tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground March 24 on a charted reef 25 miles south of Valdez. It leaked nearly 11 million gallons of oil, polluting hundreds of miles of shoreline and killing countless birds, fish and marine mammals.

In Anchorage, officials gathered for a week of hearings by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Grewmembers of the Exxon Valdez were the first scheduled to testify before a panel that includes representatives from the NTSB, the state, Exxon, Coast Guard and Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., a consortium of oil companies that runs the 800-mile trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

The four male and three female otters were freed Monday into Simpson Bay, about 25 miles northwest of Cordova.

"That's something very measurable," said Coast Guard Vice Adm. Clyde Robbins, the federal cleanup coordinator. "Everybody can see that and understand that, and that's why I like it."

The first otter was released at the shore of a shale- and shell-covered beach. She waddled into the water, turned around and lifted a paw as if to wave at the 30 onlookers, who cheered at the sight.

The animals had been undergoing treatment at an Exxon-funded rehabilitation center in Valdez where 45 other otters remain under observation.

"It's the happiest day for the otter rescue center," Director Randall Davis said.

Simpson Bay was chosen because it was untouched by oil, has a stable food source and has a large otter population, Davis said.

Despite the radar, tracking won't be easy, biologist Chuck Monnett said. The signals can be picked up only while the flippers are out of the water, but wildlife watchers hope the flippers' movement during swimming will provide an adequate signal.

"This will be an excellent opportunity to learn more about the animals' behavior once they are returned to the wild," biologist Gary Sonnevil said.

The seven otters were selected because they appeared fully rehabilitated. "Blood samples appear normal, and the otters' fur once again will fully insulate the animals," Davis said.

The first 24-hour halibut season of the spring opened with Coast Guard pilots guiding fishermen away from oil.

"Very few areas where halibut fishing takes place had any free floating oil and it looks good," Coast Guard Cmdr. Mike Donohoe said.

State and federal inspectors will check the catch to ensure no tainted fish wind up on anyone's table, said Bob Trumble, a biologist with the International Pacific Halibut Commission in Seattle.

The number of halibut fishing periods set by the commission depends on how many fish are caught; the yearly quota could be caught in just three openers. More than 60 million pounds of the large, flounder-like fish were caught off Alaska last year and sold for $74.5 million.

Because of the pollution, the state earlier canceled or postponed herring, black cod and shrimp harvests in the sound, and closed some herring fishing grounds.

Mild weather helped more than 125 workers finish cleaning up Green Island in time for the sea lion calving season there.

Monday was the deadline for Exxon to clean oil from rookeries on the northwest corner of the island.

Car bomb kills Moslem group head in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A powerful car bomb exploded in Syrian-policed west Beirut today, killing the spiritual guide of Lebanon's Sunni Moslem community, Grand Mufti Hassan Khaled, and seven other people, police said.

The dead included four of Khaled's bodyguards.

The explosion occurred at 1 p.m. as Khaled's motorcade drove through the crowded Aishe Bakkar district from his headquarters to his house for lunch, said a police spokesman who cannot be named under standing rule.

Moslem radio stations immediately cancelled their programs to blare verses of the Koran, Islam's holy book, in mourning for Khaled, 68, a respected, moderate head of the 900,000-strong Sunni community.

SPS sponsors 'Kid Care'

Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) Local #602 have implemented a community watch program designed to assist children who are lost, hurt or feeling threatened.

Through the "Kid Care" program, a child needing assistance can go to any utility truck bearing the distinctive SPS logo. These vehicles are equipped with radios allowing SPS employees to contact a company dispatcher with a request for help.

The dispatcher, in turn, notifies the appropriate medical or law enforcement agency, and the SPS employee remains at the site until help arrives.

The police or other authorities will handle the situation reported by the child. SPS employees have been instructed only to relay requests for help.

"I think there's a natural inclination to try to help a kid in trouble," said Clayton White, business manager for IBEW Local #02. "We're just asking our people to remember that they're utility workers, not policemen or paramedics, and they should let the authorities handle any Kid Care situation that comes up."

Posters featuring large white trucks with SPS's orange-and-black logo have been placed in elementary and middle schools throughout the company's 52,000-square-mile service area. Principals and teachers at these schools will help educate students about the program, and parents will be encouraged through flyers and other materials to discuss the Kid Care program with their children.

"Kid Care is a natural addition to SPS's existing community service programs," said Laura Dudley, SPS communication specialist for community programs. "SPS employees already act as 'Partners on Patrol,' watching for suspicious activities or fires. Through the company's 'Gatekeeper' program, our employees also keep an eye out for elderly persons who might need medical, financial or some other type of assistance. The Kid Care program offers SPS employees yet another way to serve the communities in which they live and raise their families."

Through the "Kid Care" program, a child needing help can go to any utility truck bearing the distinctive SPS logo. Pictured is Serviceman Buford Thornton.

Palo Duro Canyon trail ride to benefit MDA

Area horse enthusiasts are joining the fight against neuromuscular disease on Saturday, June 3, 1989. They will be participating in the Palo Duro Canyon Trail Ride to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

This pledge event promises to bring together horsemen from around the Panhandle who will be sponsoring the Muscular Dystrophy Association and "Jerry's Kids."

The event will begin at 10 a.m. with the riders forming at the base of the canyon. The ride will follow the trail to the rim of the canyon and return.

Riders of all ages are welcome to participate. The event will provide a unique opportunity to view the beautiful Palo Duro Canyon from horseback.

Those interested in participating can pick up information packets at Gebo's or their local Allsup's Store. Additional materials are available by contacting the MDA office at (806) 359-3141.

MDA is unique in that it provides complete disease related care at no charge to the recipient while also boasting a world renowned research program and a summer camp for area patients.

Proceeds from this event will be presented by representatives of Gebo's, Allsup's, KMLL and KIXZ live on the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon from KFDD.

Letters to troops a boost anytime

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was the project officer for Operation Dear Abby in Korea for the 1988-1989 holiday season. During this time, about 75,000 pieces of mail were sent to our servicemen and women in Korea. The 55 military chaplains in Korea handled the distribution of those letters, and we tried our best to make sure every letter was personally handed to a U.S. servicemember.

I want to thank all the Dear Abby readers who responded so generously. Many of the servicemembers "traded" letters, and some of those letters became separated from their envelopes and addresses were lost. So, those who write should have their names and addresses on both the letters and envelopes.

Don't wait for Christmas. Please keep those letters comin' any time of year. They are great morale boosters!

GEORGE W. BEARDEN, CHAPLAIN (MAJOR) U.S. ARMY

DEAR MAJOR BEARDEN: All right, you asked for it. Readers, write to a lonely servicemember. There are women as well as men in the service, you know. Address your letters to: OPERA-TION DEAR ABBY, AMERICA REMEMBERS, U.S. FORCES IN KOREA, APO SAN FRANCISCO 96202.

DEAR ABBY: My friend and I have a $10 bet. She insists that Phil Donahue is bald! She said she saw him on his own show and he was totally bald — he didn't have even one hair on his head. She swears she saw it with her own eyes.

Abby, I am sure Phil Donahue is not bald, but I can't convince my friend. Can you please find out for sure. If you say so, she will take your word for it. Please help me with this bet. I know I can count on you.

K. KEE IN TRAFFORD, PA.
DEAR K.: Phil Donahue bald? Absolutely not! That lush white thatch you see on his head is human hair — and it's all his!

I watch the Donahue show every day, and I recall the show your friend is referring to. It dealt with baldness, and in it Phil donned a skintight, flesh-colored rubber cap that gave him the appearance of being totally bald. The effect was amazingly realistic. Your friend owes you $10.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason...y you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain of awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to put those ambitious plans you've been contemplating into action. You're both an ingenious conceptualist as well as a prime mover who'll know how to get things done. Taurus, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) An arrangement where you have a vested interest with another could offer you the greatest possibilities today. Be ready to make your move if you start to see signals for personal gain.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In an important association you'll benefit in the long run if you make a few minor concessions at this time. If you show a willingness to be truly cooperative, you'll find your behavior is contagious.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Co-workers will be willing to help advance your personal ambitions today, provided they see there is something in it for them as well. Point out the benefits before proceeding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Friendly social contacts should prove very helpful to you in this cycle in extending your reach and opening doors for you that you couldn't on your own. Don't be hesitant to request favors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Give family matters top priority today. You could be very constructive in assisting those for whom you feel responsible, especially if their financial affairs are a trifle muddled.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to talk directly to people who are pertinent to your immediate needs today. The results will be better when you deal directly instead of using intermediaries.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Conditions that have a direct effect upon your financial well being could make some adjustments today which you will find advantageous. They won't be earth shattering, but they will be significant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Others are likely to need you much more today than you'll need them. This could be especially true of several close friends for whom you'll serve as a leaning post.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) It matters little who takes the bows today as long as your objectives are fulfilled to your satisfaction. Stay in the background and offer advice when needed.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You can be the instrumental force today in bringing unity to a group or committee. Your skills as the mediator will enable you to harmoniously placate diverse thinkers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In challenging developments today you're the person I put my bet on to get what you go after, especially if there is something material at stake. Coming in second won't please you.

Toronto wins for new manager

By The Associated Press

George Bell and Lloyd Moseby, two players who let down Jimmy Williams, lifted his replacement, Cito Gaston, to victory in his first game as interim manager of the Blue Jays.

Bell, with whom Williams had some bitter feuds in recent seasons, hit a two-run homer Monday night. So did Moseby, breaking an 0-for-27 slide as Toronto beat Cleveland 5-3. Earlier in the day, Gaston, the team's hitting instructor, took over — temporarily — when Williams was fired.

"I finally got the bat on a ball," said Moseby, who also had some differences with Williams, most notably about being moved out of center field. "It's unfortunate that Dave Henderson hit his seventh homer and drove in three runs for the Athletics. They got three runs in the third off starter Don August, 2-5. Glenn Hubbard doubled and scored on Luis Polonia's single. Henderson followed with a two-run homer.

Angels 4, Yankees 3
Wally Joyner, who thought he had provided the winning run with an RBI single in the seventh, did get the decisive run home in the 11th with a sacrifice fly.

Roberto Kelly, who also had four stolen bases, homered in top of the ninth to tie it. But the Angels came in through with their 14th win in 17 games as Devon White led off the 11th with an infield single against Lance McCullers, just beating second baseman Steve Sax's throw. White stole second, then, after Brian Downing walked, White stole third. Chili Davis was intentionally walked to load the bases.

After Lance Parrish lined to left, Dave Righetti, the Yankees' fourth pitcher, came on to face Joyner, who lined Righetti's first pitch to center.

Royals 4, Twins 3
The Homerdome lived up to its name as all the runs scored on home runs.

Willie Wilson's first homer of the year, a two-run shot in the seventh, was the winner as Twins' five-game winning streak ended. The Royals' victory string is now four games.

Wilson homered off reliever Juan Berenguer, 1-1, after Frank White led off with a walk. Danny Tartabull also had a two-run homer for the Royals.

Floyd Bannister, 4-0, allowed six hits in six innings, including three solo home runs — by Kent Hrbek, Brian Harper and Greg Gagne. Steve Farr pitched the ninth for his 10th save as many chances.

AL roundup

Jimmy had to take the fall for the way we've been playing.

Kelly Gruber opened the fourth with a single and came home on Bell's fourth homer of the season. Fred McGriff followed with a single and Moseby sent John Farrell's first pitch to straightaway center field for his third home run.

Jimmy Key, 4-2, allowed six hits, one walk and had one strikeout in his third complete game of the season.

Elsewhere, it was Oakland 12, Milwaukee 2; California 4, New York 3 in 11 innings; Kansas City 4, Minnesota 3; and Detroit 3, Chicago 2.

Athletics 12, Brewers 2

At Oakland, Dave Stewart became the first seven-game winner in the major leagues and improved his career record against Milwaukee to 9-0. In seven innings, he allowed six hits with one walk and four strikeouts as the Athletics' offense produced season-highs in runs (12) and hits (17) by the sixth inning.

"I didn't even know it," Stewart, 7-1, said of his lifetime mark against the Brewers. "I knew I threw well against them. The teams I concentrate on are the teams I struggle against, like Baltimore and Kansas City — teams like that."

No decision yet on Sunday Silence

Kentucky Derby winner may not run in Preakness

By TIM LIOTTA
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — A decision on whether to run Sunday Silence in the Preakness will not be made until after the Kentucky Derby winner's workout on Wednesday, trainer Charlie Whittingham says.

But the likelihood that the colt will be in the field for the second leg of the Triple Crown increased Monday when veterinarian Alex Harthill said the bruise in the colt's right front foot had improved dramatically.

"The injury was detected late Saturday and was treated Sunday."

"He's come a long way in a short time," said Harthill, who flew to Baltimore on Sunday from Louisville, Ky., to oversee the treatment of the injury.

"Dramatic improvement would be a good description," Whittingham said Sunday. Silence still was a likely Preakness starter. He plans to gallop the colt 1 1/2 miles today and work him five furlongs Wednesday, the first workout for the son of Halo since winning the Derby May 6.

"We've still got a long way to go," Harthill said. "The more rain we have, the more it works against us."

Sunday Silence walked the shedrow under tack for an hour early Monday morning after Whittingham was forced to cancel the colt's planned 1 1/2-mile gallop because of wet track conditions.

"We've still got a long way to go," Harthill said. "The more rain we have the more it works against us."

Forecasters call for a 40 percent chance of showers today and a chance of showers Wednesday in the Baltimore area. No rain is predicted for Thursday or Friday.

With Sunday Silence, the Preakness shapes up as a rematch between the Kentucky Derby winner and Easy Goer, who finished second in the Derby as the odds-on favorite.

Whittingham thinks Easy Goer will be made the favorite, and Sunday Silence's injury will be only one of the reasons.

Easy Goer, who galloped Monday, is scheduled to work five furlongs at Belmont Park this morning before vaning to Pimlico later today.

Seven colts are listed as likely starters in the 1 3/16-mile race. In addition to Sunday Silence and Easy Goer, Houston, Dansil, Hawkster, Northern Wolf and Pulverizer are listed as likely starters.

Rock Point, the second-place finisher in the Wood Memorial, could also enter. His connections will decide between the Preakness and the Jersey Derby.

Whittingham said he has "no worries at all" about Sunday Silence's exercise schedule.

"We're way ahead of schedule," he said. "We've got a dead-fit horse."

Another colt who has missed two days of preparations is Hawkster, who has a swelling on his left front ankle. However, trainer Ron McAnally received good news after arriving at Pimlico from California.

Sunday Silence was re-shod with "a light bar shoe" in front Sunday evening, which takes some pressure off the injured foot, Whittingham said. The colts will have to be shod again before the race.

If Sunday Silence does not run in the Preakness, he will forfeit any chance of winning the Triple Crown Challenge, which awards at least $5 million to a horse who sweeps the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont.

Border industry faces criticism with environmental issues

By JOHN WRIGHT
Associated Press Writer

MEXICALI, Mexico (AP) — Spread out over a tarp, a sea of barrels suddenly appeared in the desert outside this city, burning the eyes and throats of anyone who approached.

About 150 in all, the barrels were labeled as containing toxic substances. But when a story appeared in a local newspaper, they disappeared as suddenly as they'd appeared.

Mexican environmental officials say the barrels of toxic waste were returned to the United States, but decline to identify which company dumped them or provide further details.

In Mexico, the incident called attention to the problem of border pollution, much of it related to maquiladoras, factories where Mexican workers assemble mostly U.S.-made parts into finished products sold in the United States.

In the tradeoff, U.S. manufacturers cut costs and Mexicans get jobs. But critics charge that the maquiladora industry — in which 1,500 plants employ more than 330,000 Mexicans — is responsible for a lot of pollution.

The Mexicali daily newspaper Novedades last January reported the discovery of the barrels outside Mexicali, just south of the California border about 100 miles east of Tijuana. When a Novedades reporter returned to the same site less than a month later, the barrels were gone.

There was no public announcement about what poisons were in the barrels, who took them away or where they went.

Those barrels became a focus of fears that the industry is not a good neighbor, notwithstanding the employment it provides.

Sergio Quiroz, congressman from the People's Socialist Party in Baja California, accuses maquiladoras of environmental derelictions, which he calls "serious problems that can't continue."

Under Mexican law, maquiladoras must dispose of all toxic wastes in the country of origin, but even Mexico's environmental agency, Sedue, admits it has a hard time enforcing the law.

"We still don't have all the monitoring equipment we need. We don't have enough personnel and laboratory equipment," said Ricardo Parra Montes, the top federal environmental official in Baja California state.

"We are aware the infrastructure of waste management is not duplicated across the border," said Larry Aker, assistant deputy director of San Diego County's Hazardous Materials Management Division.

Waste disposal problems are not limited to maquiladoras. Aker said a "regular flow" of waste oil, some laced with toxins, is taken to Mexico for use as fuel in industrial boilers.

Parra Montes admits the Mexican government does not have as much money as the U.S. government to devote to environmental policing, but enforces the law and fines violators.

"It's hard to oversee the industries," says Antonio Mesa, director of the Mexicali branch of the Colegio de la Frontera Norte, which studies border issues. "There are people who take advantage of the situation."

Francisco Javier Rivas, associate chairman of the National Association of Industrial Parks, said he fears that illegal dumping "could ruin our positive image."

"I hope authorities find who caused that problem," said Rivas, who also manages the Mexicali Industrial Park, home to 24 maquiladora companies employing 7,500 people.

He said the majority of maquiladora industries want to deal responsibly with wastes. "Our own system could be damaged if we don't police ourselves," he said.

Aker said that in his discussions with maquiladoras, he found a willingness to cooperate with environmental regulations. "The mindset of industrial leaders in the United States has carried across to the other side."

But he said Mexican regulations aren't always clear. "They are frustrated as to what the regulations are."

One example of confusion about regulations involves zoning rules, Rivas said. "A company can set up a plant within a residential zone and it becomes difficult to control their waste disposal," he said.

Rivas said this results from enforcement of regulations by various branches of government, which means lack of coordination.

Parra Montes said a prospective maquiladora wanting to locate in Mexico must provide employment and not pollute.

10 cities chosen for All-America

CHICAGO (AP) — Tupelo, Miss., has a new claim to fame. The hometown of Elvis Presley can now add All-America City to its name.

Tupelo was among 10 cities honored at the 40th annual All-America City Awards for programs ranging from drug-abuse prevention efforts to building soccer fields.

"A lot of people ask me, being from Tupelo, 'Is Elvis still alive?'" Mayor Jack Marshall said in accepting the award over the weekend. "Elvis is dead but the spirit lives on — the spirit of Tupelo."

The nine other winners were: Phoenix, Ariz.; Inglewood, Calif.; Greeley, Colo.; Peoria, Ill.; Salina, Kan.; New Bedford, Mass.; Dunn, N.C.; New Bern, N.C.; and Roanoke County, Va.

Officials from the finalist cities went before the 12 judges Friday and Saturday and presented a 20-minute program on five criteria: community leadership, citizen participation, government performance, civic education and community volunteerism and philanthropy.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

U.S. Gov't Approves Patent Claims for New Diet Pill

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special) — An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors' claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally" Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated. "Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone 'automatically' reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 5010 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W992, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime. 24 hours, toll free 1(800) 527-9700, ext. W992.
