Wilson appointed city commissioner

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners unanimously voted to name Jerry Wilson, a lifetime resident of Pampa and a certified public accountant, as the Ward 2 replacement on the City Commission. The action came during a meeting Tuesday evening at City Hall.

Wilson, 46, 1701 N. Russell, said he applied to commissioners for the position at the urging of friends and clients who wanted a CPA in an elected position in city government.

He will be filling the vacancy created when then-commissioner Richard Peet defeated David McDaniel in the mayor's race on May 6.

"Pampa is an excellent town. I grew up here and graduated here," Wilson said. "My roots are deep. I'm also independent and my philosophy is conservative."

He said that while Pampa has a lot to offer, a person can "walk into any coffee shop in town and hear what the problems are."

"I think it's better to light a candle than to curse the darkness," the newest commissioner said of his decision to enter city politics. He is a 1965 graduate of Texas Tech and works for Rowe and Associates, located in the NBC Plaza.

Wilson will be sworn in during a special meeting of the commission next Tuesday at 6 p.m. in City Hall. He is the former owner of the Wil-Mart chain of convenience stores, which closed in Pampa five years ago.

In other business, Commissioner Gary Sutherland grudgingly agreed to go along with commissioners Ray Hupp and Robert Dixon and Mayor Peet on a vote to renew a lease with the Texas Railroad Commission for office space in City Hall.

"I have questions about the city subsidizing a state agency," Sutherland said, noting that the Railroad Commission is getting a rental lease that is only 30 percent of what they would pay for space in the Hughes Building or NBC Plaza.

During the meeting Sutherland said he felt the state agency was getting a "super good deal" but would vote in favor of it "in the interest of unity."

The new lease will increase the amount the Railroad Commission pays for space from $525 a month to $550, with the rate to be reviewed each August for the next four years.

"The city has been renting them space for a long time for the benefit of the oil business in Pampa," Sutherland said. However, he said he is still convinced the Railroad Commission should "pay something closer to market value" for the offices they lease.

He said he doesn't think there is anything illegal or unethical about the agreement, but that it is a question of "business judgment."

Commissioners also voted to approve the widening of an alley between Hazel and Warren streets to make it possible for sanitation trucks to get down the alley.

They also voted to pay $18,701 for Behne Construction Co. of Guymon, Okla., to widen a sewer line near Western Sizzlin Steak House, located at the intersection of Hobart and 23rd Ave.

City Manager Jack Chaney requested the sewer line issue be added as an emergency item on the agenda after he learned that grease in the line is creating "problems on a weekly basis" from backups in the system.

City officials explained that a 12-inch sewer line near the restaurant drops off to only 8 inches and then back to 12, creating a damming of grease residue at the 8-inch area.

Chaney said the city did not have the equipment or the expertise to do the widening job in-house.

Three companies bid on the project. However, two of them, Stubbs Inc. of Pampa and Triple L Construction of Dumas, could not be bonded, according to city officials.

Chaney also pointed out that the only bondable company, Behne Construction, had also been the low bidder on the project.

Commissioners postponed a hearing on the proposed annexation of the Municipal Golf Course, located north of the city, after Chaney said minor problems had been discovered in some of the logistics of the plan.

He said those blueprints are being reworked and will be presented at a future City Commission meeting when a new series of public hearings will be called on the matter.

Former police chief to file official misconduct charges

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

The former chief of the Pampa Police Department is preparing to file charges of official misconduct against several officers of the department.

Reliable sources have informed The Pampa News that the action is being taken in response to an incident which occurred shortly after Eberz resigned from the department on Monday, April 17.

After Eberz resigned, a meeting was held at his home in an attempt to organize a petition asking the Pampa City Commission to rehire him.

The Pampa News reported on Wednesday, May 10, it had learned that during that meeting an officer or officers of the department went by Eberz's home and used official police department equipment to learn who owned the cars parked there.

City Manager Jack Chaney admitted he was aware of the incident and agreed it had happened, but said he had been unable to learn which officers were responsible or why they had done it.

Eberz admitted this morning that an official complaint is being prepared against the department but said he is uncertain whether it will be filed with the city or the District Attorney's office.

"The city has a policy on this but has done nothing," Eberz said. He was referring to Chapter 10 of the city's Personnel Policies guide which notes that disciplinary action may be taken against city employees who engage in "illegal, unethical, abusive or unsafe acts ..."

Eberz said no action has been taken against any member of the police force in spite of the fact that Chaney admitted in the May 10 article that running the tags was clearly unethical.

"I'm tired of the cheap shots," Eberz said, adding that he believes at least one officer in the department may have been bullying several teen-agers on "the drag" because his daughter was a member of the group.

The former chief also said it was "significant" that a senior supervisor in the department knew who ran the license plates, but did not report the behavior or recommend the officers be disciplined. He declined to identify the supervisor he was referring to.

"The city manager will allow my name to be dragged through the mud, but refuses to name the ones who did this," Eberz complained.

He said the Personnel Policies guide directed city officials to either reprimand orally or in writing, suspend without pay, demote or dismiss the officers who are connected with unethical behavior on the job or who abuse city property.

He said the using of city and state computers to satisfy idle curiosity regarding who was at his home on a particular evening certainly falls into the category of abuse of equipment.

"I can't name any specific people," Eberz said, "but there is no doubt certain members of the Pampa Police Department are guilty of official misconduct."

He added that recent media reports regarding members of the department have "validated" his claims that Pampa police needed to be supervised under "tight reigns."

He was referring to reports of an officer being charged with false imprisonment of a 16-year-old girl and another officer being involved in a late-night one-car accident in which drinking alcohol was reportedly involved.

Both cases are still under investigation and are pending resolution.

Chaney said he recognizes that it is within Eberz's rights to file the complaint, but said, "Even if it was official misconduct, I don't know what the penalty would be."

Information provided to The Pampa News indicates the official complaint regarding misconduct should be filed sometime before the end of the week.

Fourth PHS athlete suspended after revealing use of steroids

By SONNY BOHANAN
Staff Writer

A fourth Pampa High School student was suspended from all school-related athletic activities after revealing to Athletic Director Dennis Cavalier on Tuesday that he had used anabolic steroids.

Three other athletes were suspended Monday after admitting to Cavalier that they had injected steroids in the past 2½ weeks. Two of the three said they had taken anabolic steroid injections on two different occasions, while the other confessed to taking one dose.

The fourth athlete said he used anabolic steroids on only one occasion.

A fellow athlete first brought the matter to Cavalier's attention last Thursday after hearing another athlete discussing steroid use. Three students subsequently confessed to having injected anabolic steroids during private interviews with the athletic director.

Cavalier had suspected on Monday that another student was also involved, but it was not until Tuesday afternoon that his suspicions were confirmed.

"The rumor was there, but I hadn't had time to make the inquiry to determine that it actually was so," Cavalier said. "After having conferences with the parents of the first three athletes on Monday night, I found out that a fourth player had participated. On Tuesday, I had a private conference with him, and he subsequently said, 'Yes.'"

All four are prohibited from participating in school-related athletic activities for the remainder of this school year and are on probation throughout the summer. In August, Cavalier will meet with the athletes and their parents to discuss the possibility of reinstating them next season.

"At this point in time, their participation on our football team next year is in jeopardy," Cavalier said Monday afternoon.

Cavalier's chief concern is to catch the steroid problem in its infancy at Pampa High School.

"I am hopeful that we can nip this thing in the bud," he said. "I think we're at the basement stage, right at the beginning. I'm just glad that someone had the sense about him to alert the athletic director."

The athletic director also expressed concern about the amount of technical knowledge the athletes possessed on anabolic steroids. He said the athletes in question were aware of the dangers involved in using steroids, but were willing to risk their health for what they believed to be benefits.

"They have learned a lot about steroids by reading articles in Sports Illustrated, The Amarillo Globe News and Muscle Fitness," Cavalier said. "Books in our high school library on the subject have been fairly popular."

"Generally speaking, it's tied into what they perceive is necessary to become recruited athletes. And I'm forced to ask myself, 'Did I have a part in this? What are we promoting? We tell them, let's get bigger, let's get faster, let's get stronger and more competitive."

'Generally speaking, it's tied into what they perceive is necessary to become recruited athletes.'

"But that's what athletics is all about — striving to be better. I didn't knowingly promote something like this."

"I guess that's the age we live in — a quick-fix society."

Cavalier said this morning that he and the parents of the students were still undecided about whether to file criminal charges against the man who sold the anabolic steroids.

"Initially, we all said that is the thing we need to do, but it gets more complicated than that," he said. "I'm in a process of trying to work out what is best for all to do. I don't know — I'm just trying to work this out. Unfortunately, it's not just a cut and dried deal."

China's political struggle heats up as premier gains military support

By JOHN POMFRET
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — The struggle for China heated up today with official reports of widespread military support for Premier Li Peng, whose attempt to crush the pro-democracy movement has led to mass demonstrations demanding his ouster.

But Li faced new opposition within the policy-making Politburo Standing Committee and China's best-known author joined the multitudes who oppose the conservative premier.

Li declared martial law in Beijing on Saturday, ordering troops to restore order in the city where more than 1 million people have rallied in support of a student campaign for a freer China and an end to official corruption.

The student protests have galvanized the nation, inspiring the largest spontaneous movement in Communist China's 40 years.

Soldiers were deployed on Beijing's outskirts today but have not moved on tens of thousands of student protesters, now on their 12th day of a sit-in at central Tiananmen Square.

Over the weekend, throngs of city residents erected street barricades to prevent an army advance, stalling convoys. Hundreds of thousands of protesters have also taken to the streets in dozens of other cities, all reportedly calling for Li's ouster.

Subway and bus service have resumed in Beijing and traffic appeared near normal today.

Although the army's inability to enforce martial law has called into doubt its willingness to follow Li's orders, the official Xinhua News Agency said six of seven military regions supported the decision to call troops to Beijing. Only the Beijing military command was not mentioned.

Liberation Army Daily, the military newspaper, today published a letter from army headquarters urging soldiers sent to enforce martial law to "fully understand the nature of this struggle ..."

The letter said "the turmoil created by an extremely small number of people still has not been quelled. If their scheme succeeds, then the 10 years of hard struggle for reform and the work of establishing of modernizing socialism will be destroyed in a moment."

On Monday, however, more than 100 senior army officers signed a letter seeking an end to martial law, suggesting a deep split in the military.

Two government sources said today that Hu Qili, one of five members in the policy-making Politburo Standing Committee, had thrown his support to the relatively liberal Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang, who is battling Li.

Hu is in charge of the state-run press. On Tuesday, some official reports criticized Li's attempts to carry out martial law.

Reports circulated that Zhao — who had urged conciliation with the students — had offered to resign rather than order troops into Beijing.

In the first indication of Zhao's status in days, Foreign Minister Qian Qichen told diplomats on Tuesday that the party chief had returned to work.

Early today, Xinhua mentioned Zhao for the first time since before the martial law order and referred to him as party general secretary.

Wan Li, president of the National People's Congress, cut short a U.S. visit Tuesday after meeting with President Bush. U.S. officials said Wan, who has praised the students for their patriotic fervor, was expected to call an emergency meeting of the legislature and press for Li's ouster.

In Shanghai, author Ba Jin, the chairman of the Chinese Writers' Association, was one of 500 intellectuals and high-ranking party members to sign a letter blasting the speech Li made Friday that signaled the start of a crackdown.

The letter also told the party to end press censorship and bring its struggle into the open.

The student movement started April 15 following the death of ousted Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang, a favorite with intellectuals.

Students initially called for a freer society and press and an end to official corruption, but after martial law was ordered they demanded that senior leaders resign.

House acts on school bonding program

AUSTIN (AP) — Property-poor school districts would benefit from a proposed state bond program to help build classrooms because it would cost them less to borrow money, says a state lawmaker.

The proposed constitutional amendment creating a $750 million bond program was tentatively approved 79-57 Tuesday by the House, shy of the two-thirds vote needed for passage by the 150-member body.

"You give that poor school district the ability to get a much better break both on interest rate and issuance cost to their taxpayers," said Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston. "Our estimates are that it would save about $10 million per year to the taxpayers of this state on the current level of issuance of bonds."

Colbert said he expected to get the necessary votes Wednesday for the amendment, sending it back to the Senate for consideration of House changes. If approved, the proposal would be put before voters in November.

The measure would allow the state to issue bonds backed by the Permanent School Fund and loan the money to districts for clas-room facilities and equipment. Colbert said "hundreds of districts" could take advantage of the proposal.

Rep. Hugh Shine, R-Temple, urged House members to move slowly on the measure.

"If in fact we have defaults by those local school districts, we are going to have to cover those defaults with the assets of the Permanent School Fund," he said. "I just think we should move cautiously and carefully."

Colbert said legislation tied to the amendment would deduct delinquent funds from a district's state public education aid.

Before moving the measure forward, the House approved changes to make the proposed amendment more specific by adding, for example, the $750 million cap on issuing bonds. The money would be restricted to instructional facilities and could not be used for such items as football stadiums, Colbert said.

In other action Tuesday, the House:

- Approved 142-0 and sent to the Senate a proposed constitutional amendment providing for crime victims' rights.
- Tentatively approved with a 92-

47 vote a bill affecting the way utility rates reflect federal tax savings and expenses. Consumer groups and the attorney general's office have charged the measure would mean a $1 billion windfall for utility companies from ratepayers.

Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco, blasted the measure as "the public utility company welfare bill." Rep. Nolan "Buzz" Robnett, R-Lubbock, countered that his bill is "a friendly puppy ... This is a ratepayer-friendly bill."

● Postponed until Wednesday consideration of a bill that would put into state law federal statutes on fair housing practices. The measure hit a roadblock when Rep. Dick Waterfield, R-Canadian, added an amendment regarding sexual orientation and transvestites.

Study: Most Americans too fat

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly two-thirds of Americans are too fat, and more than a third are at least 10 percent over the recommended weights for their height, body build and sex, a nationwide health survey shows.

The study, done for Prevention Magazine, determined that 64 percent of adults age 25 and over could stand to lose at least a few pounds.

But fewer than half of those people were trying to shed the extra pounds when polled in November, the study by Louis Harris and Associates says.

The percentage of overweight Americans is the highest since the magazine began keeping track in 1983, and is up from 59 percent in 1987 and 1986, 62 percent in 1985, 56 percent in 1984 and 58 percent in the first year of the survey.

More than a third of Americans are at least 10 percent over the weight recommended for their height, body build and sex by the Metropolitan Life Insurance tables used by many doctors, the survey found. Only about one-fifth weigh about what they should, and they are more likely to be "people in the East and West, suburban residents, people in their 30's and 40's, college graduates," the magazine said.

Slightly more women than men are the proper weight — 22 percent compared with 20 percent — and gender aside, only 29 percent of people making more than $50,000 a year are appropriately trim, the survey said.

"Weight control becomes more problematic when those who are overweight do not feel overweight," the magazine said.

One in five surveyed fell into that category, and only 48 percent of those who needed to shed pounds were actively fighting the battle of the bulge, according to the survey.

Despite the weight problem, the survey found some good news about Americans' health, including more people who quit smoking and cut down on high-cholesterol foods and more women who examined their breasts monthly for signs of cancer.

Overall, it found that people 65 and older are more likely to take preventive health measures than those under 35.

Among the findings: ■ 48 percent said they try to avoid high-cholesterol foods, up 6 percentage points from 1987.

■ 36 percent said they exercise strenuously, sustaining an accelerated heart and pulse rate for at least 20 minutes, at least three days a week. That proportion has remained stable over the past five years.

■ 63 percent reported that they feel under great stress at least once a week, up from 55 percent in 1983. Stress is reported more frequently by those in the lowest and highest income brackets, the survey found.

■ Americans are continuing to kick the cigarette habit, with the percentage of smokers declining to 26 percent, down from 30 percent in 1983.

■ The rate of heavy drinkers — 11 percent — has changed little since 1983, but the proportion of adults who say they never consume alcohol rose 5 points over the period to 39 percent.

■ One out of 10 people under age 30 said they used drugs in 1988, compared with two out of 10 in 1984.

Central Texas University bill approved

AUSTIN (AP) — An overnight change of heart, or mind, resulted in the Senate erasing a key restriction from a bill that would create Central Texas University at Killeen in September 1994.

The bill to create the four-year university in place of two two-year institutions now located at Killeen was passed to the governor, 23-8.

But first the Senate on Tuesday stripped an amendment that would have required approval of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board to establish the new school.

The amendment had been placed on the bill Monday by Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, on a 16-13 vote. Tuesday, the Senate through a series of motions voted again on the amendment, and Caperton got only 10 votes, with the amendment failing 10-20.

"I suspect each of you had visits yesterday, and each of you changed your vote because of somebody on the other side," Caperton said.

Taking the amendment off, Caperton said, means that "log rolling has reappeared and the old days are back, and you flex your muscles and you create a campus wherever you've got the strength politically."

The House sponsor of the bill is Rep. Stan Schlueter, chairman of the House Calendars Committee, which controls the flow of all legislation — including Senate bills — to the House. Caperton was asked if Schlueter's powerful position was the reason for the Senate vote change.

"Mr. Schlueter is obviously a very powerful and influential member. I'm not sure if it is as much the fact that he's chairman of calendars as his general stature in the Legislature," Caperton said.

Caperton said he would not say that the Senate had been "bullied," but he added, "I had it reported to me that he (Schlueter) was plenty hot and that he had visited" with some senators.

Schlueter, D-Killeen, said, "I don't want to talk about the allegations. I'm tired of talking about those ... I'm real happy" about the college bill passing.

He said he had not threatened to hold up Senate bills until the amendment was removed. "It's a little tough when every time I pass a bill I'm accused of using strong-arm tactics when I haven't have," he said.

The Senate also approved a bill that would create a state authority to grant a franchise for a private high-speed rail facility. The bill was sent to the House 28-3.

Wheat Day rescheduled

The annual Wheat Day activities originally scheduled for Thursday afternoon at Bushland have been rescheduled to be held at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. West, Amarillo, starting at 1 p.m. Thursday.

The field tours were canceled after severe hail storms virtually destroyed a lot of the wheat plots last week at Bushland.

The afternoon program at the Texas A&M Center will cover the latest information about wheat varieties, insects, diseases, weed control and the 1989 wheat crop situation.

Also, topics to be discussed include conservation tillage and dietary guidelines relating to fat and sodium in the diet.

Wright's case at a crucial juncture now

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee is deciding whether to dismiss charges against House Speaker Jim Wright in a volatile atmosphere where anything less than a win for the speaker could doom his career.

The Texas Democrat proclaimed his innocence Tuesday night, but even he spoke about the possibility of losing his job, telling reporters that if he became politically crippled he "wouldn't want to be speaker."

Wright has discussed such a possibility before, but his latest comments came with his situation at an especially critical point. Pressure is mounting on his Democratic colleagues, who are torn between loyalty to the speaker and concern that his political troubles may be unresolvable.

"The political pressure is so intense that until this matter is resolved the House of Representatives is paralyzed," said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M.

The ethics panel, in a rare televised session, heard arguments Tuesday from lawyers representing the speaker and from the team of investigators whose report led to 69 allegations that Wright violated House rules.

It was meeting today in closed session on Wright's motion to dismiss, on legal grounds, the two most serious groups of allegations against him: that he used bulk sales of his book repeatedly to evade rules limiting outside income, and that he improperly took gifts from a developer friend who had a direct interest in legislation.

The speaker's lawyer, Stephen Susman, argued that the committee was stretching House rules in charging the speaker. Special outside counsel Richard J. Phelan countered that ethics should not be judged on narrow legalisms.

Normally, dismissal motions such as Wright's are a routine part of a case. However, House Democrats have grown increasingly uncomfortable with the speaker's situation and some have suggested that he must turn things around now or he should step down.

"He needs a victory. That's clear. Only by succeeding on one of the charges can House members and the public take another look at the entire case," said Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., a member of Wright's defense team.

Lawmakers will be reading the committee's decision like tea leaves to determine the speaker's future.

Susman said he might consider a 6-6 tie within the committee on one of the charges as a victory. That would not dismiss a charge, but it could mean there is no majority within the committee for moving it to the next step in its process — a trial-like disciplinary hearing where Wright himself might testify.

If the committee held that hearing, it would then make a report to the full House, possibly recommending punishment.

Rep. Jim Slattery of Kansas, a possible gubernatorial candidate who has come under attack from Republicans who portray him as a Wright ally, issued a statement Tuesday seeking to distance himself from the troubled speaker.

"If the speaker is not exonerated by the ethics panel and if the ethics committee concludes that Speaker Wright has violated House rules, then I think he should resign."

During Tuesday's hearing, members of the committee discussed the political angst that's come from their work.

Rep. Charles Pashayan of California, a Republican member, said he was "disheartened" that some lawmakers were "judging the case."

"It is the duty of Jim Wright as a member of Congress ... to come before this committee and present himself," he said, promising to take a "fresh look" before rendering a verdict.

The speaker did not attend the arguments but his wife Betty did.

Wright spoke to reporters briefly as he left the Capitol, and said he was optimistic.

"I think we clearly had the better side of the legal argument," he said, accusing Phelan of "distorting facts."

Asked whether he believed he could survive as speaker, he said, "That remains to be seen. ... If I can't be not just a respectable speaker, but an effective speaker, then I wouldn't want to be speaker."

"I want to be an effective person in America, and I've had that privilege. Most of all I want to protect my good name and that of my wife and my colleagues," he said, referring to Phelan's contention that one of the gifts to Wright was a no-work job for his wife.

Toricelli closed out the speaker's arguments before the committee Tuesday, saying the ethics panel has succeeded even if Wright is not found guilty.

"If our work is to convince the American people of its integrity and its honesty, we will not serve that purpose by taking the life of one man, his career, his place in history, and throwing it overboard as just so much excess baggage," he said. "You've done your duty. You've made the powerful accountable."

Rivera shows the gas bill she got for over $3,000.

Gas bill is quite a shock

A Pampa woman got the shock of her life last week when she opened her Energas bill and found she owed the company $3,338 for last month's gas service.

"I looked at it and said the decimal point must be in the wrong place," said Victoria Rivera of 944 S. Wells. "Then I saw there were too many numbers. I was in shock."

Rivera said she called the gas company and was told they would send someone out to double-check the gas meter.

"They said they would try to straighten it out," Rivera said. "It really scared me, though, to get a bill like that."

Energas informed Rivera late Monday that her bill had been corrected to $24.01.

"I don't know what I would have done if they hadn't corrected it. I couldn't pay it, though," Rivera said.

IRS employees protest cuts for enforcement

AUSTIN (AP) — Internal Revenue Service employees are protesting $40 million in cuts in enforcement programs and personnel they say will result in the loss of $200 million to the federal treasury and the loss of jobs of 850 seasonal employees at Austin.

More than 70 IRS employees chanted "honest taxpayers lose, tax cheaters win" as they marched along a sidewalk in front of the Federal Building Tuesday.

Anita Greenberg, president of Chapter 247 of the National Treasury Employees Union, which represents 6,000 workers, said cutbacks at the Austin regional center alone will mean a $95 million loss in tax collections.

The IRS began the year with a $360 million deficit and imposed deep cutbacks to balance its budget.

The additional $40 million in cuts, which the union is asking Congress to offset with supplemental appropriations, were announced in May, Ms. Greenberg said.

"Certainly we care about the loss of jobs," Greenberg said. "But we have a tremendous responsibility — we are the people who fund the federal budget. There are tax cheats out there and they're robbing America blind."

Those furloughed at the Austin center include 850 seasonal workers, about 600 hired to process tax returns, and about 250 at the Austin Compliance Center to check returns for compliance, according to Bob Branson, public affairs specialist with the Austin District IRS Office.

More releases of seasonal workers are likely, Branson said. "We're getting to that time of year when we normally let them off," he said.

Linda Valentine, who said she was promoted three times in eight months and has received awards monthly since March, was among the 104 employees furloughed last week at the Compliance Center.

"At 9 a.m. Tuesday, I was named employee of the month. At 1 p.m. they told me I was furloughed," Valentine, an IRS employee for 2½ years, said.

Valentine's job was to review tax returns of taxpayers who under-reported their income by $10,000 or more.

"I was being promoted so many times, they promoted me right out the door," Valentine said.

Don Modersohn, an IRS employee since 1967 and president of Chapter 52 of the union, called the cutbacks "ludicrous" and the loss in revenue "astronomical."

"What we're losing (in revenue) far outweighs what they cut us," Modersohn said. "It costs us 54 cents to get $100, so it would cost us $216,000 to collect the $40 million we're asking for."

"There will undoubtedly be revenue lost as a result of our releasing seasonal employees early, but we don't have a dollar figure estimate," IRS spokesman Branson said.

Prisoners return to dorms after food protest

EDEN, Texas (AP) — Inmates protesting food quality and other conditions at a privately run prison were negotiating with authorities there today as 20 lawmen stood by outside, a federal prison official said.

"We're in negotiations with the inmates and everything is peaceful and calm," said Pat Whalen, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, which contracts with the Eden Detention Center to house federal inmates. "There have been no injuries and no property damage."

Whalen said the prison houses about 300 inmates, but he did not know how many of them were involved in the "stand-in" that began after dinner Tuesday night, when inmates refused to return to their dormitories.

Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said he had been told the disturbance initially involved a large number of prisoners, but that only 75 were still outside their cells shortly after midnight.

Local law enforcement agencies were standing by at the prison only as a precautionary measure, Whalen said. The prison is about 40 miles east of San Angelo.

Inmates congregated in a courtyard to protest prison conditions and the quality of food they're served, said Concho County Sheriff Bill Fiveash.

But Whalen said he could not say exactly what sparked the disturbance: "The whole topic of that is under negotiation with the prisoners right now and it would be premature to discuss it."

Prison employees reached by phone declined to give any information about the prison or the protest.

When inmates began returning to their dormitories after 10:30 p.m., officials said they decided to avoid an immediate confrontation.

"We will not take any steps. We will let them sit in the yard and wait," Jim Eyskens, a San Antonio-based Bureau of Prisons officer, said at the time. "I'm certain this will be resolved without force."

Most of the prisoners are illegal aliens serving sentences of no more than 18 months for federal crimes, said Greg Bogdan, a Bureau of Prisons spokesman in Washington.

Prisoners have complained before about conditions at the facility, which opened in early 1986.

In July 1987, prisoners signed a letter citing violations of civil rights, Bureau of Prisons standards and sanitation. Prisoners said in the letter they were offered real meat only once a week. They later complained of a lack of recreational facilities.

A federal prison inspector recommended improvements in prison employee training.

Roy Burnes, the detention center owner, later in 1987 said he planned to change the prison population makeup from illegal aliens to white-collar, short-term federal prisoners.

A fire in December 1988 caused more than $1 million in damage to the prison, forcing it to close for 35 days until a new 60,000-square-foot addition could be completed.

Before the fire, the prison held 200 prisoners. The addition was designed to hold 365 inmates, but the number of inmates there Tuesday could not be determined.

Radioactive antibodies seek and destroy cancer

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nuclear-tipped antibodies that seek and destroy cancer inside the body show promise of giving doctors a new way to attack tumors, researchers say.

The goal is to blitz cancer cells with huge doses of killer radiation. Doctors launch the attack with protein probes that hunt down the cancer deep within the body.

In initial experimental use, researchers found that the strategy wiped out all detectable cancer in people who were not helped by ordinary treatment. However, far more study will be necessary before researchers know for sure whether this approach will cure cancer.

The findings were presented Tuesday by Dr. Oliver W. Press of the University of Washington to the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology.

Press is one of several researchers around the country who are working with radioactive antibodies to combat cancer. However, he said his group is using the highest doses of radiation yet tried.

"We're trying to blast them out of the water," he said.

Antibodies are natural hunters produced by the body to find germs, cancer and other dangerous invaders. Scientists can now produce large quantities of antibodies that look for cancer, and they have fitted them with powerful warheads of radioactive iodine.

With this strategy, doctors believe they can deliver far higher doses of radiation than would otherwise be possible and still spare healthy tissue from harm.

Press and colleagues have given the treatment to seven people with the blood cancer lymphoma. All had failed an average of four kinds of chemotherapy. The treatment wiped out all visible signs of the cancer in five of them.

"The percentage of patients responding is much greater than we would expect from conventional chemotherapy," said Dr. Bruce Cheson of the National Cancer Institute.

In other research presented at the meeting:

■ Dr. Donald S. Kaufman of Massachusetts General Hospital reported preliminary evidence that a combination of three drugs followed by radiation can eliminate bladder cancer. If this approach works out, it would provide an alternative to surgical removal of the bladder, which is now standard treatment.

■ Many doctors are reluctant to give chemotherapy to women with early breast cancer, because most can be cured by surgery alone. Dr. Alexander Paterson of Cross Cancer Institute in Edmonton, Alberta, has found that those who relapse often carry multiple copies of an abnormal gene, known as an oncogene, inside their tumors. Checking for this gene may help doctors target chemotherapy to those who are most likely to be cured.

■ Dr. Gastan Rivera of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., said a review shows that about two-thirds of all youngsters with acute lymphocytic leukemia, the most common childhood cancer, can now be cured.

Volunteers lunch

Lamar Elementary School teachers Shirley Dawson, left, and Jeanne Depee make final preparations for a lunch honoring volunteers at the school held earlier this week. Dawson noted that community and parent volunteers are in a large part responsible for making the Pampa public schools so successful. She said the volunteers allow for a wider variety of activities and more adult supervision in the schools. Each of the six local public elementary schools have had or are planning to have special recognition activities for community volunteers.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Government picks on Amish — again

The government is picking on the Amish again. Why can't it just leave these humble, harmless people alone? This time Mercer County authorities in Pennsylvania are prosecuting a woman, Lucille Sykes, who served as an unlicensed midwife to the Amish. She is accused of delivering the sixth child of an Amish couple, who strongly praise the midwife. Sykes says she has delivered 600 children for the Amish in recent years.

Outrageously, the government is using the Amish couple's own upright beliefs to persecute Sykes. The family holds dear to the commandment, "Thou shalt not bear false witness." The government used their honesty to gain testimony about Sykes' work.

The assault on the Amish, moreover, is bad health policy. Midwives are a blessing, furnishing low-cost, expert delivery of babies, in place of the thousands of dollars hospitals charge. Midwives also provide prenatal care to expectant mothers. Salina Walters, president of the Pennsylvania Midwives Association, said the Amish case is "an opportunity to challenge the law and to make the issue of midwifery known. We would like to see midwifery decriminalized."

The strange workings of our government are a puzzle to the straightforward Amish. Says Walters: "In talking with the Amish, they can't understand why a woman is permitted by law to have an abortion, but she can't choose where and how she will have a baby."

So the Amish are again forced to stand up for rights that never should have been questioned. Two decades ago, the Iowa state government tried to impose state education rules on Amish schools. When the Amish refused, Big Brother jailed some parents and seized Amish property. State authorities even tried to nab Amish children and bus them to government schools. A tide of national outrage ensued. The Supreme Court eventually sided with the Amish people's right to teach their children as they saw best.

More recently, the Supreme Court upheld the Amish's right to opt out of the Social Security system. The Amish traditionally take care of their own elderly.

Why have Americans, including the Supreme Court during its most radical years, sided with the Amish, even as the government imposed vast new systems of oppression on the remaining 240 million Americans? Maybe we subconsciously know that leaving decent, hard-working, law-abiding people alone is the best policy after all. Letting the Amish retain their ways may be a kind of tacit admission that the welfare state — with all its high taxes and controls — doesn't work and should be revoked.

Berry's World

"I dunno — I'll have to study it!"

Those cocked and loaded polls

WASHINGTON — A questionnaire turned up in the mail the other day, courtesy of an organization called ASH (Action on Smoking and Health). This purported "national survey" is so dumb it is funny, but it provides an opportunity to say something about public opinion polls generally.

This particular survey consisted of seven questions. Question No. 1 reviewed warnings from respected sources that tobacco smoke "can and does cause lung cancer in non-smokers." Therefore, "do you think government should ban all smoking in most public places, permit smoking only in separate sections, only enforce decisions made by owners, or do nothing?" Question 2 offered the same alternative answers about smoking in private work places.

This was No. 3: "Tobacco kills more people each year than alcohol, guns, AIDS, automobile and plane accidents combined. Yet, as a society, we spend far more money educating the public about each of these other problems. Do you feel it's time the government should: (a) spend more money on anti-smoking education, (b) spend comparable money on anti-smoking education, (c) continue the same level of spending, or (d) reduce or eliminate spending on anti-smoking education?"

This was No. 4: "Although tobacco is estimated to kill at least 350,000 people each year, and to cost you and me and every American taxpayer more than $100 billion, our federal government continues to spend millions to encourage the growing of tobacco and to subsidize the tobacco industry. Therefore, do you think the government should: (a) immediately discontinue all aid to tobacco, (b) phase out all aid to tobacco over the next few years, (c) phase out all aid to tobacco over a longer period of time, or (d) continue to aid tobacco growers and the tobacco industry at present levels?"

You get the general idea. Question 5 was cocked and loaded to get answers favoring a ban or a drastic limitation on tobacco advertising. Question 6 asked if the government should require smokers to pay more for their health insurance or permit insurance companies to charge smokers more. Question 7 asked if the respondent would be willing "to spend just a few cents a day in support of ASH's efforts to fight back against the six enormously powerful tobacco giants and to defend the rights of the non-smoking public."

Hoo, boy! What a survey. It recalls a survey some years ago by a pro-gun outfit. The question was to this effect: "Do you believe agents of the government should have power to crash into your home, seize and confiscate the guns you keep for protection of your wife and children, and thus leave them at the mercy of rapists and robbers? Yes or no?"

George Gallup is sufficient authority for the proposition that pollsters must be strictly impartial in presenting an issue. In The Sophisticated Poll Watcher's Guide, published in 1972,

Gallup remarked that "Nothing is so difficult, nor so important, as the selection and wording of questions." The loaded question, he said, "is usually self-defeating because it is obvious that it is biased."

The bias may not be obvious, or at least not as brazenly obvious as the survey from ASH. Gallup cited possible questions about the war in Vietnam. This was one possibility: "Do you feel the United States should have gotten involved in Vietnam in the first place?" This was another: "Do you feel the United States should have helped South Vietnam to defend itself?" The first question invites a "no" answer, the second a "yes" answer.

Such baited questions regularly come along. "In order to improve the quality of education in the United States, should teachers be paid higher salaries?" Back in January, a survey inquired to this effect: "Do you feel that members of Congress, who already receive expensive perquisites and a lush retirement, should vote themselves a 51 percent raise in pay?"

The art of public opinion polling has been considerably refined and improved since Gallup published his book, but the essential elements have not changed. The wording of survey questions remains the be-all and end-all.

It will be interesting to see if the people at ASH release the questions along with the anticipated answers when they publish their findings. At least 92.7 percent of the respondents had better favor a ban on all smoking in public places, or they will have to try another poll.

We await the data with bated breath. And anyone who fails to say "yes" to Question No. 7 — the fund-raising question — may fairly be termed a rotten egg.

Everyone's had bad thoughts

Everybody has had "bad thoughts." Each of us, if we are honest, must confess to having had some "bad thought."

Billy Graham was once asked if he noticed when a pretty girl passed by. He said, "Of course."

He said, "The first glance is proper appreciation. It's the second look that may reflect an improper lust."

Everyone has had bad thoughts. Socrates said, "Every man is a chariot driver. His chariot is pulled by two horses, a black one and a white one. The trick is to keep both horses pulling in the same direction."

In my own youth, I remember hearing how Al Capone collected money from merchants, threatening to harm them if they did not pay.

I remember calculating what an easy way that would be to get rich, even if one collected from each merchant only 50 cents a day.

You can tell by the proposed take that this was a long time.

Any such thought the ever crossed my own mind was cancelled out by "fear." My mother had instilled in her children an abiding "fear" of wrongdoing.

Paul Harvey

Fear spared my sister and me from many missteps.

Fort Wayne, Ind., has been pondering what happened to Eric Eviston and Kevin McMillen.

According to the Ft. Wayne Journal-Gazette, Kevin comes from one of the city's wealthiest philanthropic families. Eric, regional winner in the Science Fair, was preparing for an educational career in aeronautical engineering, intending to become an airplane pilot.

Both were seniors in private, fashionable Canterbury High School.

With spring vacation coming up the two were restless, their talk turned to vacation options and the necessary spending money and one thing led to another until somebody said: "Why don't we rob a filling station?"

So last March 20 — Kevin and Eric went out to the Speedway station on Illinois Road and Eric produced his father's unloaded revolver and they demanded money from the station attendant.

And got it. In fact it had been so easy — not even any customers around — they figured lawmen would never expect them to rob another station on the same evening.

So they went to the Speedway Station on U.S. 24 and robbed it.

Back in the car they split the money, but they were spotted by an alert detective sergeant from the sheriff's office. This was not just "a mistake"; this was an "ineradicable mistake."

The boys will be in prison for two years — and will carry for the rest of their lives — felony convictions which will foreclose two promising careers.

Eric says, "We didn't realize what we were doing was that serious."

Toughness needed to cure drug problem

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Contrary to the popular assumption, there has never been any great mystery about how to end the drug crisis in this country. As Wayne Luton observes in the current issue of National Review:

"Other countries have successfully coped with emergent drug epidemics. But there is as yet no indication that the United States is willing to duplicate the measures — generally including a combination of stiff jail sentences for possession and swift execution of dealers — that have been found necessary to stem a plague of this kind."

In Japan, for example, drug addicts are put in jail and subjected to "cold turkey" withdrawal. It isn't a pleasant experience, but addicts are accordingly reluctant to undergo it twice — and Japan has no drug problem to speak of.

In Malaysia, people who try to smuggle drugs into the country are given the death penalty. It was duly imposed, a couple of years ago, on two young men — one British, the other Australian — who may have assumed that it didn't apply to whites. But it did, and — despite appeals from Margaret Thatcher and the pope — it was. Malaysia is practically exempt from drug smuggling.

These are, of course, Draconian measures, and this country would be deeply reluctant to resort to them. In fact some sensible people, like my friend Bill Buckley, are convinced that we would never do so, and in desperation have advocated legalizing drugs.

This might have the effect of eliminating criminal control of the drug traffic (or might not: The laws would presumably still bar drug sales to youngsters, and there would therefore still be great profit in breaking them). But it would also result in a huge increase in drug consumption, just as the repeal of Prohibition vastly increased the use of alcohol.

There are signs that President Bush's drug czar, Bill Bennett, has been doing some hard thinking along these various lines. Recently, he remarked that he was "looking into" the possibility of tossing first-time drug offenders into "boot camps" for a little "psycho-correctional therapy," the idea being to make it "so grueling and so unpleasant (that) people don't want to go back to it." Something rather like the Japanese system, in short. And Bennett suggested that execution would be appropriate for smugglers — a la Malaysia.

But my guess is that Bennett won't get to first base with his proposals, and as my first witness I call Tom Wicker.

Wicker, of course, is the paradigmatic Mr. Liberal among American columnists. He took one look at Bennett's remarks and responded in a column that is virtually one long scream of protest.

"How many camps will there have to be," he wails, "to accommodate all first-time offenders?" (A lot, is the answer to that.) "Is every drug offender apprehended, from all levels of affluence, going to be designated a camper?" (Absolutely — we pledge equal opportunity jailing, Tom.)

"Users," Wicker goes on, "are often victims and seldom criminals; many come to a point where they cannot help themselves; many gladly would accept treatment if it were available." (It is widely available, and most of them simply use it to detoxify themselves and thereby cut their habit back to a less expensive level.)

The hard truth is that there will be no solution to the drug plague in this country as long as liberal wimps like Wicker manage to block effective punishment for lawbreakers. Toward the end of his column, we are vouchsafed a peek at Wicker's own solution for the problem: "treating and trying to prevent addiction, not bullying its victims."

It's hard to believe that Wicker takes his own proposal seriously. What is crystal clear is that he and people like him will fight tooth and claw against any really tough attack on the drug scourge.

Texas inmate executed for rape-slaying of abducted woman

By MICHAEL GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Houston electrician was executed early today for participating in the rape and strangulation of a woman who was abducted after her car broke down on a freeway on New Year's Day 1981.

Stephen McCoy, 40, was pronounced dead at 12:25 a.m., seven minutes after a lethal mixture of drugs was inserted into his arms.

He had no final statement, although he smiled briefly for four friends he invited to the execution. He coughed and his chest heaved five times as the drugs began to take effect, then uttered two low and long groans before he stopped breathing.

McCoy lost a final appeal late

Tuesday when the U.S. Supreme Court voted 5-4 to reject a request for a stay.

The court's action was unusual since the appeal was McCoy's first to reach the high court and it has been routine for initial appeals to merit at least one re-hearing.

"The significance of this is the courts very clearly are indicating impatience with dilatory tactics within the process and they intend to expedite the process," said Attorney General Jim Mattox, who witnessed the execution.

McCoy was convicted in the slaying of Cynthia Johnson, 18, of Conroe, who was abducted by McCoy and two other men from her car which had broken down on a Houston freeway as she was returning home from a New Year's Eve party.

McCoy

According to trial testimony, McCoy raped the woman and then held her legs down while two other men, James Paster and Gary LeBlanc, strangled her with an electrical cord. Testimony also showed Paster hammered a nail up the woman's nostril to make certain she was dead.

Miss Johnson would have turned 27 on Monday.

Paster, awaiting death for another slaying, received a life sentence for the Johnson killing. Last month he was caught with another death row inmate in an unsuccessful escape attempt. LeBlanc, who testified for the state, received a 35-year term.

"The death penalty was made for people like Stephen Albert McCoy to protect society from people like him and from people like James Paster," George Lambright, who prosecuted the case, said.

"The fact that Paster went that extra effort to go ahead to drive a nail up her nose — although McCoy didn't do that, in my opinion, it typifies the defendants we're involved with. It was the coldbloodedness of the acts."

"If executed, justice will have been served," Miss Johnson's parents, who declined to be interviewed, said through Lambright.

"There was no remorse, no drugs, no alcohol, no real explanation for the violence except they were just mean," Mattox said.

McCoy insisted he was in another room when the woman was slain.

"I knew what was going on," he said in an earlier death row interview. "I just couldn't do anything about it."

McCoy was in prison serving five years for burglary when he was charged with the Johnson slaying. McCoy, Paster and LeBlanc also were linked to a 1980 murder-for-hire in Houston and the rape and stabbing of a woman.

"It really ain't the question of dying," McCoy said. "We're all going to do that some day. I'm right with the man upstairs. I know this. He knows I'm innocent. It's not that that bothers me about dying. It's to die for something I didn't do and to look like a sicko doing it."

"Sometimes you make the wrong decisions. That's just the way it goes. I'm happy with myself, happy with the Lord. I'm at peace with myself. I know I didn't do it."

Mutilation case shows limits of systems

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — The state needs tougher laws to keep repeat offenders in custody, said Gov. Booth Gardner after a man with a long history of assaults on children was accused of raping and mutilating a 7-year-old boy.

The arrest of Earl Kenneth Shriner, 39, has frustrated police, prosecutors, mental health professionals and relatives who had tried to keep him in mental hospitals or jails.

Shriner was charged with attempted murder, rape and assault after the boy was found in a wooded area, naked and bloody with his penis cut off.

The boy was in satisfactory condition Tuesday at Mary Bridge Children's Health Center.

Shriner's 38-year-old brother, John, said: "He's my brother and I love him. But God, he's driven the whole family nuts for 20 years."

If guilty, "he should be put somewhere where he's safe and where people are safe from him," said his mother, Delores.

"He's crying out for help," she said. "He says he didn't do this, but he has two personalities — a loving son and then the man who may have done this."

Gardner on Tuesday called for a change in the law so individuals with a known risk for committing such crimes "could be subject to involuntary treatment and civil commitment under some code or statute."

State Sen. Phil Talmadge said Tuesday he would ask corrections and mental health officials why Shriner was free.

"I want to see their explanation," Talmadge said. "This guy by all accounts had no business being out on the street."

Shriner pleaded innocent Monday in Superior Court, two days after the attack. Bail was set at $1 million and trial for July 17.

Reports on Shriner through 1977 show authorities considered him mentally retarded. In 1987, psychologists and psychiatrists at Western State Hospital concluded he had a learning disability and five disorders, including pedophilia and an anti-social personality.

His troubles with the law began in 1965, when he was declared a "defective delinquent" after choking a 7-year-old girl. The term, now abandoned, prone to violence because of mental or emotional problems.

In November 1966, he was sent a school for the developmentally disabled after he led authorities to the body of a 15-year-old classmate. But he was considered too dangerous for the school and was committed to Western State psychiatric hospital from 1968 to 1973.

In 1976, he was acquitted in two assault cases, but the next year he pleaded guilty to assaulting two 16-year-old female hitchhikers. The judge ordered him committed to the sexual psychopath program at Eastern State Hospital, but he was rejected there and spent his entire 10-year sentence at the Washington Corrections Center.

Subsequent efforts to return him to Western State were rejected by a judge, although late in his prison term Shriner was found with lists of items he would need to maim or kill youngsters, officials said.

"We did everything legally possible to keep him in custody," said Kathryn S. Bail, chairwoman of the Indeterminate Sentencing Review Board.

House tentatively approves AIDS legislation

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gay rights activists blasted a House AIDS bill, saying it would be better for lawmakers to pass no bill at all to deal with the disease.

Glen Maxey, executive director of the Lesbian-Gay Rights Lobby of Texas, said Tuesday the measure was based in "total ignorance and bigotry."

"In 1991 we will be back here dealing with AIDS. The Legislature of 1989 will have the blood on their hands of hundreds of thousands of young people in Texas because they didn't act responsibly now," Maxey said.

House backers defended the acquired immune deficiency syndrome legislation, which won preliminary approval with a 141-0 vote on Tuesday. It returns to the Senate for consideration of House changes after another vote.

AIDS is a disease in which a virus attacks the body's immune system. Lawmakers said more than 6,500 AIDS cases have been diagnosed in Texas, and more than 4,000 people have died.

Despite key differences from the Senate AIDS bill, including the lack of an anti-discrimination provision, Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston, said he and others asked House Speaker Gib Lewis to not appoint a conference committee to work out disagreements if senators request one.

But Maxey said many House members voted for the bill hoping it could be improved during the conference committee negotiations.

Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Pollock, said, "This is not a gay rights bill. It's not a gay-bashing bill. This bill is for us. It's for all of us. It's a public health bill we have here."

Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, called the measure "progressive."

"I don't know of another state that's doing this much at this point in time," said McKinney, a physician.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said he would ask staff members to evaluate the amended measure. He said he was not ruling out a conference committee, and that he disliked a take-it-or-leave-it attitude.

Brooks sponsored the omnibus AIDS legislation in the Senate, and McKinney in the House.

The House bill would establish a program at the Department of Health to assist hospitals, people with the virus and others to buy medication that has been proven effective in reducing hospitalization related to the virus that leads to AIDS.

The health agency also would set up a model AIDS education program, and an AIDS grant program for community organizations would be established. The House bill directed that limited state funds be used for treatment and not education by such groups.

The measure, unlike the Senate bill, provides that education materials for those 18 and over would emphasize that "sexual intercourse involving anal intercourse and intravenous drug use involving the sharing of needles are the primary methods of transmission of HIV infection."

The material also would state that homosexual conduct and prostitution are criminal offenses. Education materials for people under 18 should emphasize sexual abstinence before marriage and fidelity in marriage "as the expected standard in terms of public health," says the bill.

Money could not go to groups that promote illegal behavior under the House bill.

The bill also would set up a program to identify and inform people who may have been exposed to an infected person that they should be tested and seek treatment.

It would be a felony, punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $5,000, for someone with AIDS to intentionally expose another person to it.

Park workers rounding up animals after recent floods

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — It was a most unusual deer hunt Tuesday in this Dallas suburb — one with a helicopter and no guns.

But it was the only way that officials from International Wildlife Park could figure to find their five missing deer, who escaped during the recent flooding that ravaged the drive-through wildlife park.

Terry Gonzalez said the park had received numerous reports of deer being sighted in nearby business developments.

"We secured the services of a helicopter, and they're searching for the deer this afternoon," Ms. Gonzalez said.

The wildlife park, which abuts the Trinity River, was flooded following several days of heavy rain late last week. Two fences were knocked down, and zoo officials had to stand guard to keep animals in those areas, including several rhinos and hippos, from escaping. Despite their efforts, several hoofed animals bolted away to freedom.

Searchers on Tuesday afternoon spotted several deer from the helicopter but were not able to get close enough to shoot them with a tranquilizer dart.

"We're still trying to determine our losses," Gonzalez said. "A number of animals died."

Among the losses at the 11-year-old business were a monkey, several hoofed animals and a couple of ostriches.

But park employees managed to help several expectant animals give birth during the turmoil, including a rare guar. The wild ox, normally found in India, is an endangered species, Gonzalez said.

Officials do not expect the park to reopen until Thursday or Friday.

"We've mounted an unbelievable cleanup effort," Gonzalez said. "We've temporarily doubled our staff. We're repairing fences, and we're even pumping water back into the Trinity."

Gonzalez said the flood, similar to one that damaged the park in 1981, was not an unpleasant experience for everyone.

"We have five baby hippos," she said. "I understand they thoroughly enjoyed all the water."

Miss Universe wears her crown after her selection Tuesday night in Cancun, Mexico.

Miss Universe hopes fame endures

By JOHN WRIGHT
Associated Press Writer

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — The new Miss Universe, Angela Visser of the Netherlands, says she hopes her stay in the limelight will stretch beyond her one-year reign.

Miss Visser, 22, a beautician from Rotterdam, today said she plans to use the title to advance a modeling career.

"The most important thing is for people to remember me after this year is over," she told The Associated Press in a telephone interview after she was chosen Tuesday night from among 76 contestants.

Miss Universe 1988, Pornnip Nakhirunkanok of Bangkok, Thailand, presented the crown to the winner after swimsuit and evening gown competitions and personal interviews.

First runner-up was Miss Sweden, Louise Drerrenstam, 19; second runner-up, Miss U.S.A., Gretchen Polhemus, 24, of Fort Worth, Texas; third runner-up, Miss Poland, Joanna Gapiński, 21, and fourth runner-up, Miss Mexico, Ardianna Abascal, 18.

The other five finalists were: Miss Chile, Macarena Mina, 20; Miss Venezuela, Lisa Ljung, 18; Miss Germany, Andrea Stelzer, 24; Miss Jamaica, Sandra Foster, 19, and Miss Finland, Aasa Maria Loewdahl, 20.

Miss Visser, who wore a white gown with silver sequins, was considered one of the top contenders at the competition, held at the Fiesta Americana Condesa Hotel. She speaks five languages and has studied piano and classical ballet.

She says she enjoys writing poetry, listening to classical music and playing tennis.

New Soviet congress prepares to meet

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Legislators elected to the new Soviet congress met in strategy sessions to organize programs aimed at meeting voters' high expectations on the eve of Thursday's inaugural session.

The Congress of People's Deputies is the country's first parliament chosen in contested elections in seven decades.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in a brief interview with the TV news program Vremya Tuesday night, said "the people are expecting a lot from this session," but he did not disclose the party's strategy.

A group of Moscow reformers, including figures as diverse as human rights activist Andrei D. Sakharov and populist party official Boris N. Yeltsin, proposed an agenda that calls on the congress to consider economic and political reform.

Cooperatives want to repeal a decree that kicked them out of profitable businesses. Armenians want a solution to ethnic problems and Baltic leaders want economic independence.

Historian Yuri Afanasiev told the Moscow deputies at a meeting Tuesday that the party had set its own agenda for a short-lived Congress and devised its own slate for the Supreme Soviet.

The congress' formal duties are to meet annually, choose a president and 542-member Supreme Soviet legislature, and approve the president's recommendations for premier, head of the Supreme Court and national prosecutor. But Sakharov has gone as far as saying it ought to completely replace the smaller Supreme Soviet as the legislative body.

The party's Central Committee on Monday proposed Gorbachev for president, and little opposition is expected.

However, a battle may develop because reformers want Gorbachev to make a report on the state of the Soviet Union before they vote for president.

"The people expect very much — unfortunately," said Yuri Shcherbak, a Kiev deputy known for his writings on the Chernobyl nuclear disaster. "The people expect us to be able to solve everything immediately."

Citing Soviets' hope for change, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda today quoted a resident of the Kemerov region as saying the main thing he hoped for from the congress was to "make our life, our country such that you can once again say without blushing, 'I am a citizen of the Soviet Union.'"

Voters elected 1,750 of the congress' 2,250 deputies, and the remainder were appointed by various official organizations.

About 80 percent of the congress' deputies are members of the Communist Party, but party leaders cannot count on automatic support among Moscow radicals or from the Baltic republics.

Russian republic president and Politburo member Vitaly I. Vorotnikov on Monday night presented a list of 147 party-approved representatives to be named from Russia, said Sergei Stankevich, a leader of the Moscow Deputies Club.

"Many deputies on the list never even knew they were selected," Stankevich said. "They were just appointed again" by the party leadership without any public input, he complained.

Few negative votes were cast in the previous 1,500-member Supreme Soviet that the new body is replacing. Reformers, speaking to TV interviewers late Tuesday, said the party should not be afraid of dissent.

"If there is democracy, then these factions are inescapable," historian Roy Medvedev said.

Medvedev, a specialist on the repression of the Stalin era, could not be published for years. But he has gained acceptance in the freer atmosphere of Gorbachev's reforms and won a parliamentary seat from Moscow.

Writer Daniel Granin, another reformer, added the "customary unity of opinion is extraordinarily dangerous."

'Cave woman' in good spirits after four months of isolation

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — A human guinea pig says she made friends with mice and learned some English during her 130 days in an underground cave to help researchers study the effects of isolation.

Stefania Follini of Ancona, Italy, smiled and waved at reporters and well-wishers as she emerged Tuesday afternoon from Lost Cave, ending an experiment that began on Jan. 13.

Would she do it again? "Sure," said the 27-year-old interior decorator, who volunteered for the experiment.

Miss Follini, who lost 17 pounds during her solitude and now weighs 90 pounds, appeared healthy and happy as she answered questions from reporters.

Although she had no contact with humans, except through computers, Follini said she didn't feel lonely during the experiment and adopted two cave mice as pets. She named them Giuseppe and Nicoleta.

"There was some difficulty in communicating with the mice," she said through an interpreter. "But I was always right."

The experiment was designed to resemble interplanetary travel. The University of Ancona in Italy, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and several U.S. universities took part in the experiment.

Follini's only contact with the outside world was through computer terminals linked between her 10-foot-square plastic-enclosed underground habitat and the researchers' house trailer above the cave.

She had no clocks, her menstrual cycle stopped, and she lost track of how many days had passed. When she was told Monday the experiment was almost over, she thought she had been in the cave about 80 days. She tended to sleep about 10 hours and stay awake 20 to 25 hours.

Three video cameras and microphones monitored Follini constantly. Only the bathroom was out of sight of cameras. She said she didn't mind the lack of privacy.

"I rarely thought about it," she said. "Sometimes I felt it was a strong presence, but generally I was not bothered by that."

When Follini climbed out of the cave into the midday sun, she appeared disoriented for a few seconds. But she quickly donned sunglasses handed to her, then grinned and waved at the 60 onlookers.

At the news conference, she said she thinks her isolation will make her more thoughtful, outgoing and decisive. And she said her outlook has improved.

"I consider myself more important," she said. "I love myself more and consequently I can love people and the world more."

Scientists plan to examine her intensively during the next few months to find out if her isolation affected her mentally and physically.

For example, project coordinator Maurizio Montalbini — who spent 210 days in a cave two years ago — believes the isolation will help Follini's concentration. A NASA-affiliated research team at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston plans to test that Monday by monitoring Follini's brain waves while she solves computer-generated problems.

Other scientists will be drawing blood and checking her immune system, bones, muscles and coordination. Some believe her immune system was suppressed, her bones lost calcium and her muscles weakened.

But Montalbini said he thinks Follini might surprise researchers. He said she kept her strength and flexibility by doing calisthenics and judo and maintained her poise by keeping busy by reading and decorating her living area.

The researchers chose Lost Cave because it maintains a constant climate of 74 degrees and 99 percent humidity and is relatively close to Houston, home to NASA and many researchers.

Before the experiment began, Follini said she was taking English textbooks with her and would answer questions in English. She did understand simple questions and was able to answer in short English phrases.

Houston's convention head resigns

HOUSTON (AP) — The leader of the city's convention bureau who has been criticized for remarks he made about minorities said it was in the best interest of the city that he resign.

Don Vaughn, who has been under fire from Mayor Kathy Whitmire and various minority leaders and groups, including the NAACP, resigned Tuesday as president and chief executive officer of the Greater Houston Convention & Visitors Bureau.

"I think it's in the best interest of Houston in order to move forward both on the local and state level, and I believe that any further divisiveness in the community would not be helpful to Houston and the convention industry," Vaughn said in resigning his $145,000-a-year job.

Last month, Vaughn told state Rep. Steve Wolens, R-Dallas, that he didn't want black and Hispanic council members reviewing his annual budget because they would not understand it.

Vaughn made his remarks while he and Wolens were discussing a bill by Wolens that would give city and county governments more scrutiny over convention bureau budgets.

Vaughn has since apologized to local NAACP members.

His remarks caused the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to threaten to take its lucrative national convention elsewhere in two years unless the convention bureau makes changes to help minorities.

NAACP officials at its Baltimore headquarters and local officialists did not return telephone calls to The Associated Press for comment of Vaughn's resignation.

The annual NAACP convention, set for July 7-12, 1991, at the George R. Brown Convention Center is expected to attract 10,000 people and generate $6.8 million for the local economy, a convention bureau spokesman said. Association delegates are expected to occupy 3,000 hotel rooms during the six-day convention.

Only the American Society of Microbiology, 11,000 people and $8.6 million, and the National Baptist Sunday School and Baptist Training Union Congress, 19,000 people and $11 million, will have larger conventions at the Brown Center in 1989.

Study: Increased breast cancer for birth control pill users

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— Women who took birth control pills while teen-agers in the 1960s face about five times the usual risk of breast cancer before they reach menopause, a study concludes.

The research, conducted in Sweden, is one of several recent studies to raise concerns that the pill may increase the odds of breast cancer.

While describing their findings as "alarming," the researchers cautioned that birth control pills have changed substantially since their introduction, and newer pills may not heighten the risk of breast cancer.

The research, directed by Dr. Hakan Olsson and colleagues from University Hospital in Lund, was presented at the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology earlier this week.

At the meeting, an Italian specialist described a new approach to treating breast cancer that he said could virtually eliminate the need for mastectomies, which have been the standard approach to the disease for nearly a century.

Breast cancer is the leading cancer killer among American women and strikes one in 10.

Olsson's study was conducted in southern Sweden, where the pill was widely used by teen-age girls after its introduction in the 1960s.

He said that the incidence of breast cancer among women under age 40 has risen in Sweden since the advent of the pill. And while his study cannot conclusively blame the pill, "we have no other explanation for the increase of breast cancer in young women."

However, even if pill use during the 1960s has increased the chances of breast cancer, the risk is still relatively small among women before they reach menopause. Olsson said that the overall chance of breast cancer before menopause is about 1 percent, while the risk among early pill users is about 5 percent.

The increased risk appears to be limited to those who began taking the pill while young. The research found no increased breast cancer among women who started on the pill after age 25 or after their first full-term pregnancy.

Olsson said 10 studies since 1983 had reported links between the pill and breast cancer.

Dr. Jules Harris, director of the cancer center at Chicago's Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, said the Swedish study "strongly suggests that birth control pills are linked to early, premenopausal breast cancer."

Despite the mounting research evidence, however, some experts have been skeptical. In January, a panel convened by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration concluded that the reported links between the pill and breast cancer were still inconclusive.

Doctors also point out that the pill's potential dangers must be balanced against its benefits. For instance, the pill appears to substantially reduce the risk of cancer of the uterus and ovaries.

Olsson's study was based on a comparison of 174 breast cancer patients with 454 healthy women. Besides showing that teen-age pill users were five times more likely to get breast cancer, the study found that their tumors were larger and their outlook worse than in those who had not used the pill so early in life.

In a report on changes in treating breast cancer, Dr. Gianni Bonadonna of the National Cancer Institute in Italy described his initial results in 97 patients with a new approach to avoiding mastectomy.

Although doctors are increasingly removing just the cancerous lump when the tumor is small, total removal of the breast remains the standard therapy for larger tumors.

Bonadonna and colleagues are experimenting with giving chemotherapy before surgery to shrink the lumps. Then surgeons are able to take out just the tumor and leave the rest of the breast.

Transportation board wrapping up Aloha Airlines investigation

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)— Aloha Airlines failed to inspect and repair cracks adequately in the fuselage of a Boeing 737 before it tore open over Hawaii a year ago, a federal investigator said Tuesday.

Metallurgist James Wildey told the National Transportation Safety Board that a 3-by-4-foot piece of metal skin from the airplane showed it had been repaired but still contained cracks that were missed by airline mechanics before the April 28, 1988, accident.

The accident has led to sweeping changes, including required replacements of parts, in the maintenance of airliner fleets worldwide. The board was expected to determine the probable cause of the accident and issue recommendations later in the day.

A stewardess was killed when she was sucked out through an 18-foot hole in the plane's fuselage, but the pilot managed to land the airline safely at Kahului Airport on Maui with 94 other people aboard.

Sixty-one passengers and crew members were injured. The plane had been flying at 24,000 feet en route from Hilo to Honolulu when the section of fuselage ripped off.

Wildey, a board staff member, said evidence showed that inspection for possible cracks by airline mechanics, required on all early 737s, was "either not performed or performed ineffectively."

"The piece that they repaired contained additional fatigue cracks that were underneath the repair patches, between the repair patches and on either side of the repair patches," Wildey said.

Chief investigator Barry Trotter described the harrowing incident, saying "the captain observed that the cockpit-cabin door was gone, and there was blue sky where the ceiling had been."

He said the board staff drew up 24 recommendations arising from the accident for airlines, Boeing and the Federal Aviation Administration. The recommendations were not disclosed immediately.

The safety board staff examined the role of metal fatigue, aircraft design, the airlines' maintenance program, crew performance and FAA directives affecting the aircraft, which was 19 years old and had logged nearly 90,000 flights.

The five-member board discusses staff reports on accidents in a public meeting and then votes on the conclusions. The Aloha investigation, which was kept confidential up to Tuesday's meeting, was based on inspection of the plane, interviews, public hearings and other data.

The accident focused worldwide attention on the issue of aging airliners and led to several FAA orders for inspections and modifications. The average age of in-service airliners exceeds 13 years, and jetliners are rarely retired as the demand for air travel increases and orders for new jets have to be made years in advance.

A series of FAA directives stepping up inspections and ordering some modifications of older aircraft followed the Aloha incident.

The FAA cited the accident last week when it issued a far-reaching series of airworthiness directives changing the way all older Boeing-built airliners will be kept safe.

The directives give airlines four years to replace parts and make other modifications on Boeing 727s, 737s and 747s that either reach 20 years of age or a set number of takeoffs for each model.

Before the orders, which are set to become final by late summer, were issued, airlines were required to make periodic inspections, replacing parts only when they showed signs of excessive wear.

Four months before the Aloha accident, an in-depth FAA inspection found that Aloha did not have an adequate system for complying with FAA directives and properly maintaining its planes.

The FAA had warned airlines to check for corroding fasteners that hold pieces of the fuselage together and had ordered close inspection of the upper skin of the early 737s.

NAACP threatens to pull 1991 convention

HOUSTON (AP)— Unless the Greater Houston Convention & Visitors Bureau makes changes to help minorities, the city's NAACP branch said it might take its lucrative national convention elsewhere in two years.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been monitoring Houston since Don Vaughn, convention bureau head, reportedly made derogatory statements last month, said Al Green, NAACP Houston branch president.

Vaughn apologized to Green and other local NAACP officials on April 20. But now they want more substantive changes made at the convention bureau.

Green said that after talking to NAACP national representatives, it was decided that how future issues are addressed will determine recommendations whether the organization's national convention will be held in Houston.

Municipal officials said pulling out the convention could hurt the city financially.

A convention bureau spokesman said the annual NAACP convention, set for July 7-12, 1991, is expected to attract 10,000 people and generate $6.8 million for the local economy.

The spokesman said the NAACP is scheduled to use the George R. Brown Convention Center. Association delegates are expected to occupy 3,000 hotel rooms during the six-day convention.

City officials are trying to polish Houston's image as a top-rank convention site.

Only the American Society of Microbiology, 11,000 people and $8.6 million, and the National Baptist Sunday School and Baptist Training Union Congress, 19,000 people and $11 million, will have larger conventions at the Brown Center in 1989.

Earlier this month, the largest convention in Houston this year was held. The Offshore Technology Conference attracted 25,000 to 30,000 people to the Astro Village Complex and pumped in an estimated $25 million.

"I would hate to see this happen," convention bureau board member Jordy Tollett, director of the Brown Center, said of an NAACP pullout. "I would hope they (NAACP officials) would look beyond this and realize that Houston has a lot to offer them."

The NAACP requested that the convention bureau increase the amount of business done with minority-owned companies.

Tips, trends and recipes for summer barbecues

NEW YORK (AP)—During the summer, the outdoor fun starts early and the sun sets late. What better way to enjoy a summer day than with a festive barbecue?

The following suggestions will help you plan a barbecue that will be remembered long after you've packed away your summer outfits:

—Test your barbecue grill before the summer season starts to be sure that everything is working properly. Don't forget to clean the grill thoroughly.

—Take inventory and stock up on supplies you'll use throughout the season, including napkins, plastic forks and knives, paper cups and paper tablecloths.

—Plan your menu several days before the big event. Buffet style is easiest to plan and prepare.

—Don't forget the bug repellent spray. Citronella candles are available in a variety of shapes and sizes and help create ambiance. They will also help keep annoying insects away.

—To prevent foods from sticking and to avoid direct contact with the heat source, use heavy-duty aluminum foil to line the grid. Delicate fish fillets especially benefit from this cooking style.

—Salt food when it is done (salt draws out the juices), and don't salt it over the grill because the salt will corrode the metal.

—To prevent burning, soak your wooden or bamboo skewers in water for at least 1 hour prior to cooking.

—If you're using skewers, it's best to parboil some vegetables, like beans, peppers, potatoes and small whole onions, before cooking with meat so that all foods are done at the same time.

EXOTIC BARBECUES

When you're tired of hot dogs and hamburgers, try something more exotic — like Indian, Korean or Caribbean cuisine.

Rich Davis, creator of K.C. Masterpiece barbecue sauce, says Tandoori-inspired fare is easy to prepare on the barbecue grill. Poultry can be marinated overnight in yogurt spiced with cumin, turmeric, cinnamon, ginger and garlic. If desired, a drop of red food coloring mixed with water can be brushed over the chicken just before grilling to add the traditional fiery hue.

Meaty short ribs take on a Korean accent when brushed with a blend of garlic, ginger, sesame oil and soy sauce before and during the cooking process.

To create tropical Caribbean tastes marinate beef in coconut milk, rum, ginger and crushed, dried hot red peppers before grilling.

Davis says cooking with foil adds a new dimension to backyard barbecues. Foods cook quickly and thoroughly, yet remain moist. "Best of all," he said adds, "cleanup is a breeze."

There are two methods for foil cooking on the grill when foods need to be completely covered.

Davis says the "drugstore wrap" is best for foods such as sliced vegetables or meats that need to be turned. Place the food in the center of a large piece of foil. Bring the edges up over the food and fold a few times, allowing some air space. Then fold the ends tightly a few times to avoid leaks.

The "bundle wrap" is for foods like cauliflower or apples that don't need to be turned. The food is centered on a generous piece of foil, and the four corners of the foil are brought together and folded tightly, allowing some air space for steam.

ICED BEVERAGES

Iced tea is a favorite beverage to quench summer thirsts. Blanchard & Blanchard, makers of food products from Vermont, says you can create a unique iced tea by combining several of your favorite types of tea, such as orange, lemon or mint, and letting the mixture brew in the sun on your windowsill.

Another flavorful idea: make iced tea with bottled or sparkling water, for an all-natural, caffeine-free beverage.

MICROWAVE ICED TEA

The following method for making iced tea in the microwave, suggested by the makers of Celestial Seasonings herb teas, offers the taste of brewed iced tea with the convenience of instant. Just be sure the tea bags do not contain staples, which can cause arcing or sparks in the microwave.

Place 1 cup hot water and 4 tea bags in a microwave-safe container. Cook on high for 2 minutes. Remove tea bags from hot tea. Sweeten while hot, if desired. Place 3 cups cold water in a 1-quart pitcher. Add hot tea to pitcher of cold water. Pour over ice to serve.

brushed with freshly squeezed lemon juice, olive oil and herbs. Sprinkle the vegetables with freshly grated Parmesan cheese for extra zest. You can also brush tomato-based barbecue sauce over the vegetables during the cooking process. When the vegetables are done, toss with grated Cheddar or Swiss cheese.

Out-of-the-can beans matched with vegetables or fruits go well with all meats, chicken, fish or turkey. Also perfect for a cookout are the delicate new potatoes in season. Try them with mustard seed and curry as a flavor change that blends well with grilled or roasted items. These may be prepared in advance and reheated.

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 teaspoons mustard seed
4 tablespoons sweet butter
¼ teaspoon curry powder

Cookbook winners make good reading

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Editor
NEW YORK (AP)—"The Cake Bible," written by Rose Levy Beranbaum, was named 1988 Book of the Year by the IACP-Seagram Awards, the country's only major program of awards for books on foods and beverages.

The awards for outstanding food and drink books published in 1988 were sponsored by the International Association of Cooking Professionals, a 1,200-member organization, and Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, a major producer and marketer of spirits, coolers and premium wines.

Nearly 200 entries were received for the 1988 competition. A jury of 46 food and beverage writers, editors and cooking authorities participated in selecting the winners, who were announced at an awards breakfast at the Seagram Building here.

"The Cake Bible" (William Morrow, $25) also won first place in the Baking and Desserts category. It is an exhaustive cookbook. Most anything you could want to know is included — exactly why some pans are better than others; why cakes peak in the center while baking and how to stop it; the history of various cakes.

Some recipes are borrowed, with sources noted, but some were developed with hard work. Of the Less Than Fruity Fruitcake, Beranbaum says in the book, "It took years to perfect this recipe because each version had to ripen for three months before tasting, and many months would pass between tasting and subsequent re-baking."

The recipes are clear and precise, and the photographs leave no doubt of how the cake should look. Also included are recipes for conserves, fruit purees, fondants, marzipans, even crystallized flowers.

An entire chapter is devoted to decorating, and, in a "special section for professionals and passionate amateurs," Beranbaum discusses the science of baking more in depth and includes recipes for cakes to feed 150 or so people.

BASIC AND GENERAL

"Cooking A to Z" by the California Culinary Academy (Ortho Books, $32.95) won the Basic and General category. This 631-page culinary reference book, designed to serve cooks at every level of experience, is filled with over 600 recipes plus definitions of terms, techniques and ingredients.

More than 35 sets of step-by-step photographs, plus detailed text, demonstrate such important techniques as boning, beating egg whites, carving, rolling out puff pastry and decorating cakes.

Also included are basic definitions of the common terms you'll see over and over again in any cookbook, plus sections on how to shop and cook with fresh ingredients and processed foods; how to stock the pantry and cupboard; and how to identify, select and care for kitchen equipment.

OTHER WINNERS

Simon & Schuster came up with three top winners: "Bugialli on Pasta," by Giuliano Bugialli, in the European and International category; "Champagne: The History and Character of the World's Most Celebrated Wine" by Serena Sutcliffe, in the writings on beverages category; and "More Taste Than Time" by Abby Mandel, in the quick cooking category.

Babysitting in-laws need to buckle up

DEAR ABBY: My in-laws are wonderful grandparents to my 2 1/2-year-old son. They would do anything in the world for him, except take the trouble to buckle him up in his car seat. This is a big problem for me because I depend on them to baby-sit quite often. I can't afford to pay a sitter, and there's no one else.

I've tried several times to stress the importance of car-seat safety, but they think it's unnecessary since it's only a 10-minute drive from their home to mine.

My husband has been very firm with them, but twice I've caught them not using the car seat. I haven't told my husband because it would cause a family feud. His parents are very stubborn and don't take criticism very well.

Abby, I fear for my child's safety, but don't know what to do. Please print this letter and stress the importance of buckling up small children. Perhaps they'll listen to you. Thank you!

WORRIED MOM

P.S. My in-laws have their own car seat. We purchased one for them so they would always have it handy when our son is in their care.

DEAR WORRIED MOM: You have good reason to worry. There is only one solution to your problem. Do not trust your in-laws to drive your child. Their excuse, "It's only a 10-minute drive from their home to yours," means nothing. A large percentage of all automobile accidents occur within a mile of one's home.

DEAR ABBY: I know that many people share this problem. If you answer in the paper it will help not only me but also others.

Last week I went to supper at a friend's home. The hostess served a food that I had never eaten before, and I found that I didn't enjoy it, so I pushed it to the side of my plate and finished the rest of my meal.

In the future, how can I avoid this situation without offending my hostess?

CANADIAN

DEAR CANADIAN: We all have our special likes and dislikes, so don't feel compelled to eat anything and everything that is served. Pushing food aside on your plate can be conspicuous, so next time, simply "rearrange it" and leave it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I can't cope with. I am a 25-year-old woman dating a 28-year-old man.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Stan and I have dated for a year, and he is the one man I would like to spend the rest of my life with. He says he loves me, but he is having trouble breaking away from his ex-girlfriend. She lives four hours away, and he has gone to see her several times since he told me he loves me. She has also been here several times that I know of for sure — I suspect several times I didn't know about. In short, I feel very insecure. Stan insists he is not carrying on behind my back, but I just can't believe him.

I am fed up with his long, unexplained absences, and his disappearing into a telephone booth to make a "quick" phone call that lasts 20 or 30 minutes. I can't handle this stress. I have no desire to see any old boyfriends. I have let go of my past, but Stan hasn't.

All my friends tell me I am crazy for believing him. Am I?

INSECURE IN IOWA

DEAR INSECURE: You have good reason to be insecure. If you want to buy a peck of trouble, continue your romance with a man you can't trust. Tell Stan it's over and date others.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for giving your personal stamp of approval to the suggestion that all wedding guests wear name tags — especially when the bride's family members have never met any of the groom's family.

I would add yet another suggestion: Along with the name, indicate "affiliation" — such as "Mildred Shannon, cousin of the groom," or "Paul Brownell, brother of the bride."

LA, Detroit win playoff games Lakers 101, Suns 95

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers usually win with their high-powered offense. But teams don't win back-to-back NBA titles by being one-dimensional.

The Lakers showed what they can do on defense Tuesday night, holding Phoenix to 14 field goals in 43 attempts during the second half of a 101-95 victory over the Suns.

The win gave Los Angeles a 2-0 lead in the Western Conference finals and was the ninth in as many playoff games for the two-time defending NBA champions, equaling the playoff record for consecutive victories they set seven years ago.

The Lakers went ahead for good by outscoring the Suns 30-12 over a span of 12:20 in the second half, turning a 68-60 deficit into a 90-80 lead with 4:35 remaining.

"James Worthy and the double-team was the difference in this game," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "We dug it out. It was a case of staying with the defense, playing hard. They missed a lot of shots but a lot were contested."

Worthy scored 12 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter, but Riley was referring to the defensive job Worthy did on the Suns' Tom Chambers, who was just 8-for-23 from the floor.

"You have to give their defense the credit," Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "We shot poorly, but they deserve the credit for a lot of our turnovers."

The series shifts to Phoenix for Games 3 and 4 Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

Byron Scott led the Lakers with 30 points. Magic Johnson had 22 points, 14 assists and nine rebounds and Orlando Woolridge came off the bench to get 10 points, five rebounds and three blocked shots for Los Angeles.

"Woolridge gave us life when we were struggling," Riley said. "Without him, we don't win."

Kevin Johnson led Phoenix with 22 points and 10 assists, but also had 10 turnovers and scored only four points in the second half. Chambers had 21 points and 10 rebounds and Dan Majerle and Jeff Hornacek each had 16 points.

Pistons 100, Bulls 91

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons weren't about to get caught with their guards down twice.

Detroit's backcourt trio of Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars and Vinnie Johnson, who scored only 27 points on 11-for-45 shooting in the first game, combined for 69 points in Game 2 of the Eastern Conference finals as Detroit beat the Chicago Bulls 100-91.

The win evened the best-of-7 series at 1-1.

"Guards are our strength," center Bill Laimbeer said. "When they score big, we usually win the game. Our coach says, 'Run faster, jump higher, shoot straighter and you'll win.' Tonight, they just hit their shots, it's that simple."

The series now shifts to Chicago for Games 3 and 4 Saturday and Monday — and the Pistons, who were 26-15 on the road during

"I expended myself in the first half and I just didn't have my usual energy in the second half," Kevin Johnson said.

the regular season, can hardly wait. Detroit has won its last five visits to Chicago Stadium.

"I think now the pressure's on them," said Johnson, a reserve who scored 13 of his 16 points in the second quarter. "They have the home-court advantage and they're going to have to hold it."

The Pistons earned the home-court advantage throughout the playoffs by virtue of their NBA-best 63-19 record, but the Bulls took it away with a 94-88 victory in Game 1.

The Pistons, who had been idle for five days after sweeping Milwaukee in the second round, were sluggish in that first game — especially Johnson, Thomas and Dumars.

In Game 2, the three guards scored 24 points on free throws alone.

Thomas had 33 points and Dumars added 20.

Chicago's Dave Corzine hits the floor fighting for a rebound.

Golf clinic set

If you're having trouble at the tee box or on the green, Frank McCullough may be able to help.

McCullough, Pampa High head golf coach, will be teaching a golf clinic next month at Clarendon College-Pampa Center for both juniors and adults.

The clinic will be divided into two sessions, June 5-8 and June 19-22. Each session will be divided into morning and evening classes. The morning session (8-10:30) is for juniors, 9-18 years old, and the evening class (6-8:30) is for adults.

McCullough will be teaching the basic fundamentals (the grip, swing, alignment, etc.) and a video will also be shown each session.

Cost for each session is $40 and clubs will be provided for those who do not have any.

Class size is limited to 12 students on a first-come, first-served basis.

Interested persons can contact McCullough at 665-7367 to enroll.

Pampa High's David Fields signs a letter to attend Ranger Junior College on a football scholarship. Witnessing the proceedings are Fields' mother, Ethel Simmons, and Harvester football coach-athletic director Dennis Cavalier. Fields, who plays fullback, was the Harvester's leading rusher the past two seasons.

Lefors, Kelton open baseball playoffs

By SONNY BOHANAN
Sports Writer

Compared to some of the Class 1A baseball teams in the Pampa News circulation area, the Kelton Lions, with eight games under their belt this season, look like seasoned veterans. Both Lefors and Follett have played only four games to date, while Higgins just completed a five-game regular season.

But ready or not, the 1A state baseball playoffs begin Thursday.

The brief seasons are not such a big surprise, considering that both Districts 1-1A and 4-1A consist of only three teams each. Lefors, Hedley and Kelton make up 1-1A, while Higgins, Follett and Briscoe round out the 4-1A field. And since Hedley was knocked out of the playoff hunt from the outset because of ineligible players, District 1-1A was effectively reduced to two teams.

Lefors, the 1-1A champion and the only unbeaten team in the area, defeated Kelton and Hedley two games apiece to compile a 4-0 overall record. The Pirates will take on Follett (3-1) in the area round of the playoffs Thursday at the Pampa High School field at 3 p.m.

Follett defeated Briscoe twice and split a two-game series with Higgins to finish in a tie for first place. Higgins won the coin toss to advance to the playoffs as the No. 1 seed.

Higgins finished the regular season with a 2-3 mark by defeating Briscoe and Follett once each, while losing two games to Cherokee, Okla., and another to Follett. The Coyotes will face Kelton (2-6) Thursday at the Briscoe High School field at 4 p.m.

Kelton, the 1-1A runner-up, managed to rack up an eight-game season by playing two games against Perryton, a Class 3A team in its first year of baseball. For most 1A schools in the Panhandle, playing larger schools is the only way to get more games.

"There are just five or six of us small schools around here that play baseball," Kelton coach Dave Johnson said. "I'd like to run the baseball program the way everybody runs their basketball. I wish we could play 20 to 25 games and get serious about it, but baseball is just not that big a sport in the small schools around here."

"There's no real summer program here except Little League (which stops at 12-year-olds) and that hurts our high school program. This year, we played some junior high games, hoping it might help high school in the future."

Lefors was forced to cancel its last two games of the season because of rain, further decreasing an already-short playing schedule.

"We've got some rough spots we'd like to smooth out, but you can't really do that without games," Lefors coach Dale Means said. "We couldn't really concentrate on baseball until track was over. We had one game every week until the last two got cancelled."

Means would like to play a full season, but he's not sure how it can be done.

"It's not a problem that's easily solved," he said. "We'd like to play 30 games, but you can't do it and have a track program at this level."

Lefors' main strength this season has been around the base paths. In only four outings, the Pirates have stolen almost 60 bases, or 15 per game.

"Our batting average is not that great, but we've been able to manufacture runs that way," Means said. "We just haven't seen that much pitching."

The Pirates could get a close look at some Thursday. Follett has relied on the power of the mound this season, primarily from the arm of Darren Todd. But Lefors has held its own with starter Heath Keelin and relievers Dusty Roberson and Kevin Mayfield.

"Our pitching and our infield are strong points, and our outfield's not bad," Means said. "In all the games we've played up to this point, we've had errors. We've been able to overcome them in the past, but we can't do that in this game."

Apparently, the lack of playing time has hurt the other teams as well.

"All year, we've had trouble fielding the ball," Kelton's Johnson said. "We'll make a routine play one inning, then we'll boot two the next inning."

"We have been getting the bat on the ball and putting the ball in play. We get a lot of guys on base, but sometimes we leave too many on base."

Higgins' main threat is pitcher Freddy Valenzuela, a two-year starter. He will likely go head-to-head with Chad Caddel, Kelton's starter.

Since there are no baseball teams in District 2-1A and 3-1A, all four squads will by-pass the bi-district round and advance directly to area. The winners of Thursday's games will compete at regionals next week.

From pain to pleasure for Cubs' Sanderson

HOUSTON (AP) — Pitching has gone from pain to pleasure for Chicago right-hander Scott Sanderson this season.

After an injury-plagued five years and back surgery in February, Sanderson won his fourth-straight game Tuesday night by going 5 1/3 innings and also driving in a key run in a 5-4 Cubs win over the Houston Astros.

"My back has come a long way since surgery," Sanderson, 5-2, said. "Only positive things have happened. In five years, I hadn't pitched without agony, now it's fun. I don't have to take a deep breath before every pitch, knowing how much the throwing hurt."

After a three-game sweep by the Astros in Chicago earlier this month, the Cubs bounced back with seven wins in eight games —

the last two in Houston.

"We've had a great streak the last week and a half," Chicago manager Don Zimmer said. "They nailed us pretty good up there. Before we came in here I would have settled for one. Now we have a chance for a sweep."

Houston's ace starter and loser Mike Scott, 6-3, had won four of his last five starts including two-straight complete games in which he had allowed no earned runs and only five hits.

The rejuvenated Cubs tagged Scott for nine hits and five runs in only five-and-two-thirds innings.

"We've beaten some great pitchers in the last nine days," Zimmer said.

Shawon Dunston's two-run homer off of Scott in the second inning started the Cubs offense.

"He hit that one pretty good,"

Scott said, "but he hasn't improved that much as a player."

The 26-year-old Dunston, who had been ticketed for stardom, has been struggling this season with a .167 average coming into the game.

"I'm happy to be contributing," Dunston said. "He's (Scott) never off. He's a true major league star pitcher and one of the best, like Hershiser."

In both of the last two games against the Cubs, the Astros rallied from five-point deficits, but that was no consolation to Bill Doran, even though he extended his hitting streak to eight games during which he was 16-35 for a .456 average.

"It's one thing to battle back, and another thing to lose," Doran said. "It's not very satisfying."

After losing three-straight games, the Astros are now 4-4 on their current home stand.

"It could have been a great home stand," Doran said. "Now we're just trying to salvage it. We just don't want to be swept."

Doran scored one run and drove in another in Houston's four-run sixth inning. The Astros had four-straight hits off Sanderson and Pat Perry before Calvin Schiraldi came in and earned his second save in as many games by finishing the last three innings.

Sanderson was still encouraged with his performance. "Up until the sixth inning, I felt great. I gave up four earned runs in five-and-a-third, but I threw five good innings though the stats wouldn't show that. I'm throwing the ball where I want and as the season goes on I'll get stronger and stronger."

Optimist Roundup

Amanda Kludt pitched a no-hitter as Citizens Bank blanked Max's 13-0 in Little League softball action last weekend.

Kludt had five strikeouts and allowed only five baserunners, four on walks and one on an error.

Outstanding defensive plays by Heather Garner, Jennifer Williams, Ketra Thompson and Mayla Conner kept the no-hitter intact.

Offensively, Mandy Tyrrell led all hitters with four singles. Ketra Thompson and Vonda Harrison had run-scoring doubles. Amanda Baldrige, Lana Richmond and Melissa Portillo added one single apiece. Jennifer Melius had two walks and Shannon Sparks added a sacrifice.

Citizens Bank improved its win-loss record to 2-3-1.

Ray & Bill's won over Malcolm Hinkle 21-5 in a Junior Girls Softball League game Tuesday night. Leading hitters for Ray & Bill's were Lorrie Fulton, Danette Hoover and Karen McPherson.

Fulton knocked in five runs with a triple, double and two singles. Hoover and McPherson combined for nine runs-batted-in with a double and two singles apiece.

Others with hits for Ray & Bill's were Jennifer Medley, two singles and two RBI; Shawnda Hoover, double; Becky Joplin and Allison Brantley, one single and one run each and Amanda Potter, single.

Ray and Bill's also had a triple play.

Gideon, Landers and Dark each had a single to account for Malcolm Hinkle's five runs.

Glo-Valve Service, behind the four-hit pitching of Todd Finney, the steady hitting of Dale Noble, and the base running of Rayford Young, turned back Duncan Insurance 15-1 Tuesday in an Optimist Major Bambino game.

Finney ran his season record to 2-0, striking out 13, walking two and allowing four hits. Noble led Glo-Valve in hitting with a double, two singles and a run-batted-in.

Finney aided his own cause with a double. Jim Bob McGahan had a single and two RBI. Rayford Young had two stolen bases and two runs scored to help break the game open for Glo-Valve.

Rene Armendariz pitched for Duncan Insurance. He struck out 11, walked 11 and allowed only five hits. Jeremy Barnes had two hits to lead Duncan hitters. Jason Warren with a double and Brandon Soukup had the other hits.

Glo-Valve took an early lead in the first inning when Todd Harrison drew a bases-loaded walk to force in Noble, who had singled. Duncan came back in the first when Warren doubled home Armendariz, who had walked.

Glo-Valve went into the lead to stay in the second inning when Young walked, went to second on a fly out, stole third and came home on a wild pitch.

The roof caved in on Duncan when Glo-Valve scored five runs in the fourth, two in the fifth and six in the sixth.

The defensive play of the game went to Harrison, who made a fine running catch in center field to end a Duncan threat in the second inning.

Glo-Valve leads the National League with a 4-0 record.

Ryan earns fifth win

Rangers turn back Royals

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON - Nolan Ryan is used to delivering the heat. Now, he's got to learn to take it.

After pitching nine years in the airconditioned Astrodome of the Houston Astros, Ryan discovered on Tuesday night that the heat and humidity can hurt his fast ball in the later innings.

Ryan earned his fifth victory, a 10-8 win over the Kansas City Royals, but lasted only six innings and 110 pitches. He struck out six, allowed seven hits and walked four.

"The heat (89 degrees) affected me but I have to get used to it," Ryan said. "It will affect me the first few hot nights I pitch in it." Ryan was clocked at 94 miles an hour at the start of the game but dropped into the high 80s by the time Bo Jackson hit a tape-measure, 461-foot three-run homer in the fifth inning.

It was the longest measured homer in Arlington Stadium history.

Jackson didn't want to talk about it immediately after the game, waving reporters off while he ate dinner. Then he took a shower.

Texas manager Bobby Valentine said "Nolan got a pitch down and Jackson hit it a mile. The fans got their money's worth with Nolan striking him out twice and Bo hitting the homer. Bo's a great talent."

Ryan said Jackson's homer

(AP Laserphoto)

Bo Jackson hit a 461-foot homer, longest ever in Arlington Stadium, but the Rangers burst Jackson's bubble with a 10-8 win last night over the Royals.

was one of the longest he had given up. But not the longest.

"You don't pitch 22 years and not give up longer ones than that," Ryan said. "But he did hit it good."

"In that situation I fell behind in the count and had to give him a fastball. I didn't get upset. He just really hit it."

It was Jackson's 11th home run of the season and came after he had struck out six consecutive times Saturday.

Calgary leads Stanley Cup

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — They're belching about the refereeing. They're moaning that the other guys got all the breaks. Their coach is throwing sticks and swearing. And, most importantly, they're one game away from losing the Stanley Cup.

Who are those guys who lost 3-2 Tuesday night to the Calgary Flames to fall behind 3-2 in the NHL championship series? Who are those guys wearing bleu, blanc et rouge, anyway?

Montreal captain Bob Gainey says that, yes, they're the Canadiens. And despite the 23 banners hanging from the Montreal Forum rafters, the kings of hockey have won only one title this decade.

"Contrary to what people think," Gainey said, "we don't win it every year."

The Flames built a 3-1 first-period lead on goals by Joel Otto, Joe Mullen and Al MacInnis and held on to move within one game of doing what no Canadiens opponent has ever done: Carry the Cup in triumph around the Forum ice.

Game 6 is Thursday night.

"Maybe the pressure is off us," Calgary's Doug Gilmour said, "but we need to win it there. We can't think about coming back here" for Sunday's possible seventh game.

That's all Montreal has left to think about. But it's not the only thing on the Canadiens' minds.

Although the number of penalties have been almost even since Game 3, when referee Kerry Fraser's call on Calgary's Mark Hunter helped Montreal win in double overtime, the Canadiens insist that officials have favored the Flames.

Fraser was the referee again Tuesday.

"At least call the game fairly," Larry Robinson said. "It's frustrating. Rules are for both sides. Call them both ways. The referee doesn't win games, but (he) can change the direction of the game."

The Canadiens were most upset with a non-call against Colin Patterson, who appeared to lift the goal off its moorings with eight seconds left on goalie Mike Vernon. Had Fraser called Patterson for delay of game, the Canadiens would have been awarded a penalty shot — and the Saddledome's sellout crowd of 20,062 would have undoubtedly gone berserk.

"Every day it is them crying and crying that Montreal is getting the advantage from the referees. Finally it is paying a dividend for them," Montreal's Bobby Smith said.

Little interest shown in Pelluer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Steve Pelluer, disgruntled with contract negotiations, asked a week ago to be traded. Now the burning question many onlookers have is whether there's a market for the veteran player.

Team officials in the National Football League seem to think there is.

"Sure, I think there is (a market for Pelluer)," said Dick Steinberg, director of player development for the New England Patriots. "He is not a sure thing, but he has shown he has the talent to move the ball."

Green Bay Packers executive vice president Tom Braatz, who might be part of that NFL market, agrees. "Any veteran quarterback has value," Braatz said. "(For) anyone that has started in this league, there is a market value out there."

The 26-year-old Pelluer was a fifth-round draft choice. The 6-4, 212-pounder has a strong arm, quick feet and sharp mind. Last year, his fifth with the Dallas Cowboys, Pelluer established himself as the starter.

Cowboys officials say they have placed calls around the league but have seen little interest. But even so, the Cowboys are hoping to pull off a trade.

Pelluer ranked ninth, or 73.9, in passing efficiency among the 14 NFC starting quarterbacks last season. He completed 56.3 percent of his passes while throwing 17 touchdowns and 19 interceptions.

But now the Cowboys have signed quarterback Troy Aikman, the No. 1 draft pick. And Pelluer and his agent, Joe Courage, have called Cowboys contract proposals low-ball offers.

Although he wants to make about $800,000, close to the average salary for an NFL starting quarterback, the Cowboys are offering Pelluer about $500,000 a year in base salary on a long-term deal. The team is offering less for one year.

Green Bay, San Diego and Kansas City are the teams likely to have the most interest in Pelluer.

Atlanta Classic hard on Sauers

ATLANTA (AP) — It would seem to make more sense for Gene Sauers to start his three-week vacation from golf right away and not wait for this week's Atlanta Classic.

Despite being played in his home state, the Atlanta Classic has brought Sauers little success during his rapid rise on the PGA Tour.

The 26-year-old Savannah native has won twice in six years on tour, including this year's Hawaiian Open, but he has never managed anything better in Atlanta than 45th place last year.

Sauers has no idea why he hasn't played well over the par-72, 7,018-yard Atlanta Country Club course where the $900,000 event gets under way Thursday.

"I haven't played here that much, three times I think, but I can play well here. It's my kind of course," Sauers said Wednesday. "I can hit the ball with anybody, it's just a matter of making putts. Considering everything, I think I've got a chance."

The field of 156 includes seven other winners this year in addition to Sauers. They include Mark Calcavecchia and Steve Jones — both two-time winners — and Payne Stewart, Tim Simpson, Jodie Mudd, Bob Tway and Ian Baker-Finch, the Australian who won the Colonial last week in Fort Worth, Texas.

Sauers says the players to beat are some of "the big names," mentioning defending champion Larry Nelson, Larry Mize, Tway and Ray Floyd among others.

Texas tickets on sale

Season tickets for the Amarillo Texans baseball games can be purchased at $50.

The Texans are playing their first season in the Jayhawk League.

The season ticket gives the fan a box seat for 26 home dates (which includes six doubleheaders) at Memorial Stadium. The season starts June 3 with a 2 p.m. doubleheader against the Tucson Ramblers at Memorial. The Texans open league play June 5 against the Hays, Kansas Larks in a 6 p.m. doubleheader.

For tickets or other information, call General Manager Mike Moore at 379-7756.
