Area residents joined in celebrating Memorial Day this morning with ceremonies at Fairview Cemetery in Pampa sponsored by eterans of Foreign Post/ #1657. A flag was raised to half mast to honor servicemen who gave their lives for their country. "Taps' was played by Danny Cowan as Lloyd Laramore and Clarence Upton raised the U.S. flag. Tom Adams (shown in photo at left) laid a wreath at the foot of the Veterans War Memorial in the cemetery. The small crowd listened to Rev. Fred Palmer give the address (shown in above photo). The VFW Post chose to observe the Memorial Day tribute on the day officially dedicated to honor the nation's deceased, May 30, instead of the Monday selected to provide a three-day holiday weekend for many.

NATO allies end summit with missile compromise

By TERENCE HUNT AP White House Correspondent

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) President Bush and the Western allies hammered out a lastminute compromise over nuclear missiles today and ended unityminded NATO summit talks pledging "to shape a new political order of peace in Europe.

Bush urged Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to accept his challenge to intensify negotiations on reducing conventional NATO and Warsaw Pact forces. "I have reason to believe that he knows we've been serious," Bush said.

The president said he hoped Gorbachev will be persuaded by the "unity of the alliance" behind Bush's proposals for lowering troop levels to 275,000 on each side and negotiating new ceilings for tanks, aircraft and other conventional weapons on the European continent.

"I think it's a good thing, it's good for NATO, I happen to think ending their two-day talks, the it's good for the entire free world." Bush told a televised post-summit news conference before he flew to Bonn for further talks with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl

Bush said Secretary of State James A. Baker III had told Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze that the United States was interested in a superpower summit before the end of the year.

structive to come out of such a meeting, I would certainly be prepared to meet and I believe that Secretary Baker has conveyed that to Minister Shevardnadze." Bush said

The 16 summit leaders disposed of a potentially disruptive issue by embracing a compromise formula for U.S.-Soviet negotiations on reducing -- but not eliminating — short-range nuclear weapons.

Then, in a final communique allied leaders acknowledged Bush's goal of completing East-West negotiations on reducing conventional arms within the next year

In the first official reaction from Moscow, Col. Gen. Nikolai Chervoy, a member of the Soviet general staff said Bush's proposals 'need to be carefully analyzed

The summit leaders also welcomed widespread changes "If there was something con- under way in the Soviet Union and East Europe, initiated by Gorbachev's reform policies

'The possibilities for fruitful dialogue have significantly improved in recent years," they said. "The allies are resolved to grasp this opportunity.

The allies said attainment of lasting peace "will require that the unnatural division of Europe, and particularly of Germany, be overcome

Increase in public school funding adds additional revenue to PISD

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

A $450 million state increase in public school funding will mean an additional $430,000 of state revenue will be coming into the Pampa Independent School District, according to Dr. Harry Griffith, superintendent of schools.

The funding bill squeaked through the Legislature in the regular session's final minutes Monday night, when backers won the votes to leap over a believe is neccesary to assure quality public education.

'That (bill) is about $4.5 billion short of what the School Finance Symposium predicted was neccesary to do what House Bill 72 told us to do." Bever said. The symposium was made up of 40 teachers groups from around the state including the TCTA. she added.

Beyer said the PISD must be in a position to make the most lucrative salary offers possible an work toward further state funding of local public education procedural hurdle

House rules prevented that body from considering a compromise bill worked out in a legislative conference committee until 30 minutes before the session ended at midnight. The Senate passed the measure earlier in the night. The House finally passed the bill just before midnight by a vote of 126-21

In addition to the funding increase, however, Griffith said the bill will also include new state mandates on how the money is spent.

"They are putting in extra requirements for local share (funding)," Griffith said. "It will not mean much for Pampa except to pay for mandated items such as career ladder and a $1,140 pay increase for each teacher.

Griffith pointed out the increase will mean another $340 per teacher more than the district had intended to pay this year

'I am supportive of what they have done to raise teacher's salaries," Griffith emphasized "It will increase our costs, though, over what we had anticipated.

It will cost the PISD roughly $120,000 to fund the $340 per teacher raise. Griffith predicted. He added that in spite of the less-than-expected state funding increase, there is still hope a local property tax decrease is on the horizon.

He said the district is working toward such a measure in spite of the funding package being $100 million less statewide than he had anticipated.

Pampa teacher Betty Beyer. District 16 director of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association, said the bill is considerably less than education groups

When you're in a college town or a metropolitan area, you can attract good teachers because of the other opportunities. What will attract a teacher to Pampa?" Beyer asked. "I'm here because my husband is employed here, not becuase the salary structure is great

Also disappointed in the bill was Senate sponsor Carl Parker, D Port Arthur, He said, "It's the most we could do under the circumstances, with the money available.

The $450 million increase for the 1990-91 biennium for equity funding was less than one-fourth the amount the State Board of Education said was necessary to narrow the gap between rich and poor schools

"I make no representation that this bill addresses school equity. It reduces the pain level to those poor school districts," Parker said.

Several democratic senators from South and West Texas criticized the bill because they said it 'ignores the gross inequities which exist between those districts with large property tax bases and those with very little property wealth

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he would liked to have seen $300 million to $400 million more put into the school finance system. But he added, "You have to understand the restraints put in on our budget

'It will indicate to the courts that we have made a positive step toward equalization. Lewis said

Students, authorities in standoff over latest arrests in China

By JOHN POMFRET Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — About 1,000 students and workers today rallied outside police headquarters to protest the reported arrests of leaders of a new independent labor union aligned with the student pro-democracy movement.

The protesters refused police orders to disperse, while thousands of their colleagues continued to occupy nearby Tiananmen Square after protest leaders failed to resolve a dispute over whether to end the threeweek sit-in.

... Police detained 11 leaders of the 'Flying Tiger Brigade,' a band of 400 motorcyclists that has roared through the city in support of the student protesters.

The reported arrest of three leaders of the Beijing Independent Workers' Union was just the latest indication that Communist authorities are getting tough with non-student participants in the movement.

The Beijing Daily reported today that police detained 11 leaders of the "Flying Tiger Brigade," a band of 400 motorcyclists that has roared through the city in support of the student protesters.

Zhao Pinglu, head of the independent union, said one of its leaders, a 27-year-old official with the national airlines, was grabbed by police Monday. Two other union leaders, both employees of the Ministry of Railways, disappeared and were assumed arrested, Zhao said.

Li Zhihuang, wife of railway employee Qian Yiming, said her husband's work unit claimed he was arrested by police "to find out about the situation at Tiananmen Square," which students took over to press their six-weekold campaign for a freer society and an end to official corruption.

Outside police headquarters, a man who identified himself as chief of Beijing Public Security told a U.S. television crew there that no students had been arrested. He refused comment on whether workers were detained.

The official told the journalists they had violated martial law, imposed May 20 in a bid to quash the student-led movement. He said the television crew should not talk with any Chinese in the central Beijing area under the decree, which has been widely ignored.

A police broadcast to the crowd said, "You do not understand the real situation. Beijing is in complete chaos.

When an officer told the crowd to disperse, they replied with calls of "bandit" and "rascal" and "how many people have you arrested?" Police with two video cameras filmed demonstrators. who said they would not leave.

The independent trade union, which claims 3,000 members, was formed May 19 in defiance of a government ban on all but the official trade union federation.

The party hardliners who appear to have won a power struggle occasioned by the student protests have taken the line that the students are wellintentioned but that non-students who are misleading them will be punished.

'This is even greater than your Statue of Liberty,' another worker told an American reporter.

"Here is a new symbol for China," said a worker at a machine tool factory. "This is even greater than your Statue of Liberty," another worker told an American reporter.

Student leaders have continued to quarrel over the direction of their movement. Beijing leaders had favored ending the occupation today but were overruled by other activists, many of them from outside the capital and relatively recent arrivals.

Representatives from about 200 schools met early today on the issue but failed to iron out differences

Already, workers who have joined demonstrations or supported the movement are being fined or having their pay docked. Others are being threatened with losing their jobs.

Several hundred student prothey would return home today to spre. d the movement's gospel But thousands more said they would stay in the now foul smelling square until the country's legislature convenes June

About 5,000 students are now testers from outside Beijing said living in a squatters' camp on the square. China's symbolic center of power

Bush claims 'double hit' for summit

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) - President Bush today claimed a "double hit" for the NATO summit and said proposals to reduce conventional forces in Europe and a compromise on modernizing shortrange nuclear weapons demonstrated that the Western alliance can adapt to changing circumstances

He said he'd be willing to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev if "something constructive" could come from such a summit.

At a news conference at the conclusion of a twoday NATO meeting which saw his most forceful arms proposals as president, Bush said the western alliance was unified. The meetings were marked by two events - NATO support for his proposed reduction in both U.S. and Soviet conventional forces in Europe and resolution of a dispute with West Germany over modernization of shortrange nuclear weapons based in Western Europe.

"Our overall aim is to overcome the division of Europe and to forge a unity based on Western values," Bush said. He expressed hope that arms proposals would "finally free Europe from the constant threat of a surprise attack and the shadow or Soviet military power."

As for Gorbachev, who only hours earlier had revealed the staggering size of the Soviet military budget, Bush said "This will help him ... This should save him a lot of money in the long run."

He said the initial Soviet reaction to his conventional force proposal was "positive," or at least "they didn't really slam the door" on it.

At a news conference televised live in the United States during the breakfast hour, Bush also defended himself against charges in this country that he has been slow to respond to Gorbachev's arms control proposals, which Soviet officials refer to as a "peace offensive."

He said he has reason to believe that Gorbachev "knows we've been serious" in completing a lengthy review of policy. And as for Gorbachev's earlier proposal for reduced forces in Europe, Bush said the Soviets should "unilaterally reduce to equal numbers. That would be a good challenge."

'I have been told by others here that the alliance has never had a meeting that was more upbeat" than the one that ended today, Bush said.

In advance, there had been deep fears that the United States and West Germany would deadlock over the West German desire for quick negotiations with Gorbachev toward eliminating shortrange nuclear weapons in Europe.

"I had in my mind that what we wanted to do is make sure the alliance was together, or would come together," behind any U.S. proposal, Bush said.

Bush said the "successful results at this summit have given us a double hit, both conventional forces and short range nuclear forces, and taken in tandem it demonstrates the alliance's ability" to adapt to change

Bush's proposal for sharp reductions in conventional forces in Europe won enthusiastic agreement from the allies. Bush said these reductions should be negotiated with Moscow before taking up the nuclear missile question.

The Soviet bloc has far greater numbers of soldiers and conventional forces that the United States and NATO forces. Gorbachev has recently proposal a reduction in his side, and Bush won NATO endorsement during the summit for his plan to reduce U.S. and Soviet forces to equal levels.

Bush noted that when he arrived in Brussels he was under fire for apparently being recalcitrant in response to appealing Soviet arms proposals. But he said he was elected president "to do what I think was right," and added, "I think we've come up with a good proposal here."

Minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported the following accident

FRIDAY, May 26

3:25 p.m. — A 1983 Oldsmobile driven by Diana Teague, Route 2 Box 376, collided with a 1986 Buick driven by Clara Chin, 1917 Lea, at Texas Highway 70 and West 25th Avenue. Teague was cited for running a red light.

Train conductor injured in freak accident

MIAMI — A Santa Fe train conductor suffered a broken jaw in a freak accident involving a railroad crossing gate and a Roberts County deputy sheriff.

The accident occurred at 12:40 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Santa Fe railroad tracks and FM282 in downtown Miami, according to Texas Highway Patrol representative Donna Brown. Deputy Billy Franklin Britton of Miami had reportedly stopped a 1987 Ford Crown Victoria sheriff's vehicle he was driving at the railroad crossing, Brown said.

A Santa Fe freight train was also stopped on the tracks near the crossing while waiting for another train to go through, she said.

The train's conductor, H.W. South of Amarillo, stepped off the train, Brown said, lifted the lowered crossing gate and motioned for the deputy to pass through.

As Deputy Britton was driving across the intersection, the crossing gate came down and struck the light bar on top of the sheriff's car, she said. Then the gate bowed and slapped South in the jaw. South had apparently turned away from the gate and did not see what had happened.

South was taken to Coronado Hospital in Pampa by Rural/ Metro Ambulance, where he was treated for a broken jaw, Brown said. The train conductor was transferred to Amarillo for treat ment by an ear, nose and throat specialist, said Linda Haynes, public relations director for Coronado Hospital

No citations were issued, Brown said.

State holiday death toll stands at 30

By The Associated Press

A Texas sheriff was among at least 29 people who died in traffic accidents on Texas roads and highways during the long Memorial Day holiday weekend, officials say.

Nationwide, officials listed 415 among those killed due to holiday related travel and other accidents.

At least three people were killed Monday in Texas. James David Hatfield, 21, of Benton, was killed when his motorcycle collided with a pickup in Bell County.

Irene Esparza, 20, of Dallas, died and five of her relatives were injured in a one-car accident on Interstate 35 near Buda in Central Texas. Officers said a car driven by her husband hit the supporting wall of an overpass after he fell asleep, DPS trooper Dana Moore. Martin Esparza, 35, the driver, and four other people were injured and taken to Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, Moore said.

Kenneth Ray James, 21, of Houston, died Monday when his sports car went out of control on a Houston street and flipped several times, police said.

Young County Sheriff Ed Shields, 50, who had held the post since 1985, was trapped in his car about two hours Sunday night after the accident on U.S. Highway 380 10 miles west of Graham.

His car, a personal vehicle he used in his job as sheriff, collided with a pickup carrying two men and an 11-year-old boy at about 10:30 p.m., Department of Public Safety officials said.

The three in the truck suffered injuries, and the driver was taken by medical helicopter to Harris Hospital-Fort Worth.

The unofficial fatality count by The Associated Press began at 6 p.m. Friday and ran through midnight Monday.

AUSTIN (AP) — Although a special session has been called to try to finish reform of the workers' compensation system, top state leaders today praised other work of the 1989 Legislature.

Clements announced the June 20 special session on workers' compensation about six hours before Monday's midnight session end, insisting he wants a reform bill adopted.

"Our current workers' compensation system is one of the worst in the nation ... It's hurting our efforts to bring new jobs to Texas," Clements said.

But he said the rest of the session was productive.

"Texas is at the crossroads. and the Texas Legislature will be known for its tough and courageous decisions in a time of historic change in our state," said Gov. Bill Clements.

Clements hailed passage of a $47.4 billion, two-year budget that won't require a tax increase, plus the overhaul of the state's criminal justice system, construction of 11,000 more prison beds and mergers of South Texas colleges with the Texas A&M and University of Texas systems.

The session, Clements said, "will rank as one of the most productive in Texas history.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby noted those achievements on his list of major accomplishments. He also cited legislation to provide water and sewer service to colonias and a six-fold increase in funding for AIDS research, treatment and education.

House Speaker Gib Lewis called it "a verv successful session. We addressed major issues of this state. We made some very hard decisions. We were very lucky that we were able to increase our budget without a tax bill and at the same time decrease taxes in some areas." The $47.4 billion budget that won approval represents a 12 percent increase over the current, $42.3 billion spending plan. It also allows about $500 million in temporary taxes passed in 1987 to expire on Aug. 31.

Some lawmakers criticized the budget as shortsighted and virtually requiring a tax hike in 1991.

Money was much on the minds of legislators, who decided to ask for a raise. Their last pay increase came in 1974, when the salary for their part-time jobs was boosted to $7,200 a year.

Under the proposed constitutional amendment that sailed through the House and Senate, lawmakers would see their salary tripled to $23,358 if voters agree this November.

Under the new plan, legislators in the future would be paid 25 percent of the governor's salary which they set. That would allow them to control their own pay scale instead of constantly asking voters to amend the Constitution.

The lieutenant governor and House speaker would get half the governor's salary, or $46,716 in 1991.

Although the 1989 session lacked the extraordinary tax-andspending battles of recent years, lawmakers dealt with numerous issues. Those included:

Prisons

A criminal justice bill would allow the now-overloaded Texas prison system to become the nation's second-largest, with more than 60,000 beds, by 1993.

The plan calls for the construction of about 11,000 more prison beds at new state and regional correction facilities, along with up to 7,500 additional spaces in community-based programs.

These county-based facilities — seen by lawmakers as critical to easing overcrowding at the Texas Department of Corrections — include so-called "boot camps," restitution centers, alcohol and drug treatment units, work-release facilities and halfway houses.

State Rep. Pat Haggerty, R-El Paso, sings from behind a piano as lobbyists and Capitol office workers relax at end of legislative session Monday night.

"Criminals now know that if they commit the crime, they'll soon hear the jail door slam," the governor said.

Colonias

Clements said he supports a sweeping bill to provide millions of dollars to build water and sewer facilities in the substandard housing developments called colonias.

The measure, sought by Rio Grande Valley residents and others for years, also would give counties powers to restrict the growth of such developments in the future.

Agriculture

Each state agency faces "sunset" review every 12 years, when a bill continuing it must pass, or the agency dies. This year, it was controversial Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower's turn, and the outcome remained in doubt until the last days.

Clements, a Republican, had indicated he might veto the bill and kill Democrat Hightower's than the sale price.

College Athletics Gov. Clements, who apologized two years ago for his role in the pay-for-play football scandal that rocked Southern Methodist University, signed a measure making it a crime to offer financial incentives to an athlete to persuade him to attend a specific university.

Backers said it was needed given the state's national reputation for football problems and with six Southwest Conference schools having been disciplined in the last three years.

Capitol Restoration Lawmakers also approved a plan to improve their surroundings

A $154 million program was OK'd to restore the Capitol and add a four-story underground annex that will include new offices for many members of the Legislature

Gambling

Two big issues confronted lawmakers — gambling on cruise ships and changes in the state's pari-mutuel racing laws.

A bill clearing the way for casino gambling ships to sail from Texas cities without traveling to foreign ports was approved after coastal lawmakers said it would be a boon for the Gulf Coast economy

But on the pari-mutuel front, efforts to lower the state's 5 percent share of money wagered at race tracks appeared doomed after opponents cried "foul," noting that racing backers two years ago promised the 5 percent state share was fine

Although the House agreed to listen to a tax cut plan, a Senate opponent threatened to filibuster if the proposal surfaced there. With a special session already scheduled, backers indicated they might try again then.

AIDS

How to spend some $18 million caused by Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome kept the House and Senate at odds for the final week.

A conference committee struggled with the questions Monday afternoon, but an education and treatment program passed in the final 10 minutes of the session; School Finance tion as a start toward solving the school finance dilemma that produced a lawsuit by property-poor school districts.

The school districts won their lawsuit in a lower court but lost in the 3rd Court of Appeals. The Texas Supreme Court has yet to decide

Insurance Reform

After months of investigation into the State Board of Insurance's problems, lawmakers reached a tentative deal that satisfied few.

It would allow the insurance commissioner to issue cease-anddesist orders against fraudulent insurers; strip away secrecy of regulation of companies in financial trouble; require annual audits of insurers, and raise capital and surplus requirements to start an insurance company.

Sen. John Montford said the bill wasn't as strong as he wanted but it would increase scrutiny over insurers

Sen. Ted Lyon said, "This is the lightest form of reform that the Legislature could have adopted. The industry had a heavy hand in on the growing health crisis drawing a lot of the so-called reforms.'

Next to watching professional wrestling on television, there are probably few events as exhilarating as watching my wife and me do the weekly grocery shopping

This was brought to our attention recently when we noticed a crowd of people following us around Homeland.

"Uh, honey, don't look now but there's about 20 people staring at us," I told her. "My fly isn't open or anything, is it?'

She took the big glance, first at my jeans and then at the crowd

"Look, she's gonna pop him in the jewels!" one of the starers said. "You know, I plan my shoppin' around these two. They fight the whole time.

Actually, Caryl and I don't argue when we shop. We are just honest with our emotions regarding what we're gonna stick down our throat for the next seven days. Unfortunately, what I would stick down my throat is usually something Caryl wouldn't feed to the family cat.

"Look, honey," I announced the other day, "they have frozen squid. Let's make a squid casserele.' "That's not funny.

"Hooooney, squid is good. I used to eat it ... " " ... all the time when you lived near the ocean. I know. But you don't live near the ocean now. You live in a normal place where people eat normal food. I'm not putting something that looks like slime with legs into my mouth."

"But hooooney ...

"Do you want to go sit in the car?" she asked. "Then shape up!"

I'm 29 and still get sent to the car. Who would believe it?

My whole life I waited for the day when no one could tell me what I could and couldn't do. Nobody bothered to warn me that when you get married it all goes right out the window.

"OK, no squid. I need breakfast cereal! I'll be right back!" Off I shot for the cereal aisle, hoping to grab the Frosted Flakes before Caryl could say, "No."

I've learned that getting the questionable item into the basket and buried before she sees it gives me a pretty good chance of actually taking it home.

"Get something healthy!" she yelled as I sprinted off.

When I returned with Tony the Tiger in tow,

Caryl had that look on her face. "Is that healthy?"

"I'm almost 30 years old and ...

... and you should be old enough to know better than stuffing that sugar-coated poison into your body.

"I don't smoke. I don't do drugs. I drink only in great moderation. I want my sugar-coated poison, er. cereal.'

"You're making a scene."

Mills

"I am not. And if you don't let my have my Tony the Tiger cereal. I'm gonna hold my breath till I pass out and maybe I'll die.

"And my friends ask why I don't have children. Hah!

Caryl and I have jousted over everything from whether to buy hamburger dills or sweet gerkhins to that decision of decisions --- Hamburger or Tuna Helper

"I hate tuna," she will say.

"What is it about things from the ocean that you're so opposed to? Last week it was no squid. This week no tuna. Were you molested by a salmon when you were young?

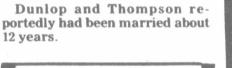

"No, but I'm married to a crab."

The simple thing to do to break our grocery list tug-of-war would be: 1. for me to stay home or, 2. to let Caryl buy whatever she wants.

I suggested the former and got, "You don't like shopping with me. Our marriage is falling apart."

The latter is something I just can't bring myself to accept. Eating is fun. Eating means trying new things like peanut butter and shark sandwiches. And through it all, Caryl and I remain friends, convinced that we have lifted shopping from a weekly chore to the highest ranks of spectator sport.

Maughan arrived minutes before the Jollyville fire trucks and attempted to kick down the door to the bedroom, but it was blocked.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

Larry D. Hollis

Managing Editor

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion Government fails to help education

Thirty years ago, the federal government charged deeply into the nation's educational policy. Ten years ago, the independent Department of Education De-Ed to its detractors — was formed by Jimmy Carter as a payoff to the National Education Association. And six years ago, the presidential panel on execellence in education issued its report, A Nation at Risk, recommending reforms.

But American schools are still in sad shape. Issuing his latest report card on the nation's schools, Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos called them "stagnant." He said that "scares me"; and "we are not making progress. We are standing still. And the problem is that it's been this way for three years now.

That's a chilling report. But for the cause of the problem, Cavazos need only refer to the chronology of federal involvement in education outlined above. As federal bureaucratic controls and red tape have increased, educational quality has declined. Cavazo's department wastes more than $20 billion a year to get "stagnant" results.

This should not be surprising. The education of young minds is a delicate, personal task. How can one possibly imagine that a bloated federal bureaucracy can advance it? The best schools in the nation remain small private schools. Even in the most impoverished, crime-plagued inner-city areas, private shcools are turning delinquents into scholars. For government-run schools, the best are those in small, independent school districts that shun federal "help. Isn't it curious how we don't let the federal government control what we read or what we believe about religion, but we let it - and state and local governments — control what's put into our chil-dren's minds? There's something anomalous here. Totalitarian countries control what everyone thinks and is taught. But free nations are supposed to allow persons and families the freedom to believe and teach what they wish, sans any connection with government. Freeing students from government schools would not only boost levels of educational achievement. It would also resolve such long-standing educational quanddries as prayer in school and what should be taught about evoluation and sex education. Parents and students, as free citizens, would decide these matters. Government would surrender its role as controller of our educations and souls. Fortunately, many parents are not waiting until De-Ed and the other government education boards are abolished. These parents are taking matters into their own hands, often at great personal and material sacrifice.

Policy sounds sensible, but

The Bush administration has weighed the value of human life against the desire to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil and concluded that energy is more important. Never mind that a gallon of gasoline sells for less than a gallon of milk. Transportation Secretary Sam Skinner thinks it's more precious than blood.

Skinner announced that he will force automakers to meet a higher fuel economy standard in 1990. He showed no patience for the previous administration's view that the mileage rules are a lamebrained denial of consumers' preferences. Each manufacturer will have to meet an average standard of 27.5 miles per gallon.

The step was applauded by environmentalists and by a Naderite group, which said it "paves the way for a 45 miles per gallon standard by the year 2000.

Any time President Bush gets praise from Ralph Nader's confederates, he ought to slam his fist through the wall and immediately fire whoever is responsible. In an age of oil spills, acid rain and the greenhouse effect, tougher mileage rules may sound not only politically shrewd but just plain sensible. There are three reasons why they aren't.

The first is that they will expand a policy that wastes lives as well as money. The second is that they won't save much energy, if any. The third is that if we need to reduce our oil consumption, there are better and cheaper ways to do it.

Skinner curtly dimissed evidence that the mileage standards are contributing to the growing shortage of cemetery space. But the facts resist dismissal. Demanding better fuel economy means demanding smaller cars. The rules have already reduced the weight of the average car by an estimated 611 pounds. Smaller, lighter cars are more vulnerable in collisions.

The melancholy truth is that even when you account for the greater maneuverability of small cars, which makes it easier for them to stay out of trouble, the occupant of an econobox is far more likely to make an early acquaintance with his maker than a passenger in a land vacht.

Writing in the Journal of Law and Economics, Robert Crandall of the Brookings Institutin and John Graham of the Harvard School of Public Health estimate that the existing rules on 1989 model year cars will generate somewhere between 2,200 and 3,900 extra corpses over the next 10 years.

In calculating the fuel savings from the tougher standard. Skinner may have forgotten that ambulances and hearses will be using more gas

When Ford marketed a car (the Pinto) whose design was blamed for a couple dozen deaths, it was slapped with enormous damage awards, indicted on criminal charges and depicted as greedily indifferent to human life. When the Bush administration adopts a policy likely to produce far more carnage, it is hailed as wise and responsible.

The loss of life might be defended - I wouldn't defend it, but somebody might - if it would actually cut gasoline consumption. Trouble is, it probably won't. By raising the price of some cars and thwarting the desires of consumers, the higher standard will cause some people to walk out of the showroom and keep the old beater --- which most likely gets worse mileage (and pollutes more and has fewer safety features) than the big new car Skinner is trying to legislate out of existence.

The fuel economy regulations are one big reason people are hanging on to their cars far longer than they used to. That probably cancels out any effect a higher standard will have on energy conservation.

If you want Americans to burn less gasoline, this is a clumsy and ineffectual way of doing it. A more precise, potent method is a tax on gasoline (though if you're worried about global warming, you should tax oil, coal and natural gas, too). A gasoline tax would penalize people who keep their thirsty old cars, instead of rewarding them.

Also unlike the fuel economy regulations, it would actually discourage driving by raising the cost of each mile driven. As the gas crunch of 1979-80 proved, people drive less when it costs more.

But politicians strongly prefer the mileage rules because their cost is invisible. They fear a higher gas tax would stir resentment among motorists every time they pull up to the pump, reminding them of the elected officials who imposed the burden.

Fortunately for Bush and Skinner, all the people who will die thanks to this decision won't be around to express their dissatisfaction in the voting booth. Like a doctor, the administration will buy its mistakes.

THE GREAT WALL OF CHINA

Windshield washing a lost art

I've been getting my car serviced down at Ernie's Exxon for years.

Ernie's a nice guy and a terrific mechanic. His assistant, Luper, who took one upside the head with a falling lug wrench severasl years ago, hasn't been exactly right since, but he may wash the best windshield in the service station game, a lost art.

Luper leaves no soapy streaks and will bear down and literally dig what's left of the late bugs that met an abrupt end on your windshield.

Ernie's regular customers even got together one year and gave Luper an entire set of new sponges for his birthday.

Luper was so moved he was unable to make an acceptance speech, so Ernie had to speak for him. "I think I know what Luper would say to all of you if he could. He'd say, 'How's that oil?' '

Speaking of oil, I've been giving Ernie and Luper the business since the Exxon oil spill up in Alaska

I stopped in for a fill-up the other day. Ernie was under the hood of an '87 Chevy in the garage

"Hey, Ernie," I said. "Look at all this oil that spilled out on your garage floor. What are you trying for, Valdez II?"

Ernie mumbled something as he fiddled with the carburetor.

"Hey, Ernie," I went on, "what's the wife cooking you for dinner tonight? Duck Valvoline?'

I managed to dodge the flying screwdriver just in time.

But I couldn't stop.

"Listen, Ernie," I continued, "you've got to admit Exxon really did it this time. First the skipper of the tanker is off the bridge celebrating Miller time and this lackey runs into Alaska.

'Think about it, Ernie. He ran into a state. An iceberg is one thing, but Alaska's the biggest state in the Union.

"I might understand running into Delaware or Rhode Island, but Alaska?'

"Look," said Ernie, "I had nothing to do with any of that. All I do is sell Exxon products."

'Whaddaya have on special this week slightly watered-down 40-weight?" I asked.

I was cooking now. Sometimes I really crack myself up.

'Hey, Ernie. Hear about the four sea lions from Prince William Sound who started a singing group?

"No? They're calling themselves the 'Ink Seals.' Get it? 'Ink Seals.

"How about this one? What did the Exxon skipper say when they told him there was a chance the ocean could catch on fire? He said, I'll have a Bud Lite.'

I could see I was getting nowhere with Ernie, so I turned my attention to Luper, who was digging dead bugs off my windshield.

"I like your hair, Luper," I said.

Luper tends to slick it back a bit.

"What happened to you this morning? You run into a Vitalis tanker?

"Hey, Luper, if you fell on your head, you'd skid 50 yards. I've seen greasy kid stuff before, but you're wearing the granddaddy. What are you doing, trying out for a part with the Ink Seals?"

With that Luper threw his sponge at me.

"If you want them bugs off your windshield," he said, "you can get them off yourself."

A Vitalis tanker. Some people obviously do not appreciate comedy genius when it hits them right in the face.

Our environmental problems won

By SARAH OVERSTREET

During the 1988 presidential campaign, George Bush promised to be the "environmental president."

So far, he's off to a shaky start. First, he waited two weeks before offering any kind of federal help in the effort to clean up Alaska's Prince William Sound after the Exxon Valdez spill. Now, he's letting his minions rewrite science.

This bizarre story began with a report prepared by a top NASA scientist for a Senate hearing on global warming - the greenhouse effect. His findings were based on computer projections of the long-term effects of gases released into the atmosphere by industrial society.

In his draft of the paper, scientist James E. Hansen said a couple of scary things: (1) that a buildup of these gases increases the likelihood of drought and severe storms; and (2) that these gases come primarily from human activities such as burning fos-

Hansen turned an advance copy of his text in to the White House Office of Management and Budget. OMB staffers then simply rewrote his conclusions. Most notably, they recast the role of man in the drama from star to walk-on. Hansen said man's activities caused the greenhouse effect; OMB changed his text to say man's role "remains scientifically unknown."

The news of this science fiction came only two days after the White House rebuffed a request for the U.S. government to call an international convention on global warming. Among the officials who had urged the White House to propose the conference was Environmental Protection Agency head William Reilly. White House Chief of Staff John Sununu said he supported the idea, but it was "premature."

A suspicious mind might think the administration is stalling. Critics accuse the president of wanting to put off measures that would constrain our fossil-fuel-sucking economy. "For the U.S. to really do something to limit greenhouse gas emission may require some rather expensive and potentially disruptive policies," William Nitze, deputy assistant secretary of state for environment, health and natural resources, says.

In other words, to cut down on the greenhouse effect, we'd have to undergo a major, costly adjustment to life as we know it.

Is this supposed to be news? In 1974, scientists first figured out that chlorofluorocarbons, the chemicals used in aerosol sprays and other products, were destroying the Earth's ozone layer. Since then, every environmental scientist on the planet has re-emphasized the warning.

Of course the measures are going to hurt. If we'd done more about reducing the problems a long time ago, the shock wouldn't be so great now; but we didn't. That's a pretty clear lesson that the longer we put it off, the worse the sting is going to be.

Not only do I want to know what we have to do as individuals and as nations to avoid disaster; I want governments to take an active role in making it happen. The information has been there for anyone enterprising enough to look for it, but humans are by heritage a lazy sort. Without some initiatives by the world's leading industrial powers, we're going to continue to pollute the atmosphere, deplete the ozone layer and foul the water.

If not now, when? When the economy's stronger? When we have less to lose? When we've managed to turn our children's future into a dry hell unable to sustain them?

If you think it's time for the environmental president to make good on his promise, maybe he needs to hear it from you now.

MILWAUKEE (AP) - U.S. District Judge Thomas J. Curran ruled in favor of General Electric Co. in two cases while holding stock in the company, despite a requirement that judges disqualify themselves in such situations, The Associated Press has learned.

Curran said he would "notify counsel of the existence of the conflicting interest" and avoid future involvement in cases involving GE. The U.S. Judicial Code of Ethics forbids a judge from presiding in a case where he has a financial holding.

AP discovered the incidents by reviewing Curran's financial disclosure statements and crossreferencing his stock holdings with his case files. Curran has reported in all his financial disclosure reports since 1985 that he held between $15,000 and $50,000 in GE stock. He presided over unrelated cases involving GE Medical Systems in 1987 and 1989 and said in an interview that he was surprised to learn of the conflicts.

"I really thought we had a system to prevent that," Curran said. He said in accepting the cases, he hadn't recognized GE Medical Systems as a "subsidiary" of GE. However, GE Medical Systems is a division of the parent company and not a subsidiary, and in one case Curran's ruling directly cited General Electric Co. as the defendant.

"I couldn't dispute that," said Curran, who had reviewed only one case completely but acknowledged both cases involved GE. Curran said Friday he still owned the GE stock.

William Bauer, chief judge of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said judges in his circuit are required to compare their financial disclosure statements against court documents before deciding whether they can preside over that case.

"The code is fairly clear," said Bauer, who was informed of the details of the case but asked that the name of the judge not be disclosed to him. "If you have a financial interest you must disqualify yourself."

Bauer is responsible for enforcing the judicial code of ethics on all judges in his territory, which includes Wisconsin. He said he would impanel a committee to review the matter if he received a written complaint. Any disciplinary action would be decided by that panel, he said.

University of Wisconsin Law Professor Frank Tuerkheimer, a former U.S. attorney, recommended the plaintiffs in both cases appeal the decisions. He said neither suit was large enough to affect the judge's investments, "but the case law is clear that that does not matter.

Tuerkheimer reviewed the case, but also asked that the name of the judge not be disclosed to him.

Curran's first case involving GE stemmed from a 1983 lawsuit filed by a union representing Robert Holloway. The union claimed Holloway was unfairly denied a promotion at the GE Medical Systems plant in West Milwaukee. There was a oneday trial in 1984, and Curran dismissed the lawsuit June 5, 1987.

His ruling listed General Electric Co. as the defendant.

In the more recent case, Joseph Toth, another GE Medical Systems employee, sued in 1988 claiming he was unfairly fired for missing work because of a health problem. On April 25, 1989, Curran denied Toth's request for a trial, issuing a summary judgment dismissing the lawsuit.

The Toth case listed General Electric Medical Systems as the defendant.

William E. Wentzel, who represented Toth, is now considering an appeal.

Matthew R. Robbins, whose firm represented Holloway, said he would contact his client, "but I would have to suspect that past due time would make an appeal unlikely.

Anticipation

Eagerly finding a place to look down the road, a youngster waits for the Memorial Day parade to pass by on East tackles spending, trade bills Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate plans to rework a $3.7 billion domestic spending bill this week, a politically difficult act that would take center stage except for the leadership struggle among House Democrats.

The spending bill took two months for the House to finish and is under a White House veto threat because of its drug spending proposals. Work on the measure is likely to provoke disputes over the federal deficit, fuel House-Senate rivalries and focus attention on 1990 politics.

But despite those attentiongrabbing elements, most eyes will doubtless be riveted instead on the travails of House Speaker Jim Wright. Lawmakers struggling over the bill will find themselves in the position of vaudevillians following the animal act. Wright, D-Texas, is expected by many to step down this week, his 35-year congressional career sunk by ethics allegations over his personal finances. Jockeying among Democrats hoping to move up on the party's leadership ladder is already consuming time in the House.

The spending is a priority because it contains money for programs for the 1989 fiscal year, which lasts until Sept. 30. It includes $1.2 billion for veterans health care, benefit increases and other Department of Veterans Affairs programs, as well as for college student loans, foster care efforts, United Nations peacekeeping activities, refugee assistance and other initiatives. The measure contains nearly twice as much money as President Bush sought when he sent a $2.2 billion version of the bill to Capitol Hill in March. Bush's advisors say the legislation is too costly, considering a federal deficit expected to reach about $160 billion this year.

Ĩ.

But most controversial of all is $822 million the House shoehorned into the measure for new law enforcement officials, additional prison cells, counseling and other anti-drug programs.

House Democrats — with an eye to surveys showing the public thinks illicit drugs are America's worst problem — argued that the money would finance a war on drugs that Bush has merely talked about Republicans said the provision simply threw money at a problem that is already adequately financed. The Republicans complained that Democrats were merely trying to put them in the embarrassing position of voting in opposition to a more muscular federal effort against drug dealers.

But according to congressional aides who asked not to be identified, the Senate version of the bill will probably not include the drugmoney. Lawmakers in that chamber think they have a deal with the White House on a bill the president would sign lacking the, drug funds but containing more money than Bush has so far supported.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., plans an effort to insert some anti-drug spending anyway, his office said Friday.

The Senate may also try to insert spending priorities of its own into the bill. Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., may try to find $6.6 million for a program that subsidizes air carriers serving small communities, and $75 million to replace a giant radio telescope that crumbled last November.

Bipartisan plan ensures aid for El Salvador

Bush administration and Congress have worked out a tentative agreement aimed at continuing U.S. military aid to El Salvador while taking into account congressional concerns about a rightist resurgence in that Central American country, U.S. officials say.

Much of the concern stems from a reported increase in human rights abuses in El Salvador troubling." But the administraat a time when moderate President Jose Napoleon Duarte is preparing to surrender power to the leader of the rightist Arena party, Alfredo Cristiani. Cristiani was elected in a landslide on March 19 and will be sworn in on Thursday, ending the rule of perhaps the most pro-American president in the hemisphere, a man who was able to coax billions of U.S. aid dollars from Congress but was unable to achieve peace.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fought hard to oppose moves in Congress for sharp cutbacks in aid to El Salvador, but Democrats were able to extract some concessions during lengthy negotiations with State Department officials, according to congressional and administration sources.

Hobby receives tribute

AUSTIN (AP) — Gaveling to a from Hobby but "we certainly close his final regular legislative session as lieutenant governor, Bill Hobby received an emotional tribute from a standing crowd in the Senate that gave him four ovations.

Hobby himself looked at his feet as the crowd cheer and applauded.

"It's clear to me that Texas is not finished with you yet," said Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas.

Hobby was elected lieutenant governor in 1972, and has set a record for longevity. He has announced he will not run for office in 1990.

"We've all learned from you. We're better men and better women because of service with you," said Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall.

Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, said in future years the "Hobby way" will be synonymous with excellence.

Speaking for five freshman senators, Bill Haley, D-Center, said not only had they learned feel and sense ... history" from having served with as "noble a character as you.'

Haley said Hobby had "set history and an historical course for the state.

"My compliments, sir, my respect," said Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, the only remaining senator of 15 who arrived with Hobby for the 1973 Legislature.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, talked past the midnight closing in praising Hobby, whom he called an "unselfish man" that has served "beyond the call of duty.

Barrientos said Hobby had demonstrated his ability to negotiate settlements among various factions, had supported "wise and necessary social programs' and made "sound economic investments for the state.

Gorbachev promises defense cuts to improve people's lives

By ANDREW KATELL Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - Mikhail S. Gorbachev said today that the Kremlin spends $118 billion a year for defense — nearly four times the previous official claim — and promised defense cuts would help improve people's lives.

The Soviet president disclosed the figure in a speech to the new Congress in which he also promised to root out bureaucrats who are holding back reforms and pledged an attack on the special privileges of Soviet officials.

He also said local elections scheduled for the fall would be postponed until the spring to give legislators a chance to work out changes in election laws and other key legislation.

Gorbachev said the savings from a military budget trimmed by more than 13 percent would be channeled into raising the standard of living of a nation plagued by chronic shortages and shoddy goods.

the first Soviet legislative body chosen in contested elections in 70 years - have listed improving the standard of living their most pressing concern.

"All of our production capacities must be reoriented to produce what the people need," Gorbachev said in his 95-minute address (AP Laserphoto) Yeltsin chats with reporters before Tuesday's meeting.

He told the Congress on the fifth day of its inaugural session that military spending would be reduced by $15.3 billion by the end of 1991, prompting delegates to burst into applause.

The speech was greeted coolly by one of the bestknown legislators, the immensely popular reformer Boris N. Yeltsin.

"I was expecting something new, something entirely and radically new that would take into account the crisis state of society and the (Communist) party," he told reporters. "The sloganmaking system doesn't work anymore.

Gorbachev's speech contained no direct response to President Bush's announcement Monday of substantial cuts in U.S. forces in Europe and a call for swift East-West agreement on even deeper reductions by 1993.

But both sides have now proposed specific troop and weapons reductions, which could set the stage for detailed negotiations at the Vienna talks on reducing conventional arms.

The traditionally secretive Soviet government has long concealed its true military expenditures, complicating East-West arms talks. As recently as October, the official budget for 1989 allocated $32 billion for the military.

Economist Leonid Abalkin, speaking to reporters after Gorbachev's speech, said the figure represents about 9 percent of the Soviet gross national product. The $300 billion Pentagon budget represents about 6 percent of the U.S. gross national product.

Asked why previous defense figures were so much lower, Abalkin said they represented only "what we could call the budget of the Ministry of Defense.'

"This is certainly coming closer to the truth," said one Western diplomat, adding that considerable analysis of the figures would be required to determine the accuracy of the president's new total. The diplomat spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Congress defeated Yeltsin's bid for a seat in the smaller, full-time national legislature, or Supreme Soviet, on Saturday. But on Monday, it reversed itself after tens of thousands of people took the streets or sent angry telegrams in protest.

Yeltsin, the 58-year-old ousted Moscow Communist Party chief, won 90 percent of the popular vote in his election to a Moscow seat this year.

In a parliamentary maneuver that had Gorbachev's blessing, a Siberian deputy the Congress chose for the new 542-seat Supreme Soviet offered to resign on condition Yeltsin be allowed to take his place and the Congress agreed.

Yeltsin also had been passed over for the vice presidency, which went Monday to Politburo member Anatoly I. Lukyanov, a Gorbachev confidant.

State of seige declared in Argentina after people loot stores

By ED McCULLOUGH Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Police today guarded grocery stores in the country's four largest cities after looting by people driven desperate by economic crisis prompted President Raul Alfonsin to declare a state of siege.

Many groups of looters have been led by women and children. some of whom have been eating in the supermarkets before fleeing with food.

At least three people were killed Monday during looting and riots in the northern city of Rosario, the government news agency Telam said.

Police said about 600 people were arrested and 41 — including five policemen — were injured by rubber bullets, tear gas, stones and fists. Another 300 were arrested in working class suburbs of Buenos Aires.

Alfonsin declared the 30-day state of siege, which suspends civil liberties, in an attempt to end a week of looting by people sent reeling by soaring inflation, rising unemployment, a devalued currency and shrunken wages.

TENSION HEADACHES

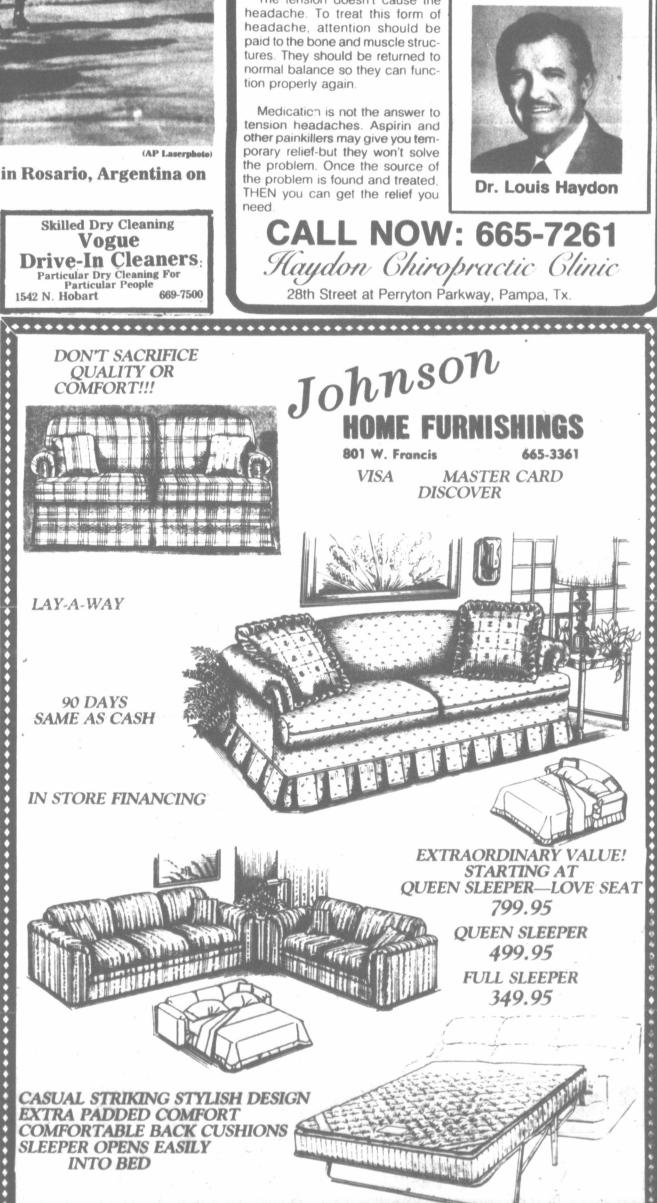

If you're bothered by headache that seems to have its origin at the base of your skull, you may be suffering from tension headache.

Tension headaches can be caused by an irritation of the nerves in the area of the spine immediately under the skull. These are called the suboccipital nerves. They pass through small openings in the spinal column to muscles in the surrounding area. Any abnormal pressure of dysfunction of neck and muscles can irritate the nerves, causing tension.

Comanche Peak chief eager for startup

DALLAS (AP) — As the start date approaches for the first nuclear power plant in North Texas, the man in charge of nuclear operations at Comanche Peak says he's nervous.

Austin B. Scott Jr., vice president of nuclear operations for TU Electric since 1985, is a retired rear admiral and former commander of the submarine force of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, where he was responsible for 47 nuclear submarines

But all that experience doesn't do much to ease his jitters as the scheduled October fuel loading date approaches at the twinreactor power plant 80 miles southwest of Dallas, he told The Dallas Morning News.

"I worry about everything. I'm the kind of guy who studies for a blood test," Scott says. So far, Scott said, he's pleased with the testing of plant equipment.

A problem with several faulty valves that developed April 23 and blistered the paint on about 200 feet of pipe appears easy to repair, he said. Check valves apparently allowed feedwater from three of the unit's four steam generators to flow back into some auxiliary piping outside the containment wall.

Most of the summer will be spent preparing for fuel loading, Scott said.

In the next major test, workers will pressurize the airtight containment dome and seal any prove that to other people now."

Inspectors from the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission will perform a two-week review of the reactor operating procedures and observe an emergency exercise drill July 25 and 26.

If NRC commissioners approve its application, the utility is scheduled to load nuclear fuel in October into the Unit 1 reactor

Trust is family's answer to question of a curfew

DEAR ABBY: I have seen several letters in your column concerning the problem of curfews imposed upon college students when they visit home. My parents and I have found a good way to handle this situation. When I go home, I consider myself a guest in my parents' house, and I try to be as considerate as possible.

My parents realize that it would be silly to impose a curfew on an adult; therefore, before I go out for an evening. I tell them with whom I am going, where I plan to be and approximately what time I'll be home. If I'm out later than I had expected to be. I always call home so my parents won't worry. This gives me the freedom to go out and stay as long as I wish without coming home to wor-

He never initiated sex. I had to beg for it. (He was the one with the headache.) I felt empty, worthless and inadequate. He put me on a guilt trip by saying, "You're just like your mother - you don't have the capacity to be happy." I finally divorced him after 25 years of misery. Thanks for advising Michael's girlfriend not to marry him. I hope she takes your advice. BEEN THERE IN HOUSTON DEAR BEEN THERE: So do I. DEAR ABBY: The letter about the father who considered leaving his very young child alone for a "few minutes" while he ran out to pick up pizza prompts this letter. First, thank you, Abby, for saying that no one should leave a child unattended for even five minutes. Here's my story: I am the mother of two daughters, ages 1 and 2. My 2year-old was sleeping when I had to drive to town to do a few errands. I put her pillow and sleeping bag in the backseat to let her sleep, and I married him. He never overcame took my 1-year-old into the store with me just to pay a bill and run back out. There were a few people ahead of me, so I waited in line for maybe five minutes. Then someone yelled, "There's a car on fire with a child inside!

I ran outside, and saw it was my car! The door was locked and all the windows were rolled up. The car was filled with smoke. I unlocked the car and felt around in the backseat screaming my daughter's name. I couldn't see her with all that smoke. I could hardly breathe. She was backed into the corner. I finally grabbed her and pulled her out. Her hair was singed, and she was black and coughing and crying. Never in my life have I felt so guilty, knowing that my child could have died because of my neglect An ambulance arrived and took her to a hospital. She was placed in an oxygen tent and treated for smoke inhalation. Thank God. she lived! Abby, the only part of my car that didn't burn was that one corner I pulled my child out of. I learned a lesson I will never forget. Please print this as a warning to others who may be tempted to leave a child unattended for "only a few minutes.

The top layer of the compost pile should be soil and the surface should form a basin to hold water. Water each layer of organic matter before adding the soil layer.

Water the pile thoroughly when completed. Add water as needed to keep the material moist but not soggy. Leaves decompose slowly if too dry.

Turn the compost every three to four months to aerate the material and speed decomposition. Within six months to a year, your compost will be ready to use and you'll be glad you saved those grass clippings. GARDEN CHECK LIST

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)-An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been devel-oped and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally" Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day. until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising'

Flushes Fat Out of Body The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated. "Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fatbonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug.'

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again. Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Pitino expected to take Kentucky job

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Rick Pitino, who has called himself a "college coach living on borrowed time," will leave the New York Knicks of the NBA to take charge of the troubled University of Kentucky basketball program, sources say.

The 36-year-old Pitino, who has coached the Knicks for two seasons, will announce his decision Thursday at a news conference in Lexington, the Courier-Journal of Louisville and WCBS-TV in New York reported.

"He said he would meet with the Knicks tomorrow and if everything goes well, he expects to make the announcement on Thursday," WCBS sports reporter Rock Rote quoted Pitino as saying late Monday night.

The Courier-Journal, in today's editions, quoted two unidentified sources as saying Pitino was leaving the Knicks.

The newspaper said the Kentucky Athletics Board would have to approve the hiring before it could be announced. Kentucky sports information director Chris Cameron said Monday that no meeting of the board had been scheduled.

Pitino, after visiting the university last week, was offered the position held for four seasons by Eddie Sutton. The latter

"I'm a college coach living on borrowed time." — Rick Pitino resigned in March in the midst of an NCAA investigation that resulted in three years' probation for the Kentucky program.

Kentucky finished 13-19 last season, its first losing record in 62 years. The NCAA penalties announced earlier this month include a ban on postseason tournament play for two years and a ban on live television for next season.

The AP could not reach Pitino for comment. Rote, who hosts Pitino's weekly show on WCBS, and Knicks spokesman John Cirillo declined to give out the coach's unlisted home telephone number. Cirillo, who said he had "no announcement to make," added Monday night that he didn't know if Pitino had made a decision

At Kentucky, Athletic Director C.M Newton and university President David Roselle would not comment.

Pitino, who led Providence Unbiversity into the NCAA Final Four in his last season before joining the Knicks for the 1987-88 season, has expressed the desire to get back to the college level.

"I'm a college coach living on borrowed time," he said last week.

It could not be determined what Pitino's contract length or compensation would be at Kentucky, the Courier-Journal reported. Various reports have placed it from five to seven years at $600,000 to $1 million a season.

The Knicks said Friday that they would ask Kentucky to reimburse them for the cost of hiring a new coach if Pitino. still under contract for two more seasons, leaves. Newton said he wouldn't pay, but Pitino said he would if necessary.

Pitino guided the Knicks to a 52-30 record this season, their best since 1972-73.

Pitino, who coached two seasons at Providence, led Boston University from 1978 to 1983. He had just one losing season in college — 13-14 at BU in 1980-81. Pitino, whose Knicks were 38-44 in 1987-88, also served as an assistant with the team in addition to similar stints at the University of Hawaii and Syracuse.

Pistons even series By JOE MOOSHIL AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Isiah Thomas has this wild, whacky playoff series between the Detroit Pistons and Chicago Bulls all figured out.

We have to put back-to-back wins together," Thomas said Monday after scoring 27 points to lead the Pistons to an 86-80 victory that tied the best-of-7 series at two games each.

"The team that wins back-toback games will win this series," he said

Thomas also had 10 rebounds and six assists, but said "I don't have to be the main focus" of the team. Yet, he totaled 14 points in the two losses and 60 in the two victories.

At present, the Pistons can put together successive victories by winning at Detroit on Wednesday night before the series reverts to Chicago on Friday night.

If a seventh game is needed, it will be played Sunday in Detroit. Regardless when this series ends, the winner will face the Los Angeles Lakers in the finals beginning June 6.

The Pistons regained the home court advantage they had relinquished when the Bulls came up with a surprising victory in the opening game. 'We got what we came for," Thomas said. "We almost got two and we played good defense the other day, but we let that game get away from us."

The surprise in the series has been Chicago's ability to win two games after the Pistons, who had the best record in the NBA, had a 6-0 mark against the Bulls during the regular season.

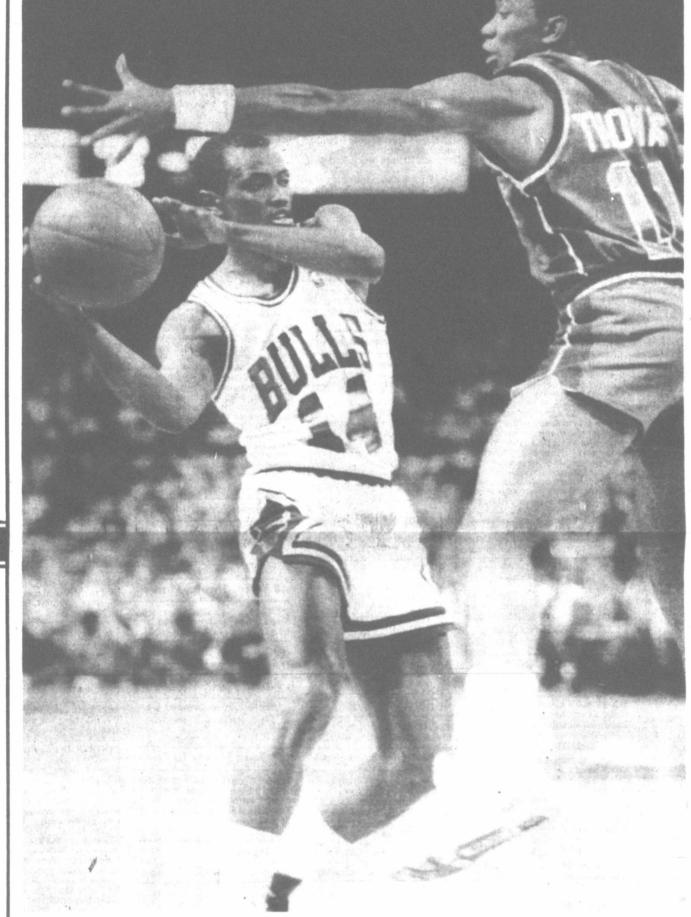

The Pistons tied the series with defense, bench strength and holding down Michael Jordan, who has averaged 37 points in the playoffs. Limiting Jordan to 23 points is holding him down. Jordan scored 12 points in the first quarter and 11 the rest of the way.

Jordan, who took only 15 shots, said "the shots weren't falling, so I tried to spread it around to the other guys. But as a team, we couldn't hit when we needed them.'

Thomas did. The Pistons never led until the final shot of the first half when Thomas held the ball and hit a 3-pointer as time ran out for a 42-39 Detroit lead.

The Bulls put on a spurt to take a 55-50 lead in the third quarter before James Edwards came in to score six of eight points to give the Pistons a 62-58 edge. Thomas made it 64-60 after three quarters and Detroit stayed comfortably in front the rest of the way

The Pistons' bench not only outscored the Bulls' bench 36-2, but the reserves also came up with 31 rebounds, 18 by Dennis Rodman. "We did our job today," said Rodman, who helped guard Jordan.

NL roundup

By The Associated Press

In the span of a few hours, the Philadelphia Phillies lost a legend and a ballgame.

Third baseman Mike Schmidt announced his retirement in an emotional farewell Monday and told his teammates to start a new era in Phillies baseball.

But Bruce Hurst and Mark Davis combined on a four-hitter as San Diego beat the Phillies 1-0, putting the new era on hold.

"I challenged my teammates to move ahead with a new enthusiasm," Schmidt said. "It's up to them to bring new life to the Phillies' organization."

But Hurst took the life out of the Phillies.

The Padres' left-hander allowed four hits and struck out six in 8 2-3 innings to improve to 5-3 while sending the Phillies to their sixth straight loss.

Ricky Jordan singled and Von Hayes walked with two outs in the ninth and Davis came on to retire Chris James on a grounder for his 16th save in as many opportunities.

James was named as Schmidt's replacement at third base

Tony Gwynn's RBI single in the first scored Roberto Alomar with the game's only run.

Andres Galarraga's runscoring single snapped a ninthinning tie to lift Montreal past Los Angeles.

Wallace Johnson led off the ninth with a pinch single and Rex Hudler, running for Johnson, was sacrificed to second. After a walk to Tom Foley, Alejandro Pena relieved Tim Leary, 5-4. Galarraga then lined a shot off first baseman Eddie Murray's glove for the game-winning hit.

Pascual Perez, 1-7, pitched two innings of hitless relief for the victory and Tim Burke retired the side in the ninth for his 10th save

Giants 3, Mets 2

Brett Butler drove in two runs with sacrifice flies and scored another on Will Clark's double as San Francisco beat New York.

Don Robinson, 3-4, allowed six hits before leaving the game with a stiff right arm after seven innings. Craig Lefferts pitched two innings for his ninth save.

No rest for the Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) -Maybe the Los Angeles Lakers' equipment manager should start stocking brooms.

The two-time defending NBA champions' sweep of the Phoenix Suns completed an undefeated entry into the league title series. a feat never before accomplished.

The Lakers handled, or manhandled, Portland and Seattle before defeating Phoenix in four straight games.

"Always in control," was how league MVP Magic Johnson described it.

The hasty ouster of Phoenix earned the Lakers a nine-day rest as the Detroit Pistons and Chicago Bulls battle for the NBA East title

But thanks to Coach Pat Riley's grueling workouts, few of the Lakers will consider the break relaxing

Riley, who needs just one more playoff win to tie longtime former Boston Celtics coach Red Auerbach on the all-time NBA postseason victory list with 99, said he will likely take the team to its Santa Barbara training center during the hiatus.

"We're going into hibernation and he'll work us twice a day, Johnson said.

"You know Riley's already rubbing his hands devising tortures for us," reserve center Mychal Thompson said. "I tell you, it's like a punishment for us winning in four.'

Simpson wins Atlanta crown

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Veteran golfer Scott Simpson came out on top in the Atlanta Classic, but he remembers what it was like to be a beginner who only came close.

Simpson bested fellow veteran Bob Tway in a playoff hole to win the $900,000 Atlanta Classic on Sunday on the hilly, 7,018-yard Atlanta Country Club course. But to get there he had to outlast a handful of golfers looking for their first PGA tour - victories

"It's hard for those players just starting on the tour and the way they're viewed when they get in contention," Simpson said.

"I remember in 1980, I was one of those nonames and won the Western Open by beating Hale Irwin. Nobody knew me, and everybody knew who he was.

Jay Don Blake, Duffy Waldorf, Kent Kluba, Mike Miles and Larry Silveira fell short in pursuit of their initial win. And Wayne Grady, an Australian who hasn't won in the United States in fourplus seasons, was another trying to establish some name recognition.

Grady had led the event after the second round, and Blake, the 1980 NCAA champion from Utah State, led after the first and third rounds.

Spurs trade Public Notice Robertson NOTICE TO BIDDERS

SAN ANTONIO (AP) Alvin Robertson isn't the only one in San Antonio who's surprised and saddened by his trade to Milwaukee for veteran forward Terry Cummings.

Several Spurs players said they're sad to see the five-year guard go.

Robertson, who was onsidered the most popular Spurs player since the days of George 'Ice Man'' Gervin, was dealt to the Bucks along with second-year forward Greg Anderson and future considerations Sunday.

"They traded two quality players for one player who may be over the hill in two or three years," said guard Willie Anderson. "This trade will upset a lot of people. I didn't expect to lose two quality players B-20 like that in one trade."

Cummings has led the Bucks in scoring each of his five seasons with the team, averaging 22.9 points. But he and Robertson also were disappointed by the deal. Both hoped to stay with
