by the House earlier in the day to replace former House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas who stepped down due to charges filed against him by the House Ethics Committee.

Foley promises 'respect,' no honeymoon with GOP

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Speaker Thomas S. Foley is promising an "environment of respect" to a House torn by the resignation of Jim Wright, but his vow is being tested by Republican attacks aimed at portraying him and all Democrats as corrupt.

"We cannot tolerate the continuance of the current distrust and suspicion and expect to fulfill the public's expectation," the Washington Democrat said Tuesday upon taking the speaker's gavel. "Politics involves the clash of ideas, and we will inevitably have disagreements," he said. "But we must be able to conduct our political battles in an environment of respect for ourselves, for our opponents and for the House."

Foley's soothing words were sent to a House shaken by an extraordinary upheaval in the Democratic ranks, with two of the three top party officers exiting because of questions about their personal finances.

Wright, D-Texas, resigned after the House ethics committee charged him with violating House rules on outside income, and the No. 3 Democrat, Majority Whip Tony Coelho of California, is stepping down to avoid inquiry into a junk bond deal.

The Democrats plan to meet next week to fill Foley's old post of majority leader and the whip's job.

Republicans have moved quickly to take advantage of the Democratic turmoil, attacking Foley and warning the Democrats they can't run away from the ethics issue.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., turned the usually good-willed gesture of introducing the new speaker to the House into a strongly-worded reminder that Republicans are seething after 35 years under the ruling Democrats.

"Thirty five years of uninterrupted power can act like a corrosive acid upon the restraints of civility and comity," he said. "I am all in favor of putting our House in order — but we don't do so by sweeping things under the rug."

Many Democrats considered Michel's remarks a slap at the olive branch Foley was extending. "I think they could have been a little more conciliatory, a little more healing," said Rep. Dale Kildee, D-Mich.

A more personal shot at Foley from the Republican National Committee was brushed aside by the new speaker, but it drew ire from a Democratic lawmaker whose name was used in the attack.

The RNC issued a paper comparing Foley's voting record with that of Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., an acknowledged homosexual. The paper was headlined, "Tom Foley, Out of the Liberal Closet."

Frank called the document "despicable" and said he might expose gay Republican lawmakers if the GOP continues making "scurrilous" attacks. He noted that Republicans have not been immune from ethics problems, citing the May 26 conviction of Rep. Donald Lukens, R-Ohio, on charges of having sex with a 16-year-old girl.

Foley himself said he hadn't read the Republican paper and didn't intend to. "I'm not concerned about political action committees. I want to work with the president, work with the leadership of the Congress," he said.

Foley also avoided any unkind words about the treatment he received from Michel. He promised to meet Michel's demand for swift action on an ethics and campaign reform package — a goal Democrats also want to meet in order to put the whole ethics issue to rest.

Foley also promised to renew the tradition of regular meetings of the House Democratic and GOP leadership — something Wright abandoned more than a year ago.

Study: millions of U.S. youth suffer from mental disorders

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Between 12 and 22 percent of America's children — as many as 14 million of those under age 18 — are suffering from some type of mental disorder, but only about a third are receiving any treatment, a study released today reported.

A committee of the Institute of Medicine said in the study that though millions of childhood mental disorders are not treated, the situation has improved in the last 20 years and there is "demonstrable progress" toward understanding, preventing and correcting many of the mental diseases of youngsters.

"There is increasing reason for optimism that many of the major childhood mental disorders are responsive to treatment," the committee said.

But in far too many cases, no treatment at all is being offered to troubled youngsters, the committee said.

Though conservative estimates place the number of American children with mental disorders at about 7.5 million, or 12 percent, the committee said the number could be much higher.

"Recent studies have suggested that the range may be as high as 17 to 22 percent, or 11 to 14 million children and adolescents," the report said.

Problems identified in the report included mood disorders such as depression, behavior disorders such as hyperactivity, developmental disorders such as autism, as well as chronic drug use, sexual problems and eating disorders including anorexia.

"Approximately 2.5 million children in this country received treatment in 1985 for a mental disorder," the committee reported. "This means that at least another 5 million other children needed some type of intervention, but did not receive any treatment."

Poverty and ghetto life contribute heavily to the nation's troubled youth, the study said.

Youngsters with mental and behavioral problems "may exceed 20 percent in some populations, such as inner-city children, who are exposed to severe psychological adversity," the study said.

The total cost to the nation has not been measured, but the committee said the figure would probably run into the billions of dollars a year.

In addition to the costs of treatment, the committee said there are substantial indirect costs from the need for social services, criminal justice and special education.

"Each year in this nation about 49,000 children and youth are held in various public youth facilities, and many thousands more are in adult prisons," the study said. "Millions of children are involved with child welfare, foster care and residential treatment. Many of these children have a diagnosable mental disorder, but receive neither diagnosis nor treatment."

The study also said that about 25 percent of all mentally retarded children also have behavioral and emotional difficulties. These compound problems often result in such children being confined for life to institutions.

A national plan of coordinated research and training that would attract more professionals to the mental health field, and lead to a better understanding of how to prevent, evaluate and treat mental illness in children was proposed by the committee. The report called for a national investment of up to $198 million annually by the fifth year.

Economists say Federal Reserve loosening grip on interest rates

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After several weeks of internal debate, the Federal Reserve has taken a cautious first step toward lowering interest rates, many economists believe.

The action, if followed by further moves by the central bank to loosen its grip on credit, will spell lower borrowing costs for businesses and consumers, including declines in mortgage rates, the economists said.

A move to lower interest rates would mark a major policy shift by the central bank, which launched a campaign in March 1988 to push interest rates higher in order to fight inflation.

The Bush administration, which has been pressing the Fed to ease up and keep the economy out of a recession, had nothing but praise for the central bank on Tuesday, with the president's chief economic adviser, Michael Boskin, saying he had "utmost confidence" in the Federal Reserve.

The Fed, as usual, made no announcement of any change in policy, but economists who closely watch its activities said they believed the central bank had eased slightly, based on declines this week in the federal funds rate.

This rate, which is the interest that banks charge each other to make overnight loans, is considered the best early-warning signal of Fed intentions.

The central bank influences the rate through daily decisions about how much money it will make available to the banking system.

The federal funds rate had been averaging between 9.75 percent and 9.88 percent, but it dipped to around 9.63 percent on Monday and dropped further to around 9.56 percent on Tuesday.

"The Fed has eased and we are looking for the federal funds rate to go lower," said Cynthia Latta, an economist with Data Resources Inc., a private economic forecasting firm in Lexington, Mass.

Ms. Latta and other analysts said they believe Fed policymakers have become convinced that the economy has slowed enough to ease inflationary pressures.

Starting in March 1988, the Federal Reserve had pushed short-term interest rates up by 3 percentage points in a campaign to cool off an overheated economy by making credit costlier.

Elliott Platt, director of economic research for Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, predicted that a host of business and consumer loan rates will head lower in the months ahead as the Fed loosens credit further in an effort to keep the economy out of a recession.

On Monday, major banks announced that they were cutting their prime lending rate by one-half percentage point to 11 percent, the first reduction in this benchmark lending rate in more than a year.

Platt said he looks for the prime rate to fall to 9.5 percent over the next three to six months.

Other economists predicted that mortgage rates are headed lower. Fixed-rate mortgages have already fallen to a national average of 10.48 percent last week, down from close to 11 percent at the beginning of May.

Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, refused to comment specifically on the question of whether the Fed is now pursuing a credit-easing approach.

During an appearance Tuesday at the National Press Club, Boskin did say that the administration has a "great deal of confidence" that the central bank will steer a prudent course between fighting inflation and guarding against a recession.

Advocates: legalizing drugs reduces crime

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With President Bush vowing that the "scourge" of drugs will stop and drug czar William J. Bennett organizing the troops for a full-scale war, calls for decriminalization of drug use are like cries in the dark.

But the cries are getting louder and have drawn together people from disparate sides of the political spectrum — from conservative William F. Buckley to Baltimore Mayor Kurt Schmoke, a former prosecutor.

Advocates of such a stance point to a drop in crime rates following the 1933 end of Prohibition that had outlawed liquor sales since 1920. Today, huge drug profits and artificially high drug prices are fueling the violent crime plaguing cities throughout the country, they say.

Removing the profits would remove the criminals, the argument goes, and the billions of dollars now spent on unsuccessful enforcement efforts could be funneled into treatment and education programs.

But the Bush administration maintains the need for "zero tolerance" of illicit drug use, and fighting the war on drugs — even if it requires scarce federal financial resources — is a priority on Capitol Hill. In March, Bush told one group of high school students that legalizing drugs would be "180 degrees wrong."

A recent forum featuring advocates of decriminalization — organized by the libertarian-leaning Cato Institute and featuring presentations by Schmoke, Princeton University Professor Ethan Nadelmann and attorney James Ostrowski — drew attendees from Bennett's Office of National Drug Control Policy, the Justice Department and the Health and Human Services Department.

The three who spoke to the forum emphasized that they weren't advocating use of now-illicit drugs.

"The available evidence indicates that legalization would not lead to an explosion in drug use. The repeal of alcohol prohibition did not," said Ostrowski. "The decriminalization of marijuana in Alaska and the Netherlands did not. The cheap and ready access to cocaine and narcotics in the 19th century did not."

"The fact is, most people in our society are capable of acting responsibly when it comes to drugs," he said. "Users of nicotine are declining. Alcohol abusers are only a small percentage of the population."

The panel members differed, however, on how much decriminalization they want.

Schmoke stressed that although he believes marijuana use and sales should not have criminal penalties, he was not advocating that sales of cocaine, heroin and other dangerous drugs be allowed in the same manner that alcoholic beverages are now sold.

"The model that I think makes the most sense is the model in Holland, in which the government treats addicts as patients and says that you can obtain these substances from certified health professionals," Schmoke said. "But if you obtain these substances outside the public health system, you're subject to criminal sanctions."

Sprout-topped burgers. Make grilled burgers a main-dish meal with a topping of alfalfa sprouts and cheese. To cut fat content, choose low-fat cheese made with part skim milk.

Grilling adds no fat to summer burgers

By NANCY BYAL

Burgers are America's favorite quick and easy meal. You can make it a good-health choice, too, while keeping great taste. This burger recipe illustrates several ways you can make a delicious main dish that's lower in fat. (1) Buy lean ground beef (not less than 85 lean). (2) Choose low-fat cheese made with part skim milk. The label will tell you if skim milk was used. (3) Use an egg white, rather than a whole egg, to bind the flavoring ingredients to the meat. (4) Use a cooking method, such as broiling or grilling, that adds no fat.

SPROUT-TOPPED BURGERS

- 1 egg white
- 1/4 cup quick-cooking rolled oats
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup alfalfa sprouts
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 1/2-ounce slice of low-fat mozzarella cheese

For a fried cheese appetizer inspired by trendy restaurants, dredge cubes of cheese in flour, then dip in beaten egg, then roll generously in dry bread crumbs. Set aside for a few minutes to firm coating. Deep fry in hot oil (350 F) about 3 minutes. Drain on paper towels.

Preheat the broiler. Meanwhile, in a medium mixing bowl lightly beat egg white. Stir in oats, onion, rosemary and salt. Finely chop 1/2 cup of the sprouts and add to mixture in bowl. Add beef; mix well. Shape meat mixture into four 3/4-inch-thick patties.

Place patties on unheated rack of a broiler pan. Broil patties 3 to 4 inches from heat for 6 minutes. Turn patties over and broil 6 to 8 minutes more or until desired doneness.

While meat patties are broiling, cut cheese slice into 8 crosswise strips. When meat patties are done, immediately top each meat patty with 2 cheese strips. Top patties with remaining sprouts. Makes 4 servings.

To grill: Cook over medium coals 10 to 12 minutes, turning once. Place cheese strips on top of hot burgers.

Cooking with wine not just for experts

By CAROL DEEGAN
AP Food Editor
NEW YORK (AP)—Do you believe that cooking with wine is something only the experts can do properly?

"Cooking with wine doesn't have to be intimidating," explain the Betty Crocker editors in their new "Cooking With American Wine" cookbook, "and with this book in hand, we're sure you will agree."

This attractive, 112-page cookbook (Prentice Hall Press, $12.95), beautifully illustrated with color photographs and drawings, includes information on how to cook with wine, how to read a wine label, how to choose and serve a wine, and how to store it. A list of available American wines is also included.

More than 100 recipes are featured including Couscous-stuffed Chicken Breasts, Crushed Pepper Beef Kabobs, Lamb Shanks with Mint-Yogurt Sauce and Pears Poached in Red Wine.

Our sample recipe is for Chicken in Red Wine, "the Coq au Vin so loved by the French." A bouquet garni flavors the dish while it cooks and always includes bay leaf, parsley and thyme or rosemary.

CHICKEN IN RED WINE
6 slices bacon
One 3- to 3 1/2-pound broiler-fryer chicken, cut up

4 medium potatoes, cut into fourths

- 12 small onions
- 8 ounces mushrooms, sliced
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- Bouquet Garni (recipe follows)
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup Pinot Noir or dry red wine
- 1 cup hot water
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 3 tablespoons cold water
- Shipped parsley

Cook bacon in 4-quart Dutch oven until crisp. Remove bacon; drain, crumble and reserve. Cook half the chicken in hot fat over medium heat until brown, about 20 minutes. Repeat with remaining chicken. Drain fat.

Place chicken, potatoes, onions, mushrooms, garlic, bouquet garni, salt and reserved bacon in Dutch oven. Pour wine and hot water over chicken and vegetables. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer until chicken is done, 35 to 40 minutes.

Remove bouquet garni. Remove chicken and vegetables to warm platter; keep warm. Shake flour and cold water in tightly covered container; gradually stir into cooking liquid. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Pour sauce over chicken. Sprinkle with parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Bouquet Garni: Place 2 large sprigs parsley, 1 bay leaf and 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves in cheesecloth bag; tie securely.

Father-in-law's hearing loss muffles pleasure of his visit

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law may be coming to stay with my family and me for a visit this summer, and before he comes, I need some advice from you or your readers who have had to deal with this problem.

Dad is very hard of hearing. He sometimes jokes about getting a hearing aid, but he doesn't realize that his hearing problem is a hardship on others. Last summer when he visited us, I was glad to see him, but I couldn't wait for him to leave.

Several times when my children were talking to either him or me, he would start talking — completely unaware that someone was talking. The children couldn't understand why Grandpa was so "rude." He enjoyed watching TV at night, but because he couldn't hear, he turned the volume up so loud it disturbed everybody in the house and gave me a constant headache.

My husband refused to say anything because he didn't want to hurt his father's feelings, and I would not

Dear Abby

feel comfortable saying anything to him about it.

Is there a way to let this dear man know that his hearing loss is hard on all of us? I can't understand why some older people are too proud to wear hearing aids, yet they wear glasses.

Maybe if you print it (no name or location, please) he will see it and take the hint.

ANNY-MOUSE

DEAR MOUSE: Squeak up! Tell your husband that he must address this problem. To fear "hurting the feelings" of someone who is upsetting your entire household is foolish.

If he sometimes "jokes" about getting a hearing aid, he must be aware that he needs one. Insist that your husband handle this family problem. And if he refuses, then you handle it as gently and kindly as possible. But do handle it. You will be doing everyone — especially your father-in-law — a favor.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage included).

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Business and finance are the two areas where you are likely to be the most effective today, even though what you do now may not yield a return until a later date. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might be extremely lucky today where your hopeful expectations are concerned. You could benefit in two ways from a pair of matters that are somewhat related.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today's gestures will win you the respect of your peers, because when you do things for others, you'll do so in ways that do not call attention to yourself, yet earns you the spotlight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Friends will be respectful of your opinions today because they'll innately know you have something extra going for you. It's a big plus called optimism.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not be afraid to think big today, especially if you're involved in a promising joint venture. This is a propitious day for expanding your enterprise to the benefit of both.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Conclusions you arrive at today are likely to be the right ones, because your judgment is exceptionally keen and it's not likely you'll overlook any important factors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Compensation for work or service you perform today might be more generous than usual. Do your best, because what you receive will be proportionate to the quality of your efforts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Things look extremely favorable for you today in the romance department. Try to spend as much time as possible with the one you love the most. It should be a happy occasion.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Tasks or assignments you have to deal with today could be accomplished more easily than usual. Do not put off until tomorrow things you know you can do today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Because you'll be equipped to see the positive side of things today, you'll create your own good fortune. Your winning inclinations have good chances of being fulfilled.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you are more imaginative and creative where your household finances are concerned you could come up with some constructive budget stretchers. Work on ways to get better monetary mileage.
