Nixon Issues Statements, Rejects Resignation Plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, acknowledging "apparently wide-ranging efforts" to cover up the Watergate scandal, says he intervened only to bar the FBI from looking into secret "national security activities."

Declaring he will not resign, Nixon issued two statements Tuesday disclaiming any knowledge of or participation in illegal activities.

While conceding he is under heavy fire, Nixon said: "I will not abandon my responsibilities. I will continue to do the job I was elected to do."

Several days ago to talk about "legislative matters."

A larger group of GOP Senate and House leaders was invited to meet with Nixon today amid these and other Watergate-related developments.

The Senate Watergate committee re-called John J. Caulfield for intensive questioning today about the source of White House offers of executive clemency he conveyed to James W. McCord Jr.

The Senate Judiciary Committee had been expected to act quickly on Nixon's nomination of Elliot L. Richardson to be attorney general. However, the committee abruptly reopened its hearings on the nomination Tuesday to investigate questions raised as a result of the Pentagon papers trial.

Richardson told the committee that his efforts in the case were directed toward "maximum disclosure" rather than any cover-up. Senators questioned whether he had known more about CIA involvement in the burglary of Ellsberg's psychiatrist than was disclosed to the Pentagon papers judge by former White House aide Egil Krogh.

Nixon also reported on an "intelligence plan" he approved in 1970 and disapproved a few days later because of objections from the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. He said it is this discarded plan that Dean Seeger in a safe-deposit box and eventually turned over to U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica.

Drafted at a time of widespread bombings and campus disturbances, the plan as once approved included, said Nixon, "authorization for surreptitious entry—breaking and entering, in effect—on specified outcrops of targets in specified situations related to national security." He said the FBI had halted such activities in 1966.

Acting White House Counsel Leonard Garment, briefing newsmen on the statement, was asked if Nixon had not thus authorized, at least briefly, illegal acts.

Garment replied that where national security is involved, presidents traditionally have okayed acts "in order to meet problems that go beyond the boundary of the ordinary civil law."

The Nixon statement also placed him on record as repeating an earlier White House promise that "executive privilege will not be invoked as to any testimony concerning possible criminal conduct or discussions of possible criminal conduct" relating to Watergate and a cover-up.

The longer of the two presidential statements sought to deal, point by point, with much of the testimony and other disclosures widely deemed to be potentially most damaging to the chief executive.

In a 4,000-word defense of his conduct, Nixon argued repeatedly that "grossly misleading impressions" concerning his role can be explained by his concern for protecting national security interests.

In citing these national security matters, it is not my intention to place a national security "cover" on Watergate," he said, "but rather to separate them out from Watergate."

He said this is necessary because "sensitive documents are now threatened with disclosure."

In a catalog of denials, Nixon said he had no prior knowledge of the Watergate burglary.

Caulfield Admits Clemency Offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John J. Caulfield testified today that he knew it was illegal for him to offer executive clemency to James McCord, but he did it anyway because he believed the offer came from President Nixon.

"It crossed my mind that this conceivably was from President Nixon. I believed it," the former White House aide said.

Similarly, former New York City Policeman Anthony T. Ulasewicz testified he was aware his actions were illegal when he acted as intermediary between Caulfield and McCord. But he said he assumed messages he passed to McCord, convicted Watergate burglar, came from the White House.

Ulasewicz denied that he had done anything illegal during the three years he was employed as a $22,000-a-year secret investigator for former White House adviser John D. Ehrlichman. He said he did no spying or wiretapping. News accounts have painted Ulasewicz as a political spy who tried to find embarrassing information about leading Democrats.

Caulfield told Senate investigators he knew the offer of clemency to McCord was an illegal obstruction of justice. McCord was on trial at the time for burglary, wiretapping and conspiracy in the Watergate case.

Sullivan Visiting Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger's chief aide in the Vietnam cease-fire talks in Paris arrived in Saigon today, apparently for talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu on new truce arrangements.

William H. Sullivan, deputy assistant secretary of state, told newsmen on his arrival that he will remain no more than two or three days, and then proceed directly to Washington.

"I am here to consult with our South Vietnamese friends on actions developing so far in connection with those talks in Paris and to consult on where we go from there," Sullivan said.

Sources here said they presumed Sullivan will submit for Thieu's approval a possible joint clarification of the Jan. 27 Paris peace agreement.

The South Vietnamese Foreign Ministry said Sullivan came to brief Thieu on the talks. Kissinger and he have been holding since last Thursday with Le Duc Tho and the North Vietnamese Politburo and Tho's deputy, Nguyen Co Thach.

Kissinger Leaving Sessions

PARIS (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger met for the sixth time today with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho and said he probably would return to Washington this evening.

As they met in suburban St. Nom-la-Bretteche, Kissinger's top aide, Deputy Asst. Secretary of State William Sullivan, was on his way to Saigon for consultations with President Nguyen Van Thieu.

It was believed that Sullivan took with him Thieu's approval of a possible joint clarification of the Jan. 27 cease-fire agreement.

The clarification, intended to end the near-paralysis of the peacekeeping machinery established under the agreement, was worked out by Kissinger and Tho in more than 25 hours of secret talks since May 17.

ASTRONAUT WARDROBE — The Skylab mission includes three variations on the familiar space suit theme. From left, a pressure garment assembly; a suit with integrated thermal micrometeoroid garment and intravehicular gloves worn inside, and a suit with extravehicular gloves worn during space walking. The latter will probably be worn by astronauts attempting to repair some of the damage to the outside of the station. (NEA Photo)

Astros Start Countdown For Launch On Friday

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The countdown started today for man's first space salvage operation, with astronauts and space officials confident they can repair the crippled orbiting Skylab and complete a 28-day flight.

Launch crews began the count on schedule at 4:30 a.m. CDT as they fed electrical power to the Saturn IB rocket and astronauts' Apollo ferry ship. Planned lift-off time is 8 a.m. CDT Friday.

"There is still a lot of work to be done between now and Friday," Skylab program director William C. Schneider said Tuesday night. "However, everything we are doing is on schedule."

"We are very pleased with the results of the crew training," he added. "It has given us confidence that we are going for a Friday launch."

He referred to extensive training astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz underwent in simulators and a huge water tank at the Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., on Tuesday.

Conrad and Kerwin practiced deploying various types of sun shades designed to cool the Skylab vehicle. The 85-ton lab has been overheated since it lost its heat shield during launching nine days ago.

Late Tuesday, the astronauts flew to Cape Kennedy for final launch preparations. There, mission commander Conrad told newsmen: "The training is going supergood. We're ready to go."

The astronauts were scheduled today to have physical examinations and participate in a briefing on how the Apollo ship will be packed with new equipment required for the repair mission.

Experts calculate that, once a sun shade is in place, temperatures inside the lab will drop to about 70 degrees. With the unprotected lab soaking up the sun's rays, inside temperatures have ranged up to 130 degrees, threatening to spoil food, medicine and film packed aboard and making the station uninhabitable.

Flight controllers continued to maneuver the Skylab to manage its thermal balance. They're trying to keep workshop temperatures from rising and readings at the other end—faced away from the sun—from dropping below freezing.

Tornado Watch Issued In Area

A tornado watch across most of the upper Panhandle last night turned into a warning for Hansford and Ochiltree counties about 6 p.m. when a tornado was sighted west of Perryton. No further sightings were reported nor was any damage noted.

The amount of rain varied over Pampa with 65 of an inch the official total. Some hail also fell in the south sector of town but there was no accumulation of the small, soft ice balls.

The storm system moved in from the west, dropping temperatures from a high of 78 yesterday to a low of 51 last night.

Richardson Denies Any Coverup Try

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elliot L. Richardson says his efforts in the Pentagon papers case were directed toward "maximum disclosure," rather than any cover-up.

He testified with unaccustomed vehemence when the question was raised at reopened hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee on his nomination to be attorney general.

At the conclusion of Richardson's testimony Tuesday night, the question of what the committee will do next was left unsettled.

It had been called into closed session at the start of the day to act on Richardson's nomination, but after about an hour's discussion it reopened the hearings to look into questions raised by Daniel Ellsberg.

Flower Power?

FOLSOM, Calif. (AP) — Dr. Timothy Leary, once guru of the flower power set, has been assigned to work in the flower garden at Folsom State Prison.

Officials said Leary, a former Harvard professor serving up to 10 years for escape and possession of marijuana, would be cultivating such plants as peonies, sweetpeas and marigolds, in addition to pulling weeds and trimming grass.

Walter Keane of the warden's office said Tuesday that the work assignment was made by the prison staff "after a review of Leary's past, his crimes and his escape potential."

2 Days Left On Bond Issue Absentee Vote

By the time most voters read this, they will have virtually two days to cast absentee ballots in the $1,200,000 school bond election.

Absentee voting — which started today — ends at 4:30 p.m. Friday.

Business Manager Homer Craig told the News Monday that he hoped to start absentee voting Wednesday if needed supplies to conduct that phase of the election.

At press deadline 28 persons had voted absentee on the bond issue. Craig said this was almost a record number processed in that amount of time considering that there are affidavits to sign.

The business office, located in the Pampa Junior High building, will be open from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday including the noon hour.

The school bond election has been set for May 30.

Tourist Seminar Slated

The Tourist Development Committee of the Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a free tourist seminar Thursday, May 31, in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn, which will deal with "The Care and Feeding of Tourists."

The program is designed to furnish information that will lead to better service to the traveling public, according to Warren Mayo, committee chairman. Sam Bell, general manager of the American Automobile Association in Amarillo, will be the speaker and seminar leader.

All persons in Pampa and surrounding area who serve the traveling public are invited and urged to attend the seminar, which will be held in two identical sessions. The first meeting will be at 2 p.m. and the second at 7 p.m. on May 31. Two sessions will make it possible for all working people to have the opportunity of attending one or the other.

Bell has been associated in the business of serving the traveling public for many years. His lectures are designed to be practical and to the point. Mayo said there will be no charge for the seminar and everyone is invited.

ON LOBBY CONTROL

Daniel Attacks Hobby's Stand

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Price Daniel Jr. says he is afraid the House will accept a lobby control bill that he claims lobbyists helped write.

The Senate voted 30-1 Tuesday for a substitute for a House lobby control bill. It sent the bill back to the House.

"That committee substitute was drawn in collaboration with registered lobbyists here in Austin before the committee reported it out," Daniel said.

"It was sent to most of the major lobbyists for their approval. I can document and prove these facts, and as I've said in the last few days, it all boils down to whether we are going to permit a group of lobbyists who we are supposed to regulate to dictate and approve the terms of the new law," Daniel said.

But Daniel said he was pessimistic about the chances the House will reject the Senate version of the bill and ask for a conference committee to negotiate over differences.

He said the lobby has mounted "a massive, concerted effort to get the House to accept the Senate bill."

Lobbyists are arguing that time is running out and that House members must accept the Senate bill or risk going

Lower Vegetable Prices Seen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Housewives can look forward to lower vegetable prices this summer despite damaging wet winter weather in the nation's "salad bowl," California growers say.

Between the middle of June and the beginning of July, production should get back to normal, and we'll have some pretty cheap stuff," said Leslie Hubbard of the Western Growers Association.

But until July 1, prices are expected to remain at the high levels that have prevailed all spring in the wake of a disastrous siege of winter weather in California.

California grows 70 per cent of the country's lettuce, 78 per cent of the canning tomatoes, 35 per cent of the fresh tomatoes, 90 per cent of the broccoli, 40 per cent of the carrots, 75 per cent of the cauliflower, 65 per cent of the celery and 80 per cent of the cantaloupes.

Vegetable growers were late getting their winter crops planted, and production was severely curtailed.

Lettuce is particularly sensitive to weather conditions.

Cold weather means a shorter growing day, smaller heads and smaller yields per acre. Wet weather delays planting. In a dry year, the grower must pay more for a greater amount of irrigation water. Hot and humid weather brings bigger insecticide bills.

BY CALIFORNIA GROWERS

Lettuce hit a peak of more than 50 cents a head in some stores this spring but is likely to drop to 29-39 cents, according to growers. The same trend is forecast for most other vegetables.

A decrease in vegetable prices would be welcome relief to housewives who have been faced with record high food prices since last April. According to a Bureau of Labor Statistics report issued Tuesday, fish and poultry jumped 23.4 per cent and fruits and vegetables climbed 16.1 per cent in the one-year period.

The Agriculture Department said prices received by farmers for fresh vegetables in the first quarter of this year were 37 per cent higher than in the similar period of 1972 and in March were 59 per cent above March 1972.

In Arizona, the winter and spring lettuce deal was described as "almost a washout" with most of the crop being plowed under.

Nationally, smaller crops of onions, celery, lettuce, corn and cucumbers are expected, the growers say.

ISRAEL: A Flame Rekindled

IX: A Return to War

In 1956, the U.S. found itself in anguished opposition to France's Mollet and Britain's Eden, who sided with Israel, and essentially in concert with Russia.

Prepare yourselves, O Israel, for the day of your destruction is near. We want revenge and our revenge is Israel's death.

Gamal Abdel Nasser

Perhaps the passage of time between the events of 1956 and today is too short to afford dispassionate historical analysis. Most of the accounts, depending on the source, are less than objective. Perhaps the most realistic version of events is included in a report prepared by the American Friends Service Committee. It reads, in part:

"When President Nasser, after a series of diplomatic rebuffs, nationalized the Suez Canal in 1956 and eliminated British and French management, he precipitated a fresh international crisis. At this point, the Israelis saw an opportunity to settle accumulated scores with Egypt, to halt recurring bloody border attacks, and perhaps to move the situation away from non-recognition toward some kind of peace. A debate which raged inside the Israeli cabinet for many months was resolved in favor of the hard-line faction which had pressed for full-scale war against the Egyptians.

"Great Britain and France supported this course, and on October 23, 1956, the three powers signed a secret treaty at Sevres which gave the green light for an Israeli attack. On October 29, Israeli tanks invaded the Sinai, supported by French planes. In a swift and decisive victory they swept all before them, to the Suez Canal and to the southern tip of Sinai at Sharm el Sheikh. Great Britain and France joined in, somewhat ignominiously, with a belated airborne attack of their own on the Canal area. However, the combination of United Nations condemnation, United States opposition, and Soviet threats of atomic missile intervention forced the French and the British to back down—and out.

"The Israelis were not easily dislodged, however. They were reluctant to abandon their hold on the Sinai, if the Egyptians still refused to agree to recognition and a formal peace. Most particularly, they did not want to give up their control of the entrance to the Strait of Tiran, and allow the Egyptians to return to Sharm el Sheikh with the likelihood of a renewal of harassment of Israeli shipping through the Gulf of Aqaba. In the end, a kind of backstairs deal, with the United States as mediator, produced Israeli withdrawal from the whole of Sinai in exchange for American assurance that Egypt would not interfere with shipping through the Strait. As part of these arrangements, a United Nations Emergency Force was established on the Israeli-Egyptian border and at Sharm el Sheikh on the Strait of Tiran. These forces were stationed only on the Egyptian side of the border since the Israeli government refused to admit them to Israeli territory.

Once again, it was amply demonstrated that events in a small area of the globe, the Middle East, have critical international implications. No episode here, regardless of its relative size, is without world-wide significance—and so it has always been in the land between the River of Egypt and the Euphrates. The 1956 war ended in stalemate; nothing was resolved; nothing was won, or lost—aside from the lives.

NEXT: And the Desert Shall Bloom

The United States started minting coins for foreign governments in 1876.

Radio & TV News

NEW YORK (AP) — The first annual Emmy awards show for television news appeared last night on the CBS network with occasional flashes of anchorman humor but all the inherent thrill of baking bread.

As an idea it was good. It was the first time in the 25-year history of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences that television news teams have been honored separately by the academy.

As a show, the 90-minute program may have proved too low-key and often confusing for the average viewer trying to sort out who won what in the seven basic categories for the Emmy awards.

CBS swept the proceedings as far as network-produced shows were concerned. It won 11 Emmys, followed by NBC with three and ABC with two during the ceremonies attended by a black-tie audience here.

However, the honor of the awards frequently seemed diminished by the academy's policy of allowing more than one award in certain categories. It gave the show an unfortunate Emmy-for-everyone atmosphere.

For example, the judges—television critics from newspapers around the country—gave CBS three Emmys in one category in which there were six nominees CBS' fine "60 Minutes" series got three more in another field of six. Nobody came in second or even third.

Oh, well, there were certain satisfactions, particularly the three Emmys awarded the "America" series, which was co-produced by Time-Life, Inc. and the British Broadcasting Corp. and run on NBC.

And ABC's two Emmys—one of which went to sportscaster Jim McKay—were richly deserved. They were for ABC's coverage of last September's Olympic tragedy at Munich, Germany.

The show, which featured brief clips of the major nominations, was hosted by Chancellor CBS' Walter Cronkite, ABC's Howard K. Smith and Harry Reasoner and public television's Robert MacNeil.

They kidded each other amiably, but the best ad-libbing came from Reasoner, whose much-advertised dry wit was in fine form. Advised that it was the first time the five anchors had appeared together on television, he deadpanned: "It's also the first time some of us have been seen from the waist down. Normally, I only have my coat pressed."

To sum the thing up, it was a good idea, a dignified effort and dull viewing. It may improve next year, and maybe by that time, somebody will explain to the academy that three winners in one category represents rampant indecision, not singular honor.

Gold Rallies

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rallied in early trading in Europe today for the second day in a row. Gold inched back up toward record highs.

Dealers cautioned that trading volume was light and some price swings were erratic, with the markets reportedly nervous about how the Watergate scandal would affect confidence in the dollar. The U.S. currency sank to record lows in Europe on Monday.

Dear Abby

Doctor has excellent cure for nagging mother

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old married woman, and my problem is one I've had all my life. I can't get along with my mother.

I married last year and fortunately moved to another state so I see my mother infrequently, but it's a very upsetting ordeal when I do. She always has picked on me and criticized me, and she still treats me like a two-year-old. However, she adores my husband, and he can do no wrong.

When mother comes to visit she criticizes my apartment, my cooking, and even the way I dress. I try so hard to control myself and never answer her back because I don't want to be disrespectful. It's a terrible strain on me. She still says (in front of others): "Sit up straight! Don't talk so fast! Quit fussing with your hair!" I feel like a kid in nursery school instead of a grown woman.

My husband says: "Pay no attention to her," but it's not that easy. When I knew she was coming last time I talked to my doctor and asked him to give me something to help me relax. He said it was time I grew up and demanded to be treated as an adult, and if mother refused, I should tell her to stay home until she can.

I hate to do that because I love my father and he would suffer. What now?

BUNDLE OF NERVES

DEAR BUNDLE: Your doctor gave you excellent advice. You can demand to be treated as an adult without being disrespectful, and until you do, you can expect to be treated as an incompetent, awkward adolescent.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very complicated problem. I am getting married to a fellow named Peter Johnson. My parents are divorced and my father, whose name is James Von, is paying for my wedding. (He has not remarried.)

My mother remarried two years ago to Paul Johnson, who is Peter's father. Peter's mother has not remarried. After talking to two wedding consultants, I was advised to word my wedding invitations this way:

"Mrs. Paul Johnson and Mr. James Von invite you to join with them in celebrating the marriage of their daughter Miss Susan Von to Mr. Peter Johnson."

That is the way I had them engraved. Now Peter's mother is saying that SHE is Mrs. Paul Johnson, and if the invitations are sent out as they are now engraved, she will not attend our wedding—nor will anyone from her side come.

Any help you can give me will be deeply appreciated.

SUSAN VON

DEAR SUSAN: Peter's mother is wrong. Her name is now "Mrs. [Maiden Name] Johnson"—and your mother is Mrs. Paul Johnson. It's as simple as that. And if you can't convince her and she refuses to attend your wedding, tell her you'll miss her.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for one year and I just found out something that has me so upset I don't know what to do.

My husband was married twice before and he never bothered to get a legal divorce from either wife. Could you please tell me as soon as possible if I am legally married to this man? Would I have to get an annulment or a divorce if I decide to leave him? Please tell me what to do, because I am expecting a baby soon. NAME WITHHELD

DEAR NAME: See a lawyer at once.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69706, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Bert's sister-in-law is a nymphomaniac regarding sex. Even so, she isn't any more passionate than the usual or so-called "frigid" wife. But she craves the "wining and dining" preliminary strategy of the usual salesman. Alas, most husbands stop that!

CASE X-515: Bert J., aged 35, is a dental surgeon who recently served as my host when I addressed his state society.

As he was driving me from the airport to the hotel, he asked me for advice.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "my brother is married to a very pretty young woman.

"Our family thought it was an ideal match, but now we find that she is what is called a 'tramp'.

"For she runs around with a new man about every month.

"Dr. Crane, you have stated that women are not naturally passionate in the erotic realm.

"But this girl seems to be a nymphomaniac, so how do you explain her case?"

FROTHY EROTICISM

The normal woman definitely is NOT very passionate, erotically.

That is an axiom, confirmed both by anatomy, physiology and psychology.

Yet, the normal man compares sexually with Biblical Jacob, who had 4 wives.

"But Dr. Crane," you may protest, "don't some women have an insatiable desire for men?"

True, enough. But that's not due to any localized pruritic desire for male eroticism.

What they crave is the preliminary, "salesmanship" that the usual new male realizes he must indulge in, as a prelude before he can get his female companion to consent to a sexual affair.

The typical husband thus courts his sweetheart and indulges in many months of preliminary movie dates, dances, theater parties, etc., before the wedding.

But after he has "closed the sale," he soon begins to dispense with all that former "salesmanship."

Winning his bride is thus much like a professional salesman's landing a big order for his firm's goods.

The salesman wines and dines his new prospect and may spend much money and time finally getting the name "on the dotted line."

Trilliums are often called "wake robins" because certain of these wild flowers bloom when the robins are returning north in spring.

READ THIS BORING BOOK

What Can You Do To Sleep?

LONDON (AP) — A stockbroker in Surrey fighting a sleepless night likes to fancy himself a sensuous bumble bee buzzing from blossom to blossom in dewy meadows of dawn.

The buzzing, in particular, he finds most soothing.

A vicar in the West Country in search of sleep delivers last Sunday's sermon from his pillow and usually corks off in less time than anyone in the congregation did.

Then there's the suburban housewife who tries to count all the a's in the Lord's Prayer, and the chap who replays his toughest golf match and seldom gets beyond the fourth tee.

There's the retired colonel who tries to recall all the Kashmir posts he visited beginning with a certain letter, the mathematician who anesthetizes himself with double acrostics, and the libidinous lad who catalogs old boudoir conquests.

These and hundreds of others wrote to London literary agent Hilary Rubinstein when he let it be known in a BBC interview that he was compiling a bedside anthology for insomniacs.

One listener suggested transferring the radio tapes of old political broadcasts to cassettes for do-it-yourself therapy when needed. And instead of a late, late movie, pleaded another bug-eyed dawn buster, why not have the BBC run "a festival in the early hours of all its most boring shows?"

"I was absolutely astonished at the response," said Rubinstein, an insomniac himself who tentatively has titled his work "Z-Z-Z-Z-Z." The idea for the book came to him one restless night and has kept him awake ever since.

Insomnia is a universal complaint, yet so little is known about it," Rubinstein remarked between catnaps in his Bloomsbury studio. "It's like oceanography or outer space; some of the biggest breakthroughs will come in the next two decades.

"There are so many myths to be brushed aside: like needing eight hours sleep a night, absolute nonsense for adults; and the thing about resting a mile after lunch and walking a mile after dinner, and that old wheeze about an hour's sleep before midnight being worth three after it."

Rubinstein sees his book as "something for people to fall asleep over."

But once the sale has been completed, does he continue indefinitely with the "wining and dining" strategy?

Of course not!

Same goes for the usual marriage!

But wives, being only about 25 percent erotic, still crave that psychological "wining and dining" prelude.

They like to parade at fancy parties or restaurants and show off their finery, for women are usually vain creatures regarding the cosmetic realm.

That's also why they trim and paint and powder and manicure and apply eye shadow, etc., till they are usually 30 minutes late for an appointment.

Some girls even become so enamored of this preliminary "wining and dining" strategy, that they look to new men constantly.

They find they must "pay off" with sex before long, and since that is not their natural craving, they may shift to another and newer admirer to get a repeat of the "wining and dining" strategy.

Nymphomaniacs thus aren't sexually any more passionate than the usual so-called "frigid" wife, but they feign more conquesty and even passion, to bribe more admirers (or, as prostitutes, to win more hard cash and tips).

But nymphomania often indicates sterility, an amputated breast, hysterectomy or other organic deficiency that make the woman feel sexually inferior.

So send for my booklet "Sex Problems in Marriage," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents and learn how to stop two-timing wives!

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Side, Melton, Indiana 47938. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Immigration Corruptions Under Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alleged corruption in the southwest region of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service is being investigated, the Justice Department said.

The confirmation followed a New York Times report that widespread evidence of wrongdoing had been compiled. According to the Times it includes the sale of counterfeit, altered the stolen documents and the exchange of sexual favors with Mexican women for entry documents.

The Times said the corruption involved immigration officers smuggling narcotics and aliens into the United States, physically abusing immigrants, and permitting aliens to reside here for illegal purposes.

Cross-Country Bus Driver: King of the Road

By Tom Tiede
(Second of Two Parts.)

FARGO, N. D.—(NEA)—There is nothing romantic about driving a bus. Unlike the airline pilot, with his stewardesses, or the truck driver, hero of endless country-western ballads, the bus driver's image is rather hum-drum. He is a faceless fellow in wrinkled trousers, sitting up in front, behind sunglasses, turning on the windshield wipers or otherwise escaping from the monotony of watching poles pass by.

Says the sign: "Do not talk to the bus driver."

Gads, then, he's not even friendly. Yet for all the lack of appeal, there is no shortage of personnel in the first seats, left, of America's 23,300 intercity motor coaches. The Greyhound Corporation reports they can take only one in 20 applicants. Trailways, too, has a surplus of hopefuls. One intercity company on the east coast put out a call recently for 10 men and received 200 responses. "I don't know what the draw is," says an industry official, "maybe they just want to get away from home."

If that's the case, the wanderers are eyeing the right profession. Though many bus jobs are numbingly routine—one school bus driver recently said he had accumulated 200,000 miles in 20 years, "all within 10 miles of my front porch"—intercity driving is broadening indeed. Stan Hamilton of the National Association of Motor Bus Operators estimates there are 25,000 intercity drivers in the nation today, each averaging an annual equivalent of twice around the world.

And in all that mileage, despite the image, there has to be some titillation. Like the driver in Ohio last year who, along with his passengers, was hijacked briefly and robbed.

Like the driver a couple of years back in the Midwest who helped deliver a baby. Or like the driver out of Chicago on a Florida charter who recalls: "I didn't do anything to encourage her. Honest. Hell, the company would have my job if I did. But we were gone more than a week and every night she came round to my motel door. What could I do? Huh?"

Jim Drury, more's the pity, has never had an amorous passenger knock at his door. And even if he had, he'd likely not admit it. In 22 years with Greyhound, he knows the bus industry does not like controversy. The qualifications for his job call for "mature judgment and good character." Playboys and hot rodders need not apply.

Drury's neither. At 48 he's a company darling. World War II infantryman (Okinawa, Philippines), married, father of two daughters, he just about fits what Greyhound calls "our average driver." A bit substantial in the middle, conservative in thought and talk, a record clean of preventable accidents, Jim Drury has driven a million safe miles in his life and somehow looks it.

There have been some few unraveled moments in his career. Snowstorms which have stalled his bus and passengers overnight.

Drunks who have had to be removed from the coach. Kids smoking something in the back of the coach that just didn't smell like Pall Malls. Then there was the time, couple years back, that U-Haul trailer broke loose from a car out front and slammed into his Scenic Cruiser at 60 mph plus.

Too, there have probably been some complaints about Jim Drury. Many motorists feel that he, like other bus drivers, races along America's interstates like mad fools. The Department of Transportation receives numerous letters yearly advising same. Drury claims it's poppycock. In the first place, he says, most buses are governed to run a maximum 68 mph (though the governors do loosen up). "What it is," Drury adds, "we're driving big machines—one of these buses is 38,000 pounds fully loaded. So when we come down the road at 68, passing somebody going 65, it seems to them we're going a hundred and ten."

There may be times, truth to tell, when Drury and other drivers wish they could wind up to 110. What with limited access highways, heavily regulated scheduling and laws which forbid drivers from on-road conversation, the job can be deadily dull. What's more,

Jim Drury

coach improvements are making it even duller.

Greyhound now is building buses with electronic braking systems, automatic shifts and hush-hush turbine engines. Gone forever are the days when bus drivers could keep busy just worrying whether they'd make the next town.

Actually, says one Montana-based Greyhound employe, "Driving is so simple today that it can be dangerous. I know several of us worry about nodding off on the long pulls. We don't, because if we get blinky-eyed we pull over. I want to emphasize that I've never had an accident of any kind. I understand riding in a bus is 17 times safer than riding in a car. But there is always a risk. After several thousand miles, after 15 years—

well, I drink a lot of black coffee."

And monotony is not the only drawback on the job today. Drivers complain they have to double as baggage handlers at terminals which are too small to hire help. Others gripe that they receive no compensatory time or money for many nights spent away from home. There is a general agreement that they are not paid enough (an average $12,000 a year, which says one driver, "is not as much as garbage men get in some cities"). Finally, since bus trade is largely seasonal, drivers say there are two distressing extremes: "You work your rear off in summer, then you get laid off in winter."

Still, there is no shortage of drivers. The routine may be dreary at times—"have you ever gone all across the Montana plains?"; the rules a bit tough—"no drinking within nine hours of driving; the hazards sometimes unseen—"hemorrhoids and hernias," says Jim Drury. But there is still the draw. "Well," grins one veteran, "when I'm wide open I really enjoy it. I'm bigger than the cars and I'm faster than the trucks. King of the road—that's it, I guess, I'm king of the road."

Majors Urged To Help Independent Gas Station

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The federal government is asking major oil companies not to short-change independent stations in distributing gasoline supplies, a government energy adviser says.

William A. Johnson said the government wants gasoline distributed equally over the entire industry to avoid shutting down any more of the nation's 60,000 independent gas stations. He said 3,000 independents already have closed.

Johnson, a Treasury Department energy adviser, also said that one or two of the country's 100 independent refineries have shut down and the rest have cut back production.

Here to address the Society of Independent Gasoline Marketers of America, Johnson said the current demand for gasoline can be met by increasing imports of crude oil. But long-range demands must be met by increasing domestic capacities, he said.

Terminating independents "a very helpful competitive spur," he said. "We do not want to see the independent segment of the industry driven out of business."

Until the gasoline shortage, Johnson said, independent refineries purchased surplus crude oil from larger companies and marketed the refined gas at lower prices and with fewer promotional frills.

But the shortage eliminated the incentive for larger companies to sell marginal barrels, Johnson said. And in some cases, "smaller marketers have been denied supplies of gasoline" by larger companies who themselves are in short supply.

Tied To Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says laboratory tests have produced "presumptive evidence" that the artificial sweetener saccharin has caused cancer-like tumors in rats.

Saccharin is the only artificial sweetener still on the market following the banning of cyclamate several years ago.

The FDA says cancer-like bladder tumors turned up in three of 48 laboratory rats fed high doses of saccharin—7.5 per cent of their diet.
