Floodwaters rise in Central Park Tuesday, leaving tennis courts submerged and portions of the park under 3 to 10 feet of water.

And the rains came — again

For the second day in a row, heavy thunderstorms brought flooding to the Texas Panhandle, washing out roads, stranding motorists and nearly drowning two Hereford girls who were playing near a swollen creek in Amarillo's Medical Center Park.

In Pampa, the 2.28 official inches of rainfall brought the two-day total to 4.69 inches. Official reports indicate half of the rain received this year has been in the last 13 days. The latest rains brought June's total to date to 7.14 inches and the year to date to 14.51 inches.

High water and blinding rains made driving nearly impossible on Duncan Street, one of the city's major arteries, and caused police and safety officials to issue warnings that motorists stay off roads until the rain subsided.

At one point the water on Duncan Street near Austin Elementary School was covering the tires of cars attempting to navigate through the flood.

In spite of the high water, Pampa police reported no accidents or injuries related to the storm.

In the Amarillo/Canyon area, however, the storms reaped a grim harvest. Officials with the Texas Department of Public Safety made a grisly discovery in Palo Duro Canyon Tuesday — the body of an Indiana man whose car was washed off a park road during flooding there Monday.

The body of 69-year-old Joseph Trobaugh of Indianapolis was found six miles downstream from where his station wagon washed off the road. His wife and the family dog escaped the flood unharmed.

In Amarillo, a 12-year-old Hereford girl is listed in critical condition today after she and a playmate fell into a creek and were washed several hundred yards downstream. The injured girl was trapped under a cement wedge, according to published reports, and had to be pulled to safety by two men who were nearby.

Amarillo police said this morning that the girl was technically dead when she was freed from the cement wedge. However, one of the men who pulled her out of the high water was an unidentified surgeon who conducted CPR to resuscitate the child, reports indicate. The girl is listed in critical condition at Northwest Texas Hospital.

The other child managed to grab onto some rocks in the creek and wait for help to arrive, police said.

In Pampa, Parks and Recreation Director Reed Kirkpatrick said it was only because of constant attention by members of his department that one or more children were not injured or drowned in high water in Central Park.

Kirkpatrick said he was in the park until almost 10 p.m. Tuesday trying to keep children and adults back from water so high it was cresting above bridges and submerging the tennis courts.

He also noted that the high water wiped out the bridge behind Long John Silver's in Buckler Park on Hobart Street.

In addition, Kirkpatrick said, "A lot of the bridges have sustained washout and all of them need extensive support. I would like to ask for the citizens' understanding by them not going onto any of the bridges that have barricades on them."

He said last night "people were tearing them down as quick as we put them up, risking their lives to watch the water flow underneath."

"There were people rafting, us-

China orders two Western reporters expelled from nation

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities today announced the arrest of two of 21 student leaders wanted for roles in the pro-democracy movement and ordered two Western reporters expelled for their reporting on the martial law crackdown.

Given three days to leave were John Pomfret of The Associated Press and Voice of America bureau chief Alan Pessin.

The British Broadcasting Corp. in Beijing initially reported that Brian Barron, its Far Eastern TV correspondent, also was ordered out, but later said "it was just a mistake."

The expulsion order came as authorities intensified criticism of the United States and pressed on with a nationwide clampdown on dissent that has already netted more than 1,000 arrests.

Communist authorities have criticized VOA, whose short-wave broadcasts are an important source of information for Chinese, as spreading "distortions." They have also condemned

Washington for sheltering Chinese dissident Fang Lizhi and his wife, Li Shuxian, at the U.S. Embassy.

Authorities also announced today the arrest of 32 participants in pro-democracy protests, which ended June 3-4 with a military assault on Beijing's center in which hundreds of unarmed civilians were killed.

The Communist Party newspaper, the People's Daily, warned the United States in a harsh front-page editorial today to "stop interfering in China's internal affairs and not do anything to harm bilateral relations."

"Anyone who tries ... to put pressure on the Chinese government is not sensible and is shortsighted, and will gain no advantage in the end," the editorial said.

Police said Pomfret violated martial law regulations on reporting and had met with leaders of the independent student organizations that led seven weeks of protests for a freer China.

"Pomfret used his journalism credentials for illegal activities and used illegal methods to get

Demos hope to beat minimum wage veto

By JOHN KING
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's swift veto of legislation raising the minimum wage gives him the upper hand in his first major policy showdown with Capitol Hill Democrats, who are promising a lengthy fight if their bid for quick retribution fails.

"There will be an increase in the minimum wage, if not today, then soon," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Tuesday after Bush upstaged congressional Democrats by vetoing the minimum-wage bill less than an hour after it was sent to the White House.

"All of our efforts now are devoted to overturning the veto and I would hope that the compelling justice that is at issue in this case would reach sufficient members so that we are successful," said Kennedy, D-Mass. "If we're not successful on this we will revisit this issue."

Kennedy and other Democratic leaders spoke at a news conference that had been called as a final attempt to persuade Bush to sign the measure, which would raise the hourly minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.55 by October 1991.

But even as they gathered for the event, word reached Capitol Hill that Bush had vetoed the bill aboard Air Force One while traveling in the Midwest.

"It is regrettable that this debate must end with a veto," Bush said in a message to Congress accompanying the first veto of his five-month administration.

The Democrats, however, said the debate was far from over.

New Speaker Thomas S. Foley promised a vote in the House today to try to override the veto.

"Hope springs eternal," was all Foley would say when asked if he had a realistic chance of picking up support from more than House members overnight — the additional support Democrats would need for a two-thirds override margin.

Pampa narrows list to five for police chief prospects

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

The Pampa City Commission narrowed its list of prospects for the vacant chief of police job by half during their meeting in City Hall Tuesday night.

Commissioners went into executive session for over two hours and returned with a list of five candidates from which the chief will be chosen.

Only one current city employee, Acting Chief Ken Hall, was among those submitted to City Manager Jack Chaney for background checks. Two other city employees, Lt. Roy Denman and City Safety Manager Jim Laramore, had been part of the "short list" of 10 people the commissioners were asked to consider.

The men still being considered for the chief's job are David Hudiberg, a police science professor at Southwest Texas State; Charles Morris, a former Pampa officer currently employed by the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education; Robert Riemenschneider, a supervisor with the Houston Police Department; Edward Smith, chief of police in Bethany, Okla.; and Hall.

"That was a very difficult decision," Chaney noted of the commission's paring the list by half. "Those that ranked with the best score were taken, and now we're going to start the background investigations and then we'll decide how many we will interview."

Commissioners voted 3-2 not to become intervenors in the rate case between Southwestern Bell and the Public Utilities Commission. Commissioners Jerry Wilson and Ray Hupp favored becoming intervenors.

However, the majority of the commission said they believed a large enough block of cities had already entered the case that Pampa's participation would not be needed.

"Since we are working with Southwestern Bell on some other issues, (they felt) it could have clouded those issues," Chaney said. "They wanted the best possible ground to move forward on those issues." The largest of which is a new franchise agreement with the city.

Commissioner Robert Dixon was the lone dissenting vote on a motion to accept a firm bid of $18,900 from Peat/Marwick CPAs of Amarillo for the city's comprehensive audit. Dixon said his vote was based on a desire to accept a local firm.

"I voted against it because I wanted to give it to a local firm. It was just a point that I felt like whenever there's any possibility, we need to give business to a local, which I don't think anyone could disagree with," Dixon said of his decision.

However, City Attorney Don Lane pointed out that a proposal by Lewis Meers of Pampa was higher than the Peat/Marwick bid, making it advisable to accept the Amarillo offer.

Because of flooding in the area, commissioners deferred action on appointments to five city boards and commissions until the next meeting. Chaney said the storm caused the cancellation of a work session prior to the commission meeting during which the appointments were to be discussed.

He said action on the appointments would be taken at the next commission meeting.

Commissioners voted unanimously to accept a low bid of $88,838.20 for seven new vehicles from Culbertson Stowers, appoint Municipal Court Judge Pat Lee to a new two-year term, accept a grant dedication of the alley behind 600 Wilcox and the commissioning of a city employee attitude survey to be conducted by an outside firm.

They also approved the payment request for the purchase of tractors at the municipal golf course.

During the city manager's report, Chaney told commissioners that a cost-versus-revenues study of potentially bringing a prison to the area looks very good.

"We went in and considered the site south of town, 640 acres that the city already owns, and said, 'If we build a prison there, what would be the cost benefits?'"

Chaney said the city staff examined figures on the cost to run water and sewer lines to the site as well as to put in a water tower and streets.

That figure came up to just under $4 million, Chaney said, adding that such numbers would still allow the city to bond the proposal and make a handsome profit.

best we can. Governments do not always like that," said Pessin.

The official Xinhua News Agency today issued its first detailed account of the assault on Beijing, saying nearly 100 soldiers and police died and thousands were wounded. It said about 100 civilians were killed and nearly 1,000 injured.

The figures were lower than those given last week by a government spokesman, who said nearly 300 people were killed, including many soldiers. Chinese witnesses and Western intelligence estimates say about 3,000 people were killed, most of them civilians.

The government crackdown on dissent continued unabated, with national television announcing the arrest of two student leaders of the seven-week movement for a freer society.

National television said one of 21 student leaders of the pro-democracy movement, Zhou Fengsu, was arrested in the central city of Xian after being turned in by his sister and her husband, who works at an air force academy.

Lake McClellan plans on hold

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
 Staff Writer

Plans for major improvements to Lake McClellan remain on hold while National Forest Service personnel battle fires in New Mexico, District Ranger Mike Rising said Tuesday.

Although results of a survey on improving the lake about 20 miles southeast of Pampa conducted last fall were to be announced in February, Rising said his office would not be ready to release a plan for improvements formulated from the survey until later this summer.

Despite the plan's delay, some small improvements to the picnic areas and caliche work to the surrounding roads have been done, said Gray County Commissioner Gerald Wright.

Rising said Greenbelt Marinas has taken over concession for the lake and has made some improvements also.

Two 3,000-acre fires in New Mexico have kept the two Forest Service officers assigned to writing the plan from completing their work on time, Rising explained. The Forest Service is also waiting on letting a contract for archaeologists to study the west side of the lake, he said.

National Forest Service is celebrating the 50th anniversary of the establishment of National Grasslands June 19-22.

A Forest Service officer will be at Lake McClellan, which is part of the McClellan Creek National Grassland, during that week, Rising said.

The representative will be available to talk with visitors about the 50 years since the inception of the National Grasslands and to discuss future plans for the grasslands.

Commissioner Gerald Wright said he is continuing to search for a way to get the 50-year-old lake dredged, but finds the $2.5 to $3.5 million needed to do the job elusive.

"It's really up in the air what will happen to the lake," Wright said. "I've been working with individuals to see if there's a way we could do this thing. There might be a way through private enterprise. "The county doesn't have the equipment to dredge the lake," he explained. "I'm hoping to get some local contractors interested in coming in and doing a little work and seeing if the Forest Service can give them some tax incentives or something to pay them back."

Rising said he and Wright had also looked into the possibility of selling lake bottom to nurseries in Amarillo as a way of helping pay for the project.

Lake McClellan was built as a Works Progress Administration project in the 1930s, Wright said. It was originally built as a watershed, but later was turned into a recreational lake.

ing inner tubes and small children wading in water."

Kirkpatrick said he monitored the play of two small children in the park who were playing in water up to their chests because their parents were not around to supervise them.

"They could have been swept away by water so high it was cresting over the bridges," he said. "All it takes is one slip. A lot of people let caution go by the wing. It could have been very serious."

Other incidents of damage around the area include a report that a 24-inch water line belonging to the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority broke, spewing water into the air in the White Deer Creek near Skellytown.

The waterline, which is the major provider of lake water to the city, cracked when support soil was washed away. However, Nathan Hopson, city Public Works director, said Pampa can operate on well water without threat of shortage until the crack is repaired.

He said the city has been on well water since 6 p.m. Tuesday and, because of the wet conditions, is in no threat of having to ration water supplies.

The flooding also caused sewer lines underneath the Gwendolyn Plaza Apartments in Pampa to back up, flooding several of the apartments as water ran in through toilets.

floor courtroom of the county courthouse.

At least 12 items are to be considered by commissioners at the meeting Thursday, including the continuing discussion on the building of a new county jail.

Commissioners agreed to begin accepting proposals for feasibility studies on options for a new jail at the June 1 meeting. The Commissioners' Court is hoping to receive the proposals by July 1, to visit existing jails built by those who submitted proposals during the next 30 days and be able to award a contract by the first of August.

Also included on Thursday's agenda is a discussion of possible work projects for county jail inmates. Several times Sheriff Jim Free has mentioned a work program for prisoners to county commissioners. At the May 14 meeting, Commissioner Gerald Wright asked that the matter be listed on the next meeting's agenda.

Gephardt elected majority leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Gephardt today was elected House majority leader as Democrats sought to recover from the ethics turmoil that brought down two of their top three officials.

Gephardt defeated Rep. Ed Jenkins of Georgia by a vote of 161-76.

Three Democrats were vying for the No. 3 job in the party hierarchy.

Gephardt failed last year in a bid for the party's presidential nomination.

In selecting him, Democrats turned to a figure with lots of television experience, a populist message honed on the presidential campaign trail and — perhaps most important in Washington's current ethics climate — a personal background already well-scourged by the media and found clean.

The Missourian's relatively easy win came in large measure because of his ability to listen and seek consensus, demonstrated over 12 years in Congress, his reputation as a legislative strategist, and his campaign work last year on behalf of many Democrats.

The whip's race pitted Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., the chairman of the Democratic caucus, against Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich. Running a distant third by most accounts was Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., the chairman of the party's House campaign arm.

Gray, the early favorite, had been hampered by reports the FBI was investigating whether there was a no-work "ghost employee" on his staff. The Justice Department said this week that Gray himself is not a target of the probe, and Gray's attorney, Abbe Lowell, said the congressman met last week with FBI agents and will continue to cooperate.

"I think when all is said and done, they will also end up confirming that there has been nothing wrong done in my office, past or present," Gray said.

The 259 members of the caucus, the organization of all House Democrats, vote to fill the jobs by secret ballot.

Gephardt has told supporters he is putting aside presidential ambitions.

Bivins to speak at breakfast

The Governmental Affairs Committee of the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce will host its third in a series of "Eggs & Issues" breakfasts Friday morning.

State Sen. Teel Bivins will be the featured speaker for the meeting beginning at 6:45 a.m. in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building.

Sen. Bivins will be giving a wrap-up of the recent 71st Legislature. A special session of the Legislature is scheduled to begin June 20 dealing with the workman's compensation issue.

A buffet breakfast will be served by the Pampa Shrine Club for a cost of $5 a person. The meeting is open to the public.

Reservations can be made by calling the chamber office at 669-3241.

McLean's rodeo to begin Friday

McLEAN — The 79th annual McLean 66 Roundup Rodeo, sanctioned by the Texas Cowboys Rodeo Association, will begin the first of a two-day run on Friday at the rodeo arena just north of town on Highway 273.

The competition opens at 8 p.m. on both Friday and Saturday, followed by a dance featuring the music of Rough Riders.

A quarter-mile horse race, set for Saturday at 5 p.m. one mile south of McLean at Interstate 40, is scheduled in conjunction with the rodeo. A homecoming for ex-McLean High School graduates is also scheduled for Saturday.

Triple B stock contractors out of Leedy, Okla., will produce the rodeo, which consists of a stick-horse race (for children 5-and-under), girls' breakaway roping and barrel racing, team roping, calf roping, bull riding, saddle bronc riding, bareback riding and steer wrestling.

Team roping contestants must post a $60 entry fee, while breakaway ropers and barrel racers can compete for $45. All other events carry a $50 entry fee.

The number of entrants will determine how many places are paid in each event. All money winners will receive their prizes Saturday at the end of the competition.

Jake Hess, organizer of the horse race, said six horses have already been entered in the race. He expects several more to enter on Saturday.

McLean High School students will register at the high school Saturday morning at 10. Individual class reunions will be held at 2 that afternoon.

Results from each night will be published in the Sunday and Monday editions of The Pampa News.

Raging floodwaters kill two, topple dam, force flight delays

By The Associated Press

A 50-year-old earthen dam crumbled under raging floodwaters and at least two bodies were found in separate flooded areas as the second straight day of heavy rains pummeled parts of Texas and raised levels of already swollen waterways.

Rainwater rushing from the Sabana River washed away the dam on a private lake near Gorman, about 80 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

"It started going over the dam evenly all the way across — about 8 to 12 inches," said Kay Watson, whose home is near the felled dam. "It held longer than I thought it would, but then it started eating away in the middle."

Once the dam started weakening, the lake was lost, she said. "It turned into a river, going 80 or 90 miles per hour," Watson said. "It was tremendous, phenomenal. It began snapping trees — 40- and 50-foot cottonwoods — just like you were snapping your fingers."

She said no one was threatened because homes near the lake are on a hill.

Residents downstream were watching a second earthen dam on Leon River, where the runoff headed.

The body of Duane Pinkston was pulled from Mary's Creek in Benbrook Tuesday morning. He had disappeared Monday while he and four others were trying to retrieve a raft from rushing creek waters.

Also Tuesday, the body of Joseph Trobaugh, 69, of Indianapolis, Ind., was found at 1 p.m. in Palo Duro Canyon in the Panhandle. He and his wife were trying to drive across a low-water crossing when their car was swept away. Officials found Trobaugh's body about 6 miles downstream from where the accident occurred.

A 12-year-old girl was in critical condition in an Amarillo hospital. She was pulled from a park channel unconscious and with no pulse, but was revived by rescuers. A nurse who helped in the rescue estimated the girl spent 20 minutes underwater.

The heavy rainfall delayed flights at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport for as much as two hours. "When you have that lightning and thunder, you have some potential for weather situations. Not only rough riding, you have to be careful for microburst and wind shear and things like that," said Jim Brown, a spokesman for American Airlines. "It's a situation we're especially cautious of."

In 1985, a Delta jet crashed at DFW Airport when it flew into a violent thunderstorm as it attempted to land, killing 137 people.

DFW recorded a total of 29.47 inches of rain for the year to date on Tuesday afternoon, just over the annual rainfall average of 29.46. "We're well on our way to a wet year, which isn't bad because we've had a bunch of dry years and kinda needed a wet year," said Skip Ely, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Fort Worth.

Delta and Southwest air lines at Love Field also reported delays.

In Denton, high winds ravaged the municipal airport, damaging hangars and overturning and crumpling airplanes that were tied down.

Winds measured more than 100 mph at 5 a.m. They blew away one hangar and demolished another, but left a condemned hangar unscathed.

The wind also dislodged a large hangar's large steel doors that weigh several thousand pounds.

Officials in Johnson County, southwest of Fort Worth, said Tuesday night that they had so much water over streets and highways that they ran out of barricades and were having to mark high water with highway flashers only.

Street flooding was reported at Diboll in East Texas and a portion of U.S. 59 was under water, Nacogdoches County authorities said. Several trees were uprooted in the county after high winds ravaged the area.

A gas well explosion in Henderson in East Texas was believed to have been caused by lightning. Firefighters had the explosion under control Tuesday night and no injuries were reported.

The National Weather Service issued a flood warning Tuesday for the west fork of the Trinity River, where it crosses the North Main Street Bridge in Fort Worth. The flood stage on the Trinity is 8 feet in Fort Worth, and the river was expected to crest near 8½ feet at mid-day.

The weather service blamed this week's rains on the combination of a high pressure system east of Texas and an upper level system moving across the state.

City forester says recovery up to historic tree's strength

AUSTIN (AP) — The poisoning of the historic Treaty Oak is "an insult to every generation of Texans," said Mayor Pro Tem Sally Shipman, as a $10,000 reward was posted for those responsible for the damage.

"People feel very strongly about this part of our heritage ... You will find people in Austin that have said, 'I've got to go sit with the tree a while.' It makes them feel like they're trying," said Ms. Shipman on Tuesday.

She appeared at the tree with representatives of Du Pont, which makes the chemical that an unknown culprit used to poison the tree. Du Pont officials announced a $10,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of the poisoner.

Evidence of the poisoning can be seen on the tree's leaves, some of which have brown patches. Officials have roped off the tree.

The herbicide Velpar, made in Du Pont's La Porte Plant near Houston, was poured around the base of the oak, which is estimated to be more than 500 years old.

The live oak takes its name from a local story that Stephen F. Austin signed a treaty with the Indians under its branches, but there is little foundation for this belief, according to the authoritative Handbook of Texas. In 1927, the Treaty Oak was admitted to the American Forestry Association's Hall of Fame.

"We were horrified to learn last week that the chemical used was Velpar," said Ken Martin, safety coordinator at the La Porte plant. "The folks at the La Porte plant are all very concerned ... We are completely disgusted by this."

Workers have done all they can to help the tree recover, said John Giedraitis, city forester.

"I think it's just one of those things where we have to wait and see. We've done all the treatments that we can do," said Giedraitis. "Now it's really up to the tree."

In response to a question about what could be done to protect the tree, Charles Jordan, city parks and recreation director, said, "It's unrealistic to talk about placing armed guards around things like that."

But Shipman said people who live and work near the Treaty Oak, which is close to downtown, "have been conducting around-the-clock visits" to the tree.

People have come to meditate and pray near the tree, Jordan said. A banner has been tied to the front of the roped-off area saying, "Get well soon!"

Giedraitis, who said he proposed to his wife under the tree, said the offense is being treated by police as criminal mischief, a felony.

Police Sgt. John Jones said officers are looking at records in an attempt to discover who may have bought the chemical used to poison the oak. There are about five commercial chemical businesses that sell Velpar in Austin, he said.

"It's a pretty uncommon chemical for the common man," Jones said, so officials hope a seller might remember someone "out of the ordinary" who bought the herbicide.

Customs plans to offer rewards for capture of drug traffickers

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Customs Commissioner William Von Rabb is seeking Treasury Department approval of a plan that would establish a million-dollar bounty for the capture of international drug traffickers entering the United States, officials say.

Known as "Operation Paladin" for the gun-slinging Wild West character in the television show Have Gun Will Travel, the reward fund would tap money from the Customs Service's asset forfeiture fund, a congressional source said.

The source said rewards of up to $5 million would be offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the world's "big-time drug dealers."

Customs is drawing up some kind of "Most Wanted List," and it starts with Panama strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the source said.

Also considered for the list are leaders of the ruthless Medellin and Cali cartels of Colombia, and a Mexican drug dealer, said both the congressional and an administration source.

"It's payment for information," said the administration official.

Customs spokeswoman Kathy Hamor said she could not confirm details, but acknowledged the agency is seeking approval of a plan to offer rewards for help in arresting international drug kingpins.

"It's in the planning stages," Ms. Hamor said. "The commissioner is seeking approval." But she refused to say from whom.

The administration source said the bounty would provide rewards from $1 million to $5 million, and must be approved by the Treasury Department. The source said the money may come from the agency's asset forfeiture fund, and described the plan as in the "sensitive" stages.

"There will be opposition to this from within the drug enforcement community," the congressional source said. "You'll see people whose turf has been trod upon. Probably, the Drug Enforcement Administration will be opposed."

Noriega was indicted in Miami on Feb. 4, 1988, on charges he violated U.S. racketeering and drug laws. He is accused of providing protection and other services for international drug traffickers and of using Panama as a transshipment point for cocaine and marijuana. The charges also allege Noriega permitted laundering of drug profits through Panamanian banks.

A man who answered the telephone at the Panamanian Embassy on Tuesday night said no one was available for comment and identified himself as a security guard who knew nothing about Customs' proposed bounty.

U.S. authorities say there are two principal trafficking cartels in Colombia — one based in the city of Medellin, the other in Cali, and that they are vertically integrated conglomerates that control about 80 percent of the cocaine smuggled into United States.

In the past four years, Colombian trafficking families have killed an attorney general, a minister of justice, more than 50 judges, more than a dozen journalists and more than 400 police and military personnel.

Clements working through pile of bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements hopes to wrap up final decisions on the fate of more than 1,000 bills by Saturday, an aide says.

Some 1,300 bills were passed by the 1989 Legislature, which adjourned at midnight May 29, and Clements had signed about 300 by Tuesday, aides said.

Those remaining are being reviewed before Clements signs them into law or vetoes them, said Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary.

"He wants to get it all done by Friday or Saturday. He's going to go through all the bills," Bashur said.

Bills that aren't signed or vetoed by midnight Sunday take effect automatically.

On Tuesday, Clements signed legislation to make some adjustments in the state's taxes on out-of-state property and casualty insurers.

The state lost a lawsuit against the insurance companies and faced the prospect of paying back $142 million in taxes paid under protest. The bill represents a settlement in which the state would pay back $28 million and increase the minimum tax on premiums from 1.2 percent to 1.6 percent.

The net effect is to provide $246.4 million in revenue over the two-year budget period.

Still awaiting Clements' decisions from the regular session are bills on the criminal justice system, school finance revisions, rural health care, insurance regulation reform, plus a sweeping bill to finance improvements in water and sewer service for the substandard housing developments known as colonias.

The governor also has yet to act on the $47.4 billion, two-year state budget.

Comptroller Bob Bullock on Tuesday certified that budget as balancing with expected state income for 1990-91, and Clements has the authority to veto specific items out of the spending document.

The Legislature returns to the Capitol next Tuesday to begin a special session called by Clements to deal with reform of the troubled workers' compensation insurance system.

Puppeteer Fran Allison dies Tuesday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fran Allison, best remembered as the warm-hearted human foil for puppets on Kukla, Fran & Ollie, the live, unscripted show that saw television through its infancy, died Tuesday of bone marrow failure. She was 81.

Miss Allison joined Burr Tillstrom's popular puppet show, originally known as Junior Jambooree, when it began on local television in Chicago in 1947.

The whimsical puppet program, featuring Tillstrom's Kuklapolitan Players, emerged from the early age of television to become one of the medium's longest-running children's programs.

Kukla, Fran & Ollie ran from 1948 to 1957, followed by reincarnations as late as 1976, and garnered Tillstrom three Emmy and two Peabody awards.

Miss Allison was born in LaPorte City, Iowa, in 1907, and was married 35 years to Archie Levington, who died in 1978.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Discourage bibbing without using taxes

The ghost of Carrie Nation must have possessed Surgeon General C. Everett Koop. He didn't take up the old prohibitionist's ax and begin smashing kegs of demon rum, but he did the equivalent in this age of mass publicity, churlishly condemning Spuds MacKenzie as he sermonized. He proposed a series of repressive, neo-prohibitionist measures that would increase liquor taxes, impose more sobriety checkpoints to invade the privacy of people's cars, and mount a government propaganda campaign, funded with your tax dollars, to discourage bibbing.

It's all so unnecessary. Once again, the government has reacted to a problem, drunk-driving accidents, that the private sector has been solving for some time. Groups such as Mothers Against Drunk Driving have been working for years, with some success, to discourage people from drinking and driving. MADD's problem now is that, like Gen. Koop, it has become mesmerized by government power.

No one should underestimate the damage that liquor can do, both to those who abuse it and to those the abusers might hurt. But most Americans who drink, remember, use alcohol in a responsible manner. They sip a cocktail in the evening to relieve the pressures of work, dine over a bottle of Cabernet Sauvignon or enjoy a brew at a ballgame.

The last thing Americans need is for government nannies like Surgeon Gen. Koop to tell them what to do. And they don't want Gen. Koop, or any other government official living on the taxpayers' money, to call for imposing "sin taxes" on something most Americans don't even consider a sin. Indeed, even Gen. Koop is said to guzzle a martini or two.

There are other consequences of Gen. Koop's neo-prohibitionism. His tax proposal would boost the government's take on a 750-milliliter bottle of vodka from $2 to $9. Beer and wine taxes could skyrocket to 10 times as much as now. This would promote bootlegging on a huge scale, leading to massive new government police actions against the untaxed sale of unlicensed spirits. Moreover, Gen. Koop's proposals would promote the proliferation of backwoods stills, which produce decidedly inferior, and sometimes poisonous liquors.

H.L. Mencken called Prohibition "the dreadful reductio ad absurdum of sound law and decent government." Gen. Koop's neo-prohibition would be the same. Fortunately, this menace to the national safety and health will soon leave office. His day of departure will be cause for hoisting a few cold ones and a toast of "Cheers!"

Berry's World

"Do you know any heavy metal stuff?"

Name of the game is power

WASHINGTON — It is the oldest game in the world, a game played by men and by nations. As it involves politics and public life, the game was examined by Aristotle, refined by Machiavelli, pondered by Lord Acton. The name of the game is power.

Like spectators in some international bleachers, people throughout the world have spent the past month in spellbound fascination, gazing upon a game that is played for awesome stakes. We have seen power gained, and power lost, and in China we have seen power brutally exercised.

The spectacle in China is at once beautiful and ugly. To the communist leadership, the demonstrators are "hooligans." The students are "scum." The leaders saw their own base of power fearfully threatened, and they reacted accordingly.

In Tiananmen Square, bodies lay in windows. Some estimates placed the dead at 2,000 or more. This was a massacre. It can be explained. It cannot be excused.

But who can forget the faces of the students and workers? These were beautiful faces, uplifted toward an ideal as old as humankind. It is the idea of freedom.

Centuries ago, we might have seen such faces in the enslaved colonies of Rome or among the feudal serfs of the Middle Ages. In our own time, we have seen such faces among the blacks of the American South.

The Chinese demonstrators, no less than their communist masters, were engaged in an exercise of power. They posed their bodies, unarmed, in the path of armored tanks.

In the end, the tanks won and the students lost, but this is not the end. The idea survives, and the idea will return. It will never die. The tanks have not been built, nor the bayonets honed, that can put to death the idea of freedom.

A question arises. The United States is a superpower. In this exigency, how should President Bush exercise his power? The answer is that he should exercise his power — whatever power he has — with great restraint.

Beyond the suspension of arms sales, which Bush announced last week, the options available to the president are not extensive. They range from remonstrance at one extreme to the suspension of diplomatic relations at the other.

Belligerent members of Congress are fuming at what they perceive as the president's timidity. Let them fume. Bush is not timid. Bush is prudent. It is no bad quality in a chief executive. Reagan could have used more of it when he set about to topple General Noriega in Panama. Great powers ought not to exhaust their power in futility.

The struggle in China has been matched, though in quite different ways, by the struggle for power in Poland and for power in the Soviet Union.

Barely a tick of time's clock has gone by since the workers of Solidarity were being ruthlessly suppressed by a dictatorial regime. The power of the regime is on the wane, and the power of the workers, expressed through popular elections, is on the rise.

In this tumultuous period, nothing is more astounding than the shift of power within the Soviet Union. Even those who are identified as "hard-line anti-communists" (I count myself among that number) are stunned by the explosive emergence of some small degree of political freedom in the new Soviet parliament.

Ten years ago — even five years ago — a Soviet citizen would have risked exile for voicing the public criticism we are hearing now. Think of it: The feared KGB is denounced from the floor. Mikhail Gorbachev is challenged for his country home. The whole repressive system is under fire.

Behind the public exercise of power, we sense a furious struggle for private position. Few Americans can even pronounce the names of Deng Xiaoping and Li Peng, the hard-liners who now seem in control in China, but everyone can comprehend their desperate effort to dominate their more moderate comrades.

Gorbachev has the same problem in the Soviet Union, but perhaps he has a better reading of a time to stand firm and a time to bend.

To the student of public affairs, nothing could be more absorbing than the day's events. The game is all around us. In Mozambique, Angola, Namibia, West Germany, power moves, shifts, ebbs and flows. In Iran a torch of fanaticism passes.

Here at home, a speaker of the House resigns his office in disgrace.

We witness the power of arms, the power of protest, the power of law. To call this a "game" is to invoke a misleading noun, for the conflict of power is no "game" at all. It is simply the way the world is.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, June 14, the 165th day of 1989. There are 200 days left in the year. This is Flag Day.

Today's highlight in history: On June 14, 1777, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia adopted the Stars and Stripes as the national flag.

On this date: In 1775, the United States Army was founded.

In 1801, former American Revolutionary War Gen. Benedict Arnold died in London.

In 1841, the first Canadian parliament opened in Kingston.

In 1846, settlers proclaimed the free republic of California.

In 1917, Gen. John Pershing arrived in Paris during World War I.

In 1922, Warren G. Harding became the first president to be heard on radio, as a Baltimore station broadcast his speech dedicating the Francis Scott Key memorial at Fort McHenry.

In 1928, the Republican National Convention nominated Herbert Hoover for president on the first ballot.

Not all 'charity' helps others

Illinois Atty. Gen Neil Hartigan has "accomplished a miracle" in cleaning up the franchise business in his state.

Now legitimate franchisers in Illinois are encouraged, are prospering, and the others, with vigilance, are kept out.

Next he is training his guns on the several charities, some of whose names suggest only the most noble causes, which are spending more money raising money than on anything else.

Charities which spend 90 percent of the take "on themselves" are not at all unusual.

The U.S. Supreme Court has severely limited the degree to which charities can be regulated. "Percentages" cannot be used in deeming a scheme illegitimate.

And so, with the blessing of the First Amendment, the "business of charity" continues to prosper some unworthy people.

And more significantly, moneys which generous Americans believe they are giving to humanitarian and medical causes are ending up in the pockets of the professional fund-raisers.

This next is not-too-distantly related. Congress is voting generous grants to a lot of worthy-sounding causes, and the millions they are spending on these grants also come from your pocket.

In 1985, for example, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato was able to get congressional approval for a million dollars in research funds for his own alma mater, Syracuse University.

Paul Harvey

In 1987 $60,000 of your money was voted for the support of a Belgian Endive Research Center at the University of Massachusetts.

Traditional pork barrel politics is a sneaky subterfuge whereby members of Congress repay one another for supporting pet home town projects.

"You vote for my road and I'll vote for your dam," and we'll tack the appropriations onto some other legislation which the President must not veto.

With no fanfare and with almost no public notice Congress has expanded the pork to include handouts "in the name of science" to scores of universities.

Brandeis gets $3 million this year for a bioscience center.

Oklahoma's Wesley (Les) Watkins got a million dollars for Oklahoma State. He's a hero back home, but it's your money he's spending. Worse, it's the money of your children's children which he is "borrowing."

As deeply in debt as our nation is, as much as lawmakers protest we must "cut the deficit," they continue to add to the deficit — $15 million for a children's hospital in Pittsburgh (where hospitals are closing from underuse); in New York City, $12.7 million for the Mt. Sinai Medical Center; in New Jersey, $7.5 million for a university School of Medicine and Dentistry.

This is not funding based on merit or need; this is funding based on political clout.

And universities are now hiring Washington lobbyists to add to the pressure.

I wish Atty. Gen. Hartigan success in corralling the charity cheaters in his state.

As to the Washington grab bag, the obvious remedy is to allow the President to sign important appropriations bills while, at the same time, vetoing the unworthy add-ons from members of Congress who are willing to see us drown in red ink "as long as they get theirs."

China's murderous thugs aren't students

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

So now, having crawled into bed with the murderous thugs in Beijing at the behest of those peerless Machiavellians, Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, we must try to crawl out again without irritating our communist cronies beyond endurance.

Bill Buckley was, as far as I know, the only correspondent covering Nixon's 1972 visit to Beijing who remarked that, as a result of the entente sealed there, we had forfeited our moral standing in the world. Neither Machiavellian conservatives nor typical liberals can be expected to worry overmuch about such minutiae, so we were invited to concentrate instead on the allegedly great benefits of the new arrangement.

I have wondered ever since exactly what those benefits are. A few observations from western China, no doubt, from which the CIA is allowed to monitor events in the Soviet Union. The privilege (if that's the word) of joining hands with Pol Pot, Beijing's bloodstained surrogate in Cambodia, to try to overthrow Hanoi's puppet regime there. But what else?

The visions of sugarplums that danced in the eyes of greedy American businessmen remain unrealized. The "strategic balance" in the Cold War may have shifted slightly in our favor, to the extent that a de facto alliance with a bloated and militarily inept Chinese communist regime may be deemed a "benefit." But the Cold War may be ending anyway.

All that our romance with the Chinese communists — begun by Nixon and consummated by Jimmy Carter — has managed to do for us lately is muffle our official enthusiasm for the matchless bravery of the students and other battlers for freedom in Tiananmen Square. Instead of hailing it unreservedly, as he must have longed to do, President Bush was reduced to gamsheering around Kennebunkport "deploring" all resorts to violence. A lot of tears have been wasted on Deng Xiaoping, who is depicted as the ironic (or, as Kissinger put it, "tragic") victim of the forces of freedom that he himself unleashed. But that is nonsense. Deng was willing to allow China's faceless millions a smidgen of economic freedom because he calculated he could get more work out of them that way. But it never crossed his little communist mind that they must be given additional political freedom as well, and when they demanded it he reverted to type and called for slaughter.

Now, with our "friends" perched atop a pile of fresh corpses while the hatred of their countrymen closes in on them, the United States can only wait and see which way China will go. For the moment, Deng and Li Peng are dominant, and the Bush administration has probably played its cards cautiously enough to remain on fairly good terms with them.

In the long run, of course, they are doomed. Mankind, in this day and age, will simply not put up with such monsters for long. But it is an interesting characteristic of communist regimes that they are hard to overthrow, if only because they have ruthlessly eliminated any possible alternative government.

In the case of China the armed forces might conceivably provide one — if they can shake themselves free of communist control. Or warlords may take over the major provinces, and perhaps (who knows?) look to Taiwan and Hong Kong for economic and even political alliance and advice.

In the whole tragedy of this Beijing spring, the most touching symbol was the makeshift Statue of Liberty put up by the students in Tiananmen Square. How fragile and futile it would have looked to Richard Nixon, if he could have glimpsed it in a crystal ball back in 1972! But the principle it symbolized outlived his great friends Mao and Chou, and it will outlive Deng and Li. And it will outlive Richard Nixon, too.

Vines gestures during opening speech Tuesday at Southern Baptist convention.

Baptists re-elect conservative

By DAVID BRIGGS
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A conservative was re-elected president of the Southern Baptist Convention, dashing moderates' hopes that an election outside the Bible Belt would help their candidate. Jerry Vines, the pastor of First Baptist Church of Jacksonville, Fla., won 56.5 percent of the vote Tuesday in defeating his moderate challenger, Daniel Vestal, pastor of Dunwoody Baptist Church in suburban Atlanta.

"I'm just convinced the joy bells are going to begin ringing in the Southern Baptist Convention," said Vines, who continued a conservative resurgence in the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Vines received 10,754 votes to 8,248 for Vestal. It was the 11th straight victory for conservative candidates since 1979.

Vestal said he was disappointed, but already considering another run for the presidency at next year's convention in New Orleans.

"I fear a kind of militant partisanship in this denomination," he said.

But Vines said the appointment Tuesday of Richard Jackson, a Phoenix pastor who opposed Vines for the presidency last year, to the Home Mission Board was part of his effort to bring a "kinder, gentler denomination to pass."

More than 20,000 delegates registered for the three-day convention that opened Tuesday morning.

Moderates, who came within 700 votes of defeating Vines last year, had hoped the convention site would help their cause. Some conservatives stayed home in protest of the convention being held in a city with legalized gambling.

Hal Lane, editor of Southern Baptist Issues, a conservative publication based in South Carolina, said Vines' victory "was extremely important, almost critical, because we had a site offensive to so many conservatives. It was a year we felt could have gone either way."

Judge charged with racketeering

By BOB EGELKO
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal judge charged with racketeering is accused of doing favors for acquaintances who are felons, including going to other judges and seeking favorable treatment for them.

U.S. District Judge Robert Aguilar is the first federal judge charged with racketeering and the fourth to be accused of crimes in the last decade.

A federal grand jury issued an eight-count indictment Tuesday against Aguilar, 58, a 1980 appointee of President Carter. Conviction on the charges is punishable by 55 years in prison and $2 million in fines.

The grand jury also indicted Abe "The Trigger" Chapman, a self-styled former Mafia hitman and longtime acquaintance of Aguilar's, and Rudy Tham, a convicted embezzler for whom Aguilar allegedly interceded.

The judge, who is based in San Jose, declined to comment to reporters who went to his home in Campbell, near San Jose. Attempts by The Associated Press to obtain his telephone number were unsuccessful.

The indictment sought by the Justice Department accuses Aguilar of going to other federal judges on behalf of Tham and another felon, Ronald Cloud, a Nevada casino owner who was convicted of bank fraud. Aguilar has disclosed in financial statements that he accepted an interest-free, lifetime $12,000 loan from Cloud.

The judge also is accused of tipping off Chapman about a federal wiretap order; advising one of Chapman's lawyers to lie to the grand jury about Aguilar's activities; making false statements to the FBI; and helping his former secretary, attorney Vera Hoff, when she fled to Mexico after a tax conviction.

Unlike most cases brought under the federal racketeering law, Aguilar is not accused of benefiting financially from his activities. Instead, the indictment contends the judge used his

$89,500-a-year job as a racketeer "enterprise" in multiple acts of "corruptly endeavoring to obstruct, impede, and influence the due administration of justice."

His lawyers, however, denounced the charges.

"The charges are bogus and phony, an attempt to go after judges like Aguilar to get rid of them and intimidate others," said lawyer Charles Garry.

Speaking before the indictment, Aguilar's other lawyer, Patrick Hallinan, said federal prosecutors sought the indictment because they "don't like the viewpoint of one judge."

Aguilar, the child of Mexican immigrants, has issued several rulings against the Immigration and Naturalization Service over its actions in factory raids. He has also restricted aerial raids on marijuana fields and has blocked the deportation of an Irish Republican Army fugitive, a ruling that was reversed on appeal.

The indictment was issued after Mrs. Hoff, who was arrested in March, agreed to testify against Aguilar in a plea bargain with the government.

Hallinan said Aguilar has arranged to turn himself in on July 12 or 13. He said he has asked the judge to take a leave from his job while the charges are pending, though not to resign from office; a federal judge can be removed only through impeachment by Congress.

Quayle: Don't embarrass Cristiani

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle is warning El Salvador's extreme conservatives against tarnishing the democratically elected government of President Alfredo Cristiani with human rights abuses.

"Don't embarrass Cristiani," Quayle's press secretary quoted the vice president as telling Roberto D'Aubuisson, the alleged death squad kingpin and founder of the Republican Nationalist Alliance, or Arena, Cristiani's party.

The press secretary, David Beckwith, said D'Aubuisson nodded when Quayle pulled him aside and made the request. The four other Arena politicians present said Cristiani "would be vigilant" and punish anyone who committed violations, Beckwith said.

D'Aubuisson and Arena have denied links to squads that engage in political torture and executions. Cristiani has pledged commitment to human rights as well, but concerns have been voiced by congressional critics that Cristiani's election might spark a rise in such activity.

Quayle was completing his whirlwind tour of Central America today after holding talks with Costa Rican President Oscar Arias. The focus of the talks, he said, would be Nicaragua and Panama. Quayle has visited Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica.

During his three-day trip, Quayle has kept up a stream of criticism against Nicaragua, the one Central American country he is not visiting.

On Tuesday he heatedly accused Nicaragua's Sandinista government of shipping a large cache of weapons to the Salvadoran guerrillas in violation of the Esquipulas accord.

He viewed the assorted assault rifles, anti-tank rockets and other weapons and ammunition displayed in the Defense Ministry courtyard.

Afghan president wants peace plans

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — President Najib says it is time the United States and Pakistan, which back anti-communist Afghan rebels, prove their sincerity and offer specific proposals for ending the 11-year-old civil war.

"We ask the United States to consider the realities in Afghanistan and aim for a peaceful settlement and restoration of peace," he said Tuesday in an interview with The Associated Press at his office near the Presidential Palace.

"It is too early to determine whether they are serious and sincere," Najib said of the agreement last week of President Bush and Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan to search for a political settlement to the Afghan conflict.

Bush and Ms. Bhutto also agreed, however, that Washington should continue providing weapons to the rebels and seek an end to Najib's rule.

"How can one talk about a political settlement and reject one side in the conflict — the government of Afghanistan?" Najib asked. "Rendering military assistance to the armed opposition means nothing but continuing war."

"Rendering military assistance to those who openly refuse a political settlement actually means continuing war and bloodshed and therefore preventing a political settlement."

He said he believes Washington will be forced toward a political solution.

"We believe that not only American public opinion but international opinion will demand this because the atrocities by the opposition inside Afghanistan are against the humanitarian principles of the United States," Najib said.

The 43-year-old president spoke of his Marxist government's efforts to negotiate an end to the war.

The conflict began after leftist officers seized power in 1978 and tried to impose Marxism in this predominantly Moslem country. At least 1.3 million people have been killed in the conflict and about 5 million Afghans — a third of the population — have sought refuge in neighboring Pakistan and Iran.

The guerrillas refuse to negotiate with Najib, but their campaign to topple his government has stalled. Some U.S. administrators doubt the fractious Pakistan-based rebel alliance can succeed.

Pakistani officials say the guerrillas could negotiate with the Kabul government if Najib and prominent members of his People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan were removed from power.

They also hope the United States can press Moscow to drop its insistence that the party participate in any future government.

Najib, a physician, was tapped by the Soviets in May 1986 to replace Babrak Karmal.

Seabrook starts its first atomic fission

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — After starting their first atomic fission reaction, officials at the long-delayed Seabrook power plant said they know how Thomas Edison must have felt when he lit the first electric lightbulb in 1879.

"We certainly haven't reinvented the lightbulb," Seabrook's top executive, Edward Brown, said Tuesday. "But we believe there is great significance in our success."

"Have we changed history? Some people are saying so," Brown said. "Seabrook Station has faced one of the longest, most convoluted licensing processes that any commercial nuclear power plant has ever encountered in this world."

The plant symbolizes the troubled state of the nation's nuclear power industry. Originally planned for commercial operation 10 years ago at a cost of $973 million, the plant suffered repeated regulatory delays and cost overruns that drove its pricetag up to $6 billion.

The plant also became a focus of anti-nuclear activism. Protests since construction began in 1976 have resulted in more than 3,200 arrests, including 734 arrests in two days of civil disobedience earlier this month.

Despite its woes, the seaside plant was completed in July 1986 and last month won its low-power testing license, which allows it to conduct tests at up to 5 percent of full power.

Three faulty safety valves set back the start of fission by about a week, but at 5:23 p.m. Tuesday, Seabrook operators started an atomic chain reaction in the plant's 100 tons of uranium fuel.

At a news conference a half hour later, Brown said Edison's associates cheered when he turned up the voltage and the lightbulb grew brighter.

In Seabrook's control room, there was no apparent sign that nuclear operations had begun, but about 30 plant workers broke into applause and shook hands when told the reactor had split its first atoms.

"We have crossed the threshold," said Joseph Grillo, the operations manager. "We are in the homestretch toward full-power operation, and everyone here is excited about it."

Operators plan to conduct tests for about seven days at power levels ranging from a fraction of 1 percent to 3 percent of capacity.

Still unresolved is whether Seabrook will ever operate commercially. It must win federal approval for evacuation plans for crowded beaches and communities up to 10 miles away — including six communities in Massachusetts, which refuses to cooperate.

Plant foes, led by Massachusetts Attorney General James Shannon, have promised to fight to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary to block a commercial license.

Soviet leader calls on West to back his economic reforms

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY
Associated Press Writer

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, buoyed by an outpouring of goodwill and a new friendship pact with West Germany, flew to this high-tech stronghold today in search of expertise to advance his reforms.

The Soviet leader and his wife, Raisa, were greeted upon arrival at Echterdingen airport by Baden-Wuerttemberg state's popular governor, Lothar Spaeth, rumored to be a challenger to Chancellor Helmut Kohl in next year's federal elections.

Gorbachev was to tour a high-technology exhibit at Stuttgart University and meet with the political and industrial leaders of Baden-Wuerttemberg, one of West Germany's most prosperous states.

On Tuesday, he appealed for close integration of the West German and Soviet economies to make the countries' improving relations "more quake-resistant."

Addressing West German business leaders at the Cologne Stock Exchange, the Soviet president challenged them to invest in large Soviet projects rather than "trifles."

West Germany is the Soviet Union's largest Western trading partner, but Gorbachev said the level of trade is small compared to the possibilities.

He also called on the West to lift restrictions on high-technology transfers. Gorbachev is seeking advanced Western technology and know-how to rebuild Soviet industry and keep his promise that reform will bring average Soviets a better life.

West Germany's most powerful banker has warned that it could take up to two decades to reform the Soviet economy, which is plagued by consumer shortages and shoddy goods.

"But precisely because it will take so long, there is a need to start immediately and steadfastly pursue the reform efforts," Deutsche Bank chairman Alfred Herrhausen said in a television interview Monday night.

His four-day visit, which ends Thursday, has been marked by a desire on both sides for a fresh start in Soviet-German relations and cooperation between the historical adversaries in pursuit of European unity.

Gorbachev, who is immensely popular among West Germans, has been greeted by cheering crowds of thousands during the visit.

While the Soviet Union clearly hopes the summit will yield deeper economic ties with West Germany and other Western nations, officials on both sides have stressed that they are part of a broad strategy endorsed on Tuesday.

The document spells out common objectives for improving security and ensuring peace, and it stresses other nations should not fear closer ties between Moscow and Bonn.

It proclaims their desire for "a common European home in which the United States and Canada have their place" and where all nations exist in "peaceful competition with one another."

Homeowners object to Big Thicket additions

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling it America's ark, environmentalists are asking Congress to thread together the "postage-stamp" parcels of lands making up Big Thicket National Preserve with pristine streambeds, ravines and bluffs.

But homeowners in the area say it's un-American to take their lands for preservation and limit activity and development in their back yards.

"Unlike many urban dwellers who by some self or subconscious whim have chosen to call themselves environmentalists, I truly believe that it is an individual's right to own and manage his or her own property," Hardin County resident Brenda Wright told the House Interior and Insular Affairs subcommittee on national parks and public lands.

Rep. Charlie Wilson, a Lufkin Democrat, is attempting to add 14,000 acres to the East Texas preserve by incorporating Village Creek, Big Sandy Creek and the Canyonlands unit. The House passed Wilson's bill late last year, but it never made it out of the Senate.

Property owners testified Tuesday that well-heeled "land raiders" will rob their communities of jobs, taxes and opportunity if preservationists have their way.

"Please, don't take our treasured possessions and place them under the control of an agency whose policies have changed the historic Yellowstone National Park into Blackstone National Wetlands," testified Hardin County Judge Milton R. McKinney.

When President Bush was a Houston congressman, he proposed including the three tracts in Polk, Tyler and Hardin counties as part of the original preserve, witnesses said.

"Big Sandy and Village Creek are the aorta of the Big Thicket," said Dallas environmentalist

Ned Fritz. "It carries down all of the lifeblood, it drains the heart of the Big Thicket, it is vital to the Big Thicket Preserve."

But Herbert S. Cables, deputy director of the National Park Service, testified: "These proposed additions (Village Creek and Canyonlands) to Big Thicket are not essential for protecting threatened resources or providing important and otherwise unavailable opportunities for outdoor recreation. They are not priority additions."

'It carries down all of the lifeblood, it drains the heart of the Big Thicket, it is vital to the Big Thicket Preserve.'

Cables said the Big Sandy Corridor is not a suitable addition, in part because it would be difficult to manage, duplicates many of the area's natural resources, and the stream is usually too shallow for canoeing.

Cables estimated the costs of acquiring the Village Creek and Canyonlands at $21 million.

Wilson proposes forest company land taken for the preserve be traded for U.S. Forest Service lands of equal value. Property owners would be allowed to keep their land, and their children could inherit it. But development and clear-cut timber harvests would be prohibited.

Park Service officials believe the limited land acquisition funds in the president's budget should be used for acquiring lands within existing boundaries and in emergency situations, Cables said.

But with harvesting occurring on the land, subcommittee Chairman Bruce F. Vento, D-Minn., questioned whether Congress should wait until there is an emergency and endangered and threatened species of flora and fauna are lost forever.

"We are rapidly losing what is sought to be preserved here," Vento said. "These areas certainly qualify... we're making a decision here by not making a decision."

Wilson said the land represents only 0.12 percent of the commercial forest land in East Texas and that the federal government will more than make up for the loss of local taxes during the first five years after it is acquired. By then, tourism revenues could potentially offset the loss of taxes.

"Most of the tourists we see drive by with their windows rolled up and their air conditioners on, in our 98 degree (heat), 100 percent humidity, obviously are going somewhere that a tick, red bug, fire ant, buffalo gnat or mosquito hasn't heard of yet," countered Hector A. Garcia of Lufkin, president of the Angelina County Farm Bureau.

Wright said some 150 property owners in Hardin and Polk counties would be affected if the bill becomes law, although many do not live on the land.

"To strip a landowner of the right to own and manage the land he holds the deed to just because the land is beautiful is 'un-American,'" she said.

Jerry McKinney, who owns a 62-acre ranch bordering Village Creek, said most people along the creek are well-educated and environmentally sensitive.

"These neighbors of mine and I resent a group of 'Johnny-come-lately' outsiders that are attempting to dictate through federal mandate how we should live our lives," McKinney said. "I am not a member of a powerful special interest group like the 'land raiders' that have recently descended on our community."

Artist paints beauty of East Texas scenes

By DONNA WHITAKER
Palestine Herald Press

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — A Palestine transplant from Brazoria is showing people all over the United States what East Texas looks like from her front porch.

Lucy Carter, who lives about eight miles outside Palestine, paints the countryside on 4-by-5 cards for Robert Perry, who operates a greeting card business from his home in Palestine.

Her association with Perry began about 1½ years ago when her son, Gary Holland, an Elkhart printer, showed examples of her artwork to Perry.

Perry had been using simple graphics to illustrate his verses and Holland had been printing them for him. Perry has since replaced the graphics with Lucy's watercolors.

A fast artist, Lucy can design and paint a card in 30 minutes to an hour. She has designed over 200 cards that are currently in print. Many more fill a book that shows her versatility — she not only paints scenery but is adept with human figures and cartoon characters.

Lucy, who retired and moved here in 1978 with her husband, Ira, has been painting since she was a child.

"I've been drawing as long as I can remember," she said. "I drew on Mama's grocery sacks and on wallpaper behind the kitchen door."

She focused on art throughout her school years and every job she's held since then has had something to do with art.

Lucy began dressing windows in Houston where she learned how to use paper mache and other art media. While in Houston, she designed parade floats, artificial flowers and stage scenery.

She moved to San Antonio and got a job in map making.

"I took to that like a duck to water. Daddy had let me play with maps, and I used to trace them when I was a child," she said.

When Lucy became a mother and returned to Houston in 1954 she began oil painting — the medium she preferred until she began her gift card work for Perry.

After a divorce in 1960, Lucy became the first woman, other than secretaries, to work for NASA contractor Ford Aerospace Communications. She began by mapping the Fort Hood area.

"At that time, all the space capsules were dropped in the ocean," she said, "but the scientists were experimenting with a way to drop them to earth."

She later worked as a display design technician for the Gemini and Apollo programs, concentrating on lunar landing landscapes.

One of her fondest memories of working at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration were the art displays she designed to welcome astronauts bad to earth.

"We welcomed the astronauts back to earth on huge screens with a different art display for each flight," she said.

Lucy met Ira in 1975. They married and moved to their "sugar shack" on Caney Creek near Bay City. They eventually moved to Brazoria.

Following a serious auto accident in 1972, the couple began to make plans to move to Palestine where they had fallen in love with the country. They purchased land on Old Boston Road and retired here in 1978.

Lucy put her painting on hold, and she and Ira camped out on their land after they purchased and began remodeling an old home on an adjoining property.

Although the Carters later sold the house after Ira built the one they live in now, Lucy has preserved it in a sketch that adorns some placemats her son has printed.

Artist Lucy Carter puts the finishing touches on a watercolor greeting card at her home.

Fang Lizhi latest to take refuge in embassy

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

Hungarian Cardinal Josef Mindszenty hid out for 15 years at the U.S. Embassy in Budapest. Ten-thousand Cubans once sought refuge on the grounds of the Peruvian Embassy. Now, Chinese dissident Fang Lizhi is holed up in the U.S. Embassy in Beijing.

All have taken advantage of the right of foreign embassies, long secured in diplomatic law, to grant protection to dissidents and defectors from the countries where they are located.

Sometimes, an embassy's granting of refuge can provide an easy way out for everyone in a political conflict. Foreign missions have been used as a convenient conduit, especially in Latin America, to quickly get toppled leaders and their relatives out of the country after a revolution.

Sometimes, an embassy's granting of refuge can provide an easy way out for everyone in a political conflict.

But far more often, the granting of embassy refuge to opponents of the host government aggravates diplomatic tension. It can also put a heavy burden on the mission doing the sheltering.

China's leaders on Tuesday showed their anger at the U.S. decision to grant refuge to Fang, calling it an interference in internal affairs. They ordered a nationwide alert for Fang, telling local authorities to arrest him if he is seen trying to escape the country.

Under international law, embassies are the territory of the country they represent, not territory of the host country. Therefore, a dissident or defector who makes it to a foreign embassy is usually safe from pursuit, if the embassy takes him in.

The embassy has no ability, however, to guarantee the refugee-seeker safe passage out of the host country.

In many cases, embassies that have supported a dissident feel a moral obligation to help him when he gets into trouble.

"Oftentimes, these people will go into an embassy where they have friends, and it's because of these friends and associations that they're being pursued in the first place," said Peter Tarnoff, the president of the New York-based Council on Foreign Relations and a former State Department official.

Tarnoff said in an interview that despite the dislocation that the practice sometimes causes for embassies, most diplomats believe the right to grant refuge is a useful diplomatic privilege.

That includes nations of all ideologies, said Charles M. Lichenstein, a former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and now a fellow of the Heritage Foundation think tank in Washington.

Perhaps the longest-running modern case of embassy asylum was that of Mindszenty, who was arrested by Hungary's communist rulers in 1948 as an enemy of communism and sentenced to life in prison.

Hungarian revolutionaries freed him during the 1956 uprising, but Mindszenty took refuge in the U.S. mission in Budapest after Warsaw Pact forces crushed the revolt. He lived there until the Vatican arranged for his release to the West in 1971.

Many embassy refuge cases have involved the East bloc. In the Soviet Union, seven Pentecostals claiming religious persecution lived for five years in a cramped room at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, leaving in 1983.

Latin America has seen many instances of foreign embassies or diplomats helping to evacuate losers in political struggles.

The embassy has no ability, however, to guarantee the refugee-seeker safe passage out of the host country.

The largest number of people to seek refuge at a foreign embassy at once may have been in Cuba in April 1980, when 10,000 Cubans entered the grounds of the Peruvian Embassy seeking to emigrate. Cuban authorities eventually persuaded the crowd to go home, but eventually almost all of them received exit visas.

And in South Africa, some 20 prisoners and anti-apartheid activists have taken refuge in the U.S., British, West German and Dutch diplomatic missions in recent years. Most were eventually allowed to go free.

Resurgent Islam looks to reforms in Soviet Central Asia

EDITOR'S NOTE — With the Kremlin relaxing Stalin-era bans on the practice of religion, dozens of new Islamic mosques are opening across Soviet Central Asia, a land awakening from decades of complacent cronyism. But no one is sure where more religious freedom and other reforms will lead in this volatile region separating the heartland of the U.S.S.R. from Iran and Afghanistan.

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY
Associated Press Writer

TASHKENT, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Soviet Central Asia, an arid land historically at the crossroads of caravans and conquerors, is being buffeted by resurgent Islam from the Middle East and political reforms from Moscow.

With new freedoms under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms, residents of the broad band separating the Soviet Union's Slavic heartland from Iran and Afghanistan are expressing their religious, ethnic and political concerns.

That represents further progress for Gorbachev, whose program already has stirred other areas of the Soviet Union. But it also sets the stage for a possible race between secular communist reform and revitalized Islam for the future of a land awakening from decades of complacent cronyism.

Much depends on the abilities of new civil and religious leaders to persuade people that more freedom can help solve their problems and not just offer a vent for their frustration. Such frustration has sparked bloodshed in other southern Soviet republics — Armenia, Azerbaijan and Georgia.

Success is vital to the Kremlin, faced across its southern frontier with Iran's Islamic fundamentalism and Afghan rebels who fought the Soviet Army to a standstill. Both inspire some radicals.

In an interview after being chosen the new spiritual leader of Central Asia's Moslems recently, 36-year-old Mohammadadyk Mamayusupov indicated he would follow previous religious leaders in cooperating with the government, but use the reforms broadly to improve religious life.

"We intend to use this moment very judiciously for the development of our religion and the renewal of its spiritual life," he says.

Mamayusupov has moved quickly where he can. Between Feb. 6 and mid-March authorities gave permission for the opening of about 35 new mosques, and he pledged that "we will continue to open mosques until all the requests of our Moslems are satisfied."

Only about 200 mosques are sprinkled across the five Central Asian republics: Kazakhstan, Uzbekistan, Kirghizia, Turkmenia and Tajikistan, which occupy an area half the size of the continental United States.

The number of students in Islamic academies is being doubled and the number of Korans and other religious books being published will be greatly increased. The Kremlin is removing a Stalin-era ban on group religious education and plans to allow believers to organize charities.

But radicals predict the increased attention to religious needs will lead more people to embrace Islamic fundamentalism.

"We need to raise the people up," said one Moslem radical who favors establishment of an Iranian-style Islamic republic. "It won't be in two, three or four years. It has to be done very quietly." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

The stakes are considerable. The population of the five Central Asian republics is booming. From 1970 to 1987, it increased 26 percent to 47.5 million and now makes up about 18 percent of the Soviet population.

At the center of much of the region's activity is Uzbekistan and its capital, Tashkent. The historic cities of Bukhara and Samarkand along the Silk Route are centers of religious culture.

What is now Soviet Central Asia accepted Islam in the first century after Mohammed and was a crossroads for Mongols, Turks, Persians and Slavs until it was absorbed in Czarist Russia's drive south in the 19th century.

Although officially atheist, the Soviet Union nevertheless has maintained relations with Iran, and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze held a rare meeting with the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini last winter.

The Soviet Union has supported Arab causes in the Middle East diplomatically and militarily for more than two decades, but now is trying to improve relations with Israel in order to play a bigger role in any Middle East peace settlement.

Mamayusupov, rector of the Higher Islamic Institute in Tashkent, owes his selection in part to the resurgence of religious feelings.

In early February, Mufti Shamsuddin Babakhan was ousted by a series of protests in which radicals accused him of corruption and lacking sufficient religious knowledge. A council of religious leaders elected Mamayusupov to replace him.

Six weeks after ousting Babakhan, believers were demonstrating again. But this time they were praising God for the return of a 7th-century Koran, a gift from the Uzbekistan government.

The new openness also has sparked protests of a more political or ethnic character.

On April 9, Tashkent sources said, several thousand people rallied to support Belik, an informal political group seeking to establish Uzbek as the republic's official language and calling for drastic measures to improve the environment. Belik means "unity" in the Uzbek language.

In Central Asia, as in the Baltic republics and Armenia, the deteriorating environment has become a rallying point that has opened up broader issues such as economic reform and demands for more local control.

Gafkha Namatova, a Belik spokeswoman, said the group claims 100,000 members. It supports Gorbachev's reforms, she said, but "we see a lot that we like" in the programs of the People's Front grassroots organizations that have sprung up in the Baltics and elsewhere.

National policies demanding cotton production in Central Asia have led to food shortages, she said. Abuse of farm chemicals on those same cotton fields has increased infant mortality, she charged.

In an interview with the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia in March, the republic's new president, Mirzaolim Izragimov, said cotton-growing must be de-emphasized.

The policy of pushing marginal land into production ruined 1.73 million acres of pasture, he said.

Drainage of rivers that flow into the Aral Sea, on the border of Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan, has lowered the level of the sea and made it one of the Soviet Union's top environmental concerns.

(AP Laserphoto)

Many of the policies and practices now being repudiated in Central Asia are associated with former President Leonid I. Brezhnev and his supporters.

But experience has shown the danger of replacing local officials, ignoring ethnic feelings.

In 1986, riots broke out in Alma Ata, the capital of Kazakhstan, following the replacement of the republic's party leader Dinmukhamed Kunaev by Gennady Kolbin. Kunaev, an ethnic Kazakh, was a Politburo member and a close associate of Brezhnev. Kolbin is a Russian.

Brezhnev's son-in-law, Yuri Churbanov, was sentenced to 12 years in a labor camp last December after being convicted of accepting more than $145,000 from Uzbekistan officials.

Mamayusupov pledged religious leaders would become more socially active, fighting bribery, alcoholism and prostitution.

Attacks on those social ills are not likely to bring him into conflict with the Kremlin, but Moslem leaders could run into difficulty with local authorities if they launch a serious anti-corruption campaign.

"Moslems intend to struggle very actively in the social sphere," he said, adding that ecology is the first target.

While some civil discontent is organized openly through Belik and similar organizations, the religious discontent remains largely hidden.

An underground group calling itself Islam and Democracy claimed credit for the protests that ousted Babakhan, but it since has splintered.

Almaz Yestekov, the 33-year-old chairman, preaches the need for a strengthening of Islam as well as establishment of Western-style civil liberties.

But he said Islam and Democracy ultimately cannot cooperate with Belik because of the latter's secular views.

The influence of Khomeini's Iran may be limited. The vast majority of Soviet Moslems are Sunnis, while Shiites are dominant in Iran. The two sects have deep historic differences.

Prosperity brings ages-old confrontation to peaceful island

EDITOR'S NOTE — On an island on Lake Huron, where once the most strenuous activity was going fishing and the only industry was a gravel pit, "prosperity" has arrived and an ages-old confrontation has been renewed. Some islanders, it seems, would prefer their former peace to prosperity and are in a neck-wrangling mood.

By PAIGE St. JOHN
Associated Press Writer

DRUMMOND ISLAND, Mich. (AP) — The way things have been going since the arrival of Tom Monaghan, it was no surprise what happened to his turkeys.

When Monaghan set up his spread two years ago in a decaying retreat on this blue-collar fishing island on Lake Huron, he let the tame farm birds run loose.

It was just going to be a vacation home, Monaghan said. But in two years, he apparently changed his mind and what he has done to the island instead has so angered many of the islanders that one night somebody wrung those turkeys' necks.

Monaghan, king of Domino's Pizza Inc., and entrepreneur extraordinaire, has converted his Domino's Lodge into a corporate retreat, built Frank Lloyd Wright copy homes for himself and his top executives, cleared the woods to make room for an 18-hole golf course, added a pond and a sewer plant and started building cabins.

He and his associated landholding companies have bought more than 1,700 acres of Drummond Island, excluding two auxiliary islands and other parcels snapped up around the island by land speculators doing business with Monaghan.

Monaghan talked of plans for more — condominiums, marinas, lodges, banks and golf courses.

While he pledged his support for conservation by stopping his bulldozers from knocking down a tree with nesting woodpeckers, his workers filled in wetlands.

Island tempers boiled over. The neck-wrangling was one more unpleasant reminder that some Drummond Islanders would just as soon see Tom Monaghan pack up his world-class resort plans and take his jobs elsewhere.

That doesn't faze Monaghan, an orphan from northern Michigan who built a pizza empire on a

The change is a shock for the modest island folk who measure their day around the mainland ferry schedule and whose idea of progress was marked recently with the erection of Drummond Island's first four-way stop sign.

Before Tom Monaghan, Drummond Island was known mostly as a place for perch, bear and bobcat. The state owns 52 percent of the 9-mile-long island. Its winter population hovers around 700, many of them summer vacationers who stayed on in retirement.

Island economy was built on the back of a limestone gravel pit, but its owners laid off and sold out. Today, Drummond lives mostly off the spending of the sport fishing trade. Cabin rentals are the going thing.

Sasso said he expects the island to be invaded by a new class of people, the walk-and-shop tourist.

"For islanders, it's not what they came here to live for. A lot of people here work for a lot less money than they can get elsewhere just so they can live here," said Sasso, stabbing the table with his finger.

Nobody on Drummond Island is sure how far Monaghan wants to build or how much more land he wants to acquire. The pizza king talks loosely of plans to expand the lodge to 40 rooms, build another lodge and add 40 units around the golf course.

Sasso said he expects the island to be invaded by a new class of people, the walk-and-shop tourist.

In other talks, he has also mentioned a commercial motel, recreation center, miniature golf course, condominiums and another marina, a mini-car museum, a mail-order trading post and a chapel retreat with 160 bedrooms.

Domino's community relations director Dick Brunvand said he didn't know Monaghan's concrete intentions.

"I don't think there are specific plans," he said. "A lot of the talk is speculative."

Domino's continuing quest for island land is an attempt to preserve a woodland buffer around pace," Brunvand said. "You have to understand the Domino's organization ... The point is, we will not continue to lose money here."

Chamber of commerce president Charles Krahnke protests the notion that Monaghan has changed Drummond Island to Domino's Island. "Other than the construction activity and an increase in airplane traffic at the Monaghan went on: Island residents can jump on board the boom and build their own motels and restaurants and lodges. Or they can sit by and watch outsiders do the same, he said.

30-minute delivery guarantee and also owns the Detroit Tigers baseball team.

Unannounced, he popped in on the back-to-back Drummond Island Township board and chamber of commerce meeting this spring and told islanders what's what.

"For good or bad, things can't go back the way they were," Monaghan said. "Even if we tore Domino's Lodge to the ground and left, Drummond Island would never be the same ... It will prosper with or without us."

Monaghan went on: Island residents can jump on board the boom and build their own motels and restaurants and lodges. Or they can sit by and watch outsiders do the same, he said.

He is right, Drummond Island never will be the same, said township supervisor, tax assessor and schoolteacher Frank Sasso.

Monaghan's property, Brunvand said.

Monaghan was rebuked once by Michigan's Department of Natural Resources when he tried to trade non-island land for 1,440 acres of state forest next to his golf course.

Domino's Lodge staff and DNR field agents said they expected Monaghan to try again, this time offering island land.

The DNR's interest in protecting the Maxton Plains, a rare bedrock-level plant community on Drummond, is common knowledge, said DNR agent Pat Hallfrisch in Newberry.

No longer a personal retreat, Domino's Lodge is a full-scale business venture that not even Domino's can afford to keep empty, Brunvand said.

Domino's now is trying to market the island getaway to other corporations, he said.

"We're losing money at a rapid township airport, little has changed," he wrote in an open letter to the media.

Krahnke's life has changed, however. He owns a small fishing resort across the bay from Domino's Lodge. In August, Krahnke sold the neighboring James Island to one of Domino's landholding companies.

Shoreline property prices are up sharply and land sales are hot, island real estate broker Theila Gagliardi said. "Last year, I had the best year of my business in 14 years on the island," she said.

Bob Conard came to Drummond Island to escape. A one-time college activist and current caretaker and odd-jobs man, he and his wife live in a house without electricity on the opposite side of the island from Domino's. They watch bluebirds nesting in the field nearby.

When he heard Monaghan wanted to dredge the island's main fishing harbor, Potagannising Bay, so a schooner called the Domino Effect could park there, an angry Conard began the Drummond Beacon Journal on his dining room table.

The birth of that island newspaper spawned another publication: the Drummond Island Digest, edited by Brunvand from Domino's corporate headquarters in Ann Arbor and printed on parchment stock.

Readers are treated to a polarity of opinion.

"Regardless of where they came from, the people who settled this fair island came here to assert their independence, harvest the bounty of the woods and waters, enjoy the fresh air, peace and quiet of 'God's Country,' and work together to build a better future for themselves and their children," Brunvand wrote in a recent editorial. "That's why Tom Monaghan and the Domino's Family are here, to share this heritage and preserve it."

In a letter to the Beacon Journal, summer visitor Joan Meyer of Grand Rapids expressed different sentiment.

Looking for that special gift this Father's Day?

Consider Beef! It's a practical gift that's also delicious and nutritious. Just three ounces of lean beef provides 46 percent of the U.S. RDA for protein, 40 percent of the zinc and 27 percent of the iron for a 23-50 year-old man.

So this year, give him something that will make you both look good.

Summer is the time to bake Nectarine Pie, when supplies of California nectarines are at their peak. Toasted almonds give this pie a nutty taste.

Summer is the time to bake nectarine pie

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes & Gardens
Food Editor

Forget the story that nectarines are a cross between a peach and plum. Nectarines are a unique fruit that originally grew wild in Asia. The California supply is appearing at produce counters now and will peak in late June through August.

The lovely red blush on nectarine skins is related to variety, not ripeness. The fruit is picked mature but firm for packing and shipping. When you get nectarines home, place them in a loosely closed paper bag for several days to complete ripening. Don't refrigerate — this interrupts the ripening process. Even ripe nectarines are most flavorful at room temperature. One pound (3 medium nectarines) makes about 2 cups sliced.

FRESH NECTARINE PIE
1-3rd cup all-purpose flour
1-3rd cup sugar
1-3rd cup packed brown sugar
1-3rd cup sliced almonds, toasted

½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 teaspoons lemon juice
7 cups sliced fresh nectarines (about 9 fruits)
Pastry for 9-inch double-crust pie

1 slightly beaten egg white
1 tablespoon sugar

In a large bowl stir together flour, 1-3rd cup sugar, brown sugar, almonds, nutmeg, lemon juice and almond extract. Gently toss with nectarines. Mound fruit into pastry-lined 9-inch pie plate; adjust top crust. Seal and flute edge. Brush pastry with egg white; sprinkle with 1 tablespoon sugar. Cut slits to allow escape of steam. Cover edge of pie with foil. Bake in 375-degree F oven for 30 minutes; remove foil and bake 20 to 25 minutes more or until crust is golden. Cool on wire rack. Makes 8 servings.

Chicken stroganoff returns as a party mainstay.

Stroganoff makes up quick and easy

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

"Retro" cuisine, those favorite foods of past decades, has made a comeback. But now these down-home dishes are made with an eye toward lower calories and quicker preparation.

Brownies topped with raspberry sauce and ice cream make a quick dessert — though they may daunt cholesterol-watchers.

CHICKEN STROGANOFF DIVINE

Salt and pepper to taste
2 whole chicken breasts (about 1 pound each), split, skinned, boned and pounded
1 10-ounce package frozen broccoli spears, partially thawed
1 cup water
¼ cup dry white wine or apple juice
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 package deluxe noodles and stroganoff sauce
½ cup milk
3 tablespoons finely chopped pimiento

Salt and pepper each chicken breast. Evenly top each breast with broccoli; roll up and secure with wooden toothpicks. In a medium skillet, bring water, wine and butter to a boil; add chicken and simmer, covered, for 20 minutes, turning chicken once. Remove chicken, keeping it warm. Bring skillet mixture to a boil; stir in noodles and stroganoff sauce, milk and pimiento. Continue boiling over medium heat, stirring occasionally, for 5 minutes.

Return chicken to skillet and cook for an additional 3 minutes, or until noodles are tender. This kitchen-tested recipe makes about 4 servings.

RASPBERRY BROWNIES A LA MODE
1 15½-ounce box fudge-brownie mix
1 10-ounce package frozen red raspberries in light syrup, thawed
Vanilla ice cream
Chocolate chips or curls
Fresh mint (optional)

Prepare brownie mix according to package directions. Bake in an 8-or-9-inch baking pan. Cut into 9 squares.

Puree raspberries and syrup. To serve, top each brownie with vanilla ice cream, then raspberry sauce. Garnish with chocolate and fresh mint, if using. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 9 servings.

Lean duckling makes delicious dishes

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Roast Duckling Milano by Beverley Ann Crummeby of Brooksville, Fla., is the $1,000 grand-prize winning recipe in the first Concord National Duckling Cook Off sponsored by Concord Farms.

The prize-winning recipe features roast duckling quarters flavored by pepper, oregano and basil, a thin spread of Dijon mustard and a sprinkling of Parmesan cheese.

Barbara Bell of Jacksonville, Fla., won the $500 second prize with her Duckling with Mushroom-Wine Sauce recipe. Gloria Bove of Bethlehem, Pa., won third place with her Mexitalian Duckling Dinner recipe.

Crummeby, who is skilled in traditional French cookery, says she has made a transition in recent years to preparing more healthful foods. "I select foods and recipes that are low in cholesterol and fat," she says.

During a trip to Hong Kong and mainland China in 1984, Crummeby says she visited a duck farm and later dined on duckling in several restaurants.

The following are the winning recipes:

ROAST DUCKLING MILANO

1 duckling, thawed and quartered
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 tablespoon dried oregano
½ teaspoon dried basil
4 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1-3rd cup grated Parmesan cheese
1-3rd cup dry vermouth
¼ cup chopped parsley for garnish

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. With sharp knife, score skin of duckling quarters. Place duckling quarters skin side up on a rack in an uncovered roasting pan; sprinkle with pepper, oregano and basil. Roast 1 hour. Remove duckling from rack, drain liquid from pan. Place duckling quarters in pan without rack. Spread mustard over top of duckling quarters; sprinkle with cheese. Pour vermouth in pan and continue baking at 400 degrees F for 45 minutes or until tender. Garnish with parsley. Serves 4.

DUCKLING WITH MUSHROOM-WINE SAUCE

1 teaspoon vegetable oil
½ cup minced green onions
¼ cup minced carrots
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
¼ cup dry sherry or white wine
¼ cup water
½ teaspoon chicken-flavored bouillon granules
½ teaspoon dried whole rosemary
¼ teaspoon dried whole thyme
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
1 bay leaf
½ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced

1 duckling thawed, quartered and skinned
1 teaspoon coarsely ground pepper

Coat a large fry pan with cooking spray, add oil. Place over medium-high heat until hot. Add onions and carrots; saute until crisp-tender. Stir in flour. Cook over medium heat 1 minute, stirring constantly. Stir in wine, water, chicken bouillon granules, rosemary, thyme, garlic powder, bay leaf and mushrooms. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer 5 to 10 minutes, stirring often.

Sprinkle duckling quarters with pepper. Coat roasting pan with cooking spray. Place duckling quarters skin side up in pan. Spoon mushroom-wine sauce over top. Cover and bake at 350 degree F for 1 hour and 10 minutes, basting frequently the last 30 minutes. Serves 4.

Dijon mustard and Parmesan cheese top roast duckling, which is baked in dry vermouth and garnished with parsley. This recipe is the grand-prize winner of the Concord National Duckling Cook Off.

MEXITALIAN DUCKLING DINNER

1 duckling, thawed, quartered and skinned
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 large onion, chopped
1 large clove garlic, minced
One 4-ounce can chopped mild green chilies, drained
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
One 16-ounce jar thick and mild chunky salsa
1 cup white wine
1 teaspoon oregano
½ cup sliced pitted ripe olives
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

1 cup shredded Monterey jack cheese
Cooked noodles

In large skillet over medium heat, brown duckling in oil on all sides. Add onion, garlic, chilies and mushrooms. Cook 5 minutes. Stir in salsa, wine and oregano. Simmer, covered, 45-50 minutes or until duckling is tender. Stir in olives and Parmesan cheese. Sprinkle with Monterey jack cheese. Cook, covered, just until cheese melts, about 2 minutes. Serve over cooked noodles. Serves 4.

Cocoa cheesecake fills chocolate cookie crust

NEW YORK (AP) — On Father's Day — or any day — tell Dad he's extra-special by baking him an extra-special dessert — Cocoa Cheesecake Supreme, a recipe from Hershey's Cocoa. This cheesecake earns its name with its creamy cocoa-cheese filling and chocolate cookie crust.

Prepare Cocoa Cheesecake Supreme a day in advance to assure firmness of texture. Make the chocolate cookie crust and press into a springform pan. Blend cream cheese, cocoa, butter, vanilla, eggs and sour cream together to make the filling. After baking, chill thoroughly and garnish with sweetened whipped cream to add a decorative finishing touch.

COCOA CHEESECAKE SUPREME

Chocolate Cookie Crust (recipe follows)
Four 3-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1-3rd cup cocoa
1½ teaspoons vanilla extract
2 eggs

1 cup dairy sour cream
Sweetened whipped cream (optional)

Prepare Chocolate Cookie Crust; set aside. Heat oven to 325 degrees F. In large mixer bowl beat cream cheese and butter until smooth. Gradually beat in sugar. Beat in cocoa and vanilla until well blended. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add sour cream; blend well. Pour mixture into pan. Bake 30 minutes. Turn off oven; leave cheesecake in oven 15 minutes without opening oven door. Remove from oven. Cool completely; loosen cake from rim. Chill thoroughly. Garnish with sweetened whipped cream, if desired. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Chocolate Cookie Crust
22 chocolate wafers (½ of 8½ ounce package)
¼ cup cold butter or margarine, cut into ½-inch slices
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
Crush wafers in food processor or blender to form fine crumbs (1 cup). In medium bowl mix crumbs, butter and cinnamon until evenly blended. Press mixture evenly on bottom of 9-inch springform pan.

Poetry writers' contest will recognize new poets

Poetry writers take up your pen and share your work by entering the American Poetry Association Poetry contest. The deadline for entering is June 30. The contest is open to the public and entry is free.

The Grand Prize is $1,000 and the First Prize $500. There are 152 prizes worth $11,000 in all.

"This contest is dedicated to discovering new and unknown poets," said Robert Nelson, publisher for the association. "You do not have to be a professional poet to win."

Poets may send up to six poems, each no more than 20 lines, name and address on each page, to American Poetry Association, Dept. CT-41, 250-A Potrero St., P.O. Box 1803, Santa Cruz, CA 95061. Poems mailed by June 30 are eligible to win. A new contest opens July 1.

Poems are judged on originality, sincerity, and feeling.

Each poem is also considered for publication in the American Poetry Anthology, a leading collection of contemporary verse.

Every poet will receive a copy of the "Poet's Guide to Getting Published," a four-page booklet full of useful information.

During seven years of sponsorship the American Poetry Association has run 30 contests and awarded over $120,000 in prizes to 2,900 winning poets.

Fifth wheel makes longtime friendship screech to a halt

DEAR ABBY: I am an older woman, living alone in a small apartment. I recently invited a couple I'll call Mary and John to my place for dinner. Mary told me her brother was visiting her from out of town, so I made him welcome, too.

I have a small table in my dining area that seats only four people comfortably. I have service for only four in china, crystal and silverware, as well as a set of four hand-embroidered place mats.

I prepared four shrimp cocktails, four porterhouse steaks, four baked potatoes and four baked Alaskas.

An hour before my guests were due to arrive, Mary phoned to say that "Cliff," a friend of theirs whom they know I dislike intensely, had dropped in on them, and could they bring him along to dinner?

I told Mary that I could accommodate only four at my table, and not to bring Cliff. She stammered a bit and said she'd call me back in a few minutes.

A few minutes later, my phone rang. This time it was John. I couldn't believe my ears when he said, "If we can't bring Cliff, we'll have to take a rain check." I told John that bringing Cliff was out of the question, and with that I canceled my dinner.

Abby, after a friendship of more than 30 years, Mary and John are no longer speaking to me.

Do you think I was wrong to have refused to let them bring Cliff? It would have been terribly inconvenient on such short notice, and besides, I really didn't want him.

END OF FRIENDSHIP

DEAR END: You were not wrong. You do not need the friendship of people who would

Dear Abby

attempt to pressure you as did Mary and John. Let them cash in their "rain check" when it hails in the Sahara.

DEAR READERS: I recently received a poster that will soon be seen in the halls of all the public high schools in Indiana. The poster pictures six typical high school students — boys and girls, hanging around their lockers, talking to one another. The banner across the top reads: "Six Reasons to Say No to Sex." Then it lists the reasons:

1. Getting caught
2. Getting a bad reputation
3. Getting pregnant, or getting her pregnant
4. Getting V.D. or herpes
5. Getting AIDS
6. And after that — there's no getting better

This courageous educational campaign was developed by Dr. Woodrow Meyers, director of Indiana's Department of Public Health. I applaud the efforts of Dr. Meyers, and would like to see every high school in the nation display this poster.

DEAR ABBY: I recently had an interesting discussion with a friend concerning this question: Would it be in poor taste to take a friend out for dinner on her birthday and use a two-for-one coupon? (Buy one dinner, get the second dinner free.)

I said I thought it would be extremely tacky because the hostess would not really be treating her friend to dinner if she got the dinner for free.

My friend says, "It doesn't matter that a two-for-one coupon was used. It's the thought that counts."

What do you say, Abby?

CONFUSED IN CLEVELAND

DEAR CONFUSED: I vote with your friend.

The facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy are all in Abby's new expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

90th birthday honoree

Mrs. Gladys Harvey, shown here, was recently honored by fellow members of the First Christian Church choir and her daughters, Mary Sue Arledge of Pandale and Betty Lou Winslow of Dallas, with a 90th birthday reception from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday in the First Christian Church parlor. Approximately 150 family members and well-wishers attended the event. Mrs. Harvey has been a resident of Pampa since the 1920s. She was owner-operator of Charles Street Beauty Shop for many years. She has been an active member of the church and various civic organizations during her more than 60 years here.

CPR classes scheduled

Clarendon College/Pampa center will conduct CPR classes on Monday, June 26, and Wednesday, June 28, from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Persons interested in the class need to enroll in person the week of June 19-23 at the Clarendon College local campus.

Completion of the class will qualify for Red Cross certification. This is a state certified class with instructor Gary James.

For more information regarding this class or any summer enrollment opportunities call 665-8801.

Women's jobs available in highway construction

There are now job possibilities for women in the highway construction industry. The Highway Construction for Women Program will be recruiting women for referral to highway construction jobs in the Amarillo area in July.

These positions include form setters, concrete finishers, steel reinforcers, carpenters, truck drivers and general construction laborers.

The Highway Construction for Women Program staff is interested in talking with women who may desire the new challenge of "non-traditional" work. Interested women should call on Monday, June 26 only, (806) 358-7943, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. and ask for the Highway Construction for Women Program.

The Highway Construction for Women Program is operated by the Texas Engineering Extension Service, a part of the Texas A&M University System.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Several things you couldn't accomplish early in the week can be done today if you organize your time properly. Be methodical and put your toughest tasks at the top of your list. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The warmth and sociability you'll experience in your dealings with others today will help restore your faith in human nature. Everybody has good points if you'll look for them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Because your peers see you as someone who is reliable and effective, you might get some things dumped in your lap today that they feel they can't handle. It won't bother you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your organizational and managerial qualities will be very pronounced today. It looks like they will be put to good uses both socially and in commercial situations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone with whom you have close ties may be instrumental today in presenting you with an opportunity for personal gain. It'll be up to you to follow through.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If there is a new enterprise, venture or project you've been wanting to start, this is a good day to get it off the ground. You're in a lucky cycle for beginning something new.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your hunches and intuition could be remarkably perceptive today, especially in your material affairs. If you get strong feelings to do something a certain way, it's best not to ignore them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Occasionally it's pleasant to have some time to yourself, but today you need to be around people in order to function at your best. Noisy, happy crowds and noisy, happy places will have an invigorating effect.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Conditions are rather unusual today and several secret desires you've been harboring might be fulfilled simultaneously owing to a chain of strange circumstances.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You should be able to define matters precisely today because of your logical and realistic outlook. Unimportant negatives will be kept in proper perspective.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If there are changes you want to make which you think could result in some improvements for you financially, don't delay implementing them, because time could be money. Begin today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You should do rather well today in situations that require negotiations. Listen to the advice of others, but pay greater heed to your own counsel.

Pistons win first title

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Mission accomplished.

From the final sorrowful day of last season to the final joyous day of this one, the Detroit Pistons dedicated themselves to winning the NBA championship.

Others might want the title, but the Pistons had to have it. It became an obsession. Coming close no longer was enough.

There was nothing close about the way they took the title from the team that had won it more than any other club in the 1980s. They dethroned the Los Angeles Lakers in four games with a triple-threat backcourt, a double-teaming defense and single-mindedness.

Sure, the Lakers were devastated by injuries to starting guards Magic Johnson, the NBA's most valuable player, and Byron Scott. And Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, at 42, was far from the player he was at 32 and 22.

All that made the Pistons' task easier. But their minds were just as tough as they became the fifth team to sweep a best-of-7 Final.

"They lost two key players and that was unfortunate," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said after the Pistons completed a four-game sweep with a 105-97 victory Tuesday night. "Our guys are tough-minded and they believed they could do it all along."

"We willed this championship," said Detroit's Bill Laimbeer, who had 16 points. "Last year, we sat around this locker room. Some of us cried, like myself."

The Pistons, an NBA member for 40 years but never a champion, led Los Angeles 3-2 in last year's NBA title series.

But they lost Game 6 on Abdul-Jabbar's two free throws with 14 seconds left. Game 7 also went down to the final minute.

"From Day One, we had this set in our minds," Joe Dumars, who led Detroit with 24 points and was the unanimous choice for playoff most valuable player said. "Last year, Adrian Dantley and I sat there and looked at each other for about an hour after it was over. It was the worst feeling in the world."

This time, the Lakers felt the sting of defeat. Their hopes of becoming only the third NBA team to win three consecutive championships were shattered in a hurry. After winning all 11 games in their first three playoff series, they lost all four in their final one.

"It was a disappointment," said James Worthy, who scored a career high 40 points Tuesday night. "All we can do now is look back at the memories and relive them and then try to get rid of them."

The Lakers have many pleasant memories of the 1980s—five titles, eight trips to the Finals and Abdul-Jabbar, whose 20-year NBA career ended with Tuesday night's loss.

The greatest scorer in league history with 44,149 points in regular season and playoff games, managed just seven Tuesday night. He hit two of eight shots and grabbed only three rebounds in 29 minutes.

"Because of the outcome, I can't feel too good about that," he said. "We fought as hard as we could."

The Lakers held their biggest lead, 44-28 with 8:17 left in the second period. But Detroit cut it to 55-49 at halftime.

The Pistons got their first lead on Dumars' free throw that made the score 59-58 with 9:38 left in the third quarter. It came during a 9-0 run that erased a 58-52 deficit and ended with Rick Mahorn's short jumper that made the score 61-58.

But Los Angeles jumped ahead 78-76 entering the final period.

With the score 82-82, backup center James Edwards hit a 20-foot jumper from the right side with 9:54 left in the game. Detroit never trailed again.

"There will always be questions, buts and ifs, but they are the champions now," Scott said.

Norman has credibility problem

United States Open
tees off Thursday

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Credibility is becoming a problem for Greg Norman.

His recent lack of success has prompted increasing — and increasingly snide — questions about his position as one of the world's great golfers.

A nationally circulated magazine came to the editorial conclusion that the "Great White Shark" is over-rated.

Norman, a white-haired, flamboyant Australian, is painfully aware of the situation.

Twice in recent months he has sought periods of solitary introspection. The first followed his last-place finish in the Nabisco Championships last year.

The other came after his annual disappointment at Augusta, Ga. in the Masters. "I've re-targeted myself," he said after a three-week break from competition that included fishing and scuba-diving in Mexico and the Bahamas.

"The best three weeks I've had in a long, long time," he said before a practice round for the 89th U.S. Open, that begins Thursday at Oak Hill.

"I want to play golf for another 10 to 14 years at least as well as I've played the last 10.

"I've reflected on things for the last three weeks. I have a new attitude and a new outlook," a more relaxed, less pressure-ridden attitude, he said.

"It may be just what I needed," said Norman, who admitted to self-imposed pressure to win and win quickly. He's collected 53 titles around the world, but only one in the United States in the last three years. Despite repeated challenges, his only victory in a major championship came in the 1986 British Open.

"It's not that I've been trying too hard," Norman said. "I don't think you can do that. If you aren't trying the hardest you can, then you aren't trying hard enough. "But trying too hard and wanting to win too much are two different things."

The desire to win in this intensely competitive man has been thwarted by an incredible series of circumstances in recent years.

"The things that have happened to him would devastate a less player or a lesser man," said Curtis Strange, the defending U.S. Open title-holder and a close friend and frequent practice partner of Norman.

Norman's trials in golf's majors are well documented.

He lost a playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller in the 1984 U.S. Open. He lost to Bob Tway's last-hole birdie from a bunker in the 1986 PGA.

But it is in the Masters that he has been destroyed. His last-hole bogey left him one back of Jack Nicklaus' 1986 winning score. He was the victim of Larry Mize's playoff pitch-in birdie in 1987.

And this year, his last-round 67 included an 18th-hole bogey that left him one shot out of the playoff between Scott Hoch and eventual winner Nick Faldo.

Pampa 16-18 team unbeaten

Pampa's 16-18 year-old team, off to a 6-0 start this season, travels to Elk City, Okla. Friday for doubleheader action. Games are scheduled for 6 and 8 p.m.

Saturday and Sunday, the Pampa team is entered in a tournament in Amarillo. Tickets are $5 each and will be sold at the first game. The ticket covers all the Pampa games both days. Persons under 16 will be admitted free.

Pampa opens the tournament at 9 a.m. Saturday against Caprock at Thompson Park field three. They play Canadian at 4:30 p.m. at Tascosa field. Pampa plays another game Saturday night at Tascosa field, meeting Tascosa at 8:30 p.m. At 3 p.m. Sunday, Pampa takes on Amarillo High at Gold Sox Stadium.

In doubleheader action last weekend, Pampa swept Amarillo EDS and Canadian.

In the opener against Amarillo, Pampa won 5-1 behind the pitching of Brandon Knutson and Bryan Ellis.

Knutson posted the win, striking out two and not allowing a hit or a run. He also recorded two putouts and an assist. Ellis struck out four, allowed two hits and one unearned run in two innings of relief.

Sammie Franklin led all hitters with two singles. Tim Davis and Barry Coffee each had a double and Tony Bybee and Bryan Bullard each had a single.

Pampa won the second game 11-0 as Coffee pitched a shutout. Tim Davis had a triple while Steve Sanders and Chris Archibald each had singles.

Pampa blasted Canadian 22-1 in the opening game between the two teams.

Davis led all Pampa hitters with three doubles and a single. Others with hits were Knutson, double and two singles; Breck Beckner, double and single; Sanders, two singles; Billy Wortham and James Bybee, one base hit each.

James Bybee, the winning pitcher, struck out four and didn't allow a hit or run. Coffee came in and struck out four, yielded three hits, one walk and one run.

Pampa had to rally to win the second game 12-4.

Pampa was trailing 2-1 when they broke the game open with an 11-run fifth inning.

Top hitters for Pampa were Davis, triple and double; Russ Stephens, Tony Bybee, Knutson, and James Bybee, one single each, and Beckner, two singles.

Becker was the winning pitcher, striking out five, walking four and giving up two runs. Bybee struck out the last two batters:

In Rookie League (7-8 year-old) action Thursday night, Lyle's Cubs won over Rheams Diamond Shop Rangers 16-10.

Leading hitters for the Cubs were Randall Ellis, double and single; Jonathan Waggoner, two home runs and single; Jeremy Silva, two doubles and single; Erich Greer, triple; Jason Roark, two singles; Brent Coffee, two singles; Adam Warren, two singles; Andy Fernui, two singles; Heath Keeton, two singles.

Top hitters for the Rangers were Heather Petty, Justin Trollinger, Russell Robbin, Rodney Mendoza, Jeremy Miller, all with two hits each.

Valenzuela struggles past Astros

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Left-hander Fernando Valenzuela won his first home game at Dodger Stadium in more than a year, but it was a struggle.

"It was a tough game," Valenzuela said Tuesday after he struck out three en route to 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros. "I felt pretty good but I was a little wild. My arm feels the same. I have to be more consistent."

The last time Valenzuela won at home was June 8, 1988, when he beat Houston's Mike Scott 11-1. Tuesday's win was Los Angeles' third in a row.

"Fernando battled the whole way," added Dodger catcher Mike Scioscia. "For the first time in a while, he actually was getting stronger. He threw his best fastballs probably around the fifth, sixth, seventh inning, and well into the eighth inning, he was still throwing the ball well."

For the second time in two weeks, Valenzuela's opponent was Scott. The Astros' ace right-hander went the distance for the sixth time this season, allowing just five hits but walking six.

In their last meeting, Scott, 10-4, outduelled Valenzuela, 2-5, with a four-hit, 1-0 shutout.

Mike Davis, in his fourth consecutive game as the Dodgers' cleanup hitter, broke a 2-2 sixth-inning tie with his second home run of the season.

Davis said Scott's definitely an excellent pitcher who packs more punch when he's in the Astrodome in Houston.

"He's harder to hit in the dome because it's hard to see the ball. We didn't bite at a lot of pitches the way we did the last time. This time, his fastball was up and his forkball was down, and when he threw the ball over the plate, we took advantage of it," Davis said.

Valenzuela held Houston to four hits over 7 1/3 innings in his longest outing of the season. Jay Howell pitched 1 2/3 innings of one-hit relief for his 13th save.

The defeat snapped Houston's six game winning streak, as well as a club-record 10-game road winning streak and an 11-game winning streak in one-run decisions. It was the Astros' major league-leading 31st one-run game, and only their fifth loss in their last 19 one-run games. It also ended a four-game winning streak by Scott.

Canada's Johnson wants another chance to prove himself

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO — A tearful Ben Johnson, publicly scolded for lying to Canadians who believed in him after his Olympic disgrace, appealed for another chance to prove he can be the world's fastest man without steroids.

The judge leading the federal inquiry into drugs and athletics formed after Johnson returned home from the Seoul Olympics proclaiming his innocence reminded the athlete of his statements last fall when he said he never "knowingly" used illegal drugs.

"I think it's fair to say most Canadians wanted to believe that. You understand that—everybody felt kindly to you," Ontario Associate Justice Charles Dubin said Tuesday as Johnson's two days before the inquiry ended.

"Did you not realize how important it was? What a disservice it was to sign a statement like that and make the interview?" the judge asked him.

"I did wrong. But, like I said, I was confused at the time," Johnson said.

Johnson told how he had received thousands of letters from young fans.

"Who all believed you were innocent. Right?" the judge asked him.

The 27-year-old athlete for the first time admitted steroid use starting in 1981 and continuing to include injections within weeks of setting the 9.83-second world record at Rome in August 1987 and the Olympics last September.

Johnson said he took steroids on the advice of his coach, Charlie Francis, and sports physician, Dr. Jamie Astaphan. He said he was aware that they were banned substances but did not know their potential for harmful side effects.

He also said he took no substances on his own after receiving his last injection Aug. 28 from Astaphan, removing a possible explanation that the doctor had suggested for Johnson's positive test for the anabolic steroid stanozolol after his 9.79 second 100-meter victory Sept. 24.

Johnson also disclosed Tuesday that about two days after returning to his Toronto home from Seoul he took a bottle of steroids that the doctor had given him and "smashed it against the wall and just threw it into the garbage."

Asked by his lawyer, Ed Futerman, what he would tell young people if given another chance to compete, Johnson replied: "I want to tell them to be honest. Don't take drugs. I've been there. I know what it's like to cheat."

Johnson, who has difficulty speaking in public, also was asked a concluding series of questions by commission counsel Robert Armstrong.

"Are you now firmly opposed to the use of steroids or any kind of substances?" the lawyer asked.

"Yes, sir," Johnson answered.

"And I take it from what you've just said that you're prepared to tell young people of this country and indeed the world that they should not take steroids and banned substances?"

"Yes, sir."

"I take it from what you've also said that you wish to run again?"

"Every second."

"Do you wish to compete in the 1992 Olympics?"

"Yes, sir."

"And if you're given the chance to run again what country do you wish to run for?"

"My own country, Canada."

"And do you believe that you can be the fastest man in the world without taking steroids?"

"I know I can be."

Federal Sports Minister Jean Charest has said previously that Johnson would never run again for Canada. But he said Tuesday that the sprinter's confession "showed a lot of courage."

"And I think that Canadians all across the country will be impressed by that courage and the fact that he was frank," the official said.

Registration set Sunday for boys' basketball camp

Registration for the Top O' Texas Basketball Camp will be held Sunday from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. at McNeely Fieldhouse.

Camp instructors are Harvester head coach Robert Hale and former Texas Tech standout Bubba Jennings. Jennings was named the outstanding player of the 1980s for the Red Raiders.

The camp is for boys fourth through the 12th grades and will be held June 19-24, from 8:45 a.m. until 3 p.m. daily. Tuition is $60 and tuition for two campers from the same family will be $100. There will be no refunds after the camp begins.

Each camper is required to bring a sack lunch Monday, Wednesday and Friday of next week. Soft drinks will be on sale for 50 cents at lunchtime each day. Pizza will be served twice a week.

Official basketballs plus special camp t-shirts will be presented to each participant. Basic fundamentals will be taught and various awards such as "Mr. Playmaker" and "Mr. Hustle" will be presented. Basketball films will also be shown.

For more information, Hale can be contacted at 806-669-2322 or 806-669-6447.

Jeffcoat hopes to stick with Rangers

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — It's taken Mike Jeffcoat six years to pitch a complete major league game and even his first major league shutout couldn't overshadow the nine-innings of perfect pitching.

"The shutout was nice but the complete game means I'll stay in the major leagues a little longer and get another chance to prove myself," said the 29-year-old journeyman who has had only 11 big league starts. "It's time I made a move in my career."

Jeffcoat allowed only five hits Monday night as the Rangers beat the California Angels 4-0.

Jeffcoat, who originally signed with the Cleveland Indians in 1983, joined the Rangers from the Oklahoma City farm club on May 31.

In parts of three seasons with the Rangers, he's 2-3 with an earned run average of just under 9.00.

"It's been a battle the last five years to get out of the minor leagues," Jeffcoat said. "I enjoyed it (the complete game) but I have to come back and keep doing it."

Jeffcoat had never lasted longer than seven innings.

"I don't know that I did anything different," he said. "I was getting my split-fingered fastball over. I got some ground balls off of it."

The Angels grounded out 12 times as Jeffcoat kept the ball down in the strike zone.

"Keeping the ball down was the key," Jeffcoat said. "It will always be the key for me. I went out to do three things—throw strikes, keep the ball down and change speeds."

Rangers manager Bobby Valentine brought Jeffcoat up when injuries decimated his starting staff.

Valentine said "I didn't know it was his first complete major league game. They kept telling me he was our best pitcher at Triple A and they were right. I think he's earned another start."

Jeffcoat knows he can't afford a poor outing.

"There's a lot of pressure every time I go out there because I have to prove myself," Jeffcoat said. "I just hope I opened some eyes up there."

California manager Doug Rader said Jeffcoat was a surprise.

"He did a great job," Rader said. "You have to admire the fact that he threw strikes. He wasn't behind too many hitters. He started right out throwing strikes at every hitter."

Jeffcoat's major league record is now 8-10 with Cleveland, San Francisco and Texas. As a starter, he's 3-5 lifetime with an earned run average of just under 8.00.

"Yeah, this a big chance for me," said Jeffcoat who was signed as a free agent in 1986. "I don't want this one to get away from me."

Williams named Maryland coach

By TIM LIOTTA
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — It was the only call Gary Williams would have answered. Maryland athletic director Lew Perkins made it and Williams is the Terrapins' basketball coach.

Williams left Ohio State after three seasons to return to his alma mater, becoming the third coach in three years at Maryland, a once-prominent program riddled with turmoil for most of that time.

"There weren't any other jobs I was interested in," Williams said Tuesday. "There is nothing Ohio State did or did not do that led me to feel how I do about the University of Maryland."

Williams, who was a three-year starter before graduating in 1968, will be taking his fourth head coaching position in an 11-year career in which he has amassed a 217-128 record.

At Ohio State, Williams ran up a 59-41 record. He coached at American University from 1978-82 and Boston College from 1982-86 before taking over the Buckeye program, posting a winning record and at least 20 victory seasons at each stop.

He called his taking the Maryland job "a career move." He signed a five-year contract that will pay him $125,000 in annual salary and a guaranteed $75,000 for radio and television shows. He is expected to earn more from endorsements and a summer camp, enough to put him near the estimated $350,000 he earned annually at Ohio State.

The team Williams inherits was 9-20 last season, the most losses by a Terrapin team since 1941. The record in the Atlantic Coast Conference was 1-13.

The program Williams takes over has been through some tough times the last three years.

Since Len Bias died a drug-related death in June 1986, the Terps struggled to a pair of losing seasons around a 1988 trip to the NCAA tournament. So there are plenty of old wounds that need healing.

"I didn't hire a healer. I hired a basketball coach," Perkins said. "And I think we hired the best basketball coach in the country."

Prior to the 1988-89 season, Maryland lost six players to transfers, academic ineligibility, red-shirting or suspension. An NCAA investigation into alleged violations was started in March and Williams' predecessor, Bob Wade, resigned under pressure May 12.

Terrell wins Pamcel Golf Open

Merle Terrell broke a three-way deadlock to win the Pamcel Open championship last weekend at the Celanese golf course.

Terrell won on the second playoff hole after being tied with Randy Richerson and Doug McFatrige for first after 36 holes.

Pamcel Open results

Championship flight — 1. Merle Terrell (won playoff) 149; 2. Randy Richerson, 149; 3. Doug McFatrige, 149; 4. Monty Givens, 150; 5. Carl McPherson, 152.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS FOR COUNTY JAIL

The Gray County Commissioners Court is requesting proposals from qualified business and professional firms for consulting, planning, designing and construction supervision of a jail that will comply with all state requirements. Written proposals setting forth qualifications and experience will be received at the office of the County Judge, County Court House, Pampa, Texas until 10:00 a.m. on the 30th day of June 1989. Each proposal should include customer references and a description and location of jail projects completed or underway. The Commissioners Court plans to visit a select number of jails prior to awarding a contract for services.

On June 30th, bidder will be permitted to make a brief verbal presentation to the Court although it is not mandatory. Any questions about the requested proposals should be directed to the County Judge, telephone (806) 669-8007. The County reserves the right to reject any or all proposals, to waive objections based on failure to comply with formalities, and to allow correction of obvious or patent errors.
