Extremists threaten to execute more hostages

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Pro-Iranian extremists said they would follow the purported hanging of Lt. Col. William R. Higgins with the "execution" today of another U.S. hostage unless Israel frees a Shiite Moslem cleric it abducted.

Meanwhile, a caller claiming to represent the group that kidnapped Higgins said a British hostage would be killed today unless the cleric was freed. The deadline for an earlier telephoned threat against him passed this afternoon with no immediate word from the kidnapers.

Israeli fighter jets swooped over strongholds of the Shiite fundamentalists in Lebanon at daybreak, drawing gunfire from Hezbollah militiamen in the ancient town of Baalbek, police said.

A police spokesman said no hits were scored and the planes did not attempt to bomb east Lebanon's Bekaa valley, where more than 4,000 Iranian Revolutionary Guards attached to Hezbollah are based.

"But the flights heightened fears of a large-scale military operation that Israel might mount to avenge the reported hanging of American hostage William Higgins," the spokesman said.

On Monday, the pro-Iranian Shiite group that abducted Higgins released a videotape of a man they said was Higgins dangling from a gallows.

Higgins commanded a group of U.N. truce observers in south Lebanon when he was seized Feb. 17, 1988.

Bush rules out any negotiations with terrorists

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An outraged President Bush is weighing U.S. options for responding to the "brutal and tragic" murder of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins while ruling out negotiations with Lebanese terrorists threatening to kill more hostages.

The reported execution of Higgins by Shiite Moslem kidnapers Monday touched off the first foreign policy crisis of the Bush administration. It also led the president to pointedly criticize Israel, whose abduction of a Shiite Moslem cleric from Lebanon on Friday was cited by Higgins' kidnapers in announcing the American's execution by hanging.

"On Friday, I said that the taking of any hostage was not helpful to the Middle East peace process. The brutal and tragic events of today have underscored the validity of that statement," Bush said Monday night.

With Shiite groups in Lebanon threatening to kill more hostages unless the cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, is released, Bush called on "all parties who hold hostages in the Middle East to release them forthwith."

Bush was starting the day today with an intelligence briefing from his national security adviser.

Bush cut short a two-day Western trip on Monday and returned to Washington after learning that Higgins' captors had released a videotape they said showed his execution. The president met with his top advisers before briefing congressional leaders Monday night.

While Bush publicly said he had no independent confirmation of Higgins' death, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said the president told the lawmakers that "it's about a 98 percent probability" that Higgins had indeed been killed.

Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla., said Bush was considering "several options" to respond to

A second group of kidnapers later said American hostage Joseph James Cicippio would be killed if the Moslem cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, was not freed by 6 p.m. today (10 a.m. CDT).

Israel has refused to release Obeid but has said it would swap him and other Shiite Moslem prisoners for three Israeli soldiers and other foreigners held hostage in Lebanon.

The group claiming to hold Cicippio, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, issued its threat to kill him in a note, handwritten in Arabic and delivered to the newspaper An-Nahar with a photograph of Cicippio smiling.

Cicippio, 58, of Norristown, Pa., was acting controller at the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped on the campus on Sept. 12, 1986.

"The organization announces its quick resolve to execute the death sentence against the American-Israeli spy Joseph Cicippio if the struggling sheik is not released by 6 p.m. Tuesday," the statement said.

Revolutionary Justice did not mention Edward Austin Tracy, 58, of Burlington, Vt., another American hostage it claims to hold. Tracy disappeared in October 1986.

This morning, an anonymous caller claiming to speak for Oppressed on Earth said in a call to a Beirut radio station that Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite would be killed by midnight (4 p.m. CDT) unless Israel frees Obeid.

There was no way to determine the authenticity of the threat, made to the Moslem-controlled Voice of the Nation.

In Nicosia, Cyprus, an anonymous caller claiming to speak for the group told The Associated Press on Monday that the group would kill Waite at 3 p.m. (7 a.m. CDT) today, but the deadline passed with no immediate word from the captors.

It could not be immediately verified if that caller was from the organization, which had not made previous calls to the AP office in Cyprus.

Waite, 50, disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, while seeking the release of foreign hostages after leaving his west Beirut hotel to negotiate with Islamic Jihad. He is believed held by Islamic Jihad, though no group has claimed responsibility.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today suggested Israel was conducting negotiations with Shiite groups to obtain the release of Israeli prisoners and Western hostages.

Asked whether Israeli was engaged in contacts with Shiite groups in Lebanon, Shamir told reporters "there are permanent contacts with various factors about the release of the hostages."

The cleric is a spiritual leader of Hezbollah, the pro-Iranian organization believed to be an umbrella group for the kidnapers of Higgins and the 16 other Westerners missing in Lebanon. Eight of the 16 are Americans.

Higgins' reported hanging was clouded by doubt because of previous reports he may have been killed months ago, and Lebanese police said they could not confirm the claimed Higgins killing on Monday. Nevertheless, the claim and the grisly videotape that accompanied it met with revulsion worldwide.

Spataro scratches behind the ears of his horse Willy at stop Monday in McLean.

Rider hits the trail for rain forests

By DAVID GOODE
Staff Writer

If you happened to be traveling down Interstate 40 yesterday and saw a horse and rider between Groom and McLean, it wasn't a lost cowboy roaming the highway.

The man you saw was Lucian Spataro of Tucson, Ariz., riding an Arabian horse from Flagstaff, Ariz., named Sweet William, more commonly referred to as Willy.

Spataro is riding across the United States to inform the people of the problem of decreasing rain forests and to raise money for the Rainforest Action Network.

He started his journey in Los Angeles on May 19 and is a little over half way. His trek is scheduled to end in New York sometime in September.

They began traveling about 18 to 19 miles per day. According to Spataro, they are now averaging about 25 miles per day.

"California into Yucca (Ariz.) was the worst," he said. He had to take a woman that was with the crew just south of Yucca to the hospital for heat exhaustion treatment.

The hardest part of the trip is over, said Spataro about the heat in the California and Arizona deserts. Brad and Joyce Braden, horse trainers from Fort Worth, are with Spataro on the trip to keep the horse in good shape.

They even brought along an extra horse to keep Willy company.

The crew expanded as they passed through Gallup, N.M. Bob and Bea Shepard of Gilford, Conn., who were vacationing in their motor home throughout the United States decided to join the group as videographers after meeting them in a trailer park. The Shepards record the journey on videotape and send the tape to a Tucson television station which does weekly updates on Spataro and Willy's progress.

"We found they could use an extra hand," said Bob Shepard. "We appreciate the cause and enjoy the people."

"We filmed what it was like to go through Albuquerque (N.M.) at 3 a.m. on a horse," he said.

Shepard explained that he was waiting down a street in Albuquerque to film the horse and rider as they came down the street when police unexpectedly rerouted Spataro and Willy through the city for security reasons and almost lost Shepard in the process.

"We figure we meet about 50 people per day," said Spataro. The crew hands out pledge forms and performs fund raisers for the Rainforest Action Network on the way.

According to Spataro, rain forests cover less than two percent of the earth's surface, but contain about 50 percent of the different species of plants and animals.

There is so much diversity in life in the rain forests and diversity is what makes up the ecosystem we are a part of, he said.

The rain forests are being destroyed by industrial and agricultural development in Third World nations which poses a threat to the endless number of plant and animal species, according to the Rainforest Action Network.

The group hopes to have raised about $1 million when their trip is completed for rain forest projects, such as teaching farmers around the world more efficient ways of farming without damaging the forests.

Police drop murder warrant for Greene

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Gray County District Attorney Harold Comer has recalled a murder warrant for Michael Frank Greene, 37, of Inola, Okla., eliminating him as a suspect in a four-state murder spree that left five people dead, including a Pampa businessman.

Acting Pampa Police Chief Ken Hall said the department has gathered evidence clearing Greene as a suspect in the fatal shooting of Edley Perry Spurrier at his business, One Hour Photo, on Thursday, July 20.

Hall said the department has evidence that Greene was at Wichita Falls at the time of Spurrier's murder.

Comer was in court today and could not be reached for comment.

The district attorney had held open the murder warrant on Greene after officials in Ardmore, Okla., said they had evidence clearing him of a murder in that city.

Officials in Garden City, Kan., Ardmore and Pampa believe the murders of four people in those cities two weeks ago were committed by the same person. That conclusion was reached after shell casings found at the crime scenes all matched.

All of the victims were shot in the back of the head with a .25 caliber pistol.

Two hours after police arrested Greene in Lawton, Okla., another murder was committed with the same modus operandi in Springer, N.M., and a suspect was arrested.

While Pampa officials were dropping the murder warrant on Greene Monday, a judge in Garden City reduced a felony theft of services charge against him to a misdemeanor. Greene reportedly pleaded guilty and was placed on unsupervised probation.

He will be brought back to Pampa later this week to face revocation of probation charges pertaining to an unrelated case of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle based on a 1987 incident here.

Gray County Sheriff Jimmy

Free said Greene will remain in jail in Garden City until he is brought back to Pampa.

Another man, Gregg F. Braun, 28, of Garden City, has been charged with murder in the killings Greene had been suspected of in Garden City and Ardmore.

Comer said last week that if ballistics tests show it was Braun's gun that killed Spurrier, charges will also be filed in Pampa against him. Those test results had not been received through this morning.

Officials in Garden City said restitution has been made in the thefts there.

Greene owed Wheat Lands Motor Inn $295 for rooming, a bar tab and a $100 check written on a closed bank account. He also owed a repair shop money for automobile repairs.

Gary Salyer, owner of Wheat Lands, said the hotel bill had been paid by Greene's family.

Greene was arrested July 23 in Lawton, Okla., as a suspect in a multi-state crime spree in which people were killed during robberies. The spree began with the July 19 killings of two Garden City convenience store clerks.

Authorities initially considered Greene a suspect because he took his car from an Automart in Garden City around the time the killings occurred.

But shortly after Greene's arrest, there was another robbery and killing in New Mexico, and Braun was arrested and charged there.

Authorities in Oklahoma had accused Greene of killing an Ardmore flower shop employee and shooting two other people. However, charges were dropped because of evidence showing Greene was in a hospital at Wichita Falls the day of the Oklahoma homicide.

Braun has been charged with killing two women in Garden City as well as the Ardmore shootings.

Police in Garden City, Pampa and Ardmore had collected a huge amount of circumstantial evidence against Greene. One of the survivors of the Ardmore shootings had even picked him out of a photo line-up.

HUD testimony by Pierce, Dean conflicts, lawmakers say

By RICHARD L. VERNACI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former top housing official apparently lied in telling Congress two years ago that she deferred all funding decisions to her boss, former Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce, say congressional investigators.

"Well, somebody's not telling the truth," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., who brought up testimony given in 1987 by Deborah Gore Dean, former executive assistant to Pierce at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Schumer suggested Monday that Ms. Dean, who is refusing to testify in Congress' investigation of the HUD scandal, lied under oath in 1987.

Pierce has told a House subcommittee investigating allegations of corruption and influence-peddling at HUD that he took no part in funding decisions at the agency. He headed HUD during the eight years of the Reagan administration.

"I did not have hands-on," Pierce testified in May before the House Government Operations subcommittee on housing and employment. He said the decisions were made by subordinates and he would rubber-stamp them.

But Dean said Pierce was calling the shots, in testimony under oath two years ago at a Senate hearing considering her nomination to be an assistant housing secretary.

"All funding decisions are made by the secretary," she testified. "We do recommend to him areas of concern. Many times we are overruled." Dean did not win Senate confirmation.

Schumer said the testimony of Dean and Pierce represented a "direct, and I would say immutable, contradiction."

Schumer and Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., chairman of the House panel, referred to Dean's 1987

testimony in which she also said she had "never given or approved or pushed or coerced anyone to help any developer."

"I'm no expert in perjury, but this seems to be a black-and-white case," Schumer said.

Dean, in her appearance before the House panel two months ago, declined to testify, citing her Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

In August 1987, Dean told a Senate panel that she did not approve projects on her own.

"Have you ever approved a grant in the secretary's name, using his autopen, or whatever, without formally seeking his approval?" then-Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., had asked Dean.

"No, sir," she replied.

But the House panel has heard from witnesses and reviewed documents that say otherwise.

Documents indicate that numerous letters approving funding for projects had Pierce's signature, applied by a signature machine at Dean's direction. On routing slips, she would sometimes indicate whether the machine should sign his full name, or just "Sam."

Schumer also brought out a 1986 report by the Office of Government Ethics that condemned the way federal ethics laws were enforced at HUD.

"HUD's ethics program is one of the most ill-managed this team has ever seen in a major department," the report said.

Schumer introduced the report as John Knapp, former HUD general counsel who oversaw the ethics program, testified a second time before the subcommittee.

Knapp returned to explain why he now denies giving a legal opinion that he earlier testified that he gave while at HUD. That verbal opinion on the applicability of a federal law has been cited by HUD officials as the legal basis that permitted some funding decisions.

Senate committee rejects Lucas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee today refused in a 7-7 tie vote to recommend confirmation of William Lucas as the nation's top civil rights enforcer.

The committee also rejected a proposal to send the nomination to the full Senate without a recommendation.

The action, mainly along party lines, leaves Lucas' nomination to head the civil rights division of the Justice Department in doubt.

"He's lacking in experience and qualifications. His managerial accomplishments are debatable," said Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., who cast a critical vote against the nomination.

All six committee Republicans and Democrat Dennis DeConcini voted in favor of Lucas, a black Democrat-turned-Republican who served as Wayne County sheriff in Michigan. Six Democrats joined Heflin in voting against confirmation.

Republicans compared the committee's rejection of Lucas to the Senate's refusal to confirm Robert Bork for the U.S. Supreme Court. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., accused critics of refusing to "give this black man a chance."

"He's a minority, of course. Years ago minorities didn't have a chance. I know," said Thurmond, who was one of the Senate's most implacable opponents of civil rights in the era of racial segregation.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., said Thurmond's accusation amounted to "a cynical setup" because most of the critics were supporters of civil rights and were concerned mainly about Lucas' qualifications.

"It seems to me that Bill Lucas has failed miserably to prove that he has some knowledge to compensate for his lack of experience," Biden said.

After the committee rejected confirmation, Thurmond moved to send the nomination to the floor without any recommendation. But that was blocked on an identical 7-7 vote.

Supporters of Lucas could still try to get the nomination before the full Senate. But that would be very difficult.

Civil rights groups campaigned against Lucas, saying he lacks experience. Committee Republicans contended the 61-year-old black nominee would apply the lessons he learned in his rise from dishwasher to FBI agent to Wayne County, Mich., sheriff and county executive.

Austin voters OK convention center

AUSTIN (AP) — Voter approval of a $69 million convention center for downtown Austin is good news for the city's economy, Mayor Lee Cooke says.

"I think people decided to look beyond past problems and take a risk, to look beyond all the hard times we've had," Cooke said of the vote.

Austin residents on Saturday approved building the downtown convention center by a margin of 56 percent to 44 percent. Several analysts said it was a message they are tired of economic stagnation and willing to do something about it.

"The voters said, 'Hey, we're not going to sit around and stick our heads in the sand and bemoan how bad the economy is. We're going to do something about it,'" said Allen Kaplan, a political analyst who worked on the convention center campaign.

"It sends a very positive signal that Austin is not giving up on itself," Kaplan said.

Canadian River rights meeting scheduled

Landowners along the Canadian River in the Texas Panhandle have asked the Texas Legislature to permit them to go to court and let the court decide if the state has claimed too much land along the river's bank.

Roger Holland, president of the Panhandle Recreation Association, said his organization has been combating legislation that will sell the Canadian River to private landowners which, in turn, will close the property to public use.

The Panhandle Recreation Association will be meeting 8 p.m. today at 111 E. Coolidge in Borger to elect a new vice president and three members on the board of directors.

Members also will be discussing the situation involving Canadian River access matters. The public is invited to attend, Holland said.

The land along the river currently belongs to the state and is public domain, he said. It is used for recreational activities such as three-wheeling, camping and hunting.

The dam built on the river has restricted its flow therefore narrowing the riverbed itself.

"The landowners wanted to acquire the land down to the water's edge," commented Holland.

They have already filed suit against the state alleging that the property belongs to them, he said. Holland said his organization is working with State Sen. Teel Bivens to allow their compromise with the landowners to be introduced to the legislature. Gov. Clements has not placed the proposed amendment on the session's agenda, however.

"We wanted to present our side of the case," he said.

The Panhandle Recreation Association has proposed that the Alibates Ranch on the river above the lake be placed in the public domain and the rest of the land along the river up to the water's edge be placed in the landowners' possession.

The mineral rights along the Canadian belong to the state and all profits are currently being placed in the permanent school fund.

If ownership of the property were to change, the ownership of the mineral rights would also change, Holland said.

Higgins' death. But like other lawmakers at Monday night's meeting, he declined to identify them.

Earlier, Dole, R-Kan., had criticized Israel for its role in touching off the crisis. Declaring that Israel launched the commando raid to abduct Obeid with out forewarning the United States, Dole said, "Perhaps a little more responsibility on behalf of the Israelis would be refreshing."

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, without elaborating, "It's fair to say that many people do share the senator's concerns."

Israeli officials rejected criticism of their commando raid, saying Obeid had helped plan and carry out several terrorist operations including Higgins' kidnapping.

ping in February 1988. Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said blaming Israel for Higgins' death would be "turning the world on its head."

One administration source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said U.S. officials had more meetings planned on the crisis, and it was premature to say Bush had ruled out military retaliation or rescue missions.

The White House made clear to congressional leaders that the United States had been kept in the dark about Israel's plan to kidnap Obeid on Friday, according to one lawmaker who attended the briefing.

Israel says Obeid is a leader of a pro-Iranian group that is holding foreign hostages in Lebanon. An Israeli Army spokesman said Obeid admitted he was involved in Higgins' kidnapping.

White House Monday evening said the president was still trying to gather the facts.

"The president made it very clear until the facts are known, at least more facts than we have now, there's no way you can make a definitive decision," said Rep. William L. Dickinson, R-Ala., the ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said, "The president strongly reaffirmed his belief... of not negotiating with terrorists under any circumstances and his strong intention not to do so in this instance."

Higgins, 44, was kidnapped while serving with a United Nations peacekeeping force in Lebanon. Eight other Americans are held captive in Lebanon, including Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

Wedding party leads to shooting

By BEAR MILLS
 Staff Writer

Pampa police said a wedding reception that began Monday night and continued until around 2 this morning on the south side of the city got out of hand, resulting in the alleged shooting of one man and clubbing of another with a pistol.

Police are withholding the names of all those involved since no one is filing charges in the case, said Ken Hall, acting chief of police.

Official reports indicate police were called to a disturbance at 852 S. Sumner around 2 a.m. today.

At the scene officers were told a fight had led to one man being clubbed with a pistol and at least one shot being fired.

However, police were unable to find a bullet hole anywhere and the pistol had vanished.

Around 8 a.m. a black man on crutches appeared outside the police station saying he had been shot in the foot, explaining where the stray bullet was.

Hall said the man refused to file charges or say who shot him. Hall added the man only came to the police station because his brother had brought him there in a car and dumped him out, insisting he file charges.

Through press time this morning the man was still standing outside the police station refusing to file charges. The man reportedly told police he was just waiting for a ride and refused to give them details about how or why got he was shot.

Hurricane Chantal approaches upper Gulf Coast area today

By JEFF AWALT
Associated Press Writer

HIGH ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Texans along the state's Upper Gulf Coast today braced for the arrival of Hurricane Chantal, a storm that barely qualifies as a hurricane but developed so fast officials were confused about its potential.

The storm is the first Atlantic hurricane this year and early today appeared headed for the coastal region between Galveston and Port Arthur.

Port Arthur-area officials were the first to ask for a voluntary evacuation. Other coastal residents were taking precautions, but there was no panic buying of supplies like batteries or bottled water reported.

Hurricane warnings were up from Freeport to Mobile, Ala. Rain fell over a widespread area of southeast Texas and the upper coast early today.

At 5 a.m. CDT today, the storm's center was about 45 miles east of Galveston, near 29.2 degrees north latitude and 94.1 degrees west longitude. It was moving to the northwest at 12 mph.

Maximum sustained winds were 80 mph, well above the 74 mph required to become a hurri-can. The storm was moving northwest at 12 mph.

Eric Tabbert works Monday to get the windows boarded up on his friend's house on the west beach of Galveston Island.

The hurricane has been blamed for the death of a man who fell from a Chevron oil platform in the Gulf of Mexico south of New Orleans. No injuries have been reported in Texas.

Forecasters said the eye of Chantal was about 10 to 15 miles in diameter, an average size. A hurricane is generally more intense with a small eye.

Chantal was a Category 1 storm, the smallest on the Saffir-Simpson scale of strength, but was gaining momentum Monday evening, a signal that worried forecasters.

"We could certainly wake up (Tuesday) morning to a very well developed Category 2 or even Category 3 storm," said Ron Stagno, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Alvin.

Category 2 hurricanes carry sustained winds of 96 to 110 mph and storm surges of 6 to 8 feet above normal. Category 3 storms pack 111 to 130 mph winds and storm surges of 9 to 12 feet above normal.

Port Arthur Mayor Malcolm Grant, citing the likelihood of high water closing the highway between his city and Sabine Pass, asked for a voluntary evacuation of Sabine Pass.

Police estimate about 95 percent of the 800 residents of the coastal community complied with Grant's request.

Evacuation facilities were set up in schools in Port Arthur and Beaumont.

Jefferson County emergency management coordinator Dick Nugent said typically many Sabine Pass residents choose to stay.

"They've been riding out storms for years and years," Nugent said.

But he said two recent storms make Chantal even more of a threat.

In late June, Tropical Storm Allison came ashore at Freeport, southwest of Houston, dumping heavy rains and flooding large parts of southeast Texas, causing millions of dollars in damage.

Forecasters said that with rivers and creeks still high from the earlier heavy rains, residents in low flood-prone areas should begin taking precautions against the possibility of yet another round of rising waters since the ground remains close to being saturated.

Nearly 500 Houston Area Red Cross volunteers remain on standby and Houston Lighting & Power Co. officials said they were tying down equipment at power plants and substations throughout the area.

City and county personnel in Orange prepared for Chantal, closing government offices and setting up emergency centers. Crews handed out sandbags in low-lying areas.

Rain began falling late in the afternoon Monday.

Weather bureau estimates favored Port Arthur, Galveston and Freeport as the most likely targets for landfall by 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Bush willing to consider S&L compromise

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is willing to discuss a compromise on financing the president's savings and loan bailout, but won't consider any plans offered so far, a senior Treasury official says.

Under Secretary for Finance Robert R. Glauber, in an interview Monday, said a compromise would be considered if it doesn't undermine the spending discipline imposed by the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law.

"Whether there is something else lurking out there that would preserve what is important to the administration, which is the integrity of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings process ... is the issue," he said.

"We're certainly prepared to look at what somebody could come up with."

A House-Senate conference committee last week agreed to finance the multibillion-dollar bailout "on budget," a plan favored by Democrats. The plan would balloon the federal budget deficit but waive automatic spending cuts that would be triggered under the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

The administration favors an "off-budget" funding mechanism that would avoid automatic spending cuts by keeping S&L spending out of the deficit.

President Bush argues that his way of evading Gramm-Rudman, although somewhat more expensive than the Democratic plan, is harder to duplicate and would be less likely to encourage a congressional spending spree.

The full House and Senate are scheduled to vote on the conference committee bill this week, with House action expected by Thursday and a Senate vote a day later.

The dispute appears to be a stalemate. Democrats have enough votes to block the president's financing plan in the House and probably in the Senate. Republicans say they can muster 41 votes in the Senate in support of the Democratic plan under that chamber's rules.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who is leading the effort to protect the deficit law that bears his name, said he's "given some thought" to a compromise but doesn't hold out much hope.

"If there's a magic solution, I haven't come up with it," he said. "The question is, are we going to destroy the budget process in the process of passing the S&L bill? The answer to that is yes or no. You can't say you're going to destroy it a little bit."

Democrats will be unwilling to consider a compromise until Senate Republicans prove they can block the Democratic plan, he said.

Glauber rejected compromise proposals that have been publicly offered so far.

"If we could find some way to make the precedent less easy to copy, then we've got the basis for a compromise," he said.

One type of compromise, advanced earlier by Rep. Chalmers Wylie, R-Ohio, and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., is a hybrid, with some spending on budget and some off, which Glauber said is little better than the Democratic plan.

Another type of plan, first advocated by Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, doesn't waive Gramm-Rudman. Instead, it evades automatic spending cuts by loading all of the spending into fiscal year 1989. The deadlines that would trigger automatic spending cuts already have passed for that year.

However, Glauber said that would make Gramm-Rudman "meaningless."

Texas hormone-free beef shipped to Europe

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The first shipment of domestic beef to Europe since a January embargo halted trade progress was scheduled to leave a Houston port this morning and arrive in England in about three weeks.

The refrigerated container of Texas hormone-free beef was boarded onto the Nedlloyd Hudson Monday during a news conference in which Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said the shipment could signal an economic boom for the state's beef producers.

"This is the start of a modern day cattle drive that can put millions of extra dollars into the pockets of enterprising Texas ranchers, feedlot operators and meat packers," Hightower said, citing the creation of jobs while satisfying a new European market niche.

European countries banned imports of hormone-treated beef because of health concerns over the growth stimulant. The action cut off a $100 million market to U.S. cattle producers.

The United States claimed Europe was using the hormone issue as a way to restrain trade and retaliated by setting $100 million in higher tariffs on a variety of European products.

Since then, Hightower has tried to export hormone-free beef from Texas. His effort sometimes met resistance from federal trade officials who said Hightower was undermining their negotiations with European countries.

But a task force that forged an interim agreement between the United States and the European Economic Community in May cleared the way for today's shipment to Liverpool — 40,000 pounds of beef worth about $100,000.

"From the onset, we at the Texas Department of Agriculture felt that more was at stake than steak, and a whole lot more was at stake than growth hormones," Hightower said Monday. "This shipment is pretty much the test case."

The shipment was expected to arrive Aug. 20.

The beef is being processed by Cox Packing Co. in Devine, near San Antonio, and sent to TSW Meats Ltd. of Liverpool. The company has an option with Cox Packing to make an additional purchase of hormone-free beef valued at about $1.5 million.

Phillip Graham, owner of Cox Packing, produced some of the beef on his ranch near Kerrville and some of the cattle from other ranchers in southern Texas.

Hightower's department is working with other Texas ranchers, feedlot operators and meatpackers who are complying with procedures for supplying European buyers with the hormone-free beef.

In addition to Cox Packing, B3R Country Meats of Childress already has been certified by the European community.

Hightower said Texas ranchers normally don't give their cattle hormones. Feedlot operators, however, give the hormones to increase the weight of the livestock, he said.

Drug trafficking moving to West Texas route

CHILDRESS (AP) — The seizure of nearly a ton of cocaine from a plane forced to land in the Texas Panhandle is evidence of the steadily increasing air smuggling traffic between northern Mexico and one of the state's remotest areas, federal authorities say.

U.S. District Attorney Marvin Collins said officials found 1,940 pounds of cocaine aboard the Queenaire Beechcraft and said it was the largest cocaine seizure ever in northern Texas.

U.S. Customs planes forced the twin-engine aircraft to land at the Childress municipal airstrip shortly after midnight Monday, said Ron Hall, resident agent in charge of the Oklahoma City Customs Service.

Authorities arrested the pilot, Robert Joseph Belmar, 57, and seized the plane.

Attorneys late

Belmar appeared before U.S. Magistrate Clinton E. Averitte and was charged Monday with a federal complaint of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute.

If convicted, he could face a maximum fine of $4 million and life imprisonment.

Bond will be set at a hearing on Thursday. Meanwhile, Belmar will be held in the Potter County Jail pending a detention hearing.

The Panhandle's remote level farm roads have long been favorite clandestine landing sites for Mexico-based smuggling rings, authorities said.

Restrictions on flights through Cuban air space in recent months have prompted smugglers to turn increasingly to West Texas routes, Hall said.

The Cuban crackdown is an apparent backlash from a recent scandal linking senior Cuban military leaders with the Columbian Medellin drug cartel, authorities said.

"Now they've got to go around Cuba — either east or west of the island — and some of the planes they've been using don't have the range required for the trip," he said. "We believe cocaine is now being shipped and warehoused in Mexico for a hop across the border into the Southwest."

Officials said the cocaine was picked up in Tampico, Mexico.

The cocaine seized was in the form of uncut powder wrapped in 882 shrink-wrapped, onekilogram bricks and bundled into 37 plastic sacks. Officials placed the value of the cocaine at more than $80 million.

Childress County District Attorney David McCoy said authorities with the Drug Enforcement Agency field-tested some of the 1,940 pounds of the substance in the plane and found it to be 90 percent cocaine.

The plane's cargo, in 35 packages of about 55 pounds each, was taken to Dallas for fingerprinting, officials said.

Authorities believe drops were to be made in Quanah and other sites in North Texas.

One of the workers from the capsized oil rig is escorted from a fishing boat that rescued him from the Gulf waters Monday.

10 crewmen missing from capsized oil rig

By MARY FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A history of accidents on work rigs such as the one that capsized Monday in the Gulf of Mexico, leaving 10 crewmen unaccounted for, prompted the Coast Guard to institute an inspection program last January, officials said.

"What it boils down to is a record of casualties, including fatalities that gets your attention. The number of lift boats involved in accidents is higher than normal," said Lt. Allen Harker, a marine inspector at the Coast Guard's 8th District headquarters.

The self-propelled rig Avco 5 with 14 people aboard was headed to shore early Monday when it capsized about 20 miles off the Louisiana coast, near Morgan City, Chevron spokesman Jonathan Lifa said.

Three survivors were taken aboard the fishing vessel Spar Royale, and a fourth was taken by helicopter to Grand Isle.

Rescued were Jesse Morton, 29, of Franklinton; Tony Cruz, 24, of Houma; Kevin Cooley, 20, of Lafayette, and Edward Ducett, age and hometown unknown, the Coast Guard said.

Cruise was in stable condition and Cooley released after being treated at Terrebonne General Medical Center, according to a spokeswoman at the Houma hospital. Morton and Ducett apparently were not hurt.

The 10 missing workers were not identified immediately.

The rig, leased by Chevron from Avis Bourg Co. of Folsom, was on its side in about 25 feet of water, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

divers from making a search. The Coast Guard said a search for the 10 missing workers would be suspended indefinitely because of worsening conditions. Swells 25 feet high were reported in the area late Monday night.

A second jackup rig was listing at a 12-degree angle and five workers were taken from that rig without injury, said Coast Guard Lt. Steve Hardy.

That rig, owned by Atlantic & Pacific Marine Inc. of Houston, was located about 15 miles east of Grand Isle.

The Coast Guard recently began inspections of such vessels because of the "significant casualty rate" and Monday was the deadline for applying for an inspection.

"Their track record as far as accidents is not the best," Hardy said of jackup rigs. "I'm not aware of too many problems when they are actually underway though. That's unusual. The problems tend to happen when they are jacked up rather than when they are sailing."

From 1980 through 1987, according to a study by the Coast Guard, there were approximately 46 accidents involving lift boats, Harker said.

"I would say that 60 percent of the sinkings were when the vessel was in the jacked up position. The biggest problem we see is when they are in the jacked up mode. Many times the legs just don't appear strong enough," he said.

The Avco 5, a work rig about 72-feet long, is a basically flat barge with legs which extend 100 feet when it is working.

The rig, with the legs lifted above the vessel when it is underway, resembles an inverted card table when it is moving, Harker said.

"In the floating mode what we will be looking for is the ability of the vessel to withstand certain wind and sea conditions," he said.

HOUSTON (AP) — When city officials began trying to clear up 520,000 delinquent traffic ticket cases, they made a surprising find.

Forty-one of the top 100 offenders were attorneys. City officials were hesitant to release the list for fear of being sued, the Houston Post reported.

Although the average number of tickets held by each of the attorneys was 88, city officials said one had 327 parking tickets dating back to 1985 — all unpaid.

That attorney had Canadian license plates on his car, causing all his tickets to go into a file for foreign addresses. Four years passed before it was discovered.

The Houston attorney owes the city roughly $30,000.

Everyone on the top 100 list has at least 20 outstanding tickets. Parking tickets accounted for nearly all the backlog, but a few of the delinquent tickets were issued for moving violations.

Also listed on the top 100 offenders was a Houston Police Department officer whose personal car has been festooned with 123 parking tickets over the last four years. The list also includes a Harris County Sheriff's Department deputy who has run up a total of 77 unpaid tickets.

Three constable's deputies received, respectively, 101, 73 and 27 tickets each, records show.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Tragedy, heroism revealed in crash

Investigators continue to look into the crash of United Flight 232 in Sioux City, Iowa. But we've already learned about the heroism displayed by many of the people involved. In these times of contagious cynicism, such actions remind us that humans have a greater calling.

The heroism begins with the crew of Flight 232. Only great courage, skill and decisive action prevented a total disaster and saved at least 180 lives. For the last leg of its journey, the plane's rudder and hydraulic system had mostly failed and the plane was by all reason unmovable. Yet Capt. A.C. Haynes, a former Marine pilot, wrestled the bird down, flying by the seat of his pants.

After the flaming crash, passengers selflessly helped one another out of the rubble. One father rushed in to find his baby. He moved several times toward the infant's cries, only to be driven out by the smoke. He and the mother later discovered that another survivor had rescued the baby.

As the plane descended, ground crews, airline personnel and medical workers tensely waited and prayed. After the crash, they jumped forward to help.

Dr. David J. Greco, head of emergency planning at Marian Health Center, sat in a helicopter hovering near the runway. He descended seconds after the crash to direct rescue workers, identifying which survivors needed immediate care and transportation to a hospital and which needed only first aid and could be safely helped later.

Other doctors, Red Cross volunteers, firemen, ambulance medics, National Guardsmen and police carried off the injured and put out fires. Those most hurt were rushed to St. Luke's Regional Medical Center and Marian Health Center. At the two hospitals, almost 400 doctors, nurses and medical technicians waited, including some who had retired or who were off duty and still came in to help.

Ministers, priests and rabbis immediately attended to the passengers, blessing and comforting the dying, giving hope to the survivors.

United Airlines notified relatives and flew them in to be with the survivors. Local restaurants provided free food to survivors and rescue workers.

Flying remains the safest way to travel, but such accidents remain a risk. Amid the tragedy, they also can give us a glimpse of what the human spirit can accomplish at its best.

Trade war becomes race war

It isn't news that North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms, who used to depict the Ku Klux Klan as a group of upstanding, law-abiding citizens, is fond of race-baiting. But it is news that he has shifted his fire from blacks to Japanese. More depressing is the fact that the tactic has potent political appeal.

"I'm not an alarmist, but America is being INVADED," shrieks the senator in a recent fund-raising letter, "invaded by foreign financiers and industrialists ... In some ways, this foreign economic invasion is just as dangerous as a military invasion of the United States. BUT IN THIS INVASION, THEY'RE SEIZING CONTROL OF OUR ECONOMY! As incredible as it might sound, we're at serious risk of becoming an economic colony of Japan."

Racism is alive and well in America, thank you. If you need convincing, just look at the chronic anti-Japanese feeling across the land, of which Helms' letter is only an unusually blunt example.

More temperate politicians have said essentially the same thing. Sen. Howard Baker, the living embodiment of moderation, said a few years ago, "First, we're still at war with Japan. Second, we're losing." Michael Dukakis, the Dullest Candidate in the History of Presidential Elections, ran a TV ad last year denouncing foreign investment and ominously displaying a Japanese flag.

This tactic is known as putting the hay down where the goats can get it. The average American has an irrational fear of all things Japanese, excluding only the ones in his garage and living room.

A poll last year found that 59 percent of Americans think economic rivals like Japan "pose a greater threat to our national security than our military adversaries."

Japan-bashers have already chalked up some successes. One is the trade bill enacted last year, which is advertised as attacking "unfair trade" but was really aimed at protecting American companies and workers against the competition, especially from little yellow people in Asia.

The foreign investment panic has also moved the House of Representatives on two occasions to approve a bill aimed at penalizing investors by forcing them to disclose far more information about their acquisitions than we require of domestic investors.

For some reason all our complicated fears about the economy get boiled down to one basic sentiment: Hate the Japs. Apparently politicians believe that Americans would not be reduced to stark, raving terror if they were told that we are being invaded by the Dutch, or if they were warned of the horrendous consequences of investment from Britain.

As it happens, though, the Japanese are a distant third when it comes to acquiring assets in the U.S., with the British and the Dutch leading the pack. Our trade deficit with Canada is, per capita, as large as the one with Japan.

But for a politician trying to rouse public fury, the British, Dutch and Canadians have one big defect: They're mostly white. Demagogues don't need to be told that their un-American skin color makes the Japanese far easier to hate.

Obviously race isn't the only factor in this resentment; there is a big component of economic apprehension involved as well. But the apprehension is generally based on exaggeration, misinformation and misunderstanding. And the element of race gets it far more attention than it would get otherwise.

Foreign investment is a lot harder to find than hysteria about foreign investment. No more than 5 percent of our physical assets (land, factories, office buildings, hotels) are owned by foreigners. Some of this is investment we encourage — even demanded.

One reason the Japanese have built automotive plants in Tennessee and Ohio is that Congress threatened to make them produce here. Remember the "domestic content" proposal pushed by the United Auto Workers a few years back? Another is fear of protectionism: U.S. plants are one way to avoid import restrictions.

The idea that the foreign capital makes us slavishly dependent on Japan or anyone else is absurd. By buying assets here, foreigners leave themselves at the mercy of U.S. economic performance and government policies. If they bet wrong, they can't put the Hotel Nikko on the first boat to Yokohama. Who's dependent on whom?

The difference between the Japanese attack in 1941 and the Japanese "attack" going on now is that this one poses the danger of raising our standard of living, creating jobs and making our economy more competitive.

But whatever else has changed, the Japanese still look Japanese, which in many quarters is reason enough to distrust them.

He should have paid attention

Looking back, I really should have paid more attention when my teachers attempted to teach me mathematics.

I'm not certain why I never had much interest in math when I was in high school. I do recall, however, my high school algebra teacher, Miss Fleming, was quite attractive and I suppose I paid more attention to watching her every move at the blackboard than I did to mixing "a" and "b" with a bunch of numbers.

These are complicated times in which we live, and I find, as one of the mathematically impaired, I'm having trouble dealing with issues that involve numbers.

Let's take the scandal at HUD, the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Jack Kemp, HUD's secretary, was quoted recently as saying the waste and influence-peddling that occurred in his department during the previous administration totalled somewhere near $2 billion.

My first problem is trying to understand how much money that actually is.

I know it's a lot, enough to meet the payroll of a professional basketball team, but how many zeroes does 2 billion have?

I called a banker friend of mine to ask. I figured he would know since he probably turns down that much in loans every week.

"You just start with a '2,'" he said, "and add zeroes until your hand begins to hurt."

The reason I like to know how to write out $2 billion is that I would like to find out just how much the HUD heist cost me, the individual taxpayer.

I suppose I could make a rough estimate of what I lost in the rampant influence peddling and taking-care-of-buddies network.

I'm going to guess $150. It could be more or less than that, but $150 is a nice, uncomplicated figure with which to work. Think of what all I could have bought with the $150 big ones if people like Samuel Pierce, Reagan's HUD secretary, hadn't stolen it from me.

I could have bought a few nice items of clothing. If I went to K mart I probably could have purchased an entire outfit.

If I had gone to my local Ralph Lauren dealer, I probably couldn't have walked out with anything more than a pair of socks, but that would have been better than handing over the money to some crooked politician.

A hundred and fifty big ones also would buy a pretty good dinner for two in a fancy restaurant, unless you got a little crazy and started ordering expensive wines. To stay under the $150, you should order only wines you can pronounce like "Gallo Thunder-bird."

A hundred and fifty would also buy a fairly large amount of groceries, a nice tune-up for your car and maybe a few new hoses.

It would pay for subscriptions to several magazines, 150 cigars at $1 each, a bunch of golf balls, maybe even a trip to Dollywood, or you could give it to somebody in an urban area who needs housing, which is where it should have gone in the first place.

Having said all that, I now realize algebra really isn't that difficult when you use it relative to government fraud.

The formula is easy: (a) If you don't keep a close eye on politicians and bureaucrats, the result is (b) they'll steal you blind.

Some easy rules for being her friend

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Even if I hadn't come onto Stanley Bing's delightful look into the nature of men's friendships in the August Esquire, I'd still be thinking about the nature of women's.

I'm coming up on my 20th high-school graduation reunion, and five of us who used to be girlfriends are planning to meet for lunch this month. I have seen only two of them in the past 20 years; one at our 10th graduation reunion, and the other when she came through my town and stopped by my office to ask a question pertaining to my field. I can't help but wonder why the glue that cemented us for three or four years of high school all but evaporated once we graduated.

Looking back on the ease with which we all scattered and formed new friendships in college, I think we were probably held together more by proximity and lack of selection than by conscious choice. But in reading Bing's essay, I was forced to think back on the friendships that faded by natural evolutionary processes, like these did, and those that I discarded with speed and gusto.

And as Bing did for men, I offer a few things a woman must do to keep a friend — especially if that friend is me:

- Don't pick on me. This might seem sort of redundant when we're talking about friendship, but in my childhood and adolescence I suffered some mighty sharp slings swung by girls who shot them in the name of friendship. The arrows did me little good except (finally, at long last) to teach me what to watch out for and how to duck. I don't know whether I suddenly got wise and dissolved some of these friendships at about the same time I entered college, or if I just got tired of having a backside full of buckshot.

- Quit comin' to me to fix things. I know listening is a great part of friendship, and I'm willing to do my part. I'm just not willing to always do your part too. Everyone is stumped sometimes — lost, bewildered, bunnied, too worn out from worrying to be able to move in any direction. The operative word here is sometimes. Other times, I would like for you to have sat down with a piece of paper and mapped out some options for yourself, before you bring the problem to me. If you can organize your closets, you can do this.

- If the tides suddenly turn and I'm the lost one for a change, don't wrinkle up your brow and say, "Well, why don't you just (fill in the blank with your half-thought-out solution)," as if any stupid little problem I might have should only take about three seconds to solve.

- Respect my man. This is one of Bing's dictums, but respect for a friend's significant other is just as necessary for women as for men. You don't have to love him. Just never, never, never pick on him, get smart with him or in any way demean him, regardless of how many times I have unleashed a torrent of his failings upon your saintly ears. Think of him as if he were my kid; parents can complain about their own kids, but you know what happens when other people do.

- Don't you marry the wrong man. Respect is one thing, but after all, I'm only human. There's only so much I can take of a big ol' ruining everyone else's evening with his whining. Ditto for saying or doing things that make you miserable and send you crying to me long-distance. It's hard to respect someone you want to punch all the time.

- Love me or leave me. I have a lot of good qualities, but just as many of the other variety. If you naturally appreciate what I am, then wonderful. But if my foibles are just too much for you to take, don't force things. If you simply can't do that, then admit the battle is lost and slip away gracefully. We'll both be happier for it.

Firefighters mobilized as forest fires spread

By JOHN DONNELLY
Associated Press Writer

Thousands of soldiers and firefighters from Alaska to Florida were mobilizing today to help battle fires that had charred nearly 140,000 acres in four western states and showed no sign of letting up.

World War II-era bombers swooped to treetop level to drop fire retardant over Idaho's raging fires, and helicopters dumped huge buckets of water.

Nearly all of the West's forest firefighting crews were on front lines in Idaho, Oregon, California and Washington, prompting the call for help elsewhere, said strategists at the Boise Interagency Fire Center directing the fire fights.

Crews from 19 states had arrived in the region by early today, including 525 firefighters from Alaska, fire center officials said. They joined 9,800 firefighters from western crews.

About 2,500 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., were preparing to move to eastern Oregon for on-the-job training before being thrown on to the front lines.

National Guardsmen also were called out for duty in Idaho and Oregon.

"We're in for a long haul," said Dave Olson of the Payette National Forest in Idaho, where more than 200 fires continued to burn. "It's getting serious, and it's getting tough to deal with these fires."

These fires were still no match to last year's, the most expensive ever in firefighting costs, but forecasters said a dry August with lightning strikes could rapidly escalate the damage. Fires have charred more than 1.3 million acres this year in the contiguous United States, compared with 2.1 million acres by this time last year.

Lightning last week set many of the blazes.

Bolts ignited a firestorm that charred 10,000 acres in central Idaho, including much of the small resort town of Lowman, about 70 miles northeast of Boise. Residents who returned Monday to what was left of their homes found that 25 structures were destroyed.

Relations with Moscow, Beijing on the upswing

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gains made by Secretary of State James A. Baker III in weekend talks with his Soviet and Chinese counterparts are being overshadowed by the reported execution of an American hostage in Lebanon.

Baker returned from Paris on Monday night, indicating he was pleased that U.S. relations with the Soviet Union had edged up a few notches and that high-level contacts with China had been re-established.

But he was at a loss about how to cope with a resurgence of terrorism that apparently led to the death of Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, and threatens other American hostages in Lebanon. Apart from denouncing Higgins' kidnappers as "outrageous and uncivilized," Baker gave no hint that the Bush administration had yet found an effective strategy for coping with its first major foreign policy challenge.

Before leaving Paris, Baker asked Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to do what he can for the American hostages when he visits Tehran.

Using the Paris peace conference on Cambodia as a backdrop, Baker began plotting with Shevardnadze the first summit meeting between Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. A Soviet observer called the meeting a "shirt-sleeve" session at the Soviet embassy that ran three hours and 10 minutes.

Officials on both sides said Baker and Shevardnadze disagreed sharply over Afghanistan, but otherwise found rapport.

An estimated 136,000 acres were aflame in the four states, including 55,000 acres in Idaho, the fire center said.

About 120 miles due north of Lowman in the Payette National Forest, crews worked to save a second town from burning.

The mining town of Warren, population 25, was nearly surrounded by the 4,200-acre Steamboat Complex of three fires.

"There are engines in place. There are pumps, hoses, foam units in place," said Payette spokesman Olson.

In northeastern Oregon, at least five major fires and several smaller ones burned across 60,000 acres, forcing the evacuation of some rural homes and threatening the watershed for the city of La Grande, authorities said.

About 2,900 firefighters were battling blazes in the-Wallowa-Whitman and the Malheur national forests near the towns of Baker, Unity, Enterprise and John Day, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Mike Ferris.

The biggest blaze, the 18,240-acre Dooley Mountain fire, five miles south of Baker, kept residents of about 15 homes from their houses.

In southern California, the "Powerhouse" fire in the central Sierra Nevada foothills threatened homes late Monday, and officials said they did not expect full containment until sometime today.

The fire, which last week had forced nearly 2,500 residents to flee, covered more than 11,700 acres and destroyed seven homes and about 15 sheds, barns and other outbuildings. Most evacuees returned home Sunday and Monday.

In Washington state, near the Canadian border, firefighters hoped to contain the 850-acre Lodgepole fire by tonight, said Greg Thayer of the U.S. Forest Service.

Washington state sent 30 firefighters and three helicopters to fires in Oregon and Idaho.

The fire center in Boise reported early today that firefighters also had arrived from 19 other states.

The Soviets are irked about continuing U.S. weapons shipments to rebels trying to dislodge a pro-Moscow government in Kabul.

Baker invited Shevardnadze to Wyoming for a Sept. 19-20 meeting on the planned summit.

Baker seized the opportunity at the Paris conference to re-establish high-level contacts with China after a lapse of nearly two months following the violent repression of the student-led pro-democracy movement in Beijing's Tiananmen Square on June 3-4.

Baker met for 90 minutes with Foreign Minister Qian Qichen with only interpreters present.

Baker told Qian that "repression on the part of the People's Republic of China would not be understood by the American people," a senior U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said after the meeting.

"It was our view that if China does want to continue its reform, as it says it does, it ought not to turn inward and isolate itself through conduct that would not be understood by many in the international community," the official said.

Following the Tiananmen Square shootings of Chinese protesters, Bush barred exchanges of senior U.S. and Chinese officials as well as high-level visits to China. However, Baker's meeting with Qian was considered outside the bounds of the sanctions.

His aim was to assure Qian that the administration wants to preserve strong ties with Beijing, but "we are going to need help," the official said.

The two governments found a common interest on Cambodia.

Governors skirt abortion, policy issues

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's governors entered their final day of a harmonious meeting in which they skirted abortion and other policy differences and agreed to meet again next month with President Bush.

Before heading home today, the governors were to vote on a series of policy statements, including a cautiously worded one urging the federal government to reduce the deficit without raising taxes "if possible," while protecting key domestic spending.

Other policy matters under consideration included allowing students and parents to select public schools of their choice "consistent with desegregation goals," and tougher steps against drug smuggling, including requiring cooperation in anti-drug efforts for countries to receive U.S. foreign aid.

Some of the governors headed home early, skipping the last session. One was Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, who said he needed to deal with forest fires that have become "totally out of control."

Bush, whose appearance at the conference was overshadowed Monday by the reported hanging of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins by pro-Iranian captors in Lebanon, invited the governors to meet with him in late September for a summit meeting on education.

The meeting, at a site to be named later, was a campaign promise of Bush and was discussed by governors last spring.

Democratic Gov. Gerald Baliles of Virginia, who was being replaced as chairman of the governors' association by Republican Terry Branstad of Iowa, said "We're impressed with the accessibility and indications of a cooperative attitude" from Bush.

Democrat Bill Clinton of Arkansas said the summit will keep education and child-related issues on the public agenda.

But Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste, a Democrat, said Bush's remarks were too little considering Bush's campaign claim to be "the education president." He called the speech "uninspired and uninspiring."

"It lacked any real vision or any real voltage in terms of getting us moving now," said Celeste, in one of the few public criticisms of the administration voiced at the conference.

Celeste said the education meeting would discuss a dampening effect on state and local education initiatives created by the budget climate and Bush's flat opposition to new taxes.

Governors of both parties met in private over breakfast before Bush's remarks, and several governors said bipartisan concern was voiced over federal Medicaid requirements that force states to spend more on health care without compensation from the federal government.

In a question-and-answer session with Bush, Celeste asked the president to consider a two-year moratorium on additional Medicaid requirements, which he later described as the fastest growing spending item in his state budget. Bush did not commit himself to such a moratorium but said, "I'd like to consider it, and certainly we're trying to hold the line on spiraling costs."

Bush and his Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner suggested they were sympathetic with the governors' request that surplus federal transportation trust funds be released, but made no promises of money.

The trust funds for highways and airport facilities contain up to $19 billion, according to governors, who contend much of that is being withheld from the states so it can count against the deficit in the federal budget.

Scientist Carl Sagan urged the governors to support steps to counter the environmental threats of ozone depletion and global warming, including a ban on chlorofluorocarbons and increased use of alternative fuels. Chlorofluorocarbons are chemicals found in such products as coolants, cleaning solvents and plastic food containers.

Nuke weapons plants cleanup to cost billions

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department proposes to spend as much as $17.2 billion in the first five years of a major nuclear weapons plants cleanup, under a plan being announced by Energy Secretary James Watkins.

Watkins, who says the government must "chart a new course" to correct wrongs in the weapons program, planned to outline a broad blueprint for the first phase of the cleanup in a speech today before the National Press Club.

The five-year program, with details to be announced later this month, is the center of a long-term plan to restore confidence in the operation of the weapons production plants that have been marred by a history of environmental and safety neglect.

The department has said the overall cleanup bill for the 17 plants in a dozen states likely will exceed $90 billion, but it is not predicting how long the cleanup might take.

The department is preparing cleanup plans in five-year increments.

After Watkins became head of the department in March, he ordered a team of senior aides to develop a plan aimed at correcting safety mistakes and developing operational procedures that comply with environmental and safety requirements.

According to sources, the top-level internal department review concluded that about $2.4 billion will have to be spent during the first year, beginning in October, and as much as $3.7 billion annually in each of the subsequent four years. The sources spoke on the condition of anonymity.

A series of disclosures this year has revealed widespread neglect of safety and environmental safeguards at the weapons production plants, eroding public confidence in the program and prompting some members of Congress to seek to take some oversight authority away from the Energy Department.

An internal department audit earlier this year also included a blistering review of management failures at many of the plants and said some department employees may face criminal charges for violating environmental laws.

The department's inspector general concluded that the $60 million "environmental survey program," intended to provide safeguards, was so flawed that it was useless.

Reactors at the Savannah River plant in South Carolina were shut down more than a year ago because of safety concerns.

More recently, production operation at a uranium processing plant in Fernald, Ohio, was halted after its manager said the plant could not be brought into compliance with health and safety regulations if its production program continued.

Agents of the FBI and the Environmental Protection Agency raided the Rocky Flats pluto-onium processing plant in Colorado and the Fernald uranium processing plant in Ohio this summer.

The federal government recently agreed to pay residents near the Fernald plant $73 million to settle a suit over claims they have been harmed by toxic releases.

Meanwhile, the department announced Monday that it had reached agreement with Westinghouse Electric Corp. in setting a schedule for restarting production reactors at Savannah River, the country's largest nuclear weapons plant.

Department officials declined comment on a report in The New York Times that Westinghouse, which operates the plant, had estimated the cost of repairing and restarting the three reactors at as much as $1.66 billion, or more than four times what had been previously estimated.

According to the Times, the higher cost estimates were provided June 26 in a confidential report from Westinghouse.

SPS elects Esler as chairman of board

AMARILLO — The Southwestern Public Service Board of Directors have elected Chief Executive Officer W.R. Esler to the additional post of chairman of the board, replacing Bert Ballengee, who is retired at the end of July.

The board also elected Chief Operating Officer Bill D. Helton to the additional post of president, formerly held by Esler.

Elected vice presidents were John McAfee, who had been group manager of corporate services, and David Wilks, who had been chief engineer.

Esler began his career with SPS in 1948 as an electrical engineer. As vice president of engineering and construction from 1976 to 1983, he played a key role in the company's successful plant-construction program of the mid 1970s and early 1980s, during which SPS brought on line five large coal-fueled generating units at costs that were approximately half the national average.

Esler was elected executive vice president in 1983, and president and chief operating officer in 1985. He was elected president and chief executive officer in January this year. He has been a member of the board of directors since 1986.

Esler is a registered professional engineer and earned his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering at the University of Texas. He is active in leadership positions in several civic and professional organizations.

Helton began his career with SPS in 1964 as a distribution design engineer and developed a broad background in many aspects of the company's operations. He has held positions in design engineering, industrial services, consumer services, industrial development and financial services.

He was elected financial vice president in 1983, vice president of corporate services in 1986 and executive vice president in 1987. He was elected to the additional post of chief operating officer in April this year.

Helton is a registered professional engineer and earned his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Texas Tech University. He, too, holds leadership positions in a variety of civic and professional organizations.

McAfee will serve as vice president of corporate services, directing the company's internal and external communications, communication production, office buildings and records, and purchasing.

McAfee began his career in 1973 as an electrical engineer. His background includes being a division operating engineer in New Mexico. In 1985, he started up the company's strategic planning department as its first manager. He was named group manager of general engineering in 1986 and group manager of corporate services in 1987.

McAfee is a registered professional engineer and holds bachelor's and master's degrees in electrical engineering from New Mexico State University. He is active in civic and professional organizations.

Wilks will serve as vice president of engineering and operations, assuming the duties of Senior Vice President of Engineering and Operations W.T. Seitz, who will retire at the end of this month.

Wilks began his career in 1977 as a design engineer in SPS's generation plant design department. He was named manager of strategic planning in 1986, executive assistant to the president in 1987 and group manager of general engineering later that year. He was named chief engineer in 1988.

Wilks is a registered professional engineer and holds a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Texas A&M University and a master's degree in administration and financial management from George Washington University. He, too, is active in civic and professional organizations.

The SPS Board of Directors also declared a regular quarterly dividend of 55 cents per share on common stock and regular quarterly dividends on all series of preferred stocks.

The dividend on common stock is payable Sept. 1, 1989, to holders of record at the close of business Aug. 15, 1989. Dividends on preferred stocks are payable Nov. 1, 1989, to holders of record at the close of business Oct. 20, 1989.

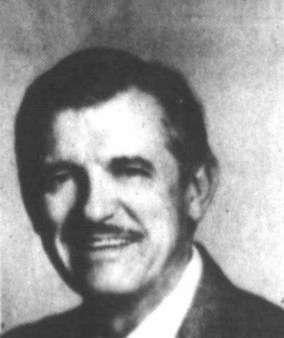

SPS is a regional electric utility that primarily provides electric service to a population of about 1 million people in a 52,000-square-mile area of the South Plains and Panhandle of Texas, eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the Oklahoma Panhandle and southwestern Kansas. Corporate headquarters is in Amarillo.

SHOOTING PAINS

If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excruciating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

Dr. Mark Ford

Dr. Louis Haydon

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

Poland takes a bold plunge to free-market economy today

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Price controls and meat rationing ended today and Poles braced for soaring food prices, the bitter cost of the government's bold, swift push toward a free-market economy.

Shoppers stood in lines for hours Monday to try to take advantage of the last day of artificially low food prices, but many came up empty-handed.

The Solidarity-led opposition movement opposed the abrupt lifting of price controls, arguing that it could plunge the country into turmoil. Consumer goods are scarce and annual inflation has topped 100 percent.

The new pricing policy takes effect a day after the Communist Party named the country's top law officer, Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, its candidate to lead the next government as prime minister.

Newly appointed party chief Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski, the outgoing prime minister, recommended Kiszczak to succeed him.

As party chief, Rakowski succeeded Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who parliament elected by a one-vote margin to the powerful new post of president last month.

Kiszczak, interior minister since 1981, is known as a Jaruzelski loyalist. He represented authorities in April talks with Solidarity founder Lech Walesa that resulted in the free trade union movement's reinstatement after a seven-year ban and Poland's freest elections in seven decades.

The Sejm, the lower house of parliament, was to discuss today the selection of a prime minister. Kiszczak's nomination must be formally submitted by Jaruzelski.

Kiszczak told The Associated Press Monday that if approved, he is not sure how long it would him take to form a government.

"It is not an easy task," he said. "You have to satisfy many sides. It may be a week or two."

Deputy Bronislaw Geremek, leader of the Solidarity lawmakers in parliament, said the opposition would vote against Kiszczak or abstain.

Solidarity lawmakers came under sharp criticism from some followers for allowing Jaruzelski to become president.

Geremek said the ruling Communist coalition has the votes to elect Kiszczak since it has a 299-161 advantage over Solidarity in the Sejm under rules that gave the opposition limited participation in the government.

Solidarity won all but one of the seats it was allowed to contest in June election and holds all but one seat in the 100-member Senate.

The union movement has called on Jaruzelski to let it form a new government. But the general has refused, saying Poland's Communist allies would disapprove.

Nervous consumers lined up for hours Monday to buy meat, sugar and other basic goods before price controls were lifted. Many said they did not know they would be able to afford the new prices.

"It's such a mess that one is really afraid to think what will happen next," said a Wroclaw shopper interviewed by state television.

The controversial "marketization" program, pushed by Rakowski and endorsed by the party, is designed to fight shortages by introducing free-market mechanisms.

Poland's mainly private farmers, who have cut back on profitless meat and grain sales to the state, are free to sell to whomever they want at whatever prices they can negotiate, as an incentive to increase production.

Government food subsidies are to remain stable, however, and state-owned stores and food processors are supposed to pass their added purchasing costs to consumers.

Residents in Warsaw line up for food Monday as they brace for soaring food costs expected under end of price controls. (AP Laserphoto)

Australia reports liver transplant

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A Japanese woman donated part of her liver to her dying son in what doctors today said was only the world's second such live-donor operation.

"It's unquestionably a medical breakthrough because no previous liver donor has been alive in Australia," said Princess Alexandra Hospital spokesman Chris Davidson.

The woman, Atsuko Tsuruyama, 29, had part of her liver removed and transplanted to her 17-month-old son, Ichirou, who had been given only months to live after being born without bile ducts.

"The significant thing is that the mother is a live donor and alive after the operation," said Davidson. "Kidney transplants are fairly routine these days, but a person only has one liver."

Doctors originally said the procedure, carried out on Friday, was the first of its kind in the world. But Davidson said word reached the hospital early today that a hospital in Brazil performed an similar operation last week.

He had no further information on the hospital involved but said doctors in Brazil used the same technique that was developed by Princess Alexandra surgeons.

Live-donor liver transplants were made possible by recent breakthroughs in which physicians have been able to split livers, the body's only regenerative organ.

Mrs. Tsuruyama was recovering today and reported "progressing well" after being released from intensive care. Her son also was reported progressing well in intensive care and was expected to be remain on the critical list for another 10 days, Davidson said.

He said the next few days were crucial to Ichirou's survival because this was when rejection of the organ or infection was most likely to occur.

Mrs. Tsuruyama is from Yatsushiro in Kumamoto Prefecture in southern Japan.

"I still have some abdominal pain, but am able to mobilize and am feeling better as the days go on," she told a news conference today.

Report: Micron eyes Texas site

AUSTIN (AP) — The Bryan-College Station area is among possible Texas sites being eyed by Micron Technology Inc., one of the nation's largest producers of computer memory chips, for a new manufacturing plant.

The Boise, Idaho-based chip maker has focused its attention on the Bryan-College Station area, although officials say other Texas cities also are being considered, the Austin American-Statesman reported Monday.

State travel records show that Micron officials met for two days in Bryan in May with William Lauderback, executive director of the Texas Department of Commerce, and other economic development officials.

Micron officials also have discussed the project with Austin development officials and representatives of other Texas cities, unnamed sources told the newspaper.

Micron is one of only three American companies to make dynamic random access memory chips, or DRAMs. The devices, which can hold millions of pieces of information on a half-inch piece of silicon, now are part of nearly all personal computers, facsimile machines and laser printers.

The United States led the world in DRAM production throughout the 1970s, but since has lost 90 percent of the market to Japanese companies. Currently, Micron, Texas Instruments Inc. and Motorola Inc. are the only U.S. companies to produce DRAMs in volume for resale.

Kip Bedard, a Micron spokesman, confirmed that the company has looked at Texas sites but declined further comment.

"We are still exploring the options on where the next facility will be built. We're in the early stages of planning," Bedard said.

Phil Brewer, the state Commerce Department's national business development director, also declined detailed comment.

"Things look to be going positively. It's a project that's in the mill and that's about all I can say. They have asked for extreme confidentiality on this project," he said.

Micron has 2,900 employees and reported annual sales last year of $300 million.

1989 Property Tax Rates in Pampa Independent School District

This notice concerns 1989 property tax rates for Pampa ISD. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$ 5,761.387
+ Last year's debt taxes	$ -0-
- Last year's total taxes	$ 5,761.387
- Last year's tax base	$ 598,822.045
= Last year's total tax rate	$ 0.96212 /$100

This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 5,761.387
- This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting taxes on new property)	$ 629,065.091
= This year's effective tax rate	$ 0.91586 /$100

- Sales tax adjustment rate	$ -0- /$100
= Effective tax rate	$ 0.91586 /$100

* 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$ 0.94333 /$100
---	-------------------

This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 5,761.387
This year's adjusted tax base	$ 629,065.091
This year's effective operating rate	$ 0.91586 /$100
1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$ 0.98912 /$100
This year's debt rate	$ -0- /$100
This year's rollback rate	$ 0.98912 /$100

- Sales tax adjustment rate	$ -0- /$100
- Rollback tax rate	$ 0.98912 /$100

SCHEDULE A: Unencumbered Fund Balances

The following balances will probably be left in the unit's property tax accounts at the end of the fiscal year. These balances are not encumbered by a corresponding debt obligation.

Type of Property Tax Fund	Balance
General Operating Fund	$1,958,834

SCHEDULE B: 19 89 Debts Service

The unit plans to pay the following amounts for long-term debts that are secured by property taxes. These amounts will be paid from property tax revenues (or additional sales tax revenues, if applicable).

Description of Debt	Principal or Contract Payment to be Paid	Interest to be Paid	Other Amounts to be Paid	Total Payment
None	None	None	None	None

Total required for 19 89 debt service	-0-
- Amount (if any) paid from funds listed in Schedule A	-0-
- Excess collections last year	-0-
= Total to be paid from taxes in 19 89	-0-
+ Amount added in anticipation that the unit will collect only 95 % of its taxes in 19 89	-0-
= Total Debt Service Levy	-0-

Camp offers fun for young cancer patients and parents

Dear God, Thank you for this nice new day, I'll laugh and eat and run and play. — Camp Alpie Daily Prayer.

Last year Susanna Holt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Holt, read an ad for counselors at a camp for children with cancer in Amarillo and talked Angela Harvey into going along with her.

This year Angela's mom, Kay and brother, Rankin, are also going to Camp Alpie. "It who have or have had cancer.

Their day begins at 7:30 a.m. until lights out at 10 p.m. Activities include swimming, crafts, storytelling, shaving cream ambushes, star gazing, a dance, bubble making, music, and lots of surprises.

Attending the camp from Pampa again this year are Michael and Destiny Engel, children of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Engel. Michael, 8, was diagnosed with a brain tumor in February, 1988. He has completed all of his chemo and radiation treatments and is looking forward to camp. Sister Destiny, 6, goes to camp as part of the sibling program — one brother or sister may accompany each camper. For many campers this is the first time they have been separated from their parents since the diagnosis.

Cherie Engel, Michael's mom, is going to Parent's Camp for the week. Believing that the parents of children who have cancer tend to make their own need for recreation and relaxation secondary, Camp Alpie offers parents of campers an opportunity to spend time at a hotel with activities planned on a relaxed basis. They have time to visit and share with other parents and are only permitted written communication with their children.

Parents go to see "Texas," the dinner theatre, are provided three meals a day, tour the Harrington Center, and Ronald McDonald house and last year visited the much talked about Roach home on the WTSU campus. Mrs. Roach was also a cancer victim.

Ashley Hicks, 7 — almost 8, of Amarillo, is the granddaughter of Ray and Retha Jordan. She was diagnosed with tumors and spent 7 months in a hospital in Memphis, Tenn. This will be her first camping experience at Camp Alpie.

Regina Bright, 14 year old daughter of Bobby and Patsy Bright, will be attending Camp Alpie for the first time. She was diagnosed in May with acute lymphatic leukemia.

Camp Alpie is named after the Alpha Delta Pi sorority mascot, the sorority being instrumental in bringing Camp Alpie to reality. Alpie is a very courageous lion who meets every day with a smile, being named after the first letter of the Greek alphabet, alpha, representing a new beginning.

"We are very grateful for the support from Pampa," says Betty Sterquell, president of the Camp Alpie board of directors.

Ann and Amy Heard are in charge of the storytelling activities. Jack and Carolyn Selby will changed Angela's life," says Kay. "The stories she had to tell after last year's experience made me want to get involved, too."

And get involved she did. Kay, fourth grade teacher at Travis Elementary, has been very busy as activities coordinator for the campers this year. Camp Alpie is August 6-11 for children 7 to 14 be providing an evening of music for the campers. Becky Norton of White Deer will supervise an afternoon of crafts. Linda Holt is organizing the Alpie Birthday Party. Chris Didway, 18, will serve as a counselor for the boys.

On Friday evening there will be an awards ceremony and every camper will be a winner.

"The main emphasis of the camp is fun," explains Kay. "We want the children to laugh," adding, "healing comes with laughter."

Mention the name of Dr. Charlene Holt, pediatric oncologist at Harrington Cancer Center, and Michael's eyes light up. She supervises the medical needs of the campers and her staff will be in continuous residence at the camp during the week.

A successful Camp Alpie demands community support, Sterquell says. Charitable foundations, educational institutions, corporations and private citizens sponsor the campers who participate at no cost. The average cost per camper is $250.

The Episcopal Church Conference Center just north of Amarillo is the site for Camp Alpie with dorms, dining hall, chapel, and recreational facilities.

Anyone interested in sponsoring a camper, donating materials, volunteering or informing organizers of eligible campers may call Sterquell at 358-2333 or 352-4965.

Michael Engel, 8, holds his Alpie Lion. On the first night of camp, as the campers return to their rooms, they are surprised to find an Alpie Lion sitting on their beds to keep them company through the night.

Pretty Women

by Kate Coscarelli

The naive, pretty women who follow their Air Force officer husbands to Tripoli after World War II are ignorant of the drama, hardships, and scandal that await them there. Bright and beautiful, three of the young women quickly become the best of friends: independent, fiery Samara, intelligent, quizzical Tess, sexy, gorgeous Chili. But when tragedy strikes and Sam's beloved husband is killed in a plane crash, when Tess loses her baby and Chili is found dead, their world explodes. Sam and Tess have to pick up the pieces and put them back together themselves.

Now, twenty years later, reunited by a letter that reveals the horrible truth about Chili's death, Sam and Tess must risk their futures to see that justice is done for a crime in an almost forgotten past. After enthralling millions of readers with Fame and Fortune, Perfect Order, & Living Color, Coscarelli has reached the zenith of her storytelling powers with Pretty Women.

Rightfully Mine

by Doris Mortman

The best-selling author of First Born tells the story of a woman's determination to remake her life, set against the high-stakes world of the great antiques dealers. When her husband leaves her, Ohio housewife Gaby Corcoft moves to New York, changes her name to Gabrielle Didier, and plunges into the world of historic auction houses. Dragged into a rivalry between the House of Lafitte and Castleton's, Gabrielle is also drawn toward Maximilian Richard, a man she knows may not be what he seems, even as she surrenders to his irresistible charm.

Russia House

by John Le Carre

The newest espionage thriller from the best-selling author of A Perfect Spy sweeps from Moscow and Leningrad in the third year of perestroika and glasnost to London to a small island off the coast of Maine that belongs to the CIA. The players include a beautiful Russian woman with a mission to mankind and a derelict English publisher who plays the saxophone, visits the Moscow Book Fair, and becomes the unlikely recipient of the most vital defense secrets to come out of the Soviet Union in years.

A Woman Named Jackie

by D. David Heymann

Nearly thirty years ago, she entered the White House and became the most famous woman in the world. But the most written about, photographed, sought-after woman of our time, Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis, remained an enigma ... until now.

A Woman Named Jackie is based on hundreds of interviews with Jackie's family, friends and acquaintances, many of whom speak on-the-record for the first time. C. David Heymann is the first writer to gain access to Jacqueline Kennedy's White House Social files. Under the Freedom of Information Act, he also uncovered thousands of pages of FBI, CIA and Secret Service material.

Also published for the first time are excerpts from an until-now unpublished manuscript by Pierre Salinger, President Kennedy's press secretary, and text from the prenuptial memo of Aristotle Onassis.

A Woman Named Jackie is the most comprehensive portrait of this complex woman ever published. It reveals the real Jackie, creative and intelligent, yet driven by ambition and the enjoyment of power. And it tells why and how she got that way.

It's About Time

by Bernal C. Payne Jr.

Where do you think you would be today if your parents had never met? Right. Nowhere. But what if you were there at the time they were destined to meet — and prevented the meeting? That's exactly what happens to sixteen-year-old Chris Davenport and his fifteen-year-old sister, Gail.

On December 24, 1983, Chris and Gail project themselves back twenty-eight years to that fateful day in their parents' lives. Thrilled, the teenagers show up to witness the meeting. But at the very moment that Mom and Dad are to come together, Gail gets in the way. As the moment passes, Chris and Gail are thrust into a state of limbo. If they can't make their parents meet and fall in love, they won't even die like human beings — they'll simply disappear.

In the course of their struggle, Chris and Gail experience first hand the world of 1955. They meet — and love — the grandparents they have never known. And most important, they come to know and understand their parents as young people — people not so very different from themselves.

Babies and bathwater do not mix without adult supervision

DEAR ABBY: I must reply to the letter in your column in which a Newark, N.J., writer stated:

"A child of 2 months can be placed in an inch of water in the bathtub, and taught to turn itself over, put its hands under its chest, and get its face out of the water so it can make a noise."

Abby, this is absolutely untrue, and impossible! I am an infant development specialist and have worked in the pediatric department of a university center for many years. The erroneous belief that infants can be taught to save their own lives in the bathtub or a pool is not true. A 2-month-old child face down in an inch of water for even a few seconds can lead to aspiration or even death!

Everyone who works in and around a pediatric emergency room or intensive care unit dreads the coming of summer because of all the accidents that can befall a child. Drownings and near-drownings, which can leave a child severely brain-damaged, are the most preventable.

Many of these accidents occur in backyard pools or at parties with many adults present, all of whom thought "someone else" was watching the child.

Every child deserves supervision around any kind of water, and it is the adult's job to provide that supervision.

CAREY E. HALSEY, LOYOLA UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER, MAYWOOD, ILL.

DEAR CAREY HALSEY: You are right, of course. I was too trusting and naive to have printed that letter without checking the facts as stated. Thanks for setting the record straight.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently widowed, and learned a lesson I would like you to pass on to friends of other widows or widowers.

On the evening of my first wedding anniversary without my husband of more than 50 years, I was invited to a dinner with some friends of many years. I had calls from my children that day remembering the day and chatting about memories they had of their dad. It was wonderful. I thought my friends were thinking of my anniversary also, and I looked forward to talking about many happy events we had shared.

Abby, nobody mentioned that it was my anniversary, so I did. There was dead silence for a moment, then the subject was quickly changed. I was very hurt, and pondered "why" for a long time afterward. Finally, I concluded that they assumed that mentioning it might make me sad. Then I recalled that I had also ignored the anniversaries of both family and friends — not knowing quite what to say.

Dear Abby

A few days later, another widowed friend had an anniversary. I called her first thing in the morning to let her know I was thinking of her. She was delighted. A few days later she wrote me a note saying my call was the only one she had received, and how much it had meant to her.

From now on, I will not shy away from such occasions. I hope you will think the lesson I learned worth passing on to your readers.

A WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: I do, and I thank you for your enlightened view. I learned something today.

Baltimore continues downhill slide

Orioles have lost 11 of last 12 games

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Right now, the American League East is a race in reverse for the Baltimore Orioles. And manager Frank Robinson still can't figure out what's going wrong after so much had gone right for most of the season.

"If there was an answer I'd be a millionaire," Robinson said of his team's slump, which has seen the Orioles lose 11 of the last 12 games. "I'd go to every team that's in a slump and sell it to them."

The Orioles' latest loss was a 9-6 defeat to the Boston Red Sox Monday night. That trimmed their lead to three games over Boston and Toronto in the ever-tightening AL East race.

With the season heading into August and the final two months, the first six teams in the AL East are separated by a mere 5½ games.

"There's only a two-game difference between second and fifth place," Cleveland outfielder Joe Carter said. "Whoever can get hot the first of August until the end of the season will win it. It's just that close."

Right now, Milwaukee's just as hot as anybody. The Brewers beat the Indians 6-1 for their ninth victory in 12 games and moved within four games of the slumping Orioles.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Toronto 6, New York 5; Seattle 6, California 5, and Oakland 3, Chicago 2.

Dwight Evans ignited a six-run Boston uprising in the second inning with a leadoff homer.

Veteran reliever Bob Stanley, 3-2, earned his first victory since May 19. Stanley bailed out starter Eric Hetzel as Baltimore closed to within 6-5 in the fourth, allowing one run on three hits in 3 2-3 innings for his 83rd relief victory, tying him with Bill Campbell for 28th place on the all-time list.

Stanley, who struck out three and walked one, gave way at the start of the eighth to Lee Smith, who gained his 14th save.

Brewers 6, Indians 1
Robin Yount hit his 13th home run of the season and 200th of his career and doubled as the Brewers handed the Indians their third straight loss.

Boston's Dwight Evans makes a sliding catch.

Milwaukee starter Teddy Higuera, 6-4, scattered five hits over six-plus innings, and Chuck Crim hurled two-hit ball over the final three innings for his fifth save.

Yount homered off Cleveland starter Scott Bailes, 4-6, in the second and the Brewers chased Bailes with a three-run sixth.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 5
Tony Fernandez led off the game with a home run and Lloyd Moseby's two-run homer broke a fifth-inning tie and sent the Blue Jays over the Yankees.

Starters Mike Flanagan of Toronto and Andy Hawkins of the Yankees each pitched 4 1-3 ineffective innings. Flanagan gave up five runs on eight hits and Hawkins, 12-10, was tagged for six runs on eight hits.

David Wells, 5-4, got the victory with 32-3 innings of one-hit relief.

Mariners 6, Angels 5
Pinch-hitter Jim Presley hit a two-run homer to cap a six-run rally in the eighth inning as the Mariners defeated the Angels.

Greg Minton entered in relief of starter Mike Witt with one on and none out in the eighth and allowed a walk and a single to load the bases. Mike Kingery hit a two-run single, and pinch-hitter Dave Cochrane followed one out later with a two-run double to bring the Mariners within 5-4.

Reliever Brian Harvey, 3-3, replaced Minton and was greeted by Presley's ninth home run.

Keith Comstock, 1-0, got the win with one inning of relief.

Athletics 3, White Sox 2
Tony Phillips hit his first home run since May 17, a two-run shot off Chicago relief ace Bobby Thigpen in the ninth inning.

Physicals for all female athletes are scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 10 at 12:30 p.m. at the athletic building.

All seventh and ninth grade athletes are required to take the physical, in addition to any new student-athletes in the Pampa Independent School District.

Any athlete that suffered an injury that required a doctor's treatment and rehabilitation in 1988-89 must take a physical.

For additional information, call 669-6722.

Bambinos bow out in SW Regionals

BROKEN BOW, Okla. — The Pampa All-Stars were eliminated by the Little Rock Junior Deputies 10-4 Monday in the Southwest Bambino Regionals.

Hank Gindorf had a triple and single and Gerald Reyes had a pair of singles to lead Pampa at the plate.

Others with hits were Duane Nickleberry, a double; Ivan Langley, Danny Frye, Dale Noble, Kyle Parnell and Albert Solis, one single each.

Little Rock scored four runs in the last inning to wrap up the win.

For the tournament, Gerald Reyes was Pampa's hitting star with six hits in seven at bats in three games.

Video-tapes were made on all three of Pampa's tournament games and can be purchased by the public. Contact Mike Frye or Jack Gindorf for more details.

Cowboys' center Tom Rafferty comes up blocking during Monday's practice.

Cowboys' Rafferty remains steadfast at center position

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — For 14 years they've been poking fun at Tom Rafferty.

Laugh as they might, he's still in the NFL and the merry-makers are elsewhere.

Rafferty, slow and small for a center, endures for the Dallas Cowboys like the star on the team helmet, two of the few things that haven't gone the way of the passenger pigeon at Valley Ranch.

Roger Staubach and Bob Breunig used to plot ways of making sport of Rafferty. The most famous incident occurred one year during the boredom of training camp.

They mixed dog food in a peanut bowl and asked Rafferty over for snacks. Naturally, he ate the dog food with the peanut mix. He was then nicknamed "Ruff, Ruff" by his hilarious teammates.

"I'll pay them back some day for it," said Rafferty whose patience knows no bounds.

Well, "Ruff, Ruff" has been rough for the Cowboys.

He hadn't missed a game in his career until last year when he got a severe thigh bruise. He took over as starting center in 1984 and has been there since. Rafferty played guard until then.

Under new coach Jimmy Johnson, Rafferty is trying to fend off younger players.

"They keep trying to get rid of me and I keep trying to fool 'em," Rafferty said. "I'm not big and strong but I don't make mistakes. I can still play."

Last year Rafferty was tested by new offensive line coach Jim Erkenbeck, noted for testing his players physically.

"Erkenbeck wanted a bunch of 300-pound 20-year-olds playing but I think I showed him you have to have experience at the position I play," Rafferty said. "You don't want mistakes at center. You want somebody steady in there and that's me."

Rafferty and defensive end Ed Jones are the only two Cowboys who have played in a Super Bowl.

"I think Johnson still knows big Ed and I can compete," Rafferty said. "We wouldn't be out here if they didn't think we could compete. The bottom line is to get the job done no how old you are. We have Super Bowl experience."

Rafferty said he was surprised by a 40-play scrimmage the second day in camp.

"The wake-up call came early," Rafferty said. "We're going to have a more aggressive team that's for sure. Johnson also wants us to cut down on mistakes. Mistakes are what killed us last year. Johnson has made the point that a big part of the game is mental. We beat ourselves a lot last year."

Rafferty said it was strange not having Tom Landry as the coach.

"I do miss Tom. I keep thinking I'll look up and see him."

Texas standouts on same side for all-star football game

DALLAS (AP) — Jessie Armstead and Tommy Maddox are headed to two different coasts to play college football, but tonight at Texas Stadium they will be teammates in the Texas Coaches Association high school all-star game.

Armstead, the nation's top line-backer prospect who is headed for Miami, and Maddox, Texas' top quarterback prospect who is going to UCLA, had expected to butt heads in Texas Stadium somewhere along the line. But the collision never came.

Maddox' L.D. Bell team was crushed by Lamar 39-0 in the first round of the state playoffs.

Meanwhile, Armstead led a defense that helped Dallas Carter stifle Converse Judson 31-14 to claim the Class 5A state title last December at Texas Stadium.

The early departure still stings Maddox.

"I try not to remember it too much," he said. "This time, I hope to give the people in Dallas-Fort Worth something better to remember me by. The people here have been really good to me."

Armstead, however, may be frustrated in the 7 p.m. contest.

Rules prohibit blitzing.

"It's going to be hard on me," he said. "I can't remember ever not blitzing."

Nevertheless, Armstead's teammates expect him to do well. Several thought he was short on modesty when they first met him, but they have learned to believe he can do what he claims.

"He talks a lot, but he backs it up," said Ennis' Matt Laudon.

The All-Star Game was last held at Texas Stadium in 1985. More than 8,400 fans saw the North win 14-7.

The 1988 game in Houston was marred by the death of Fort Worth official Wayne Kimberlin, who suffered a heart attack during the game.

The all-star contest is sponsored by Whataburger.

White Deer's Burns not quite finished with high school career

During his senior year at White Deer High School, Brady Burns was a two-way starter on the Bucks' 1988 state championship football team. He was voted first team All-State on offense and received a scholarship to play football at Eastern New Mexico University.

Enough to keep a guy in memories for a while, right?

Well, maybe. But Burns is not quite finished with his high school sports career. Tonight, he will match his talents against the best schoolboys in the state when the Whataburger All-Star Football game kicks off at Texas Stadium at 7 p.m.

Although the 6-2, 230-pound grinder earned all-state recognition as an offensive guard, he will play defensive tackle on the North squad.

The North is coached by Earl Miller of Midland Lee. Two other standouts from the Panhandle area, Setrick Dickens of Quanah and Tim Johnson of Amarillo Tascosa, are also scheduled to play for the North tonight.

For the sixth time in the past eight years, Texas finished first in the team standings at the National High School Finals Rodeo in Pueblo, Colo.

Jeff Chapman of Athens and Kelly Dyer Boone of West Columbia finished first in their respective events to pace Texas' run for the team trophy.

Chapman captured the national calf roping title with a combined time of 25.24 seconds over three performances. Boone compiled 438 points to emerge as the girls' national cutting champion. Gretchen Hilton of Olney finished third in breakaway roping with a total time of 10.8 over the three rounds.

More rodeo action is on tap this weekend at the Wheeler 4-H Junior Rodeo, set for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 3, 4 and 5, at the Wheeler Rodeo Arena.

Performances begin at 7 each night, and anyone under 20 years of age is eligible to compete.

Contestants age 9 and under will compete on Thursday night, and all other age divisions will ride on Friday and Saturday nights.

In the 5-and-under and 6-9 age groups, the athlete with the most points will receive an all-around buckle. Ralph Maynard spurs will go to the all-around winners in the 10-13 and 14-19 age brackets.

Money will be paid back to the top finishers in the 10-13 and 14-19 age groups.

Below is a list of age groupings and events for the rodeo:

5 and under: Stick horse barrel race, stick horse flag race, stick horse pole bending and goat ribbon race.

Ages 6-9: Calf riding, pole bending, barrel race, flag race and goat ribbon race.

Ages 10-13: Steer Riding, breakaway roping, barrel race, pole bending and flag race.

Ages 14-19: Bareback riding, bull riding, calf roping, ribbon roping, breakaway roping, pole bending and barrel race.

It was with mixed emotions that I watched Scott Fletcher lead the Chicago White Sox to a 3-2 victory over California Sunday.

With the score tied, 2-2, in the eighth, the former Ranger short-stop popped a sacrifice fly to put the Sox ahead, 3-2, and end league-leading California's 10-game home winning streak.

Fletcher was traded to Chicago Saturday for Harold Baines, who will fill the Rangers' beleaguered dh slot. I'm still not sure whether I like the trade or not.

Sure the Rangers need help — the team that opened the season like a dream finally woke up and fell seven games back. But I hope they haven't solved one problem and created another.

I don't doubt that Baines can turn the Rangers' dh stats around, but I wonder if Jeff Kunkel can handle the full-time short-stop duties. After being lauded by Doug Rader as the next Robin Yount in 1984, Kunkel bounced back and forth between the majors and minors for the next four years.

This is Kunkel's chance, probably his last, to make Arlington his permanent home.

Expensive No. 4

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Steve Walsh just signed a $4.1 million contract, but he may have to part with some of it to buy his old college number from punter Mike Saxon. Dallas Cowboys' coach Jimmy Johnson said Saxon told him that Walsh wanted to wear his Miami Hurricanes' No. 4, during his NFL career. Saxon said he wasn't all that attached to the number but would give it up for a price. "Let's see an arm and a leg would be $100,000, a leg would be $50,000 and maybe a fair price would be about $25,000," Saxon said.

1 Card of Thanks

NELL ZACHRY
Due to the loss of our wife, mother, grandmother, and friend, you opened your hearts to us and cards, flowers, and food you did send. It so touched our hearts when you showed that you cared, through each waking moment you continuously shared. Of all the ways that gratitude and thanks can be expressed, the little phrase "God Bless You" seems to be the very best. The Family of Nell Zachry: Jack Zachry, Dianne Meaker, Meryl Meaker, Lauri and Rusty Davis
