Astros Begin Skylab Experiment Program

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Man had his blood drawn in space today for the first time as physician-astronaut Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin took samples from all three Skylab crewman, starting a series of medical, earth resources and astronomy experiments that may bring many benefits to mankind.

"Be advised Joe just drew all three of us and that went very smoothly," Commander Charles Conrad Jr. told Mission Control after the spacemen awakened in their orbital lab an hour later than planned.

When the control center received no response on its first wakeup call, officials decided to let Conrad, Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz sleep as long as they wanted.

Later today, they planned a 10-minute news conference, televised to the Space Center, answering questions from reporters here on the two hectic days in which they salvaged the huge laboratory by erecting a makeshift sun shade to cool it down.

The drawing of blood samples, to be done four times during the four-week mission, is one element of an extensive medical program intended to determine how man is affected by long-term exposure to the space environment.

Kerwin has a dispensary aboard to carry out his duties as a high-flying physician.

The astronauts also ate in the space station today for the first time. This became known when Conrad reported "the commander just shaved and breakfast is cooking."

He referred to a special tray in which foods are heated.

Until now, the fourth day of the mission, the astronauts have dined in their Apollo ferry ship because of high heat in the laboratory.

But temperatures dropped another five degrees overnight and were around 90 degrees.

"We're starting to live up here now," Weitz commented, after asking "how many towels and wash cloths can we use a day?"

Just 24 hours before, the heat inside the lab registered an unlivable 125 degrees because a protective shield had ripped away during the launch of the Skylab on May 14.

The astronauts cooled down the sweltering station by raising a huge awning-like sun shade over the affected area.

Mission Control said the temperature was dropping at an average of more than one degree an hour and within a day or two it should be a livable 70 degrees.

Despite the still stifling heat in the 90s, Conrad, Kerwin and Weitz worked through the day in the two-story workshop area Sunday, checking and activating water, electrical and other systems.

Whenever it got too hot, they retreated to other rooms of the station, which are cooler because they have been shadowed from the sun, or to the Apollo ferry ship which carried the spacemen to a rendezvous with Skylab on Friday.

A televised view beamed to mission control showed the astronauts floating with ease from one point to another inside the huge weightless workshop, which is as large as a three-bedroom house.

But most of the time they went about their work seriously and with little conversation as they sought to catch up on the schedule drawn up for their planned 28-day mission aboard the craft, man's longest space mission.

Considering the crew's optimism, mission control passed up a flight plan that called for completion of workshop preparation today and experiment activation late in the day.

IN WATERGATE INVESTIGATION

Demos Challenge Claim On 'Sensitive Secrets'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the Democratic party and of the Senate Armed Services Committee are challenging President Nixon's contention that Watergate investigations threaten to expose sensitive national secrets.

And the nonpartisan Fair Campaign Practices Committee says the campaign tactics of Nixon's re-election committee set a 20-year low in dirty politics.

In San Jose, Costa Rica, meanwhile, an associate of financier Robert L. Vesco said he and Vesco would like to talk with special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox about "a missing link" in the case.

The associate, Canadian businessman Norman P. LeBlanc, would not elaborate on the link in talking with newsmen Sunday. But he said he and Vesco would like to meet Cox somewhere to tell their story.

Cox was not available for comment.

Vesco, former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans have been indicted in connection with an unreported $200,000 contribution to the 1972 Nixon campaign.

LeBlanc told newsmen that the Central Intelligence Agency is working clandestinely in Costa Rica to "get rid of" Vesco, LeBlanc and other businessmen connected with Vesco. He did not elaborate.

Chairman Robert S. Strauss of the Democratic National Committee said Sunday that Nixon is attempting to justify a partial Watergate coverup on the pretext of national security. But he predicted the public won't buy it.

"There's a big difference, and I think the public will understand the difference, between national security and Nixon's security," Strauss said in a television interview.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., acting chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said most of what the panel has uncovered so far has nothing to do with national security. The committee is investigating activities of the Central Intelligence Agency and other links between government security agents and the Watergate wiretapping.

"It seems to me that it's very important that we don't consider the effort to bug the office of the chairman of the Democratic National Committee as an effort to promote or defend national security," Symington said.

Also Sunday the Fair Campaign Practices Committee, a small, nonpartisan group that investigates complaints of dirty electioneering, issued a five-page report entitled "Dirty Politics—1972."

The committee said other investigations have tied the Nixon campaign not only to wiretapping and burglary, but to theft of documents, forgery, personal vilification, violations of campaign finance laws, spying and a coverup of apparent crimes.

Bombers Pound Positions

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — U.S. warplanes pounded positions of Cambodian insurgents along the Mekong River southeast of Phnom Penh today as another convoy sailed up the waterway from South Vietnam.

There were six oil tankers, two cargo ships and two ammunition barges in the convoy. It was expected in the Cambodian capital late today.

It is the eighth convoy to run the hazardous river passage in two months. The last one, which arrived on May 17, came under rocket attack, and one freighter was sunk and a tanker badly damaged by fire.

Cambodian intelligence reports say 8,000 enemy soldiers are concentrating around the government's river naval base at Neak Luong, 32 miles southeast of Phnom Penh. It is believed they will try to capture the base, which would further imperil the river convoys that bring the capital much of its fuel, ammunition and other supplies.

Meanwhile, a road convoy of 135 trucks and 100 trailers loaded with rice and fish arrived in Phnom Penh Sunday from Kompong Som, the country's seaport on the south coast. The road from the coast was cut for two days last week, but government forces reopened it Wednesday and another large truck convoy made the 147-mile run on Thursday.

Across the border, the South Vietnamese military command reported a rocket grenade attack on a ferry boat in the Mekong Delta on Sunday and said 11 persons were killed and 34 were wounded. The attack took place in An Xuyen province, 180 miles southwest of Saigon.

The attack on the ferry was one of 94 Communist violations of the cease-fire claimed by the South Vietnamese command.

Canada's chief peace observer in South Vietnam, Michel Gauvin, said in an interview that the fighting has increased in some areas of Vietnam since the cease-fire was proclaimed four months ago. He cited the Mekong Delta, in particular, and commented, "What you have is a civil war here, with all the dramatic and unfortunate facets of civil war."

Gauvin said cease-fire violations have been committed by both sides. But he implied that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were more to blame, saying, "I believe you find yourself with a party which is on the defensive and a party which is more or less on the offensive."

Hungary and Poland today agreed to discuss Canadian and Indonesian reports of North Vietnamese troop infiltration into South Vietnam. The action averted a Canadian walkout from the International Commission of Control and Supervision.

The commission had been virtually paralyzed for five days by the dispute. Hungary and Poland had refused to consider reports by the Canadians and Indonesians on the interrogation of North-Vietnamese prisoners because the Communist members took no part in the interrogation. They argued that the commission could function only on the principle of unanimity.

ON MEMORIAL DAY

Residents Visit Graves To Honor Loved Ones

By RAY BAXTER
Poppies and other blossoms used to beautify the graves of loved ones had muddy petals this morning as Pampans gathered for Memorial Day services at both Fairview and Memory Garden cemeteries.

The mud was the result of blowing dust that came into the Panhandle on the windy edge of a Missouri storm system, to be settled out by two hundredths of an inch of rain coating everything with a brown film.

Graves of service men were marked in ceremonies at both cemeteries in the early morning hours before Pampans joined the rest of the Panhandle in the various activities from barbecues to picnics to ball games that traditionally mark the day.

The dust was hardly stirred on downtown streets where business and public offices were closed for the holiday. About the city most grocery stores and service stations were open.

Memorial Day was inaugurated more than a century ago to honor the dead of the Civil War. When World War I created acres of graves of war dead both at home and on foreign soil, the occasion took on new meaning.

Traditionally, it had been celebrated on May 30 but it became one of the national holidays moved by legislation to the Monday nearest the 30th to create a three-day weekend holiday.

The dust and rain came into Pampa about mid-morning Sunday on the wings of winds gusting to 60 miles an hour later in the afternoon. The system had lost little of its fury or its dirt by the time it passed through Amarillo and reached the western boundary of the Texas Panhandle.

The weather created the greatest furor at Lake Meredith, where boaters filed the choppy waters aided by Ranger Patrol boats in reaching their original launching point and by rangers on shore in beaching their crafts.

Elsewhere about the state skies were clear and temperatures rather cool as a front moved across the state and out into the Gulf.

Sentimental Visit

SEOUL (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham has made a sentimental visit to a Korean congregation he first visited 22 years ago.

Graham recalled that war-ravaged Young Nak Presbyterian Church in Seoul was roofless and its preacher, the Rev. Han Kyung-chik, had no robe to wear during Graham's last visit.

"Now you have walls, and a roof, and nice floors," he told the congregation on Sunday.

Dr. Han, founder of the church, is chairman of the Billy Graham crusade in Korea scheduled for May 30-June 3, expected to draw hundreds of thousands of people.

Gasoline Rationing Confronts Motorist

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Most Memorial Day weekend motorists were able to find the gas they needed, but many others across the country were confronted with locked service stations or gasoline rationing.

A service station attendant in Oakland, Calif. who was rationing gas was shot and killed Saturday because he refused to sell to a man who had filled his tank on Friday, police said.

Witnesses told police the irate customer threatened the attendant, Henry Craig, 50, with a shotgun and then pulled the trigger when Craig apparently reached for a gun in his pocket. The motorist was booked for investigation of murder.

shortage, holiday motorists were putting an additional strain on supplies that are already faltering under increased demands.

"The problem for the average motorist is going to be turning into a station at the right place at the right time," said Gordon Larkin of the California Office of Emergency Services. "And I'm afraid right now, no one can tell him where that 'right' location is going to be."

"Frankly, I think any motorist who lets his tank get below half full, is foolish," Larkin added.

Gas was not scarce everywhere. "We've never had a shortage down here," the operator of a service station at West Yellowstone, Montana, said.

Average weekly refinement production is 45 million barrels of gas a week, according to the Treasury Department. American motorists use about 47 million barrels a week and the figure is expected to reach 49 million barrels during the summer.

AT LEAST 31 KILLED

Tornadoes, Winds Mar Weekend 'Celebrations'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tornadoes, heavy rains and strong winds marred Memorial Day weekend celebrations from Oklahoma to Florida, claiming at least 31 lives and causing millions of dollars in property damage.

Deaths were reported in eight states and destruction hit at least ten states as the storms hopped across the Midwest and South.

Authorities said hundreds of persons were injured and thousands of homes were either damaged or destroyed.

Seven of the victims were killed by twisters in Alabama, six died in two accidents in Missouri, five died in a tornado that struck Keefeton, Okla.

Death Toll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The highway death toll climbed to 350 today, the last day of the three-day holiday Memorial Day weekend.

High winds and rain-slick roads made travel hazardous as motorists began their journeys homeward.

The count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight local time today.

three were killed in tornadoes in Jonesboro, Ark.; three drowned in Kansas when a tornado struck their fishing boat, five were reported drowned in Tennessee, a Florida man was killed in a twister and one drowned in Laurel, Miss.

The tornadoes left little standing in their narrow and unpredictable path. They began in the Midwest Saturday afternoon and worked through the South and Southeast Sunday and early today.

State police in Alabama said at least 16 tornadoes touched down across the central and northern sections of the state Sunday night. Four of the state's seven deaths were reported in the tiny community of Brent. Police said more than 130 persons were injured.

An estimated 150 homes were destroyed or damaged Saturday evening at Keefeton, a community of 400 in eastern Oklahoma. Four members of one family — a man, his wife and two of their daughters — were killed in the storm, and another daughter was hospitalized in critical condition. A fifth Keefeton resident was among the dead.

In West Memphis, Tenn., 17 members of the Clovis Williams family were inside their four-room home when it collapsed under a tornado's force.

Two Persons Die In Highway Crash

Two persons died at 5 a.m. Sunday when their automobile was in collision with a semi-tractor truck at the intersection of Interstate 40 and State Highway 70 east of Groom.

Pronounced dead at the scene of the accident by Justice of the Peace Ed Anderson of Pampa were Burton N. Hagerty, 26, and his wife, Beverly Carol, 27, both of Morrisville, Pa.

State Highway patrolmen said Mrs. Hagerty was driving the couple's westbound car when it collided with the truck driven by Carl W. McClurg, 435 Jeff St., Pampa.

McClurg and four other persons riding in the semi-tractor cab with him were uninjured. The truck was owned by the Norman Bentley

Livestock Hauling Co. of Pampa. According to Justice of the Peace Anderson, McClurg said he was unfamiliar with the intersection and did not see the stop sign.

Officers said McClurg told them he was southbound on SH 70 and locked his brakes when he approached the intersection, but skidded into the path of the oncoming car.

Highway patrolmen said the car driven by Mrs. Hagerty crashed into the side of the truck. Bodies of the two accident victims were sent back to Pennsylvania for funeral services after local arrangements by the Schooler-Gordon funeral directors of Amarillo.

IT'S NO CIRCUS

Hearings Lack Flamboyancy

By LEE BYRD

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — He waited his moment, giving the over-capacity crowd and dozens of newsmen time to settle, and then he stood and joined the ranks of those who had risen before in this room to seek that most splendid of miseries.

"My name is Ed Kelley," he said, "and I'm announcing my candidacy for president of the United States."

Now, as it happens, there were three things curious about that.

First, unlike the times when Sen. John F. Kennedy, Eugene McCarthy, Robert F. Kennedy and Fred Harris had broken such news in the Caucus Room, Kelley's announcement ranks as the least-awaited ever.

Second, he made it from a semi-horizontal position, owing to the fact that police were pulling him out the door.

Third, the room was booked at the time by the Senate Watergate committee.

After five days of hearings, a dozen witnesses, hundreds of questions and a flurry of related developments on the outside, there have been no bombastic words from either the four Democrats or the three Republicans who are conducting the congressional probe.

Indeed, those who anticipated a televised circus, have found instead an atmosphere sometimes more akin to a seminar on archeology—a subject, incidentally, upon which Chief Counsel Samuel Dash is an expert by hobby. And he obviously believes in giving everybody a chance to dig.

No one, in fact, has emerged as a dominant personality on the committee's side of the table, occupied by Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr. and Sens. Howard Baker, Herman E. Talmadge, Daniel K. Inouye, Joseph M. Montoya, Edward U. Gurney and Lowell P. Weicker.

Each, however, is possessed of his own particular style. Baker, 47, puts his questions in a polished, border-state drawl. His increased exposure, and evident charisma, could make the Tennessee senator a prospect for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination.

Except for Ervin's occasional excursions into Bible-quoting and down-home philosophy, it is Baker who generally triggers what little levity there is.

Talmadge, a Georgia Democrat, is a man who wastes little time. His questions are succinct and, unlike some others, rarely repetitious.

Inouye, of Hawaii, is a stern questioner, often confronting the witness with a frown and looking him straight in the eye. Weicker sometimes eagerly pursues a line of questioning long past the 10-minute limit, sometimes looks bored.

And boredom, in fact, may creep into these hearings, at least so long as the committee continues a course aimed at credibility rather than drama.

But there are disclosures yet to come, and there should be plenty of excitement ahead without the intrusion of another Ed Kelley.

Lobby Control Bill Nears Compromise

AUSTIN (AP) — Whether home town voters can wine and dine their legislators while talking about legislation was the big hang-up in the lobby control compromise talks today.

An 8:30 a.m. meeting of the 10-man House-Senate negotiating team was called to make a final decision on one single provision that kept them from voting after two long sessions Sunday.

The trouble-making provision, at least to some Senators, provides that persons contacting their own senators and representatives on legislative matters must register as lobbyists if they spend more than $150 a quarter in the effort.

Every person registered must file reports monthly during a legislative session and quarterly otherwise.

The registration provisions would not include working news reporters; persons who testify before legislative committees as expert witnesses or voters who contact their own senator or representative and do not spend more than $150 a quarter.

Soviet Pilot Seeks Asylum

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A 22-year-old Soviet pilot whose jet fighter crashed in West Germany has asked for political asylum, informed sources said today.

In another border incident, a 20-year-old East German soldier crossed the mined border Sunday night and asked for political asylum, customs officials in Brunswick reported.

The last reported defection by a Soviet soldier to West Germany was in September 1969, when a 19-year-old Russian from a unit stationed in East Germany crossed the border near Helmstedt and asked for asylum. He said he was disillusioned with the military and political climate in Russia.

The last known Soviet crash in a western part of Germany occurred not in West Germany but in West Berlin. It was in 1966, when two Soviet pilots were killed in a YAK28 that crashed near Spandau Prison, where Rudolf Hess is held.

The crash Sunday occurred shortly before noon in bright sunshine. Witnesses reported the pilot ejected at an altitude of only about 300 feet, but a British Royal Air Force doctor who examined him pronounced him "fully fit."

The Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, reported that Heath "now knows the name of a third minister who is alleged to figure in the call girls scandal."

The People, a Sunday newspaper, said it had gotten the name of the third man from Norma Levy, the 26-year-old call girl whose customers included Heath's disgraced air force minister, Lord Lambton. The woman reportedly said the man visited her about three times and paid up to $125 each time.

Mrs. Levy said a fourth member of the government might have been one of her customers also. The People reported, but she would have to see a photograph of the man before she could be sure of the identification.

Mrs. Levy was reported in hiding in Morocco, and police sources said Scotland-Yard detectives were going to fly there to interview her.

Following newspaper reports of a sex-and-security scandal in high government circles, Lambton and the government leader of the House of Lords, Lord Jellicoe, resigned last week with the admission that they had "casual affairs" with call girls.

There was widespread newspaper speculation then that other prominent officials were involved, but Heath told the House of Commons on Thursday that there were no grounds for supposing this. Hanging over the whole scandal is the fear that those involved might have been blackmailed for defense secrets. Heath has ordered a special inquiry into this aspect.

Connally Denies ITT Case Link

NEW YORK (AP) — White House aide John B. Connally says he did not "personally intervene" in behalf of International Telephone and Telegraph's successful effort in 1971 to retain the Hartford Fire Insurance Co.

The Hartford, Conn., court reported Saturday that ITT approached the former Treasury Secretary in April 1971 for help in a federal antitrust suit against ITT. A settlement allowed ITT to keep Hartford Fire.

The court also reported that the Securities and Exchange Commission had unearthed "politically sensitive" memoranda in which a high ITT official thanked Connally for helping obtain a delay in the case that helped the company reach the settlement.

The newspaper quoted a memo from an ITT vice president, William R. Merriam, to Connally, in which Connally's aid was described as "most instrumental" in obtaining the delay.

Asked about the newspaper report, Connally, now a special adviser to President Nixon, said, "I don't believe that's true. I didn't personally intercede."

'Reform' Session Ends Today

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A 140-day legislative session, in which "reform" was both a rallying cry and a subject of division, shuts down tonight at midnight.

Only one of Speaker Price Daniel Jr.'s remaining live "reform" bills, one designed to show where lobbyists get their money and how they spend it, was still in negotiations.

House-Senate conferees on the lobby measure planned to meet again today in another effort to work out the big hang-up. Should individuals who spend more than $150 in a three-month period to influence their own senators and representatives have to register as lobbyists and report their expenditures, House negotiators said. "Yes," while senators said, "No."

Compromises were reached by negotiating committees Sunday on four major issues: public school finance, reduction of penalties for marijuana possession, the death penalty and a code of ethics, including financial disclosure, for legislators and other state officials.

The ethics issue sometimes appeared in doubt but Daniel got at least part of what he wanted, chiefly a requirement that legislators, elected state officials and key state agency policy makers disclose their investments and sources of income.

Only two of Daniel's bills failed altogether. Senators killed outright a bill prohibiting conference committees from slipping new material into bills that were supposed to be just compromises of differences between the House and Senate. The restriction, however, is contained in legislative rules.

Atty. Gen. John Hill declared unconstitutional a bill limiting speakers to single terms—a measure designed to stop some of the trade-outs and head-knocking that some legislators contend had characterized Mutscher's administration.

Four "reform" bills received final passage before today. They would:

—Make it a crime for speaker candidates or their minions to promise representatives that things will happen to bills if they pledge their votes—or make threats if they don't.

—Require speaker candidates to make periodic reports of their contributions and expenditures, something that had been a closely kept secret before Daniel's race.

—Extend the open meetings requirement to the legislature and its committees—including investigating committees that traditionally hold some of their sessions in closed.

—Require more state and local government records to be available for public inspection.

Daniel never could sell the Senate, however, on his idea that an ethics commission should be created to police public officials' potential conflicts, lobby behavior and campaign finance practices.

Yorty Raises Race Issue On Opponent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Labeling his opponent "a sort of black nationalist," incumbent Mayor Sam Yorty says Los Angeles may be ready to elect a Negro as mayor, but not his challenger this year.

Yorty, 63, bids for a fourth term Tuesday against Thomas Bradley, a former policeman and 10-year veteran of the city council. Bradley, 55, is black.

Race has been an issue in the bitter spring campaign, just as it was four years ago when the same two men ran and Yorty won with 53.2 per cent of the vote.

The candidates faced each other for the final time Saturday night in the last of a series of debates that frequently degenerated into name-calling matches.

Yorty was asked if the three million residents of the nation's third largest city were ready to have a black man as their mayor.

In the raspy twang of his native Nebraska, the self-styled "maverick mayor" replied. "It may be ready for a black mayor, but I don't think it is ready for Tom Bradley and the people behind him."

In the waning weeks of the campaign, Yorty claimed that Bradley was "a radical left-winger" and "sort of a black nationalist."

Bradley replied by accusing Yorty of conducting "the most scurrilous racist appeal I have ever seen in the city of Los Angeles."

Of Crocodiles, Walking And Anglo-American Love

By RALPH NOVAK
Given the state of the world today and given that very few people in the world seem to like crocodiles, Americans or taking long walks, this is a good time to be thankful for:

- The World Wildlife Fund, which has just launched a save-the-crocodiles campaign.
- To most people, crocodiles are just long scaly beasts that slither off banks of rivers in old jungle movies in futile attempts to devour Johnny Weismuller's girl friend. But the Fund points out that they are "the last survivors of the dinosaurs and flying reptiles which dominated the earth for over 100 million years."

Now 15 of the 21 species of crocodile are seriously threatened, according to a report issued jointly by the Wildlife Fund and the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources.

So the Fund, headquartered in Morges, Switzerland, has begun a program to create sanctuaries for crocodiles and to limit what it calls "the uncontrolled killing of these animals for the leather trade."

The Fund, which previously started a program to save the relatively lovable tiger, may have more trouble selling people on protecting the crocodile. But as the Fund says, "The crocodilians represent a valuable national asset of many countries, both as a tourist attraction and as a source of high-grade leather available for exploitation on a strictly limited and rational basis."

There is still hope left for a world where someone wants to save the crocodiles.

- The Gestetner Corporation, which is distributing a reprint of a recent article from the British satirist magazine, "Punch," on "Fifty Reasons for Loving Americans."

A few of the 50 reasons are that Americans:

- Excel at introducing people and at remembering the names of those introduced to them.
- Lead a rich full life without stringing letters after their names, or calling each other "esquire" or "your grace."
- Introduced the supermarket, making it unnecessary to discuss the weather with a dozen different shopkeepers.
- Have universities which are not ashamed to teach salesmanship and ice cream manufacture.
- Have built in the desert a city of sin called Las Vegas which they maintain as an Awful Warning to themselves and to all mankind.

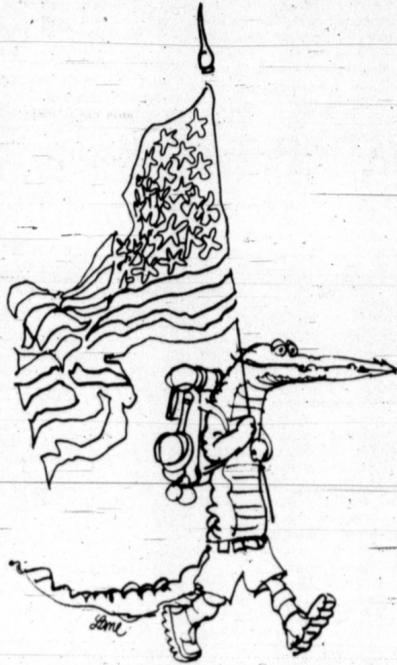

There is also some hope left for a world that wants to save its Americans.

- The American Freedom from Hunger Foundation (AFFHF), which has organized its sixth annual nationwide series of "Walks for Development."

The AFFHF walks have raised $12 million in their first five years for anti-poverty and hunger-fighting projects in the United States and overseas. This year a million people, most of them teen-agers, pledged to take part, most of them during the weekend of May 5 and 6.

Local AFFHF committees in 200 communities, including Chicago, Buffalo, Milwaukee, St. Louis and Denver, organize the walks and fund distribution, with participants drafting "sponsors" to make a small contribution for each mile a walker covers.

Since the AFFHF was formed in 1961 at the suggestion of President Kennedy, money has been raised for self-help projects, ranging from a rural farm project in Dahomey to a nutrition training center in San Diego.

So Long, Friendship!

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Do you have too many friends?
Most of us feel we could use a few more. But now and then we meet someone who, perhaps because of a gathering feeling of misanthropy or because he has too many credit cards, decides his garden of friendship has become overcrowded and is threatening to choke him with palship.

His solution is simple. All he has to do is weed out that garden.

How? Well, one way is to put a burr in the glad hand of his fellowship.

Here are a few time-tested remarks that have broken up many lifelong friendships.

"I don't see why you should be having any trouble with your teen-age children. Our two are perfectly well-behaved. Often, in cases like yours, they come about because the parents simply don't make the necessary effort to understand their children."

"I could lend you the money, but I'm not going to because I am convinced I'd be doing you more harm than good."

"If I were you, buddy, I'd start right now looking for another place to hang my hat. The boss has tipped me confidentially that he wants me to take over your job next month."

"Your wife wants me to run off with her, but I've decided against it. When have you ever done that big a favor for me?"

"My mother-in-law is staying with us for a month. What weekend can we park the old bag with you? She'd love to show you her album of childhood pictures of all the presidents. The only one missing is Millard Fillmore."

"I'd love to lend you my new car in a year or so, Joe. But right now I don't want to get any dents in it."

"I didn't insinuate that you cheated during any of the poker games we've been playing at your house. I just said I'd never heard of anyone winning so consistently who didn't use marked cards. What's wrong about saying that?"

"I guess our families won't be seeing so much of each other from now on. Jim My wife just inherited some money. It isn't a lot—but just enough so that my wife feels we should move up a little socially."

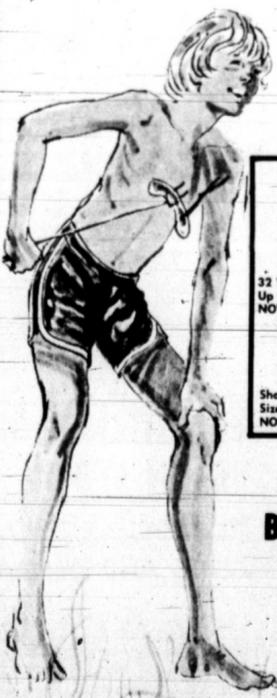

"Now and then I get the feeling I'd rather have you as an enemy than a friend. Fred. That way I'd know for sure just where you stood."

"Yes, we ought to get together for a lunch as soon as possible, old boy. My calendar is pretty tight through August 1975. But call me up anytime after that, and we'll see if we can't find a day when we're both free."

"Glad to hear your pretty daughter married so well. Whatever happened to the hamely one—the one who looks like your side of the family?"

Ward's Aims To Save Energy, Money

Product tags, signs and brochures are helping customers of Montgomery Ward's Pampa store learn how to save energy and money.

As part of a nationwide "Energy Saving Action" program initiated by Wards, red, white and blue signs have been placed on insulated draperies, microwave ovens, insulation, ventilating equipment and automotive products which can help resolve the energy crisis. Signs will be added to other energy saving products as well.

As an example, Jim Stallings, local store manager, points out that according to the Electric Energy Association in New York, for a family of four a microwave oven used only 300 kilowatt annually compared to 1,175 for a conventional electric oven. Operating costs are $9 compared with $35.35 (based on 3 cents per kilowatt).

Large capacity washers and dryers can handle in one load cycle what small washers must do in two loads. This means real savings in the gas or electricity required for power and hot water," Stallings said.

He also stated American housewives can "save billions of kilowatts daily, by using appliances prudently and by shopping with more discrimination."

To help consumers do just that, the Pampa store is distributing brochures listing 65 tips on how homeowners can "Save Energy, Save Money."

For example, air conditioners need not operate at the maximum setting to achieve efficient cooling. If all air conditioners were set at 75 degrees, instead of the popular 72-degree setting, they would provide adequate cooling while conserving 15 per cent in electric consumption.

For each degree we cool below 75 degrees we expand about five per cent more energy," Stallings said.

Drapes and shades have a major effect on energy conservation. If left open during sunlight hours, 19 per cent more energy is required to cool a home.

In homes and apartments, Stallings recommends unplugging coffee pots when not in use, instead of letting them bubble away. He advises housewives to turn off the iron or the hair dryer when the phone or door bell rings. Don't let the television, stereo or radio play to an empty room.

Proper maintenance increase the serviceable life of products, as well as their efficiency. The Energy Saving Action booklet recommends keeping the filter clean in a dryer, the furnace or an air conditioner to improve performance, reduce energy requirements and eliminate the need for many service calls.

Ignoring maintenance can be expensive as well as wasteful. According to Stallings, one drop of hot water per second from a leaky faucet can waste 650 gallons of hot water annually.

And the problem can usually be eliminated with an inexpensive washer you can install yourself," he said.

The Pampa store manager emphasized that clean air filters, fuel pumps and spark plugs, properly adjusted carburetor and distributors will substantially increase gas mileage for cars, reduce costs and air pollution.

Wards has also introduced an automotive booklet which contains many energy and money saving tips. These are being distributed by the company's more than 450 auto service centers nationwide.

including Pampa. The company itself is trying to cut down on its own use of energy. In a letter going to all retail store managers, Ward President, Edward S. Donnell, has urged action by every location.

"Inspection of our furnaces, air conditioning units and water heaters should be increased to insure that they are operating efficiently," Donnell stated among eight suggestions listed in the letter.

"In all of our locations we should maintain a temperature of 75 degrees in summer instead of 72 and we should maintain a 72 degree level in winter as well," Donnell explained.

Stallings said Wards is the first major retailer to take action on the energy crisis and the company hopes others will join in the fight to conserve energy.

"We may not have the whole answer," Stallings stated, "but if each of us — consumers, retailers and manufacturers — pitch in, the job will get done."

Ex-Prisoners Are Trained In Farming

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — While thugs and robbers still suffer brutal punishments in many parts of Africa, Somalia, which already provides training and rehabilitation in prison, has taken another step forward with "after prison farm cooperatives."

At Lanta-bur, around 37 miles west of Mogadishu on the Shebelle river, 600 young ex-prisoners are learning farming. An initial squad of 140 set up a cooperative farm on a voluntary basis in the vicinity of the prison early last year after completing their sentences.

The Ministry of Agriculture provided them with a stretch of wild forest land, bulldozers, food, seed and know-how. More than 60 of them quit within the first three months, but 80 ex-convicts decided to put up with the hardships and make farming their role in society.

The first yield of the cooperative was around $6,300 and about 250 acres are now under cultivation. The cooperative provides tomatoes for a small processing factory nearby.

Wedding should be what bride chooses

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-H. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our 22-year-old college graduate-daughter is being married soon, and I wonder how far to let her go with the wedding arrangements.

She wants to get married in a public park. [How can you ask people to stand in a park? What if it rains?]

She doesn't plan on having ushers or bridesmaids. She says since there will be no aisle to walk down it would be pointless. She wants a justice of the peace instead of a minister. My husband's people are Catholic, and mine are Episcopalians. Our daughter was brought up Episcopalian, but she doesn't believe in anything. The young man she's marrying is not committed to any religion either. Wouldn't relatives who believe in something criticize us for having a wedding without a minister?

We agreed to foot the bill for this wedding and don't want to appear ridiculous, which we probably will if we go along with what she wants. Or shouldn't we worry about what people will think?

OLD SCHOOL MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: It's your daughter's wedding, and she should have the kind of wedding she and her fiance want. If it rains, those without umbrellas will get wet. If relatives who "believe in something" criticize you for having a justice of the peace, tell them it was your daughter's choice. [At least she'll be legally wed, and lots of parents would settle for that.] Paying for the wedding doesn't give you the right to do it your way. And if you worry about what people will think, you'll waste a lot of energy.

DEAR ABBY: Why would a man check up on his wife to be sure he knows exactly where she is every minute? Do you think he suspects that she's playing around? CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Not necessarily. Maybe he just wants to know where SHE is while HE'S playing around.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to that lady who said, "A strong wife and mother is the source of a strong husband, children, and country."

I am a 14-year-old girl, and I take that to mean that if a woman stays home and mops the floors and scrubs the toilet bowls she is doing the most for her husband, children, and country.

Sorry, but I don't agree with that at all. Some people will say, "But what will happen to the children if the mother works outside the home?"

Well, let me answer that. My mother works outside the home. She doesn't have to because my father makes a good living. She works because she wants to, and I'm not suffering because of it. She fixes a good breakfast in the morning for us, and a good supper at night. She helps me with my problems, and she still has time to go shopping with me on Saturdays, and we have all day Sunday together.

I would like to get married and raise a family and work outside my home, too. I do not plan on just staying home and mopping floors and scrubbing toilet bowls. Peace!

TUESDAY, MAY 29

Your birthday today:

Brings in the closing phases of preparation that directs you toward your life goals. You put aside needless burdens this year. Relationships are free and easy. Today's natives have wanderlust, constant interest in people from distant places.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Adopt an easy schedule today—there are extras to fill all gaps. Budgets and reserve funds need conservative revisions.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Excitement is where you create it, tho this is not productive. Let friends do their own deeds in peace. You'll be glad tomorrow.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Goal changes take more than casual drift, are worth the effort. Home affairs require imagination.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: There's much to be gained by personal independence. Check out your household. Plan improvement. Work conditions ease a bit.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Routine should characterize practically all your current program. Be pleased with even slow progress.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You have basically calm working conditions, and in return you must do-it-yourself, while sharing results.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You're off dead-center and merrily on your way. Test a new idea and revise it now if needed.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Select for quality, then for urgency; disencumber yourself of unneeded possessions. See life as a clear passage ahead.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Laziness and carelessness are your main temptations. It's easy to scramble things in an unthinking moment. Besides this, you may make progress.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Check out any reasonable-sounding offer. Perhaps acquaintances have ideas that balance with yours.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Home life thrives. Career-building creeps at slow pace. Associates try to talk you into an extensive scheme.

...Receive Scholarships

Ballet Scholarships Given Local Dancers

Jeanne Willingham, director of the Beaux Arts Dance Studio, has recently received confirmation of ballet scholarships received by two of her students Angela Day and Dalton Stewart. Both are charter members of the Pampa Civic Ballet.

Miss Angela Day, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.R. Day, 1115 Mary Ellen, who has been studying for the past 10 years with Mrs. Willingham, has received a renewal of her local scholarship from the School of American Ballet in New York City this summer.

She has previously received scholarships from the Briensky Saratoga Ballet Center, Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, New York and the Bill Martin-Viscount Workshop in Fort Worth.

Dalton Stewart, a 1973 graduate of Pampa High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Stewart of White Deer. He has been a student of Jeanne Willingham for four years.

Stewart has received a scholarship from the San Francisco Ballet School in California. Last summer he studied at the American Ballet Theatre School in New York where he also had a scholarship. He has previously received scholarships from TCU and the Bill Martin-Viscount Workshop in Fort Worth. He has also had a local scholarship from the School of American Ballet in New York through a Ford Foundation Grant.

Dalton Stewart and Viola Parsley, a former student of Jeanne Willingham and also a winner of a local Ford Scholarship will be appearing this summer in "Texas" the outdoor musical drama in Palo Duro Canyon.

The students of Jeanne Willingham will appear in the school's 25th Anniversary Revue tonight at the Brown Memorial Auditorium. Curtain time is 7:30 p.m. Miss Day and Stewart will both be dancing leading roles in the Ballet "Les Sylphides" as well as other numbers. They recently appeared as Guest Artists in the Linda Germany Dance Recital in White Deer.

Credit Card Conveniences

Credit cards offer several advantages, but they also can create financial problems.

Miss Jimmie Lou Waincott, county Extension agent, termed the credit card convenient—but a temptation to overspend.

Its greatest advantage is convenience. Using credit cards, travelers and consumers don't have to carry much cash. In fact, if several cards are used, a person can do almost anything without exchanging any currency.

Users also can take advantage of bargains—even if he or she doesn't have cash on hand at the time.

Most credit card companies don't charge interest if bills are promptly paid. However, if payments are "stretched out" over a long period of time, interest charges will increase.

As an added bonus, family bookkeeping is simplified. Companies itemize monthly statements, so the family sees exactly where the money went.

On the negative side, some people tend to overspend when using credit cards—which can seriously affect their budgets, the agent concluded.

Make sure your cakes, cookies and quick breads are completely cool before storing them.

On-Going Learning Keeps Woman Corrections Expert Involved

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dark-haired Laurel Rans is a consultant in corrections.

The pretty 32-year-old spent five years as a superintendent of the Iowa Women's Reformatory in Rockwell City.

Her interest in the process of change in corrections is the product of on-going learning, she said.

"Corrections is making tremendous strides through hard work by competent people. They are bringing about change as fast as there is support from society to do it. Corrections is becoming a learning environment," she added.

"I didn't decide to go into corrections work," said the member of the criminal justice group of Arthur D. Little, Inc.

"It was decided for me. I had just gotten my master's degree and was looking at hospital administration when a professor recommended that I take a look at Iowa. I had no corrections background.

"But it was no problem. I spent the first couple of years studying management. My background had not told me how to organize a healthy environment for groups of people in order to bring about behavioral change. I was of the one-on-one school. But I learned," she added.

In the beginning, Miss Rans said it was a definite advantage to work in an open institution with no wall or fence and no history of punitive lockup structure. "I toured 19 states to see federal and state correctional institutions and I learned that compared to other places, Iowa wasn't so bad," she said.

Extending the confines of the prison into the community was important in rehabilitation, she added. Halfway houses and work release programs were her first goals.

"Each year we doubled the number of people in our work release program and in separate training programs, and we maintained the same level of escapes, about 5 per cent," Miss Rans said.

She thinks that the way prisons are structured takes money out of our pockets, because the atmosphere breeds dependency.

"If we create an environment where an individual can develop, a tremendous amount can be done within the inherent limits of a prison.

"This country created high security systems without any screening systems to make sure only dangerous people were in them," she added. "Of the people institutionalized, 80 per cent don't need to be in high security but there is no alternative."

The most expensive prison sentence is death, she said. Next is life and then, institutionalization. Work release costs about 25 per cent of the cost of institutionalization and probation is one tenth of the cost.

"Think what you could do for salaries with more money," she person who broke it had to pay. The individual who slashed her wrists had to pay the doctor bill. Broken windows and slashed wrists became rare," she added.

Miss Rans speaks often of prison inmates as "clients" and she still receives letters from some of the women.

"You have to have a life of your own, away from the system," she said.

A different life is one reason she became a consultant on criminal justice.

She said the massive penal institution as we know it is almost impossible to manage and run, given present funding.

"We must identify present and future needs of corrections systems and provide planning on cost factors, alternatives and management.

"And we want to look at county jails. They're a filter process in which 80 to 90 per cent of all the people who ever go to prison enter. If we can divert some of the people at that level, we might prevent second-time offenders," she said.

Juvenile problems are another area which Miss Rans believes needs extensive study. Juvenile-offenders should not be placed in jail with adults, she said.

"Corrections people must also be retained in the system without growing out of it. We have to be aware of the needs of all kinds of people. After all, we're all struggling to create a framework of reference in which everybody can grow."

THE ORE that made a boom town is still there. But times and mining techniques change, and today "The Richest Hill on Earth" has become a hole in the ground.

Copper Is Life and Death for Butte

By TOM TIEDE

BUTTE, Mont. (NEA) — Every day at noon a dynamite blast goes off here which rattles windows, cracks ceilings, wakes up babies — and disintegrates into pollution another chunk of the metropolitan area.

But does anyone complain?

No one complains. Sigh: Anaconda giveth and Anaconda taketh away.

The famed mining company which years ago put Butte on the map, now threatens to wipe it off. After more than a century of digging away the outskirts of town, Anaconda's operation is now digging away the town itself. Already one suburb of Butte has disappeared. Residents along some streets can actually see the earth disappearing in front of their homes. Right now Anaconda is within four blocks of the business district — and tomorrow?

Tomorrow, says longtime Butte resident Tripp Prentice. "There won't be anything left here but a hole in the ground.

He could be right. Making the most of what it calls "The Richest Hill on Earth", Anaconda switched from deep to strip mining in 1955. In the two decades since, they have scraped some 750-million pounds of earth, and in the process, created a stupefying ever-enlarging pit on the edge of town. Anaconda officials do not say what will happen next, but most in Butte have few illusions; already some of the downtown stores have relocated on land out of the juggernaut's way.

Indeed, relocation has evolved as the community's primary solution to Anaconda's expanding copper pit. Rather than organize to fight engulfment, the citizens prefer simply to make way. And small wonder. Butte is a classic company town: it owes not only its past and present to Anaconda, but also, so residents say, its future.

In 110 years of mining, The Company, as it's called here, has extracted 28 billion pounds of copper, zinc and magnesium from the area. This has provided jobs for up to a third of the Butte work force and shouldered as much as 50 per cent of the area's tax responsibility.

"Actually," says one politician here, "everybody in Butte works for The Company. Because if it wasn't for The Company, there wouldn't be any other business to work for."

But besides the longtime loyalties to Anaconda, residents have another reason for going along with The Company's expansion. If Butte is a company town, Montana may be a company state. It is the only state, at least, which allows mining companies (read it: Anaconda) the right of eminent domain. The Montana legislature believes that since mining is a public use, mining concerns must have near-governmental authority. Thus, even if Butte residents tried to fight the deterioration of their town, they could not in the end legally stop an Anaconda push.

Occasionally, some few have tried to buck The Company. Years ago one homeowner in the path of progress refused to accept Anaconda's bid for his land. His protest was small and ultimately squelched.

"The Company didn't even bother to take him to town," says a local newspaperman, "they just built a fence around his place and left him there isolated. You can see it today. It's all surrounded by Anaconda. Everybody else, of course, sold out." Currently, at least one other immediately threatened property owner is balking. Tom Gergurich, 56, owner of a small bar which sits on the pit's east edge, says he's not selling unless he gets "a better offer." Also, some suburban residents have recently banded together to protest the proposed opening of a second Anaconda pit in their area; the suburbanites are complaining that the second pit will close Butte's major children's playground and devalue otherwise fine residential property.

Then too there are some sighs of exasperation on the state level. The Montana legislature has recently discussed a proposal to alter the laws regarding the private sector's right of eminent domain. State Sen. Herbert Kindt, of Billings, says that too many mining companies "read it again. Anaconda is using psychological warfare, threats and badgering" to acquire land title for corporate use.

Yet there aren't many standing up to The Company. Discretion is as much a part of Butte as the sulphur fumes. Individual wariness, in fact, takes on exaggerated proportions here. There are numerous sad stories of people who have been bodily injured by Anaconda's daily blasting but who fearfully refuse to complain.

Says a woman clerk at Butte's Ramada Inn motel, "I remember when my daughter signed a petition against The Company building a road through our neighborhood. Well, my husband works for Anaconda and he was called into the office about the matter. That's the way it is. They have a hold on everybody."

Thus the apathy in Butte, and mass resignation. "The pit just isn't controversial here," says newspaper editor Al Darr Adds, Mayor Mario Milcane, frankly. "This is a mining town and people are used to the mining company. They are also used to the mining company being right."

John Malensek, for example, he lives on a street being eaten up by the Anaconda pit. His walls shake during the noon blasting, his siding is covered with copper dust, and every hour of every day he can hear the roar of the 150-ton trucks in the hole beneath his living room. Yet gripe? Not he. He doesn't work for The Company, doesn't owe it anything, yet displays only a quiet, resigned and proper respect. Well, he says, "They got to get the ore out of there don't they?"

No doubt. The proven and potential resources still in Butte's earth are estimated to be more than the nation's total requirement for the next 50 years. More than $1 billion worth of precious metal is said to lie under the town alone. So, the juggernaut continues. And what the hell, say citizens here, Butte has deteriorated so much in the last century maybe the Anaconda expansion is a blessing. Sort of a dynamite Urban Renewal.

VOICE OF BUSINESS

Despite Scandal, Gloom, Nice Things Are Found

WASHINGTON — Once upon a time there was a man with two young sons. One of the boys was an incurable optimist, the other was gloomy and pessimistic. These character differences were so pronounced that the boy's father decided to test them to see if he could cheer up the pessimist or discourage the optimist.

On Christmas day he took the pessimist to a room filled with packages containing expensive toys, sports equipment and candy. He took the optimist to a room with only one large package, which was filled with these mature.

He left the boys alone long enough to open the packages, then returned to observe their reactions. He found the pessimist staring sadly at the expensive toys. They'll probably break," the boy said. He said he couldn't use the sports equipment because nobody would want him on their team. He feared the candy would cause cavities. And so on.

The optimist, on the other hand, was digging enthusiastically through the horse manure, exclaiming, "Gee, dad, I just know there's a pony in here someplace."

That's a long way of saying there's been so much scandal, gloom and doom in the news lately, that I'm determined to find a "pony" in it someplace — it's time for a little good news. So here's a short selection of some of the nicer things I've noticed lately. I'm sure you'll have some of your own to add.

The Economy — Unemployment is down almost a full percentage point. In March 1972 it was 5.9 per cent. This last March, it was 5 per cent. That's still too high, but at least the movement is in the right direction.

The federal budget deficit for this fiscal year will not be as high as was expected. A $24.8 billion deficit had been forecast, now it looks more like $19.8 billion will be the final figure.

Personal income rose 9.6 per cent from March '72 to March '73, which is more than twice as much as the 4.7 per cent increase in consumer prices for that period.

Foreign Affairs. A team of reporters for the Russian Communist Party newspaper Pravda is touring the U.S. writing NICE things about us for the folks back home.

They have praised the comfort of American cars in general as well as the quality of the one they are using. They like the skill of our drivers and the quality of our highways (although not our traffic jams or our accident rate). They like the fast service at our roadside restaurants, and the smiling, helpful waitresses. They envy our plentiful supply of housing.

It's all part of the Soviet government's efforts to establish a warmer relationship with us. The Japanese just paid off all their remaining debt to the U.S. for postwar economic assistance — 22 years ahead of schedule!

—Just Plain Nice People Remember Kenneth Clark — Lord Clark of England — the host of the television series "Civilisation." Well, he has just offered his extensive collection of rare and valuable books to an American library. He says he did it because "during the last 50 years the United States has been infinitely generous to Great Britain. They have not only saved us from extinction in two wars, but they have saved buildings and books that mean much to us."

My offer to the Morgan Library is a small — a very small — sign of recognition of what we owe to the United States.

Thanks, Lord Clark. We could use a kind word or two right now.

'Super Cops' Have Answer to Hoked-up Crime Films

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD—(NEA)—The Super Cops are coming to the screen. MGM has bought L. H. (Hank) Whittemore's book about Dave Greenberg and Bob Hantz, the two super-tough New

Who will play Hantz? I asked the two super cops and they had fun with the question. Greenberg insisted that Dustin Hoffman is the type—an obvious gag, since Hantz is actually a good-looking Mark Spitzish sort.

They all claim that the book isn't the sensational type of crime literature and they don't want the movie to be either. Although they don't have any right of script approval in their contract they know how they're going to get the kind of film they want.

We have leverage, Dave Greenberg says. The picture will be shot in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn and that's our area. Without our protection, it can't be done. The tough guys there would wreck it and steal the cameras. Unless we get the kind of picture we want, we won't protect it.

Like most real law enforcement officers they aren't happy with most TV and movie cop stories. They say the most realistic is Adam-12 but even that is far from truth.

Their favorite expression, which they both like to say, is this: "We carry guns so the public doesn't have to." They're all in favor of gun control but Hantz has another idea which he figures will keep the dreaded National Rifle Association happy.

"Let people have guns," Hantz says, "but control the distribution of ammunition. I don't care how many people have guns if they don't have bullets."

They also favor psychological testing of all applicants for police jobs.

"A lot of men wear police uniforms," Greenberg says, "who have no business wearing them."

But they do not favor free sale of narcotics (and they are careful to point out that they don't include marijuana among narcotics). "If you let addicts have all the narcotics they want," Hantz says, "you are signing their death warrant. That's because an overdose is the inevitable result. If you try to limit them they'll want more and crime will be the inevitable result. Eighty Greer Garson has a dilemma. The great star of so many great movies, like so many veterans, is finding it hard to get parts she wants to do. Mostly, that's because she doesn't like most of today's films.

Senior Citizen Leads Conservation Battle in Texas' Big Thicket Area

By DIANA RINEHART
Leader Staff Writer
ORANGE, Tex. (AP) — If you've ever used the term "over-the-hill gang" in reference to our nation's senior citizens, you better change your tune quick!

Especially if you are going to meet 94-year-old Mrs. Ethel Osborne Hill of Port Arthur.

She's a conservationist, naturalist, author, lecturer, educator and member of the governor's committees on aging. The only hills this extraordinary woman is going over are those which lead to her next lecture, committee meeting or her beloved cabin in the Big Thicket area.

Widely known from the Sabine River through the pine woods all the way to Austin, Mama Hill, as she's affectionately known, has been the guiding light, constant energizer and perpetual motion of the "save the Big Thicket" program in Texas and the nation. In fact, she also is known as "Ma Thicket."

She is the only living member of the original 10-member Big Thicket Association formed in 1930. Each summer she returns to her log cabin home deep in the Thicket, a half mile from the highway, southeast of Woodville.

There she is close to the trees, leaves, animals, flowers and land she loves. It includes her friends, the Alabama-Coushatta Indians, whose tribal village is only 16 miles away.

From her summer base she gathers materials from the land. All are to be used during the winter months, back in her Port Arthur home, to make her nature handicrafts.

"MA THICKET" is the affectionate nickname Mrs. Ethel Osborne Hill of Port Arthur, Tex., garnered in her fight to save the Big Thicket region from additional development.

As Mama Hill says, "There's nothing that is nothing. Everything is something."

From all these things like a fallen twig, armadillo bones, leaves, shells, stones, feathers, petals, pine cones, she will create a picture, book-veins in the leaves and tell me how each one was special.

"No two were alike. Just like your hands, he said, there are no two hands alike. All hands are special," she remembers.

Mama Hill brought her love of trees, animals and flowers along when the family moved to Texas in 1887. As she says, "I never was a Yankee; always a Texan."

And as a Texan she has implanted her mark of love and concern on everything she's touched.

Her journalistic endeavors for preservation of the Big Thicket began in 1926 when she wrote a series of articles for an area newspaper.

She continued writing for a number of area newspapers and still writes a weekly column for the Tyler County Booster and Piney Wood Press.

She has captured her thoughts and memories in three books of poetry, all of which have been published. Last year she completed a book of stories on early years in the Thicket titled, "God's Children, All —

Red, White and Black."

"I'm still waiting to have it published," related Mama Hill, "actually, I guess you'd say I'm waiting to get the money together to have it published."

A friend to the young, old, well-known and unknown, Mama Hill was named "Woman of the Year" in Texas in 1970. Her most recent honor was bestowed when she was named a life member of the Tyler County Chamber of Commerce and honored for her outstanding civic work.

A new variety of dogwood tree, planted last Arbor Day, stands in the courthouse square in Woodville — named in her honor.

With 94 years of living behind her, Mama Hill has never had a headache, nor an earache. In fact, she doesn't even wear glasses.

Licensed Vocational Nursing Program Okayed At College

The Licensed Vocational Nursing programs formerly conducted by area hospitals — Pampa, Spearman, and Borger — have merged.

Frank Phillips College of Borger has been approved by the State Board of Vocational Nurse Examiners, Texas Education Agency, and the Division of Post Secondary Occupational Education and Technology of Texas to be the controlling agency and instructional base for the LVN Program in the Northern Panhandle.

Each of the hospitals are designated as affiliated agencies and will provide the clinical facilities for floor duty and bedside experiences required by the approving agencies.

Applications are being received now in the office of Oliver J. Abel, the Director of the Technical-Vocational Division of Frank Phillips College, for the 1973-74 training program beginning in September.

Any person in the area who wishes more information may write or call the office for information or application blanks.

As soon as applications are received, a classifying pretest schedule will be set by the college followed by personal interviews. When results of test and interview have been evaluated, applicant will

Memorial Day Honors War Dead of Nation

By AP NEWSFEATURES
Though no one knows when Memorial Day, sometimes called Decoration Day, originated, it is believed to have been first observed by grieving Southern women during the Civil War.

The women chose May 30 to decorate the graves of both Union and Confederate soldiers, says the World Book Encyclopedia.

Now, Americans observe this national holiday to honor those who lost their lives in all the country's later wars, including the Spanish American War (1898-1899), World War I (1917-1918), World War II (1941-1945), The Korean War (1950-1953) and the Vietnam War.

Families and organizations place flowers and flags on the graves of servicemen. Many cities and towns hold parades and special ceremonies, which often include a reading of Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address."

who died at sea are honored in some places by the launching of tiny ships filled with flowers.

Since the end of World War I, says the World Book, because of the battles fought in the poppy fields of France and Belgium, Memorial Day has also been called Poppy Day. Artificial poppies were first sold in the United States for the benefit of French and Belgian children orphaned by the war. The Veterans of Foreign Wars conducted the first nationwide poppy sale for the benefit of war veterans in 1920. After that, other groups joined the campaign.

Memorial Day, which is now celebrated on the last Monday in May in most states, became a federal holiday in 1971. Many Southern states set aside a day to honor Confederate dead. Alabama and Georgia observe April 26 as Confederate Memorial Day, both Carolinas observe May 10 Kentucky and Louisiana celebrate it on June 3, the birthday of Confederate President Jefferson Davis.

She also spends three weeks each summer at scout camps in Tyler County teaching crafts as well as her own Cub Scout troop in Woodville.

Mama Hill's love affair with nature started when she was 6 years old, a time she vividly remembers.

Born in Ames, Iowa, she remembers Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, a friend of her father and president of A&M College at Ames, who first taught her the beauty of all God's creatures.

"We would go for long walks in the orchard or down by the streams," recalled Mama Hill. Dr. Knapp would show me the

Foyt Is Going For His 4th Indy Win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For A. J. Foyt Jr., a battle-scarred veteran of auto racing, time may be running out in his quest to become the first driver to win the Indianapolis 500-mile race four times.

The 38-year-old Texan was on his way to becoming a legend in 1967 when he started fourth and went on to win his third Indy race in a seven-year span. But, even though he has attained wealth and success in racing, that fourth Indy crown has eluded him. And it is apparently getting tougher each year in the face of an onslaught of fresh, young drivers.

Foyt was set to start today's 57th Memorial Day classic at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in 23rd position on the 33-car starting grid, his worst start in 16 years of Indy racing. To make matters worse, history is against his success.

since no winning driver has charged from further back than 19th since Louis Meyer started 28th and went on to win the 1936 Indy. In Foyt's three Indy triumphs, he started no further back than seventh.

The leather-tough Foyt, whose features are marred by the evidence of numerous race course wrecks and several fires, made his reputation as a charger and time hasn't slowed him down much.

The only man to have won five national driving championships, Foyt showed he still is ready to race when he won the first half of the split Trenton 300 championship race April 7. And, even though pole-sitter Johnny Rutherford, defending champion Mark Donohue, 1968 champion Bobby Unser and Gary Bettenhausen, the man who led the 1972 race for 138 laps, were today's favorites, Foyt wasn't being counted out.

Henry Aaron Is Also Chasing Stan The Man

By The Associated Press
NATIONAL

Hank Aaron has been chasing Babe Ruth so long, some people forget that he's also chasing Stan Musial.

While Ruth's home run mark of 714 is prominent in most people's minds, Aaron is also zeroing in on Stan The Man's record of 1,377 extra-base hits.

The Atlanta slugger gained ground on both with a home run Sunday in the Braves' 5-4 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals. The blast gave him 686 career homers and 1,356 extra base hits, incidentally tying him with Ruth for second place.

In the other National League games, the Houston Astros defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2; the Chicago Cubs blanked the Cincinnati Reds 6-0; the Los Angeles Dodgers turned back the New York Mets 2-1; the San Francisco Giants checked the Montreal Expos 6-3 and the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres in a doubleheader, 4-3 and 6-4.

innings before yielding a run in the sixth. Clyde Mashore drove in the Expos' final two runs with a pinch homer in the ninth.

Joe Ferguson hit his 11th home run and second in as many days, and Don Sutton scattered seven hits and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly, leading Los Angeles over New York Philadelphia converted three San Diego errors into three runs in the first inning and went on to beat San Diego in the opener of their doubleheader.

The Phillies managed only four hits in eight innings of San Diego starting Bill Greif. Del Unser's bases-empty homer in the fifth inning gave Wayne Twitchell a 4-1 lead and was the eventual winning run.

Unser drove in four runs, three with a double in a five-run fourth inning, powering Philadelphia to victory in the second game.

Nicklaus Struggles To Atlanta Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — "My only objective," Jack Nicklaus said, "was to win the golf tournament."

He did, making the $150,000 Atlanta Golf Classic his fourth title of the year and regaining his customary spot atop the money winning list.

Nicklaus, who won the Tournament of Champions five weeks ago in his last previous start, virtually won this one on his first three rounds of 67, 66 and 66. In Sunday's final effort over the 6,883-yard Atlanta Country Club course, he could do no better than a one-over-par 73 for a 272 total, a very respectable 16-under-par.

Tom Weiskopf was the only one in the field able to keep close to Nicklaus during the first three rounds. And it was Weiskopf who put the pressure on over the finishing holes.

Weiskopf finished with a 69 for 274, a score good enough to win any previous Atlanta Classic.

Padres Sold To Washington Group

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "When the fans hear about this, we won't be playing in front of nobody," said Nate Colbert.

The slugging San Diego first baseman's remark reflected the surprise and disappointment of his teammates that Padre owner C. Arnholt Smith had signed a mid-season letter of intent to sell the club for removal to Washington, D.C. in 1974.

"A lot of exciting baseball is still to be played here," said club Vice President Peter Bavasi trying to sound cheerful. "I hope lots of folks will come out to watch."

That hope was plainly optimistic, however, after Smith placed the club in lame-duck status in San Diego by announcing sale of the team May 5 for a record $12 million to a group of Washington, D.C., businessmen headed by Joseph Danzansky.

Smith reportedly accepted a down payment of $100,000 and Marvin Willig, one of Danzansky's partners, reportedly has the canceled check in his possession.

Smith acknowledged the Padres' awkward position when asked why he would sign the letter of intent when four months remain in the 1973 season.

"The opportunity came along now," he replied. "The people in Washington need time to get their deal together."

Padre officials blamed National League club owners for placing the team in an impossible position.

"I blame the National League, which forced us to pay $10 million for an expansion franchise," Bavasi said. "We'd be in good shape if we had paid the American League expansion price of around $6 million."

"We've shown we can break even on attendance of 700,000."

Bavasi said team resources had been drained by interest payments on the $10 million loan secured to purchase the team. Annual interest on the loan is around $700,000. He said the team had shown small profit last season, but not enough to pay that figure.

The move left uncertain the fate of Buzze and Peter Bavasi as well as Manager Don Zimmer, who reportedly has had a somewhat strained relationship with his players.

"If we're going, I hope I go," Zimmer said.

Buzze Bavasi, the club president who served a long tenure with the Los Angeles Dodgers before joining the San Diego team, said he has not decided if he will accompany the team to Washington.

"I just don't know yet," he hedged. "We haven't discussed it."

His son Peter begged time to consider his decision.

Congress has threatened attacks on baseball's antitrust exemption unless the big leagues return to the nation's capital.

PARIS (AP) — Each morning when Chris Evert wakes up, she looks out of her bedroom window right up at the Eiffel Tower.

"But I don't think I'll be going to the top," she said. "Tennis is the important thing right now."

The 18-year-old girl from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., now is the only American hope left in the women's singles of the French Open Championships.

Mrs. Nancy Gunter of San Angelo, Tex., and Pat Bostrom of Seattle, Wash., the only other American girls in contention, were beaten Sunday.

Miss Evert, playing in Paris for the first time, is a star attraction at Roland Garros Stadium.

"If Chris wins the French title, she will be the youngest winner since Christine Truman of Britain in 1959. Christine was 18 years four months—about one month younger than Chris is now."

Chris faces Enata Tomanova of Czechoslovakia today in a bid to reach the quarter-finals.

So far, two Americans, Tom Gorman of Seattle, Wash., and Paul Gerken of East Norwalk, Conn., have reached the last 16.

Stan Smith, the favorite from Pasadena, Calif., is paired today against his old Davis Cup doubles partner, Erik Van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif.

Another current Davis Cup star, Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md., has to play Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va.

Arizona's Tom Gorman, who won the 1972 U.S. National title, was the only American to reach the quarter-finals.

Model City Is Planned Near Rio

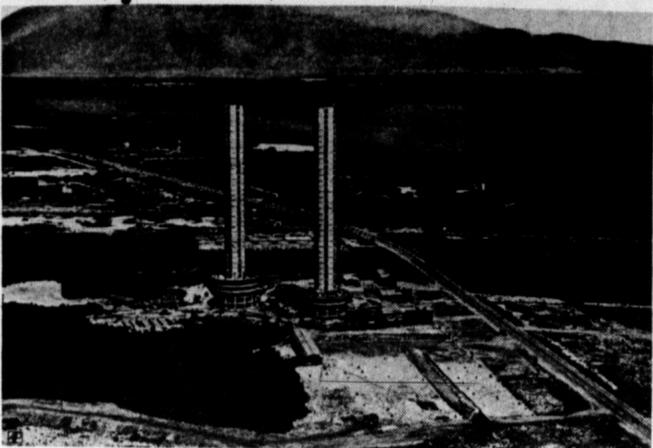

By LORAL GRAHAM
RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The architects who planned Brasilia, Brazil's 13-year-old capital in the hinterland, have designed another model city — this time on the outskirts of Rio de Janeiro.

By the year 2000 the new city promises "a new way of life" for 2 million of Rio's anticipated 10 million residents — a life free from the congestion, pollution and noise that plague Rio's present population of 4.3 million.

The site, called Barra da Tijuca, is 10 miles from Copacabana, which was considered a seaside paradise until the late '50s but now is three square miles of concrete housing 250,000 people. Barra da Tijuca is an unspoiled area flanked by mountains and dotted with lakes. It stretches for 14 miles along one of the most beautiful beaches in the world.

When the federal government announced plans in 1964 to build a highway through the area to connect Rio with the port of Santos, 250 miles to the southwest, urban development of Barra da Tijuca was inevitable. "If urban growth had been left uncontrolled, Barra would have become another Copacabana within a few years, with a conglomeration of high-rise buildings lining the highway and the beach, preventing free circulation of air and blocking a view of the sea," said Almir Machado, coordinator of the team of architects that is planning the area's development.

In 1969, Lucio Costa — author of the master plan of Brasilia — presented an ambitious project to the government of the state of Guanabara (Greater Rio) to urbanize Barra while at the same time preserving the area's natural beauty, tranquility, and unpolluted environment. He proposed to concentrate the population of the 75-square-mile area in self-sufficient urban islands each containing about 12,000 people and separated from one another by five-block-wide green areas. Each urban island would have its own shopping area and school, and other essential services.

At opposite ends of the beach, sandwiched between the highway and the ocean, two super nuclei are being planned with projected populations of 80,000 to 100,000 each.

The larger of the two, called the Barra Center, is already under construction. It will be opened in 1974 and fully completed by 1980. Oscar Niemeyer, who designed the major public buildings in Brasilia, is chief architect.

The Barra Center will contain 70 cylindrical 34-story apartment towers. Seventy-five per cent of the center's 127 acres will consist of parkland, playgrounds, squares, walkways, and tropical gardens. There will be six office buildings, five schools, four yacht clubs, two movies and one legitimate theater, as well as supermarkets, gas stations and churches.

Niemeyer's idealistic plan separates pedestrians and traffic, residential and shopping areas.

The residential towers will be interlaced with walkways. Pedestrians will cross the main traffic arteries through underpasses. There will be two floors of underground parking in each tower. No stores will be allowed in the residential area. Instead noise and activity will be concentrated in a commercial center that cuts diagonally through the development. Parking will be behind the shops and the area in front will be a mall for pedestrians only.

Many of Costa's and Niemeyer's idealistic designs for Brasilia did not work out. A typical main street has sprouted in the capital, despite plans that called for the city to be made up of self-contained living nuclei.

The Barra's Commercial Center will contain about 1,000 stores as well as supermarkets, restaurants, bars, banks, boutiques, cinemas, beauty salons, and doctors' offices.

Prices range from $10,000 for a one-bedroom apartment to $30,000 for a deluxe three-bedroom apartment to $138,000 for a penthouse. If you pay cash the price is 18.5 per cent less.

Smithsonian Avoids 'Unethical' Finds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution has adopted a policy statement affirming that it will not acquire objects and specimens which have been stolen, unscientifically gathered or excavated, or unethically acquired.

The statement on museum acquisitions, made public by Secretary S. Dillon Ripley, says in part:

"An illicit international market has contributed to the despoliation of museums and monuments, and the irreparable loss to science and humanity and archeological remains.

The Institution repudiates the illicit traffic in art and objects. Objects and specimens which have been stolen, unscientifically gathered or excavated or unethically acquired should not be made part of Smithsonian museum collections."

Open Schools Have Discipline Too, Says Teacher-Founder

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) —

When parents complain that their children are enjoying school too much to be learning anything, wise teachers have a good answer ready.

All parents are asking, according to Marianne Everett, founder of the Everett School, is are their children learning skills to get along in the world.

"We must ease their anxiety in a positive way," Miss Everett said. "Their concerns are valid. But you can show them through the children that skills are being taught and that learning can be fun."

Miss Everett said most parents remember their own school days as regimented learning by rote. It wasn't fun for them, she added.

But times have changed. New methods of teaching utilize social studies or cooking to teach math, movies and tapes for reading. Teacher workshops are often held at the Everett School to help teachers themselves operate on a better level with their students.

Teachers also learn by doing. We give them a chance to implement some of their own ideas about education. They can make books, have gerbil races and play special math games," Miss Everett said.

Open education is a phrase Miss Everett uses often.

It means opening your mind and heart to what children are like," she said. "It isn't taking walls out of your building and then figuring out a program for a barn. It is giving children a framework in which they can learn from experience."

The goal of the open education experience is individualized teaching. Children not only learn from experience, they become different kinds of persons, persons who are able to cope with society.

The open education program is significant in terms of the kind of people we want to bring up, whether they are independent, inquisitive, curious and responsible for themselves or obedient and passive," she added. Naturally she prefers the former to the latter.

There are five kinds of structure in open education. There is structure in child development, in environmental space with its corners for math, reading and art, in curriculum, in time and in the relationships of child to child. Miss Everett said.

"Instead of a rigid schedule, we deal in large blocks of time. First we plan what the children will do, then work is done and at the end of the time period, we plan the next session and evaluate what we have done," she said.

An example cited for the teachers was a recent French class project in which students set up a French cafe. They used math and science as well as their language study, buying food at the supermarket, planning the menu, cooking food and setting up a bank to convert dollars to francs for the evening. With profits from the cafe, the students plan a trip to Quebec.

"The basic respect a teacher has for an individual child is passed along to other children. They respect each other and the rights of others. That's why we have ground rules about pulling hair, calling names and all that. We give the child an opportunity to make responsible choices," she added.

Miss Everett tells workshops that each teacher can evaluate his method to see what works best.

Charges Center on Teamsters

(Editor's Note: The writer is a long-time observer of organized crime and is the author of several books on the subject including his latest, "The Swiss Bank Connection.")

By LESLIE WALLER
NEW YORK — (NEA) — Recent reports that the FBI has established links between organized crime and a trade union through a court wire-tapping order again raise one of the more troubling ghosts haunting the nation's labor movement.

Most unions are honest ones, law enforcement officers agree, but for some years now they have suspected a deeply buried connection between the mob and some labor leaders.

Special attention has been paid to unions in such industries as construction, dock work, warehousing and trucking. The current publicity is focused on leaders of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

The two million-member Teamster Union has had problems with its leadership for some time now. Over the past decades two national leaders, Dave Beck and James Hoffa, have gone to jail on various charges including fraud and jury-tampering.

In addition, a behind-the-scenes power struggle at the highest levels of the Teamsters is reportedly in progress, applying internal pressure to the situation, as Hoffa, paroled by President Nixon with two-thirds of his sentence still unexpired, is supposed to be seeking his old post as president, now held by Frank E. Fitzsimmons.

For observers of organized crime, the rise to power of the Teamsters has been

Jimmy Hoffa

studded with unusual opportunities to glimpse some inner workings of the mob. These include:

- The discovery that an official of the Chicago union (Local 777) had a lucrative racket to siphon off dues paid by cab drivers and kick them back to the cab companies;

- The report that a New Orleans mafiosi had offered a $1 million bribe to the witness who helped send Hoffa to jail if the testimony were recanted;

- The indictment on 18 counts of embezzlement of a Newark leader (Local 863) who had been a long-time associate of a leading Syndicate mobster;

- The report by a New Hampshire newspaper that the Teamsters pension and welfare funds had contributed secretly to help finance the Watergate burglaries and espionage;

- The conviction of four top officers of the St. Louis union (Local 600) on 13 counts of embezzlement;

- The charge by George

Meany, head of the AFL-CIO, that the Teamsters had been hired to break up Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers, a move, Meany called "vicious" and "disgraceful."

- The regular lending of millions of dollars from the Teamsters funds to members of organized crime involved in such ventures as Las Vegas casinos and airport motels;

- The charge by a former Justice Department investigator that Murray M. Chotiner, known attorney for Syndicate figures and former Nixon confidant, had helped secure Hoffa's early release from prison;

The latest chapter in the story of mob-dominated unions involves an alleged plan by members of the Los Angeles and Chicago families of organized crime to tap Teamsters funds through a medical scheme.

Newspapers report the Federal District Court in Los Angeles authorized an FBI telephone tap in January of a local consulting firm that channels Teamster money into the underworld. The order was renewed in February.

In March, newspapers say, a report of this went from FBI Acting Director L. Patrick Gray to Attorney General Richard Kleindienst and Assistant Attorney General Henry E. Petersen.

At about the same time, the FBI requested an O. K. to place additional telephone taps because its investigation to date had indicated "a pattern of racketeering activities (with) officers and agents of the employee welfare benefit plan."

The request was denied and the surveillance was squashed, although Kleindienst later stated he knew nothing of this and would not have halted the inquiry if he had been informed. Shortly after the investigation was stopped, Special Counsel to the President Charles W. Colson left the White House to join a law firm to which the Teamsters' legal business was transferred.

Among the facts the FBI reports learning through its tap was the use of the luxurious La Costa resort and health spa near San Diego, Calif., as a secure place for mobsters to confer with Teamster leaders, including Fitzsimmons.

Reports overlooked the fact that La Costa, noted for a golf course that features a par-5 537-yard 17th hole, was originally built with loans from the Teamsters. Lawyers have spent a lot of time watching the action at La Costa, most of which takes place off the links. A report of one conference, held while Hoffa was in prison, noted such participants as a long-time Cleveland mobster with Las Vegas connections, a Chicago attorney for organized crime, a former Bahamas gambling associate of Meyer Lansky and Mrs. James Hoffa.

Authorities are quick to point out, however, that the Teamsters are not unique in having apparently close ties with the mob. In construction, for example, police indicate that union members are involved in the theft of equipment and material from building sites around the country.

Since in the construction industry organized crime plays a commanding role in both unions and the businesses that employ workers, it comes as no surprise to learn that police have found contractors' trucks used on company time to transport stolen equipment. Apparently there is more profit in stealing one's own $27,000 bulldozer, for example, and collecting from the under-contractor buyer as well as the insurance company, than using it to help construct buildings.

The controversial International Longshoremen's Association, long a haven for mobster leaders of "pistol" locals, recently made headlines when one of its vice-presidents, William Murphy was rubbed out gangland style in New Jersey, with $5,000 in cash in his pockets, untouched by the killers.

Such being the current state of affairs between organized labor and organized crime, police found nothing unusual recently when it became known that the Secretary of Labor, Peter J. Brennan, himself a product of the super-tough construction trades, not only touts a gun but has hired armed guards for his Washington office.

WORRY CLINIC

My mother, now 95, got her teaspoonful of concentrated ocean water this noon, before I took her to the restaurant for lunch. And Ronald might find that the same method MIGHT zoom his height a few inches. Note what a daily drop of iodine did for our 4 Crane boys.

CASE X-519: Ronald T., aged 15, is a high school sophomore. "Dr. Crane," he began, "you can see that I am pretty short for my age."

"So is there any simple way to add a few inches to one's height?"

"A recent medical columnist said the average American man is now 5' 10 1/2" tall.

"But I am still only 5' 7".

"That doctor also stated that people in California grow taller than the average. Why?"

TRACE CHEMICALS?

Maybe the answer is due to trace chemicals from ocean water.

For the prevailing winds in America blow from West to East.

Which means the sea spray from the Pacific Ocean is carried inland for hundreds of miles.

For example, the iodine content of "cow" butter, derived from California cattle, has a higher than normal iodine content for at least 200 miles inland.

Which means the ocean's spray has been wafted inland by the heavy winds and thus deposited on the grazing lands.

And I am not speaking of the evaporated water vapor that produces rain, for it is like distilled water in being free of chemicals.

The West Coast gets unevaporated water spray that is borne by the winds.

And this ocean spray not only contains iodine but all the 44 water soluble trace chemicals of the sea.

When our 4 boys were in high school, they were also quite short.

Indeed, our oldest, George IV, was the shortest of all the 400 boys as well as girls who entered South Shore High School that freshman year.

And our boys didn't inherit any great heights, since their grandfathers on both sides of the family had been only 5' 6" and 5' 7".

And their grandmothers were also short women.

Besides, I was barely 5' 10" and Mrs. Crane only 5' 3".

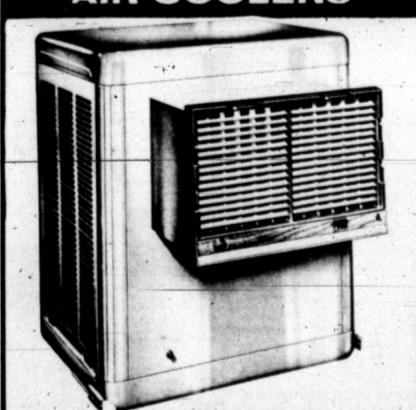

So I told our boys to squirt one drop of tincture of iodine in their glass of milk each morning, since that might help accelerate their growth while in the teenage "shooting" stage.

They did.

And George attained 6' 1". His brother Philip, now our Illinois U.S. Congressman, reached 6' 1/2", while Daniel and David hit the 6-foot mark.

As a rule, the average child grows about 2 inches taller each year till 13.
