Veteran announcer McSpadden introduces an event at the Top o' Texas rodeo.

McSpadden: Always ready to announce another rodeo

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Like cotton candy at the circus or a Coke with your hamburger, Top o' Texas Rodeo and announcer Clem McSpadden are a combination that just naturally go together.

McSpadden's voice, as friendly as it is authoritative, is a feature rodeo attendees have come to naturally associate with the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association stop in Pampa each summer.

With over 40 years of rodeo announcing under his belt, McSpadden is as much an authority on the sport as anyone in the world. In 1986 he was named PRCA announcer of the year.

He has served as the voice of 15 National Finals Steer Roping events, the National Finals Rodeo in Oklahoma City and the Calgary Stampede.

Yet, audiences at the 43rd Annual Top o' Texas Rodeo in Pampa, the 27th to be PRCA sanctioned, still hear an announcer who is as excited about the sport as the first day he started.

McSpadden said he loves coming to Pampa's rodeo because of the friendliness of the people and the cooperative spirit of merchants who team up to put the event together.

"If you're a lawyer, you like to have good clients; if you're an insurance company, you like blue-ribbon clients, and if you're a rodeo announcer, you like to work with people who are just the best," McSpadden said. "Coupled with the set-up here in Pampa is a bunch of dedicated people who now have the attention of the downtown merchants and the chamber."

"And through the years it has grown so that you are now attracting national sponsors like Coors, Copenhagen/Skoal, Wrangler and the Justin Healer program. Which means you also then attract the top contestants."

McSpadden was born on a ranch in Chelsea, Okla., that his family established in 1886. He has been around rodeos all his life and grew up wanting to be a calf-roper.

"My first heroes were cowboys," he said. "I went into the service when I was 18, got my two-and-a-half years in and was discharged before I was 21."

"The summer I was 21, I was roping and bull-dogging up at a little rodeo in Davenport, Iowa, and the announcer didn't show up. So I announced. I announced my first rodeo back in 1947."

Asked if, after all those years of traveling from one rodeo to the next, he ever thinks of retiring to his ranch, McSpadden replied, "Oh gosh, no! When they ask me when I'm gonna quit my answer is, 'When it ceases to be fun.'"

"It's still fun." Traveling up to 40,000 miles each year to rodeos from Kissimmee, Fla., to Salt Lake City, Utah, McSpadden has developed a unique understanding of rodeos and the people who attend them.

"Under the auspices of PRCA there isn't much difference in the rodeos. There are differences in the fans," he said. "For instance, in this part of Texas or Oklahoma all you need from an announcer is someone to give the scores and the times, because most of the people up there (in the stands) are gut fans."

"But you get back east — when I do Kissimmee each year, it's full of people from the north coming down there to spend the winter and you find a lot of people from New Jersey, Ohio and Illinois."

"Even though they have a few rodeos, they are not agriculturally-oriented like our people are here."

He said in the east rodeos are often packaged the same way circuses are here.

"Many times producers have to take portable chutes and a portable arena," he said. "Say

County employees face higher insurance rates

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

A majority of the Gray County Commission meeting Friday was devoted to discussing insurance plans for county employees.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield was awarded the bid for county employees' major medical and term life insurance, despite an increase in premiums of 41 percent. Commissioners rejected another bid from Washington National Insurance because of higher premiums and no prescription card.

County employees' present insurance rate of $92.54 will increase to $130.67 on Aug. 1. Employee and family rates will increase to $329.73.

Wooley presented an alternate plan that would increase the deductible from $200 a year for each of two family members to $300 a year for each of three family members. The plan would not provide preventative care or a prescription card.

These changes would result in a monthly savings of approximately $21 per family, an amount that commissioners agreed could be quickly taken up in the extra costs for prescriptions.

At the request of agent Mike Wooley, commissioners agreed to increase employees' term life and accidental death and dismemberment insurance from $4,000 to $5,000 and to decrease elected officials' term life and AD&D from $10,000 to $5,000.

Wooley recommended the commissioners make the change to meet with federal requirements that governmental agencies provide the same life insurance benefits to all employees.

Precinct 3 Commissioner Gerald Wright expressed some misgivings about decreasing the rate of life insurance for some employees and was the only commissioner to vote against the change in the coverage.

David Lawrence of Amarillo presented a proposal for prepaid legal services for county employees, asking for a letter of introduction from the county and a list of county employees' names and addresses so that he could contact them about the plan after working hours.

Commissioners balked at releasing such a list, but did agree to allow county office holders to poll their employees on their interest in the plan. If enough are interested to warrant County Treasurer Scott Hahn to set up a payroll deduction plan, then the county would get in touch with Lawrence.

"I have a hard time giving out a list of names to anyone," Precinct 1 Commissioner Joe Wheeley said. "I resent my name being given out. I don't know you. I'm sure you're qualified and your intentions are good, but I don't know you."

Wheeley's comments were echoed by the other commissioners.

No action was taken on a supplemental death benefit for county employees listed on Friday's agenda. Commissioners agreed to take up the matter during budget preparation.

County Judge Carl Kennedy reported that most of the office holders have turned in their 1990 budgets, and the commission will soon ready to begin their budget hearings.

While much of the recent county commission meetings have centered around the building of a new county jail, lack of time kept the discussion brief with no action taken.

Commissioners Jim Greene, Ted Simmons and County Judge Carl Kennedy reported they had visited the Hemphill County jail as planned.

Commissioners agreed to meet next Wednesday for a tour of the Potter County and Hutchison County jails.

A special meeting of the county and city commissions to discuss the results of the prison survey is set for 3 p.m. Thursday in the second floor courtroom of Gray County Courthouse, officials said.

Local officials sought public sentiment regarding the building of a state prison in or near Pampa through a ballot printed three times in The Pampa News.

Results of the survey are expected to be revealed at the called meeting Thursday.

Judge Kennedy was given the nod to prepare a list of persons qualified to serve as bailiff for 31st District Court at the request of Sheriff Jim Free, whose deputies have in recent months been taken from their jobs to fill the position.

Pampa Aircraft was awarded a four-year bid as fixed base operator at Perry Lefors Field. At the request of Ron Fernuik, president and general manager, commissioners also stipulated that any reference to "exclusive rights" be deleted from the contract.

Fernuik said that giving Pampa Aircraft exclusive rights to the selling of fuel and oil and repair service would keep the agency from qualifying for federal funds.

"I have no problem with that," he added. "If we can't be competitive, we don't need to be out there."

"We've made an incredible amount of investment out there and we don't intend to stop," Fernuik said.

In other action, the commission approved the following:

- Payment of $91,797.69 in bills and transfers of invested funds;
- An amendment to the district attorney's budget by transferring $1,420 from janitorial to equipment, $500 from postage to stationery and office supplies, $500 from postage to conference and training, and $1,553 from utilities to telephone;
- A request from the Gray County Extension Service for an agent to attend the national conference; and
- A request from High Plains Natural Gas Company to cross a county road with a pipeline in Precinct 1.

Horses, clowns, cars, wagons entertain spectators of parade

Beautiful weather and an excellent turnout made the 1989 Top O' Texas Rodeo Parade a success Saturday morning.

Participants in the parade ranged from tikes on motor-bikes and four- and three-wheelers to semi-trucks from Texas State Technical Institute in Amarillo.

Then there were the horses — a lot of horses — and the commercial floats, the classic cars and the old wagons and tractors.

While adults marveled at the beauty of such equestrian entries as the Coors and Santa Rosa riding clubs, children ran to catch the candy and other goodies being thrown from several of the entries.

Youngsters were treated to a number of clowns in the parade, riding up and down the streets on their small wheelers, riding on some of the floats or just walking along and greeting the children watching from the sidewalks and yards.

The parade, geared to peak interest in the rodeo and shopping in Pampa, seemed to accomplish both tasks. Rodeo directors were expecting a good crowd for the rodeo's final show Saturday night and stores in downtown Pampa were busier than usual before and after the parade.

Winners in the Riding Club Division were: 1. Santa Rosa Palomino Riding Club; 2. Coors Riding Club; 3. Mule Skinners.

Most Typical Ranch Entry winners were: 1. Poor Boys Patch, wagon; 2. Bill Devoll's four antique tractors.

Winners in the Classic Car Division were: 1. Lacey McGuire, 1931 Model A Roadster; 2. Vic and Dee Dee Laramore, 1926 pickup; 3. John J. Cheser, 1931 Model A Ford.

The Best Civic Club Entry winners were: 1. Khiva Klowns and float; 2. XIT Rodeo-Dalhart.

The final category, for Most Attractive Commercial Entry, was awarded to: 1. Wayne's Western Wear; 2. Industrial Radiator.

Appraisal district plans to appeal review board's ruling on Celanese

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
News Editor

Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley has informed Gray County Appraisal District's board of directors that he planned to file an appeal of the Appraisal Review Board's ruling on the Hoechst Celanese appraisal protest.

After a 5½-hour hearing Tuesday, Appraisal Review Board members set the value of the Hoechst Celanese chemical plant and personal property at $160 million. The ARB's decision was $213 million less than the appraisal district's evaluation of $355 million for the plant and $23 million for personal property, and $40 million more than Hoechst Celanese's value of $120 million.

"As soon as the Appraisal Review Board notifies me (of their official decision), we have 15 days to appeal in district court," Bagley told board members Thursday during the chief appraiser's report.

'We're not at this point agreeing or disagreeing or making any commitment that we're going to sue anybody or not.'

"We're not at this point agreeing or disagreeing or making any commitment that we're going to sue anybody or not," Board President Ken Fields cautioned.

"In order for us to keep our option open after we do decide, we've got to give the notice regardless of what anybody's feelings are," he said.

"I think if we don't do that we lose our option to take further action," Bagley said.

He explained that in his opinion the Appraisal Review Board members made the decision for two purposes: first, to bring a meeting that had already lasted 5½ hours to conclusion, and second, to allow the tax rolls to be approved in time for the taxing entities to send out tax statements for the coming year.

"If they had not made a decision at that meeting, if it had been deferred or records subpoenaed, any action that would have delayed that would have delayed approval of the (tax) rolls," Bagley said.

"Our position is this is the same way we appraised the entire category of property and this is the only appeal that went this far," he added. "We feel this was a good process. At this point, I think we should seriously consider court action."

Bagley pointed out that a second problem has arisen from the Appraisal Review Board hearing.

"The motion they made is not clear how much of the $160 million is to the plant and how much is to personal property," the chief appraiser said.

Since those amounts were not stipulated in the review board's motion, he said, it appears that legally no real action was taken. To clear the matter, the ARB is meeting again next Tuesday, he said.

Once again Fields pointed out that the appraisal district was filing the appeal only to keep their options open. "We cannot make any decision tonight since this is not an agenda item," he said.

"I anticipate that at the Aug. 10 meeting we will need to make a final decision whether or not to carry out the appeal by filing suit in district court," he added.

Fields explained that he had talked with the appraisal district's Austin attorneys who said that the appraisal district was the only one which could file the suit; the taxing entities would not be able to take that action.

"Filing gives us a 45-day time period to make up our minds," he said.

Board member Bob Curry pointed out that the appraisal district would not have the funds to carry out a lawsuit without the support of the taxing entities.

Fields responded that though the county and school districts were the only two directly affected by the Hoechst Celanese appraisal, all Gray County taxpayers would be affected.

"Through the support of the entities is needed, Fields added, "ultimately the decision comes back to us around this table. If we decide to go to court, we'll have to come up with the funds through some route or another."

Bagley said that representatives of both the county and school district have been contacted about the results of the hearing.

"I believe this is something we should take very seriously, considering the ramifications now and in the future," Bagley said. "I feel it is my obligation to do as good a job of appraisal as possible. That lets you know where I stand."

Curry asked how the change in the appraised value would affect the tax base of the entities involved and whether the tax rates would be affected.

"We're required to give figures to the tax entities by July 25," Bagley explained, adding that the entities had already received an estimate of what the tax income would be.

'I believe this is something we should take very seriously, considering the ramifications now and in the future.'

"There'll be some changes, but they won't be far off," he said. Bagley said that the ARB's decision will mean a combined loss of $2.8 million in taxes for the county and school district.

"Well, it's one of those businesses of doing business," Curry commented. "Apparently Celanese made an excellent presentation to the Appraisal Review Board. It may not be satisfactory from our viewpoint, but it's no criticism of them. That's part of doing business."

Fields told Bagley to place an executive session on the Aug. 10 agenda to discuss the proposed appeal, while reminding board members that they could possibly call a special meeting if it is necessary. He also said to expect the Austin attorney to meet with them on Aug. 10.

Prior to the discussion of the appeal, the appraisal district board approved the 1990 budget and due bills and invoices for June.

the chamber of commerce of a town in New Hampshire wanted a rodeo; all they've got is an open space. There aren't rodeo arenas back there like there are here."

After announcing the final rodeo performance in Pampa Saturday night, McSpadden is on the road today for another city where his voice is closely associated with the sport.

"The biggest four-day rodeo in North America is Dodge City and that's coming up week after next. Then I go to Salt Lake City for an eight-performance rodeo. This will be either my 29th or 30th year there," he said. "I do Kissimmee in February; it's the biggest rodeo east of the Mississippi and I've done it since 1963 or '64."

While bantering back and forth with rodeo clowns and reminding people to buy their "lucky souvenir program" may be what most people associate a rodeo announcer with, McSpadden's responsibilities can be great.

Since rodeo is a sport with considerable potential for tragedy, he must be prepared for anything. And when a cowboy or a clown gets seriously hurt, McSpadden is the voice of authority calming the crowd and explaining the situation.

"You're dealing with animals. A bucking bull doesn't know whether he's got a world champion on his back or an ex-convict," McSpadden said. "I've seen several contestants killed in arenas ... you don't lie to the crowd. You tell them what you think.

"You, in effect, say, 'I'm not a doctor, but based on my past experience, this looks bad.' If a bull steps on a guy, that's how you get hurt. A bull's foot will shatter ribs and puncture lungs. Getting hooked 10 or 15 feet looks wild, but it usually doesn't hurt."

He added, "You never know, when a guy nods his head (that's he ready to leave the chute on a bull), whether he's going to have one of those wrecks or not. You hope and pray that he doesn't, but it can sure happen."

McSpadden said that uncertainty over what a future performance will bring is what keeps him always interested in the next rodeo or the next ride.

Summit heads support democracy

PARIS (AP) — Leaders of the world's seven richest industrial nations, striving to project a united front, voiced support Saturday for democracy behind the Iron Curtain and condemned repression in China during a gathering that even attracted the attention of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The economic summit was so harmonious, in fact, that the world leaders decided to end several hours earlier than scheduled on Sunday, the first time any of the 15 annual gatherings was cut short.

During one of the sessions Saturday, a letter from Gorbachev was read to the leaders. In it, he petitioned the West to consider the reforms he is making in the Soviet economy and to let his country play a larger role in world economic affairs.

"Our perestroika (restructuring) is inseparable from the policy tending toward full and entire participation in the world economy," wrote Gorbachev, whose letter was relayed by French President Francois Mitterrand.

Any disputes that did occur among the leaders of the United States, France, West Germany, Japan, Britain, Italy and Canada were either papered over or ignored as the summit nations issued a political communique Saturday.

On China, the seven democracies called on Beijing to "cease action against those who have done no more than claim their legitimate rights to democracy and liberty" but the leaders stopped short of announcing any stiffer sanctions in response to the bloody crackdown on dissent.

The leaders also condemned international terrorism and vowed to bring terrorists to justice.

The second day of discussions was held on the 35th floor of the Grand Arch, an avant-garde marble and glass office building offering a spectacular view of Paris.

Secretary of State James Baker, in a briefing for reporters, called his ninth consecutive summit "the most harmonious and one of the most productive summits that I have attended."

The rich nations were lavish in their encouragement for political and economic reforms in Poland and Hungary, but they did not back up the kind words with any specific commitment of money.

But Bush indicated that he was pleased with the support provided by his fellow summit leaders, saying the commitments they made had "vindicated" his approach to fostering economic and political reforms in the communist East bloc.

Bush was attending the summit at the end of a history-making trip to Poland and Hungary, where he unveiled a $140 million package of aid to the two nations.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said that all of the summit nations were "very anxious to help. We are all helping, each in our own way."

The summit will conclude Sunday with a round of meetings and the issuance of a final communique, expected to focus on such issues as Third World debt and a pledge to clean up global pollution.

Annual Bluegrass Festival ready for foot-stomping music weekend

MOBEETIE — The Ninth Annual Bluegrass Festival in Mobeetie gets under way Friday at the Old Mobeetie Jail Museum, with fiddles and guitars twanging and feet stomping to the music.

Panhandle Bluegrass and Old Tyme Music Association, a non-profit organization, brings the best of area bluegrass music to Mobeetie each year. And this year more groups will be on hand for bluegrass fans.

The festival starts Friday at 8 p.m. and will continue throughout Saturday and Sunday morning.

Groups belonging to the association attending the festival this year are The Vinings, Jack Selby and Family, Travis Whaley and Family, Flat Mountain, Now and Then, West Texas Grass, Burk Brothers and Sherman, High Velocity, Smith Family Christian, Circuit Riders, Last Chance Bluegrass and Top of Texas Cloggers.

The association will be bringing in several other groups to add to the entertainment this year, including Second Time Around of Rowlett, Highway Forty of Oklahoma City, Gore Brothers of Big Lake, Big Sandy of Lubbock and Tri State Bluegrass Express of Amarillo.

The masters of ceremony for the 1989 festival will be Doc De Weese from KOMX-FM Radio in Pampa, Amarillo Ford dealer John Chandler, Robin Marsh from Channel 10 in Amarillo, and radio disc jockey Willie Paine.

The festival will run from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m. Friday night. On Saturday it will be from 12 p.m. to 12 a.m. Sunday's activities will only be in the morning from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. for three hours of gospel music.

Co-sponsoring the festival is the Old Mobeetie Association, which oversees the museum and its surrounding land where the festival is held.

In 1979, area bluegrass fans organized the first "Old Mobeetie Bluegrass Festival" which was held in 1980. There were just a few bands and very few people to listen. However, the festival has grown since then, said Brian Vining of Pampa, association member.

"Our 'Old Mobeetie Festival' has grown so well that for the last few years it, along with membership fees, has been the sole source of our income," he said.

The members have also built a new stage and ticket booth, planted trees, added electrical hook-ups and purchased a storage building at the festival grounds.

Panhandle Bluegrass and Old Tyme Music Association was the brain child of a few pickers looking for something to do with a special kind of music and wanting to share it with others, he said.

"Meetings were held on Sunday afternoon at the Amarillo Senior Citizens building, but the picking had to stop early because of church services just across the street. This situation prompted a search for another meeting place, and we then moved meetings to the Western Cowpunchers Building where we still meet," commented Vining, adding that the new meeting place also made possible changing the meetings to Saturday when more people could attend and picking could last longer.

The association has had concerts over the years with their own bands performing. Most of these concerts have been for special benefits. However, according to Vining, they have all promoted bluegrass and old-time music.

"Throughout the years we have had weekend picnics and special occasion parties for members. These always mean a lot of good food and a lot of good picking and visiting," he said.

The association has worked with the Western Cowpunchers

Association of Amarillo in organizing a bluegrass festival held in June.

"There was a really good turnout for a first-time festival and we are hoping they will make it an annual affair," commented Vining.

This year is the first year that the association is paying some expenses of bands coming to the festival in Mobeetie so that they can bring in better bands.

People are already gathering to help clean up the grounds for the festival, he said.

"From the humble beginnings of four bluegrass and old-time music lovers with a dream, we have grown to a bluegrass family with around 350 members (families). This has all been made possible by a lot of good people doing a lot of hard work because they love the music and the fellowship it brings and want to preserve that feeling and music for generations to come," concluded Vining.

Tickets will be $5 for Friday and $8 for Saturday. After 5:30 p.m., Saturday tickets will be $6. Two-day tickets may be purchased for $12. Sunday's admission will be free. Children under 14 will be admitted free.

Ticket information may be obtained by calling 1-372-4739.

Workers' comp bill in conference

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers continued working Saturday on a proposed overhaul of the state workers' compensation system with members of a House and Senate conference committee spouting equal amounts of optimism and pessimism on resolving the controversial issue.

And the closed-door negotiating sessions were criticized by one senator who said she was excluded from a private meeting for fear of violating the Texas Open Meetings Act.

At that session, four of five House committee members were meeting with two of the five Senate conferees. If there is a majority of both sides meeting privately, the law is violated.

Sen. Cyndi Taylor Krier, said, "I had a choice of either violating the law or giving up my rights to participate as a member of the conference committee."

"At that point, I said, 'This isn't working for anybody and asked the lieutenant governor if we could go into public session and he immediately urged that that be done,'" said Ms. Krier, R-San Antonio.

Progress was slow, however, as the committee assembled.

"We've got one foot in the grave," said Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan.

But Krier said, "We haven't thrown any sand on top of it."

She added, "We've resolved the concepts on all issues. It's just that final nitty gritty wordsmithing the bill. We're at the hardest point where you are literally discussing it word by word, line by line, paragraph by paragraph."

Lawmakers said they were hopeful they could produce a final bill before the special session ends Wednesday, but earlier plans for the House and Senate to vote on the proposal Sunday seemed doubtful.

The major controversy was over setting up a system to resolve disputes between the insurance carrier and injured worker when either party is not satisfied by the administrative award.

The House and Senate agreed to allow an avenue for these disputes to be appealed up to a jury trial, but that settlements reached before the trial ended would be reviewed by the administrative agency. This, they argued, would cut down on claimants trying to leverage a higher award through the threat of litigation.

But Smith said the House and Senate were hung up on the proceedings for an earlier administrative hearing.

Now they've tried gourmet cuisine

SANTA FE, N.M. — After hearing our friends rave about the wonders of shopping and dining in this mountain paradise, Caryl and I decided to check things out for ourselves.

Speaking on behalf of redneck guys from Texas, the shopping is OK. But what they call gourmet Mexican dining is enough to put a boy from Texas off his feed indefinitely.

After shopping the plaza we were looking to do some serious eating.

From restaurant to restaurant we went, finally settling on a place that advertised THE LATEST IN FINE SOUTHWESTERN CUISINE AND DELICACIES.

The place offered food priced higher than the annual salary of a whole family of illegal aliens. But what the heck, we're on vacation, right?

We had come looking for heaping plates of cheese enchiladas and chili rellenos and beans and rice. What we got was a waiter named Bartholomew who talked with a lisp and kept touching me on the shoulder while he recited the menu from memory.

"Tonight we're offering the cutest little pigmentless salmon served with a green sauce and our own special tomatoes and chiles. That comes with fresh garden green beans mixed with raisins."

"I thought this was a Mexican place," I said to Bartholomew as I moved his hand off my shoulder. "Oh, sir," he said, "we only serve the latest in gourmet dishes that carry that special Santa Fe flavor and freshness."

Caryl, never being one to be intimidated by waiters named Bartholomew who keep touching her husband, spoke right up. "Well, I came for enchiladas. Let's go to Taco Bell."

"Enchiladas? We have the most delightful enchiladas that offer a flavor and aroma so subtle yet provocative that ..."

"Fine," Caryl said, moving the waiter's hand from my shoulder again, "we'll have the enchiladas."

"And for an appetizer we'll be serving ..." His hand touched my shoulder.

"Fine, we'll take it."

Off Bartholomew pranced to the kitchen. When he returned it was with a plate of something that looked like he'd just picked it from the garden. "Girls and boys, this will be fun. This is a rare mountain flower that only blooms two weeks each summer and is delicious. Have fun."

He pranced off and left us staring at a whole plate of flowers stuffed with goat cheese. Caryl looked at me. I looked at Caryl.

Off Beat

By Bear Mills

"Are we on Candid Camera?" she asked. "We're paying six bucks for an appetizer of daisies? Let's go to Taco Bell."

"Aw c'mon, honey, let's at least try them. If we like them, who knows. I mean, it's cheaper than steak."

Truth be told, the flowers and goat cheese weren't too bad. If you're into eating flowers and goat cheese, that is.

Then came the main course. Bartholomew was so proud he was nearly trembling.

"Can I cut this for you?" he asked.

"I think I can cut my own enchiladas," Caryl said.

"I was talking to your husband."

"Uh, gee, I don't think so," I told him. "But thanks for tucking in my bib, anyway. You can take your hands out of my shirt now."

The enchiladas didn't look too bad. Of course, they were surrounded by fried bananas and green beans. Yummy.

"I'm going to Taco Bell," Caryl said.

"Coming?"

"Let's at least try it," I said, cutting into my enchilada. "Uh, on second thought, I'll race you to the car."

"And how are you boys and girls doing with this delectable meal?" asked Bartholomew as he bounced up.

"Look, Bart, I don't want to make a scene. Serving fried bananas and green beans with Mexican food is one thing. But your enchiladas being moldy is another. This sucker is green as a grasshopper on the inside."

"Oh, you silly boy," Bartholomew answered. "That's the spinach."

After paying the bill, nearly $60, Caryl and I went and had burritos at Taco Bell for $1.79 each. There was not a fried banana in sight.

So now we can say we've tried gourmet cuisine. We can also say we spent $65 to eat at Taco Bell. Are vacations fun or what?

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

It's time to bring them back home

In January the Communist regime in Vietnam released from prison Ganshin Yoshida, a Japanese Buddhist monk who had been imprisoned in 1975 in Communist jails and "re-education camps." Yoshida told reporters that, at the camp in Vietnam where he was held the last seven years, he had seen "five or six" prisoners of war who spoke English. He said the men had been tortured and abused, and were put to work on construction projects.

Predictably, the communist regime in Hanoi denied Yoshida's report. An official said, "Our government has repeatedly discussed that issue in the past. There are no more POWs in Vietnam. But this is the same communist regime that, in the Paris Peace Accords, promised it would never conquer South Vietnam — then promptly proceeded to do so. This is a regime built on lies, and any statement it makes should be treated as such.

The question now is: What should the United States do? The U.S. embassy in Japan is talking with Yoshida. Let's hope it's trying to get from him the location of the camp and any personal identification of the men he saw.

We should also exert more pressure on the Hanoi regime. As are communist regimes across the world, Hanoi is suffering from an economic crisis and needs contacts with the West. It remains hostile to China, and its major ally, the Soviet Union, suffers from a severe systemic crisis. The United States could exchange full diplomatic relations with Hanoi for absolute, full cooperation on locating our POWs.

The United States should also begin pressuring for information from China and the Soviet Union. The Chinese can't provide us with much information on current conditions in Vietnam, but they were close allies of Vietnam in 1975, the year South Vietnam was conquered, and surely must know about the fate of our fighting men left behind, some of whom were shot down over Chinese territory. If China's communist regime is replaced by a government more tolerant of freedom, that new government would likely be willing to help us. But even if the regime survives, it may be willing to accommodate us to help get back the military hardware President Bush has cut off.

The Soviet Union should be pressured as part of cooperation on arms reduction. Arms-control accords subsist on trust. But how can we trust a government that won't help us find out about our men missing in action? Indeed, nothing would make Soviets more popular in America than helping us in this area.

Americans should also pressure President Bush to make him care more about accounting for our men. He was CIA director during the period when North Vietnam conquered South Vietnam, and knows all about this. He knows that 1,730 Americans are still listed as missing in action in Vietnam, and 634 missing in Cambodia, Laos and China. Their fate should now be Bush's chief concern as commander-in-chief. A witness, Ganshin Yoshida, has now gone public. It's time to bring our men back home.

Liberalism has harmed blacks

In the heady days of the '60s and '70s there weren't enough black conservatives to get a game of pinocle going. Black conservatives are still nothing to write home about, but their numbers are on the upswing.

Conservatism may not be the ultimate philosophical home for blacks, but it's a fairly safe bet it won't be liberalism. Liberalism has done more harm to blacks than one-time Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox, Mississippi's Theodore Bilbo, who wanted to deport all black Americans, and all the Klansmen could have ever done.

Let's look at it. The liberal philosophy that criticized chaste sex mores had its most devastating impact on blacks. Having given up traditional values, where black teen illegitimacy was once lower than whites (1918), and total black illegitimacy was 13 percent (1939), today's black illegitimacy is 55 percent. Kids living in two-parent families are down to less than 50 percent where it once stood at 85 percent.

Criminal coddling is another component of liberal philosophy; it has made life a nightmare for many blacks. Murder is the chief cause of death for young black males.

In some black neighborhoods, people don't dare go near their windows, or they sleep on the floor for fear of being hit by stray bullets. In some neighborhoods, delivery men and telephone repairmen refuse to service customers or demand escorts for fear of robbery and assault. There's the mass destruction of public telephones, parks, swimming pools and other amenities important to poor people who may not be able to afford private phones, or visit national parks, or swim at country clubs.

The same liberals blessed the nation with widespread drug usage. Those who argued against LSD, marijuana and cocaine were portrayed as cranks and pariahs interfering with good clean fun.

Laughter and ridicule greented the person who suggested these drugs might lead to addiction. Now drugs are in. They've had their worst effect on blacks, turning youths into rap-talking zombies and pushers, and black neighborhoods into Beirut.

Liberals virutally destroyed any chances for black academic excellence. Their early battle was against standard curriculum, that is, "courses irrelevant to the black experience."

Emboldened by that success, they virtually eliminated all traditional academic standards which they portrayed as irrelevant or possibly racist. Substituted were student rights to: use foul language, absent themselves, disrupt classes, assault teachers and fellow students, and have a contentless curriculum.

Today, large numbers of black students cannot begin to meet academic qualifications for admittance to colleges. But not to worry, liberals attacked college tests and academic standards as racist.

It's high time that blacks realize that many politicians, judges, police and school authorities hold contempt for their right to live normal, peaceful, productive lives. Black politicians, "leaders" and civil rights organizations have sold us a bill of goods — rotten goods, double-talk and unconscionable deceit.

For example, they fight tooth and nail against proposals for tuition tax credits or school vouchers to give parents an educational choice for their children. They say, let's save public schools and not give up hope. Yet the good Rev. Jesse Jackson, Del. Walter Fauntroy (D-D.C.), and D.C. Mayor Marion Barry and others, send their children to private schools.

Blacks cannot depend on politicians. They must protect their own neighborhoods, even if that means using violence to clean up drug corners and crackhouses. They must show up on school premises to mete out instant justice to miscreants.

"Williams," you say, "that sounds like vigilantism." Well, I say: What do you do when established legal authorities refuse to do their job — just sit and take it? And for how long?

A conversation with ole Pete

News item: An investigation into Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose's gambling habits alleged he made bets on the Atlanta Braves.

Could this conversation have ever taken place?

"I want a dollar (a thousand) on the Braves tonight," Pete Rose said to his bookie.

Normally bookies are excited when they get an obvious sucker bet, but this bet was such an obvious loser Rose's bookie felt he had a duty to offer some advice.

"Peter," he began, "nobody bets on the Atlanta Braves. Wouldn't you like to rethink all this?"

"Who's the future Hall-of-Famer here, me or you?" asked Rose. "I want a dollar on the Braves."

"Pete, Pete, Pete," said the bookie, "base hits are one thing. Bets are quite another. Nobody has won a cent on the Braves since they moved out of Milwaukee 20 years ago.

"They have no hitting, they have no pitching, they have no fielding, they're slow, and their bat boy is into science projects at school. Why don't you consider the Mets against the Dodgers tonight instead?"

"Whose money is this," asked Rose, "mine or yours?"

"Soon to be mine if you stay with the Braves," said the bookie, who continued, "The Braves are the same team who traded Steve Bedrosian to the Phillies for Ozzie Virgil.

"Bedrosian promptly won the Cy Young award as the league's best pitcher and Virgil promptly went into a coma.

Lewis Grizzard

"Haven't you been paying attention to baseball?"

"And there's more, Pete. Here's a team that traded two of the best young players in baseball, Brett Butler and Bruce Jacoby, to the Cleveland Indians for pitcher Lynn Barker.

"Barkers arm fell off the next day and Butler and Jacoby are still playing. You want to bet on a team that will do something that stupid?"

"But I like the Braves uniforms," said Rose.

"Uniforms? You'd bet on a team because of its uniforms?" asked the startled bookie.

"Argentina had great uniforms when it fought the British in the Falkland Islands war and it didn't do them any good.

"And remember how Napoleon dressed? Like he just stepped off the cover of GQ. But did that help him at Waterloo?"

"Look," said Rose, "you want to take my money or not?"

"Sure, I want to take you money," said the bookie, "but I know better ways for you to throw it away. Why don't you flush it down the toilet? You'll see it a lot longer than you will if you bet on the Braves.

"Or, why don't you put it in a nice saving and loan? That would be a lot safer. Or why don't you invest in some real estate in Texas or buy a used DeLorean."

"Look," said Rose, "I just like to gamble, and it doesn't matter whether or not I win. I just like the action."

"Who knows that any better than me," said the bookie. "But betting on the Atlanta Braves isn't gambling. It's gambling only when you have a chance to win. This is a team that couldn't win so the front office fired the team mascot.

"This is the team that thought Sonny Jackson was a major league shortstop, a team that once had a one-eyed pitcher and a catcher who closed his eyes when he swung, a team that drug Dale Murphy down to its own level, a team that leads the major leagues in the number of fans that avoid them like the plague. And you still want to bet on them?"

"OK," said Rose, "then give me a dollar on Jimmy Carter returning to the White House."

"Now," said Rose's bookie, "you're making some sense."

High court stumbled on abortion ruling

Justice Harry Blackmun, in prose so frantic and unmeasured it might have been written by a feminist study group, declared in his dissent over the Missouri abortion case that he feared "for the integrity of, and public esteem for, this court."

In the same near-hysterical fashion, Blackmun claimed that "never in my memory has a plurality announced a judgment of this court that so foments disregard for the law ... — and that the decision, moreover, was "profoundly destructive of this court as an institution."

His fevered exaggeration aside, Blackmun has a point. The recent decision upholding a Missouri law that restricts abortion may well erode public respect for the Supreme Court, for it proves how brittle and even mortal a "settled" court opinion can be.

Americans like to believe their justices decipher constitutional truth from aged documents with the scientific precision of chemists; it is disillusioning, therefore, to learn that the court has simply been winging it in at least one important case.

But Blackmun denounced the wrong court for this unfortunate state of affairs. If the public is disenchanted, the present court majority isn't to blame. The fault lies with the 1973 majority led by Blackmun himself, which first invented a constitutional right to abortion, substituting its political and moral judgment for the democratic decisions of 50 state legislatures.

As usual, Justice Antonin Scalia exposed this truth with eloquent clarity in his own opinion. Although Scalia agreed that the Missouri law is constitutional, he strongly opposed the mealy-mouthed way in which the court sidestepped the implications of its own decision, refusing to consign the 1973 ruling, Roe vs. Wade, to the judicial dustbin it so richly deserves.

By not tackling the broader subject of Roe, Scalia wrote, the majority "continuously distorts the public perception of the role of this court." That role is not to address "what I believe to be, and many of our citizens recognize to be, a political issue," as opposed to a constitutional question, Scalia said.

As a result of the court's timidity, Scalia predicted, "we can now look forward to at least another term with carts full of mail from the public and streets full of demonstrators, urging us — their unelected and life-tenured judges who have been awarded those extraordinary, undemocratic characteristics precisely in order that we might follow the law despite the popular will — to follow the popular will."

Can anyone doubt he's correct? The court has already agreed to examine the laws of three other states that attempt to restrict abortion. What's more, as Blackmun bitterly noted, the Missouri decision "is filled with winks and nods and knowing glances to those who would do away" with Roe altogether.

When the Supreme Court dismantles established legal doctrine, it should do the deed as quickly as possible. Instead, in the Missouri case, the court chose to tease us with a glimpse of where it might be headed, but without providing any firm assurance it will reach the destination, let alone precisely when.

The court's coy stance is unfair to both sides of the abortion debate. If the regulation of abortion is to devolve eventually to the states, why not let the struggle begin now? Why have us wait for another Supreme Court term, or still a third, to hear the final word?

Does the court hope to preserve the pretense that its 1973 decision had something to do with the Constitution? Sorry, but it is far too late to maintain that that judicial emperor is still wearing clothes.

Letters to the Editor

He can't remain quiet any longer

To the editor:

I am one of your neighbors living in Pampa 35 of my 38 years. I have worked and attended Pampa schools and churches. You might say my family and I are dedicated to Pampa and its citizens. We do not want anything to happen to Pampa, but I cannot sit back and keep my mouth shut any longer.

I am one of those people you may hate very shortly, being among those who dare challenge the almighty Hoechst Celanese Corporation. My name is on a list that is being passed around to Celanese employees, who are told not to have anything to do with them or their families. Celanese employees are told that these people are trying to ruin your job and your city; besides they only want to make a quick buck, anyway.

Well, I am here to tell Hoechst Celanese that it is working, you have brain-washed many people. For instance, people whom I have known for years that work for Hoechst Celanese will go out of their way not to talk to me or make any contact with me or my family.

Why was there so much support from city and county governments when Hoechst Celanese was in trouble? Although when Ingersoll Rand had three times as many people who lost their jobs a few years back, where was the rally and local government support? Is it the reason that Hoechst Celanese has a bigger profit and pays more tax money?

Mr. Upchurch made a statement, quote, "Germans know how to kill," which many thought was a racist remark. Well, maybe it was a little harsh to say to an entire race of people. He should have said, "Hoechst knows how to kill." Hoechst is also in the business of killing unborn babies. The company is marketing a pill all over Europe and trying to get in the U.S. market. The pregnant woman needs only to pop a pill and her unwanted child will be aborted. I would say they are experts in the killing business.

Now, would you trust Hoechst to tell you if they were killing you and your family with chemicals? Remember, the local Celanese employees, your friends and neighbors do not make the decisions of what their company will manufacture. Please ask yourself before you take sides, "Can I trust the world's largest chemical company with our families' health?"

Do you honestly believe Hoechst cares about you, your family, your water and air? How about your unborn children and grandchildren?

This isn't freedom, this is a disgrace

To the editor:

I know that lately many of you have heard enough about the flag burnings. However, sometimes one's personal feelings continue to grow and from this growing, pain turns to sadness.

I am foreign born and came to the United States at the age of 3. During my elementary days I carried a grudge against the American heritage. During our studies of American history, my country, England, always seemed to be the bad guy. Not only did the teachers put down the British rule, but also my fellow classmates did so.

As I matured, I looked back and realized how awful it must have been living in the beginning stages of the building of America. At the age of 12, I received my American citizenship and, with this, grew proud to declare that I was an American citizen.

Two symbols stood before me, the Eagle and the American flag. These symbols reminded me of the men, women and children who fought and died to protect this country.

In the ten years I learned much more about the Flag, through Scouting, church, school and politics. I learned the general display of the Flag, how it was to be carried in parades and held at ceremonies, where it was to stand in churches and auditoriums, the meaning of the Flag flying at half staff, the proper folding of the Flag and also the proper way of disposal.

As you know in general assembly and other ceremonies, we pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America. Men, women and children stand erect and place their right hands over their hearts while military men and women salute this Flag. This is for the respect and pride we have for our nation.

Why do certain groups twist the meaning of rights, that have been given to each citizen, to fit his or her own needs? How can one burn the piece of cloth that stands for one of the strongest nations and say, "This is my Freedom of Speech." Let me say, "This is not freedom, this is a disgrace."

Citizens, be proud of who you are and the symbols that represent you and your countrymen. Too many citizens gave their lives so this Flag could fly free and represent a part of our American heritage.

Appreciates effort by Postal Service

To the editor:

So many times people complain about our United States Postal Service, but few are the times when they are recognized. I have recently moved to Pampa to pursue a rather challenging career, but unfortunately I have had to temporarily leave by family behind.

July 11th marks a change of my attitude about the U.S. Post Office because of their deep interest and concern to see that I receive a very special letter. I have a daughter named Desiree who felt it very necessary to write me a letter with an urgent message. She took it upon herself to write the letter and address the envelope without asking her grandparents for any help. Five days later I received the letter and was deeply touched by her effort and determination. What really surprised me was the fact I received this letter a distance of 550 miles across the state of Texas with no postage whatsoever and a partially incorrect address.

This only tells me wonderful people must have been involved at the Post Office in paying attention to a little girl's request by making special efforts in delivering the letter. It would have been so easy to have returned the letter stamped "POSTAGE REQUIRED" and "NO SUCH ADDRESS." But they didn't.

I would especially love to thank Robert Bigham, my letter carrier, for a job most appreciated.

Information came from Texaco report

To the editor:

You made an error when you rewrote my recent letter to you concerning the failure of the Associated Press wire service to show both sides of the question of industrial toxic emissions.

It was Texaco Port Neches and not the Associated Press who pointed out that the toxic emissions data that the California Congressman Henry Waxman accused Texaco of emitting was not correct.

I found the Texaco rebuttal in the Bureau of National Affairs weekly publication.

Curt B. Beck
Pampa

Editor's Note: The AP article on Page 7 in the Wednesday, June 21, edition of The Pampa News — specifically concerning residents living around the Port Neches plant — notes that "government and industry [Texaco] officials" said the information used to prepare the report was outdated. Your letter did not indicate where you had obtained your information on Texaco's statement; since you had referred only to the AP articles, and not to any industry publication, I assumed you were referring to the AP articles that you had cited when you made your statement regarding Texaco's rebuttal, and changed the wording to indicate that. Apparently I did so mistakenly, so I apologize for that. Still, at least one AP article DID include a reference to the claim concerning use of outdated information in the toxic pollutants report.

Flag-burning's now a new right for us

To the editor:

It is quite an awesome thing to realize the new right that we have been given as citizens of this nation. The right to burn our flag. What a tremendous freedom!

Just think, no longer will we have to hide in caverns and dark hidden places of the night in order to burn our flags. No longer will we have to hold our flag burning protest meetings underground, risking our lives and the lives of our offspring, struggling to guard this sacred precious freedom. No longer will we have to make secret plans to escape such a tyrannical government that would prohibit us from exercising our God-given right.

And we all know that it IS our God-given right. (Ask any flag-burner.) Yes. The right to burn our flag. A landmark decision. Now we can all take our flags out and burn them publicly. We can have neighborhood flag-burning parties, flag-burning dances and flag-burning parades. Maybe someday, we will even have a national flag-burning day!

Let's exercise our right freely. We can use small flags as candles on our birthday cakes. We can create new innovative ways to burn our flags. We can roll them up and use them in our fireplaces. Such a mature way to protest.

What are we protesting? Anything! Are you angry? Protest! Burn a flag! You have the right. We can write books: 1,001 Ways to Burn Your Flag, Teaching Your Children to Burn the Flag, The Night I Burned My Flag. Those of us who have been closet flag-burners may now freely come out into the open and testify to the world about the torturous methods of flag-burner persecutors.

The right to burn our flag. A right that is no longer reserved for our enemies. I am sure that they would be happy to come and help us burn our flag ... or maybe they already have.

Think about the far-reaching effects this could have around the world if other nations start following our excellent example of true liberty and begin to give their people the right to burn their flags. An international victory! Carry it to the far corners of the earth, so that all men everywhere will know and understand, "You have the right to burn your flags!"

A breakthrough for humanity. The right to burn our flag. Something to be proud about???

Let us support new endeavors

To the editor:

It seems that we have developed such a negative about almost everything here in Pampa. Rarely do we see or hear anything positive in this column or among the people.

One of my big gripes has been the shortage of good eating establishments here in Pampa, particularly for Sunday. We have a restaurant that has opened for Sunday lunch. The food is attractive, fresh and, above all else, good. The atmosphere and service is excellent. I hesitate to tell the public about this place because for the last three Sundays, there has been no line to spend part of the time just standing and waiting. The Coronado Inn has this lovely Sunday Buffet and it seems the public is not aware and supportive of their efforts. I very much appreciate what the new owners of the Coronado Inn are trying to do here in Pampa.

I highly recommend the Sunday Buffet at the Coronado Inn. We need to support any new endeavor here in Pampa. Won't you join me and others this Sunday for lunch at the Coronado Inn?

Policeman saves truck driver in lake rescue

DALLAS (AP) — A Richardson police officer who says he is only a "mediocre" swimmer jumped into Lake Ray Hubbard and dragged a truck driver to safety after the man's rig had crashed through a bridge guardrail.

The trucker, Leland Menefee, was driving west on the Interstate 30 bridge over Lake Ray Hubbard about 3:25 p.m. Friday when a right front tire blew out, sending the rig and about 100 feet of guardrail into water 28 feet deep.

The pressure of the water shattered the windshield, cutting Menefee's forehead, Dallas police said.

"Fortunately for him, a cushion on his seat came out, he grabbed it, and floated to the surface," said B.W. Daugherty of the Dallas police traffic division.

Richardson officer Bud Renner was off duty and driving behind the truck when it plunged into the lake. Renner, his wife and three children were on their way from his Rockwall home to Richardson to pick up his paycheck.

"I got out to see if anything could be done," Renner recalled. "I noticed the driver hanging on to some debris. He appeared to be hurt pretty good."

Renner borrowed rope from a bystander on the lake shore and swam out some 50 feet to help Menefee.

"I'm not a strong swimmer," Renner said. "He was far enough out there, but I thought it was within my ability. As I was swimming out I was trying to get his attention and I told him to stay on the truck seat. I just talked to him and told him to stay calm."

A ski boat then came to the aid of both men and towed them back to shore.

Menefee, of Mount Pleasant, was treated for minor injuries at Mesquite Community Hospital and was released shortly after being pulled from the water.

Objectively speaking, your broker probably doesn't.

Most brokerage firms offer "house brands" of investment products. These proprietary investments are important to the company, because they not only receive commission income, they also receive management fee income and underwriting income from their sale. With this triple incentive it's not hard to understand how these products invariably rise to the top of your broker's list.

Unfortunately, when your broker is partial to a product, you can't get impartial counsel. This lack of objectivity is one of the most compelling reasons to consider making a change to a Private Ledger/Linsco financial consultant.

You see, Private Ledger/Linsco analysts perform research for over 1,200 independent brokers. We look at over a hundred potential investments to select the top performers. Which our brokers submit for your consideration. We don't have "house brands" because no single investment can be the best in every situation. Call us. We'll tell you how to get a free one-hour consultation with a representative in your community. After all, objectivity is a matter of choice. And if you want choices, you need a Private Ledger/Linsco broker.

French bicentennial peaks with storm of sound and color

By MORT ROSENBLUM

PARIS (AP) — France fired its glory days to a crescendo Saturday, saluting its revolution's bicentennial with a storm of sound and color over the city many Frenchmen regard as the capital of the world.

A 45-minute spray of 170,000 rockets over the Eiffel Tower at nightfall was previewed by early morning fireworks, ending a parade described by its creator as two hours of controlled madness.

A million people mobbed the mile-long Champs-Elysees to see the Florida A&M University marching band dance the California worm, a Russian ballerina waltz on ice skates with a polar bear, and lancers fling flowing French tricolors like batons.

Bronx drummers flanked a full-size locomotive, banging its sound on 55-gallon steel barrels. Chinese students wheeled bicycles, solemnly jingling their bells, under a banner reading, "We Will Continue," a reference to the crushed pro-democracy movement in their homeland.

On one gigantic float, a conductor-witch doctor in a tux gyrated atop a rolling mountain of pounding African drummers. At the summit, six undulating Senegalese women, dressed in blue, white and red gowns, depicted a waving French flag.

Halfway through, diva Jessye Norman electrified the heart of Paris with "La Marseillaise," France's anthem. That she was American, organizers said, highlighted the revolution's universal character.

But the crux of a thrilling, infuriating weekend for the French will never forget seemed to be the traditional July 14 morning event, when France paraded its missiles down the Champs-Elysees.

Behind glass at the Place de la Concorde, President Francois Mitterrand was flanked by the leaders of 33 nations from five continents, including six of the richest and some of the poorest.

He sat between George Bush, president of a superpower, and Felix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast, symbol of an empire France colonized and, by its measure, civilized.

Bicentennial celebrations and the coinciding Group of Seven summit drove home Mitterrand's message that France sees itself neither as part of the First World nor the Third but rather of a separate constellation illuminating the way for others.

Not everyone shared official enthusiasm for the French Revolution — or its 1989 commemoration.

Many Parisians fled town, afraid of crowds or unwilling to fete a violent civil war. Some who stayed grumbled bitterly at the massive security blanket.

"To an old Parisian, this reminds me of something I have seen before, but without the swastikas," remarked one.

Many saw ironies in the system of privilege that remains 200 years after the revolution.

Only those with invitations, or the patience to wait six hours along the route, got a good look at the parade. Television coverage failed to capture the zany, impressionist mood.

Thursday night's street dance at the Bastille was billed as the world's biggest all-night party. In a twist of history, officers stormed the citizenry to break it up.

The well-connected had dinner at dawn with Miss Norman and actress Grace Jones at Le Palace. Others simply found the nearest noise and did anything from the funky chicken to the fox-trot.

The mood had an occasional ugly turn as young toughs threw firecrackers at people's feet or dropped gas bombs into crowds.

As the weekend wound down, Mitterrand's chauffeur set out on a personal mission to carry France's message across the world. He is leading a convoy of Renault vans to Tokyo via Moscow.

Three bear the names associated with the French Revolution since 1789: Liberty, Equality and Brotherhood. The fourth is named Hope.

Computer 'chat line' led to sexual assault of young teen girl

HOUSTON (AP) — Police who arrested a 41-year-old Houston man on charges of sexually assaulting a 13-year-old girl he met through a computer "chat line" say they have found the names of about 100 other young girls in his home.

The arrest of Colin Herbst, an ex-convict who served time for aggravated sexual assault of a child, has prompted authorities to warn parents about the dangers of unsupervised use of such computer services by children.

"You have no idea who you're talking to," Houston police investigator Donna Peck said. "These people aren't going to tell you that they're ex-cons and that they're child molesters." Herbst apparently met his young victim through a U.S. Videotel service called Chat USA about three weeks ago, Ms. Peck said.

After a week of communicating with the man through computer messages, the girl sent Herbst her telephone number and the two began talking by phone daily, she said.

"He gained her confidence," she said. "He was very kind, very charming. She was thrilled that he took so much time for her, and treated her like she was special."

After about a week of telephone conversations, the girl told Peck, Herbst began telling her about sexual fantasies and eventually persuaded her to meet with him. The girl was met near her home by a cab that had been paid in advance to take her to Herbst's home, where he allegedly assaulted her, Peck said.

The girl told her mother what happened after she was returned home in another cab. Police said Herbst, who was arrested Thursday, has denied guilt and refused to give a statement.

"Her mother was shocked," Peck said. "She feels very guilty about what happened. She had been glad to see her daughter working with the computer, rather than out on the streets. She had no idea what was going on."

Police found a quantity of pornographic materials common to pedophiles at Herbst's house, along with handwritten accounts of sexual encounters between adult men and young girls, Peck said.

Investigators said they also found a list of about 100 young girls' names, many accompanied by phone numbers, addresses, ages and physical descriptions. All of the girls apparently were contacted by Herbst through the same computer service, Peck said.

Lobbyist at center of vice case in D.C.

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — To friends and acquaintances, lobbyist Craig J. Spence was an enigma: They couldn't figure out whether he was a character out of a James Bond movie or a businessman living a Walter Mitty fantasy.

Those who attended Spence's star-studded parties or accepted his money said they viewed his peculiarities — like traveling with a gaggle of security guards and communicating by walkie-talkie — as the props of a man on the move, Washington-style.

"He looked like a riverboat gambler, he was a bachelor and very wealthy and always looking for business, but that seemed like such a common thing in Washington," said former Ambassador Robert Neumann.

Spence once arranged for Neumann, who was ambassador to Saudi Arabia and several other countries, to travel on an expenses-paid trip with his wife to Japan.

The 48-year-old Spence is the most prominent of several men identified in the investigation of a Washington callboy ring.

The Washington Times, citing credit card records, reported late last month that Spence had paid as much as $20,000 in a month to a male prostitution ring that was raided earlier this year by police. The paper quoted unidentified male prostitutes and others as saying Spence had bugged his own house, where the lobbyist threw lavish parties for the Washington elite. The mysterious Spence cut a wide social and business swath through Washington, and the breadth of his circle of acquaintances made the story all the more titillating.

The Washington Times reported police obtained credit card slips implicating Spence, as well as many lesser-known Washingtonians, in raids on so-called escort services with names such as "Dream Boys" and "Man to Man."

U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens says he is investigating the prostitution ring, which operated out of a two-story brick house in a prosperous neighborhood, for possible credit card fraud, a white-collar crime that falls under the purview of the Secret Service.

The Secret Service, which is charged with guarding the White House and protecting foreign embassies, also is examining whether one of its uniformed guards violated policy by giving Spence and several friends a late-night White House tour on July 3, 1988. The guard told the Times that Spence gave him an $8,000 gold Rolex watch.

The Washington Times contends the call boy ring's clients included "key officials of the Reagan and Bush administrations." It has identified several mid-level officials by name.

Paul Balach resigned as a political personnel aide to Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole when the story appeared. Charles K. Dutcher, a former associate personnel officer at the Reagan

White House, told the Times he used the service once, paying $155 for one session with a male prostitute.

The newspaper also named Stanley Tapscoff, another former Reagan personnel officer. Tapscoff, who had become a Times editor, resigned from the paper but denied patronizing the ring.

But it is Spence, who did not hold public office, who has attracted most of the attention. What has emerged about him in recent days is a picture of a man who propelled himself into the social limelight by spending money often supplied by Japanese interests to cultivate academics, ambassadors, journalists, members of Congress, military officers and other habitués of the corridors of power.

According to records Spence filed under the Foreign Agents Registration Act, the Policy Study Group of Tokyo gave him $110,000 in a five-month period in 1981. The non-profit group was financed by Japanese business interests and affiliated with a faction of Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

Spence ceased operating as an agent for Japan in late 1987, and recently he seemed to have lowered his profile. Neumann said he attended a small dinner party Spence hosted a few months ago, but, unlike previous Spence soirees, there was no "special guest."

The B-2 Stealth bomber taxis down runway early Saturday morning.

Air Force postpones planned flight for B-2 Stealth bomber

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP)—The first flight of the B-2 stealth bomber was delayed for at least two to three days because of a low fuel pressure reading on one of the advanced bomber's gauges, the Air Force said Saturday.

The problem occurred as a small aircraft strayed into the airspace surrounding the site and made a surprise landing. The Cessna 182 played no role in the decision to scrub the flight, said Col. Douglas Kennett.

"Evidently the pilot of a Cessna 182 landed and says he was lost," said Air Force spokesman Maj. Pat Mullaney. "He has two kids with him."

The light plane, a single-engine commuter aircraft, landed as the B-2 stood at the end of its runway.

Air Force officials had feverishly prepared the radar-evading, $500 million B-2 for its maiden flight, after a key Capitol Hill committee ruled against funding the bat-winged aircraft until it leaves the ground.

At 6:35 a.m. Saturday, nearly an hour after sunrise, the B-2 emerged from its hangar and began its slow roll down the runway.

The plane was arrayed with radar enhancers, reflective material installed at eight points on the leading edge of its wing and seven points on the trailing edge. The enhancers were needed to allow test personnel to keep track of the radar-evading aircraft during the flight.

Aviation buffs who hoped to catch a glimpse of the bomber's first takeoff began gathering outside the perimeter of Air Force Plant 42 early Saturday, Mullaney said. Several dozen were already in place at 2 a.m., Mullaney said.

The $500 million stealth bomber prototype concluded high-speed runway tests on Thursday with the menacing craft lifting its nose wheel briefly in the last step toward flight.

Plans had been for the radar-evading bomber to take off from Air Force Plant 42 here and then land two hours later at nearby Edwards Air Force Base.

While the B-2 was being prepared for flight, congressional opposition over its cost threatened to ground the craft.

The Senate Armed Services Committee, in approving President Bush's $305.5 billion defense-spending request for fiscal 1990, stipulated Friday that no money be spent on the bomber until it flies.

"If that plane doesn't fly, the debate is over," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the panel's chairman. "It is far too expensive to be a stealth taxi."

Last week, the Pentagon announced the first flight tests of the bomber — 18 months behind schedule — would be held during the next two weeks.

The Pentagon hopes to purchase 132 of the bombers.

Mysteries surround flight survivor

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A gunshot wound suffered by Thomas Root is only one of the mysteries surrounding the attorney after he flew apparently unconscious 800 miles down the East Coast.

Officials from Washington to Florida hoped to interview Root about the flight and crash landing in Bahamian waters. But they also are curious about two probes involving his gun collection and conduct as an attorney.

Root was in stable condition Saturday at Memorial Hospital in Hollywood, north of Miami. He was under heavy sedation Friday.

"It's an odd story all right," said Root's brother-in-law, Brett Geer, after visiting Root at the hospital. "With this wound and him not being able to recollect how he got it, I'm sure there is reason for an investigation."

Root had a .32-caliber handgun with him in the cockpit, Geer said.

Investigators from the FBI and National Transportation Safety

Board need permission from Root's physicians to conduct the interview.

"There are many questions I'll be asking," said NTSB investigator Andrew Alston.

Developments Friday included:

■ In Washington, a U.S. Customs official said authorities found 35 guns, many of them loaded, and a can of ether in a search of Root's plane last April at the Manassas Airport in Virginia.

All of the guns were legal under federal law, and all but one under state law, which led to a state misdemeanor charge. The arsenal included assault-style rifles and three .357-caliber Magnum pistols. Root had told Customs officials that the ether, which can be used in cocaine production, was used to clean his aircraft.

■ In North Carolina, Secretary of State Rufus Edmisten said his office has been investigating security fraud allegations against a company with which Root acted as an attorney. Edmisten said there are allegations that the company, Sonrise Management Services, was set up in a way that allowed it to avoid securities laws. Edmisten said the lawyer knew he was under investigation.

Root, 36, apparently became unconscious in his cockpit Friday with his plane on autopilot and military pilots shadowing his aircraft for nearly four hours.

His plane ran out of gas and crashed in mile-deep waters 14 miles west of the Bahamian island of Eleuthera. Root swam to a raft, where rescuers pulled him to safety.

Geer said Root told him the bullet wound was not self-inflicted and could have occurred when the impact of the crash triggered a .32-caliber pistol carried on board the single-engine Cessna.

Hollywood Police Chief Richard Witt noted that a powder burn on Root's skin indicated the shot was fired at close range. Investigators said there was no evidence that anybody else was in the plane.

Desk & Derrick plans Industry Appreciation

The Desk and Derrick Club of Pampa will hold its annual Industry Appreciation Night at the Pampa Country Club on Thursday.

Karyn L. Plank, executive vice president of Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association in Amarillo, will be the featured speaker.

Her topic will be "Where We Have Been in the Decade of the 1980s and Where We Are Headed for the Decade of the 1990s."

The social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

The club, an association of professional women workers in the petroleum industry and related fields, will present its Boss of the Year and Member of the Year at the dinner.

Plank has been with the PPROA in Amarillo since January 1986. The PPROA is a non-profit, regional trade association of approximately 800 independent oil and natural gas producers, royalty owners and related service and supply companies doing business in the Texas Panhandle.

From September 1977 to October 1985, Plank was administrative assistant to T. Boone Pickens Jr., president and chairman of the board of Mesa Petroleum Co. She was a paralegal assistant at Goodbar, Goodbar & Fischer, Attorneys at Law, at Colorado Springs, Colo., from March 1972 to February 1976.

Plank was a legal secretary for attorney Jim B. Brown in Canyon from September 1970 to December 1971. She was a part-time secretary for the West Texas University School of Business in Canyon from September 1968 to September 1970.

She graduated cum laude from WTSU in May 1977 with a bachelor of business administration degree. She is a 1968 graduate of Palo Duro High School in Amarillo.

Plank was a participant in the 1984 class of Leadership Texas, a program of the Foundation for Women's Resources combining continuing education in leadership development, information and discussion of major policy issues in Texas with exposure to the philosophies and thoughts of the state's business, cultural, educational and political leaders.

Jury says dairy wasn't at blame in deadly cheese

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors absolved a raw milk supplier from liability for nearly $100 million in unsettled claims from a 1985 listeriosis outbreak, in a decision that could limit compensation for some victims.

The jurors Friday said that Alta-Dena Certified Dairy could not be held liable for a soft cheese produced with its milk. The cheese, made by Jalisco Mexican Products Inc., was laden with the listeria bacteria.

The bacteria killed 48 people and caused birth defects and other ailments in dozens more.

"I feel the lord has answered our prayers," said Alta-Dena founder Harold Stueve, 71. "We had nothing to do with this case in the first place."

Jalisco, which has since gone out of business, had claimed that Alta-Dena sold it tainted milk.

But Alta-Dena's lawyer, Raymond Novell, told the jury that bacteria was never found in the dairy's milk or herds, noting Alta-Dena supplied 26 million gallons of milk to 30 wholesale customers during the period in question and only Jalisco had an outbreak of listeriosis.

"This was strictly an issue between the two companies," Novell said after the 11-1 verdict. "Jalisco looked around for deep pockets and sued us."

Victims of the outbreak and their families wanted Alta-Dena to share responsibility.

ni Association, Palo Duro High School Hall of Fame, Amarillo Executive Women, treasurer of Amarillo Republican Women, Amarillo Chamber of Commerce State and National Affairs Committees, and Texas Society of Association Executives.

She is married to Daryl Plank, a salesman for Willborn Bros. Co. and a singer with the '50s group, The Sharks. They have one daughter, Kelly, 17, who will be a senior at Tascosa High School.

Reservations for the banquet are due Wednesday afternoon by calling Scena Snider at 665-0065 or Teresa Snow at 669-2535. Cost is $10 per person.

As with all the monthly dinner meetings, the public is invited to attend.

Cowboys like Johnson's positive outlook

IRVING, Texas (AP) — His first training camp remains one week away, but new Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson already likes the progress his players have shown.

"I thought we really had a good week of work," Johnson said Friday after the Cowboys completed a five-day "voluntary" quarterback school. "I felt like we progressed from where we were in the last quarterback camp, and I don't think that I could ever expect to have them more prepared to go into training camp, considering we have a new staff and all."

The Cowboys begin training camp next Sunday in Thousand Oaks, Calif., hoping to rebound from an NFL-worst 3-13 record of a season ago.

Jerry Jones bought the team from H.R. "Bum" Bright in February and immediately replaced Coach Tom Landry with Johnson.

In three mini-camps since, Johnson has proven to be an about-face from the unemotional Landry. He moved up and down the field, walking fast and talking faster, clapping his hands, offering advice and keeping his players in line. On several occasions during this week's camp, he joined players who struggled to complete wind sprints in the grueling heat.

"It's just a 180-degree turnaround from Coach Landry," defensive tackle Danny Noonan told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Coach Landry was a guy who was really reserved and didn't do a whole lot of yelling. Coach Johnson is just the opposite. He's an enthusiastic type of guy, a very positive guy, and that's something we needed. We needed a change. We needed a new outlook on things, and he's given us that. I think we'll play very well as a team for him. I think we'll be over .500 just because of the enthusiasm."

Defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones, at 38 the oldest player on the Cowboys roster, also has noticed the attitude change.

"Everybody is very positive," Jones said. "I can't compare him with anybody else. All I can say is everything is very positive. Anytime you've got new coaches coming in, you want players believing in the system who are willing to give 110 percent. I think the guys here are willing to do that. I haven't heard any complaints about anything."

Johnson admits there was probably apprehension among the players, who didn't know what to expect from a coach who was making the transition from the college ranks.

"I've got to be true to my own personality and do what's been successful for me," he said. "I'm sure there are some that would question the style we do it in. But all I can say is it's been successful, and that's the way we'll do it."

All in all, Johnson appeared pleased with the state of his team entering training camp. He is satisfied with the general conditioning of the team, which has been an area of emphasis.

"We weren't a bad team last year," Noonan said. "It's just that we were missing that little extra inch, that little something in the fourth quarter."

Jones considers giving Walsh temporary contract

IRVING, (AP) — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones says he would consider giving quarterback Steve Walsh a temporary contract to get him into camp, but prefers to make a permanent deal with the No. 1 supplemental draft pick.

Walsh's agent, Ron Simon, said a temporary contract, such as one that was used to get Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown of Dallas into the Oakland Raiders' training camp on time last season, is possible.

"Sure, it's possible, but it is certainly not our intention," Simon told the Dallas Times Herald. "You do not do something like that very often."

Marvin Demoff, who also is representing Walsh, said the Brown deal came about last year because there were too many loose ends to be tied up before a permanent agreement could be reached.

Brown's temporary deal, signed on the first day of training camp, paid him a $300,000 signing bonus and a $150,000 base salary. It gave him spending money, got him into camp, and gave Demoff and the Raiders time to work out a four-year, $2.7 million permanent deal.

The Cowboys open training camp July 23 in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Sheehan charges into tie for first

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

LAKE ORION, Mich. — Betsy King blew a three-shot lead on the final two holes Saturday to fall into a tie with hard-charging Patty Sheehan after three rounds of the U.S. Women's Open.

Sheehan, who shot a 4-under-par 67 in the second round, had a 69 while King finished at 1-over 72. They are tied at 3-under 210 for the tournament, two shots ahead of Colleen Walker, the only other player to break par for 54 holes.

Marie-Laure de Lorenzietaya of Spain was next at even-par 213.

King, bidding for her first major title, started her round on the Old Course at the Indianwood Golf and Country Club at 4-under. She got to 7-under with a birdie on the 13th hole before the tough Scottish-style golf course pulled her back to the field.

Patty Sheehan (above) shares first-round lead with Betsy King.

U.S. Women's Open

King, seeking her fifth win of the season, began her collapse with a bogey at the 520-yard, par-5 15th hole after putting her drive into the tall heather that lines the fairways.

On No. 17, a 188-yard par-3, King hit her tee shot way wide to the left, left her second shot short and in the rough, then ran her third shot 10 feet past the hole. She two-putted for a double-bogey 5.

King completed her fade on the final hole when her 150-yard second shot to the 24,000-square-foot green went 20 feet above the pin. She ran her first putt five feet past the cup and missed the comebacker.

Sheehan, seeking her first Open title, was 3-over after the first round but 6-under for rounds 2 and 3, and clearly appeared to have momentum on her side heading into Sunday's final round.

Sheehan's 7-iron on the final hole hit Walker's ball on the gigantic green. It was placed about 12 feet from the cup and she got down in two putts from there for her share of the lead.

Sheehan, with 20 career wins — including last month's Rochester Invitational — has twice been runner-up in the Open.

Rangers pounded by Indians 11-5

Komminsk, Zuvella pace Cleveland hitting attack

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Indians, last in the American League in scoring, aren't in any position to be picky about who does their hitting.

"You've got to always have somebody contribute along with your big hitters," Manager Doc Edwards said Friday night after utility players Brad Komminsk and Paul Zuvella both homered in Cleveland's 11-5 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"That's the way it should be," Edwards said. "When the going is rough, people are always going to point fingers at the big guys, but they can't carry you every game."

Komminsk started in center field and Joe Carter moved to left so Dave Clark could replace the struggling Cory Snyder in right.

Snyder, who has had a sore back since late April, has gone hitless in his last 12 at-bats, striking out seven times. He may be placed on the disabled list as early as today.

Komminsk responded to the start by driving in a career-high five runs. He snapped a 5-5 tie in the seventh with a sacrifice fly after tying the game 4-4 with a fourth-inning, two-run home run. He added a two-run single in Cleveland's five-run eighth inning.

Zuvella played third base in place of Brook Jacoby, who is hobbled with a sore hamstring muscle. Zuvella hit a solo home run, his first in 436 major league at-bats, and had a run-scoring double.

Komminsk was recalled from Class AAA Colorado Springs on June 29, and Zuvella was called up Tuesday.

"A lot of other guys on this team are expected to carry the load. They can't be expected to do it every night. It's nice to help out a little bit," Komminsk said.

Komminsk also drew two walks and is batting .348 with 10 RBIs in 23 at-bats.

Carter, who took a 7-for-60 slump into the game, gave the Indians a 5-4 lead against Charlie Hough with a solo home run in the fifth inning. Carter hit three homers off Hough on June 24.

Hough also surrendered the home runs to Komminsk and Zuvella, although reliever Cecilio Guante, 4-4, took the loss.

"Like the last time I pitched against them, I was too sloppy," Hough said. "I don't recall having as good stuff as I did tonight and still making such lousy pitches. Those pitches for the home runs all should have been hit."

Zuvella didn't want to do much celebrating after his home run in the third inning, because Texas had scored four runs in the first off John Farrell.

"I just thought, 'Way to hit it.' When it's a 4-1 game in the third, you're not going to jump around the bases because it's your first home run. It is nice to have it, though," Zuvella said.

Hough had defeated Cleveland 13 consecutive times before losing his last three decisions against the Indians.

"It just shows you that what a player used to do against a team doesn't mean anything," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said.

Texas scored four runs in the first on RBI singles by Rafael Palmeiro, Pete Incaviglia and Steve Buechele and a throwing error by Cleveland shortstop Felix Fermin. The Rangers' final run came on Buechele's run-scoring groundout in the sixth.

Reliever Jesse Orosco, 1-2, gained his first American League victory with a perfect seventh inning. Doug Jones earned his 22nd save in 25 opportunities by retiring the final six batters.

Hulbert maintains Busch Classic lead

By JOE MACENKA
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Mike Hulbert put together a bogey-free round of 3-under-par 68 and held off a charging Hal Sutton for a one-shot lead following Saturday's third round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Sutton, seeking to break a three-year winless streak, came from four shots off the pace with a 6-under 65.

Hulbert, 31, whose lone PGA Tour victory came at the 1986 St. Jude Classic, was at 14-under-par 199 after three tours of Kingsmill Golf Club's 6,776-yard layout along the James River.

Sutton, who won the last of his seven pro titles at the 1986 Memorial Tournament, made his lone bogey at Kingsmill's 438-yard 18th hole. His second shot found a greenside bunker, and he missed a six-footer for par.

Hulbert also had problems at 18, where his drive hit a tree on the right side of the fairway and his 3-wood approach shot landed about 15 yards short of the green. But he chipped to within five feet and sank the par putt.

Hulbert began the day at 11-under with a one-shot lead over Tim Norris and Don Shirey, who both had trouble keeping pace. Tim Simpson, who shared the first-round lead with Sutton, had a 4-under 67 Saturday and was alone in third at 201.

Next, at 202, were Roger Maltbie and Norris. Maltbie, who tied the course record Friday with a 63, had a 67. Norris parred his first 12 holes before getting a birdie on the par-3 13th and wound up with a 70.

Shirey fell off the pace with a trio of bogeys on the front nine en route to a 1-over 72 that left him in a large group at 9-under 204.

Hulbert rolled in birdie putts on the third hole and on No. 4, a 437-yard, uphill par-4. After sinking a four-footer for birdie on the 452-yard ninth, he stayed at 14-under the rest of the way.

Sutton sank a 20-footer for birdie on No. 1, a 360-yard par-4, and made short birdie putts on the third and seventh holes, both par-5s.

After making a 20-footer for a birdie-3 on No. 9, Sutton made a 2 at the par-3 13th with a four-inch putt and another birdie with an eight-footer on the 383-yard 14th. He moved to 14-under when he sank a 30-foot putt on the 177-yard 17th.

Sunday's winner gets $153,000 from the $850,000 purse.

Baseball team needs donations

The Pampa Optimist Club is seeking donations to help send the 13-year-old all-star team to the state baseball tournament July 22-27 in Andrews.

The Pampa team won the district tournament last week in Perryton to qualify for state. Transportation is also being sought, preferably a van, for team members.

Persons who would like to help can contact Larry Gilbert at 665-8801 (office) or 665-8350 (home).

A Dutch victory

Dutch cyclist Jelle Nidam raises his arms after crossing the finish line of the 14th stage of the 76th edition of the Tour de France cycling classic Saturday in Gap, French Alps. Laurent Fignon of France was leading the overall standings after 13 stages.

Losing masterpiece

Fernandez whiffs 16, but Braves down Mets

By ED SHEARER

ATLANTA — The only thing that kept it from being the best-pitched game of Sid Fernandez's career was that he lost.

Fernandez turned in a career-high, 16-strikeout performance Friday night, only to see it spoiled when Lonnie Smith homered with a 1-0 fastball over the left field fence leading off the ninth inning, giving the Atlanta Braves a 3-2 victory over Fernandez and the New York Mets.

"I'm happy with my performance, but I'd rather have won the game," Fernandez said after seeing his personal three-game winning streak end.

He broke the club record of 15 strikeouts by a left-hander, set by Jerry Koosman against the San Diego Padres on May 28, 1969. Fernandez's previous best was 14 K's against the San Francisco Giants in 1986.

Tom Seaver, a right-hander, holds the Mets' record with 19 strikeouts against San Diego in 1970, a feat that tied the National League mark set the previous season by Philadelphia's Steve Carlton in a loss to the Mets.

It was the most strikeouts in the major leagues this year. Nolan Ryan of Texas and Chuck Finley of California each fanned 15 in a game earlier in the season.

Fernandez, 7-3, fanned eight of nine batters during one stretch and retired the 16 consecutive batters 12 on strikeouts, before Smith ended the game with his 14th homer of the year. "I think he threw 119 pitches," said Mets Manager Davey Johnson. "It would have been a little hard to hook him going into the ninth. It was a tough one to see him lose, but nothing to be ashamed of."

"He was just blowing the ball by them," said Atlanta Manager Russ Nixon. "There wasn't a walk in the game. That's awesome."

Fernandez was asked if it was the best game he ever pitched. He thought about it a moment and said, "No, because I lost."

Fernandez said he also lost a nicely pitched game to Montreal 2-1 earlier in his career, but didn't have nearly as many strikeouts. He said his all-time strikeout mark was 21, when he was in the minor leagues.

"I have been winning lately," Fernandez said. "I'm pretty happy about it. I've been working hard; I've been running a lot."

After going through a string of five no-decisions, Fernandez beat Philadelphia once and Cincinnati twice in three starts before Friday.

"I wasn't even trying to blow some people out," he said. "I was just trying to throw strikes. My arm was nice and free. I'm not going to brag and say I can do that all the time."

He said he was just going to try to hit catcher Mackey Sasser's glove, and continue to throw inside to hitters.

"I knew I had struck out a few people, but I wasn't counting," he said. "A strikeout's a strikeout."

And 16 of them got him his line in the Mets' record book.

Missed it by that much!

District tourneys need 10-run rule

Blame it on Pete: How long will it be before Pete Rose is linked to the HUD scandal or blamed for the Exxon oil mishap. One of these days, a witness will step forward and claim he saw Rose burning the United States flag. If Rose is kept out of the Hall of Fame because of his gambling activities, then that will be a crime in itself.

Senior Tourney Near: The 55th annual Tri-State Senior Golf Tournament will be held July 26-28 at the Pampa Country Club course.

It's hard to believe a Pampa golfer has never won the championship flight.

Jim Kirk of Ardmore, Okla. is the defending champion.

Elmer Wilson's fifth-place finish was the best of any Pampa golfer last year. B.F. Dorman of Pampa was in a three-way tie for second after the first round, but wound up 10th.

C.F. McGinnis came the closest of any Pampa golfer. He was runnerup to winner David Goldman of Dallas in the 1966 event.

All-Night Baseball:

State Babe Ruth Baseball officials should reconsider bringing back the 10-run rule in district tournament games.

In the 14-15 year-old tournament last week in Pampa, there were a bunch of players, coaches and fans with heavy eyelids because the final game ran past the midnight hour almost every night.

In one game the score was 23-0 before the fifth inning. The team from Dalhart didn't arrive home until 3 a.m. after a marathon contest and then had to play again the next night.

Maybe the youngsters can bounce back, but those late-night hours make it hard on the old folks attending the games.

The Cowboy Connection: Pampa High coach Rod Porter is putting his connections with the Oklahoma State University baseball program to good use. Porter has been helping with youth clinics on the Stillwater campus for the past three years, and he considers the opportunity a two-way street. "I may be an instructor, but it's a learning experience for me as well," Porter said. "I pick up a lot of things from coach Ward (Gary Ward, OSU head coach) that helps me with my own program."

Porter also assists with clinics at Oklahoma University and picks up tidbits from Sooner boss Enos Semore.

"Both coaches are very hospitable and I've able to develop sort of a troubleshooting deal with them. If I have some problems during the season I can just pick up the phone and call one of them up for advice. There's not a lot of coaches that are able to do that," Porter says. "It's just a thrill to be able to meet some of the top coaches and professional players at these clinics."

Porter hopes to bring some of the OSU staff and players to Pampa for a baseball clinic in December.

"There's a good chance of them coming here because of our indoor facility," Porter added.

Remembering Odus Mitchell:

Former Pampa High football coach Odus Mitchell, who died two weeks ago at age 90, was a guest of honor at one of the Harvesters games during the early 1980s.

Following the game, a reception was held for Mitchell, who seemed to thoroughly enjoy visiting with Pampa residents and re-visiting old memories of his time here as coach.

Mitchell also coached other sports while at Pampa from 1927 to 1940. His Harvesters were ranked behind Amarillo High in 1934 when the Sandies won the first of their four state grid championships.

Junior girls on comeback road

Pampa drives opponent 'batty'

For excitement, the popular "Batman" movie might come in second when compared to the Pampa junior girls softball team.

After dropping their first-round opener to Dumas in the district tournament, the Pampa girls bounced back a winner.

The group of 11-12 year-old all-stars dropped Childress 22-9 in the first game of the loser's bracket at Dumas.

Pampa turned in solid performances at the plate, on the bases and in the field to turn back Childress.

Amanda Kludt hurled Pampa to victory while Danette Hoover led the team in hitting with a triple and two doubles.

Jennifer Medley and Tonya Brown used Childress errors to turn hits into inside-the-park home runs.

Tausha Thrasher contributed a triple to the attack.

Collecting doubles were Jessica Whitney, Jill Trollinger and Kendra Earl. Those with singles were Tammy Chesser, Kanda Atwood, Jennifer Medley and Amanda Kludt.

Pampa Junior Girls Softball All-Stars

All-stars gain second victory

The Pampa junior girls continued their onslaught in the district tournament at Dumas with a 31-3 win over East Panhandle on Thursday.

Winning pitcher was Tonya Brown, who whiffed nine East Panhandle batters.

Brown also knocked in five runs and others with RBIs were Tammy Chesser, four; Jessica Whitney, four; Danette Hoover, Kandi Atwood and Kendra Earl, one each.

Trinidee Summers turned in some heads-up offense when she circled the bases to score after a pair of Dumas errors.

Jessica Whitney poked a double for Pampa. Tammy Chesser had two singles while Amy Poole and Amanda Hays had one hit each.

Susie Hahn, Amanda Kludt and Jennifer Medley chalked up base thefts in addition to playing good defense.

Troy Fulton, Lisa Fulton, Lewis Brantley and Sharon Joplin are coaching the Pampa all-star squad this year.

Veteran Murphy lifts Phillies past Astros

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dwayne Murphy, signed as a free agent by the Philadelphia Phillies in April, knows his place on the team, according to manager Nick Leyva.

The 11-year veteran who has been a starter most of his major league career now is a bench guy, a spot starter.

But Leyva points out that Murphy "gives us a big boost."

Like Friday night, when Murphy delivered a seventh-inning, game-winning single in a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros.

Murphy started and walked in his first three times at bat. Then after taking an 0-2 pitch that looked like a strike, he singled to center in the seventh to give Philadelphia a 3-2 lead they never lost. He was asked later if the pitch he took was a strike.

"It was a ball," he responded. "The umpire called it a ball."

He said it with a faint grin on his face.

"He's the type of guy who knows his role," Leyva said of Murphy. "He doesn't mope or complain if he doesn't play. It's good to have veterans like that."

Murphy is candid about his feelings. "At the beginning of the year (my role) was tough," he said. "I always feel that I can play everyday. But I saw the way it would be. It's a tough role. You strike-out many times doing it. I never realized how tough it is coming off the bench."

Murphy, 34, has won six straight Gold Gloves starting in 1980. He led American League outfielders in assists three years. In 1984, for Oakland, he hit 33 home runs, knocked in 88.

Murphy is hitting only .218. Leyva isn't exactly building his ball club around him. But he's the type that helps a club look respectable. That's one of Leyva's goals right now.

He raised some eyebrows earlier in the week when he said his goal for the Phillies in the second half of the season was 50 victories.

When Leyva made the statement, and he wasn't smiling, the Phillies would have to go 50-28 to accomplish it. After Friday night's win over the Astros, Leyva pointed out only 48 more.

An error by Astros' third baseman Ken Caminiti set up a two-run seventh after Houston had rallied in the top of the inning to tie the game 2-2 off Phillies' starter Terry Mulholland.

Anderson, 2-2, who had allowed only four earned runs in 37 appearances, took the loss. Only one of the Phillies' seventh inning runs was earned.

Americans on outside looking in at British Open

Faldo favored by England's bookies

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

TRON, Scotland — Americans, who not so long ago dominated this ancient event, are on the outside looking in at the 118th British Open Golf Championship. In the 14-year period ending in 1983, American players won this title 12 times. In the five-year period beginning in 1984, they've won none.

It's a source of considerable delight in the land that is the birthplace and cradle of the game; a national celebration that British golf again rules the world.

The four men who have won the last five British Opens — Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Greg Norman of Australia, Nick Faldo of England and Sandy Lyle of Scotland — generally are ranked among the first five players in the world.

Curtis Strange is the other, the lone American in the group.

None, however, has been able to pull away from the pack, particularly in the game's Big Four events, the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and the PGA. In the past five years, Ballesteros, Lyle, Faldo and Strange have won two majors apiece, Norman one.

"There are five or six players at the top right now. We're sort of handing things around among us," Faldo said. "One year it's this one, the next year that one."

At the moment, Faldo could be the man. In addition to his Masters triumph this year, the tall Briton has won his last four starts (going back to the end of last season) on the European Tour. The streak includes his fourth British PGA title.

"It's been a great run for me," Faldo said. "I'd like to think it has another week or so to go."

Britain's legal bookies have installed him as a 6-1 favorite to win the tournament that begins Thursday at Royal Troon, an intimidating links reaching through sandhills that rise from the rocky beach of the Ayrshire coast.

Ballesteros, the Spaniard who seems to save his best for the major events, has won twice on the European Tour this season and is listed at 8-1 to make a successful defense of his title.

With Lyle and Norman both experiencing difficulties of varying degrees, little Ian Woosnam of Wales could be among the major challengers in the field of 156 arrayed for the event that is known only as "The Open" everywhere but in the United States.

Norman, attempting to recover from devastating disappointments in three of the past four Masters, has won only once in the United States in the last three years and needs another major-tournament triumph to retain his standing among the game's elite.

Lyle has been in the deepest slump of his career, missing the cut in six of seven American tournaments at one stretch.

Strange's repeat victory in the U.S. Open confirmed his stature as America's leading player and made him the standard-bearer for the American challenge.

Some other leading American hopes are Steve Jones, the only three-time winner on the U.S. Tour this year; Tom Kite, trying to come back from the bitter disappointment of his last-round collapse in the American national championship; Mark McCormack, Mark Calcavecchia and Paul Azinger.

Bentsen wants Medicaid expansion, rural hospital aid plan

WASHINGTON (AP)— Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says he'll ask the Finance Committee to include a $43 million plan to help struggling rural hospitals in tax legislation now before Congress.

The chairman of the influential committee, Bentsen said he also would ask the panel to include in the budget and tax bill his $1 billion proposal to expand Medicaid coverage to thousands of low-income children and pregnant women.

The House Ways and Means Committee, however, has not included similar proposals to those Bentsen is backing in its version of the budget reconciliation bill.

But the tax-writing House panel has approved a $167 million rural hospital assistance package sponsored by Rep. Jake Pickle, an Austin Democrat.

"It won't solve all our problems overnight, but it is a major step forward not only in addressing immediate needs but in developing new solutions for the future," Pickle said.

Pickle's plan would reduce the differential in Medicare payments to rural hospitals by about one-fourth, increasing payments overall by $137 million. Medicare reimburses rural hospitals by about 12 percent less than their urban counterparts.

The plan also requires the secretary of health and human services to examine how the remaining differential can be erased, and sets up a demonstration program to test the concept of "essential access community hospital networks," in which small community hospitals provide emergency and primary care, and transfer more costly inpatient cases to a central hospital.

Bentsen's rural health care package, which now has 61 co-sponsors in the Senate, including Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, seeks to equalize Medicare payments to rural hospitals.

Six years ago, Congress decided rural hospitals should be reimbursed less than urban hospitals, figuring that costs for labor and supplies would be less for rural hospitals. But critics say expenses for rural hospitals have risen and now may exceed what city hospitals pay for labor and supplies.

Although Bentsen's bill to begin equalizing Medicare payments would cost $43 million in fiscal 1990, the full cost could reach $700 million to $750 million when fully phased in.

Bentsen acknowledges that equalizing reimbursement rates is not the only solution to the problems that have forced dozens of rural hospitals out of business, but believes it is one lifeline Congress can extend this year.

Texas has led the country in the number of hospital failures for three consecutive years. Nationwide last year, 43 rural hospitals closed, bringing to 159 the number of rural hospital failures since 1984.

Bentsen said he also will ask the Finance Committee to expand Medicaid coverage to an additional 300,000 pregnant women and 1.6 million children under the age of 6.

His bill would provide Medicaid coverage to pregnant women and young children in families whose income is at 185 percent of the poverty level — $22,385 for a family of four.

Under legislation enacted last year and being phased in over two years, Medicaid coverage is guaranteed to pregnant women and children under age 1 in families whose income is at the poverty level — $12,100 for a family of four.

The estimated cost would be $790 million next year, and $1.2 billion in 1991 when the bill is phased in fully.

Galveston picks greyhound plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Racing Commission has awarded the Galveston County greyhound racing license to the Lone Star Greyhound Park in La Marque.

Friday's 4-0 vote by commission members followed a week of hearings in which five investor groups had sought the pari-mutuel permit.

Lone Star's backers said the track would be a $40 million facility. The track is to be financed by four wealthy Alabama men, including two with considerable experience running greyhound tracks.

According to the Lone Star proposal, Texans would own 62 percent of the track.

Elliot Maisel of Mobile, Ala., would move to Texas to run the track. The Maisel family owns tracks in Alabama and Florida, and tracks approved for construction in Kansas and Wisconsin. Texas partners include former secretary of state Roy Barera of San Antonio.

Maisel said he expected the Galveston County track to be racing by August of 1990.

Greyhound experts have said they expect the track to be one of the nation's most lucrative.

Four other groups had sought the license.

The commission's staff attorney, Jack Morton, said that each group had advantages and disadvantages. But he stressed the important factor to consider was which group will have the integrity and commitment to carry out the pledges all have made to create the nation's best and most humane racing facility.

Other proposals considered by the commission included the Gulf Greyhound Park in La Marque, the brainchild of Paul Bryant Jr. and his two Tuscaloosa, Ala., partners.

Commissioners grilled the son of the late Crimson Tide coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, trying to find out how much money he would be paid. Bryant told the panel he hopes to be paid almost half the profits after taxes for managing the proposed park.

Dr. Susan Baittie, the racing commission's veterinarian, paid a surprise visit to Bryant's VictoryLand track in Alabama and skewered the facilities and treatment of the greyhounds.

Cumbres & Toltec Scenic Railroad

Lifestyles

Pulling into Osier, Colo., the train stops for a trip back down the mountains so riders can eat lunch before departing

Crossing a mountain pasture, the train looks much the same as it did in the movie Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade.

The train crosses the Lobato Trestle, which was completed as part of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad in 1880.

Passengers on the Cumbres and Toltec depart the train yard in Chama, N.M., which has changed little in appearance since the 1880's.

CHAMA, N.M. — Whether your next summer excursion into Northern New Mexico centers around shopping in Santa Fe, sightseeing at Taos Pueblo or camping in the Kit Carson National Forest, it won't be complete without a trip to Chama to ride the Cumbres and Toltec Railroad.

Located 107 miles northwest of Santa Fe on Hwy. 84, the Cumbres and Toltec narrow gauge railroad departs each morning at 10:30 on its 64 mile trip to Antonito, Colo.

The train, which was featured in the opening scenes of Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade, dates back to the 1800's when it was part of a narrow-gauge system that carried passengers as far north as Denver.

From the first sounds of the steam engine's whistle giving the "all aboard" at 10:15 to the rustle of passenger cars and smell of burning coal mixing with the clean mountain air, this is an authentic step into the past.

In addition to the passenger cars, the Cumbres and Toltec features 19th century gondolas that were once used to haul coal, ore and other freight out of the San Juan Mountains.

Today the gondolas offer stunning open-air views of the mountains.

Your ride begins in a thick aspen forest and proceeds 3,000 feet up in elevation to Cumbres Pass. Along the way the train crosses deep gorges and crystal-clear streams. It then moves on to Osier, Colo., where passengers are allowed an hour for lunch.

While the railroad sells meals for $6 each, the food is only fair. Two tastier alternatives include buying a box lunch for $5 at the Cumbres Mall in Chama prior to departure or packing a picnic.

At Osier, those riding the rail line to Antonito catch their train while those returning to Chama reboard for a relaxing ride back down the mountain.

Thanks to a variety of travel options, Cumbres and Toltec passengers can choose between eight train packages that even include overnight bed-and-breakfast stays in Antonito. Rail passengers also have the option of beginning their trip back into the history of travel from the station in Antonito.

Originally operated by the Denver and Rio Grande Railway Co., work on the line began in 1870. However, due to a bloody railroad war with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, it was not completed until March of 1880.

The dispute over right-of-ways and service territories was eventually settled by the U.S. Supreme Court. But not before U.S. troops were called in to quell a gunfight between the two rail companies in La Veta, Colo.

Passenger service on the railroad continued until 1951. By 1967 the rail company began discontinuing any runs between Chama and Antonito. And in 1970 the states of Colorado and New Mexico jointly purchased the line under the name Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad for use as a tourist line.

In addition to being featured in the Indiana Jones movie, the train has also made cameo appearances in Where the Hell is the Gold, a made-for-TV film starring Willie Nelson and 1970's Shoot Out.

While the train currently reaches a top speed of only 18 miles per hour, the hazards of mountain travel are evident when reviewing the lines several spectacular derailments during the late 19th and early 20th century.

Recountings of those early wrecks is available in the excellent Ticket to Toltec, a historic mile-by-mile guide to the Cumbres and Toltec written by Doris B. Osterwald. The book is available at the train station prior to departure and makes for an informative as well as entertaining trip on the railway.

In addition to charting the railroad's history, the book also explores the striking geological formations the train passes. From sheer mountain cliffs to sweeping pastures and thick forests, the ride covers a plethora of awesome sights.

Trips on the Cumbres and Toltec start at $27 for adults and $10 for children and range up to $41.50 each for overnight stays.

Reservations are recommended as early in advance as possible. For more information on the Cumbres and Toltec, write P.O. Box 789, Chama, N.M., 87520 or call 505-756-2151.

Do you have a bull snake for rent?

Do you have a bull snake for rent?

If so, there are two conditions on the rental.

The snake must be in good healthy condition and be at least 16 inches long. How you would check on a snake's health is anybody's guess, but you could be paid $3 for the use of the snake.

The snakes are needed by the Adobe Walls Dancers who will take to the stage at the Fritch Fortress Amphitheatre and perform some old favorites like the Hopi Snake Dance for rain where intrepid performers hoof with bull snakes in their mouths.

Performances, sponsored by the Magic Plains Arts Council, are scheduled for 8 p.m., July 21, 22, 23, 29, and the Hutchinson County Museum Director Ed Benz said tickets are available at the door or advance tickets may be purchased from members, Hutchinson County Museum or the Fritch Museum.

Snakes may be brought by the Hutchinson County Museum, 618 Main in Borger or call 273-6121. Bob Smith of Stinnett may be contacted at 878-3929 or Wes Phillips of the National Park Service at 853-3151 if anyone in those areas have snakes. The dancers need the snakes as soon as possible to work on their summer ceremonials and get used to their charges.

The snakes will be returned to the wild following the show. Benz said 18 scouts are in the show so that means a lot of snakes.

Benz explained that snakes are used in the Hopi dance because it is believed they are in touch with the earth and rain. Part of the ritual is carrying the reptiles in the dancers' mouths. He noted that a gully washer usually follows the dance.

The dancers will also be doing the Pueblo Comanche Dance. This dance is based on a historical event where the Zuni and Comanche Indians battled. As history would have it, the Comanches beat the Zunis, and the Zunis created a dance to imitate their opponents.

Several members of the Plum Creek Brigade Area Buckskinners will be setting up their tipis and trading blankets with trade goods as an added attraction this year. They will help open the show with a vignette showing the white traders and Indians trading on horseback on the horizon. The Indian trade brought the white men into this area in the late 1830's and helped to establish Fort Adobe in Hutchinson County.

The Adobe Walls Dancers Ceremonials are an educational program of the Hutchinson County Museum. The main participants are the Adobe Walls Dancers Explorer Post 565.

The youth leaders include Head Chief Russell Brown, Vice-chief James Ritchson and Secretary Shelly Walker.

The Comanche Clan Chief is Daniel Baker. Vice-chief is Colby Forrester. Sioux Clan Chief is Amando Lujan and Vice-chief is Tanya Hester.

Friday, July 21 will be West Texas Comanche night - a salute to the newly consolidated school district composed of Plemons-Stinnett-Phillips, football team and band. The Comanche Dance will be performed in honor of the new school.

If you want to see the scouts perform with their rented bull snakes, come to the Amphitheatre July 21-22 or 28-29. Benz suggested people bring their supper and make a day of it.

LANDSCAPE PESTS

Bagworms are about half grown and causing noticeable defoliation of those trees which they are infesting. It is not too late to get good control of these pests, but the longer one delays in controlling the bagworms the less satisfactory the results. When bagworms are large, a repeat spraying may be required in 7 to 10 days. Bacillus thuringiensis (Biotrol®, Dipel®, Bactur®, etc.), diazinon, dursban, malathion, Orthene®, sevin or Cygon® provide effective bagworm control. Check label for use restrictions.

Cicadas have started their annual song (noise). Homeowners often inquire about what can be done about the racket, but there is no practical solution. The female cicada with her sharp ovipositor will make a series of slices into twigs and small branches in which to lay eggs. The eggs hatch in about 6 to 7 weeks, and the young nymphs drop to the ground and burrow into the soil to find roots on which to feed. It takes 1 to 5 years for the common or dog day cicada to complete its life cycle. No significant damage is caused by the egg-laying or feeding activity of these particular cicadas.

Elm leaf beetle eggs and a few small black larvae are evident on elms. If this is the situation that exists in your area, it is time to treat. Orthene® and sevin are effective against elm leaf beetle. Do not use Orthene 04 on American elm.

Continue the monthly preventative applications for tree borer control. Lindane and dursban are effective. If a fruit-bearing tree is being treated, be careful not to contact the fruit with these two insecticides.

The second round of cottonwood leaf miner has yet to begin. Continue to check leaves for the early signs of mining activity and treat at that time with a product like Cygon®.

June beetle activity peaked in late June. This would indicate late July would be about the right time for applying insecticides for white grubs in lawns. Diazinon, dursban, Oftanol®, and Seven SL® are effective. Products containing milky spore disease are not effective against the species of white grubs that commonly infest lawns in this part of the country.

Hot, dry weather favors mite buildup. Check all landscape plants for these pests. An easy way to do this is to shake leaves on to a piece of white paper. If the small specks that fall onto the white paper begin to move, they are likely mites. Not allowing plants to become moisture stressed helps in combating mites. Miticides like Kethane®, diazinon, malathion, Metasystox-R®, or Cygon® usually need to be applied two to three times at 7 day intervals to control a heavy mite infestation.

WILD FLOWERS

I received a call the other day about coming by and looking at a wildflower planting in a back yard. A packet of seed had been planted a few years ago and there were numerous wild flowers in bloom with very little care from year to year. Although I am sure that weed and grass pulling had occurred to maintain only the right weeds - the wild flowers. If someone wants some of the locally grown wild flower seed, you might give Betty Cain a call.

Magic Plains Chapter ABWA

Magic Plains Chapter of the American Business Women's Association met on July 10 at the Sirloin Stockade, President Wynona Seely, presiding.

Plans were made to order matching shirts for members. A quilt is being made for a door prize for the ABWA Boss's Night and other fundraising projects were discussed. A vocational program was presented by Kay McWhirter.

The next meeting will be August 14 at 6:30 p.m. at the Sirloin Stockade.

Pampa Charter Chapter ABWA

Pampa Charter Chapter of ABWA met July 7 at the Club Biarritz. The meeting was called to order by President Barbara McCain and the invocation and pledge to the flag was led by Vice-President Gloria Williams.

Minutes were read and approved and the treasurer's report was given by Mary Dell

McNeil. Louise Hill installed McCain as president.

McCain explained that a member was going to be honored each month and they will sit in a gold draped chair at the head table. This month's recipient is McNeil, a long time member and who earned her inner circle award for bringing in new members. McNeil has worked on all committees and has held numerous offices.

Hill reported that the club will have two booths at the Rodeo this year and volunteers are needed for all six nights.

Standing rules were discussed and changes made. McNeil presented the 1989-90 budget and it was approved. Appointments and changes were made to the chapter committees.

It was voted to have a booth at Randy's Grocery on July 15 selling food items and knick-knacks. All donations need to be brought to the booth by 8 a.m. Rocket fund was won by McCain and the benediction was given by Williams.

DeVolls celebrate 50th anniversary

Steve and Helen DeVoll celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception hosted by their children on July 15 in the Energas Flame Room. Helen Gramling became the bride of Steve DeVoll on July 15, 1939 at Robert Lee, Tex. The couple have lived in Pampa since 1969. Mr. DeVoll has been a retired pipeliner since 1983. Children of the couple are Roland DeVoll of Little Rock; Wayne DeVoll of Houston; Eddie DeVoll of Dallas; Nina Kempf, Bill DeVoll and Martha Sluder all of Pampa; and Karen DeVoll of Shreveport, La. The couple have 16 grandchildren and 2 great-grandchildren.

Class of '59 has super reunion

A good blast of Lady Summer can be counteracted with a cool drink, a comfortable chair and a look around town at our friends and neighbors.

Belated 25th wedding anniversary wishes to Dana and Fred Epperly, who celebrated the occasion at a wiener roast hosted by Phoebe and Wiley Reynolds. A Texas wiener roast was a new experience for special guest Lorraine Stace of Australia, house guest of Priscilla Alexander. Others attending included Phoebe's son, John Stephenson and family, Helen and Joan Burns, Larry and Ann Heard, and Lee and Brenda Cornelison, and neighbors. P.S. Dana is recovering nicely from recent surgery.

Attending Music Week at Glorietta Baptist Camp were Priscilla Alexander, Colleen Hamilton, Jane Knox, Ione Simmons, Lorraine Stace (another first!), Jana Vinson and Susie Wilson.

Members of the PHS Class of '59 report a big blast of a reunion last weekend at the Country Club. Gary and LaVonna Dalton, Tommy and Nita Hill, Alma Lamberon and Betty Lou Smith of Amarillo comprised the steering committee. Early arrivals met at the Club Biarritz Friday evening for a pre-reunion get together.

Hamburgers by the pool at noon followed morning registration. Gary and LaVonna scurried about to provide an archway of flowers to set the stage for the wedding of Jerald Weaver and Ronne Bianco of Austin preceding dinner. Paul Brown, class president, presided and welcomed the group.

The crowd of 150 listened as each of the 95 class members gave a brief personal 30-year history. Mack Layne wore his 50's leather jacket. Phyllis Burress Johnson and Betty Lou Smith led a cheer in cheerleader's regalia. Theresa Marak Collette drew deserved cheers as class pin-up. Several came dressed for the sock hop with Kathleen Dodds Green in a big cancan skirt and bobby sox.

Kay Waggoner, salutatorian, came from Denver. Kay Baker came from Carmel, Calif., and Ron Biggerstaff from Pensacola, Fla. A current annual featured pictures, histories and whereabouts of class members. It must have been a super reunion.

A group of youth and adults attended the Black Mesa Bible Camp at Boise City, Okla. last week. The caravan of campers included 25 youth and the following adults: Dean Whaley, Keith Feerer, Salvador del Fierro, Joe Johnson, Frankie Fletcher, Betty Bradford, Shirley Williams, Rod and Kay Smithers, Darrell and Kay Hughes.

Joyce Feerer and boys, Ryan and Jamie, accompanied Joyce's parents back to Jacksonville, Fla. for an extended visit.

ton. The Lehmans, former Pam-

Charles and Jan Lockhart vacationed recently in Reno. Lib and Charlie Jones vacationed with family in Florida.

Lynda Queen attended a conference of school public relations directors in San Diego. Bert and Brett met her in El Paso for a family vacation.

Susie and Raymond Edwards and two daughters enjoyed a camping trip for a family vacation.

Pampans who somehow ended up on the same plane from Dallas to Amarillo recently (maybe different flights) were Warren Chisum, Ken Lemons, Gwen Douthit, Barbara Willis, Billie Bruner, Jim Stroud, Dr. Harry Griffith, and Darville Orr. Small world, huh?

Bobby and Susan Trollinger, Justin and Jill, vacationed at Sea-world and then off in another direction to Denver.

Yvonne and E.H. Scrimshire have already visited their brand new first grandchild. Little Anna Katherine lives in Midland with her parents, Rick and Joannie Scrimshire. Congratulations to all!

Congratulations to Janet and Rutley Chalk on the recent birth of Lauren Nicole. Big little sister Morgan deserves her share of congratulations, too.

When Nancy Ruff walks, she walks briskly and with determination to get where she already knows she is going, another way of saying Nancy is a fast walker. She and Mike were seen recently stepping it off.

Did you happen to see Lee Fraser mowing his lawn recently in a long sleeved white shirt? Art Rankin chose the hottest part of the afternoon to mow his yard.

Belated 4th of July birthday wishes to 14 year-old Tracie Vaughn, daughter of Mike and Rebecca Vaughn. The July 4th celebration/birthday party included family and friends.

Visitors in the homes of Ovie Tipton and Mr. and Mrs. Perry Franklin include Glen Smith and Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Rutherford of Groom, Mr. and Mrs. N.L. Sargent of Fritch, and Jean Franklin of Amarillo.

Flags were flying at Dorothy Buzzard's home as relatives met for a July 4th reunion. A "depression dinner" was served with a beautiful family kerosene lamp lighting the dining area. The menu consisted of all the "depression" type foods that are still family favorites. Guests included Joyce Roberts and Odessa East.

Family members from out-of-town included Rex Bradford, Los Angeles; Pete and Betty Lyman, Peter Travis and Melissa Lyman, Longmont, Colo.; Rosalie Bossay, Houston; Lyssa Bossay, Austin; Nathan Klayman, Steve Bossay, and Calin Bossay, Dallas; and Andrea Buzzard, Santa Fe.

John and Sabrina East, sons Jon Colly and Britten, welcome a new baby. A little sister for the boys! McKinsie Rae welcome to our world.

The new director of nursing at Coronado Nursing Center will be Jeanette Lindsey, formerly of Bevins Center in Amarillo.

John Triplehorn reported early in the week that of the 456 places originally planned, only 30 bricks remain in the Veteran's Walk. However, the number will be extended to cover the walk if there is more response. Pampans have been very supportive and no one will be left out.

See you next week. Katie.

Jeff McKissick

Steve and Jeff McKissick of Harker Heights, Tex., grandsons of Roy and Mary McKissick of Skellytown, were presented the highest award the Boy Scouts of America has to offer, the Eagle Award, in a ceremony on June 24 in Stafford.

They are currently the Senior Patrol Leader (SPL) and the Assistant SPL for Troop 255. Only two percent of all Boy Scouts attain the Eagle rank. Steve will be a sophomore and Jeff will be in the eighth grade. They are the sons of Ted and Carol McKissick.

Buck Jean Malone

Buck Jean Malone received the master of divinity degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary during commencement ceremonies July 13.

Malone is the son of H.J. Malone and Elizabeth Malone

Deborah Musgrave, office manager for the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, recently completed a week's Institute for Organization Management at Southern Methodist University.

During the five-day session, she spent 27 classroom hours in the study of management philosophy, interpersonal processes, government, law and organization structure, and economic and environmental concerns. The one-week sessions are sponsored by the Center for Leadership Development, a division of the National Chamber Foundation.

The Point Is Pets

by Ron Hendrick, D.V.M.

Dr. "Hi-Duke":

A few years ago a new client brought her dog in for an exam. Several times during the exam she called me "Dr. Hi-Duke." Not being sure if I was misunderstanding or not, I chose to go on with my exam and make no comment on her pronunciation of my name. However, after she left, I asked my receptionist if she had heard how she addressed me. At that, she broke out in laughter! Apparently, someone had told her I was originally from a European Country, and in that land, Hendrick was pronounced as "Hi-Duke." So she was trying hard to be correct, just for me. Luckily, the receptionist had overheard it all, and before the lady left, had informed her that I was a Texan, graduated from Borger High, and my name really was pronounced just like it sounds. I was so glad I had chosen to remain silent, as she returned a few weeks later, and we both acted as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened.

This is just one of many stories I'm compiling for my "memoirs." If you have an interesting story, be it humorous, heroic, or otherwise, please give me a call or write to me. I'd love to hear it.

With the hot weather finally here, we're seeing cases of "hot spots." These are very sensitive moist sore places, usually on the lower backs of dogs. The cause is usually an allergic reaction, particularly to

Competitive trail riding possible new program

Dates
 July 17 - Record books due by 5 p.m.
 18-4-H Adult Leaders Council - 6 p.m.
 18-21 - Texas 4-H Congress
 20 - Homemade Noodles Workshop - 10 a.m.
 20-22 - Texas Tech University Meats Clinic

4-H Corner

Joe Vann

Pasta Perfect Workshop (Homemade Noodles)
 4-H'ers interested in learning how to make homemade noodles are invited to the Pasta Perfect Workshop on Thursday, July 20. The workshop will be led by Donna Brauchi and will be conducted from 10 a.m. to noon at the Gray County Annex. Cost is $1.

Trail Ride Set
 Each year a large number of Gray County 4-H members, leaders, and parents get together to take part in a trail ride. The ride is held in conjunction with the Gray County 4-H horse project.

The trail ride for this year is set for August 5-6 at the Sitter Ranch south of McLean. This is an excellent site for the ride with a great deal of open country and some good camp facilities.

To participate in the trail ride, you need to come by the Gray County Annex and sign a medical and minor release form. These forms need to be signed by the 4-H member, a parent, and a notary.

The cost to participate in the trail ride is $5 per person. This will cover supper Saturday night, and breakfast and lunch on Sunday. All campers will need to bring a sack lunch for Saturday at noon.

The deadline to sign up for the ride is August 1. For more details, call or come by the Extension Office.

Possible Program On Competitive Trail Riding

As a part of the Gray County 4-H trail ride, we may have a program on the Texas 4-H Competitive Trail Ride.

One of the most educational equestrian sports available today is competitive trail riding, as sanctioned by the North American Trail Ride Conference and now in the new 4-H horse project enrichment activity.

Competitive trail riding now has a 4-H award recognition system on the district and state level. This sport includes 4-H age riders who ride English tack, western tack or even combinations of tack. Their mount may be a pony, horse, or a mule.

The North American Trail Ride Conference (NATRC) is the best known competitive trail riding association and is recognized by AQHA, the Appaloosa Horse Club, the Arabian Horse Club of America, and most other breed registries. NATRC has developed a uniform set of judging criteria for competitive trail rides, which should not be confused with endurance rides.

Endurance rides are long distance races. A competitive trail ride is not a race and allows thirty minutes leeway for all riders. Each ride is timed for equal portions of walking and trotting and is always judged by a NATRC approved licensed veterinarian whose primary concern is the health of the animals. This judge determines the winning animal based on the best condition at the end of the ride. The judge eliminates animals that are overstressed, so no rider can harm their mount.

A sanctioned horsemanship judge is also provided to grade and score riders. Horsemanship is judged on safety and horse care while the horse is stabled in camp or on the trail. Style of riding is not a factor so long as the rider is sensible and safe. Horsemanship placings are given independently from horse awards.

Judges score horse and rider on score cards. Each ride is a learning experience for the 4-Her who takes home a copy of the scorecards from every ride, providing an explanation of strong points and weaknesses in the mount's training, conditioning, and the 4-Her's own horsemanship skills.

Most competitive trail rides include two nights camping out in wilderness areas. The long dis-ance (up to 30 miles a day over challenging terrain) makes teamwork and trust between horse and rider more important than professional training.

Texas 4-H Competitive Trail Points can be scored on any approved NATRC ride. Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Louisiana compose the NATRC region IV, where approximately 12 sanctioned trail rides are held each year. There are approximately 50 NATRC sanctioned rides in other regions of the U.S. Most 4-H riders will compete in the junior division, ages 10-17.

To participate in the Texas 4-H Competitive Trail Riding Activity, mail the name of the participating 4-Her, address and phone, county and district, name of horse with a copy of registration papers, if any, and the horse project's leader's name and address to: Vicky Ives Speir, Texas 4-H Competitive Trail, Route 4, Box 716, Marshall, Tex. 75670. Complete rules and list of approved rides will be mailed to participants. Leader's guide and video available soon.

4-H Youth Rodeo set for August 18-19

The Gray County 4-H Youth Rodeo will be August 18-19 at the Top of Texas Rodeo Arena starting at 7 p.m. The rodeo is for all youth ages 9-18.

B-Bar-K belt buckles will be awarded to the top three winners in each event of the 9-11 and 12-14 age groups. First place belt buckles will be presented to the 15-18 age group in addition to pay backs. All-Around buckles will be awarded in each age group. Entries are due in the Gray County Extension Office, HCR 2, Box 33, Pampa, Tx. 79065 by 5 p.m. August 11.

The events include Youth Team Roping (heading and heeling) for ages 9-18, Saturday, August 19 at 1 p.m. with an entry fee of $20 per team with $10 of this fee to be paid back and a first place buckle to be awarded to both members of the first place team. Following is an Adult/Youth Team Roping for ages 9-18 for youth and adults over 21, with an entry fee of $20 per team and a $10 pay back.

Events for ages 15-18 include: calf roping, pole bending, steer riding, barrel racing, goat tying, breakaway roping, and ribbon roping.

Events for 12-14 include: steer riding, pole bending, breakaway roping, barrel racing, goat tying, ribbon roping, adult/youth ribbon roping.

Events for 9-11 include: breakaway roping, calf riding, goat tying, barrel racing, pole bending, flag racing, adult/youth ribbon roping.

Boys and girls may participate in any event listed for their age group. All-Around buckles will be awarded on points awarded in all events entered with the exception of the adult/youth ribbon roping ages 9-11 and 12-14 and the adult/youth team roping where points will not count.

For ages 9-11, the entry fee is $8 per event. The 12-14 age group entry fee is $10 per event. The 15-18 age group entry fee is $20 with $10 jackpotted.

Events for Pee Wee contestants will be Saturday afternoon following the team roping events at 2:30 p.m. Contestants ages 6 and under can compete in a stick horse barrel race, goat ribbon race, boot scramble race, and sack race. Events for ages 7-8 will include goat ribbon race, barrel race, flag race, and pole bending.

Entry fees will be $2 per event for ages 6 and under and $3 per event for ages 7-8. An All-Around trophy will be presented in each age group and ribbons will be awarded through sixth place.

Information and entry blanks can be obtained at the Extension Office. Preference for Friday and Saturday night performances will be given to completed, notarized, and paid entries on a first come, first serve basis.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

People whose M.O. is B.O. need help

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the letter from the woman who stayed on her side of the bed for 40 years because her husband hardly ever took a bath.

I have a brother who is just like him. He came to stay with me for two months last summer, and never took one bath or shower in all the time he was here. I kept checking the towels and washrag every day, and he never used one!

I changed the sheets and pillowcases on his bed every week, and had to hold my nose while I carried them to the washing machine. (I used to sneak into his bedroom while he was sleeping so I could get his socks and underwear in order to wash them.)

This man dressed up like a sport and looked clean, but he was anything but. He splashed a lot of cologne and after-shave on himself, so he must have known that he needed it. I gave him some deodorant, but he didn't get the hint and never touched it.

Why do some folks just hate to bathe? There must be something wrong upstairs. I would appreciate the opinion of a psychiatrist.

STINKY'S SISTER

DEAR SISTER: I asked my No. 1 consultant, Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the American Psychiatric Association, and he said: "Some older people who are chronically depressed will go for long periods — often many months — without bathing. They seem totally unaware that they smell bad, and may become hostile and defensive when told that they absolutely must bathe."

"In cases where there is repressed anger, refusal to bathe is one way of distancing oneself from a spouse or family members."

"People who have very low self-esteem will neglect personal hygiene. They feel loathsome ('Why bother; I'm not worth the trouble')."

"If it comes on late in life and hasn't been a lifelong pattern, it may indicate that an organic brain problem has developed."

"In order to determine specifically the reason for refusing to bathe, the person would have to be psychiatrically examined."

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing that wonderful poem Jimmy Stewart wrote about his dog named Beau. It was priceless.

I brought back some fond memories. I am a retired doctor of veterinary medicine and was formerly an assistant to Dr. J.D. Cozzens, who practiced in Westwood Village, Calif., back in 1936-1938. Most of our clients were movie stars, such as Pat O'Brien, Jeanette MacDonald, Gene Raymond, Fred MacMurray, Lloyd Nolan and Jimmy Stewart.

One day we received a telephone call from Jimmy Stewart. He was at the dog pound trying to retrieve his English setter, which had been picked up by the dog catcher. Mr. Stewart needed us to identify the dog — which showed absolutely no recognition of Mr. Stewart when he came to claim him. Because I had handled the dog, Dr. Cozzens sent me down to the pound to verify the ownership of the setter.

As I recall, the dog acted as though he had never seen Mr. Stewart before, which was quite upsetting to this famous movie star.

Anyway, I established the identity, and Mr. Stewart took the dog home. This happened more than 50 years ago, so Mr. Stewart may not remember it, but I will never forget it.

WALLACE R. EAGLE, D.V.M., GENEVA, ILL.

DEAR DR. EAGLE: Thanks for sharing a delightful memory.

Host families are needed for foreign exchange students

Host families are still needed for high school exchange students sponsored by the American Intercultural Student Exchange (AISE), a non-profit educational organization.

The students, ages 15 to 18, will arrive in the U.S. in August, attend high school in the host family's area and return to their home countries in June, 1990. All students are fluent in English, have spending money and medical insurance.

Prospective host families should enjoy teenagers, have a genuine interest in learning about the customs and culture of another country and the desire to share American traditions with a foreign student.

What's new in books ...

CAPITAL CRIMES. By Lawrence Sanders. Putnam. 381 Pages. $19.95.

A self-appointed "holy man" treats the hemophiliac son of a nation's most powerful man with supernatural powers. Impressed, the powerful man begins seeking the holy man's advice even on national affairs. Some people become alarmed and assassinate the holy man.

Sound familiar? The real-life story of Grigori Rasputin, the mad monk of the pre-revolutionary Russia.

Lawrence Sanders reincarnates the indomitable monk in his latest fiction, Capital Crimes. The monk is not called Rasputin, however. He goes by the name of Brother Kristos, and the man he controls is not Nicholas II, the last czar, but the president of the United States.

Although the name Rasputin is not mentioned anywhere in the book, Kristos is Rasputin's mirror image in every detail. He is a seedy and greedy preacher who doesn't belong to any organized religion. He has a mesmerizing gaze, a long beard and an insatiable desire for women. He drinks — what else — Russian vodka. He treats the president's hemophiliac son and wins his trust. He has such a supernatural strength that he takes, as Rasputin is said to have done, a long time to die when he is poisoned.

Characters revolving around Kristos include the devout first lady, the ambitious vice president, the concerned secretary of state, their aides and a Soviet agent.

Sanders might have intended the novel to be a parody of a historical event or a satire on American politics, but one cannot escape an impression that the author, unable to create an interesting protagonist of his own, simply exhumed one of the most bizarre characters from the grave and filled a gap in his imagination.

Still, it is fun enough to read about this fictitious Rasputin raising havoc in 20th-century Washington.

Waka Tsunoda
For The AP

THE RUSSIA HOUSE. By John Le Carré. Knopf. 353 Pages. $19.95.

"He chose me because I wasn't a spy," said Barley. "Because I sang my bloody aria."

"And you won't be a spy now," said Ned. "You'll be a publisher. His. All you'll be doing is collaborating with your author and with us at the same time. What's wrong with that?"

So it begins for Barley Scott Blair, head of Abercrombie & Blair publishers in London, who is about to become a spy. John Le Carré tells the story in The Russia House, a masterful tale in which trained professionals must rely on a slightly alcoholic civilian.

Blair is propelled into the dizzying circles of international intrigue because of his chance meeting with a Russian scientist called Goethe. Goethe, who is tormented by the knowledge that he turns "ploughshares into swords," has made Blair promise that if he, Goethe, ever finds "the courage to think like a hero" that he, Blair, "will act like a merely decent human being."

Some top-secret documents are smuggled out of Russia; documents that Goethe wants Blair to publish. The British government finds out about it. Blair is plucked from a bar in Portugal and given a speed course on spying.

Blair irritates and exasperates — and likes to drink too much. But he has a mind that can function quickly and keenly, and a heart that can respond with love and compassion. Le Carré takes the reader step by step from Blair's recruitment to his final, heart-wrenching decision.

The Russia House is a story of trust and honor, loyalty and passion. As Blair learns, spying is waiting. Spying is worrying. Spying is being yourself, but more so.

Dusty's ready for another rock comeback

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Another rock comeback seems to be happening.

Dusty Springfield, Britain's leading girl singer in the mid-1960s, sings "Nothing Has Been Proved" in the new film, Scandal. Capitol released it as a single and she made a performance video. On the strength of that, she's making an album for EMI.

She was in a folk trio, the Springfields, from 1959 to 1963, hitting with the single "Silver Threads and Golden Needles." Then she had a string of solo hits, the biggest of which was "You Don't Have to Say You Love Me" in 1966.

Gaining popularity in America during the so-called British Invasion of the mid-60s, she was one of two female British singers to have a string of hits on both sides of the Atlantic; the other was Petula Clark.

Springfield's other hits included "I Only Want to Be With You," recently a hit in a remake by Samantha Fox. And there were "Wishin' and Hopin'," "The Look of Love," "Stay Awhile" and "All I See Is You."

In 1968 she came to Memphis to record an album with the Memphis Horns. The resulting Dusty in Memphis produced a Grammy-winning hit for her, "Son of a Preacher Man."

Most recently, she has helped an animal rescue facility in Southern California.

A year ago, the Pet Shop Boys — Neil Tennant and Chris Lowe — were looking for a woman singer for "What Have I Done to Deserve This?" a duet about the end of an adult affair.

They wanted 'a voice suggesting both experience and vulnerability, warmth but also a tough take-it-or-leave-it attitude.'

They wanted, Tennant has written, "a voice suggesting both experience and vulnerability, warmth but also a tough take-it-or-leave-it attitude." Their manager's assistant suggested Springfield. The record became a Number One hit in England and America.

Dusty Springfield

"I remember pulling my car over to the side and saying, 'Who's that?' when I heard 'West End Girls.' I don't think there are any coincidences in life. I was really intrigued with the Pet Shop Boys' sound. A couple of years later I got to experience it."

Now she'll put two beloved cats in quarantine for six months and move back to England and cut an album. The recording will be produced by several contemporary writers and producers, including Phil Collins. He had put one of her songs, "Just Don't Know What to Do With Myself," in the movie Buster.

She says: "My last record was eight years ago. It didn't make any noise at all. My last impor-

'They put me in the niche of slick nightclub singers. I didn't want to be that person. I'm not very slick. I'm spontaneous.'

tant LP by music standards was 20 years ago.

"I don't know why I was successful the first time around. Maybe there was a space in the industry that I filled. You have to wait for the next available slot and you don't know when it's going to come. All you can do is be available for it."

"Worrying about it, as I used to, can eat you up. All that does is give you a headache and sleepless nights."

Of English women singers of the '60s, she says, "I had the longest string of hits of any. It doesn't just stop. It sort of trails off. I didn't want to go through that second- or third-level career. I got out of England because I saw that coming."

She came to the United States and signed with American management. "They put me in the niche of slick nightclub singers. I didn't want to be that person. I'm not very slick. I'm spontaneous. And it was no longer hot to play those places."

"I found that so depressing, the gray life. If that's my future, no thank you!"

She did play New Orleans and Lake Tahoe, but not Las Vegas. "They don't know who you are. They talk. My ego couldn't take that."

"For a couple of years I kept quoting, 'Is that all there is?' A part of me had written me off. The other part was the way I started out, knowing there was more to life. It might take a long wait. And it did. Luckily, I had made a lot of money. I lived off that."

Springfield says her interest in animals was "a very sustaining force in my life. I got involved with a refuge for abandoned and abused exotic animals. Some are circus animals whose trainers die."

"People think it's smart to get a tiger cub. They grow up. They're not meant to be pets. No zoo will want it. It's not a 'class A' exhibit and will be attacked by its own kind. They can't take care of themselves. Some are psychologically damaged."

'I lost interest in the everyday stuff. I wanted the big occasions. I didn't want the daily drudgery.'

She sang some benefit concerts for the way station. About singing, she says: "I lost interest in the everyday stuff. I wanted the big occasions. I didn't want the daily drudgery. You go for broke on opening night and think, 'I've got to do this again tomorrow night?' World tours are not for me."

The new album will be released in the fall. She seems afraid to count heavily on it.

"Everyone is approaching it with a lot of excitement," she says. "No one goes in to make a bad record, but things can go terribly wrong."

SEED WHEAT

Now that our wheat harvest is over, I am getting a few calls from farmers who have seed wheat for sale.

The Gray County Extension Office will maintain a list of farmers with seed wheat for sale. Maybe this will assist farmers in finding seed wheat for next fall.

Farmers that have seed wheat can call in and leave approximate bushels, the variety and your phone number.

PANHANDLE PEST REPORT

Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist, gives the following insect report on the Panhandle area.

Overall insect pest activity remains on the light side. Small colonies of spider mites are more easily found, but generally are not a problem.

Southwestern corn borer and European corn borer activity seems to be running less than in recent years. Full armyworm infestations are being reported infesting whorls of sorghum and corn.

CORN

Spider mite infestations remain very light at this time. Continue close monitoring of this pest, for the corn crop is nearing the stage at which mites tend to increase.

The hot, dry weather conditions we are having and also forecast favor rapid spider mite buildup. Do not allow corn to become moisture stressed — proper irrigation will help plants withstand mite feeding damage. The most important time to prevent water stress is during tassel and early grain fill.

New information is available this year to assist in the decision making process on Banks grass mite control in corn. An economic injury level table was developed from research conducted by Dr. Tom Archer, research entomologist at Lubbock, and is based upon percent infested leaves, control cost and market value of expected yield.

A copy can be obtained by calling the Gray County Extension Office, 669-8033.

To determine when it is economical to control Banks grass mites on corn, calculate the per acre control cost (miticide plus application) and the expected value of the crop (yield x price).

Determine the average percent of mite infested green leaves per plant, regardless of the number of mites per leaf. Do this by dividing the number of mite infested green leaves by the number of green leaves per plant.

Collect this information from several locations in the field. Calculate the average percentage of infested leaves per plant from these samples and refer to the economic injury table to decide if a miticide application is necessary.

This economic injury level may be used to make control decisions on field or food corn prior to the full dent growth stage.

Mite feeding after full dent will not cause yield loss, but may contribute to premature plant lodging if mite feeding damage is severe and the crop is stressed. Mite feeding will not slow dry-down of the grain. Research has shown that canopy penetration of miticides is increased with the addition of crop oil.

SORGHUM

Continue to watch for greenbug development in grain sorghum. Reports from sources throughout the Panhandle would indicate little to no problem with greenbug at this time.

Historically, this pest increases through the month of July and early August; however, the last two years economic infestations of greenbugs have developed very late.

All this says is that you cannot rely on the calendar for predicting greenbug infestations. Considerable sorghum was planted late — pay particular close attention to this small sorghum for greenbug infestations.

In recent days, I have received a number of calls about fall armyworm feeding in the whorl of sorghum. Infestations are apparently unusually heavy.

Information that is currently available indicates that these whorl feeding worms rarely cause economic yield loss unless they begin feeding on the growing point of the sorghum plant. Splitting a few stalks should help determine this.

Review of recommendations from other states generally indicate that control of whorl-worms is not profitable. One exception was the recommendation from Arkansas, where they suggest that extremely high infestations of 3-6 worms per plant may justify an insecticide application.

VanZandt receives national recognition

Joe VanZandt of Pampa, a 24-year veteran with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and current Gray County Extension agent, has been named to receive the Distinguished Service Award, the highest recognition given by the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

The award is presented annually to county agents nationwide who have made outstanding contributions to agriculture and related program areas, according to Duery Menzies, Gillespie County Extension agent and president of the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association.

VanZandt is one of seven county agents with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, selected to receive the award at the NACAA annual meeting July 30-Aug. 3 in New Brunswick, N.J.

He will also be given special recognition during the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association annual meeting Aug. 6-9 in Corpus Christi.

VanZandt has served as Gray County Extension agent for 13 of his 24 years with the Extension Service.

Joe VanZandt

During his years of service, he has conducted strong result demonstration programs, particularly relating to range and beef production with emphasis on weed and brush control and management of improved grasses. This has allowed cattlemen to maintain beef production from grassland at optimum levels.

A wide variety of educational programs have been utilized to assist the people in Gray County. Some of the more outstanding programs have related to Estate Planning, Farm and Ranch Management, Beef Cattle, Marketing, Wheat, Top O' Texas Farmers Market, Sick Plant Clinic, Home Lawn and Landscape Maintenance, Vegetables, and Noxious Weed Control.

VanZandt has assisted with off-station research projects relating to Southwestern corn borer control, soil fertility rates and recommendations, treacle mustard control, alfalfa production, and wormwood and goldaster control on rangeland.

In addition, VanZandt has assisted local leaders in community development projects through the Pampa Independent School District, City of Pampa and Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce. He also helped with the seven-county Top o' Texas Junior Livestock Show sponsored by Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce.

VanZandt has provided overall leadership to 4-H programs throughout his career. He has realized the need for funding for many local activities and has started three county 4-H rodeos that still function as primary fund raising projects for county 4-H programs.

In 1978, he was recognized as having one of the three outstanding county soil fertility programs in Texas by the Texas Plant Food Institute.

Prior to his service in Gray County, VanZandt served in Hansford, Moore, Parmer and Travis counties.

He holds a bachelor of science degree in animal husbandry and a master of education degree in agricultural education, both from Texas A&M University.

He is active in the Pampa Rotary Club, First United Methodist Church and Pampa United Way, and served as president of Pampa ISD Board of Education for two years.

In addition, he has been active in the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association, having served as district director for District I during 1982-83.

Wheat farmers could survive without subsidies

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If all countries removed farm subsidies and opted for free trade, the American wheat farmer would eventually come out on top, according to Agriculture Department researchers.

But there are some catches. It also would depend on production costs and relative prices domestically and overseas. And some wheat farmers could go broke, meaning the survivors would be fewer and larger.

If U.S. acreage programs were phased out, including the long-range Conservation Reserve Program, wheat production "would rise somewhat" in the short run, a report by the department's Economic Research Service said.

"But if a large portion of cropland reentered production, average U.S. wheat yields would fall because the land currently idled is less productive," the report said.

If government support to agriculture is completely removed, U.S. farm prices and incomes "may fall somewhat and become more variable" in the short run.

"This likely would cause land prices to fall," the report said. "But a rise in export demand over the long run — or government assistance not tied to production — may offset land value declines and result in more stable incomes."

The report, published in the July issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine, is the first of a series by the agency about efforts to liberalize world agricultural trade. The first analysis deals only with wheat.

An editor's note said that while theorists claim that free trade benefits society, there are adjustment costs, and gainers and losers. And because "there never has been free trade in agriculture," the findings are speculative, it said.

"Several studies indicate that world prices could rise considerably in the long run, and that the distribution of production and consumption across countries would change significantly," the report said. "However, total world trade in wheat is unlikely to change substantially, researchers generally agree."

An overhaul of global trade and farm policies is being discussed by the United States and other countries under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. One of the U.S. goals in the so-called Uruguay Round of talks is long-range reform including the gradual elimination of all "trade-distorting" subsidies and other programs.

Negotiators in April agreed on a framework for both long- and short-term reforms. The short-term measures include freezing support and production levels, followed by unspecified reduction in 1990. Long-term measures call for "substantial progressive reductions" in farm supports, including all measures directly or indirectly related to trade access, internal supports and export competition.

The United States "probably has a long-term comparative advantage in wheat production because of its climate, soil fertility and well-developed production and distribution system," the report said. "Trade reform likely would enhance the long-term U.S. position, since the most efficient producers would gain the most from substantial trade reform."

But agency analysts said not all U.S. wheat farmers would benefit from trade liberalization if all government supports were removed. Even so, producers would have several choices.

"Farmers could find that using wheat land for cattle grazing or other farming operations would earn an acceptable return," the report said. "They could subsidize wheat production with other income, hoping that their wheat production would become more profitable over time; or they could leave farming."

"The U.S. wheat sector likely would become increasingly concentrated," the report said. "Over time, the costs of production may fall as farmers spread the fixed costs of machinery and equipment over a larger number of acres, while using management and labor more efficiently."

Many farm crop prices up, likely to stay there until fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers are paying record-high potato prices and probably won't see much relief until the new fall crop is ready in a few months, says an Agriculture Department economist.

Other "high-value" farm crops, including fresh produce and some nuts, are also costing more. Part of the reason stems from last year's drought, part from rising demand.

Retail prices of fresh potatoes in May averaged 36.8 cents per pound nationally, up from 24.7 cents a year earlier.

Glenn Zepp of the department's Economic Research Service said that was the highest monthly potato price since at least 1980 and that probably none before then was as high.

"We had a small fall crop last year, and there has also been strong demand for potatoes for processing," Zepp said. "The real competition this spring seems to have been between the chippers and the fresh market. Prices for both really went up."

Zepp said in a telephone interview and in an Agricultural Outlook magazine report that the high potato prices have created optimism among growers.

"But this could lead to substantially higher plantings for the fall crop and sharply lower prices in the next marketing year," he said.

The farm price of potatoes nationally in May averaged $8.94 per 100 pounds, compared with $4.62 in May 1988. The preliminary price for June showed some easing to $8.44 per hundredweight.

According to USDA records, the May and June farm prices of potatoes were the highest since July 1984, when they averaged $9.72 per hundredweight. In 1981, prices also rose to more than $9 during a couple of months.

Zepp said last year's drought hurt the crop severely in the Midwest, where many of the smaller, round white potatoes are grown for processing into chips. The North Dakota harvest of fall potatoes, for example, was less than 14.4 million hundredweight, down 38 percent from 1987.

In all, last fall's harvest — which makes up most of the U.S. production, with winter, spring and summer varieties accounting for the remainder — dropped 10 percent to 307.2 million hundredweight. Total production was less than 350 million hundredweight, down 9 percent.

Despite the smaller 1988 crop, processing use of potatoes was down only 2 percent during the winter and spring. And by May 1, the nation's inventories of fresh potatoes were down 22 percent from a year earlier.

According to Labor Department figures for May — the June report will be issued on July 19 — retail prices for all fresh vegetables averaged 23 percent more than a year ago. Higher tomato prices also helped boost the May index.

"In addition to specific potato and tomato price pressures, use of salad bars in restaurants and grocery stores, and growing consumer awareness of fresh produce's nutritional value are pushing up vegetable prices," Zepp said.

Based on June 1 estimates for major summer fruits, consumers can expect reduced supplies of peaches, bartlett pears, nectarines and plums, while apricot and sweet cherry production will increase.

Freestone peach output is expected to be down 16 percent from last year, with all the major growing areas reporting reduced prospects, Zepp said. Freeze damage during the critical bloom period in March and April reduced the outlook in Georgia and

South Carolina.

California's clingstone peach production, which is mostly canned, is expected to be fractionally larger than last year.

However, Bartlett pear production in California, Oregon and Washington is forecast down 5 percent. Prices paid to growers are likely to be higher.

Things they never told you about a heat pump.

Fact # 7

Installing a heat pump is much more costly and complicated than putting in a high-efficiency air conditioner.

And a heat pump doesn't cool as well or operate as economically, either.

If you need a new air conditioner this summer, replace it with a modern high-efficiency air conditioner. Not a gadget.

Task force claims to have suspect in killings

SEATTLE (AP) — After searching seven years for one of the nation's worst serial killers, police say a former law student is a "viable suspect" in the Green River slayings of 49 women, and perhaps other killings in the Northwest.

William Jay Stevens II, 38, who is serving a jail term for burglary, was named in an affidavit made public late last week.

The affidavit was filed to obtain a warrant to search two of Stevens' residences in Spokane, 290 miles east of Seattle.

"Records obtained thus far have failed to provide him with an alibi for any of the 49 suspected Green River homicides, or any of those in the cities of Portland or Spokane," the affidavit said.

"Instead, interviews and records have produced the following facts that tend to establish that Stevens is a viable suspect in the Green River homicides and possibly others in the Pacific Northwest."

Police searched the residences Wednesday, producing an additional truckload of material including crime reports, 1,800 videotapes, maps, credit cards, 14 police badges and two Seattle police uniform shirts, according to court documents.

The Green River case involves the deaths of 41 women and the disappearance of at least eight others in Washington state and Oregon from 1982 to 1985. Most of the victims were young and almost all were linked to prostitution. Early victims were found along or near the Green River, southeast of Seattle.

The nationally syndicated television show Manhunt aired a program on the slayings Dec. 8. It generated thousands of calls, including one from a viewer who told police to check a third-year student at Gonzaga University Law School in Spokane, said King County Capt. Bob Evans, task force commander.

After finding Stevens, police found he had walked away from a Seattle work release center in January 1981, before finishing a one-year sentence for burglarizing a police equipment store.

Stevens was rearrested Jan. 10 and is serving the rest of that burglary sentence, plus an additional term for escape that will expire Sept. 25, in King County jail.

Clements adds WT merger Public Notice

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements expanded the special legislative session for consideration of merging West Texas State University with the Texas A&M University System.

The Senate has already approved merging the school in Canyon with the A&M system, and the House took up the measure Friday.

Under the bill, the WTSU-A&M merger would require approval by boards of both institutions and the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

The special session, initially called for lawmakers to try and complete work on a proposed overhaul of the state workers' compensation system, ends Wednesday.

In addition to the merger proposal, Clements added to the agenda of the session measures that would:

- Require a person appointed to fill an unexpired term on a junior college district board to run for election at the next election date to be eligible to remain on the board.
