Bush rejects new Panamanian government

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush today made formal the expected U.S. rejection of the new Panamanian government appointed by Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and said he plans to tighten existing sanctions against that country.

Bush said in a statement that the administration will "continue to take other steps ... to deprive the illegal regime of funds that belong to the Panamanian people." He did not elaborate.

He said the U.S. ambassador to Panama, Arthur Davis, called back to Washington last May, will not return to Panama and there will be no diplomatic contact with the new authorities in that country.

The statement came on the last day of the term of President Eric Arturo Delvalle, who was ousted by Noriega 18 months ago but has been recognized by the United States in exile.

The president said the United States will continue to support self-determination and democracy for Panama and "counter the threat posed by Gen. Noriega's support for drug trafficking and other forms of subversion."

"I am confident that other governments which support human rights, democracy and self-determination and which oppose drug trafficking will take similar measures," Bush said.

He said it was "a sad day for Panama and for the democratic nations of this hemisphere," in the wake of Noriega's invalidation of last May's election to choose a new president who would have taken office today.

Observers of the balloting said it was an overwhelming victory for Noriega's opposition despite his efforts to rig it, but the military strongman threw out the results.

The United States has chosen for the past year and a half not to extend diplomatic legitimacy to the Noriega-backed government in Panama, opting instead to continue recognizing exiled President Eric Arturo Delvalle.

Delvalle has wielded no authority in exile, spent much of his time in hiding and had an almost invisible base of support in Panama. But his term in office was to expire today with no acknowledged claimant as his successor.

The highly unusual diplomatic situation arises a day after the United States denounced Noriega as a man of "shameless excess" with a fortune of up to $300 million from drug smuggling and other criminal activities.

"Noriega's greed, personal ambition and selfishness are the origin, core and sustenance of Panama's crisis," Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told the Organization of American States on Thursday.

The political vacuum grows out of the decision of Panamanian authorities to void May's presidential elections after independent observers concluded that the anti-Noriega candidate, Guillermo Endara, had won by a landslide.

The administration was planning a statement today outlining the implications of the new diplomatic reality, but officials said no additional economic measures against Noriega are planned.

Speaking to the OAS, Eagleburger said Noriega's assets included a string of mansions and other dwellings in Panama and elsewhere, as well as various jets and three large pleasure yachts — "The Macho I, Macho II and Macho III."

An American lawyer for Noriega, Frank Anthony

Rabino, said the case against his client, based on two 1988 Florida grand jury indictments, was politically motivated.

Rabino said the U.S. government is asking "you and me and others to use our imagination, to let our dreams run wild and maybe we'll find something evil in Gen. Noriega if we speculate ... long and hard."

Noriega's OAS ambassador, Jose Maria Cabrera, said of Eagleburger's allegations, "There is nothing new in this string of inventions."

The State Department asked for the special OAS meeting after a Panamanian diplomat demanded last week that the United States prove its drug smuggling allegations against Noriega.

In his speech, Eagleburger outlined a long list of criminal activities he attributed to Noriega, contending that he "protected cocaine shipments from Medellin, Colombia, through Panama to the United States."

Refusing to deal with Panamanian authorities has made it difficult for the United States to protect its interests in Panama, but there has been no apparent impact on the operation of the Panama Canal.

Middle school hopes to achieve even more parental involvement

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Parental involvement in the education of local sixth, seventh and eighth graders may reach a new high this year, according to Pampa Middle School Principal Oneal Westbrook.

Westbrook said over 700 parents, teachers and students showed up earlier this week for a sixth grade orientation at the campus, far exceeding administrators' wildest expectations.

"Three things that we're going to 'The whole idea is to involve parents in our program.'

- Oneal Westbrook

do this year are, number one, sixth grade orientation," Westbrook said, "which was (Tuesday night). The second thing is to set up a permanent parental booster club ... and, third, plan a back-to-school night which will take place ... Oct. 19."

The first booster club meeting will take place Thursday, Sept. 7, at 7 p.m. in the middle school auditorium, Westbrook said.

"The whole idea is to involve parents in our program," Westbrook said. "There's a perception that this is a bad place, to be and that perception is wrong. What we have to do is bring people in and they are going to take a step back and say, 'I'm not sorry my kid is there. I'm glad he's there. He's doing good stuff.'"

Administrators will count on booster club members to provide vital input as to the direction of the school, Westbrook said.

"We're not asking them to go out and sell stuff and we're not talking about money," Westbrook said. "What we're trying to do is have parents involved in the decision making. What are we going to do? How come we're going to do that? If we can do that we will be working in harmony with the parents."

He admitted that schools in the past have been guilty of allowing teachers and parents to exist in a situation perceived as adversarial in which the student is caught in the middle.

"We can't let that happen," he said. "It's got to be us all working together to make the education process for the kids better."

In addition to inviting parents to join the booster club, Westbrook said interested extended family members such as grandparents, aunts and uncles and members of the community concerned with middle school education are open to join.

"Every parent who wants to be involved in their child's education needs to be at this meeting," Westbrook said of the Sept. 7 gathering.

He added that PMS administrators and teachers are extremely motivated by the promise of new levels of parent/teacher cooperation and open to the potential the booster club will bring to the campus.

WTSU freshman killed in accident

By BEAR MILLS

ROBERTS COUNTY — An 18-year-old freshman at West Texas State University was killed and another 18-year-old student seriously injured Thursday afternoon when the Camaro Z-28 they were traveling in struck a John Deere tractor from the rear approximately 21 miles north of Pampa on Hwy. 70.

Michelle Villegas of Tulia was pronounced dead at the scene by Roberts County Justice of the Peace Fanny Greenhouse. She was a passenger in the car.

The driver, Ravonna L. Clower of Beaver, Okla., was treated at Coronado Hospital in Pampa and then transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo for treatment of face and neck injuries. She is listed in stable condition.

Troopers from the Texas Department of Public Safety said Clower's vehicle was traveling at a high rate of speed, possibly up to 100 mph, when it rounded a curve with both right tires on the shoulder and struck the John Deere tractor.

Official reports stated the back left tire of the tractor was severed and crashed through the Camaro's windshield, killing Villegas. The Camaro then traveled across the highway, rolling over in a bar ditch and landing on its top. Both women were wearing seat belts, troopers said.

Vernon Frank Bridwell Jr. of Miami, the driver of the tractor, was reportedly only slightly injured even though his tractor rolled over in the opposite bar ditch.

WTSU Dean of Students Mary Hill said both women had started classes Thursday and were apparently driving to Beaver to pick up Clower's driver's license, which she had left behind when she moved to Canyon to attend college.

Since classes were scheduled for today, WT officials said it is likely Clower was hurrying to Beaver in an attempt to get her license and get back Thursday evening.

Villegas and Clower had met when they were both assigned to live in Cross Hall dormitory, Hill said.

Villegas was a nursing major who had been in a number of organizations and won multiple honors in high school. An official from Tulia High School said she was a member of the National Honor Society, student council, band, Future Teachers of America and Future Homemakers of America.

She had also served as cheerleader her senior year, had been named Miss THS and Miss Flame and was the football queen.

Services are pending with a Tulia Funeral Home.

Department of Public Safety troopers said citations are pending the results of blood tests and the gathering of other information.

Japan's prime minister meets with Bush

By RITA BEAM, JH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite "economic frictions" between Japan and the United States, Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said in an interview broadcast today he hopes his talks with President Bush ensure that overall relations remain firm.

Bush interrupted his Maine vacation to return to Washington for talks with the new prime minister about trade and other issues.

Although the two countries have very good economic relations, "there are economic frictions over various issues," Kaifu said in an interview on CBS This Morning, and "Japan wishes to make as much effort as possible in order to resolve those economic frictions."

He said, "I would like to, through my talks with the president, make sure that this relationship of mutual trust will remain unshakable and firm."

Bush and Kaifu were to discuss "the overall economic agenda" and have lunch before the president returns to Maine for the final days of his summer vacation, said National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft.

The meeting comes a day after Bush welcomed Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and his family to the Bush family's seaside home.

The leaders said they discussed many issues, including their shared support for embattled Colombian President Virgilio Barco in his attempted crackdown on drug traffickers.

Kaifu is making his first trip to the United States after recently taking office in the wake of sex and political scandal that felled his predecessor and other prominent Japanese leaders.

"It is customary for new Japanese prime ministers to visit Washington early on to establish a personal relationship with the president," Scowcroft told reporters.

"This is one of our more important international relationships and it is important that the two establish this kind of close contact, and that's really the purpose of the visit."

The 58-year-old Kaifu is one of Japan's youngest prime ministers; but he has served in parliament for 29 years and was twice minister of education.

U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama planned a working breakfast this morning before joining Bush and Kaifu at the White House.

Bush was not expected to raise one of the thorniest issues between the two countries: the U.S. contention that Japan unfairly restricts U.S. producers from its rice market. Japan has agreed to discuss the issue at the ongoing global trade negotiations.

The United States declared last year that Japan's rice program, with import restrictions on foreign supplies, was indefensible and adversely affects U.S. rice producers.

U.S. producers allege Japanese barriers cost them up to $1 billion a year in sales.

Scowcroft said much of the focus for today's meeting would be on bilateral trade issues and a range of international issues, including Far East cooperation, China, the volatile changes in Cambodia and international Third World debt issues.

On Thursday, Bush and Mulroney concluded their overnight visit, expressing solidarity on the hemispheric problems in Colombia and Panama.

Asked about the possibility of sending a multilateral force to help Colombia fight the drug lords, Bush said his administration wants to cooperate with President Barco.

Barco has said he doesn't want foreign military intervention.

"I know that I — the prime minister (Mulroney) and I have discussed this — we would be guided by requests from President Barco in Colombia."

Colombia may widen curfew

By BRUCE HANDLER
 Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — An explosion damaged a paint factory and wounded at least 13 people in Medellin, and authorities reportedly were considering widening a curfew to halt the wave of drug-related violence.

In Washington, officials said Thursday that some of the $65 million worth of equipment pledged by the Bush administration to fight the narcotics trade should begin arriving Sunday. U.S. military personnel were to arrive today for preparations.

Also Thursday, the Colombian government said that under emergency rules, judges' identities would be kept secret in drug cases. Since 1980, 220 judges and court officials have been murdered in a reign of terror aimed at intimidating them into dropping drug cases.

The government began fighting back in its boldest attempt ever after a leading presidential hopeful, Luis Carlos Galan, was assassinated Aug. 18. Drug lords responded with threats to kill more officials and with bombings.

They were particularly angry over a government decree that re-established Colombia's extradition treaty with the United States, where many drug dealers are wanted.

On Thursday, 33 pounds of dynamite strapped to an ice cream vendor's bicycle exploded at the Medellin paint factory, causing $300,000 worth of damage in addition to injuring at least 13 people, police and fire department spokesmen said.

The bomb was in a box on the back of the bicycle, which was left leaning against a retaining wall around a paint storage tank, Colombian news reports said.

The blast also damaged about 20 cars, a police spokeswoman said on condition of anonymity.

An anonymous caller told radio stations that the so-called Group of Extraditables, Colombia's cocaine barons, carried out the bombing and said there would be more attacks "with more victims."

The group issued a statement Aug. 24 declaring "total war" on the government. The group apparently speaks on behalf of the 12 Colombians the United States wants extradited to stand trial on drug charges.

Medellin, Colombia's second-largest city in the northwestern part of the country, is the home of the most powerful cocaine trafficking organizations in the world. The cartels are believed to supply up to 80 percent of the cocaine in the United States.

Police officers and soldiers in camouflage gear and carrying automatic rifles patrolled the streets of Medellin Thursday.

A 10 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew, imposed Wednesday, remained in effect for the city's 2.5 million residents and in eight other nearby towns.

The National Security Council met Thursday night to decide whether to extend the anti-drug curfew to other cities, according to the independently produced network TV news program "24 Hours."

President Virgilio Barco said Thursday the $65 million Bush offer for Colombia's war on drugs was important but that the real solution is "to put the brakes on the demand."

Barco, speaking during a visit to the north-central city of Bucaramanga, also said industrialized nations should put tighter controls on chemicals used to refine cocaine and crack down on "fiscal paradises" for laundered drug money.

Colombian authorities, acting under special emergency decrees, have rounded up suspected traffickers without formally charging them and have seized $200 million worth of property belonging to alleged drug dealers.

Delta trial ruling expected from judge today

FORT WORTH (AP) — The longest major aviation trial in U.S. history is expected to end today when a judge decides whether the government or Delta Air Lines should take responsibility for a 1985 plane crash that killed 137 people.

U.S. District Judge David O. Belew Jr. will release the ruling this afternoon, staff members in his office said Thursday.

The trial began in March 1988 and lasted almost 14 months, although it recessed several times so Belew could clear backlogged criminal cases.

Delta's lawsuit against the federal government claims that air traffic controllers and the National Weather Service failed to notify Delta pilots of hazardous weather at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. The airline wants the government to pay all or part of the claims arising from the crash.

The government contends the flight crew didn't heed Federal Aviation Administration tower warnings, didn't ask for weather information and decided to fly into the storm. The government also says the jet's radar should have warned the pilots of weather conditions.

The Lockheed L-1011, en route from Fort Lauderdale to Dallas, crashed trying to land at DFW on Aug. 2, 1985 when it was caught in a downburst of wind during a thunderstorm. Twenty-seven people survived.

The flight crew was killed in the crash.

Hostage holders want vengeance

By DAVID BRIGGS
 Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Captors holding U.S. hostages in Lebanon are motivated by a personal vengeance that will be more difficult to overcome since Israel kidnapped a Moslem cleric, says a U.S. Moslem leader who claims to have met with the hostage-holders in Beirut.

Mohammed Mehdi, secretary-general of the National Council on Islamic Affairs, said Thursday the kidnapping of Sheik Abdul-Karim Obeid worsened the prospects that the "exceptionally bitter, exceptionally paranoid" kidnappers will free the hostages.

"They feel the right to retaliation is sacred, and any questioning of that is illegitimate," said Mehdi, who claims to be possibly the only person in the United States who has met with the kidnappers in Beirut.

Obeid — who is affiliated with Hezbollah, the pro-Iranian extremist group believed to sponsor hostage-holders — was abducted from his home in south Lebanon July 28 by Israeli commandos. Israel, saying Obeid was involved in terrorism, has refused to free him.

The pro-Iranian Organization of the Oppressed on Earth claimed July 31 it retaliated by hanging U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, who was abducted while on U.N. duty in Lebanon. U.S. officials said they believe Higgins was killed, but some reports say the killing occurred months earlier. Joseph Cicippio, one of the seven other U.S. hostages, was threatened with death, then given a reprieve.

Mehdi claims to have met with people responsible for holding Cicippio and Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, during a February 1987 visit to Beirut to appeal for the hostages' release.

He said he was led blindfolded to the meeting in a dimly lighted room in Beirut. The captors he met with — four men ranging in age from about 20 to 25 — bore personal scars from the fighting in Lebanon, Mehdi said.

The man who claimed to be in charge of holding Anderson, the longest-held hostage who was kidnapped in 1985, said his entire village was destroyed by U.S. bombs dropped in retaliation for the bombing of the U.S. Marines' headquarters in Lebanon, when 241 servicemen were killed.

"He is so damn bitter he is ready to drop such shells on New York, on Washington," Mehdi said of Anderson's captor, who lost his wife, children and grandparents when his village was bombed.

The captor responsible for holding Cicippio, who was kidnapped in September 1986, told Mehdi his children had been burned by American napalm dropped from an American-made airplane piloted by an Israeli. Three of the captor's five children died, Mehdi said.

Notary seminar scheduled

AMARILLO — A seminar for notary publics, "Texas Notary Law and Procedure," is set for 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 13, in the Harvey Hotel, 3100 West I-40, announced Charles Huff, state education director.

Texas Notary Public Association (TNPA), a non-profit education association headquartered in Austin, is sponsoring the class.

Huff said the seminar will cover the duties and responsibilities of the commissioned notary, laws affecting notaries and the new laws that became effective this month. Course Notaries successfully completing the course are to be designated as "Certified Public Notary." Individuals who plan to become notaries should also attend, Huff said.

Record maintenance, proper charges and posting of fees, proper steps of notarial service, authority for acknowledgements, oaths, certification, identifying instruments and proper recording and identifying of signatures and the use of stamps and seals will also be covered in the seminar.

Jury deliberating charges against Vernon S&L official

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — While admitting there were abuses at Vernon Savings and Loan Association, attorneys for the former president of the thrift urged a jury not to blame Patrick G. King, who the government claims approved reimbursing officials for political contributions and payments to prostitutes.

The jury deliberated a couple of hours Thursday afternoon before retiring for the day. It resumed considering King's case this morning.

King is accused in a 37-count indictment of conspiracy and fraud during the first half of 1986 while he was first president and then acting chairman of now-defunct Vernon. He is accused of approving reimbursement for political contributions based on false expense vouchers or inflated bonus checks.

The indictment also alleges King approved the payment of prostitutes to accompany Vernon officials and Texas top thrift regulator on trips.

If convicted, King, 49, could be sentenced to up to 185 years in jail and fined up to $500,000.

Vernon was closed by regulators in November 1987 in a $1.3 billion bailout and federal officials have sought for ways to recover the money expended to rescue the institution.

King is the first Vernon official to go to trial, although others have entered guilty pleas or received immunity in exchange for their cooperation.

Owner Don D. Dixon is the target of a federal criminal investigation, but had not been indicted. He also is the lead defendant in a $540 million federal fraud lawsuit filed in 1987.

Dixon was mentioned frequently during the trial and King's attorneys attempted to lay the blame for any crime at his feet.

"You can be mad all day long that Don Dixon was doing this — I don't blame you, but you don't have to blame Pat," defense attorney Arch McColl said in closing arguments Thursday.

But prosecutor Robert E. Hauberg Jr. said, "Mr. King took the easy way out, he went along with the program. Pat King would have you believe that he is a straight arrow. Mr. King, we submit, bent the rules."

Much of the government's case rests on testimony from four former Vernon officials, including Pat L. Malone, a former Vernon executive vice president who has pleaded guilty to conspiracy but has yet to be sentenced.

During their closing arguments, defense attorneys Emmett Colvin and McColl zeroed in on the reliability of that testimony, urging jurors to give it little weight.

Citing testimony by John V. Hill, a senior vice president at Vernon, McColl said: "I think John Hill is a walking reasonable doubt."

Hill testified he frequently recruited women from a Dallas topless bar to spend time with Vernon officials and regulators.

In addition, McColl said in nine of the instances covered in the indictment King "didn't see, didn't sign, didn't approve" reimbursing Vernon officials for contributions to political candidates.

None of the politicians who received the contributions, including former Rep. Jim Wright, Sen. Jake Garn or former Republican gubernatorial candidate Thomas Loeffler, were aware of the source of the money, prosecutors say.

"Mr. King would have you believe that he saw, said, and did absolutely nothing," Hauberg said, dismissing testimony by three character witnesses saying they had not known King "during his high-flying days in Dallas."

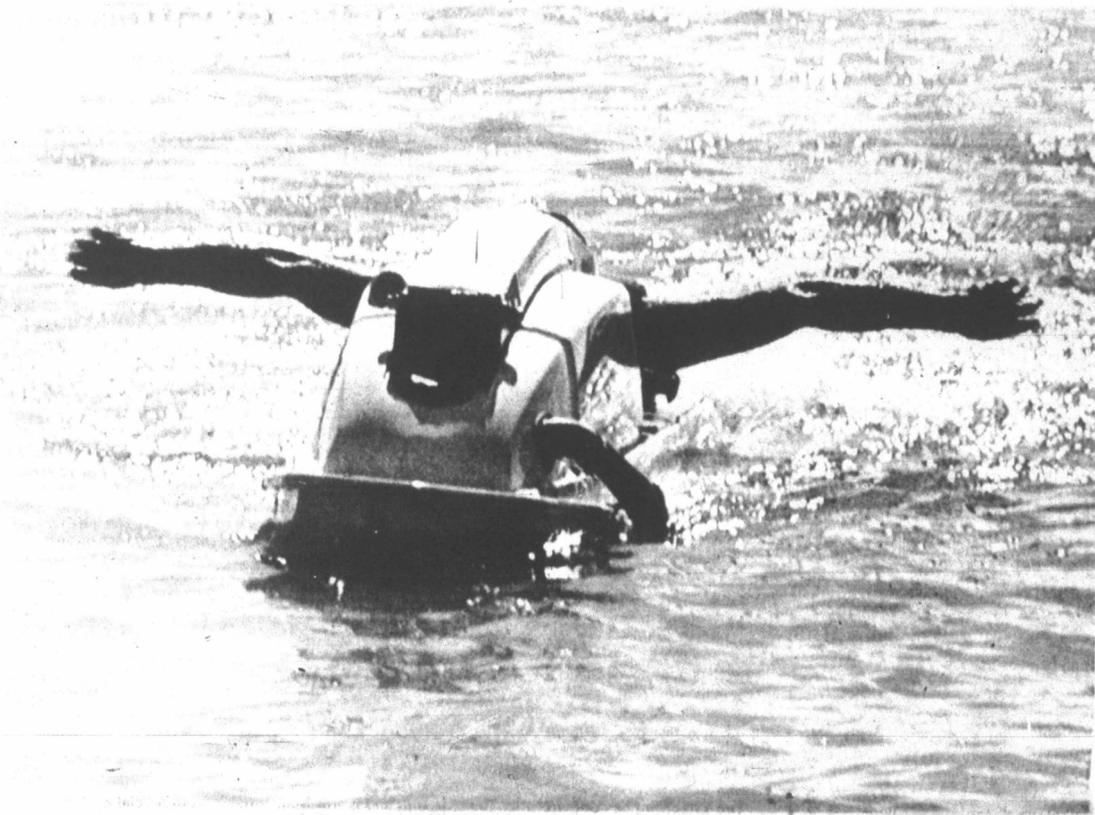

Hauberg also pointed at Dixon, but said, "Don Dixon saw the opportunity to grease the political wheels of America, and Mr. King went right along with him."

Before moving to Vernon, King was assistant commissioner of the Texas Savings and Loan Department and before that had been a state trooper.

That background, Hauberg said, meant King had to know what was going on.

"Do you think a former DPS officer, the former No. 2 state examiner, the No. 3 official at Vernon, is going to have the wool pulled over his eyes?" Hauberg said.

Leading indicators gauge rises in July

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its chief economic forecasting gauge rose in July for the first time in three months, further chasing away fears of a possible economic downturn.

The Commerce Department said its Index of Leading Economic Indicators rose a modest 0.2 percent in July after registering no gain in June and plunging by 1.3 percent in May, the biggest drop since late 1987 following the stock market crash.

The small July increase in the index was in line with expectations of many analysts, who believe growth should continue at a moderate pace for the rest of the year.

That view is a sharp reversal of the prevalent opinion just a month ago when weakness in the leading index and a variety of other government statistics had raised fears that the economy was about to topple into a recession.

But since that time, the government has basically rewritten economic history, issuing various revisions showing that everything from employment growth to consumer spending were stronger than originally believed.

"The image we had of an economy on the verge of a recession has been changed by these revisions," said Bruce Steinberg, senior economist at the New York brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch.

Economists are not forecasting that the country is on the verge of boom times, but they are now much more confident that the longest peacetime recovery in U.S. history, currently in its seventh year, should be able to continue for some time to come.

The leading index is a compilation of 11 forward-pointing business statistics designed to forecast economic performance three to nine months down the road.

In July, five of the economic statistics showed signs of increasing strength, five flashed weak signals and one was unchanged.

The biggest source of strength was a pickup in growth in the nation's money supply. The Federal Reserve, which had been restraining monetary growth in an effort to fight inflationary pressures, has now switched course and over the past two months has been loosening credit conditions.

Economists believe this change in Fed policy has already provided momentum for the economy in such key sectors as housing construction.

Other sources of strength in July were a jump in consumer confidence, a rise in stock prices and an increase in plant and equipment orders.

Austin police carry stun guns

AUSTIN (AP) — After a three-month test, it appears that Austin police will become the first in Texas to again carry stun guns, which didn't work out the first time.

Police will practice using the restraint devices on each other, and also will have to buy their own $150 stun gun, since the equipment is optional.

"They're unbelievable — I can't say enough good about them," said Officer Gene Parker, who tested a new version of the device, which is made by an Austin firm, on his beat this spring.

Police Chief Jim Everett says he plans to approve the use of an updated stun gun. The department three years ago found an earlier stun gun unreliable.

Those officers who use the guns will enlist in a 10-hour training program next week, which will include officers using stun guns on each other.

Officers who have been on the receiving end of stun guns during training session describe the pain as intense, but short-lived.

"It hurt when it was applied to my skin, but it quit hurting when it was taken away," said Senior Sgt. Robert Pulliam, who added that the shock on his leg brought him to his knees.

Complaints about earlier stun guns used in the early to mid-1980s ranged from inadequate battery power to jolts that were either too weak or too strong.

Everett said he is not aware of any other Texas cities that have renewed the use of stun guns.

Richard Abena, executive director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said he would withhold his judgment until he learns more about the new low-amperage device, which is about 6 inches long with a lithium battery at one end and two electrodes on the other.

Everett's approval of the Nova Spirit Police Special followed what he called the "very positive" test program in which officers used the device 37 times.

The device failed to subdue a subject in only one case, Pulliam said. In that case, Pulliam said, a man who was struggling with officers apparently was too numb from drugs and alcohol to be aware that he was being shocked.

Battle over imported sheepskin hides upsets judge who must resolve dispute MIDLAND (AP) — A prominent businessman's fight with the federal government over some Chinese sheep hides might be enough to make a Democrat side with a Republican.

The Democrat in this case is U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, who was appointed by former President Lyndon Johnson. The prominent businessman is Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams.

Although Bunton hasn't taken sides officially because he has not resolved the 17-month-old dispute, he has voiced considerable displeasure with the way the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has treated Williams; his wife, Modesta, and two other big-game hunters.

Thanks to an order in July by Bunton, the Williamses' sheep hides are being preserved and tanned at a San Francisco furrier. Meanwhile, the hunters and the federal government tussle over the rightful owners and whether they should be prosecuted for trying to import the skins of endangered species. Bunton is annoyed at having to intervene.

At a July hearing in Pecos, Bunton scolded Fish and Wildlife attorneys in open court and told them the dispute was "unworthy of the significant portion of the resources of the federal courts which it has engaged."

Although Bunton threatened to lock attorneys for both sides in a closed room with the decaying pelts if they didn't come to a compromise, negotiations collapsed.

The dispute began in April 1988, when the four hunters returned from China, whose government had invited them. Each hunter brought home a hide and set of horns from an Argali mountain sheep that had been shot during an excursion sanctioned and supervised by Chinese wildlife officials.

But U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service inspectors impounded the pelts and horns at the San Francisco airport, saying they were banned because the sheep are on the endangered species list. The hunters protested that the sheep were members of a subspecies that is not endangered, and their Chinese hosts have backed them up with affidavits.

"The Williamses would never intentionally shoot an endangered animal," Williams' attorney, Paul Latham, said Thursday. "That's totally against the grain of everything they're for."

That's also why the Williamses were accompanied by wildlife experts from China and the United States, including one who worked for the Fish and Wildlife Service.

That employee, Dr. Richard Mitchell, apparently didn't protest at the time the sheep were shot, probably for good reason: Chinese officials say the endangered species is native to an area 2,000 miles from where the hunting party made its kills.

The Williamses tried for 15 months to resolve the case out of court, but federal officials didn't cooperate, Latham said.

"We start trying to contact people and we don't get many answers because they're out investigating and out of the office and can't be reached," he said.

John Mendoza, one of the two Fish and Wildlife agents who impounded the hides, wrote in a recent summary that the hunters still are being investigated for possible violations of the Endangered Species Act.

But Mendoza noted in the report that the investigation "was complicated and delayed due to the presence of a Fish and Wildlife Service employee on the hunt."

The complications and delays have tested Bunton's patience. In his order allowing the hides to be tanned, the judge wrote that the Williamses "resorted to the courts only after repeated and unsuccessful attempts to contact the appropriate persons within the Department of the Interior charged with the custody of the hides."

The judge called the Fish and Wildlife Service's conduct "deplorable and certainly unbecoming of government employees whose positions charge them with custody of property which is subject to claims of private persons."

Bunton is expected to resolve the dispute, though no hearings have been scheduled.

Storm brews over Miller's biggest party

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — A storm is brewing over the "Biggest Party in History" with critics saying Miller Lite's promotion is encouraging youngsters to drink.

"After this weekend we will be no longer known as the Lone Star State. Instead, we will be known as the drunken state," Felicia Hawkins, a senior at Graham High School, said Thursday.

Ms. Hawkins is part of a coalition of nearly two dozen groups who say Miller Brewing Co. has been irresponsible in its $18 million advertising for the event.

For 16 months, Miller has promoted a party that company officials say will draw about 500,000 people in six Texas cities this Labor Day weekend.

Miller officials denied the charge, saying they have taken extra precautions to ensure no one underage at the parties drinks alcohol and no one legally of age to drink consumes too much.

But Beverly Watts Davis, coordinator for Texans' War on Drugs, said the group has tried unsuccessfully to get Miller Lite to state in its advertisements that persons under 21 years old will not be served alcoholic beverages.

"There has been no response from Miller Beer," she said, adding that Miller representatives did not show up at two meetings to discuss the proposal and did not return correspondence.

"It's just going to take one person to get in their car to put themselves at risk or anyone else on the highway at risk," Ms. Davis said.

John Shafer of Milwaukee, a spokesman for Miller, said the company did not add information about the legal drinking age in its commercials because the law is uniform across the nation. "Everyone knows that," he said.

He said the company has devised a comprehensive security plan to prevent underage drinking and overconsumption. Those with proof of being 21 or older will receive a wrist band that carries the message "Think while you drink," he said. Only those with wrist bands can purchase beer, he said.

The company's newspaper ads also carry the "Think while you drink" slogan. Shafer also said the company has an advertisement featuring the rock band, The Who, encouraging people not to drink too much.

The Who will perform concerts in Houston and Dallas, sites of two of the Miller parties. "We have not encouraged anyone to come and drink excessively," Shafer said.

But the coalition disagreed. One group, Doctors Who Ought to Care (DOC), urged people to boycott products made by Philip Morris Cos. Inc., the parent company of Miller.

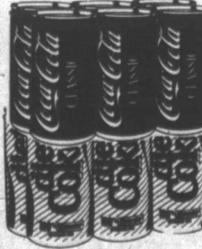

Of the "Biggest Party" advertising campaign, Jim Smith of DOC said, "No mention has been made of the many children disabled by fetal alcohol syndrome or paralyzed and killed by intoxicated drivers."

Other members of the coalition include the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers Associations; Mothers Against Drunk Drivers; Texas Association of School Boards; Texas Association of Student Councils; Texas Medical Association; Stephanie Haynes of the Governor's Task Force on Drug Abuse; and Dr. Robert Bernstein, commissioner of the Texas Department of Health.

Be firm on keeping Khmer Rouge out

Imagine if a group of Nazis insisted on playing a part in the governance of Israel, and that these Nazis were backed by a major world power. Horribly, something like that has been going on in Paris.

For negotiations on the future of Cambodia, the Khmer Rouge insist on being part of any new government, the same Khmer Rouge who murdered some 3 million Cambodians, one third of the population, during the late 1970s. Their atrocities were depicted in The Killing Fields, though the movie didn't strongly identify the Khmer Rouge as the killers, or their ideology as communist.

Fortunately, the U.S. government says it will have nothing to do with any agreement that includes the Khmer Rouge. The United States backs Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the former Cambodian leader who now heads a coalition of rebel groups fighting to oust Vietnamese occupation forces from Cambodia. The Vietnamese forces are scheduled to retreat from Cambodia by the end of September.

But there's a problem. Sihanouk insists that the Khmer Rouge, one of the rebel groups, must join any coalition government. One wonders why the U.S. continues to support Sihanouk. Whatever the reason, in Paris Secretary of State James Baker said that "the strength of our support for any Cambodian government, however, will directly and inversely depend on the extent of Khmer Rouge participation, if any, in that government."

Baker should hold firm. And he should realize something else. The Khmer Rouge are primarily backed by the Communist Chinese in Beijing. Since the Bush administration has muzzled its criticism of the June 4 repression of China's democracy movement, the U.S. appears to Beijing as what used to be called "a paper tiger."

Why should Beijing care what President Bush and Baker want done with the Khmer Rouge, when these men so tenderly avoid upbraiding Beijing over the massacre in Tiananmen Square?

The United States also faces difficult discussions with two other participants in the deadlocked Paris talks, the Soviet Union and our ally Britain. The Soviets also don't like the Khmer Rouge, but only because the Soviets back Vietnam. The U.S. should make it clear to the Soviets that the Vietnamese retreat from Cambodia must proceed on schedule.

The British also oppose giving the Khmer Rouge any role. But they continue their attempts to force Vietnamese exiles — a new wave of "boat people" — back to Vietnam. If they succeed in this, the British would become accomplices to the torture, imprisonment and murder of these people upon their return to Vietnam.

The British must change their stance because, should no agreement be reached in Paris, or should the Khmer Rouge again seize control, there might be yet another wave of "boat people" — from Cambodia.

She can't support their sin

Word comes from California that Mrs. Evelyn Smith has lost the first round in her legal fight against unmarried tenants, but this battle is far from over. Eventually the constitutional question will have to be faced by an appellate court, and who knows? She may yet prevail.

The case began in March 1987, when Mrs. Smith advertised a vacancy in a one-bedroom rental unit she owns at 677 Eastwood Ave. in Chico, Calif. Three days later, Kenneth C. Phillips and Gail Randall responded. The young couple liked the apartment, and the rent was right. Mrs. Smith told them she would not rent the unit to an unmarried couple, and they said, no problem, they were married. On April 7 they executed a lease. The young woman signed "Gail Phillips."

But it wasn't so. It quickly transpired that the new tenants were not married. In the quaint, old-fashioned phrase, they were living in sin. That is how Mrs. Smith perceived the relationship. She has been a member for 25 years of the Sidwell Presbyterian Church in Chico, and her religious convictions are deeply held. Mrs. Smith canceled the lease and returned the couple's deposit. They filed a complaint with the California Fair Employment and Housing Commission. After two years of conferences and hearings, the commission on Aug. 17 upheld their complaint.

The case pits rights against rights. California's fair housing law prohibits discrimination not only on the usual grounds of race, religion and nationality, but also on the grounds of "marital status." California case law supports the proposition that discrimination against an unmarried couple, for that reason alone, is unlawful. If the issue is to be decided on statutory grounds alone, the couple had a right to move in.

But Mrs. Smith contends that she also has rights, and her rights are older and carry better credentials than the rights of the plaintiffs. She relies upon her right to the free exercise of religion, guaranteed to her under the U.S. Constitution (and under the constitution of California as well).

In its decision of Aug. 17, the California commission summarized her convictions: "Respondent is a Christian ... She believes that sex outside of marriage is sinful, and that it is a sin for her to rent her units to people who will engage in non-marital sex on her property. Respondent believes that God will judge her if she permits people to engage in sex outside of marriage in her rental units, and that if she does so, she will be prevented from meeting her deceased husband in the hereafter."

This would not suffice. The commission felt that "we lack the authority to weigh these competing interests."

"We must decline, reluctantly, to decide this issue here. We do not doubt the depth and sincerity of respondent's religious convictions, and we are sensitive to the burden that respondent will bear for adherence to these convictions if the act is enforced against her.

"We also are sensitive to complainants' constitutional rights to privacy, and to the need for a liberal interpretation and for uniform and effective enforcement of the act's prohibition of marital status discrimination in housing."

The commission awarded Phillips and Randall $454 in out-of-pocket expense in searching for another apartment. Mrs. Smith must pay Randall $300 and Phillips $200 in compensatory damages for emotional injury. She must also post permanent notices in all her rental units advising prospective tenants that it is illegal for a property owner (1) to deny leases because of marital status, (2) to ask about marital status, or (3) to make any statement indicating that the owner prefers to rent to married couples only.

Mrs. Smith is being assisted in her defense by Concerned Women of America, whose attorneys will begin the tedious process of appeal through state courts to the U.S. Supreme Court. It may be several years before the cases runs its course.

My own sympathies, for the record, are entirely with Mrs. Smith. We are not dealing here with ownership of a large apartment building by some faceless corporation. The units in question were acquired by Mrs. Smith and her late husband as wholly personal investments for their retirement years. She looks after them herself. They are singularly hers. She wants to keep them free from biblical sin. In a free country, that ought to be her First Amendment right.

Gorbachev smiles cautiously

It's been so refreshing to see a Soviet leader smile that Americans do not want to doubt Mikhail Gorbachev's sincerity.

In our own national self-interest, however, we need to recognize that behind that smile is a Soviet national debt of $312 billion, U.S. At the national exchange rate that amounts to $500 billion, U.S.

While our own national debt is worrisome enough, it is as nothing compared with the Soviet debt. Ours amounts to 3 to 4 percent of our nation's GNP. And their debt amounts to 13.8 percent of their GNP. And their debt is growing faster than ours.

Soviet stores are bare of merchandise. Wages are rising and still coal miners are striking. And Moscow has no "Uncle Sam" standing by to supply transfusions.

So if Gorbachev is sounding less belligerent than his predecessors — he has no choice!

Facing what could become a Chinese-style political upheaval, the Soviet Union — desperately needing money for soap and meat — must spend less on weapons of war.

As part of his calculated gambel, the head red must shelve exorbitantly costly military technology — missiles and such. Not necessarily because he is, by nature or tradition, a peacemaker — but because he cannot afford to compete with us — the U.S. — in that high-tech arena.

It is significant that while Gorbachev preaches "more democracy" for his countrymen, he continues to consolidate more power in his own hands.

Under the guise of the Soviet government, Gorbachev — rather than the Communist Party — is running the country, delegating authority to none but his own disciples.

What's left of the Soviet "old guard" complains about "anarchy," "liberalism," "runaway democracy" — and they await most eagerly the day when Gorbachev stumbles and they can depose the "adventurer" and reassert party power.

Gorbachev races against time. He must revitalize moribund industry, restock grocery shelves, restore order among restive workers.

He cannot afford to spend either time or money on externals.

Because demonstrably communism doesn't work, he is entirely willing to adopt capitalist incentives and other workable Western ideas.

Ironically, our own self-interest involves a Hobson's choice. If Gorbachev fails, he'll be thrown out and the more belligerent Old Guard may again become an aggressive military menace.

If he succeeds in resolving the Soviet Union's desperate economic crisis, then he may again become an aggressive military menace. Not to worry. We will still have weapons adequate to enforce peace. Unless, of course, we allow shortsighted Pollyannas to talk us out of them.

Mass transit didn't die; it was killed

By ROBERT WALTERS

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — With traffic congealing on its streets and freeways, Los Angeles is building a mass transit system designed to belatedly relieve everything from smog in the air to congestion on the ground.

But construction on the initial 4.4-mile downtown segment of the Metro Rail project is already 18 months behind schedule, and its cost is likely to exceed the very substantial original estimate of $1.25 billion.

Moreover, most of the transportation-related grief currently being experienced by the city would be unnecessary if a corporate cabal led by General Motors had not cynically destroyed the elaborate, 1,200-mile mass transit system that served the entire metropolitan area earlier in the century.

Indeed, members of that criminal conspiracy brazenly dismantled streetcar and trolley lines in dozens of locations throughout the country — from the cities of St. Louis, Baltimore and Salt Lake City to the smaller communities of Butte, Mont.; Terre Haute, Ind.; and Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

By far the most extensive and ambitious of the early mass transit systems was Los Angeles' "red car" system, built in the first years of the 20th century. Named for the color of its trolleys, the electric railway operated 2,700 trains daily along a sprawling network of tracks that stretched from Santa Monica on the west, through downtown Los Angeles, into the San Gabriel Valley and as far east as San Bernardino. It ran as far north as the San Fernando Valley and as far south as Long Beach and Newport Beach.

Built without public funds, it was the comprehensive urban mass transit system that city planners can only dream about today. Indeed, it would cost well over $100 billion to duplicate under current conditions.

In the years following World War I, however, the trolleys were unable to compete with the allure of new vehicles called automobiles, and ridership on the red car system began to decline.

To accelerate that trend and to promote the sale of its cars and buses,

GM and its partners bought transit systems in cities throughout the country at depressed prices, then brazenly dismantled them. Journalist Jonathan Kwitney, writing in Harper's magazine some years ago, described what occurred:

"In many places, mass transit didn't just die — it was murdered ... (by those who) schemed from the mid-1930s through the 1940s. Electrified-rail mass transit systems, which carried millions of riders, were bought and junked. Tracks were literally torn out of the ground, sometimes overnight. Overhead power lines were dismantled, and valuable off-street rights-of-way were sold."

Between the mid '30s and late '40s, this happened in Saginaw, Jackson and Kalamazoo, Mich.; in Portsmouth, Canton and Springfield, Ohio; in Montgomery and Mobile, Ala.; in El Paso and Port Arthur, Texas; in Galesburg and Joliet, Ill.; in Tulsa, Okla. and Tampa, Fla.; in Portland, Ore., and Spokane, Wash.

In California, city transit systems were systematically obliterated in Fresno, Oakland, Stockton, San Jose, Sacramento and elsewhere — but by far the biggest prize was the Los Angeles network.

After all of the damage was done, the corporations were convicted of violating the Sherman antitrust law following an unpublicized 1949 criminal trial in U.S. District Court in Chicago. Among those found guilty in addition to GM were Firestone Tire & Rubber, which provided the tires for the cars and buses; Phillips Petroleum and Standard Oil of California, which supplied the oil and gasoline; Mack Manufacturing, which made both buses and trucks; and seven of their executives.

The companies were fined $5,000 apiece, while the individuals were sentenced to pay penalties of exactly $1 each.

Finally, the buses they substituted for the trolley lines hardly resolved this city's transportation problems. "The buses are the victims of the same congestion that faces the automobile," says an official of the Southern California Rapid Transit District.

Judge orders psychiatric evaluation for depressed Bakker

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker spent his first night in prison after a federal judge ordered the fallen TV evangelist held for psychiatric evaluation.

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter suspended Bakker's fraud and conspiracy trial in its fourth day Thursday after being told by Bakker's attorneys that their client was covering in a fetal position with his head under a couch.

With the jury out of the courtroom, Potter heard Dr. Basil Jackson, a Milwaukee psychiatrist who has been treating Bakker for nine months, say the PTL ministry founder was depressed and hallucinating, seeing people as frightening animals out to attack him.

"If Mr. Bakker is handled gently and carefully he may be able to proceed with this trial," defense attorney George T. Davis said.

The defense suggested Bakker, 49, be put in a private psychiatric institution, but Potter ordered Bakker to the Federal Correctional Institute in Butner, N.C., for up to 60 days for evaluation. Marshals transported Bakker in handcuffs and leg shackles.

The operations officer on duty in Butner early today, Lt. R. Ellis, would say only that Bakker was "doing fine."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jerry Miller argued before the judge that Jackson was a "hired gun."

"It's hard to interpret it any other way other than Mr. Davis has once again — this time he didn't summon his client up to pray — this time he summons a psychiatrist up to say that his client can't go forward with the defense, and it's awfully suspect," Miller said.

Jackson told the judge that Bakker began hallucinating Wednesday after a former PTL executive, Steve Nelson, collapsed on the stand while testifying for the prosecution. At the prompting of an attorney, Bakker knelt by Nelson's side and prayed. Nelson recovered later from what hospital officials said was dehydration from flu.

The jury was not told Thursday about his condition or about Bakker's commitment.

"Something unexpected has come up," Potter told jurors, saying the trial would be delayed, possibly until Wednesday.

But the judge added: "I'm really not sure at this time how long."

There was no call for a mistrial in court Thursday, and prosecution and defense lawyers are under court order not to discuss the case outside court.

Bakker and other PTL executives are accused of diverting for their own use more than $4 million raised from followers. If convicted on all 24 counts, Bakker could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined $5 million.

Jackson said Bakker's condition worsened between Wednesday and Thursday, even after he was given Xanax, an anti-depressant sedative.

"To put it in lay language, the man is stressed out," Jackson said.

Bakker appeared distraught when he was led from his attorney's office by U.S. marshals to the courthouse for processing of the commitment order.

"Please don't do this to me," a sobbing, disheveled Bakker said. He curled up in a fetal position in the back seat.

Sci-fi fans gather in Boston

By KEVIN GALVIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Sex on other planets, fearless vampire killers, gonzo fantasy and questions such as "Are There Any Really New Monsters?" are among the topics being kicked around at the 47th World Science Fiction Convention.

More than 5,000 writers, scientists and fans assembled Thursday for a long weekend of late night "filking" and confabs on the future of sci-fi, and the word is that cyberpunk is out.

Enthusiasts from science fiction's fandom began flocking to the Hynes Convention Center clad in Star Trek uniform tops, propellor-beanies and T-shirts festooned with buttons.

"At its best, fandom is far less discriminatory against people who are different," Andi Schecter, a prominent Boston fan said during a panel discussion on fandom. "At its worst, we're a bunch of nerds."

Heated, long-running debates are characteristic of these conventions, whether they're over the proper rotation of a space station around a manufactured sun in a novel from the '50s or over the general worth of filkers, singers who rewrite folk songs with space-age lyrics.

This year, the filkers are staying at a different hotel.

"At times, fandom has all the dynamics of a fourth-grade playground," Schecter said.

The conference also features the presentation of the coveted Hugo awards for outstanding science fiction writing, as well as a brunch with Isaac Asimov, appearances by authors Andre Norton and Frederik Pohl and publishers Ian and Betty Ballantine, founders of Bantam Books and Ballantine Books.

While fans come to meet old friends and gawk at rare sci-fi books and paraphernalia such as space-age wigs and tiny, futuristic acrylic cities, those active in the industry come to make new connections and find out what next year's hot topics will be.

Chuq Von Rospach, a Hugo nominee who publishes Other Realms magazine, said he sees writers tending toward bringing fantastic events into the real world, rather than setting off for worlds of fantasy.

Von Rospach and others also said that cyberpunk — the controversial sub-genre that took hackers and the technologies of the information age into the future, with protagonists physically entering computer systems through their personal computers — was waning in support because it was overused.

Organizers are looking beyond fantasy. They've invited Marvin Minsky of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Nobel laureates Sheldon Glashow and Rosalyn Yalow to deliver papers on such topics as radiation and society and artificial intelligence.

Accurate scientific information is important to hard sci-fi writers because "coming across glaring scientific errors turns people off," said Bart Kemper, an army specialist who took vacation time to come to the convention.

The Hugo awards are to be presented Saturday night for the best novel, novella, short story, non-fiction book and other categories.

Racial attack protest leads to violent clash

NEW YORK (AP) — A march protesting racism and the slaying of a black youth produced a violent clash at the Brooklyn Bridge on the same day an 18-year-old suspect surrendered and was charged with murder.

Police estimated Thursday's protest drew 7,500 people — by far the largest demonstration since Yusuf Hawkins, 16, was killed during a racial attack in Brooklyn on Aug. 23.

"This was an absolute success!" proclaimed Sonny Carson, a protest leader. "This will make the city wake up. This will let the city know that there are young black people who will not take this any more."

The march was orderly until those at the front reached barricades police erected to keep demonstrators off the bridge's roadways during the evening rush hour. Demonstrators threw bottles and bricks and police responded with nightsticks as marchers shouted, "Take the bridge, take the bridge!"

Twenty-three police officers were injured, none seriously, police said. An unknown number of others were injured.

Four people were arrested for disorderly conduct and harassment; two also were charged with assault.

Billed as a "Day of Outrage and Mourning," the protest came a day after Hawkins' funeral, and just hours after Joseph Fama, 18, was brought back to Brooklyn under tight security. He had surrendered earlier to police in Oneonta, some 150 miles north of New York City.

Chief of Detectives Joseph Colangelo said it was "with a great deal of satisfaction" that he announced late Thursday that Fama, the subject of an eight-day manhunt, had been charged with murder.

Other charges against Fama included two counts of criminal possession of a weapon, first-degree assault, first-degree riot, aggravated harassment, civil rights violation and menacing in connection with Hawkins' death last week.

Hawkins was shot twice in the chest after he and three black friends, answering a used-car ad in the mostly white Bensonhurst section, encountered a mob of up to 30 whites.

Study discovers no real link between cancer, depression

By JAMES WEBB
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Feeling down doesn't increase a person's risk of cancer, says a study that investigated the suggested link between mood and disease.

The study shows "a lot of speculation about the emotional component in (cancer) is just speculation," said Morton Bard, vice president for services and rehabilitation for the American Cancer Society.

The possibility of a connection between outlook and disease has been "periodically put forward since the beginning of history," Bard said.

He said the study's message is: "Hold on there. There is no answer yet." The study, by three researchers at the National Institute on Aging, challenges the theory that depression can increase vulnerability to cancer, but doesn't end the debate, said Alan B. Zonderman, one of the researchers and a psychologist and senior staff fellow at the institute.

"I think for the time being at least, the weight of the evidence is certainly that there's no risk of cancer from depression," said Zonderman, co-author of a report on the study in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study is a 10-year follow-up on 6,403 people who took part in a 1971-75 survey by the National Center for Health Statistics, which gathered extensive data on psychology and medical risk.

The researchers updated the subjects' medical history.

Using the results of two psychological tests conducted during the earlier survey, they identified 1,002 as "down most of the time," Zonderman said.

Of those subjects, 110, or 11 percent, had been diagnosed with cancer or had died from it since the original study.

Of the 5,401 subjects who were considered not depressed, 527, or 10 percent, had been diagnosed as having cancer or had died of it.

The 1 percentage point difference between the cancer rate for the two groups is statistically insignificant, the researchers said.

"We found that depressive systems didn't predict who was going to get cancer or who was going to die from cancer 10 years later," Zonderman said.

There was no difference in results when researchers adjusted the study to allow for other factors that could relate to cancer, including sex, age, marital status, smoking habits, family history of cancer, hypertension and cholesterol level.

Unemployment rate holds steady at 5.2%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate remained at 5.2 percent in August as the resurgent economy created more than 200,000 jobs, the government reported today.

The Labor Department's official figure for non-farm payroll expansion last month was 110,000 jobs. But strikes reduced the job totals by about 108,000 — meaning that without the walkouts the new-job total would have been some 218,000.

The government also revised its July job growth figure upward to 184,000 from 169,000, a sign the economy continues to expand at a pace that will keep it out of recession in the short term.

The unemployment report is the first comprehensive look at economic performance in August, and the numbers bolster recent predictions that the record-long expansion seems in no danger of ending.

Indeed, the jobless data come on the heels of a revised report on the gross national product that said the economy grew at an annual rate of 2.7 percent in the second quarter of 1989, up from the 1.7 percent rate in a preliminary report.

The government said the number of Americans who were looking for work but could not find jobs fell by a modest 76,000 last month to 6.42 million. More than 117.5 million Americans had jobs, an increase of 138,000 from July.

The new job growth was predominantly in the service-producing sector, which added nearly 70,000 jobs. That number would have been higher in a normal month because the telephone workers fall into the service portion of the economy.

A SYMBOL OF SAFETY

When the ship is in danger, we can depend on the life-boats to take us over the seas to safety. It is comforting to glance at the life-boat when the seas are rough.

Our Armed Services are a symbol of safety when our country is in trouble, when war threatens to raise its ugly head. In the past, when war has come, our servicemen have not hesitated to give their lives to protect and defend us.

There is a special Day each year when we remember and honor our servicemen who have died in the defense of our blessed country. Let us not forget, as individuals, to honor these dead and give thanks to God for those who protect us even now. Remember them as you attend church this week.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

John Kuspel and family Two churches to hear man testify of Lord

John Kuspel, who ministers at the Faith Covenant Church in Denver, Colo., will be sharing his testimony at two Pampa churches Sunday.

He will be testifying of the Lord first in the 10:45 a.m. service Sunday at The Carpenter's House, 938 E. Frederic. In the evening, he will be speaking at the First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, for the 7 p.m. service.

Kuspel was born and raised in New York City. Leaving home in his teen years, he moved to Denver. At an early age, he found himself bound by alcohol and for many years lived a wasted and hopeless life.

In this condition, he began searching for help and attended a meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous in Denver. It was during these meetings that he was invited to attend a Bible study by some of the men and later came to know Jesus Christ as a personal Savior and Lord.

Accompanying Kuspel as he shares the Word of God in Pampa will be his wife, Fabie, and their two children, Amber and Shang.

The congregations of The Carpenter's House and First Pentecostal Holiness Church extend a "warm welcome to all" to attend the Sunday services.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: "Later the others also came. 'Sir! Sir!' they said, 'Open the door for us!'"

"But he replied, 'I tell you the truth, I don't know you.'" (Matthew 25:11-12 NIV)

My husband and I went to south Arkansas recently for his high school thirty-year reunion. He graduated in a class of sixty, and most of those sixty grew from infancy to young adults together.

As always happen, the responsibilities of adult life have scattered them and many had not seen each other since graduation. Time has taken its toll, and identification wasn't easy even for those who had been very close as kids. To make it easier, name tags were provided with pictures of each as he or she looked in high school.

Unknown to all but a couple of people, one joker brought a guest and decided to see if the guest could pass himself off as one of the Class of '59. With a name tag picked at random from the list of people who would not be in attendance, the stranger set out to see how many would catch him in his impersonation.

The day started early with the usual squeals and laughter of recognition and much hugging and back-slapping. The day wore into the afternoon as long stories of "remember when?" were endlessly exchanged.

Not one person caught on to the masquerade! In fact, after the joke had been shared with everyone, a few still wondered just what the joke was - was he really Harold Scott or not?

Are you pretending to be a Christian? Do you play your part at church so well that people consider you an exemplary Christian? Do you enjoy the game and the recognition you receive as a participant? Do you family and friends look forward to a reunion with you in heaven someday?

You haven't got Jesus fooled for a minute! He knows your heart and can distinguish you from his own.

Don't let pride or fear of humiliation block you from eternal life with Christ Jesus. Your Christian friends and family won't deride you for your former masquerade. They will witness your salvation and rejoice in the recognition of your redeemed soul!

(If you are seeking salvation, read John 3 in the New Testament. If you are in need of spiritual counseling, contact a clergyman of your choice.)

Church seeks to bring a 'Golden Age'

By BRENDA DICKERSON
The Montgomery County Courier

MONTGOMERY (AP) — The Church of the White Eagle Lodge, located west of Montgomery, combines a dedication to seeking a "Golden Age" when Jesus' teachings will be lived on earth, and a ministry to injured birds and animals.

The church, relatively new to Texas, had its origins more than 50 years ago in England as an outgrowth of messages Grace Cooke said she received through meditative channeling from White Eagle, a spirit guide who believers says lived many lives, at least one of which was as a western Indian.

Jean LeFevre, the church's Montgomery minister, became active with the group in her native England. She says that in the beginning, "just a few people would get together to really help with the work of bringing in the Golden Age."

She explains the "Golden Age" the church believes in as "when the teachings of Jesus will actually be lived (on earth) and will be a way of life for people."

"A lot of people are saying it's the end of the world, but it's really the end of an age," she adds.

She says the basic teachings of her church are grounded in love with an "emphasis on the 'new commandment' (when Jesus commanded his disciples to 'love one another')."

She adds that the teachings of her church can be summed up in the greeting of St. Francis of Assisi:

"May the Lord give you peace. If a man proclaims peace by his words, then he must carry an even greater peace in his heart. Let no man be moved to anger by you, or scandalized but rather through your gentleness, lead all men to peace, good-will and brotherly love. For our calling is to heal the sick, to tend the maimed and to bring home those who have lost their way. For many, who today would seem to be children of the devil, will yet become the disciples of Christ.

"We combine the beauty of the teachings of Jesus, but we don't dismiss the other great teachings. So we acknowledge all religions and seek within them the wisdom of Christ," she said.

"Jesus said, 'Love one another,' not 'but only if they go to your church,'" she said.

Mrs. LeFevre grew up in the Anglican Church, and became active in the Church of the White Eagle Lodge in 1960 as an outgrowth of her world travels and living both in India and East Africa.

"I traveled extensively and I met such good people who weren't Christians. I began to look more deeply. I realized I wouldn't condemn people to eternal fire and damnation, and whatever I feel (in terms of mercy and compassion) is only a tiny fraction of what Jesus feels."

"I don't believe a God of love would condemn anyone to eternal hell and damnation. I do believe in hell, but I believe man creates his own hell."

Many members believe in astrology and reincarnation, however the church does not hold seances or read cards for enlightenment. Mrs. LeFevre says "The Magi were, in fact, astrologers. That's how they knew to find the star. This is not against Christian beliefs."

"Some of our beliefs are not those of the more orthodox churches," she said. "We are not at all a cult. We are very committed to ideals of the family."

Mrs. LeFevre says she and her husband celebrate their 42 anniversary this month, and have 11 grandchildren.

The Church of the White Eagle Lodge and St. John's Retreat Center, has occupied 76 acres west of Montgomery for about two years. Licensed by the state of Texas as a place to bring sick and injured birds, the church and its members feed and nurture them as part of their ministry. Eventually, all the birds who are able to learn (or relearn) to live in the wild are released.

Stray dogs, too, have a way of finding and feeling at home on the 76 acres.

Active church members number "about 30" and Mrs. LeFevre says an equal number come from "time to time."

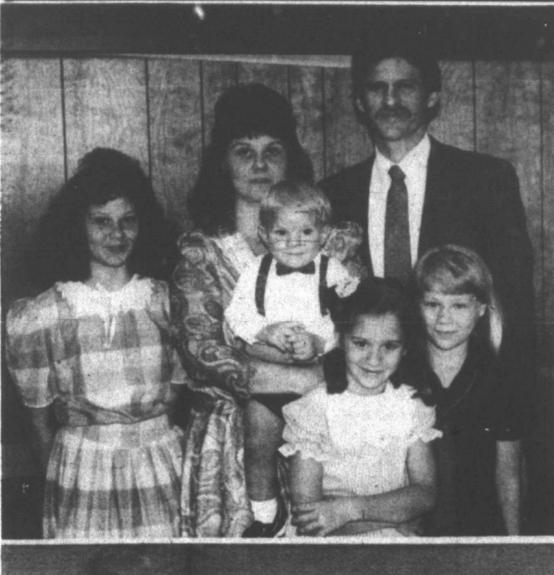

Because of their strong beliefs of the sanctity of life, all White Eagle ministers and most members are vegetarians.

Mrs. LeFevre says this Montgomery church is the only White Eagle Lodge in the United States that has a specific structure (presently three buildings, with plans for more), there are 10 groups throughout the United States that meet regularly, usually in a room in a member's house.

The Church of the White Eagle Lodge gets its name both from White Eagle, the spiritual guide of the late Grace Cooke, and from the eagle used as a symbol in early Christian art to represent St. John the Divine.

The retreat center, currently a mobile home with four bedrooms used for church members' retreats, is named for St. John.

Worship services are held each Sunday morning except during the month of August, at 11 a.m.

First Church of Nazarene welcomes its new pastor

Rev. Jerry Wilson officially assumed the pastorate of the First Church of the Nazarene, 500 N. West, on Sunday, Aug. 6.

For support in this ministry to First Church and the community, Rev. Wilson's wife, Judi, and their three daughters and one son will contribute their efforts in helping to serve the community.

Their three daughters will attend Pampa city schools, where they are already enrolled.

Rev. Wilson comes to Pampa from Grand Prairie, where he served as associate minister. In that area of service, he was active in community service and the teen department. He served on the Dallas District of the Nazarene Youth International Committee and was zone president and athletic and camp director.

He attended Southern Nazarene University at Bethany, Okla., and the Dallas District Extension of the Nazarene Bible College of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Rev. Wilson has had ten years of extensive service to the church. His wife Judi operated Mother's Day Out and served as president of the local Parents-Teachers Association as well as serving as the Children's Ministries director at the local church.

Wilson said he is anxious to meet the local community officials and the people of Pampa to lend his help in making the city "a wonderful place to live."

He extends a special invitation to the people of Pampa to attend worship services at the First Church of the Nazarene or "just drop by to get acquainted."

St. Mark's to have breakfast

The brothers of St. Mark CME Church, 406 Elm, are sponsoring their first of the month breakfast Saturday morning.

Breakfast will be served beginning at 7 a.m., including pancakes with bacon or sausage, eggs, coffee and orange juice.

Rev. H.R. Johnson, pastor, said the public is invited.

Donations are accepted, with proceeds to be used for various church projects.

"Please come and dine with us," Pastor Johnson said.

Whisenant warns: The world will end today

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — He's at it again, trumpeting the beginning of the end, "the rapture." Edgar Whisenant misdated it before, incorrectly exciting a lot of people. But now he's touting a new deadline — today. "Everything points to it," says the retired NASA rocket engineer. "All the evidence has piled up."

This time, however, warning criticisms were being sounded against buying his revised end-time scenario, although there were indications of another Bible Belt surge of attention to it.

Heavy circulation of Whisenant's new, 96-page book, The Final Shout: Rapture Report — 1989, was reported across the South, in many cases in free mailings by the Nashville, Tenn., publisher, World Bible Society.

"The time is short," says Whisenant. "I'm telling people the end is near and to get their children and everyone they care about under the blood of Jesus."

The Rev. Bill Gordon of Atlanta, associate director of the Southern Baptist interfaith witness department, issued a paper urging people not to be deceived by Whisenant's "rapture" predictions.

"Whisenant builds his predictions upon misinterpretation, misapplication and conjecture," Gordon says. "He constantly takes Scriptural passages out of context and gives them meanings which the biblical writers would find strange."

Gordon says Whisenant's book reads more like an "Indiana Jones" movie than good theology.

Whisenant, 56, of Little Rock, Ark., said in a telephone interview, "I don't care what they call me, or what they say about me as long as they've heard what I'm telling them."

"Like Ripley, they can believe it or not. They don't have to be surprised when it happens unless they choose to be."

"If I didn't tell them, then their blood would be on my hands. God would hold me accountable. No matter what they say, I'll say what I think even if it kills me when I believe it's the truth and it's important."

"I'm giving it my best shot. Win, lose or draw, I'm home free with God."

Whisenant, formerly a Kennedy Space Center electrical engineer involved in the early rocket launches and moon-landing program, retired in 1968. He said he has concentrated since then on analyzing biblical prophecy.

"It's an obsession," he said. "But it's not an ego trip. It's a fear trip, the fear of God."

He first gained public notice with his small book, 88 Reasons Why the Rapture Will Be in 1988, with a reported 4.5 million copies sold or given away.

Whisenant said he was mistaken in setting the date as September 1988, chiefly because his mathematical calculations were off by one year due to a quirk in the modern Gregorian calendar.

Comments Gordon: "The amazing thing is that so many Christians took him seriously." Citing reports indicating another huge distribution of the revised prognostications, Gordon says:

"The Lord Jesus will come again when the Father chooses and not according to Mr. Whisenant's timetable."

At the "rapture," Whisenant said, 40 million born-again Christians will undergo an instantaneous chemical body change, their new bodies able to appear and disappear and pass through walls.

He said they'll remain on Earth up to nine days before joining Christ in heaven's third level, after which there will be seven years of earthly tribulation, including three nuclear wars before a final Armageddon.

At that point, he said, Jesus will descend with his angels, victorious in the final war, and beginning a 1,000-year reign of peace and prosperity before the Last Judgment.

James Worden drives his solar-electric commuter car throughout the streets of Cambridge, Mass. Worden designed the 350-pound car he's used for four years.

He commutes by solar-powered car

By SONNI EFRON
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Skeptics say solar-powered cars still aren't feasible. But James Worden commutes to work every day in a solar car he built himself.

The car is a 350-pound, silver three-wheeler covered with solar panels that suggests a cross between a golf cart and a Honda Civic. It holds two people, can reach 35 mph, and for four years has taken him on his regular 15-mile commute.

Worden keeps it parked in a sunny spot outside his lab at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. When he drives it at night, or takes it more than about 50 miles, he plugs it into an ordinary electric outlet to recharge its nickel-cadmium battery.

Worden easily kept up with traffic during a recent spin through crowded Cambridge, where the most significant trouble the car encountered was giant potholes.

One advantage was its silence. "Has it stalled?" a passenger inquired as the car sat noiselessly waiting for a green light.

"No," Worden replied, "it's recharging."

In a month or two, the 22-year-old entrepreneur expects to produce a four-wheel prototype that will look more like a more traditional automobile.

"We hope to be making a car a day in two years," said Worden, who was a high school student when he built his first solar car and had yet to graduate from MIT when he founded his company, Solelectron Corp.

Worden said his next generation solar-electric commuter car will weigh 800 to 1,000 pounds, accommodate two people plus 300 pounds of cargo and reach 45 mph. It also will be able to go for 40 miles at night and 60 miles in full sunlight before recharging.

"It's a city car," Worden said. "The idea is, it'll be sprightly and clean and easy. There's no gas and no fuel charge and no oil changes. You'll never have to get a brake job. ... There won't be a muffler either. ... The only service you'll need, except the tires, is watering the battery every year or so."

The car should sell for about $10,000, Worden said. Extra solar panels, which could be left on a roof for recharging, would cost another $500 to $1,000.

Solelectron also is working on a $20,000 racing car model to go faster and farther.

His four-wheel commuter car has limitations. In full sunlight, it will go only 20 mph before drawing on its high-tech lead battery. Parked a full day in the sun, it will soak up only enough light to run 40 miles. Recharging the battery will take up to five hours.

Still, Worden and other entrepreneurs of solar energy say that smog, ozone depletion and global warming make electric cars more attractive, even in places where frequently cloudy skies obscure the sunlight.

Solar-electric cars are on the market in Europe. For instance, a Swiss compact sells for about $20,600.

Solar technology has advanced enormously in recent years, due in part to lessons learned from long-distance solar car races.

Many observers still believe that barring soaring gasoline prices or regulatory incentives offered by states trying to reduce air pollution, widespread use of solar cars is a long way off.

"I would agree with Worden that he has a vehicle that can easily encompass the needs of the average commuter, but whether the commuter will buy it is another question," said Edward A. Campbell, publisher of Alternate Energy Transportation, a monthly newsletter based in New York.

Cardinal's remarks attract criticism for anti-Semitism

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Outrage continues over remarks by Cardinal Jozef Glemp on Catholic-Jewish relations, with one critic describing his comments as encouraging anti-Semitism.

Glemp told pilgrims at Jasna Gora Monastery at Czestochowa Saturday that Polish anti-Semitism would disappear if Jews abandon "anti-Polonism," or anti-Polish sentiments.

He asked Jews to understand that it offended Poles' religious sensibilities and feelings of sovereignty to insist on removal of a Carmelite convent set up on the edge of the former Nazi death camp at Auschwitz.

"Dear Jews, do not talk to us from the position of a nation elevated over all others and do not put to us conditions that are impossible to meet," Glemp said.

But he intensified charges of anti-Semitism by using language that invoked the image of Jews spreading communism and by saying that Jews collaborated with Nazis during World War II, that Jews as businessmen neglected or detested Poles and that Jews have easy access to mass media.

Cardinal Albert DeCourtray, archbishop of Lyon in France, said it was unlikely that Glemp's words were meant the way they were received.

He said the "primate and bishops of Poland cannot be accused of an anti-Semitism, which they denounce."

But Polish-Catholic journalist Krzysztof Sliwinski said: "The expressions used by the primate, even contrary to his intentions, pose a danger of deeply wounding the feelings of many of those who are descendants and brothers of the holocaust victims."

The rare published criticism appeared in the Polish opposition's Gazeta Wyborcza newspaper.

The response elsewhere was harsher.

Referring to Glemp's comment about easy Jewish access to mass media, the International League against Racism and Anti-Semitism said in Paris that he had "made use of arguments used against Jews by the Nazis yesterday and by the extreme right in France today."

Yossi Sarid, a legislator from the left-wing Citizens Rights Movement in Israel, said in Jerusalem, "Anti-Semitism has a long history in Poland and I think it is ridiculous to talk about 'anti-Polonism.'"

The Representative Council of Jewish Institutions of France issued a statement calling Glemp's comments "malicious and out of place."

John Cardinal O'Connor, the archbishop of New York, said he was "shocked" by Glemp's "harmful" remarks.

In a news conference, O'Connor also called on Polish church officials to honor their commitment to move the Carmelite convent at Auschwitz.

The convent site has been criticized as offensive because an estimated 2.5 million of the 4 million victims of Auschwitz-Birkenau were executed simply for being Jewish.

Relations between the Catholic Church in Poland and Jewish groups have been strained since Aug. 10 when Cardinal Franciszek Macharski of Krakow, whose diocese includes the camp, announced the church was suspending a 1987 agreement to move the convent. He said it could not fulfill the agreement in an atmosphere of "aggressive demands."

Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel was quoted in Wednesday's New York Times as saying Glemp's language "encourages and justifies anti-Semitism."

The proposal to remove the convent, founded in 1984 just outside the Auschwitz fence, has found little sympathy in Poland. Poles have argued that thousands of the victims at Auschwitz were Polish political prisoners, including many priests and nuns.

Overweight daughter feeds on anger and resentment

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby.")

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How can parents get rid of a fat 20-year-old daughter who refuses to look for a job? She says that we gave birth to her for reasons of our own, so we can keep her for the rest of her life.

Eating, sleeping, reading, listening to the radio, doing volunteer work at the local animal shelter and urging her little brother to hang himself is all she has done since graduating from high school 2 1/2 years ago.

Her skill with animals has brought her many good job offers from veterinarians, but she says she refuses to work for money as long as her brother is alive, and she fiercely resents not being an only child.

The police say they cannot help us because she is neither a criminal nor a lunatic. Two doctors have told us they cannot help us because they can't find anything "wrong" with her. So where do we go from here? We aren't millionaires and we're fed up with...

FEEDING AN ELEPHANT

DEAR FEEDING: See another doctor! This time find a competent psychiatrist or psychologist. You certainly have enough clues to conclude that the girl has serious emotional problems. She desperately needs help in getting her head together. And the cost will be "peanuts" compared with feeding an elephant.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to thank you for saving my life.

In December 1973 I weighed 326 pounds. If my high blood pressure or heart trouble wouldn't have eventually killed me, I'd have done it myself. I lived with loneliness, depression and despair.

I was a heroin addict and a 23-

After sinking so low, O.A. gave me a chance to be what I've always wanted to be: a lady.

Thank you for sending me there. "BORN AGAIN" IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR BORN AGAIN: You owe me no thanks. I merely threw you a lifeline. You caught it.

year-old divorced mother of three on welfare. I hated myself enough to prostitute my body to get money for dope. I suffered humiliation after humiliation. (A 300-pound prostitute gets all the sadists and perverts no other hooker will take.) I had no self-respect, no hope, no God — no nothing.

I wrote to you, never expecting an answer. Your letter was the first word of encouragement I had had in years. You advised me to go to Overeaters Anonymous. I took your advice and went to a meeting in June of '74. I believed none of it. "These people are crazy," I thought. "I'm a fat, ugly junkie, and they're telling me I can get thin and regain my self-respect if I want to!"

"No way," I told them right out loud. No one threw me out. A beautiful, middle-aged man put his arm around my shoulder and said, "Come back and listen. Try us for 30 days. What can you lose?"

I didn't believe him, but I went back, and back, and back.

Today I've lost 121 pounds, and I'm still losing. I'm drug-free, and I'm learning to like myself. I have a responsible job, a belief in a power greater than myself, and the love and respect of my children and people who believed in me when I didn't believe in myself.

There is no scale at O.A. They don't shame you if you backslide. They are a group of loving, caring, supportive people who are there to help you because they have been helped themselves.

Irish drop Virginia in Kickoff Classic

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Lou Holtz is one of the best storytellers of all time and the Notre Dame coach told a whopper before the Kickoff Classic.

He said the defending national champion was lacking in a lot of areas and wasn't even worthy of being in the Top 20.

Nice try, Lou. But the story just isn't true.

Notre Dame is for real again. And the Irish might even win a second straight national title if they learn to harness what they showed in the opening 25 minutes of Thursday night's Kickoff Classic against outmanned and overmatched Virginia.

With Tony Rice at the helm and the offensive line opening holes at will, the second-ranked Irish scored touchdowns on their first five possessions, opened a 33-0 halftime lead and defeated Virginia 36-13 in college football's annual season opener at Giants Stadium.

It was a performance reminiscent of Notre Dame's 34-21 victory over West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl in January. The Irish jumped out early and were never threatened.

The only difference was this Virginia didn't have a West in front of its name.

Holtz didn't care for the comparison, and tended to focus on the final 35 minutes, during which Notre Dame was outscored 13-3.

"The first 20 minutes we were a top 20 team," Holtz said. "The rest of the game we played like a bottom 20 team. My biggest concern is the defense. We just weren't consistent."

Actually, the Irish didn't need to be consistent after the first 25 minutes. The game was over by then.

"Before the game the offensive line told me they'd open up some holes and they did," said Rice, who completed seven of 11 passes for 147 yards. "Basically it was easy for us because we made it easy for ourselves. The first team said we wanted to get the ball in the end zone and we did."

Notre Dame's Raghib Ismail, right, beats the pass coverage of Virginia's Jason Wallace for a 52-yard reception.

Young players fear even younger ones

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Andre Agassi and Michael Chang, the established veterans of the tennis kiddie corps, already are looking over their shoulders.

Agassi, 19 and ranked sixth in the world, and Chang, 17 and rated seventh, easily won second-round matches in the U.S. Open on Thursday. They've already survived longer than Mats Wilander, John McEnroe and Brad Gilbert.

Not that they feel comfortable. Even though their best tennis is ahead of them — and even though Chang won the French Open this year — both teen-agers know losses to up-and-coming players like themselves always are lurking on the next court.

"It doesn't matter who you play, you can't take it lightly," Agassi said after beating Neil Broad 6-3, 6-2, 6-3. "I think we bring out the best in each other."

"It's kind of like what happened with Martina and Chrissie. They brought out the best of each other for a lot of years. When you have a lot of competition around you, it definitely brings your game to a whole different level."

Chang, who beat Thomas Hogstedt 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, brought his game to a higher level at Paris. He has catapulted from 30th in the world rankings, but he knows there are plenty of players who can duplicate his streak of success.

"I think that we are a really good group of young, good players, particularly because we grew up playing together and everybody pushed everybody to their limit," Chang said. "If you didn't work hard, you would basically be at the bottom of the group. Having that, everybody wanted to be the best in the group and everybody pushed everybody."

Other American members of the new wave include Jim Courier, 19; Pete Sampras, 18, who ousted Wilander Wednesday night, and David Wheaton, 20. The foreign contingent includes 10th-seeded Alberto Mancini of Argentina, 20;

U.S. Open

Nicolas Pereira of Venezuela, 18, and Goran Ivanisevic of Yugoslavia, still two weeks shy of his 17th birthday.

Agassi thinks the young Americans could be dominant in the 1990s.

"Chang has proven himself to be a great player," he said. "You have to be a great player to win a Grand Slam tournament."

"We've got Courier, Sampras. Sampras proved last night that he can play with the top players, and Courier has proven that."

"In the next year or so, we're going to be a real dominating force in men's tennis, providing that things go as well as they have so far. There's no doubt about it."

There are, however, a few "old-timers" who might have something to say about that. Most notable, of course, are Ivan Lendl, the top seed who routed John Fitzgerald on Thursday; No. 3 Stefan Edberg, an easy winner over Peter Lundgren, and Boris Becker, who played 1986 Open finalist Miloslav Mecir today.

Women's winners on Thursday were No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 6 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario; No. 8 Helena Sukova and No. 15 Conchita Martinez. Among the men, No. 9 Tim Mayotte, No. 12 Emilio Sanchez, No. 13 Jimmy Connors, and No. 16 Andrei Chesnokov advanced.

Also in action today were Chris Evert, Martina Navratilova, Zina Garrison and Aaron Krickstein.

Lendl, a three-time winner here who has been a finalist every year since 1982, recognizes the challenge from the youngsters.

"What I've been saying for the last year or so is that the game has gotten better," said Lendl, by far the most consistent men's player this decade.

Connors, who turns 37 on Saturday and is the oldest player on tour, routed qualifier Bryan Shelton on Thursday.

Harvesters hold fast against Tascosa

Pampa coach Dennis Cavalier was happy with the way his team performed in Thursday night's scrimmage against Tascosa in Harvester Stadium.

But the third-year Pampa mentor believes in keeping things in perspective.

"Sometimes you can look too good in a scrimmage. That can make you complacent," Cavalier pointed out. "We looked good last year when we scrimmaged Tascosa. A scrimmage is just that, a scrimmage."

Pampa dropped its season opener to Canyon 6-3 last year, the same club the Harvesters start off with in 1989.

Tascosa did score one more TD (2-1) in the hour-long scrimmage, but Cavalier still liked the overall play of the Harvesters.

"We played a lot of kids last night and most of them showed some versatility," Cavalier said. "I feel like we've got a great group. They blend well together."

The scrimmage's format called for each team having three alternating possessions with no kicking involved. Each team ran a 20-down series their first two possessions. The final possessions consisted of a 15-down series.

Both teams got their offenses clicking after going scoreless the first possessions. Tascosa's scores came on a 63-yard sideline run and a 13-yard pass.

"I wasn't satisfied with our blocking, especially at the defensive ends. In this district you've got to have good blocking," Cavalier said. "That's something we're going to be working on."

Pampa scored on its second possession with quarterback James Bybee and Wayne Cavanaugh teaming up on a 63-yard-touchdown strike up the middle.

Cavanaugh, a junior, picked up some big gains during the scrimmage, and Cavalier also felt that Bybee, and running backs Quincy Williams, Barry Coffee, and Sammy Laury ran the ball well.

"These guys are going to be our backs and I was very pleased with the way they ran the ball," Cavalier said. "Our offensive line, though, is what made them go."

The Harvesters have had to rebuild the offensive line this season. Center John Mann is the only fulltime starter on the roster.

"This is a pretty young bunch. We're going to have eight or nine underclassmen making up the line this season," Cavalier said. "I've really been pleased with their attitude."

Cavalier also thought that junior quarterback Logan Hudson came in and did a better than average job of directing the offense.

Defensively, Cavalier felt the Harvesters more than held their own. The teams worked on its goal line game following the scrimmage and Pampa outscored Tascosa 3-1 in a four-down series of plays starting at the 10-yard line.

"Mike Cagle (senior linebacker) did an outstanding job and there was a bunch of them that looked good," he said.

Cavalier also mentioned linebacker Chris Forbes, tackle Heath Summers, safety Chris Roden and end Eric Cochran as having good defensive games.

"Forbes and Roden really stood out in my mind as having some good tackles. And there were a number of others," Cavalier added.

The two teams worked on punting situations to close out the scrimmage.

It was the final scrimmage for the Harvesters, who now get ready for the season opener Sept. 8 at Canyon.

Pampa's home opener is Sept. 15 against Amarillo High. The first district game is Sept. 22 when Dumas travels to Pampa.

Pampa's Quincy Williams scrambles for yardage against Tascosa.

Southwest Conference roundup

DALLAS (AP) — Neither Rice nor Southern Methodist are picked to do well in the 1989 Southwest Conference football race, but one of them will take an early lead this weekend.

Rice, whose 18-game losing streak is the longest in major college football, is a heavy favorite nonetheless to defeat Southern Methodist, which hasn't played at all the past two seasons because of NCAA sanctions.

Five SWC teams are in action the opening weekend as the league unveils its 75th anniversary season.

The season gets underway first at College Station, where Texas A&M hosts Louisiana State at 5:30 p.m. ESPN will telecast the game nationally.

Two hours later, Coach Forrest Gregg's Mustangs return to their campus stadium, Ovnby Stadium, where they haven't played in many years.

Houston, ranked 21st nationally, becomes the first SWC squad to play outside the conference on the road. The Cougars are at Nevada-Las Vegas in a game that kicks off at 9 p.m. CDT.

On Labor Day, the Texas Longhorns wrap up the weekend festivities at Boulder, Colo., against the University of Colorado in a 6:30 p.m. CST ESPN national telecast.

All three of the SWC's new head coaches — Gregg, Rice's Fred Gloadsmith and Texas A&M's R.C. Slocum — are in action the first weekend.

Saturday's SMU-Rice contest marks the first time ever that two SWC first-time head coaches have faced one another in their opening games at their respective schools.

Houston, which is ineligible to win the SWC championship because of problems with the NCAA, takes its run-and-shoot offense to Nevada after setting SWC records last year for total offense (5,331 yards), passing yards (4,153), touchdown passes (38), average yards passing per game (377.5), passes completed (344), and passes attempted (580).

Haskins keeps El Paso cager

EL PASO (AP) — Texas-El Paso basketball coach Don Haskins said he considered Johnny Melvin's upbringing in a Chicago ghetto in handing out a one-year suspension after the player admitted selling cocaine.

Haskins said at a news conference Thursday that when he first found out Melvin was arrested in May for selling cocaine he wanted to kick the player off the team. But assistant coach Rus Bradburg and the officer that investigated Melvin's case convinced him to reconsider.

"I'll let him practice, expect him to go to class every day and I expect him to do some work around town as far as helping the kids," Haskins said.

Melvin also will retain his four-year scholarship.

Last week, Melvin pleaded guilty to three counts of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver less than 5 grams of a controlled substance. He was sentenced to three years probation.

"His home is the worse of anyone's on the team. The first time I went to Johnny Melvin's home there were about 20 people walking around ... I went back the next week and there were 20 people and there weren't the same people," said Bradburg. "You walk outside there's bottles outside and beer cans ... After that first night I won't go there anymore."

Melvin averaged 4.7 points and 3.4 rebounds as a part-time starter last season.
