Suspect in Pampa murder arrested in Lawton

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

A tip to the Pampa Police Department led to the arrest Sunday of a man wanted in connection with four murders in three states, including that of a Pampa businessman.

Acting Chief of Police Ken Hall said Michael Frank Greene, 37, had called an unnamed person in Pampa and said he was at Comanche County Hospital in Lawton, Okla.

In turn the person called Pampa detectives, who contacted Lawton authorities to arrest Greene, Hall said.

Greene was reportedly seeking treatment for an undisclosed back injury.

Capital murder warrants for Greene were issued Sunday in Pampa and Ardmore, Okla.

Edley Perry "Pete" Spurrier, owner of One Hour Photo in Pampa, was murdered Thursday afternoon in his business after he was robbed and made to lie on the floor. He was reportedly shot in the back of the head with a .25 caliber automatic weapon.

Three women were robbed and shot in the back of the head with the same caliber gun Friday afternoon in Ardmore. One of the women was declared dead at the scene. The other two are being treated in Oklahoma City hospitals.

Detectives in Oklahoma said one of the survivors of the Ardmore shootings identified Greene as the gunman during a photo lineup in her hospital room.

Gray County District Attorney Harold Comer said Greene was linked to the Pampa murders by laboratory results that matched shell casings at both murder scenes.

Reliable sources in Ardmore and Pampa also said Greene had called police in Pampa as well as family members and discussed the shootings.

In addition to a first-degree murder complaint in Pampa, Greene has also had warrants issued for one count of first-degree murder, two counts of shooting with intent to kill and two counts of robbery with a firearm in the Ardmore case.

Jo Ann Bean, the Ardmore victim who reportedly identified Greene, is listed in good condition at an Oklahoma City hospital. Another victim, Gwen Miller, was pronounced dead at the scene. A third woman, Mary Aileen Manning, is in serious but stable condition Sunday at another Oklahoma City hospital, police said.

All three women were made to lie on the floor of the flower shop and were shot in the back of the head, according to the Ardmore Medical Examiner.

Greene was also being sought for questioning in connection with two murders in Garden City, Kan., last Wednesday.

Detectives from the Kansas Bureau of Investigation and Garden City are checking a link between the Pampa and Ardmore murders, two killings in Garden City and murders in Indiana in March.

All four victims in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas were killed with a bullet in the back of the head, according to Les Weaver, a Texas highway patrol dispatcher. Indiana officials have stated the two motel clerks were killed in a similar fashion.

The recent shootings started Wednesday in Garden City, when Barbara Kochendorfer, 27, and Mary Rains, 28, were abducted from separate convenience stores on opposite sides of town. Their bodies were found hours later.

Dr. Scott Malowney, the Ardmore medical examiner, described the Oklahoma slayings as "almost ritualistic" and "more like an assassination than a shooting, almost."

In Indiana, after months of clues that led nowhere, police say the rapes and slayings of two female motel clerks on March 3 may be related to the series of slayings in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Investigators working the Indiana case have scheduled a meeting next week with Kansas investigators to discuss the motel and convenience store killings.

This morning Pampa detectives Sgt. Steve Chance and Cpl. Brian Hederick left Lawton, where they interviewed Greene last night, for Springer, N.M., to investigate a Sunday murder there that was reportedly similar to the other slayings.

David Mullings, publisher of the Raton Range, said an attendant at a Gulf service station in Springer was shot once in the back of the head at 7 p.m. Sunday night during a robbery. She reportedly died at 9:40 p.m.

Lawton police officers escort Greene from Comanche County Memorial Hospital to waiting police car on Sunday.

Justice has no plans to prosecute Demery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has no current plans to prosecute a former HUD official criticized for awarding millions of dollars in subsidies to developers who had contributed to a charity he helped found, a congressman disclosed today.

"Should you come to obtain information not contained in your report implicating Mr. (Thomas) Demery or other HUD officials in possible criminal violations we would be happy to review that information," Gerald E. McDowell, chief of the department's public integrity section, said in a letter to agency officials.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., released the letter as a House subcommittee resumed hearings into mismanagement and influence-peddling at HUD during the Reagan administration.

He also charged that many witnesses during the hearings appeared to have committed perjury and that the Justice Department should conduct its own investigations instead of relying on Congress or HUD to refer cases for investigation.

Frank did not name the witnesses to whom he was referring.

In the letter, dated July 19, the Justice Department told HUD Inspector General Paul Adams it would not prosecute former HUD Assistant Secretary Thomas Demery in connection with an inspector general's report criticizing the selection process HUD used to award rent subsidies to developers who promised to renovate housing for low-income people.

In the inspector general's report, Adams and his investigators said many of the developers who received subsidies had been major contributors to FOOD for Africa, a Michigan-based charity that Demery helped establish.

Frank did not criticize the department's decision on Demery but complained Justice Department officials had indicated they would not conduct their own investigations into the emerging HUD scandals.

Man opens fire on bus, kills two in Florida

By WILL LESTER
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A man with a semiautomatic handgun opened fire at a bus at a busy downtown stop, killing the driver and a rider, then fled by critically wounding a motorist and taking his car.

"The guy just raised his arm and pow, pow, pow!" said Devin Oppy, who was sitting in the rear of the bus when the shooting occurred Sunday afternoon.

Police were searching for the gunman and his getaway car today. They said there was no apparent motive for the shootings.

"There is nothing to indicate (the gunman) was waiting for somebody. I have no reason to believe he knew his intended victims," said Hollywood Police Sgt. Darron Castiglione.

"He's killed two people and critically wounded one for no apparent reason."

Witnesses said the unidentified gunman had been drinking wine on a bus stop bench in front of a busy supermarket in Hollywood, a suburb north of Miami.

After the county bus pulled up and other passengers got on, he opened fire at the driver and then sprayed the bus, police and witnesses said.

"The door opened. He stood up, reached under his shirt and pulled out a gun," said Oppy, 28. "The driver looked at him and he shot him three times in the head. He didn't say a word. People were screaming and jumping on the floor. I kept saying, 'Get down!'"

Sydney Granger, 43, a driver for the Broward County Transit Authority, was pronounced dead at the scene. An immigrant from Grenada with several children, he was making his last round and had about 30 minutes left on his shift at the time of the attack.

A passenger apparently killed by bullets fired through the windows had not been identified by early today.

Neither victim was robbed and they appeared to have been selected at random. After the shootings, the gunman calmly strolled through a supermarket parking lot to a nearby intersection, banged his gun on the window of a car and ordered the driver out, witnesses said.

Gorbachev calls miners' strike biggest test of his tenure

By CAREY GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev told parliament today that the strikes that have swept the Soviet Union's major coal fields for nearly two weeks have been the "biggest test" of his four years in power.

He blamed coal ministry and local officials rather than the miners for the unrest — which halted work at mines in all the country's major coal fields — but warned that "deciding such questions by striking will ruin our tasks."

The Soviet president said that most striking miners had returned to work, including at least half the 300,000 miners in the country's biggest coal basin, the 121-mine Donbass in the Ukraine.

"We are coming out of a very serious crisis, the biggest test during the four years of perestroika," Gorbachev told the Supreme Soviet, referring to his program of restructuring economic and political life.

On Sunday, Gorbachev said in a rare one-on-one television interview that he was "inspired" by the workers' initiative although he disagreed with their tactics.

He also said he understood why the miners mistrusted a government that long had ignored them.

The Donbass strikers were among the last holdouts from the nationwide coal strike that started in western Siberia July 11 and spread to the Arctic Circle and Central Asia.

The strikes began to ebb Friday as the Siberia strikers returned to work Friday after exacting promises of higher pay, better food, clothing and housing and greater control over their industry.

The government said those concessions would apply to striking miners nationwide.

Strikers in the Donbass have held out for legal guarantees from the Supreme Soviet that the government would keep the promises it made to miners in a settlement signed Saturday by strike leaders and government officials.

A lawmaker from the Pechora coal basin in the far north told the Supreme Soviet that miners around the city of Vorkuta also remained on strike, in part due to "disinformation" by the media.

Miner Vladimir P. Lushnikov said state-run media had reported erroneously that the Vorkuta strike had ended.

According to recent reports, miners remained on strike at 11 of the 13 mines in Vorkuta and at all 12 mines in Chervonograd in the western Ukraine.

Deputies speaking at today's Supreme Soviet session, which was broadcast nationally with a slight tape delay, said the strikes showed that the country needed more effective trade unions.

Soviet trade unions act as adjuncts of the government, handling the distribution of various benefits rather than fighting for workers' rights.

Gorbachev proposed that instead of waiting for elections, all local councils around the country hold immediate meetings to "examine the concrete situations in all regions with the aim of activating the work of our councils everywhere."

Alexei Boiko from the Donbass appealed to Gorbachev and premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov to meet with a delegation of his region's miners to hasten a resolution of its waning strikes.

The Donbass walkout began on July 15. More than 5,000 strikers continued demonstrating Sunday on the central square in the region's city of Donetsk, 900 miles south of Moscow, and miners at each pit were deciding for themselves whether to resume work, a strike leader said in a telephone interview.

The settlement in the Donbass included earlier pension eligibility, pay hikes and longer vacations, with extra holidays for miners in especially difficult or dangerous conditions.

Gorbachev told the Supreme Soviet the strikes had dealt a serious blow to the economy, particularly the metallurgy industry. But he reassured his countrymen that "our perestroika will give results despite the tests we are undergoing."

The labor unrest is the country's worst in 60 years and would have been unthinkable before Gorbachev came to power in 1985 and loosened restrictions on civil liberties.

Gorbachev and Prime Minister Nikolai I. Ryzhkov assured strikers in a telegram Saturday that their demands "would be urgently reviewed by the Supreme Soviet and Council of Ministers, with participation by representatives of the miners, to reach the necessary decisions."

Correction
A Page 2 story in The Pampa News on Friday, July 21, regarding the arrest of a man charged with sexual assault incorrectly stated he was involved in a bar fight at Dottie's Place, 2122 Alecock. That information was provided by the Pampa Police Department. The detective working on the case said the man charged in the crime was in a bar fight with the victim's husband, but at a different location. The Pampa News apologizes for the error and any inconvenience it might have caused.

Two names were omitted from the Dord Fitz art class student list in Sunday's Pampa News. Those students were Hazel Wilson and Kathleen Greene. The Good Morning, America segment is scheduled to premiere on Wednesday at 8:30 a.m. on KVII-TV Channel 7 of Amarillo.

Suspect

The individual approached two individuals on the west range area and asked where the nearest town was.

Martinez said reports indicated Greene told the two he "was staying in the bushes" and did not want to go into Lawton. Martinez said Greene told the people he was trying to get to Cyril, Okla., about 30 miles northwest of Lawton.

"We conducted a search with dogs and a special team and had post patrols looking for him, but quit at 12:45 p.m.," Martinez said. "Apparently he was able to hide out long enough for us to call off the search and then ran off the installation."

Hank Greene of Inola, Okla., said his son, who has been married twice and has five children, and his family moved to Inola about a year ago. He said his son's wife recently filed for divorce and moved the family to Pampa, where her parents live.

Greene said he was glad his son had been caught. "At least I know there isn't going to be anymore stuff going on by him. God in heaven, I would have bet my life he didn't do it," Greene said Sunday after learning of his son's arrest.

"I hung on by a thin thread he wasn't implicated in it. I've never experienced anything like this with that much terrible hurt," Greene said. "It was all uncalled for. He wasn't raised like that."

Greene's prior criminal history includes 1984 bogus check conviction and a 1977 forgery conviction, Collins said. He was also charged with burglary in Pampa in 1986 after he reportedly broke into his father-in-law's home.

During an initial hearing in Ardmore today Greene was denied bond and a lawyer, James Clark of Ardmore, was asked to begin a preliminary defense, according to reports from Diana Baldwin, a writer for the Ardmore Daily Ardmore.

She said Greene smiled broadly for cameras as he was taken to and from the courtroom.

Attorney Clark reportedly said he would be looking into the situation in New Mexico for evidence his client did not commit the other slayings.

A second hearing for Greene has been scheduled for Sept. 28 in Ardmore.

Comer said no matter the outcome of the Oklahoma trial of Greene, he would seek to have him tried in Texas in the death of Spurrier.

Both Texas and Oklahoma have provisions for the death penalty in capital murder convictions.

Officials dodge questions in spy probe

Stansfield Turner, who was CIA director during the Carter administration before Bloch's embassy stint, said "it's not very likely (Bloch) would know the specific names and details" concerning CIA agents in Vienna because such information is not normally shared with officials outside the agency.

However, a person in Bloch's high position "could have gotten into things that weren't normally his business" because of his access to the embassy's cable section, Turner said on Good Morning America.

Bush administration, legislative and law enforcement officials skirted questions Sunday about the inquiry into Bloch, the highest-ranking U.S. official ever implicated in an espionage investigation involving the Soviet Union.

Bloch, who has not been charged with any crime, reportedly was filmed by U.S. officials earlier this year passing a briefcase to a known Soviet KGB agent in a European capital.

The State Department and the FBI are "pursuing the inquiry thoroughly in order to identify the compromised security which has occurred and the appropriate steps," the State Department said. Bloch's building pass and security clearance have been lifted.

"My directions are really not to comment on this case," an FBI spokesman said Sunday. "You're talking about security matters."

Although reports remained sketchy, the picture was emerging of a 54-year-old career diplomat who was frustrated by his lack of advancement while serving in Vienna under two political appointees.

Vienna, because of geography, traditionally has been a hotbed for East-West spy activity.

Bloch's close friend, Austrian Foreign Minister Alois Mock, was quoted Sunday as saying he heard about the recent allegations of espionage through Austrian channels three weeks before the news broke in Washington on Friday.

Mock said in the Austrian tabloid Kurier there was "a certain suspicion on the U.S. side reaching back into the 1970s" about Bloch's activities.

Bloch also served in the newly opened U.S. Embassy in East Berlin in 1974.

Man in jail busted again

By BEAR MILLS Staff Writer

Pampa police have charged Roy Madrid Soto, an inmate in city jail, with possession of a controlled substance after reportedly finding him smoking marijuana in his cell Saturday night.

Soto, 21, 318 Hazel, was arrested by Pampa police Tuesday, July 18, on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Acting Chief of Police Ken Hall said additional charges for possession of a controlled substance have been filed against Soto.

He added that a person who brought a change of clothes to Soto is a suspect in the case.

Delivery of a controlled substance to a penal institution is a third degree felony, according to police.

Officer Terry Brown made the discovery around 11 p.m. during a routine check of the jail. As Brown entered the jail area, a reporter at the police department working on another story heard Brown call for help.

Several officers responded and a multiple-bed holding cell was cleared.

The reporter witnessed Brown carry out a baggie of marijuana and a Bible.

Soto allegedly was using pages from the Bible as rolling paper for the marijuana cigarettes.

No charges had been filed through this morning on the person police believe delivered the marijuana to Soto, and her name has not been released.

Shrimpers vow to continue their protest

By JEFF AWALT
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON (AP) — Shrimpers who ended their blockade of ship channels along the Texas coast Sunday said they were ready to move back into the trenches today if officials fail to answer concerns about costly new devices meant to protect sea turtles.

The shrimpers lifted anchors and yielded to traffic in the ship channels Sunday, but hundreds waited nearby today as their representatives prepared for a requested meeting with national fisheries officials.

Coast Guard Adm. William F. Merlin, commander of the 8th Coast Guard District in New Orleans, met with shrimpers' representatives Sunday.

A meeting between shrimpers, Coast Guard officials, representatives of the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration and the National Marine Fisheries Service is scheduled for this afternoon.

The Coast Guard said U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher agreed to a meeting today with Texas and Louisiana congressional leaders in Washington.

"That had already been promised before, but he (Merlin) just reaffirmed it and he is really helping us and working to set up these meetings to try and satisfy the demands of the shrimpers," said Tee John Mialjevich, president of the Concerned Shrimpers of America.

About 200 shrimp boats on Saturday crowded the deep-water Houston ship channel, which passes between Galveston Island and Bolivar Peninsula, and about 300 shrimpers jammed Port Aransas, gateway to the Port of Corpus Christi.

Similar blockades in smaller Texas and Louisiana ports also ended Sunday. Two recreational boaters were hospitalized briefly for minor injuries after trying to run the blockade Saturday in Cameron, La.

Gunfire was reported in both states and four shrimpers were arrested in Texas. There were no injuries, officials said.

Shrimpers who clogged the ship channels Saturday were protesting new Commerce Department regulations requiring that they use devices intended to protect endangered Kemp's Ridley sea turtles.

The devices are designed to allow the turtles to escape shrimpers' nets, but the shrimpers complain that they cause them to lose shrimp, and are bulky, dangerous and expensive to operate.

Mialjevich, whose group argues that the devices don't really save endangered turtles, said he would propose that federal officials instead consider a requirement that shrimpers perform tows no longer than 90 minutes. He said that by checking nets more often, they could avoid killing turtles and save their valuable shrimp.

Many of the shrimpers who filled shipping channels Saturday with booms outstretched to widen their stance also went ashore for a symbolic burning of the turtle protection devices they vowed not to use despite potential fines of $8,000 to $25,000 and six months in jail.

They ended their blockades, including an armada of about 200 boats in the Houston Ship Channel and another 300 at Port Aransas, after Coast Guard officials issued warnings that they would not allow continued blockage of the channels. However, shrimpers said they chose to postpone their protests in a good-faith effort prior to today's talks.

"No threats that were made by the Coast Guard or anybody else made us back down from this blockade," Mialjevich said. "We just didn't see any more sense in it. If it continued... it would only be detrimental to our efforts to change this bad regulation."

He and other shrimpers warned that the blockades would return by Tuesday if their concerns are not addressed.

"If something is not done, there'll be shrimpers in all of these channels and there'll probably be violence," Marvin Hickman, a shrimper from Tarpon Springs, Fla., said Sunday. "The tempers are running very high out there."

The Coast Guard said more than 50 ships were unable to pass through Texas channels during the weekend because of the protests.

The shrimpers also forced officials to halt operations of the Galveston-Bolivar ferry for several hours Saturday, but operations resumed Sunday morning.

Health officials say TB on rise among homeless in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Health officials are hoping to get better results from a tuberculosis testing program that begins this week by getting immediate treatment for homeless people who test positive.

The Austin-Travis County health department will set up a mobile chest X-ray at the downtown Salvation Army on Tuesday in a program to last 10 weeks. The X-rays, which can conclusively disclose active tuberculosis cases, are funded with a $34,500 grant from the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

Tuberculosis skin tests given in March to more than 100 homeless people showed 45 percent were exposed to the disease and were carrying the tuberculosis bacteria, said Eryn Tatum, tuberculosis coordinator for the Austin-Travis County Health Department.

"We're trying to identify these people on the spot and get them to (treatment) the next day," Ms. Tatum said.

"There's probably a lot of (tuberculosis sufferers) walking around who just don't go to a doctor. Hopefully, as soon as we get the chest X-rays, we can identify more of them," she said. Tatum said the health department cannot force the homeless to get chest X-rays.

Travis County recorded an increase in tuberculosis cases since 1987, when 40 active cases were treated in the county. In 1988, there were 49 cases and 51 cases have been reported this year.

As many as one-third of those could have active tuberculosis based on the sketchy results obtained from the March testing, the Austin American Statesman reported Sunday.

For those tests, tuberculosis test skin patches were placed on 215 homeless people, but only 108 returned two days later to allow nurses to analyze the patches and record test results.

Forty-nine who returned — 45 percent — tested positive. These people, called positive reactors by health officials, have been exposed to tuberculosis at some point in their lives and the bacteria is either latent or active in their bodies, Tatum said. About 0.4 percent of the general population would react positively to the skin test, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

Of the 49 Austin homeless who were positive reactors, 15 came to a health department clinic for chest X-rays, she said. Three of those who were X-rayed appeared to have active tuberculosis, but health officials were unable to locate them for further tests.

Local test results show the tuberculosis exposure rate among Austin's homeless tracked national exposure data. Tuberculosis test results reported to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta indicate as many as 51 percent of the homeless people in some cities are infected with tuberculosis.

Tatum said Austin's homeless diagnosed with tuberculosis will be sent to San Antonio State Chest Hospital. Treatment, which takes six months to one year, is effective at curing the disease, she said.

Symptoms of tuberculosis are severe night sweats, a persistent cough, steady weight loss and extreme fatigue. With no treatment, the disease can be fatal.

Until the 1950s, when tuberculosis treatment became widely available, the disease was a major killer in the United States. Before the drugs were developed, victims were isolated in sanitariums.

Tatum said the bacteria is airborne and it usually takes multiple contacts with the bacteria to become a carrier.

"There is little risk of someone walking down the street past a homeless person and contracting TB," said Carl Schieffelin, associate director of the tuberculosis division of the Centers for Disease Control.

Ringo Starr performs with Joe Walsh, right, on opening night of concert tour.

Ringo opens new tour with 'all-Starr' backing

By PATRICIA SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Yes, kids still scream when a Beatle performs. Only now, their parents are often screaming alongside them.

When Ringo Starr kicked off his first-ever solo concert tour on Sunday night, he was playing to a concert audience dominated by "Baby Boomers."

One woman who had brought her two young daughters said, "My kids don't even know who Ringo Starr is, but they will after tonight."

The concert's promoters made it a family occasion for many by giving free admission to children 12 and under who were accompanied by adults.

The 49-year-old Starr, the first Beatle to become a grandfather, was backed by what was billed as his "All-Starr Band." And those appearing on the star-studded stage set indeed were a celestial aggregation.

The rhythm section was especially strong, with Ringo taking over one of three drum sets after singing out front for the first three songs.

Flanking Ringo were Jim Keltner, who had played along with John Lennon and George Harrison solo efforts, and Levon Helm, who was a drummer for the Band.

Handling keyboards were Billy Preston, who had an ongoing involvement for the Beatles, and Dr. John.

Saxman Clarence Clemons and guitarist-keyboardist Nils Lofgren, enjoying a respite from Bruce Springsteen's E-Street Band, also were in the band that Starr assembled four months ago.

Ex-Eagle Joe Walsh was also on guitar, and Starr sang his "Life's Been Good."

Starr probably shouldn't have wondered but he asked the crowd after the first song if they knew who he was.

"Hello, Dallas, what's my name?" he shouted.

The yell "Ringo" roared out of the open amphitheater and across North Dallas.

He liked it so well that he asked again and received a louder response.

The former Beatles drummer was wearing a star-trimmed jacket in his first public appearance since a 1986 guest role with the Beach Boys in Washington, D.C.

He opened with "It Don't Come Easy" and by the third song, "Yellow Submarine," was dancing energetically under the spotlight that stayed on him alone during the early going.

It was obvious many in the audience were enamored of Starr's ties to the legendary Beatles. Some were carrying Beatles albums and one man from Florida said he was wearing an original Beatles jacket from London and carrying a tote bag of Fab Four memorabilia.

Mexico, creditors agree on debt-reduction plan

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico and its creditor banks finally agreed on the key points of a debt-reduction package, providing the first victory for the Bush administration's effort to ease the $1.3 trillion Third World debt burden.

The agreement announced late Sunday night ended two days of intense talks at the U.S. Treasury Department where Mexican officials and U.S. bankers were joined by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan.

In the final package, negotiators representing the commercial banks agreed to choose from three options for providing assistance. They can cut the principal on the old loans by 35 percent, reduce the interest rate they are charging to 6.25 percent or provide new loans to Mexico.

U.S. officials predicted that the debt-relief package could slash by up to one-third the $4.5 billion Mexico is paying annually to service the $54 billion it owes to commercial banks.

However, officials said the exact amount of debt relief will not be known for some time because each of Mexico's creditor banks must decide on its own the extent to which it will participate in the plan.

Still, the agreement signified the first tangible result for the Bush administration's debt-reduction plan, which was unveiled by Brady on March 10. The strategy seeks to provide various incentives for commercial banks to voluntarily reduce the amount of Third World debt they hold.

Brady, who had lobbied intensely for the final agreement, hailed the package as "a major step forward in the implementation" of the debt-reduction effort.

The administration had made Mexico the test case for the Brady plan, believing that an agreement with the developing world's second-largest debtor would establish precedents for deals with other countries.

Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari went on nationwide television Sunday night to praise the final package, saying, "Mexico has opened the way for other nations with similar problems."

Salinas said the debt reduction plan answered "the cry of Mexicans to return to growth" but he cautioned Mexican citizens, "don't look for spectacular results overnight."

The Bush administration had hoped to have a completed Mexican debt plan to present to the seven-nation economic summit last week in Paris. But even without a deal, the final summit communiqué included a strong endorsement of the approach.

In an effort to break the stalemate, Brady brought the negotiators to Washington on Saturday and Sunday to resolve the remaining issues.

Salinas described the final talks as "difficult, complex and tense." Mexico had begun the discussions demanding that the banks cut Mexico's debt by 55 percent.

Others participating in the final round of negotiations were Mexican Finance Minister Pedro Aspe and John Reed, chairman of Citicorp and head of the 15-bank committee which bargains for the hundreds of banks to which Mexico owes money.

In a joint statement from the Mexican government and the banks, the two sides said they had reached agreement on the main points of the financing package with the expectation that it would be accepted by "Mexico's approximately 500 creditor banks worldwide."

The debt reduction options include slashing the principal on old loans by 35 percent or reducing the interest rate banks receive to 6.25 percent.

Banks taking either of these options would be able to get guarantees against default on the remaining debt from the 151-nation

International Monetary Fund or its sister organization, the World Bank.

The joint statement estimated that $7 billion will be available from the international lending organizations and other sources, including Japan, to support the debt-reduction and interest-rate reduction efforts for Mexico.

In conjunction with the Mexican agreement, Brady said the United States is willing to provide up to $2 billion in short-term financing to Mexico to tide the country over until the new loans begin arriving later this year. He said other countries would help in providing this bridge loan.

Officials said one of the final issues resolved Sunday night involved a "readjustment clause" that would increase debt payments once the Mexican economy rebounds.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason...y you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain of awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

Public Notice

On July 17, 1989, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWBT) filed an application with the Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas to add a new service offering for business customers, called Customer Billing Reports (Toll Summaries). The proposed effective date for this offering is September 11, 1989.

Four reports will be offered to provide toll detail based upon information from the customer's long distance usage billed by SWBT. These reports, which are entitled Usage Summaries, Billing Number Summary, Number Called Summary and International Call Detail, will include both intraLATA usage provided by SWBT and interLATA usage provided by Interexchange Carrier (IC) and billed by SWBT. These reports will be provided to customers for a charge and customers may order these reports on a monthly, quarterly, semiannually or annually basis.

CUSTOMER BILLING REPORTS (TOLL SUMMARIES) PROPOSED RATES

One Report	$25.00
Two Reports	$50.00
Three or Four Reports	$75.00

NOTE: All rates shown are per billing account number; per occurrence of report production.

Customer Billing Reports (Toll Summaries) have been forecasted to generate an increase in first year annual revenues of approximately $282,983.

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the Commission by September 1, 1989. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Tax forms show tyranny still lives

Earlier this month, just in time for the Fourth of July, which commemorates our forefathers' revolt against tax tyranny, the IRS had a present for you: a briefcaseful of proposals for new tax forms and changes to existing forms. These are still proposals, but they probably will become law with no objections from Congress:

- Form 8814 would allow you to report your children's investment income on your form. Last year the revenuers, in their wisdom, created a form that your children must fill out if they make investment income more than $1,000 per year. That imposition still stands, taxing your kids at the rate you pay. Since children can't vote, this is clear taxation without representation. The new form makes the matter even more clouded.
- Schedule D-1 would be a continuation sheet for Schedule D; it would list additional capital gains and losses — assuming the government leaves you any money to invest.
- A redesign of Forms 1040 and 1040A would let man and wife register their names on separate lines of a joint return. This is supposed to keep the different Social Security numbers from being mismatched, especially if different last names are being used. But you'd think these IRS incompetents could at least sort things out.
- A line added to the two 1040 forms would let you enter the new tax for catastrophic health care (which in reality doesn't provide for any such thing) if it's being seized from your income.
- A line would be added to Schedule 1 of Form 1040A and Form 2441 so you can enter the names and Social Security numbers of your kids and dependent care providers. This is yet more interference by behemoth government in the family life of Americans.
- The line for reimbursed employee business expenses would be removed. Why? This would only make it easier for people to forget to fill in this information, leading to more taxes needlessly paid.
- Got all that straight? Probably not. Even CPAs and PhDs in statistics and the psychic powers of the Amazing Kreskin have difficulty figuring out what the IRS commands us to do.

Maybe that's what our founding fathers meant when they wrote 213 years ago, in accusation against the tyrant King George III, that "He has erected a Multitude of new Offices, and sent hither Swarms of Officers to harass our People, and eat out their Substance."

Hard work not always enough

By CHARLES D. VAN EATON
Professor of Economics
Hillsdale College, Michigan

During my 25 years of college teaching I have had many students who worked very hard doing the best work that they could and still had to accept low or even failing grades. At the same time I have had many students who didn't work hard at all and still received high marks.

It was not at all uncommon for some of those who had received low marks to come to me and tell me that they believed they deserved higher marks simply because they had worked so hard and because they knew other students who had not worked nearly as hard as they had, yet received higher marks.

No matter how much I might wish otherwise, I have always had to tell them that, unfortunately, there simply was no such thing as a "labor theory of grades" such that one's grade always had to be a direct reflection of how hard one had worked. They were told that how they performed on their tests was what they had to accept as their grade.

The notion that one ought to always receive a reward simply because of having worked hard — especially in the matter of earning an income — is deeply engrained in our culture.

Some farmers are thinking the same thing today. One such farmer is Mr. W.A. Reid of Tuscumbia, Ala. In an Associated Press report published three days before the presidential primary in his state, Mr. Reid said — with specific reference to the troubled state of his own agricultural business — "We're in these circumstances for reasons beyond our control, not because of reasons of ability or health." Mr. Reid, who is white, indicated that he intended to cast his primary vote for Jesse Jackson because Jackson had pledged to save family farms like his own.

Mr. Reid was saying essentially the same thing that I and other teachers often hear from students whose grades were not what they had hoped they would be — he was saying that since he had worked hard all his life, he ought to be able to sell his crops at prices which would cover all his costs and earn a profit and that the political system is morally obligated to assure such an outcome.

He has doubts about an economic system which fails to give him the revenue he feels that he is entitled to receive based on his efforts. If the political system has to be employed to override the economic system, then he seems to be prepared to endorse the political system over the economic system.

There are politicians who would be more than happy to promise Mr. Reid what he wants — that's how politicians get elected. In Jesse Jackson's case, the issue goes beyond simply saying what has to be said to get elected: Jesse Jackson, like others, really believes that the likes of W.A. Reid ought to be paid what they want to be paid regardless of what the market says about the monetary value of their efforts.

Mr. Reid and all the other farmers who are in financial trouble are in trouble for a simple reason — their costs exceed their revenue. However, for farmers such as Mr. Reid (and he is only part of the one-in-six who are still struggling), costs are, to a great extent, debt-service costs which are the product of their having borrowed money for expansion in the past in anticipation that inflation would continue to accelerate and reduce the real burden of their debt.

The failure of inflation to continue accelerating has left that one-in-six group with debt burdens greater than their current revenues can support and, as a result, many of them are now technically bankrupt.

The only way politicians can help Mr. Reid and his fellows among the one-in-six is to purposefully pursue policies which guarantee accelerating inflation, or to directly make his minority group wards of the state by paying their debts for them either through higher taxes or through government-controlled higher prices for their specific agricultural products.

That either action would not set well with those five-in-six farmers who have been able to bring their debt under control, or with consumers in general who would find inflation reducing their real standard of living, are not issues which politicians care to contemplate when the larger issue of trying to get elected is at hand.

Policies designed to save the so-called family farm are precisely those policies which have done so much to send the wrong signals to the likes of Mr. Reid. When he says that "we are in trouble due to conditions beyond our control," he is not exactly telling the truth. He and others like him bet on inflation and they lost their bet. They have no one to blame but themselves. To suggest that he is entitled to win is moral nonsense.

If the politicians really believe that family farmers who bet the wrong way on inflation are entitled to continue to feed at the taxpayers' trough, then everyone who bet wrong on one economic expectation or the other is also entitled to win and the politicians are obligated to fulfill their promise of pie-in-the-sky for all.

The fact that what the likes of Mr. Reid want done can't be done without destroying the economy never seems to enter anyone's mind.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, July 24, the 205th day of 1989. There are 160 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
Thirty years ago, on July 24, 1959, during a visit to the Soviet Union, Vice President Richard M. Nixon entered into an impromptu debate with Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev on the merits of American capitalism versus Soviet communism. The confrontation became known as the "Kitchen Debate" because it took place in a model kitchen at a U.S. exhibition.

On this date:
In 1783, Latin American revolutionary Simon Bolivar was born in Caracas, Venezuela.
In 1847, Mormon leader Brigham Young and his followers arrived at the Great Salt Lake in Utah.
In 1862, the eighth President of the United States, Martin Van Buren, died in Kinderhook, N.Y.
In 1866, Tennessee became the first state to be readmitted to the Union after seceding during the Civil War.

Inflation strikes musical notes

Anybody who travels is prepared for the fact that weights, measures and money have different values in different countries. Yet it rarely occurs to us when we are tuning our pianos or our violins. It never occurs to us that an A might sound different someplace else.

Over the centuries the pitch of a concert A — typically the pitch used for tuning — has crept upward.

The A you play today does not sound at all like the A sounded to Mozart and Beethoven. Their A sounded like today's E.

In fact, the A is now so high that it is putting strain on vocal chords and on old violins.

There is now a bill in the Italian parliament to bring the A sound down to where it was several centuries ago, and Luciano Pavarotti and Placido Domingo and Joan Sutherland have declared their support for the change.

Recently U.S. News & World Report quoted David Epstein, professor of music at MIT: "It's one thing for a violinist to tighten a peg or for a woodwind player to put in a different piece of pipe, but with a singer you are dealing with flesh and blood. If an aria is suddenly pushed up to a higher pitch, it can be a real strain."

Opera singers have long complained that when they sing a high F — in Mozart's Magic Flute — pitch inflation has pushed the note almost a semitone higher than in Mozart's time.

A tuning fork used for the 18th-century performance of Handel's Messiah produced an A by vibrating at 422.5 cycles per second.

By the 19th century some orchestras were tuning to an A as high as 440 cycles per second.

Many modern orchestras continue to tune higher than that.

The Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic and the Chicago Symphony now tune to 442 cycles.

Legislation under consideration in Italy's parliament would push the A sound back down to 432 cycles.

Nobody seems to know why we've had this tendency to push the pitch up over recent years. Some claim it adds "brightness" to music.

Musicians, inexorably competing with one another, are aware that any higher pitch "stands out;" the sharper sound draws attention to their playing.

Members of a string quartet often take turns playing slightly sharp so that each musician can have his own moment of limelight.

Maybe today's musicians prefer "excitement" to "beauty."

This century's last word in acoustics is MIT's Prof. Amar Bose. He says, "Reproducing a selection of Mozart with the frequencies of the sound increased is analogous to reproducing a Rembrandt with all the colors slightly shifted away from red toward blue (blue light has a higher frequency than red light)."

"Music and art are creative expression of the emotions of the composers and artists. It is as unlikely that we can improve upon all the compositions of the masters by simply increasing the pitch of their notes, as it is that we can improve all paintings by shifting their colors toward the blue end of the spectrum. After all, had the artist believed that his work would have been improved by such a color shift, he would have achieved this by a different mix of his palette."

President took circus horses to water

By BEN WATTENBERG

Artful media manipulation for a worthy purpose, so slick that it is not slick at all, is the jackpot skill for a modern political leader. In Poland and Hungary, George Bush hit the jackpot.

There was probably more network television coverage of those countries in three days than there has been in the last three years. Nor was it mindless "photo opportunity" stuff. The network coverage had a theme.

The networks told us, with grace and virtuosity, the truth about communism today: that it has been a brutal failure, that democracy can be the wave of the future even in the Soviet rim-lands, that America will likely be the big player if democracy is to prevail as the Iron Curtain corrodes.

The good news is that the networks told the bad news. We saw the empty stores and long lines in Poland. We saw the Solidarity legislators tell us about their experiences in jail. We saw full stores in Hungary and heard about how hardly anyone had the money to buy anything. We heard Hungarian communist leaders announce that communism had failed. We heard a network anchor, NBC's Tom Brokaw, talk about "40 years of Communist oppression." In all, a vivid description of an empire that had been very evil indeed.

The quote of the week came from Lech Walesa who said, "We have a chance to be the America of the East." Poles were sent to the slammer for less.

By the time the press corps got to Paris, CBS's Leslie Stahl was saying to Dan Rather that "President Bush comes here when the whole world is celebrating American values."

Why this outburst of televised geopolitical reality? First, what's happening in Poland and Hungary is remarkable. Second, President Bush decided to make the trip. Third, the new television technology gives the president more agenda-setting power than ever before.

Thus, all the major networks "traveled the anchor." Brokaw, Rather, Peter Jennings (ABC) and Bernard Shaw (CNN) not only went to Hungary and Poland, but took whole broadcast teams with them. Accordingly, the anchors typically introduced the stories on the death of Sir Laurence Olivier from Budapest.

Once the program comes from a faraway place, editorial logic dictates that there will be plenty of coverage beyond just what happened at the state dinner or what the communists said. We get the sort of full flavor that we saw from Eastern Europe.

Traveling the anchor is not a new television technique. It's been around since the days of gavel-to-gavel coverage of the national political conventions.

But it used to be enormously expensive and complex. Now, with satellite transmission, computers and lightweight cameras and editing equipment, it's easier and cheaper. And competition within the television industry makes it likely that if the story is good, and if one network travels the anchor, so will the others.

So when Bush said "I'm going," each network had little choice but to say, "Me too." And once the networks went, with their anchors, they served up broad coverage — sometimes five or six stories per night. Once they did that, they did it well. And once the networks did it well, the public paid more attention to Eastern Europe than they ever had before.

Cynics say that these sorts of geopolitical circuses are designed primarily to boost a president in the polls.

There's more to it. Bush has a difficult chore. As the Soviets appear to recede as a military threat, American foreign policy must be seen to have both a cause and a constituency. The cause is democracy. The constituency is the patriotic and proud American public. But the public reacts with political zest (and resources) only as it empathizes with the situation.

That empathy is bolstered in a media democracy when the big networks put on an intelligent circus. Bush took circus horses to water. Anchors away!

Japan's premier resigns after election setback

By DAVID THURBER
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita today announced that he would resign after his scandal-plagued party suffered a stinging electoral defeat — losing control of a house of parliament for the first time in its 34 years.

The long-governing Liberal Democrats had seen their popularity plummet over the Recruit influence-peddling scandal, a new 3 percent sales tax and the liberalization of agricultural imports, which farmers say hurts their livelihood.

Uno, who has been prime minister for less than two months, said his party's loss of control of parliament's upper house in Sunday's balloting was ultimately his responsibility.

"It was a very difficult election," he told a nationally televised news conference, speaking calmly.

Uno had been criticized by women's groups and others for his alleged extramarital affairs with women including a geisha who said he paid her to be his mistress for several months.

He said he hoped a successor could be found "promptly." Analysts said they expect the process to take at least several weeks.

Uno's resignation will result in the dissolution of the entire Cabinet and a restructuring of the governing party's leadership.

In Sunday's polls for half the 252 seats in parliament's upper house, the big winner was the opposition Japan Socialist Party, which is led by Takako Doi, the first woman head of a major Japanese political party.

Kyodo News Service projected that the Socialists had won 45 seats and the Liberal Democrats 36 — dropping the governing party's presence in the chamber from 142 to 109 seats. The Socialists' new seat total was projected at 66.

Rengo (Confederation), a new labor-based group, was projected to receive 11 seats and the centrist Komeito (Clean Government Party) 10, with the rest split among smaller parties. Final returns were expected this evening.

Mrs. Doi said her party would quickly call a meeting of opposition leaders to form a coalition against the Liberal Democrats, who still hold 293 of the 512 seats in parliament's more powerful lower house.

While most major opposition parties have called for an abolition of the unpopular new sales tax, they vary broadly on other issues such as defense policy, relations with the United States and nuclear power, and any opposition coalition is expected to be fragile.

With the loss of their majority in the upper house, however, the Liberal Democrats will face greater difficulties in passing legislation.

The upper chamber can vote down bills and can delay but not block the budget and treaties. Differences between bills passed by the two houses must be ironed out by a conference committee.

Doi said the Socialists' first priority would be to pass a bill in the upper house abolishing the unpopular sales tax. Such a bill is unlikely to be approved by the lower house, however, and a standstill over the issue could add to pressure for early elections for the lower chamber.

Elections for the lower house do not legally have to be held for 12 months.

A loss in the lower house would threaten the governing party's 34-year hold on power since that chamber chooses the prime minister.

About 65 percent of Japan's 90.3 million eligible voters cast ballots in Sunday's election.

Uno became prime minister June 2 after former Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita resigned to take responsibility for a scandal in which the Recruit Co., a publishing conglomerate, allegedly distributed millions of dollars in underpriced stocks and political donations to obtain favors.

Uno announces his resignation at televised news conference today.

Colleges: Minority recruiting results fall short

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An overwhelming majority of colleges and universities are trying to attract and retain more minority students but few of their efforts are bearing fruit, says a new report on Campus Trends, 1989. Eight in 10 administrators responding to a survey by the American Council on Education reported either "a lot" or "some" activity toward those goals on their campuses. But only one in four said minority enrollment had increased in the 1988-89 school year.

"We obviously would rather see more progress," said Elaine El-Khawas, an ACE vice president and author of the report. "It's encouraging that there's a tremendous level of activity. But the actual results fall short."

ACE surveyed senior academic administrators at 366 colleges and universities for its sixth annual campus trends report. Other findings showed that faculty shortages and inadequate physical facilities are pressing concerns on campus.

Many of the questions on minorities were based on recommendations from a recent ACE publication called Minorities on Campus: A Handbook for Enhancing Diversity.

Only 25 percent of the administrators said their enrollment of blacks, Hispanics and Asians had risen during 1988-89 and only 10 percent reported an increase in American Indian students.

The same proportion of institutions reported they were making special efforts to increase minority faculty members. But only 17 percent said they offer incentives to academic departments to hire minorities and only 25 percent reported a net gain in minority faculty over the previous year.

While some studies have predicted overall faculty shortages in the mid-1990s, El-Khawas said her survey found that the problem already exists.

Half of the administrators reported it is taking longer to find qualified people for full-time faculty positions. Half also said they are having greater difficulty getting top applicants to accept positions when they are offered — up from 25 percent in 1987.

Specifically, four in 10 institutions reported problems finding qualified full-time computer science professors. One in three cited similar problems for business; mathematics and health professions each were mentioned by one in four schools.

El-Khawas attributed the problem to a number of factors, among them an inadequate number of doctorate holders; an increasing number of Ph.D.'s going into private industry; a greater proportion of doctoral degrees earned by foreigners; accelerating retirement of faculty members; and expanding student enrollment.

The result is bound to be a highly competitive situation, El-Khawas said, with universities offering incentives to keep people from retiring, higher salaries to people in certain fields, and lures designed to attract professors from other universities. Class size may also increase, she said.

A dozen or so volunteers from Zion Lutheran Church helped unload four pickup loads of groceries at the Good Samaritan House recently. According to Zion's pastor, Rev. Art Hill, the large purchase was made possible through Lutheran Brotherhood Insurance Company. "L.B. is a fraternal insurance company that supports any number of congregational activities. This one is called Care and Share. It's designed to give an extra boost to what a congregation is doing to show practical Christian love," said Hill, adding "The Good Samaritan place helps us with much of our day-to-day social ministry, it was only natural that they receive the benefits. High Plains Food Bank of Amarillo is also to be credited. They made it possible for us to purchase as much food as we did with the money we had available."

New 4-H textile symposium

Janie VanZandt, Gray County 4-H leader, and Becky Reed, 4-H member will be among approximately 75 4-H'ers and adults participating in the first-ever 4-H Regional Textile Symposium from July 29 to August 4 in North Carolina. They will be part of a five or six member Texas delegation.

Funded by a $160,000 grant from Guilford Mills, Inc., Greensboro, the event will be held at North Carolina State University in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Participants, called Textile

Fellows, were selected from the Southern Region of the Agricultural Extension Service, which includes 13 states, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. All participants are interested in careers in textiles, industrial management, or a related field.

At the symposium, 4-H'ers will receive hands-on lab experiences, attend seminars on careers and textile issues, and go on industry tours. At home afterward, they can conduct special textile projects in areas in which they have a particular interest. Local mentors, such as Van-

Zandt, will counsel them. Those who complete their projects will be invited to present them at next year's symposium.

At NCCU, participants will do textile lab studies on fiber identification, yarn testing, design techniques, physical testing, and color design. Seminars will cover the industry's history, economic significance, its future and career possibilities. At UNC-G, Fellows will learn about textile manufacturing, applications and marketing. They will also tour textile companies to see state-of-the-art techniques and equipment.

Mother's patience grows thin with stranger's cruel stares

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, age 11, is seriously overweight. She is an adorable child who is bright, outgoing and has a terrific personality, and the people who know her think she's wonderful.

This child has suffered a lot from her peers, who at times can be very cruel, but adults are the cruelest of all. When we are out for the evening or shopping, adults actually stop and stare, point and whisper. Each time, I cringe, then I get angry. They look at me with such expressions of disgust on their faces, as though to say, "How could you have allowed this to happen to that child?"

Abby, strangers do not know that I have had my daughter to more doctors than I can count, including a year and a half of therapy. We joined Overeaters Anonymous and we still live the 12-step program in our daily lives. (I have always been overweight, too.) We go to the spa and either ride bikes or go for long walks several times a week, and watch what we eat, avoiding cholesterol, sugar and fats.

Our society is so obsessed with being thin that overweight people are abused even after death. One local headline read a few years ago: "The Naked Body of a 200-Pound Woman Found at the Bottom of a Mine Shaft!" Never have I read the weight of a thin victim in bold print. That poor woman was a victim in more ways than one — and so were her loved ones.

Abby, please tell your readers that overweight people have feelings, too. Most are just like thin people — loving, kind and caring.

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR MOTHER: You are speaking for many. Perhaps those cruel or simply thoughtless people who stare, point or make fun of overweight people will see this and change their ways. I hope so.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to thank the person who sewed two pennies in the lining of a silk suit I purchased to wear to the funeral of my beloved mother. She passed away last January. We were very close, and talked on the phone or saw each other every day of our lives.

During the funeral services, my sorrow was beyond comprehension. When I jammed my hand into the pocket, I felt something in the lining. I finally worked out the two pennies someone had sewn in there to wish a stranger good luck.

It gave me such a wonderful feeling, I had to smile through my tears. May I use your column to thank that person?

LORETTA HILLIARD, MANSFIELD, OHIO

DEAR LORETTA: You just did. Please accept my condolences on the loss of your beloved mother, and add my 2 cents' worth of "good luck" to match those of the anonymous stranger.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I hear about a man who asks his wife to pack his suitcase for him, I'm reminded of the following story:

A man called his wife from his office and told her that he was going on a weekend fishing trip, so would she please pack his overnight case. Then he added, "And please don't forget to put in my nice new robe."

After he returned from the trip, he said to his wife, "I thought I asked you to pack my robe — I couldn't find it."

His wife replied, "I put it in your tackle box."

LUCILLE R. HENDERSON

CONFIDENTIAL TO "LOOKING FOR MR. WONDERFUL IN ST. PAUL": Don't place so much emphasis on age. If a man looks young, he's probably young. If he looks old, he's probably old. If he looks interesting — smile.

Day care more than family issue

By JAMES HANNAH
Associated Press Writer

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Full-time employment and full-time parenting are overloading many American couples, and it's becoming a serious problem because the family is the key unit in society, according to a University of Dayton professor.

To ease the burden, two-career couples are trying a variety of solutions, but no one has found a sure thing, says Eugene August, professor of men's studies at the university.

"I think this society ... needs to realize that the family is under pressure, and the rest of society simply has to adjust to the needs of parents with young children," he says. "Otherwise, we're all going to suffer. The whole quality of life in society depends on the quality of family life."

August says the makeshift methods of coping include day-care, full-time baby sitters, grandparents' help and even day-care centers at work.

"Sometimes the parents can come up with the workable device — good day-care or a good baby sitter — and that has minimal impact on the child," he says. "Other times I think it leaves the children feeling neglected, in fact being neglected..."

August would like to see employers find an answer.

"I think U.S. corporations and businesses can be more creative," he says. "My guess is that U.S. businesses and the work place is more likely to come up with the solution than the federal government is."

At least one company is already addressing the need. The Du Pont Co. of Wilmington, Del., adopted policies allowing greater flexibility on parental leaves and set up two child-care centers.

The moves came after a company study showed that one-quarter of its work force depended on child care. The study also disclosed that 25 percent of the company's male employees and half of its female workers had considered going elsewhere for more flexibility.

August says one option is for companies to adopt the "parental track," where parents with young children can put their careers on hold or work part-time until their children reach school age. He admits that the parental track could hamper careers but believes companies could work to minimize it.

August says Sweden requires companies to offer parents a parental track, but many men refuse it because they get penalized at work.

"If men can legitimately have such an option," he says, "I think a great many of them will take advantage of it."

"And even if only a few decide to take advantage of it, the opportunity should be there for those few."

Algonquin Cafe Theatre formerly Kismet Group

AMARILLO — There's a new sign on the old San Jacinto Post Office at the corner of 6th Street and Independence. The sign reads "The Algonquin Cafe Theatre."

It is the new home of The Kismet Group Theatre and features 15 bright, young, professional actors from across the U.S.

The actors' collective backgrounds include performances on Broadway, at the Met, television roles, HBO productions, movies, music videos, and several national commercials.

Thursday through Sunday evenings, until August 20, The Kismet Group will perform at least one of its repertory of plays including: Mon Reve Cafe, July 13 -, Fefu and Her Friends, and U.S.A.

Dinner and beverages, including beer and wine, are available and reservations are recommended. All showtimes are at 8 p.m.

Scheduled for July 28-30 and August 3-6 is U.S.A., a calvalcade of America in the first half of the 20th century, based on the novel by John Dos Passos.

Group rates are available. For more information contact Andrea Swift, 358-1110.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something you'll do today will provide you with a solid sense of achievement and pride, yet you might be a tad disappointed when the praise you expect from others doesn't come easily. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Although you'll be extremely popular with others today, you must still take care that you don't inadvertently say something that could hurt someone's feelings. Think before speaking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Shifts in conditions tend to work out for your ultimate benefit today, so don't be disturbed if changes not of your own making are foisted upon you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your quick wit and skills as a mediator will come into play today to avert an altercation between two friends. You'll have them chuckling over the matter in spite of themselves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though your mind isn't likely to be totally focused on your assignments today, you'll still do a surprisingly effective job. With more dedication, however, you could do even better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A day on the town with select, fun friends could be an excellent tonic for you today. However, take care you don't get involved in frivolous, extravagant activities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you keep your mind off yourself today, you'll be able to spot more opportunities in which you can be included. Self-centeredness inhibits your vision instead of enhancing it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll perform better today if you have to match your strides against a busy schedule. This is one of those times it's to your advantage to push yourself a bit.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions that affect your status and material well being are favorable today, provided you don't go out of your way to seek favors. Take advantage of that which is unsolicited.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Although your intentions might be otherwise, you are still apt to goad others into competing against you today. You're likely to enjoy the action, but they may not.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your head may be a bit in the clouds today and your thought processes might lack practicality. Things should work out OK, however, because others will be there to back you up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The secret to your success today is to sincerely want the same things for others that you wish for yourself. Thinking in terms of "we" makes you a winner.

America rejoins winners' circle

By LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

TROON, Scotland (AP) — An American has won the British Open at last.

All that was missing was the apple pie.

The flag was there on Sunday, the Stars and Stripes hanging proudly beside the silver claret jug that goes to the winner of the oldest of all golf tournaments.

Motherhood was even in the offing, as new champion Mark Calcavecchia talked about his pregnant wife back in West Palm Beach, Fla.

"I called her right after the final hole and she was crying up a storm," the 29-year-old Calcavecchia said. "I was just about ready to ask, and she said, 'No, I haven't had the baby yet.' I thought, 'If I sent her into labor with this.' But it could happen any minute. It's time to get home."

The home hole of Royal Troon was where Calcavecchia added his name to the list of Open champions by beating Australians Greg Norman and Wayne Grady in a four-hole playoff after they had finished four rounds tied at 13-under-par 275.

With Norman picking up after hitting out of bounds to finish another near miss in a major, and Grady bogeying three of the playoff holes after leading the tournament for almost two rounds, Calcavecchia became the first American winner of the Open since Tom Watson in 1983.

He said he was proud to end the losing streak.

"I thought about it quite a bit," Calcavecchia said. "Practicing before the playoff started, I said to myself, 'Man, it's been a long time since an American won it.' I had to get an American name back on that trophy. I had to do it for our Tour.

"I know there are a lot of happy people back in the U.S."

Calcavecchia started the day three strokes behind Grady, with five players between him and the top of one of the most tightly bunched fields in recent Open history.

He birdied the par-5 16th, and then rapped in a 5-foot putt for a final birdie at the 18th. He was tied with Norman, who finished early with a course-record 64. But both were one shot behind Grady, for the time being.

"I went in to sign my scorecard and I heard the crowd groan," he said. Grady had just bogeyed the 17th, missing a par putt by inches.

"I went out and watched Wayne play 18, and I'm in the playoff," Calcavecchia said.

On the last playoff hole, Calcavecchia was tied for the lead.

Norman, one of the biggest hitters in golf, sent his drive screaming down the right side of the fairway. It hit on ground left hard by weeks of sun and little rain and rolled 30-40 yards into a steeply banked fairway bunker.

Then he hit the ball into another bunker.

A desperation shot sailed through the green and out of bounds. Add Troon '89 to Augusta '87, Winged Foot '84 and so many other sites where Norman has been close, but not close enough.

Grady bogeyed again, two-putting from four feet, and Calcavecchia, his approach shot resting six feet from the pin, was all but official.

Mark Calcavecchia is congratulated by his caddie Drake Oddy, left, after winning a three-way playoff Sunday over Greg Norman and Wayne Grady.

Oakland hands Orioles fifth straight loss

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

If the rest of the American League East is going to catch up with the Baltimore Orioles, now is the time.

The Orioles' lead, larger than anyone could believe last week, isn't so big anymore. Cleveland and Milwaukee are on the move, and so are Boston and Toronto.

Baltimore lost its fifth straight game Sunday, matching its longest skid of the season. Jose Canseco's home run helped the Oakland Athletics win 3-2 and complete a four-game sweep.

"We've been through this streak before, and we came out of it all right," Manager Frank Robinson said.

The Orioles have lost their first four games of their longest road trip in 15 years, a coast-to-coast swing of 14 games. Coming off their first sweep of the season, Baltimore begins a three-game series Tuesday in Minnesota and follows with visits to Kansas City and Boston.

While Baltimore has slumped and its 7 1/2-game lead has slipped, the rest of the division is creeping up. The Indians cut their deficit from 10 games to six, and Toronto

homed for Kansas City. MARINERS 5 BLUE JAYS 2

Rookie Randy Johnson struck out a career-high 12 and Seattle stopped Jimmy Key and Toronto at the Kingdome.

Johnson, 3-4, gave up five hits in his second complete game. Key, 7-11, had won all seven of his previous decisions against Seattle, but wound up losing his fifth consecutive game.

Alvin Davis' two-run triple highlighted a four-run third inning. Omar Vizquel hit his first major league home run in the seventh.

BREWERS 4 TWINS 1 Milwaukee hit four home runs against Frank Viola in six innings and again beat Minnesota.

Robin Yount connected in the second inning, Greg Brock and Glenn Braggs hit consecutive homers in the fourth and Rob Deer hit his 24th in the sixth. Viola, 8-11, had allowed just three home runs in his previous 96 innings.

Tom Filer, 1-1, gave up four hits in six innings in his second start since being recalled from the minors. Dan Plesac pitched the ninth for his 23rd save.

Pat Tabler and Matt Winters time. He lost the lead five days later to Fignon only to gain it back on the basis of a good performance in another individual race against the clock.

Again Fignon battled back to reclaim the leader's yellow jersey with four days to go and held an apparently insurmountable 50-second lead entering the final 15-mile trial from Versailles to Paris.

"I went all out," LeMond said. "I didn't think I was going to win. The worst thing I could have done was lose by a second — the worst thing."

LeMond finished in 26 minutes, 57 seconds to Fignon's 27:55. LeMond's overall margin of eight seconds was the slimmest in 76 editions of the Tour de France, besting Jan Jensen's 38-second margin in 1968, a race which was also decided in a time trial.

LeMond's total time for the race was 87 hours, 38 minutes, 35 seconds, eight seconds faster than Fignon. Pedro Delgado of Spain, the defending champion, finished third, 3:34 back.

Fignon finished eight seconds too late. Fignon, who had been overpowering last week in the brutal climbing stages in the Alps, was hindered by an inflamed perineum, which made sitting on his bike seat painful.

"What does it matter for eight, 10, 20 or 30 seconds. It's all the same," Fignon said. "My legs were going well, but that wasn't enough. Still, I was hoping. But Greg performed a super time trial. He's a great champion."

Greg LeMond staged an epic comeback to defeat France's Laurent Fignon by eight seconds.

Rangers sweep Yankees

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON (AP) — Dallas Green had no more of a clue than anyone else how the New York Yankees managed to lose their sixth straight game when left-hander Chuck Cary was within one batter of a one-hit 4-0 shutout.

"If I could explain it, I would. But I can't. You watched it," the Yankees manager said.

Three straight hits, including a two-run homer by Ruben Sierra, tied the game at 4-4 in the bottom of the ninth, and a two-base throwing error by New York rightfielder Jesse Barfield in the 10th gave the Rangers a 5-4 victory Sunday night and a sweep of the four-game series.

Bobby Witt, 9-8, won for the fourth straight time, striking out 11 and allowing only four hits. He retired 12 of the first 13 batters he faced, then was rocked in the fifth inning for four runs on three hits, including Roberto Kelly's 3-run homer. After that, he settled down again, setting down 17 of the final 18 Yankees he faced, allowing a walk in the 10th inning.

"You have to give the Rangers credit. They're the kind of team I'd like to have. We will, somewhere down the line," Green said.

Cary allowed just one hit over the first eight innings — a first-inning single by Scott Fletcher — and was looking for his first major-league complete game.

With one out in the ninth, he walked pinch-hitter Rick Leach, then got pinch-hitter Thad Bosley to hit a hard grounder that had the appearance of a game-ending double play. But first baseman Don Mattingly booted the ball and had to settle for an unassisted play on Bosley, as Leach moved to second.

When Fletcher doubled to the gap in left center, cutting New York's lead to 4-1, Green brought in reliever Dave Righetti for Cary.

Simultaneously, Rangers manager Bobby Valentine was motioning to Witt.

"He told me we were going to tie it up, that I was going back out," Witt said. "I was ready. I had more than enough left. The guys in the dugout were saying we did it against Minnesota from six down in the ninth, and we could do it here."

Julio Franco greeted Righetti with a single to left, and Sierra drove a pitch 410 feet into the left-centerfield bleachers. It was Sierra's 16th homer, and the two RBIs gave him 70 for the season, tying him with Franco for the American League lead.

"When Julio got his hit, it gave me a chance to do something. I just wanted a chance to get a hit and keep it going," Sierra said.

"I was just looking for something over the plate. I'd been swinging at bad pitches all night. When I hit the ball, I said to myself, 'now we're going to win the game.'" Sierra said.

In the bottom of the 10th, Rafael Palmeiro drew a one-out walk from Righetti, 2-3, and advanced to second on Cecil Evers' ground single to right.

Palmeiro had rounded second and was headed back to the bag when Barfield's wild throw flew over third baseman Tom Brookens' head and skipped into the stands sending the Yankees to their sixth straight loss.

"I came up and charged the ball like I normally do and it just took off," said Barfield.

Yankees' pitcher Chuck Gary was one out away from a one-hit shutout when Scott Fletcher doubled to begin a Ranger comeback.

Graham downs Pampa in Babe Ruth tournaments

By ANDREWS

Pampa lost to Graham 6-3 Saturday night in the opening round of the West Texas 13-year-old Babe Ruth State Tournament.

Graham took an early lead, but Pampa came back to tie the score at 3-3 all in the fourth inning.

In the fifth, Graham scored twice on three walks and a hit batter and then added a final run in the last inning.

Pampa had runners on second and third in the seventh, but couldn't push a run across.

Pampa was held to four hits, including three singles by Chad Dunnam, who also scored a run. Gregg Moore had the other base hit.

David Potter, Clarence Reed and Moore saw action on the mound for Pampa.

Both Dunnam and Andy Sutton made outstanding catches in the outfield for Pampa. Catcher Andy Elsheimer threw out two base runners.

Pampa plays the Hereford

Optimist Roundup

Andrews loser at 6 p.m. tonight in the loser's bracket.

Pampa's 14-15 year-olds were defeated, 21-14, by Graham in the first round of the West Texas State Tournament at Graham Saturday night.

Toby Dollar was the winning pitcher. Brandon Wells, who gave up six hits, eight walks and ten runs, was charged with the loss. Pampa gave up a total of 16 bases on balls.

Leading hitters for Pampa included Jason Brantley, home run and single; Donnie Medley, home run and single; Zach Thomas, double; Dwight Nickelberry, double. Graham collected 14 hits on the night.

Pampa plays Hereford tonight at 8 p.m. in the double-elimination tournament. If Pampa wins, they will play again Tuesday at 6 p.m. The championship game is set for Thursday night at 6.

U.S. Olympic Festival begins with perfection, surprises

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — There was revenge and there was perfection. There were a few surprises and some strong performances from heavy favorites.

Most of all, there were athletes in 20 sports getting the U.S. Olympic Festival off to a rousing start.

For wrestler Kenny Monday, Sunday was perfect. On Sunday, bowler Gordon Vadakin was perfect.

Monday, the 1988 Olympic champion, not only got revenge for his loss in the U.S. Open, but he also beat another Olympic champion, Dave Schultz. He did all that just to get into the festival freestyle field.

"I'm glad it's over," Monday said. "Now it's time to get these other guys out of the way."

Vadakin rolled the first 300 game of the festival in men's doubles competition, but his feat only helped his team get a bronze medal.

Figure skater Paul Wylie, a 1988 Olympian, got a silver medal, but it was not what he sought. The heavy favorite finished behind Mark Mitchell.

Kristi Yamaguchi easily won the women's gold, as expected, sweeping first place on all seven judges' cards in both the original and long programs.

Seven national amateur boxing champions advanced to the finals. The one who failed was super heavyweight Eddie Donerlson Jr., who lost to Golden Gloves champion Larry Donald, a 227-pound shoe salesman from Cincinnati who began boxing just two years ago.

The other national champions who won Sunday were Frank Pena, Brian Lonon and Chris Byrd. The four who advanced Saturday were Tony Gonzales, Raul Marquez, Ray Lathon and Javier Alvarez.

The biggest winner had to be Monday, who thrilled the fans at Stillwater — he wrestled for Oklahoma State — by storming through the mini-tournament "just like Pac-Man. Eat 'em up, one at a time." He moved into the 163-pound festival draw with four victories, beating 1984 Olympic champ Schultz 6-3 in his second match.

Monday pinned Charles Royer in 27 seconds, while Schultz beat his student, NCAA winner David Lee of Wisconsin, 4-2 in the opening matches. Then Monday dominated Schultz from the beginning of their meeting.

Monday then beat Lee and Eddie Urbano, a former NCAA champion from Arizona State who ousted Monday from the U.S. Open when Monday injured his tongue.

Johnson wins first go-round

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Shawn Johnson of Pampa captured the single steer roping title during the first go-round of the Cheyenne Frontier Days Rodeo. Johnson posted a time of 13.0 seconds to lead the field of 193 steer ropers.

Johnson will rope in the second go-round on Saturday. The top 15 finishers in the average of each event will advance to the finals, or short-go, scheduled for Sunday.

Kenny Monday, 1988 Olympic gold medalist (top), puts the pressure on Dave Schultz, a 1984 Olympic gold medalist. Monday won the match, 6-3, to advance to the freestyle competition ladder in the 163-pound class.

Cowboys open training camp today

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys begin their first workout in pads without Tom Landry today, when new coach Jimmy Johnson takes a look at what he's got in an afternoon workout in preparation for a Wednesday scrimmage against the Los Angeles Raiders.

Rookies and some veterans reported to the 30th Dallas Cowboys' training camp on Sunday but quarterback Steve Walsh, the number one pick in the NFL's supplemental draft was among the no-shows.

Johnson said Walsh, whom he coached in college at Miami, wouldn't be in camp until he had a contract. Walsh is asking a contract similar to the $11.037 million which top draft pick Troy Aikman received.

"I would hope that we would be close to signing Steve by the middle of the week," Johnson said. "One way or the other he won't be here until he signs."

Walsh said the Cowboys have received offers from four teams.

"There is still a chance of a trade and we prefer to do something now if something is going to happen," Johnson said. "I'd still say the percentages are leaning toward him being with the Dallas Cowboys."

Johnson added "We've had three offers and a fourth we didn't entertain. I have no idea what's going to happen but I do know the quality of Steve Walsh. We know what he's capable of doing."

The Cowboys picked Walsh after Atlanta, which had the selection ahead of Dallas, passed.

"I'm still in a fog why Atlanta didn't get him," Johnson said.

Johnson said most of the Cowboys' draft picks would be signed by the time Dallas scrimmages the Los Angeles Raiders on Wednesday.

However, he said the talks with veteran quarterback Steve Peluer were still at a stalemate.

"We feel we can do all we can do to sign Steve," Johnson said.

Pelluer is asking some $750,000 per year and the Cowboys have offered $450,000. Pelluer has said he would accept a trade to another team.

The Cowboys have to sign Peluer before they can trade him.

"I'm at a loss and I don't know what else to do in that situation," Johnson said.

The Cowboys will undergo physicals on Monday morning then plunge into a Monday afternoon workout in full pads.

They'll work twice on Tuesday before scrimmaging the Raiders on Wednesday and Thursday.

"We need to evaluate everybody in pads," Johnson said. "A running back may be the best in the world running against air but terrible at breaking tackles."

"The same with linebackers. We want to see how they close and hit."

This is expected to be the Cowboys' last training camp at Thousand Oaks although Johnson wouldn't say definitely.

"We'll evaluate it after it's over," he said.

The Cowboys will break training camp on Aug. 25 after playing preseason games against San Diego and the Raiders. Dallas plays in Denver on Aug. 26 then plays its final exhibition game at home on Sept. 2 against Houston.

NFL '89—Training Camp Sites

To prepare for the NFL's 70th season, the 28 pro football teams opened training camps across the country. The 59-game pre-season schedule featured a pair of international exhibitions — in Tokyo and London — in early August. Last year the AFC had a 23-16-1 margin of victory over the NFC in pre-season games. The 1989 regular season begins with 14 games on Sunday and Monday, Sept. 10-11.

Poll finds strong opposition for anti-abortion candidates

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans by nearly a 2-1 margin are inclined to oppose anti-abortion candidates for their state legislatures and to support legal abortion in their states, a national poll has found.

As lawmakers across the country prepare to take up new abortion laws, 38 percent of respondents to the Media General-Associated Press poll said they would be less likely to vote for a candidate who firmly opposes abortion.

The same number said abortion wouldn't matter much in their vote, while the smallest group — about two in 10 — said they would be more apt to vote for a candidate who took a strong anti-abortion position.

Moreover, 63 percent of the 1,163 adults polled said they would want abortion to be legal in their state if the U.S. Supreme Court reversed its 1973 ruling that made abortion a constitutional right and let each state make its own abortion laws.

That support for legal abortion was up slightly from 57 percent in an MG-AP poll in March. Similarly, support for the 1973 ruling in the Roe vs. Wade case was up to 59 percent, from 53 percent.

While those increases were within the poll's margin of error, similar movement in several questions indicated a slight rise in pro-choice opinion since the high court decision July 3 that permitted states to increase restrictions on abortion.

The new survey, conducted July 7-16, had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

While most respondents expressed general support for legal abortion, they were split on specific restrictions permitted in the recent Supreme Court ruling. Among those findings:

- Sixty-five percent said abortions at public hospitals should be legal, but that fell to 51 percent when respondents were asked specifically about abortions that are not required to save the mother's life. The Supreme Court said states can ban such abortions from public hospitals.
- Respondents split about evenly on whether it should be legal for public health employees to perform or assist in abortions. The court said that, too, can be barred by the states when the mother's life is not at risk.
- Respondents strongly supported mandatory pre-abortion tests to see if fetuses that are at least 20 weeks old can survive outside the womb, with 62 percent in favor. The high court said such tests can be required.
- By 54-38 percent, with 8 percent undecided, respondents said it should be legal to use public funds to counsel women about the availability of abortion. The court left that issue undecided.

Overall, 48 percent said they opposed the July 3 ruling, 43 percent favored it and 9 percent were unsure. That was a split in opinion given the margin of error.

As in previous polls, general questions on abortion produced divided views, reflecting public discomfort with an issue that pits the rights of pregnant women with concern for their fetuses.

Sixty-seven percent said a woman should be allowed to have an abortion if she wants one and her doctor agrees to it; 25 percent said no, and 8 percent were undecided. On the other hand, 42 percent said they would support a constitutional amendment to ban most abortions.

Skinner said the nation's airports, highways, bridges, waterways and mass transit system are simply wearing out.

"We're going to have to rebuild it and replace it, or we're not going to be able to rely on it anymore," he said.

Among the most critical problems are a lack of planning for new airports, Skinner said, and $80 billion worth of work on the country's deteriorating bridges.
